

LIBERTY
BIBLE COMMENTARY
VOLUME 13

THE OLD-TIME GOSPEL HOUR EDITION

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2022 with funding from Kahle/Austin Foundation

FOREWORD

by Dr. Jerry Falwell

The Bible alone is the Word of God and has stood the test of the ages. It is still the best seller of all time because the Bible is "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works" (II Tim. 3:16, 17). I have preached the message of the Bible for a quarter of a century now and have never found it wanting in meeting man's greatest needs. Every opinion we hold and every conviction that motivates our ministry is based on the Bible. To the best of our understanding we preach and teach God's word in its clearest and plainest sense. The Scripture alone is our final authority in all matters of faith and practice.

For these reasons I recently asked Dr. Ed Hindson and Dr. Woodrow Kroll to coordinate a team of Bible scholars from our Liberty Baptist Schools to assist me in producing a one-volume commentary on the New Testament. It is our prayer that this commentary will serve you greatly as an aid to effective Bible study. As the Ethiopian eunuch responded to Philip's question about whether he understood the Scripture, he replied: "How can I except some man should guide me?" (Acts 8:31), so we desired this commentary to be a wise guide to point people to the truth of Christ. Our interpreters do not claim infallibility, but each one is a born-again, Bible believer who accepts the inerrant inspiration of the Scripture and believes the Bible to be the only message of eternal life.

Open your Bible to the passage you are studying and then open the commentary to the appropriate page and use them comparatively. May God bless your study of His Word so that your life is changed by its impact upon your soul. The Apostle Peter said: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed. . . ."

For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (II Pet 1:19, 21). Let God speak to you through His Word as you read it, memorize it, and meditate upon its truths.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

LIBERTY BIBLE COMMENTARY

NEW TESTAMENT

Jerry Falwell, D.D., D.Litt.
Executive Editor

Edward E. Hindson, Th.D., D.Min.
Woodrow Michael Kroll, Th.D.
General Editors

THE OLD-TIME GOSPEL HOUR

Lynchburg, Virginia

LIBERTY
BIBLE
COMMENTARY

NEW TESTAMENT

Jerry Falwell, D.D., D.Min.
Executive Editor

Edward E. Hindson, Ed.D., D.Min.
Woodrow Michael Kroll, Ph.D.

Copyright © 1982 by Old-Time Gospel Hour

All rights reserved under International and Pan-American Conventions. Published in Nashville, Tennessee, by Thomas Nelson, Inc., Publishers. Manufactured in the United States of America. Unless otherwise noted, Scripture quotations are from The Open Bible, King James Version, copyright © 1975 by Thomas Nelson, Inc., Publishers. All rights reserved.

Library of Congress Cataloging—in Publication Data
Liberty Bible Commentary.

Produced with the assistance of the faculty of Liberty Baptist College.

Includes bibliographies.

Contents: [1] Old Testament—[2] New Testament.

I. Bible—Commentaries. I. Falwell, Jerry.
II. Hindson, Edward E. III. Kroll, Woodrow Michael IV. Liberty Baptist College.

BS491.2.L53 1982 220.7'7 82-7950

ISBN 0-8407-5257-1 (set) AACR2

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PREFACE .....	iv
CONTRIBUTORS .....	vi
MAP SUPPLEMENTS .....	iii
MATTHEW .....	1
MARK .....	99
LUKE .....	141
JOHN .....	208
ACTS .....	260
ROMANS .....	335
I CORINTHIANS .....	410
II CORINTHIANS .....	468
GALATIANS .....	503
EPHESIANS .....	538
PHILIPPIANS .....	563
COLOSSIANS .....	587
I THESSALONIANS .....	603
II THESSALONIANS .....	617
I TIMOTHY .....	627
II TIMOTHY .....	642
TITUS .....	653
PHILEMON .....	660
HEBREWS .....	665
JAMES .....	719
I PETER .....	733
II PETER .....	752
I JOHN .....	763
II JOHN .....	775
III JOHN .....	777
JUDE .....	781
REVELATION .....	786

(Bibliographies—following the commentary on each book. An asterisk (*) denotes suggested readings for in-depth study.)

(Abbreviations—see page ix in Volume One)

MAP SUPPLEMENTS

The Birth of Jesus and the Flight Into Egypt .....	5
The Return from Egypt; The Boy Jesus in the Temple .....	9
The Baptism of Jesus and the Sojourn in the Desert .....	13
From Nazareth to Cana and Capernaum .....	16
Around the Sea of Galilee .....	23
Cana and Nazareth Revisited .....	54
The Visit to Tyre, Sidon, and Caesarea Philippi .....	58
The Transfiguration .....	64
Jesus' Last Journey to Jerusalem .....	66
Jesus' Trial, Judgment, and Crucifixion .....	72
The Resurrection and Ascension .....	96
Jesus' Visits to Jerusalem .....	219
The Jewish Diaspora in the Time of Jesus .....	267
The First Missionary Journey of Paul .....	296
The Second Missionary Journey of Paul .....	306
The Third Missionary Journey of Paul .....	315
Paul's Voyage to Rome .....	330

PREFACE

The Liberty Bible Commentary represents the first full-scale attempt by a single school faculty to produce a work of this nature. It is designed to meet the needs of pastors, teachers, and laymen alike. Therefore, it is critical, comprehensive, and devotional in tone and spirit. This work is not intended to cover every possible interpretation of every passage. Rather, the purpose of the New Testament volume of the Liberty Bible Commentary is to provide a verse by verse exposition and interpretation of the entire New Testament.

The uniqueness of this project rests in the common doctrinal commitment of each of the contributors. Most commentaries of this nature are produced by scholars who, while they are specialists in a given area, do not necessarily share a common doctrinal viewpoint. In this work each contributor has been allowed the freedom of his personal views, but the final material has been reviewed by an editorial committee that reflects the general position of our schools. Thus, while the author's personal preferences are often reflected in the individual commentaries, the following distinctive features of the commentary are consistent throughout.

Distinctively Baptist: Each of the commentators holds to the basic Baptist distinctives of the soul liberty of the individual priesthood of each believer, believer's baptism by immersion, the autonomy of the local church, separation of church and state, congregational church government, recognition of the Bible alone as our final authority in all matters of faith and practice, the ordinances of the local church, and the view that the Great Commission is given to the local church. Hence, the view of the New Testament church taken herein emphasizes the church's manifestation in autonomous local congregations, whose nature, discipline, and regulations are clearly defined in Scripture.

Aggressively Fundamental: We make no apology for the fundamentalist theology which is evident throughout this commentary. Each writer is personally committed to the fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith: the inerrant inspiration of the Scripture, the virgin birth and deity of Jesus Christ, His vicarious atonement, bodily resurrection, and literal Second Coming.

Historically Evangelical: The historic orthodox and evangelical doctrines of salvation by grace through faith are also evident throughout this commentary. The emphasis upon the evangelistic mandate of the church and the importance of individual conversion are also essential to the hermeneutic of this commentary. While academic and critical in its tone, this volume is warm and fervent in spirit.

Eschatologically Premillennial: The nature of predictive prophecy is viewed literally regarding its fulfillment. Thus, the eschatology of the commentators is both pretribulation and premillennial. However, many of the excessive divisions of extreme dispensationalism have been avoided. The rapture of the church is viewed as the next major coming event in Bible prophecy.

A note of appreciation should be extended to the entire faculty of Liberty Baptist College, who aided the production of the commentary by their total support of the project. We are especially grateful to the editorial staff of Thomas Nelson Publishers and Dr. Nelson Keener of the publications division of the Old-Time Gospel Hour ministries who gave many valuable insights to the final production of this volume. In all, it has been a very fulfilling experience to see a commentary of this nature come to fruition. It is our prayer that our Lord Jesus Christ will use it as a means of instruction to His church for many generations to come.

Edward E. Hindson
Woodrow Michael Kroll on "Liberty Mountain"
Lynchburg, Virginia
January 15, 1982

CONTRIBUTORS

James A. Borland, Th.D. Gospel of Luke

Professor, Liberty Baptist Seminary

B.A., Los Angeles Baptist College; M.Div., Los Angeles Baptist Theological Seminary;
Th.M., Talbot Theological Seminary; Th.D., Grace Theological Seminary.

Benjamin C. Chapman, Ph.D. Biblical Language Editor, I-II Thessalonians, Epistles of Peter, John, Jude

Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College

B.R.E., Grand Rapids Baptist College; B.D., M.R.E., Grand Rapids Baptist Seminary;
Th.M., Calvin Theological Seminary; Ph.D., Bob Jones University. Additional graduate study at the University of Michigan and the University of Manitoba (Canada).

Edward G. Dobson, D.D. Gospel of John

Assistant Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College

B.A., M.A., Bob Jones University; D.D., California Graduate School of Theology; Doctoral student at the University of Virginia.

Jerry Falwell, D.D., D.Litt. Executive Editor

Chancellor of Liberty Baptist College and Seminary

Th.G., Baptist Bible College; D.D., Tennessee Temple University; D.Litt., California Graduate School of Theology.

Charles L. Feinberg, Th.D., Ph.D. Revelation

Visiting Professor, Liberty Baptist Seminary

B.A., University of Pittsburgh; Th.B., Th.M., Th.D., Dallas Theological Seminary;
M.A., Southern Methodist University; Ph.D., John Hopkins University.

James Freerkson, Th.D. Hebrews

Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College

B.A., Pillsbury Baptist College; M.Div., Th.M., Central Baptist Theological Seminary;
Th.D., Grace Theological Seminary.

Edward E. Hindson, Th.D., D.Min. General Editor, Gospel of Matthew Professor and Associate Dean, School of Religion, Liberty Baptist College and Seminary.

B.A., William Tyndale College; M.A., Trinity Evangelical Divinity School; Th.M., Grace Theological Seminary; Th.D., Trinity Graduate School of Theology; D.Min., Westminster Theological Seminary; D.Litt. (Hon.), California Graduate School of Theology. Additional graduate study at Acadia University (Canada) and the University of South Africa.

Woodrow Michael Kroll, Th.D. General Editor, Romans

Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College

B.A., Barrington College; M.Div., Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary; Th.M., Th.D., Geneva Theological Seminary. Doctoral studies in progress at the University of Virginia. Additional graduate study at Harvard Divinity School; Princeton Theological Seminary; the University of Strasbourg (France).

Daniel R. Mitchell, Th.D. I-II Corinthians

Associate Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College

B.A., Washington Bible College; Th.M., Capital Bible Seminary; S.T.M., Dallas Theological Seminary; Th.D., Dallas Theological Seminary.

Edward R. Roustio, Th.D. Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians
Associate Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College
A.B., William Jewell College; Th.M., Southern Baptist Theological Seminary; Th.M., Th.D., Central Baptist Theological Seminary.

James D. Stevens, S.T.M. Gospel of Mark, James
Associate Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College
B.A., Bob Jones University; M.Div., Grace Theological Seminary; S.T.M., Dallas Theological Seminary; M.Ed., Lynchburg College. Doctoral studies in progress at Trinity Evangelical Divinity School. Additional graduate study at Eastern Michigan University and the University of Virginia.

C. Sumner Wemp, D.D. I-II Timothy, Titus, Philemon
Vice President and Professor of Religion, Liberty Baptist College
B.A., Samford University; Th.M., Dallas Theological Seminary; D.D., California Graduate School of Theology. Doctoral studies in progress at Trinity Evangelical Divinity School.

Harold L. Willmington, D.D., D.Min. Acts of the Apostles
Professor and Director, Institute of Biblical Studies, Liberty Baptist College.
Dip., Moody Bible Institute; B.A., Culver-Stockton College; D.D., California Graduate School of Theology; D.Min., Trinity Evangelical Divinity School. Additional graduate study at Dallas Theological Seminary and Ashland Theological Seminary.

The Gospel According To MATTHEW

INTRODUCTION

The four Gospels present a fourfold view of the life of Christ. With the exception of scant references by Tacitus and Josephus, our entire knowledge of the life of Jesus comes from these gospel accounts. Most likely, the early accounts were passed on verbally in the Aramaic language and then recorded in Greek manuscripts between A.D. 60-90. All four Gospels build upon genuine historical tradition and preserve different aspects of it.

The basic purpose of the Gospels is to present the gospel message, the good news of the Redeemer-Saviour. They present Jesus as the Messiah of Israel, the Son of God, and the Saviour of the world. The Gospels were written so that their readers would come to believe in Christ and receive eternal life (cf. Jn 20:31). They view Jesus as the Lord of Glory who is presently alive and active in heaven.

The New Testament was not given and received as a single volume, but it grew together by recognition and use. "The order in which we now read the books of the New Testament is that which on the whole, they have tended to assume; and the general internal arrangement, by which the entire collection forms for us a consecutive course of teaching, has been sufficiently recognized by the instinct and fixed by the habit of the church" (T. D. Bernard, The Progress of Doctrine in the New Testament, p. 23).

The order of the Gospels has been generally recognized by the church throughout its history. "The Gospel of Matthew occupies first place in all extant witnesses to the text of the four Gospels and in all early lists of the canonical books of the New Testament." (R. V. G. Tasker, The Gospel According to St. Matthew, Tyndale New Testament Commentary, p. 11). Matthew's emphasis upon the Old Testament preparation for the gospel makes it an ideal "bridge" from the Old to the New Testament.

The four Gospels present four portraits of Jesus, each in its own characteristic manner. "The greatness of this person could not have been captured in one picture. So we have four portraits, each bringing out its own distinctive facets of the character of Jesus" (I. H. Marshall, "The Gospels and Jesus Christ." In Eerdman's Handbook to the Bible, p. 470). Matthew, the Hebrew tax collector, writes for the Hebrew mind. Mark, the travel companion of Paul and Peter, writes for the Roman mind. Luke, Paul's physician-missionary, writes with the Greek mentality in view. John's gospel is different by nature from the other three. It is an interpretation of the facts of Jesus' life rather than a presentation of its facts in historical sequence.

Authorship. The book itself is anonymous, but the earliest of traditions credits it to Matthew, the disciple of Jesus. Papias, the second-century Bishop of Hierapolis, Irenaeus, the Bishop of Lyons, Origen in the third century, and Eusebius, who wrote his Historia Ecclesiastica in the fourth century, all agree that Matthew was the author of this gospel and that he originally wrote it in Hebrew (probably meaning Aramaic, the common spoken language of the early Christians). However, there is no trace of this Aramaic "original" and the earliest quotations (early second century) from Matthew are in Greek.

It is difficult to determine at this time whether Matthew, as we know it today, is a Greek translation of his Aramaic original or whether it was originally written in Greek. Scholars, both conservative and liberal, are divided in their opinion on this matter. However, an examination of the Greek gospel does not substantiate the idea that it is a translation, for it has none of the characteristics of a translated work. Walvoord (Matthew: Thy Kingdom Come, pp. 10-12) points out that the Gospel of Matthew includes a number of untranslated Aramaic terms. He comments: "These would be intelligible to Jewish Christians, but if Matthew was translated from Aramaic into Greek for the benefit of Gentile Christians, these terms would require an explanation. The fact that the terms are not translated tends to prove that the Gospel of Matthew was originally written in Greek, even though intended for an audience that also understood Aramaic" (p. 10).

