I can save her.

New York Post:

A physically healthy 28-year-old Dutch woman has decided to legally end her life due to depression, autism and borderline personality disorder, according to a report.

Zoraya ter Beek, who lives in a small village in the Netherlands near the German border — despite being in love with her 40-year-old boyfriend and living with two cats.

Zoraya ter Beek

Ter Beek, who once aspired to be a psychiatrist, has been dealing with mental health str

She said she decided to be euthanized after her doctors told her, “There’s nothing more I can get any better,” according to The Free Press.

“I was always very clear that if it doesn’t get better, I can’t do this anymore,” ter Beek said.

She is just one of the growing number of people in the West who have decided to die rather than, unlike a terminal illness, could be treated.

More people are deciding to end their lives while suffering from a slew of other mental health issues, including anxiety amplified by economic uncertainty, climate change, social media and other issues.

I always thought killing everyone would be hilarious.

But now that the government is doing it, it’s really just sort of sad.
