Personally, I feel that it was wrong for you to post his profile link, but letting people know about an addon that has backdoors or similar malicious files was the right thing to do...

Edit:

After looking into it briefly (checking profile and other workshop addons) it seems odd for a user of high level and well decorated profile to upload backdoor / malicious addons, but after I looked through their workshop addons, I've noticed the majority of them being server content addons, having only a thumbnail with no relation to the addon itself.

I'm not gonna immediately jump to conclusions and say they all have backdoors, I didn't check any and I'm not gonna check all of them either.

He probably stole multiple workshop addon and made it his own and uploaded it under different name , this user must be reported and the rightful owner of all the addon he stole must be informed