A unique statement within the book of Matthew provides internal evidence to its authorship. The account of the call of Matthew (ch. 9) is followed by that of a meal taken by Jesus in the company of "publicans and sinners." The best translation of this passage says the meal took place "at home." The parallel account in Mark 2:15 makes it clear that this feast took place in Levi's (i.e., Matthew's) house. "The phrase 'at home' means 'in my (that is, in the author's) house.' Here, therefore, is a phrase that betrays the identity of the author" (B.F.C. Atkinson, "The Gospel According to Matthew." In The New Bible Commentary, p. 771).

It is possible that Matthew wrote both an Aramaic "Gospel" of the sayings of Jesus and the Greek Gospel which now bears his name, since he was bilingual. Catholic scholars (Lagrange, Chapman, Butler) have tended to uphold the idea of an Aramaic original while liberal Protestants (Allen, Albright) have favored the idea of a Greek original based on the priority of Mark as its major source. Conservative scholars (Kent, Lenski, Walvoord) have generally rejected the idea that Matthew was dependent upon Mark as a source document and hold to the view that Matthew himself wrote the Greek version of his gospel as an original apostolic witness to Christ.

Priority of Matthew. Two major critical views have been advanced in the twentieth century denying the priority of Matthew's gospel: (1) the priority of Mark as the basic source document of both Matthew and Luke; (2) the previous existence of a common source document "Q" to all the synoptics. The "Q Theory" has recently fallen on rough ground among form-critics (cf. A. M. Farrar, "On Dispensing with Q" in D. Nineham, ed. Studies in the Gospels). Neither view has really substantially proven its case even though many evangelicals hold to the priority of Mark (cf. Tasker, p. 17). W. R. Farmer and L. Keck are among several contemporary scholars to return to Griesbach's theory on the priority of Matthew. (For a thorough discussion of the introductory matters regarding Matthew, see D. Guthrie, New Testament Introduction, pp. 19-48.)

MATTHEW

OUTLINE

- I. Coming of the Messiah. 1:1-4:11.
  - A. His Ancestry. 1:1-17.
  - B. His Advent. 1:18-2:23.
  - C. His Ambassador. 3:1-12.
  - D. His Approval. 3:13-4:11.
    1. Baptism of Christ. 3:13-17.
    2. Temptation of Christ. 4:1-11.
- II. Ministry of the Messiah. 4:12-27:66.
  - A. In Galilee. 4:12-18:35.
    1. His message: Sermon on the Mount. 5:1-7:29.
      - a. The Beatitudes: Character described. 5:3-20.
      - b. Six Illustrations: Character applied. 5:21-48.
        - (1). First illustration: Murder. 5:21-26.
        - (2). Second illustration: Adultery contrasted to lust. 5:27-30.
        - (3). Third illustration: Divorce as contrasted to marriage. 5:31-32.
        - (4). Fourth illustration: Oath-taking as opposed to speaking the truth. 5:33-37.
        - (5). Fifth illustration: Retaliation as opposed to forgiveness. 5:38-42.
        - (6). Sixth illustration: Love thy neighbor contrasted to love thy enemy. 5:43-48.
      - c. True spiritual worship: Character expressed. 6:1-7:12.
        - (1). First example: Almsgiving. 6:1-4.
        - (2). Second example: Praying. 6:5-15.
        - (3). Third example: Fasting. 6:16-18.
        - (4). Fourth example: Giving. 6:19-24.
        - (5). Fifth example: Worry or anxiety. 6:25-34.
        - (6). Sixth example: Judging others. 7:1-12.
      - d. The two alternatives: Character established. 7:13-27.
    2. His miracles: Signs of divine authority. 8:1-9:38.
      - a. The cleansing of a leper. 8:1-4.
      - b. The healing of the centurion's servant. 8:5-13.
      - c. The healing of Peter's mother-in-law. 8:14-17.
      - d. The calming of the storm. 8:18-27.
      - e. The healings of the Gadarene demoniacs. 8:28-34.
      - f. The healing of the paralytic and lessons on righteousness. 9:1-17.
      - g. The healing of the woman with the issue and the raising of the ruler's daughter. 9:18-26.
      - h. The healing of the blind and dumb men. 9:27-38.
  3. His missionaries: Sending of the twelve. 10:1-12:50.
    - a. Excursus: John the Baptist and Christ. 11:1-30.
    - b. Excursus: A dispute with the Pharisees. 12:1-50.
  4. His mystery: Secret form of the kingdom. 13:1-58.
    - a. The Parable of the Sower. 13:4-23.
    - b. The Parable of the Tares. 13:24-30; 36-43.
    - c. The Parable of the Mustard Seed. 13:31-32.
    - d. The Parable of the Leaven. 13:33-35.
    - e. The Parable of the Hidden Treasure. 13:44.
    - f. The Parable of the Pearl of Great Price. 13:45-46.
    - g. The Parable of the Dragnet. 13:47-50.
    - h. Excursus: The use of parables. 13:51-58.
  5. His malediction: Seriousness of rejection. 14:1-16:28.
    - a. The death of John the Baptist. 14:1-12.
    - b. The feeding of the five thousand. 14:13-21.
    - c. The walking on the water. 14:22-36.
    - d. The conflict with the Pharisees over ritual. 15:1-20.
    - e. The healing of the Canaanitish woman's daughter. 15:21-28.
    - f. The feeding of the four thousand. 15:29-39.
    - g. The Pharisees and Sadducees rebuked. 16:1-12.
    - h. Peter's confession. 16:13-28.
  6. His manifestation: Special transfiguration. 17:1-27.
    - a. Excursus: Paying the temple tax. 17:24-27.
  7. His mercy: Sanctification of forgiveness. 18:1-35.
    - a. Personal forgiveness. 18:1-14.
    - b. Church discipline. 18:15-35.

- B. In Judaea. 19:1-27:66.
1. His presentation as King. 19:1-25:46.
    - a. His journey to Jerusalem. 19:1-20:34.
      - (1). Jesus' teaching on divorce. 19:1-12.
      - (2). The rich young ruler. 19:13-30.
      - (3). The Parable of the Laborers. 20:1-16.
      - (4). The coming suffering of Christ and His disciples. 20:17-28.
      - (5). The healing of the two blind men. 20:29-34.
    - b. His joyful (triumphal) entry. 21:1-46.
      - (1). The messianic arrival at Jerusalem. 21:1-11.
      - (2). The cleansing of the Temple. 21:12-17.
      - (3). The cursing of the barren fig tree. 21:18-22.
      - (4). The question of authority. 22:23-46.
    - c. His jealous critics. 22:1-23:39.
      - (1). The Parable of the Marriage Supper. 22:1-14.
      - (2). The Herodians: Question of tribute. 22:15-22.
      - (3). The Sadducees: Question of the Resurrection. 22:23-34.
  - (4). The Pharisees: Question of the Law. 22:35-46.
  - d. His judgment: Olivet Discourse. 24:1-25:46.
    - (1). Signs of the present age. 24:5-14.
    - (2). Signs of the Great Tribulation. 24:15-28.
    - (3). Signs of the coming Son of Man. 24:29-42.
    - (4). The Parable of the Two Servants. 24:43-51.
    - (5). The Parable of the Ten Virgins. 25:1-13.
    - (6). The Parable of the Talents. 25:14-30.
    - (7). The judgment of the nations. 25:31-46.
  2. His rejection as King. 26:1-27:66.
    - a. His denial by His disciples. 26:1-56.
    - b. His denunciation by the Sanhedrin. 26:57-75.
    - c. His deliverance to Pilate. 27:1-31.
    - d. His death for mankind. 27:32-66.
- III. Triumph of the Messiah. 28:1-20.
- A. His Resurrection. 28:1-8.
  - B. His Reappearance. 28:9-15.
  - C. His Recommission. 28:16-20.

COMMENTARY

I. COMING OF THE MESSIAH. 1:1-4:11.

A. His Ancestry. 1:1-17

1:1-2. The book of the generation. The genealogy of Christ opens with a statement similar to the various divisions of the book of Genesis (showing the unity of the Scriptures). Jesus Christ is the title most often used of the Saviour. Jesus (Gr Iēsous; Heb Yehoshua) is His earthly name, meaning "saviour." Christos is the Greek translation for "messiah" or "anointed." Technically: Jesus the Christ.

Son of David. By tracing Jesus' ancestry back to King David, through the line of Davidic kings, Matthew connects Jesus with His royal heritage. Despite six centuries of vacancy on the royal throne, the Messiah must be of royal descent. The genealogy here is that of Joseph, Jesus' legal father, whereas the genealogy of Luke 3:23-38 is that of Mary, His actual parent, showing His blood line back to David. The author's purpose is to show that the messianic promises made to David's line are fulfilled in Jesus. Son of Abraham. He is also the fulfillment of the covenant promises to Abraham, the forefather of the Jews (cf. Gen 12:3; 13:15; 22:18). Since Matthew is writing primarily to Jewish readers, he naturally begins by emphasizing Jesus' Jewish parentage.

3-8. Judas is the Greek form of Judah, the father of the tribe so named. The promise of Jacob was that the leadership of the twelve tribes would come through Judah (cf. Gen 49:8-12) which the Jews understood to mean that the Messiah would come from the tribe of Judah. Tamar . . . Rachab . . . Ruth . . . wife of Uriah. Four "questionable" women appear in this genealogy in addition to Mary, the mother of Jesus. It was not customary to list the names of women in a genealogy; therefore, the inclusion of these names must be deliberate on the part of

THE book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham.

2 Abraham begat Isaac; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat Judas and his brethren;

3 And Judas begat Phā'rēs and Zā'ra of Thā'mar; and Phā'rēs begat Es'rōm; and Es'rōm begat Ā'ram;

4 And Ā'ram begat A-mīn'a-dāb; and A-mīn'a-dāb begat Nā-ās'son; and Nā-ās'son begat Sāl'mon;

5 And Sāl'mon begat Bō'ōz of Rā'chāb; and Bō'ōz begat Ō'bed of Ruth; and Ō'bed begat Jesse;

6 And Jesse begat David the king;

MATTHEW 1:7

and David the king begat Solomon of her that had been the wife of Ū-rī'as;

7 And Solomon begat Rō-bō'am; and Rō-bō'am begat Ā-bī'a; and Ā-bī'a begat Asa;

8 And Asa begat Jōs'a-phāt; and Jōs'a-phāt begat Joram; and Joram begat Ō-zī'as;

9 And Ō-zī'as begat Jō'a-tham; and Jō'a-tham begat Ā'chāz; and Ā'chāz begat Ēz-e-kī'as;

10 And Ēz-e-kī'as begat Ma-nās'sēs; and Ma-nās'sēs begat Amon; and Amon begat Jo-sī'as;

11 And Jo-sī'as begat Jēch-o-nī'as and his brethren, about the time they were carried away to Babylon;

12 And after they were brought to Babylon, Jēch-o-nī'as begat Sa-lā'thī-el; and Sa-lā'thī-el begat Zō-rōb'a-bel;

13 And Zō-rōb'a-bel begat A-bī'ud; and A-bī'ud begat E-lī'a-kīm; and E-lī'a-kīm begat Azor;

14 And Azor begat Sā'dōc; and Sā'dōc begat Ā'chīm; and Ā'chīm begat E-lī'ud;

15 And E-lī'ud begat Ē-le-ā'zar; and Ē-le-ā'zar begat Māt'thān; and Māt'thān begat Jacob;

16 And Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ.

17 So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

18 ¶Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they the author. Tamar was the mother of two illegitimate sons (Pharez and Zerah) by Judah. Rahab was the converted prostitute of Jericho and the mother of Boaz. Ruth, the wife of Boaz, was a godly foreigner (Moabitess). The wife of Uriah is none other than Bathsheba whose adultery with David is infamous. However, she later became the legitimate wife of David and the mother of Solomon. The curious feature of mentioning these women in this genealogy indicates that the evangelist wished to disarm Jewish criticism about the unusual virgin birth of Jesus by showing that irregular unions were divinely blessed in the Messiah's legal ancestry. "The evangelist's argument is that Jesus, born of a virgin mother, was none the less the true lineage of David because Joseph was in fact legally married to his mother Mary" (Tasker, p. 32).

9-10. Uzziah [Ozias] is referred to as Uzziah (Isa 6:1) and Azariah (II Kgs 14:21). Three generations are omitted at this point. Matthew omits the names of Ahaziah, Joash, and Amaziah and then omits Jehoiakim after the name of Josiah. "The omissions are doubtless due to his arbitrary shortening of the list to give three groups of fourteen" (Kent, p. 3). Being familiar with rabbinical thinking, Matthew uses a symmetry of numbers. He has, accordingly, divided the generations from Abraham to Jesus into three groups of fourteen each: from Abraham to David (vss. 2-6), from David to the Babylonian exile (vss. 6-11), from the exile to the birth of Jesus (vss. 12-16). The significance of the number fourteen seems to come from the numerical values of the Hebrew consonants in the name David which add up to that number. The system of rabbinic sacred arithmetic was often based on hidden calculations. To what degree Matthew is following such a system is uncertain.

11-15. Jechoniah is also called Jehoiachin (II Kgs 24:8) and Coniah (Jer 22:24) and was cursed from having any descendant upon the throne of David according to Jeremiah 22:30. It should be noted that Jesus is not a natural descendant of his. He was recognized by the Jews of the exile as their last legitimate king. Carried away to Babylon refers to the seventy years' captivity of the Jews in Babylon during the days of Daniel the prophet.

Salathiel is named as the son of Jechoniah. This does not contradict Jeremiah 22:28-30 for the predicted childlessness of Jechoniah refers to reigning children, that is, that he would have no son who would rule Israel as king. The reference to Salathiel as the son of Neri in Luke 3:27 is better understood as being a totally different person, rather than the result of levirate marriage. It is assumed that the rest of this family record comes from Joseph's family annals.

16. Joseph the husband of Mary. The wording carefully inspired by the Holy Spirit avoids giving the impression that Joseph was the natural father of Jesus. As the husband of Mary, he was Jesus' legal father and the one through whom He had a right to David's throne. It is not said that Joseph "begat" Jesus, which is a deliberate change from the preceding genealogical expressions. Every emphasis of the text at this point reinforces the idea of the virgin birth of Christ. The marriage of Joseph and Mary took place after the conception but before the birth of Jesus.

17. Fourteen generations is the literary grouping used by Matthew to emphasize the three major periods of Israel's national history: theocracy, monarchy, hierarchy. The use of "so" implies this is an artificial arrangement. The translation would be "so this makes fourteen generations."

B. His Advent. 1:18-2:23.

18. Espoused means that Mary was already bound or betrothed to Joseph, although they were not yet actually married. Among the Jews, marriage vows were said at the betrothal and required a legal divorce to end them. The custom of the day came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost.

