2023 Treat List

Treats I would (and do) give to my own pets.

Thank you for your purchase of the 2023 Treat List. Susan Thixton and TruthaboutPetFood.com is 100% consumer supported, we could not do the work we do without your support.

Since 2012 we have been publishing a 'list' of pet foods we would trust to give our own pets. This is the first year we have published a treat 'list'.

To me, treats are just as important to be of high quality ingredients as food. I have turned down offers of treats for my dogs dozens of times because I will not allow my pets to eat any feed grade ingredient product (food or treat). I get 'that look' from kind people just trying to be nice to my dogs (and I also get 'that look' from my dogs!)...but I stand firm.

Even though it is a lengthy process, I always enjoy getting to know the companies included in The List (food and treat). I have great respect for the companies that go to the effort (and expense) to make a quality treat product. Using food quality, organic, and/or humanely raised ingredients is something they don't have to do. Regulatory authorities allow any manufacturer to use recycled garbage (such as rendered diseased animals or animals that have died other than by slaughter) without disclosing it to consumers. These companies choose differently, and again - I respect that.

No company pays a fee to be considered for the List, it is completely voluntary (and free) to be considered. No company pays a fee to be included on the List. No company provided us with samples or free products, we do not accept gifts (of any type) from any manufacturer (we purchase food and treats just like you do). We as well do not allow any company included in the List to purchase the document. Susan Thixton and TruthaboutPetFood.com is 100% consumer supported.

Please do not share this document, the proceeds of the (Food) List and the Treat List are how we keep TruthaboutPetFood.com in operation.

Susan Thixton

Details to understand about the information provided in the 2023/24 Treat List.

The difference between human edible quality and USDA inspected and passed.

Some pet treats are sourced from parts of an animal that are not consumed by humans. In this case, the ingredient still needs to be sourced from a USDA inspected and passed animal to assure the quality. You'll notice on some of the treat manufacturer pages under Ingredients, Quality it will state "All ingredients are human edible and/or sourced from USDA inspected and passed animals". This means that some of the ingredients are not officially considered human edible as humans don't consume the particular ingredient, but the ingredient was sourced from a USDA inspected and passed animal (the same requirement for human edible ingredients).

The difference between meats sourced from certified humanely raised and non-certified but humanely raised.

Certified humanely raised animals means an independent 3rd party has verified livestock animals meet required conditions of humanely raised. Each 3rd party certifier has different requirements, some offer different levels of certification. Some argue that these various levels of certification lessen the humane standards, other believe it is a means to bring in more farmers to at least follow some humane livestock farming methods. Certification of raising livestock in humane conditions is an added expense to farmers, thus some voluntarily adhere to humane farming methods but do not go through the certification process.

Provided on manufacturer pages:

Ingredients:

Quality: Disclosure of human edible or USDA inspected and passed. All manufacturers provided verification of human edible or USDA inspected and passed for each ingredient.

Humanely Raised: Disclosure if meat ingredients were sourced from humanely raised animals. Each manufacturer that makes the humanely raised claim provided verification that meat ingredients are sourced from certified humanely raised animals.

Organic: Disclosure of ingredients that are certified organic. Each manufacturer that makes the organic claim provided verification for each ingredient.

Country of Origin: Disclosure of country of origin for each ingredient included in treats.

Manufacturing: Disclosure of where treats are made and what type of licensed facility (human food facility or pet food facility).

Testing: Disclosure of what testing each manufacturer regularly performs on treats. Note: because treats are made with few ingredients (as compared to a pet food) - some being single ingredient - testing is as priority as it is for a food.

Packaging: Disclosure if packaging contains BPA, a chemical commonly found in pet food packaging known as an "endocrine disruptor chemical". Endocrine disruptors are chemicals that may interfere with the body's endocrine system and produce adverse developmental, reproductive, neurological, and immune effects. This section also provides information regarding recycling options of packaging.

How it's made: This section provides a brief description to how treats are manufactured, the processes involved.

About the company: This section is a direct quote from each manufacturer.

Where/how to purchase these treats:

The top right of each manufacturer page provides information on where each company's products are available. If your local independent pet food store does not carry these treats, ask them to. Or in most cases, pet owners can order directly from the manufacturer.

CAT & DOG Treats

Ingredients

Quality:

All ingredients are human edible, verification provided.

Humanely Raised:

No.

Organic:

No.

Country of Origin:

All ingredients originate in Canada, US, Mexico, South America, Australia, New Zealand and Europe.

Manufacturing

Products are manufactured in a company owned pet food facility in Canada.

Testing

Treats are the same formula as company's pet foods, testing is the same for foods. Each batch is tested for pathogens, products are held for clean results. A complete nutritional analysis is performed on each recipe annually, vitamins and minerals are tested randomly throughout the year.

Packaging

All packaging is BPA free, all packaging is recyclable.

How it's made...

Raw meats are ground, whole fresh vegetables and remaining ingredients are added to the grinder mixer. The mixture is ground and mixed. The mixture is spread to an appropriate thickness, air dried and cut into strips.

About the company...

"I ran both the City of Vancouver and City of Coquitlam Animal Control, North America's first and second municipally funded no-kill pounds. I found out, firsthand, the difference quality food makes to the lives of furkids. We had dogs with every medical condition possible, most of them were resolved using quality food. 'Let food be thy medicine.'"

Bixbi Pet

About the company...

"BIXBI is proud to call the Colorado mountains home. Our team members (both four legs and two) love getting outdoors, it's almost a prerequisite, hiking in the summer, hitting the slopes in the winter. It goes without saying then that we appreciate those who make it safer for us to access the outdoors, which is why one of the many partnerships we are proud to support involves feeding the furry heroes that make up the Colorado Rapid Avalanche Deployment canine rescue team. These amazing pups go through extensive training to help expedite the rescue of avalanche victims in the mountains. Some heroes wear collars, not capes, and these guys are fueled by BIXBI."

"Emma Lou's was started out of a desperate need to save my own dog, Emma Lou, a husky mix from the horrific fatal disease called distemper. I started cooking for her and used alternative care after conventional care failed her. Miraculously Emma lived to be 18 years old. That's when I started my self educating journey of dog nutrition. I interviewed dog nutritionists, holistic veterinarians, studying everything I could get my hands on and then hired a team to co-create 4 complete and perfect human-grade formulas (or meals) for dogs. That was in 2008. We are still family owned and operated out of our own commercial kitchen in Oregon."