19 Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a publick example, was minded to put her away privily.

20 But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.

usually required an interval of one year of betrothal before the bride could actually take residence in her husband's house and consummate their union. It was during this interval that Mary was found with child. Her pregnancy naturally would have been assumed to be the result of an illegitimate union of adultery, a circumstance usually punishable by death (Deut 22:23). At this point, Mary had not yet explained her situation to Joseph. Indeed, she could hardly have expected Joseph to accept her story of the miraculous conception of the child by the Holy Spirit. With child of the Holy Ghost is the biblical explanation for the miraculous conception of Christ.

19-20. Because Joseph was a just man, he decided to divorce Mary privately (privily) but while he considered what should be done the angel of the Lord spoke to him in a dream. The angel is better translated as "an angel." Prior to His birth, Jesus Christ, the second person of the Trinity, often appeared to men in the form of a man. These appearances in the Old Testament are called theophanies or Christophanies. Since the Scripture clearly states that "no man hath seen God at any time" (Jn 1:18), these appearances evidently refer to Christ rather than God the Father. It is interesting to note the references to God refer to Him as Lord (cf. Gen 18:2, 13, 17). After His birth as Jesus, there were no more temporary physical appearances of God to man. After His resurrection Jesus appeared to men as Himself in a glorified body.

Put her away means literally to divorce her. The Jewish betrothal had to be legally broken. Joseph's merciful attitude gives an insight into his true nature as a man. Thou son of David is the address by the angel to Joseph. In spite of his humble circumstances, he was a legitimate heir to the vacant throne of David. The angel orders him to take Mary as his wife because the baby she has conceived is of the Holy Ghost. This divinely born miracle-Son is the fulfillment of God's miraculous

The Birth of Jesus and the Flight Into Egypt

21 And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins.
 22 Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, promises to the Jewish nation, which promises began in the book of Genesis with God's covenant with Abraham.

21-22. Call his name Jesus. The naming of the child Jesus (Heb Yehoshua) means "Jehovah saves." This points to the very purpose of Christ's coming into the world to save sinners. Placed early in the New Testament, this statement becomes the foundational concept of the gospel. Jesus, by His very name and nature, is the Saviour. That it might be fulfilled. This phrase (Gr plēroō) indicates the inevitability of the fulfillment of the words of the prophet, as well as the fact that Matthew saw Isaiah's statement as predictively fulfilled in the birth of Christ. "The verb pictures the promise or prophecy as an empty vessel which is at last filled when the event occurs" (R. Lenski, Interpretation of St. Matthew's Gospel, p. 52). Arndt and Gingrich list this use of the word as "the fulfillment of divine predictions or promises" (A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, p. 677). There can be no doubt that Matthew firmly believed this reference was definitely a prediction of an event that was fulfilled in the birth of Jesus. One wishing to deny the predictive element of Isaiah or its acceptance by the early church cannot adequately do so on a philological-grammatical basis, nor on the basis of historical precedent.

23 Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Ēm-mān'ū-el, which being interpreted is, God with us.

24 Then Joseph being raised from sleep did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife: 25 And knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn son: and he called his name JESUS.

23-25. A virgin relates Mary the mother of Jesus to the prediction found in Isaiah 7:14. Matthew uses the Greek word parthenos to translate the Hebrew word 'almah. His contextual usage of "fulfill" is almost certainly indicative of his understanding the Isaiah passage to contain a definitely predictive element. He recognizes the prophecy as coming from God (the Greek preposition hypo introduces the direct agent with a passive verb, whereas dia introduces the mediate agent). The Lord is the source of the prophecy and the prophet is his mouthpiece. Thus, God is the cause and the prophet is the instrument which He uses. The quotation of Isaiah 7:14 follows the Septuagint (LXX) rendering where parthenos is also used to translate the Hebrew 'almah. Perhaps no prophetic prediction has created a greater controversy than Isaiah's prediction of a virgin-born Son which Matthew clearly claims to have been fulfilled in the birth of Christ (cf. The Interpreter's Bible, V, p. 218. It is interesting to note that the exegetical and homiletical sections of this work are done by different authors, and on the same page the exegete denies that Isaiah is predicting the birth of Christ and the expositor claims that he is!). The liberal interpretation of this verse attempts to deny the validity of Matthew's use of Isaiah 7:14 as a prediction of the birth of Christ (cf. G. Cox, The Gospel According to St. Matthew, pp. 29-30; A. Argyle, The Gospel According to Matthew, p. 28; F. Filson, A Commentary on the Gospel According to St. Matthew, pp. 54-55).

There can be no doubt that the Greek term parthenos is always to be translated "virgin" (Arndt and Gingrich, p. 632). The real question is whether the LXX is correct in its translation of the Hebrew 'almah. Since the weight of scholarship supports the translation of the Hebrew word 'almah as being the most accurate word possible for "virgin," one can only conclude that the LXX translators were correct in their interpretation. The Dead Sea Scroll copy of Isaiah indicates the same usage (cf. G. Knight, A Christian Theology of the Old Testament, p. 310). For a thorough discussion of the Old Testament usage of 'almah see E. J. Young, The Book of Isaiah, I, pp. 284-291; Studies in Isaiah, pp. 143-198; C. Feinberg, "Virgin Birth in the Old Testament and Isaiah 7:14," Bibliotheca Sacra 119, pp. 251-58; E. Hindson, Isaiah's Immanuel, and "Development of the Interpretation of Isaiah 7:14," Grace Journal, X, 1, 2 pp. 3-15, 19-25.

The virgin birth of Christ is undoubtedly the most essential doctrine underlying His deity. The prediction in Isaiah 7:14 of a virgin-born son calls His name Immanuel, which being in-

CHAPTER 2

NOW when Jesus was born in Bēth-lehēm of Judæa in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem.

2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

3 When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4 And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

5 And they said unto him, In Bēth-lehēm of Judæa: for thus it is written by the prophet,

6 And thou Bēth-lehēm, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

7 Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

8 And he sent them to Bēth-lehēm, interpreted is, God with us. This is a title describing the deity of the person of the Son of God rather than a name actually used by him. It implies God will come to dwell among His own people. For a discussion of the significance of the virgin birth of Christ see R. Gromacki, The Virgin Birth: Doctrine of Deity; H. Hanke, The Validity of the Virgin Birth; J. G. Machen, The Virgin Birth of Christ.

2:1-2. Bethlehem of Judea was also called Ephrath. The town is five miles south of Jerusalem. Its name in Hebrew means "house of bread." This Judæan city was the birthplace of King David. It was the original city of Joseph's ancestors. According to Luke 2:1-7, Mary and he traveled there from Nazareth and Jesus was born in a stable after they arrived there. Herod the king was known as Herod the Great, and was the son of Antipater, an Edomite. He became king by Roman decree in 43 B.C. Wise men were originally the priestly caste among the Persians and Babylonians. These Magi from the east were experts in the study of the stars. Tradition claims there were three royal visitors who were also kings. However there is no real historical evidence to verify this. All we are told in the text is that there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem. Born King of the Jews. The wise men naturally came to Jerusalem, the royal capital of Israel, seeking one whom they thought was to be born a king, on the basis of their calculations of the stars. What exactly this meant to them we are not sure. Perhaps, through the science of astronomy they observed a new star and for some reason correlated that with the birth of a king. Why they would associate this star with Israel is uncertain. "It is entirely conceivable that these men had made contact with Jewish exiles, or with the prophecies and influence of Daniel, and thus were in possession of Old Testament prophecies regarding the Messiah" (Kent, p. 6). His star. It is unlikely that this star could only have been a natural phenomenon since it led the wise men to Jerusalem and later to Bethlehem. It almost certainly was a divine manifestation used by God to indicate the fact and place of the Messiah's birth and the place of His reign.

3-4. Naturally, such a question, seeking the birth of a new king, would upset Herod, the current ruler. He quickly gathered his scribes and demanded an explanation of them. The scribes belonged mainly to the party of the Pharisees and functioned as members of a highly honored profession. "They were professional students and defenders of the law . . . they were also referred to as lawyers because they were entrusted with the administration of law as judges in the Sanhedrin" (Ryrie Study Bible, p. 8). Where Christ should be born. This demand is highly significant in that it implies the Jews of that day were anticipating the Messiah.

5-6. When they replied that He would be born In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet, they clearly anticipated a literal fulfillment of the Old Testament prophecies regarding the coming of the Messiah. The quotation is from Micah 5:2 where the prophet predicts that Bethlehem of the tribe of Judah shall be the place where the governor or ruler of Israel shall originate. It is significant to note that Isaiah and Micah were contemporaries. Their prophecies of the coming of the Messiah interrelate to one another. The Governor who will come from Bethlehem is none other than the child-ruler predicted in Isaiah 9:6, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder." The prophet goes on to proclaim that this ruler is the "mighty God" and that the increase of His government shall never end. He will sit upon the throne of David forever.

7-11. Herod's fear of a rival ruler caused him to question what time the star appeared. His subsequent slaughter of the children at Bethlehem from two years old and under was apparently calculated from the time given him by the wise men.

MATTHEW 2:9

and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

9 When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

10 When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

11 ¶And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

12 And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

13 ¶And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

14 When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt:

15 And was there until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son.

16 ¶Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bēth-lehēm, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently enquired of the wise men.

17 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying,

18 In Rā'ma was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

19 ¶But when Herod was dead, behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, 20 Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead which sought the young child's life.

21 And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.

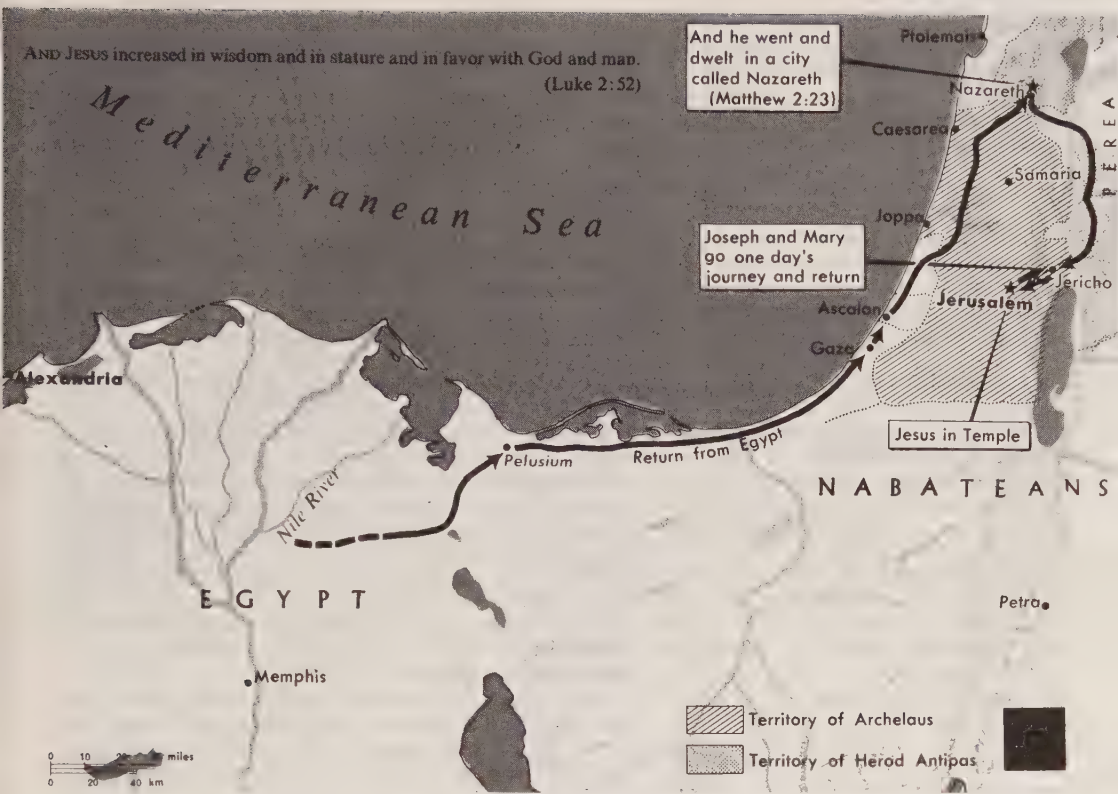

22 But when he heard that Ār-che-lā'us did reign in Judæa in the room of

The fact that the child was found in a house (vs. 11) and not the manger would indicate that Jesus was probably no longer a baby when the wise men found Him. They were guided to this place by the star which went before them. This again indicates the supernatural nature of this star. The young child. When the wise men arrived they found the child (not a baby) with His mother in a house. This would indicate that the family had now moved out of the stable into a rented home at Bethlehem. Whether the visit of the wise men occurred a few months after the birth of the child or one to two years afterwards is uncertain. Since the wise men brought three gifts, i.e., gold, frankincense and myrrh, it has been assumed that they were three in number (some traditions have even given them names but these are not necessarily established by fact). It has been suggested that the gifts were in recognition of Jesus as King, Son of God, and the Suffering Saviour. It is also significant that they worshipped him, indicating their recognition of the deity of the one whom they were worshiping. Again, Matthew has reasserted the importance of the deity of Christ. He is the virgin-born Son, "God with us," who deserves our worship.

12-15. Being warned of God. A special divine revelation in the form of a warning was given both to the wise men and to Joseph in the form of a dream. Thus instructed, the wise men did not return to Herod, and Joseph and Mary fled with the baby into Egypt. It should be remembered that there was a large Jewish population in Egypt at that time, especially in and around the city of Alexandria. The holy family would have been inconspicuous during their stay and would have been welcomed by members of their own race. The death of Herod occurred in 4 B.C. It should be remembered that our present calendar is off in its calculation by about six years (this would place the birth of Christ at ca. 6-5 B.C.). Herod's death is recorded in detail by Josephus (Antiq. xvii. 6.5). The flight to Egypt by Jesus' family is related by Matthew to the statement in Hosea 11:1 which refers historically to the deliverance of the Hebrews from Egypt. Matthew records that this was done that it might be fulfilled. Since the Old Testament statement is not a direct reference to Christ, it is apparent that the writer saw this prophecy as a type of Christ. (On the significance and reliability of Matthew's quotations of Old Testament prophecies see R. H. Gundry, The Use of the Old Testament in St. Matthew's Gospel.)

16-18. The bitter reaction of Herod when he slew all the children at Bethlehem was unrecorded in the history of that period. This should not surprise us because of the king's frequently outraged retaliation on people. He murdered his wife and three sons. Josephus calls him "a man of great barbarity towards all men." Rachel weeping for her children (vs. 18) is a quotation of Jeremiah 31:15. The calamity of Israel's mourning at the time of the exile is correlated here to this renewed calamity brought on by Herod, whose very act of ruling is a direct result of that captivity which had been caused by Israel's sin. Rachel weeping is a reference to Rachel, the mother of Benjamin, and thus the tribe of Benjamin. She stands as the symbol of the Benjamite mothers and their sorrow. Also, note that she died outside Bethlehem herself (Gen 35:19).

19-23. When Herod was dead refers again to the death of the king in 4 B.C. He was succeeded by his son Archelaus, the son of his Samaritan wife, Malthace. Archelaus was as brutal as his father. Thus, Joseph, again warned in a dream, returned to Nazareth, avoiding any further residence in Judæa. The phrase He shall be called a Nazarene is a reference to Christ's coming from the city of Nazareth. It should not be taken to mean that He was a Nazirite. A Nazirite was not to drink wine, touch anything unclean, or cut his hair. It was probably a misunderstanding that caused early Roman artists to depict Jesus with long hair. The proof that He was not a Nazirite is found in his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee:

The Return from Egypt; The Boy Jesus in the Temple

23 And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.

CHAPTER 3

IN those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judæa, the fact that He did not keep the other two provisions of the vow. Many of the very people which He came to minister to were considered "unclean" by the people of His day. Since no particular Old Testament passage is referred to, it seems best to understand this verse as referring to a fulfillment of those prophecies which indicate that the Messiah would be of insignificant origin and despised by people (e.g., Isa 53:3).

C. His Ambassador. 3:1-12.

3:1. The forerunner of Christ was John the Baptist. He was the son of Zacharias and Elisabeth, and a cousin of the Lord (cf. Lk 1:5-80). The significance of his preparatory ministry cannot be overestimated. Even Josephus (Antiq. xviii 5.2) refers to him by name. John was a child of promise whose birth had been announced by the angel Gabriel to his father who was a priest. His birth was accompanied by the promise: "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord . . . and shall be filled with the Holy Ghost" (Lk 1:15). Jesus said of him that there was none greater than John (Mt 11:11) during the Old Testament dispensation. This would imply that John the Baptist was the epitome of the message of the Old Testament itself.

Matthew's reference to John the Baptist assumes that his readers were familiar with him. There is no connection anywhere in Scripture to relate John to one of the Essene communities or to the Qumran sect (of the Dead Sea Scrolls). The real significance of John seems to be his appearance in the wilderness of Judæa, the eastern part of the province lying beyond the mountain ridge and west of the Dead Sea. This infertile area may rightly be called a “wilderness.” John’s appearance, preaching a message of repentance, is in fulfillment of Isaiah 40:3, “Prepare ye the way of the Lord.” The words of the prophet originally formed the part of his message to the Babylonian exiles, who eventually returned to their own land. John, the last of the prophets of Israel, was now commissioned to prepare the way for the King. “The reign of God was immediately to be made manifest in Israel in all its fullness in the Person and the work of none other than the Messiah Himself” (Tasker, p. 47). John is presented as the prophet sent in the spirit of Elijah “before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord” (Mal 4:5). His appearance (wearing a rough coat of camel’s hair and having a leather belt around his waist) and his dynamic and often scathing preaching, certainly depicts him in the life-style of Israel’s ancient prophet. Jesus would later proclaim, “I tell you that Elijah has already come!” (For a recent study see M. Loane, John the Baptist.)

2. Repent means a change of mind that leads to a change of action. Repentance (Gr metanoia) is basically “a change of mind” which results in a change of conduct. Repentance is not sorrow. It involves a complete change of attitude regarding God and sin and is often accompanied by a sense of sorrow and a corresponding change in conduct. Such repentance does not arise within man himself, but is the result of God’s mercy in leading man to it (cf. Acts 5:31; Rom 2:4; II Tim 2:25). Thus, repentance involves the very process of conversion whereby men are born again. (On the significance of repentance see H. A. Ironside, Except Ye Repent.)

John’s message of repentance was necessary in order to prepare people for the kingdom of heaven which was at hand. The phrase “kingdom of heaven” is used only in the Gospel of Matthew and seems to be based on similar references in the book of Daniel. The phrase “the kingdom of God” is used more frequently by Mark and Luke. The change is perhaps due to Matthew’s Jewish background and outlook. Since the Jews regarded it as blasphemous to refer to God by name, it is possible that Matthew substituted the word heaven for that reason. Usually the two phrases are used interchangeably in the Gospels. The kingdom of heaven is the rule of heaven over earth. The Jews of Jesus’ day were looking forward to the coming of a Messiah who would reign in a Davidic kingdom on earth. It is this kingdom which Christ proclaimed was a literal earthly kingdom, based upon spiritual principles, which would demand a right relationship with God for entrance into that kingdom. Therefore, John the Baptist’s ministry is clearly seen as a time of preparation for the coming of Christ and the proclamation of His kingdom.

3-7. Spoken of by the prophet Isaiah [Esaia]. All four Gospels relate this prophecy to a fulfillment in the life and ministry of John the Baptist (Mk 1:2; Lk 3:4; Jn 1:23). Make his paths straight refers to the straightening or preparing of one’s life in a right relationship with God in order to prepare for the coming of the King. John’s dress of camel’s hair, and a leathern girdle was similar to Elijah’s clothing (II Kgs 1:8) and was the usual dress of prophets (Zech 13:4). Locusts were an allowable food (cf. Lev 11:22) and were eaten by the very poorest of people. The reference in verse 5 to Jerusalem, and all Judea relates to the people of those places. John’s ministry was received with great enthusiasm in its early stages. So great was his success that even many of the Pharisees and Sadducees (vs. 7) came to this baptism.

8-10. Fruits meet for repentance. John rebuked the Pharisees, asking them to give evidence of fruits meet for repen-

2 And saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet E-sā’ias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 And the same John had his raiment of camel’s hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and his meat was locusts and wild honey.

5 ¶Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judæa, and all the region round about Jordan,

6 And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

7 But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sād’du-ceeds come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?

8 Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance:

9 And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

10 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

11 I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire:

12 Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.

13 ¶Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

14 But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

15 And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

16 And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water:

tance (vs. 8). There can be no doubt that the New Testament concept of repentance grows out of its biblical usage in the Old Testament where the term (Heb shub) means far more than an intellectual change of mind. Genuine repentance proves itself by the fruits of a changed life. John the Baptist further rebuked them for their belief in nationalistic salvation. Abraham to our father means they were trusting their physical descent for salvation, rather than their spiritual relationship to the father of faith. Of these stones may be a reference to Isaiah 5:12, but is probably to be taken in the natural setting of the seashore. The axe about to chop the root of the trees is a reference to the impending judgment coming upon Israel (God's chosen tree, cf. Rom 11) if they reject the Messiah-King. Again, fruitlessness is depicted as a lack of conversion and spiritual life. No fruit means no life in the soul.

11-12. I baptize . . . with water. John's baptism in water was not Christian baptism. The death and resurrection of Christ had not yet occurred in order to be depicted by this baptism. John's baptism was similar to the Old Testament oblations (washings) that symbolized a cleansing of personal repentance on the part of a believer. Notice that Jesus submitted to this baptism to fulfill all righteousness (vs. 15). As God, He could not submit to baptism into the body of the church of which He is the head. He shall baptize . . . with the Holy Ghost refers to the spiritual rebirth of the regenerate who shall receive the baptism of the Spirit (cf. I Cor 12:13, which clearly indicates that all believers have received the baptism of the Spirit). This experience began at Pentecost (Acts 1) and was repeated upon every new group of converts: Samaritans, Gentiles, John's disciples, etc. until it became normative for all Christian believers.

The term and with fire is better translated "or with fire." The immediate context certainly indicates that to be baptized with fire is the result of judgment (notice the reference to purging and burning in the next verse). Other than the visible tongues (bil-lows) of fire which appeared over the disciples' heads at Pentecost, references to fire burning up unprofitable chaff refer to judgment rather than cleansing. The threshing fan (vs. 12) refers to a wooden shovel used for tossing grain into the wind in order to blow away the lighter chaff, leaving the good grain to settle in a pile. The chaff would then be swept up and burned, the unquenchable fire refers to the eternal punishment of hell or the lake of fire.

D. His Approval. 3:13-4:11.

1. Baptism of Christ. 3:13-17.

13-14. All four Gospels relate this event (cf. Jn 1:31-33) with unquestioned historical verification. While this section of Matthew's gospel centers upon Galilee, Jesus now goes south to the Jordan River to be baptized (vs. 13). The word baptize (Gr baptizo) is an Anglicism. It means to dip or immerse in water, indicating the true form of baptism by immersion. John forbade him (vs. 14) for the obvious reason that Jesus needed no repentance of sin and John felt unworthy of this opportunity. The tense of the Greek verb emphasizes that John tried to hinder him. Thus, this was no casual hesitation on the part of the Baptist.

15. Suffer it to be so means allow it to be or let it happen. Jesus sought this outward identification with John's ministry to fulfil all righteousness. By identifying Himself with those whom He came to redeem, Jesus inaugurated His public ministry as the Messiah. In regard to the Jewish religious observances, Jesus always met the duties of a faithful Jew: synagogue worship, attendance at feasts, payment of the Temple tax, etc.

16-17. In the process of His baptism, Jesus went up . . . out of the water, the prepositions indicating that He was completely and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him:

MATTHEW 3:17

17 And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

CHAPTER 4

THEN was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil.

2 And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred.

3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.

4 But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

in the water and came up out from it, again indicating the form of immersion. The descending of the Spirit of God fulfilled the predicted sign to John in order to indicate the true Messiah (cf. Jn 1:33; Isa 11:2). "As the Spirit came upon Old Testament prophets for special guidance at the start of their ministries, so now He came upon Jesus without measure" (Kent, p. 10). The dove was a symbol of innocence and purity (cf. Mt 10:16) and served as an ideal symbolic representation for the Holy Spirit since it is a totally defenseless animal. Jesus made it clear that the ministry of the Holy Spirit was to glorify Christ and not Himself (Jn 16:13-14). The voice from heaven is that of the Father (see also Mt 17:5; Jn 12:28 where He speaks at the transfiguration and just prior to the crucifixion) giving His verbal approval to the ministry of His beloved Son. There can be no doubt that all three persons of the Trinity are actively involved here as distinct persons of the Godhead. The Father speaks, the Spirit descends, the Son is baptized.

2. Temptation of Christ. 4:1-11.

4:1. Following His public baptism, Jesus was led up of the Spirit into the wilderness referring to the elevation of the Judaean wilderness. The historical setting of the temptation, which was directed against Jesus' human nature, indicates that this was a literal experience which He really conquered, not merely a mental victory over His own thoughts. The references to the work of the Holy Spirit make clear the interrelation of these two members of the Godhead. In His earthly work, Jesus depended upon the ministry of the Holy Spirit to empower Him.

That Jesus was tempted of the devil is clearly presented as a fact. The attack against Christ's humanity was a genuine temptation that would have overcome any normal man. However, Jesus was no ordinary man. As the virgin-born God-man, His divine nature could not sin (cf. I Sam 15:29) and thus held His human nature in check. Some have objected that the impeccability (i.e., He was not able to sin) of Christ denies the reality of Satan's temptation. Such an objection is meaningless when one remembers that Satan's rebellion against God has already been defeated in Christ's atonement, but his rebellion is nevertheless real, even though the outcome of God's victory is certain. The same is true of the temptation of Christ. One may attack a battleship with a canoe. The outcome of the attack will be certain defeat for the canoe, but the attack is nonetheless legitimate.

2-3. Jesus had fasted forty days and forty nights, a remarkable feat of human endurance indicating the physical strength of the former carpenter. While the three major tests followed this period, other tests evidently had occurred throughout the forty days (Lk 4:2). His real physical hunger serves as the setting for the first temptation by the tempter (Satan). The incident is couched in the questioning aspersions if thou be the Son of God, indicating Matthew's purpose for including this record of Jesus' victory: it proves that He is, in fact, the Son of God! The urgency to turn the stones into bread appealed to Jesus' most basic human need in light of the extensive fast. The natural result of using His divine power in this regard would certainly have led to the desire to eat the bread. One mistake would have led to another. However, Jesus refused to use His divine prerogative to benefit Himself. In fact, He never did a miracle to benefit Himself. His heart was always reaching out to others.

4. The victory in each aspect of the temptation is related to Jesus' use of Scripture: It is written. First, He quotes Deuteronomy 8:3, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." The source of bread is more important than the bread itself. Later, Jesus would say, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of" (Jn 4:32).

The Baptism of Jesus and The Sojourn in the Desert

5 Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,

6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;

9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

12 ¶Now when Jesus had heard that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee;

13 And leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Ca-per'na-um, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zāb'u-lon and Nēph'tha-līm:

14 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by E-sā'ias the prophet, saying,

15 The land of Zāb'u-lon, and the land of Nēph'tha-līm, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles;

16 The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up.

His source of strength was obedience to the Father's will and He would not even work a miracle to avoid personal suffering when such suffering was a part of God's purpose for Him. What a Saviour!

5-7. The second temptation took place in the holy city (Jerusalem) on the pinnacle of the Temple, which towered above the Kidron Valley. Evidently, Jesus was transported there by Satan's power and this time the devil quoted Scripture (out of context) in order to get Him to sin and to ultimately shake His faith in the Word. Satan used Psalm 91:11-12 urging Jesus to cast thyself down. Again, Jesus replied with Scripture (Deut 6:16) that He was not to tempt . . . God by such a presumptuous action. The very passage of Scripture quoted by Satan actually goes on to promise God's ultimate victory over him! Jesus' use of the Scripture again silences the tempter.

8. The third temptation takes place on an exceeding high mountain. That the mountain is real seems clear in the text, though its exact location is unidentified. Despite the grandeur and almost miraculousness of this temptation there is nothing in the passage itself to indicate that these temptations were only in the mind of Christ. Clearly they are depicted as being real experiences that actually occurred in the human life of the Messiah. Satan showed Him all the kingdoms of the world, which he promised to give Jesus if He would acknowledge and worship Satan as the prince of the world. The invalidity of the temptation is almost laughable. Satan, though the god of this world, is never depicted in Scripture as actually controlling or possessing any real power over the kingdoms of the world. While he may influence a king or a group of kingdoms, God is always depicted as being on the throne, over the earth which is His footstool. That Satan, the usurper, would attempt to give the kingdoms of the world to Jesus, the Messiah, the rightful King, is the height of absurdity! Like many of Satan's temptations he offers something which in reality he cannot deliver.

9-11. For Christ to fall down and worship Satan would have been to acknowledge the devil's lordship over Him. In His direct rebuke get thee hence, Satan, Jesus clearly asserts His lordship over the old serpent whose head He will soon crush. Matthew's statement that Satan leaveth him shows that his order of the temptations is the chronological one (cf. Lk 4:1-13). In a demonstration of spirit and power, Jesus overcame the tempter, showing that He is the One who enables us to overcome temptation as well. "Resist the devil and he will flee from you."

II. MINISTRY OF THE MESSIAH. 4:12-27:66.

A. In Galilee. 4:12-18:35.

12-16. Matthew designates four clear geographical areas in relation to the ministry of Christ: Galilee (4:12), Peraea (19:1), Judaea (20:17), and Jerusalem (21:1). The author then omits some of the early Judean ministry and begins with Jesus at Capernaum in Galilee where he had first met Christ himself (cf. 9:9). John was cast into prison (vs. 12). The circumstances of the arrest and eventual beheading of John the Baptist are recorded in chapter 14. It appears that a widespread persecution of the followers of John and Jesus took place at this time. Luke 4:16-31 explains the reason for Jesus leaving Nazareth was an attempt on His life after a synagogue service at Nazareth. From this point on, Capernaum became the headquarters of Jesus' ministry to the house of Israel. This city was a Roman settlement near the Sea of Galilee and was the center of the Roman government of the northern provinces of Israel. That it might be fulfilled (vss. 14-16) refers to the coming of Christ into Galilee in fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah 9:1-2, ". . . beyond Jordan, in Galilee of the nations. The people that walk in 17 From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

18 ¶And Jesus, walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

19 And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men.

20 And they straightway left their nets, and followed him.

21 And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, James the son of Zēb'e-dee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zēb'e-dee their father, mending their nets; and he called them.

22 And they immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him.

23 ¶And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people.

24 And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them.

25 And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from De-cāp'o-lis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judæa, and from beyond Jordan.

darkness have seen a great light . . ." Jesus Himself was that great light that now would shine forth in His earthly ministry to the people of Galilee who had so long been despised by their Judæan cousins, in the south.

17. Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. The message of John the Baptist is now clearly proclaimed by Jesus Christ. However, Jesus, as the Messiah, is not calling on His listeners to prepare for the coming of the kingdom but rather announces that the kingdom is here. In a very real sense the first coming of the King is an honest, straightforward presentation of the kingdom promised by the Old Testament prophets to the people of Israel. Thus, we find unusual miracles attending Jesus' presentation of this kingdom: incurable diseases and incomprehensible afflictions are cured by the power of His touch and His word. The kingdom blessings promised in Isaiah 35:5-6 to be fulfilled in a future kingdom, here become the credentials of the King in His first coming (cf. Walvoord, p. 39).

18-20. Simon called Peter, and Andrew became the first two disciples called publicly by Jesus. Andrew had earlier (cf. Jn 1:40) introduced his brother to Jesus on another occasion. The invitation, Follow me, called these earlier believers into a permanent ministry to be shared with Christ. I will make you fishers of men clearly indicates the nature of this ministry. They would receive special training in bringing men into the kingdom. These former fishermen would literally become fishers of men! There can be no doubt that aggressive personal evangelism was and still is a major priority in the believer's life. Our obedience to the lordship of Christ is evidenced by our carrying forth the mission to which He has committed us. Having left their nets these disciples entered into a new relationship and would never again be able to fully return to the occupation they once held so dear. There can be no greater calling than to serve Christ full time with every effort of our lives.

21-22. James and John were also brothers and fishing partners with Simon and Andrew. Matthew and Mark agree that they were mending their nets, but Luke seems to differ. The two accounts can be simply harmonized. As two men were mending nets, the other two were fishing. Jesus then came upon them and called them all to follow Him. The statement in verse 22 that they immediately responded to His call gives us a perfect picture of true obedience to the lordship of Christ. To obey is to respond immediately in an attitude of faith.

23-25. The closing verses of the chapter summarize and survey the Galilean ministry of Jesus. This ministry concentrated on a presentation of the gospel of the kingdom to the Jews. Jesus as the Messiah (the anointed One) had arrived to set up the long-awaited kingdom. Accompanying this announcement were miracles of healing. Going from city to city throughout Galilee caused His fame to spread quickly, so that great multitudes of people (vs. 25) followed Him from Galilee, the Decapolis, Jerusalem, Judæa, and from beyond Jordan. Thus, followers were gleaned from virtually every geographical area of the nation of Israel as it was in the day of Christ. This is no insignificant feat when one realizes that no prophet had arisen in Israel for over four hundred years. The silence of the Intertestamental period had been broken by the proclamation of the good news of the kingdom!

1. His message: Sermon on the Mount. 5:1-7:29.

The nature of the kingdom which Jews proclaimed has long been a controversial area of interpretation among Christian scholars. While these interpretations do not divide us between orthodoxy and heresy, they nevertheless formulate our fundamental understanding of the nature and message of the church today. Liberalism taught that the keeping of the Sermon on the Mount was to be regarded as the message of the gospel. Thus it predicated a system of salvation by moral works. Some dispensationalists, at times, have tended to relegate everything related to the kingdom as being under the Old Testament dispensation, thus having no significant application to the church today. Still others recognize the truths within this kingdom message, but hold that its precepts are impossible to attain, thus nullifying its significance for the Christian.

From Nazareth to Cana and Capernaum

Nowhere in the presentation of the message of the kingdom does Jesus indicate that this message is significantly different from the proclamation of evangelism by the church. The difference, rather, seems to be in relation to those to whom the message is directed. During the early period of the Gospels, the message of the kingdom of heaven was directed to the nation of Israel and contained the potential fulfillment of the promised kingdom to the Jews. To the Gentile nations of the Church Age the proclamation of the message is that God will gather a people for Himself from all nations into this great kingdom. The prerequisite for entrance into this kingdom included repentance (Mt 4:17), righteousness (Mt 5:20), faith (Mt 18:3) or, in summary, being born again (Jn 3). Because the people rejected these requirements, Christ taught that His earthly reign would not be centralized in the nation of Israel but in a gathering of a people from among the nations of the earth.

5:1-2. The opening verses of the Sermon on the Mount indicate that this message deals with the inner state of mind and heart which is the indispensable absolute of true Christian discipleship. It delineates the outward manifestations of character and conduct of the true believer and genuine disciple. A dispensationalist, Lawlor writes: "We do not find basic, fundamental Law here, for law cannot produce the state of blessedness set forth herein" (cf. G. Lawlor, The Beatitudes Are for Today, p. 11). Rather, the quality of life herein described is the necessary product of grace alone. As Jesus states the outward legal requirements of the law and then carries His listener beyond the letter of the law to the true spirit and intent of the law, He describes a life-style which no human being could live in his own power. Thus, the life of the believer, described by Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount, is a life of grace and glory, which comes from God alone. To make this quality of life the product of man's human efforts (as does the liberal) is the height of overestimation of man's ability and underestimation of his depravity. To relegate this entire message, Jesus' longest recorded sermon, to a Jewish-only life-style, as do hyperdispensationalists, is to rob the church of her greatest statement of true Christian living!

The depth of spiritual truth proclaimed in this message of the kingdom, however, does not present the gospel of justification by faith in the death and resurrection of Christ. Pink states: "Its larger part was a most searching exposition of the spirituality of the law and the repudiation of the false teaching of the elders" (A. W. Pink, An Exposition of the Sermon on the Mount, p. 13). Jesus made it clear that the spirit of Christ goes beyond the outward demand of the law. The Christian, though not under the law, is to live above the law.

It has always been difficult to clearly draw the distinction between the relationship of law and grace. Dr. Martyn Lloyd-Jones has observed: "Some so emphasize the law as to turn the gospel of Jesus Christ with its glorious liberty into nothing but a collection of moral maxims. It is all law to them and there is no grace left. They so talk of the Christian, that it becomes pure legalism and there is no grace in it. Let us remember also that it is equally possible so to overemphasize grace at the expense of the law as again, to have something which is not the gospel of the New Testament" (D. Martyn Lloyd-Jones, Studies in the Sermon on the Mount, pp. 12-15). He goes on to note that the Sermon on the Mount and the message of the kingdom do have definite application to the Christian today. It was preached to people who were meant to practice it not only at that time but ever afterwards as well. Boice (p. 9) observes that that "World" of the Sermon on the Mount cannot be restricted to life in the future millennial kingdom, since it includes tax collectors, thieves, unjust officials, hypocrites, and false prophets.

Embodied in the Sermon on the Mount is a summation of Jesus' basic ethical teaching of the life of a born-again man. While the Sermon on the Mount is not a way of salvation, neither is it only a message to those under the law, for it obviously goes beyond the law. It is a presentation of Christian discipleship which can be wrought in the soul of an individual only by the power of God. This message does not tell one how to be saved; it tells one what it is like to be saved. It explains the quality of the life changed by the saving grace of God. Its basic truths are reiterated everywhere throughout the New Testament epistles. There is no fundamental contrast between this message and the message of Paul. Both are in agreement that "the just shall live by faith!"

CHAPTER 5

AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him:

2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying.

In the Sermon on the Mount Jesus states the spiritual character and quality of the kingdom which He wished to establish. The basic qualities of this kingdom are fulfilled in the church which He would establish. Virtually every section of this message is repeated in the substance elsewhere throughout the New Testament. There is nothing here to indicate that this message is to be limited in its application only to the people of Israel. Notice in the opening verse that his disciples had come to Him and he . . . taught them the following message.

a. The Beatitudes: Character described. 5:3-20.

3. Blessed means "happy." This is a basic description of the believers' inner condition as a result of the work of God. Kent states that it is virtually equivalent to being "saved" (H. A. Kent Jr. Matthew, in Wycliffe Bible Commentary, p. 15). These Beatitudes, like Psalm 1, do not show a man how to be saved, but rather describe the characteristics of one who has been saved. The poor in spirit are the opposite of the proud or haughty in spirit. These are those who have been humbled by the grace of God and have acknowledged their sin and therefore their dependence upon God to save them. They are the ones who will inherit the kingdom of heaven. It is obvious in this usage that the kingdom of heaven is a general designation of the dwelling place of the saved.

4. Those that mourn . . . shall be comforted. The depth of the promise of these statements is almost inexhaustible. Those who mourn for sin shall be comforted in confession. Those who mourn for the human anguish of the lost shall be comforted by the compassion of God.

5. The meek . . . shall inherit the earth refers again to those who have been humbled before God and will inherit, not only the blessedness of heaven, but shall ultimately share in the kingdom of God upon the earth. Here, in the opening statements of the Sermon on the Mount, is the balance between the physical and spiritual promise of the kingdom. The kingdom of which Jesus preached is both "in you" and is yet "to come." The Christian is the spiritual citizen of the kingdom of heaven now.

6. These future possessors of the earth are its presently-installed rightful heirs and even now they hunger and thirst after righteousness. They experience a deep desire for personal righteousness which is, in itself, a proof of their spiritual rebirth. Those who are poor and empty in their own spiritual poverty recognize the depth of their need and hunger and thirst for that which only God can give them. To hunger means to be needy. It is joined with to thirst; the born-again man has a God-given hunger and thirst (inner passion) for righteousness. This hungering and thirsting continues throughout the life of the believer. He continues to hunger and to be filled and to hunger and to be filled. God supplies his every spiritual need daily. This act of hungering and thirsting after righteousness is the by-product of a regenerated life.

Lawlor (p. 60) rightly states that this is the description of a man who has already been saved. Nowhere does the Bible command unbelievers to hunger after righteousness in order to be saved. Rather, Paul clearly states "there is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God" (Rom 3:11). The biblical writers make it clear that while man must come to Christ for salvation, it is not within man's normal ability and desire to want to come to God. Therefore, God is depicted throughout the New Testament as the seeking Saviour going

3 Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

4 Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

5 Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

6 Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

after the lost. They shall be filled (Gr chortazō) refers to a complete filling and satisfaction. The psalmist proclaimed: "He satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness" (107:9). This filling comes from God, who is the total source of satisfaction of His people. It comes now and it will continue to come throughout eternity to those who hunger and thirst for it.

7 Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

7. Those who are merciful . . . shall obtain mercy has reference to those who have been born again by the mercy of God. Because divine love has been extended to them, they have the work of the Holy Spirit in them producing a mercy which defies explanation by unregenerate men. Jesus Himself became the ultimate example of this when He cried from the cross, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do" (Lk 23:34). The form of proverbial teaching should not confuse the order of these statements; for example, the believer does not show mercy in order to obtain mercy, he shows mercy because he has obtained mercy. In so continuing to show the evidence of the grace of God in his life he continues to receive that grace. In other words, he is not saved simply because he shows mercy and is kind to people. He shows mercy and is kind because he is saved.

8 Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

8. Those who are truly saved shall see God. These are the pure in heart. Their lives have been transformed by the grace of God. They are not yet sinless but their position before God has been changed. They have the new birth, saving faith and holiness. The process of sanctification is ever conforming them to the image of Christ (Rom 8:29), which image consists in "righteousness and true holiness" (Eph 4:24). Purity of heart is both the end of our election and the goal of our redemption. We read in Ephesians 1:4, "He has chosen us that we should be holy" and Titus 2:14, "who gave himself for us that he might redeem us unto himself a peculiar people." To which we add Hebrews 12:14, "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord."

9 Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

9. The next description deals with the peacemakers. They are the ones who are themselves at peace with God and live in peace with all men (cf. Rom 5:1). They are called "the" peacemakers for these are not social reformers, but rather the ones reformed by the regenerating power of the gospel. They are peacemakers because they themselves are at peace with God. They have entered into the peace of Christ and thus are able ambassadors of God's message of peace to a troubled world. Hence, they shall be called the children of God. These only shall be called the sons of God! Throughout the Beatitudes Jesus clearly underscores that only those who have the life-changing qualities herein described are citizens of His kingdom.

10 Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

10. As Jesus develops His message He makes it clear that such a life causes His people to be in direct contrast to the world in which they live. Therefore He reminds, Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake. The plural use of ye in verse 11 indicates that He foresaw this persecution as touching all His followers. Notice II Timothy 3:12, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." The nature of this persecution (Gr diōkō) implies a driving or chasing away, a withstanding or keeping one from his goal. This does not mean that every Christian will necessarily suffer physical abuse as evidence of true salvation. While many Christians have sealed their faith with their blood, many more have had to withstand the social temptations and pressures of the world in order to live effectively for Christ.

11 Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

11. Again, Jesus warns that men shall revile you, and persecute you. This became true during His own ministry, in the lives of the apostles and throughout the history of the church. But in Tertullian's words, "The blood of the martyrs became the seed of the church." The persecution spoken of here is 12 Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

13 ¶Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

14 Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid.

15 Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

16 Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

17 ¶Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.

18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled.

twofold. First, it involves a physical pursuing of the persecuted and secondly a personal attack of slander against them.

12. Rejoice is the command that grows out of the blessedness of the believer. The phrase “rejoice and be exceeding glad” means rejoice, but even more exalt! The believer who is the blessed one may not only rejoice in tribulation but he may rejoice exceedingly to the point of exaltation. Therefore, he glories in tribulation even as the Apostle Paul (cf. II Cor 1:3-7; 12:7-10). Great is your reward in heaven focuses attention upon the eternal, spiritual destiny of all things. If God is as real as He claims, if the Bible is true, if heaven is to be gained, then there is no temporary earthly trouble or persecution that can thwart the child of God from the eternal glory that lies ahead. In Romans 8:18, Paul proclaimed, “I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.”

13. The Beatitudes are followed by a summary statement of the basic character of the Christian’s life as salt and light. Ye are the salt of the earth; again the phrase ye are indicates that only the genuinely born-again person is salt and can help meet the needs of the world. The salt adds flavoring, acts as a preservative, melts coldness and heals wounds. Thus it is a very appropriate description of the believer in his relationship to the world in which he lives. The term “lose its savor” refers to its essential saltiness. Jesus was actually saying that if the salt loses its saltiness, it is worthless. The implication of this statement is that if a Christian loses his effectiveness, his testimony will be trampled under the feet of men.

14-16. Ye are the light of the world describes the essential mission of the Christian to the world. He is the condition (salt) to meet the world’s needs and he has a mission (light) to the world. His light is to clearly shine forth into the darkness of human depravity. He is to set it up on a candlestick, not hide it under a bushel, e.g., basket. Inconsistent living and unconfessed sin in the life of the believer will become a basket-like covering which hides the light of God. God provides the light and it continues to shine, but as believers we must keep our lives clean before the Lord in order not to cover up the light which He has placed within us. Darkness is the absence of light and darkness alone cannot dispel the light, but the smallest light can dispel the greatest darkness. Therefore, let your light shine through a clean life before the Lord and before the world in which you live.

17. Having laid the foundation of the message in the summary statements of the Beatitudes, Jesus now proceeds to show the superiority of His message to that of the law of Moses. He makes it clear that He had not . . . come to destroy the law. That is, the New Testament gospel is not contrary nor contradictory to the Old Testament law; rather it is the ultimate fulfillment of the spiritual intention of the law. Where the law had degenerated into legalism by the Pharisees, Jesus now takes the law beyond mere outward observance to the inner spiritual intention of God. For He had come to fulfill the law and its fullest implications. In his earthly life Jesus accomplished this by meeting its strictest demands and going beyond its mere outward requirements. As our Saviour, Jesus not only bore our sins, but He has also established a perfect righteousness which is given to us as a gift of God. Our sin was thus imputed to Him and His righteousness was imputed to us (cf. J. Murray, The Imputation of Adam’s Sin).

18. Verily I say is a unique form used by Jesus throughout His preaching to draw attention to the authority of His message. Verily means truly, certainly, or amen. It is used as a designation of authoritative teaching. One jot or one tittle refers to the minutest marks and letters of the Hebrew alphabet. He explained that even the smallest statement in the law must be fulfilled. A jot is the smallest letter of the Hebrew alphabet, called yodh. It functions as a “Y” in English and looks similar to an apostrophe. A tittle is a small projection on the edge of certain Hebrew letters to distinguish them from one another. For example, the Hebrew “D” differs from the “R” only by the use of the tittle.

19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

19. Because of the seriousness of the law, Jesus emphasized the importance of keeping even its smallest details. However, in the ultimate plan of God, the law was not to become an extra burden on the souls of men. Rather than pointing the way to salvation, the law convinced men of the need of the Saviour. Therefore, whoever shall teach men so but shall not live what he teaches, he shall be made least in the kingdom of heaven. It is interesting to note that a person may be saved and a member of the kingdom of heaven, yet be hypocritical in his attitude toward the law. But whosoever shall do and teach the principles and precepts of the law shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. This simply means that God will reward the faithfulness and effectiveness of our lives and there will be varying degrees of blessing and reward in the kingdom.

20 For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

20. Because of the necessity of righteousness as a requirement to enter heaven, Jesus then declared that except their righteousness should exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees they could not enter heaven. The significance of this is seen in the fact that the Jews of Jesus’ day considered these people to be the most religious in all Israel. However, their religion was merely an outward show of self-righteousness. What the Saviour demands is a kind of righteousness that is so godly that it cannot be the product of human effort but must be the gift of God. This righteousness Christ would establish in His life and death would be made available as God’s free gift. This is the righteousness that would exceed that of the scribes and Pharisees.

b. Six illustrations: Character applied. 5:21-48.

In communicating the depth of His message, Jesus used a series of contrasts between the outward demand of the law and the inner attitude of heart desired by God. In this series of contrasts we see the depth and dynamic of the teaching of Jesus Christ, the great Master Teacher. Here we discover the practical application of genuine Christian character to true spiritual living. Here we see the gospel in action. Here is piety on the pavement of life. The Christian may live above the demands of the law and the temptations of the world because he has an inner depth of character which is the product of the divine nature within him.

LAW	SPIRIT
Murder	No anger
Adultery	No lust
Divorce	Commitment
Oath-taking	Speak the truth
Retaliation	Forgiveness
Hate your enemy	Love your enemy

(1). First illustration: murder. 5:21-26.

21 ¶Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment:

22 But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the 21-22. Christ begins this series of contrasts by quoting the statement of the law, Thou shalt not kill (Ex 20:13). The reference to killing is clearly understood in its context in both the Old Testament and New Testament as referring to an act of murder. It must be remembered that the God who commanded the children of Israel not to murder one another, also commanded them at times to kill an enemy in order to defend their nation. Jesus goes beyond this outward demand of the law by stating that whosoever is angry with his brother is in just as council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.

MATTHEW 5:23

23 Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; 24 Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

25 Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison.

26 Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

27 ¶Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery:

28 But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

great danger of judgment as a murderer, for anger is the emotion and inner intention that leads to murder.

The term raca (meaning “vain fellow” or “empty head”) was a Hebrew or Aramaic expression of contempt (cf. II Sam 6:20). The council is a reference to the Jewish religious council called the Sanhedrin. Thou fool, (Gr mōros) means “stupid.” We have developed the English word moron from this term. Those using such a malicious expression would be in danger of hell fire. This statement has often caused concern and confusion in the mind of many commentators. What does it really mean? The idea clearly seems to be that if one makes light of his fellow man he will be in danger of slander. But if one makes bitter, damning statements with reference to hell toward his fellow man, he shall actually be in danger of hell himself. The concept is that one making such statements is not likely to be a born-again person. The term hell (Gr geenna) is Gehenna, which was the hellenized form of the name of the Valley of Hinnom at Jerusalem in which fires were constantly burning to consume the refuse of the city. This valley provided a powerful and graphic picture of the ultimate destruction of hell and the lake of fire (cf. Jer 7:31; II Chr 28:3; II Kgs 23:10). Christ locates the root of murder in the heart of the angry man and states that God’s judgment will be just as swift on anger as it will be upon murder.

23-24. Having made a comparison between the command not to murder and the inner motive and heart intention of hatred, Jesus then illustrated the seriousness of this matter by referring to one who would attempt to buy off his conscience by giving something to God without clearing his conscience with his offended brother. He reminded that if thou bring thy gift to the altar without reconciling with the offended party, God will not receive the intended gift. Bringing a gift to the altar refers to bringing it to the Temple in order that it might be consecrated. Therefore if conflict exists between any two people, it is God’s desire that they reconcile the conflict before attempting to give a gift or an act of service unto the Lord. Many people undoubtedly try to suppress the guilt of their sin by an outward act that they hope will please God in some way. Therefore, Jesus commands that we leave our gifts before the altar and first be reconciled to our brother before we offer them. To be reconciled means to be brought back into fellowship or favor with our fellow man. Having resolved the personal conflict, we have then but to return and perform the act of service unto the Lord. The performance of our duty to men does not free us from the obligation of direct service to God.

25-26. The Saviour then went on to remind that even if thine adversary (an opponent at law) disagrees with you, it is to your advantage to reconcile with him before he deliver thee to the judge. Many people make the foolish mistake of assuming that just because they think they are right in a given situation God will necessarily vindicate them. Jesus’ exhortation here is to urge us to go out of our way to avoid legal conflicts before human judges (cf. vs. 40). The payment of debt and the prison referred to here simply mean the normal legal process that one would encounter in a civil suit. The term prison (Gr phylakē) does not refer to purgatory, as suggested by some Roman Catholic interpreters, but to the full measure of punitive justice.

(2). Second illustration: Adultery contrasted to lust. 5:27-30.

27-28. Thou shalt not commit adultery was the demand of the Old Testament law (Ex 20:14). Jesus went beyond this outward command to reveal that its act is the result of an inner attitude of lust. Whosoever looketh characterizes the man whose glance is not checked by holy restraint and results in an impure lusting after women. It has often been argued that there is a difference between an appreciation of beauty and a lustful, lurid look. The lustful look is the expression of a heart attitude that says in essence, "I would if I could." The act would follow if the opportunity were to occur. By taking his listener beyond the outward statement of the law to its real intention, Jesus was trying to get his attention off the physical and onto the spiritual.

29-30. Most men could claim that they had not committed the sin of adultery but very few could honestly say that they had not committed the sin of lusting, which could easily turn into adultery. Thus, the statement of cutting off one's hand or plucking out one's eye definitely is not to be taken literally. What Jesus implied is that if thy right eye offend thee then the logical thing to do would be to pluck it out. His point is not that one should literally pluck out his eye but that one should recognize that the source of lust comes from within the mind and heart of man, not from the physical organ itself. The right eye is not the source of sin; the heart of man is that source. Someone who had plucked out his right eye in an attempt to deal with lust would simply become a left-eyed luster! The real source of the sin of adultery comes from within man's heart.

The seriousness of the sin of lusting is thus illustrated by this graphic comparison. Ultimately, it would be better for a person to be physically maimed than to enter into hell forever. However, doing physical damage to one's self does not in any way guarantee entrance into heaven. What Jesus simply taught was that man must bring the passions of his heart under control of the Spirit of God.

(3). Third illustration: Divorce as contrasted to marriage.
5:31-32.

31-32. It hath been said is again a reference to the Old Testament commandment of the Mosaic regulation (cf. Deut 24:1). The normal custom of the ancient Near East was for a man to verbally divorce his wife. The Arab custom was to say "I divorce you" three times and the divorce was consummated without any legal protection of any kind to the wife. In contrast, the ancient law of Israel insisted on a writing of divorcement or certificate of divorce. This written statement gave legal protec-

29 And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

30 And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

31 ¶It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

32 But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

Around the Sea of Galilee

tion to both the wife and the husband. Jesus explained elsewhere (cf. Mt 19:8) that Moses' concession was not intended to be taken as license. In ancient rabbinic Judaism Moses' statement had been variously interpreted from meaning adultery (Shammai) to the trivial matters of personal preference (Hillel). The only legitimate exception for divorce allowed by Christ is possibly for the cause of fornication (Gr porneia), meaning sexual unfaithfulness. Ryrie (p. 14) notes that fornication may mean adultery prior to or after marriage, as well as unfaithfulness during the period of betrothal.

These statements make it clear that adultery or fornication is a legitimate grounds for divorce. However, the legitimacy of the divorce does not necessarily establish the legitimacy of remarriage. That one must divorce an unfaithful wife or husband is nowhere commanded in Scripture. To the contrary, there are many examples of extending forgiveness to the adulterous offender (cf. Hos 3:1, Gen 38:26, Jn 8:1-11). Nor does the discovery of premarital fornication on the part of the wife necessarily demand a divorce as is indicated by Atkinson (p. 780). Sexual involvement alone does not necessarily constitute a marriage in the sight of God (cf. the example of Judah and Tamar, who were both widowed at the time of their illicit sexual involvement). Though this temporary union produced twin sons, it resulted in no permanent marriage. Great care needs to be exercised when interpreting the New Testament passages regarding divorce and marriage. It should be remembered that Jesus made His statements about divorce to people who were already married, so that they might take seriously the marriage relationship. These statements were not necessarily made to add an extra burden to the already divorced person.

The responsibility of divorce is clearly laid upon the one seeking the divorce. Whosoever shall put away his wife without biblical basis causeth her to commit adultery. Lenski (pp. 230-235) translates "brings about that she is stigmatized as adulterous" and regards the sin of the divorcer as bringing about an unjust suspicion upon the divorcee.

(4). Fourth illustration: Oath-taking as opposed to speaking the truth. 5:33-37.

33. The basis of Old Testament swearing, or oath-taking, is found in Leviticus 19:12; Deuteronomy 23:21; and Exodus 20:17. To forswear means to swear falsely or perjure one's self. Oaths taken in the name of the Lord were looked upon as binding and perjury of such oaths was strongly condemned by the law. Such phrases like "as the Lord liveth" or "by the name of the Lord" emphasize the sanctity of such oaths. Ryrie (p. 14) states: "Every oath contained an affirmation of promise of an appeal to God as the omniscient punisher of falsehoods, which made an oath binding." By the time of Christ, the Jews had developed an elaborate system of oath-taking, which often formed the basis of actual lying. For example, one might swear that he had told the truth according to the dome of the Temple, while another might swear by the gold on the dome of the Temple! In other words, there were stages of truth and thus also of falsehood within the system of taking oaths. In our time this custom is found in phrases such as: "I swear by God," "cross my heart and hope to die," or "on my mother's grave."

34-36. All such oath-taking, Jesus would announce, was unnecessary if one were normally in the habit of telling the truth. Thus, His command was swear not at all. This does not have reference to cursing, as such, but to oath-taking. The Christian is not to take an oath by heaven, earth, nor the city of Jerusalem. He is not to swear on the basis of his own head or any other physical feature. He is to speak the truth in such a way that his "yes" means yes and his "no" means no.

33 ¶Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:

34 But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne:

35 Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King.

36 Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black.

37 But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.

37. Let your communication be Yea, yea; Nay, nay. When you say yes make sure that that is what you mean. When you say no, make sure that also is what you mean. Mean what you say; say what you mean. Anything that is more than a simple affirmation of the truth cometh of evil. When we add an oath to our regular affirmation of the truth, we either admit that our normal conversation cannot be trusted, or that we are lowering ourselves to the level of a world which normally does not tell the truth. This does not necessarily mean that it is wrong to “swear to tell the truth” in a court of law. The point is that it should be unnecessary in a genuine Christian society to have to swear to tell the truth at all!

(5). Fifth illustration: Retaliation as opposed to forgiveness.
5:38-42.

38 ¶Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

38. The principle of retaliation, lex talionis, is common in both Jewish and other ancient Near Eastern law codes (cf. the Code of Hammurabi). The judicial penalty of An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth is stated in Exodus 2:24 as a means of ending feuds. However, Jesus is clearly saying this method is not a license for vengeance. Many times an offended person will overreact to the offense and retaliate in such a way as to return injury for injury. The idea here is that to the Jews of Jesus’ day it was common to attempt to retaliate upon the offender through the arm of the law, especially in a nation dominated by a foreign power.

39 But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

39. The Saviour’s point is that we should resist not evil. Evil is seen here, not as a state, but rather as the action of the evil ones or the malicious ones. It represents the evil and sinful element in man which provokes him to an act of evil. Jesus shows how the believer should respond to personal injury. He is not discussing the government’s obligation to maintain law and order. The question of nonretaliation or nonviolence is often discussed in relation to these verses. These passages alone do not mean that a man should not defend his family or his country, but rather that he should not attempt personal vengeance, even through the means of the law, to compensate for a personal injury.

Why would Jesus make such a statement? Certainly these words were spoken to remind those who would be His disciples not to expect divine justice from an unregenerate society. All justice ultimately is in the hand and heart of God. As long as human governments prevail, justice will be limited by man’s finite abilities. The disciples of the kingdom are to look to the King Himself for ultimate vindication. The practical application of this truth is that the believer should not attempt to justify himself or inflict vengeance even through legal means. He is to place his total confidence in the ultimate sovereignty of God over the affairs of his life. (See Rom 12:19 where “give place unto wrath” means God’s wrath.)

Jesus gives five examples of how the believer should react to unfair or unreasonable treatment. First, in retaliation to physical violence, he is to turn to him the other (side) also. Man’s normal impulse is to strike back, but the disciple is not to be a normal man. He is to “overcome evil with good” (Rom 12:21). This is probably one of the most feared statements in all the Bible. People have gone to great lengths in an attempt to explain it away. Nevertheless, it remains the most pungent statement of Jesus’ ethic. The life of the believer is to be lived with such a quality of spiritual verity and justice that he needs no physical retaliation in order to defend or justify his position. There is no greater example of this ethical truth than the life and death of Jesus Himself!

40 And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also.

40. Secondly, whether robbed by personal assault or compulsory litigation, the believer is to respond with confidence in that which is eternal, rather than that which is temporal. If the 41 And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.

42 Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.

43 ¶Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.

44 But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; believer is sued in order that the accuser may take away thy coat, he is to also let him have his cloak. The coat (Gr chitōn) is the undergarment or tunic. The cloak (Gr himation) is the more expensive outer garment worn over the tunic. Jesus taught us to have confidence in an almighty God who is completely aware of the injustices done to man and totally capable of evoking ultimate eternal justice. He must be trusted even when legal litigation goes against the believer. In our society, we would phrase Jesus' teaching, "If someone takes your suit coat, give him your overcoat as well."

41. Thirdly, in ancient times government agents were in a position to compel forced service upon a subjugated people. A Roman soldier, for example, could compel a Jewish native to carry his armor or materials for one mile, in order to relieve the soldier. Jesus now states that if someone compels you to walk a mile, go with him twain. The believer is to be willing to "go the extra mile." Doing double our duty not only proves the loyalty and faithfulness of our cooperation to human authority, but likewise proves the spiritual intention of our heart. It also provides an opportunity of conviction in order to witness effectively out of our life message. It would have been foolish for the believer of Jesus' day to reluctantly go only a mile with a Roman official and then attempt to share the gospel with him. By going the second mile he proved the innermost intention of his heart.

42. The fourth example is that of lending to him that would borrow of thee. Jesus made it clear that a loan should be looked upon as a potential gift. When we lend something to someone, we should not expect to receive in return. Is that not impractical? Yes it is! But that which is spiritual is not always that which is practical. There are many statements in Proverbs against borrowing, lending, and surety (cf. Prov 6:1; 11:15; 22:7; 27:13). While we are warned of the dangers of borrowing and lending, Jesus made it clear that the believer ought to be willing to lend to those in need.

Finally, even the beggar is to be ministered to through the provision of giving to him that asketh thee. This statement certainly forms the basis of all Christian charity and provides the proper social application of the message of the gospel to the physical needs of man as well as his spiritual needs.

(6). Sixth illustration: Love thy neighbor contrasted to love thy enemy. 5:43-48.

43. The law of love, sometimes called "law of Christ," summarizes the ethical principle of the Sermon on the Mount. "Love thy neighbor" summarizes the entire second table of the law (cf. Lev 19:18-34). But the unscriptural addition "hate thine enemy" was a popular concept in Jesus' day (cf. The Qumran Manual of Discipline IQS 1:4, "hate all that he has rejected"). The admonition love your enemies is one of the greatest statements Jesus ever made. The love enjoined in this passage is that which originates from God Himself! Man is not commanded to attempt to love his enemy on the basis of mere human affection but rather on the basis of a love which comes from God. This kind of love holds a unique place in the New Testament Scripture, for it is the gift of God and the fruit of the Spirit to the believer only. It is not something that man can muster within himself. Rather, it must come from God Himself into the life of the believer (cf. Gal 5:22; I Tim 1:5).

44. How does one love an enemy? Notice that the passage makes it clear that he does not have to attempt to work up an artificial feeling of love. The quality of love commanded here is expressed by giving. Bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that persecute you. Loving an enemy involves doing good toward that enemy in order to win him over to the cause that you represent. The message of the kingdom, therefore, is that we will win over those 45 That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

46 For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?

47 And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so?

48 Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

CHAPTER 6

TAKE heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven.

2 Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth:

who oppose us more readily with love than with hatred. It is not in the divisiveness of contention that we win our greatest converts, but in the application of the heart of the gospel and the love of Christ.

45-47. In summarizing the importance of love, Jesus reminded that love was a necessary proof of salvation: "that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven." An initial reading of this text out of its context might seem to imply that loving one's neighbor automatically makes one a child of God. However, the New Testament is clear that love is an evidence of the one who is already saved by the grace of God (cf. I Jn 3:14). It is a natural tendency of human beings to love those who love them; therefore Jesus reminds that we are to love our enemies as our brethren, for even the publicans love those who love them. Publicans were public officials of Jewish nationality who worked for the Roman government as tax collectors and were generally despised by the people. The idea here is that even the most hated people of the day loved their own friends. Therefore, the true child of the kingdom is to have a quality of love that goes beyond that of the world.

48. This section of the Sermon on the Mount is summarized with the statement Be ye therefore perfect. Since the New Testament makes it clear that even the believer is capable of sin, the term perfect here (Gr teleios) is not to be taken as absolute sinless perfection. Rather, it is used in relation to the matter of love in this context. "As God's love is complete, not omitting any group, so must the child of God strive for maturity in this regard" (Kent, p. 19).

c. True spiritual worship: Character expressed. 6:1-7:12.

The nature of the true spiritual man previously described is not illustrated in acts of true spiritual worship as contrasted to traditional hypocritical worship. Again, Jesus goes beyond mere outward conformity to the law to the inward conviction of the spirit. The following examples are given to illustrate this point: giving, praying, fasting, serving.

(1). First example: Almsgiving. 6:1-4.

6:1. Jesus warns that we do not give alms before men just to gain human recognition to ourselves. That practical righteousness is in view is obvious. The one who does righteousness (or gives of his possessions) to the Lord before men merely to be seen of them has no reward from the Father in heaven. True worship is to result from the desire to serve God, not men, since pleasing God is far more important than pleasing men. Loss of reward is incurred by gaining the reward of human recognition as an end in itself. This does not mean that all human recognition is necessarily wrong. The implication of the text simply states that we are to serve the Lord because we love Him, not just because we desire something from Him.

2. Therefore in all of our giving we are not to sound a trumpet before us in a hypocritical manner of gaining attention to ourselves. This metaphorical phrase means do not "publicize" your righteousness, for such performers are hypocrites (from the Greek, "play actor"). Thus, Jesus warns against "acting like the hypocrites, whose aim is to win human praise . . . whose parade and pretense are spiritually futile" (Filson, p. 92). Those who parade their righteousness through the streets receive the honor of men and They have their reward, meaning that God will add nothing extra to that reward. But those who are willing to serve Him in secret, God will reward openly.

3. The phrase let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth means that one's giving of finances to the work of the Lord should be done so freely and spontaneously that his right

4 That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly.

5 ¶ And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

hand cannot keep up with his left hand. He literally empties his pockets as fast as he can! Such giving is to be so spontaneous as to be unplanned at times. Notice that this passage does not state that it is wrong to give systematically, nor through church envelopes, nor receiving a tax-deductible receipt. What it does teach is that one should not give by those means only. There are ample examples of systematic giving in Scripture in order to build the Temple, to provide for the needs and welfare of the underprivileged, etc. Planned giving is certainly biblical and encouraged; but all of our giving should not be limited to our predetermined plan or system.

4. The real key to success of this kind of giving is found in the phrase: thy Father which seeth in secret . . . shall reward you. Giving by faith, out of a cheerful heart, depends upon our total confidence in that fact that God does indeed see us and knows our needs. The God who is there, sees in secret that which no man may observe, and that God rewards His own. The Christian is to give, not in order to receive reward, but that his love might be expressed to God who shall reward him. Our giving to the work of Christ spreads the message of the gospel throughout the world. Notice again, that these verses certainly do not condemn public giving, but rather they speak against giving out of the wrong attitude and for the wrong motive.

(2). Second example: Praying. 6:5-15.

5-6. Praying, like giving, is to be done unto the Lord, not unto man. Many professing Christians, if they were honest, would have to admit that they pray to be heard of men. Jesus said that the people of His day love to pray standing in the synagogues. Both a time and place for prayer were customary in the ancient Jewish synagogue (cf. Mk 11:25). Therefore, Jesus is not condemning the practice of public prayer, but rather the misuse of it! Because of the statement enter into thy closet some have suggested that all public prayer is wrong. This would be contrary to the rest of New Testament statements about prayer, commandments and restrictions regarding prayer, and examples of prayer meetings (cf. Acts 12:12).

The principle here is that the believer should not make a show of his prayer nor of the answers he receives to prayer in such a way as to call unnecessary attention to himself. Again, it is the God who sees in secret that rewards us openly. Here the intimate father-child relationship between God and man is clearly emphasized. It is the experience of private devotional prayer that ultimately prepares one to pray effectively in public. Most people who say they cannot pray in public, do not pray effectively in private either!

7. Jesus warned that we use not vain repetitions (Gr batta-logeō denotes babbling or speaking without thinking). Such praying was characteristic of the heathen. A good example of this is found in the ecstatic babblings of the false prophets in the Old Testament and in the prophets of Baal who confronted Elijah on Mt. Carmel (cf. I Kgs 18:26-29), Jesus condemns the use of empty repetition as an attempt to overcome the will of God by wearing Him out. It is not the length of prayer, but the strength of prayer that prevails with God. Jesus Himself prayed all night prior to His crucifixion and on most other occasions prayed very briefly. He is not condemning lengthy prayers, although there is nothing particularly spiritual about them. He is merely emphasizing that prayer must be a sincere expression of the heart, not mere accumulation of verbiage. God is not impressed with words, but with the genuine outcry of a needy heart.

8. Many have questioned the meaning of the statement your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him. "Then why should we pray?" they ask. Prayer is not man's attempt to change the will of God. God's method of changing our will is to bring it into conformity with His will. More than changing things, prayer changes people. Prayer is not conquering God's reluctance to answer, but laying hold of His willingness to help! Prayer, in the life of the true believer, is an act of total confidence and assurance in the plan and purpose of God. It is not an expression of panic and desperation.

The following sample prayer is given to the disciples as an example of a suitable prayer. It is neither lengthy nor irreverent. It contains a depth of piety and a pinnacle of power. This prayer, often called the "Lord's Prayer," is in reality a disciple's prayer, for Jesus gave it to His disciples as a sample of the true principle of spiritual prayer. In no way does the prayer itself embody all of His teaching about prayer and certainly, having just warned against vain repetition, He did not intend for this particular prayer to be merely recited with empty meaninglessness. This does not mean, however, that this prayer may not be recited as an act of public worship. There are those who feel such recitation is too liturgical, while there are others who feel that the omission of ever repeating this prayer is a failure to grasp its true significance. Certainly if we are to follow its example properly we may benefit from repeating it as it was given by the Lord Himself. To place this prayer under law and eliminate it from Christian usage is to deny the great essence of what the prayer is all about.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

9. The very beginning phrase, Our Father, is completely uncommon to the prayers of the Old Testament. Martyn Lloyd-Jones (Vol. II, p. 54) has commented: "So when our Lord says, 'Our Father,' He is obviously thinking of Christian people, and that is why I say that this is a Christian prayer." By contrast see the ultra-dispensational approach of Gaebelein who refers to the Lord's Prayer as one of the rags of popery Luther brought with him from the Catholic church. He evaluates the Lord's Prayer as "decidedly unchristian!" (A. C. Gaebelein The Gospel of Matthew, p. 139). The two major elements of the prayer are adoration and petition. Hallowed be thy name addresses the attention of the prayer toward God and reverence for His name and His person. Hallowed (Gr hagiazō) means to be held in reverence and awe of holiness. God's name was so sacred to the Old Testament Jew that it was never pronounced by human lips. Thus His name is the expression of His very essence. The biblical usage of the concept of a name is a characteristic description of the basic character of the person to whom the name is applied. Since the prayer is directed to our spiritual Father, only a child of God who has been born again can rightly pray this prayer.

10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

10. The phrase Thy kingdom come refers to the eschatological nature of this prayer. Notice that the kingdom is to be prayed for, implying that it has not already arrived. The kingdom represents the full and effective reign of God through the mediatorial office of the Messiah. The disciples were not to think of their own convenience as their foremost expression in prayer, but the full and quick realization of the effective rule of God on earth in the hearts of men. That rule is realized through the regenerating process of the new birth in the lives of individuals. It will reach its pinnacle when the last enemy (sin and death, I Cor 15:24-28) has been destroyed at the Lord's return. The recognition of Thy will be done emphasizes the idea that prayer is to bring about the conformity of the will of the believer to the will of God. Prayer is an act of spiritual expression which brings us into conformity to the very nature and purpose of God.

11 Give us this day our daily bread.

11. The section of petitions begins with the request to give us this day our daily bread. Bread (Gr artos) may be applied to the provision of food in general. The term "daily" (Gr epicusios) denotes "indispensable" (Arndt and Gingrich, Lexicon, p. 296). The concept of daily provision of bread fits perfectly with the Old Testament example of the daily provision of manna to the 12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

14 For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you:

15 But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

Israelites while they were wandering in the wilderness (Ex 16:14-15). In a similar sense, while the Christian pilgrim takes his journey through a strange land that he does not yet literally possess, but which has been promised to him, it only stands to reason that God would make a similar provision to this New Testament, gospel-age wanderer.

12. The phrase forgive us our debts refers to sins which are our moral and spiritual debts to God's righteousness. The request for forgiveness of sin is made here by the believer. In order to be saved one need not necessarily name all of his sins, but must confess that he is a sinner. For continued spiritual growth and cleansing the believer acknowledges his sins in particular. Notice that we seek forgiveness as we forgive, not because we forgive. Our expression of forgiveness does not gain salvation for us. We are to seek forgiveness in the same manner as we forgive others. Forgiveness is the evidence of a regenerate heart.

13-15. Lead us not into temptation is a plea for the providential help of God in our daily confrontation with the temptation of sin. James 1:13-14 makes it clear that God does not tempt us to do evil, but rather that we are tempted of our own lusts. However, God does test us in order to give us the opportunity to prove our faithfulness to Him. It is never His desire to lead us into evil itself. Therefore if we resist the devil, we are promised that he will flee from us.

The prayer closes with a doxology of praise for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen, which is a liturgical interpolation from I Chronicles 29:11. Though omitted in some manuscripts, these words constitute a fitting climactic affirmation of faith.

In the first three petitions of this prayer of the Lord, our soul rises directly to God; in the three following we face the hindrances of these aspirations; and in the last petition we discover the solution to all these difficulties. Stier (The Words of the Lord Jesus, Vol. I, p. 198) draws a unique parallel between the two tables of the Decalogue and the two sections of the Lord's Prayer. In the first petition the believer's soul is awed with the character of God, in the second petition with His grand purpose, and in the third petition with His moral condition. In the second part of the prayer the children of God humble themselves in dependence upon divine mercy in the fourth petition; they seek forgiveness in the fifth petition; gracious guidance in the sixth petition; and deliverance from the power of evil in the seventh petition. Thus, this arrangement may be readily suggested by dividing the prayer into two parts:

Relationship to God—
 Hallowed be Thy Name;
Thy Kingdom come;
Thy will be done;

Relationship to men—
 Give us this day our daily bread;
 Forgive us our debts;
 Lead us not into temptation;
 Deliver us from evil.

Finally, the rich doxology expresses the certain hope that our prayers shall be heard and that God, in view of His great character, will bring to pass the highest good in our lives. Thus, prayer is the expression of the believer's confidence in the ultimate plan and purpose of God. In his Commentary on the Holy Scriptures: Matthew (p. 124), J. P. Lange has suggested the following comparison between the statements of the Beatitudes and the petitions of the Lord's Prayer:

BEATITUDES

LORD'S PRAYER

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven

Hallowed be thy name (the name of God which opens to us the kingdom of heaven)

Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted

Thy kingdom come (heavenly comfort into our hearts)

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth

Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven (this meekness, the characteristic of heaven, shall possess the new earth)

Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled

Give us this day our daily bread

Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy

Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God

And lead us not into temptation

Blessed are the peacemakers: etc.

But deliver us from evil

The comparison between these two pinnacles of piety is striking indeed. The inexhaustible expression of devotion and simplicity of language in both the Beatitudes and the Sermon on the Mount give them a depth of expression which goes beyond the temporal and touches the eternal.

(3). Third example: Fasting. 6:16-18.

16 ¶Moreover when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

16. When ye fast is a reference both to fasting prescribed under the Mosaic law in connection with the Day of Atonement (Lev 16:29) and the voluntary fast of that day. The Pharisees added two fast days, on Monday and Thursday of each week, as a case of public display and piety. The true purpose of fasting was intended, however, for deep contrition and spiritual communion. Fasting was especially emphasized as an effective means of dealing with temptation (cf. Isa 58:6). The Pharisees regarded the practice of fasting as meritorious (cf. Taanith, 8:3) and appeared in the synagogues negligently attired. Their sad disfigurement of face and the wearing of mourning garb gave them an opportunity to exhibit their superior ascetic sanctity before the people. The phrase disfigure their faces (Gr aphanizō) literally denotes covering their faces and is a figurative expression for mournful gestures and neglected appearance of those wanting to call attention to the fact they are enduring. This was often done with dust and ashes (cf. Isa 61:3) and is similar to the modern Roman Catholic concept of Ash Wednesday. In the original, there is a play upon two cognate words meaning, "they make their faces unappearing," that they may "appear unto men."

17 But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face;

18 That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

17-18. This passage is not to be taken as a command against fasting but rather against the misuse of the spiritual exercise of fasting. Kent (p. 21) observes: "Fasting that requires spectators is mere acting." Though Jesus Himself instituted no fast for His disciples, voluntary fasting does appear in the early churches (cf. Acts 13:2). The injunction to anoint thine head relates to the ancient custom of anointing one's head when going to a feast. In other words, Jesus was saying that when we fast we are to do so secretly unto the Lord, while outwardly maintaining the appearance of joy and triumph which is the end result of true fasting.

Just as we have observed the interesting parallels within this sermon, so again we discover the contrast between outward acts of worship and inward attitudes of devotion. Outward worship stresses giving; inward worship stresses possessing. Outward worship manifests praying; inward worship manifests worrying. Outward worship is characterized by fasting; inward worship is characterized by judging.

The obvious contrasts are that a proper attitude toward giving will arise from the proper inward attitude toward one's possessions. Praying will resolve all worrying. Fasting, in judging one's self, is to be preferred over judging others.

(4). Fourth example: Giving. 6:19-24.

The common error of Judaism was to regard material wealth as always indicating the blessing of God. While it is true that the book of Proverbs promises material blessings to those who honor God's financial principles, it does not imply that all wealth is a necessary sign of blessing. The Proverbs themselves indicate that many become temporarily wealthy because of ill-gotten gains. The contrast between these two sections of examples, both inward and outward, is directed specifically at the false spirituality of the Pharisees which arose from worldly-mindedness.

19. Because the false spirituality of men seeks to lay up treasures for themselves in a worldly sense, they "have their reward." Thus, their desire to be seen of men and to lay up treasure through the outward attention of men, as if some self-meritorious work could make them more acceptable to God and man, is provoked by their wrong attitude toward material possessions in the first place. Therefore, treasures upon earth are temporary and of short duration. These earthly possessions are at the mercy of moth and rust . . . and . . . thieves. Even if temporal possessions escape the clutches of the marauder, they are still likely to become moth-eaten and rusty. In other words, they do not last. Our materialistic technological society in the late twentieth century all too often has overlooked the simplicity of this truth. Our attention to wealth, possession, social status, and retirement benefits too easily causes us to trust that which man can provide rather than that which God has already provided. Our simple appreciation of the natural provisions of God are frequently overlooked in favor of the plastic provisions of our contemporary technology.

20-21. The attention of the believer is directed toward treasures in heaven. The term "treasures" implies the addition or accumulation of things. The two kinds of treasures are conditioned by their place (either upon earth or in heaven). The concept of laying up treasure in heaven is not pictured as one of meritorious benefits but rather of rewards for faithful service, as is illustrated elsewhere in the teaching of Jesus. The ultimate destiny of our lives is either earthly or heavenly and the concentration of our efforts will reveal where our real treasure is. In contrast to the legalistic attempt of Judaism to establish a spiritual treasure upon earth, Jesus calls the attention of His disciples to that true and eternal treasure which is heavenly. The only way man will ever overcome his natural inclination toward materialism and wealth is to place the priority of his possessions in heaven. If one were as concerned about spiritual benefits of his life as he were about the material possessions, his motivations would be pure indeed.

22-23. The light of the body is associated with the eye. The concept here is based on the ancient idea that the eyes were the windows through which light entered the body. If the eyes were in good condition the body could receive such light. Tasker (p. 75) notes that Jesus, using this language metaphorically, affirms that if a man's spiritual sight is healthy and his affections directed toward heavenly treasure, his whole personality will be

19 ¶Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

20 But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

21 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

22 The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

without blemish. The phrase if . . . thine eye be single indicates devotion to one purpose. The "single eye" refers to a single, fixed vision or goal. This reminds us of the statement of James, "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways" (Jas 1:8). The phrase if thine eye be evil refers to either disease or deception of vision. Though many commentators suggest the idea of disease, the context seems to imply deception. The "evil eye" is not necessarily something mysterious nor devilish, but rather a deceptive vision which causes the viewer to mistake the identity of an object. The mistake in this context is the darkening of the mind and thus how great is that darkness!

24 No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

24. This kind of spiritual double vision causes one to believe that he can serve two masters. Total loyalty to God cannot be divided between Him and loyalty to one's material possessions. A master (Gr kyrios) is a lord or an owner. That God claims total lordship over His own is obvious in this passage. The concept of the lordship of Christ has often been greatly mistaken. Even in the face of the immediate denial of and on the part of His disciples, Jesus said to them: "Ye call me Master and Lord; and ye say well; for so I am" (Jn 13:13). There is no passage or command anywhere in the New Testament asking the believer to make Christ "Lord of his life" after salvation. The very experience of receiving Christ as Saviour is looked upon throughout the Scriptures as an acknowledgment of lordship and ownership. If perfect obedience were required in order to make Christ our Lord, He would be the Lord of no one! It is the fact that He is already Lord that makes our disobedience so serious. As Lord and Master He has the right to demand complete obedience. My disobedience as a believer is an act of sin against His lordship. The believer cannot sin away the lordship of Christ any more than he can His saviourhood.

Therefore, Jesus rightly proclaimed Ye cannot serve God and mammon. The term "mammon" is derived from the Aramaic term for possessions or wealth. Jesus is not condemning money or possessions in and of themselves, but the improper attitude of enslavement toward wealth. His point here cannot be overemphasized in light of the affluent society of our day. Outside the boundaries of North America the average Christian knows much more of the reality of poverty than do we. Within the depth of this message and its application we may certainly see afresh that it is the "gospel of the poor."

Double-mindedness is an attempt to sit on the fence in relation to spiritual matters. There is no halfhearted service for God. It is either all or nothing. Jesus gives the believer no option between loving God and loving the world. The regenerated heart is one which so longs for righteousness and desires the things of heaven that it lives above the temporal things of the earth.

(5). Fifth example: Worry or anxiety. 6:25-34.

25 Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

25. Adding doubt to the danger of possessions, Jesus now deals with the equally dangerous tendency of those who have no possessions: worry! Take no thought (Gr merimnaō) means do not be anxious. Filson (pp. 100-101) notes that this word means to be so disturbed about material needs that we distrust God and are distracted from faithfully doing His will. The implication of the test is that all anxiety is provoked by worrying about material and temporal things. Such anxiety causes one to avoid the responsibility of work in order to cooperate with God's provision. Anxious care is an inordinate or solicitous concern or grief beyond our immediate needs. It is the direct opposite of carefulness, cautiousness, and faith. Therefore, even the poor are not to worry needlessly about what they should eat, drink, or wear. The question, Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? indicates that inner mental stability must come from the spirit of a man and not from outward physical provisions. To set one's heart upon material possessions or to worry 26 Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?

27 Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?

28 And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

29 And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

30 Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?

31 Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?

32 (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things.

33 But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.

34 Take therefore no thought for the morrow; for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

about the lack of them is to live in perpetual insecurity and to deprive one's self of the spiritual blessings of God.

26-32. Jesus illustrated His point by referring to objects in nature which were immediately at hand: the birds of the air and the flowers of the field. Though the birds which fly through the skies appeared not to labor, your heavenly Father feedeth them. How does God accomplish this? He does it through the normal process of nature. Consider the lilies; (vs. 28) they appear to do nothing for themselves and yet God, through the process of nature which He controls, does clothe the grass of the field (vs. 30). Even Solomon, the great and wealthy king of Israel, was not arrayed in any greater beauty than the flowers of the field which God has made.

The key point of this passage is found in the phrases Are ye not much better than they? (vs. 26) and shall he not much more clothe you? (vs. 30). The Bible makes it clear that God is the Creator and sustainer of nature. He is not divorced from the world which He has made. Indeed, "this is my Father's world!" Worry and anxiety are related to the length of one's life in the phrase add one cubit unto his stature. A cubit is a measurement of about eighteen inches. However, this reference is probably not to one's actual height but to the length of his life. The term "stature" (Gr hēlikia) may in this place mean "age." Thus the idea seems to be that a man cannot add the smallest measure to the span of his life by worrying. In fact, modern medicine would tell us that worry actually shortens one's life. This state of anxiety is related to having little faith (vs. 30). Faith is total confidence in the provision of God. Faith in salvation is a total trusting of the complete work of Christ on the cross on our behalf. The Scripture reminds: "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom 14:23). Therefore, a lack of faith will lead to a life of psychological anxiety. Since this lack of faith is identified with sin, Adams is correct in asserting that man's emotional problems stem from his sin (J. Adams, Christian Counselor's Manual, p. 117 ff.). In the Sermon on the Mount we have then, not only a directive for spiritual well-being, but the model of a manual of mental health as well.

33-34. This portion of the Sermon on the Mount is summarized by the statement seek ye first the kingdom of God. The disciples who have pledged their allegiance to the King must continue seeking the kingdom and its righteousness. The present imperative form of the verb (Gr zētō) indicates a continual or constant seeking. The word first indicates one's first and ever dominant concern. The contrast between the spiritual and the material is again emphasized. The believer is to seek first the righteousness that is characteristic of God's kingdom and then all these things (i.e., material things) shall be added unto him. Seeking the kingdom of God involves a continued hunger and thirst after righteousness. We are not only to seek the kingdom of God in the sense that we set our affections on things above, we must also positively seek holiness in righteousness. The continual seeking here is similar to that of the seeking face of God. A true believer is never falsely content with what he has in Christ, but is continually seeking to know Him better. Thus, we could say: "Keep seeking the kingdom of God" and as you do He will continually provide your needs. When our priority is spiritual, God will take care of the material, for where God guides, He provides. We need not even worry about tomorrow for Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof (vs. 34). This means that each day has its own troubles and challenges to be responsibly handled, without worrying about the hypothetical problems which could arise tomorrow. God is ever pictured in Scripture as the God of the present. Today is the day of salvation.

CHAPTER 7

JUDGE not, that ye be not judged.

2 For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

3 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

4 Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye?

5 Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

6 ¶Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

7 ¶Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you:

8 For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

9 Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

10 Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

11 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is

(6). Sixth example: Judging others. 7:1-12.

7:1-4. Judge not refers to an unfavorable and condemnatory judgment. This does not mean that a Christian should never render judgment of any kind under any circumstances. The New Testament Scriptures are filled with exhortations to "mark those who cause divisions among you," "receive not" those who deny Christ, "exhort," "rebuke," etc. Certainly judging ourselves and those who have failed in their spiritual responsibility is a necessity of church discipline (cf. I Cor 5). The point being made here is that we are not to judge the inner motives of another. We are not to render a verdict based upon prejudiced information. Nor are we to use ourselves as the standard of judgment for with what . . . ye mete you shall be judged. If we were judged in eternity merely on the basis of the verbal judgments we have rendered others, we would all condemn ourselves! That ye be not judged seems to refer to the ultimate judgment of God rather than our own judgment. The terms mote (Gr karpfos) and beam (Gr dokos) are used metaphorically for a small fault and a great fault. The mote was literally a small speck of sawdust whereas the beam was literally a rafter used in building. Thus, the idea of the text is that one cannot remove the speck from his brother's eye until he has removed the rafter from his own eye!

5-6. Thou hypocrite is the only statement that can be made for this play actor who pretends to be a physician when he himself is sick. Filson (p. 104) comments: "His concern to criticize and reform others is marred by uncritical moral complacency as to his own life." The dogs and swine refer to those who have deliberately rejected the message of truth. These particular animals were especially repulsive to Jesus' audience. The connotation in verse 6 is not that we should not present our message to those who are the outcasts of society, for Jesus Himself went to the poor sinners among His people. Rather, the idea is that it is futile to continue to present truth to those who have refused what they have already heard. A man cannot appreciate new truth until he has responded to the truth which he has already received. Since the context deals with the matter of discernment and judgment, it may rightly be assumed that there is a proper place for such activity in the Christian's life. The main difference between judgment and discernment is that a judge merely pronounces a verdict, while discernment seeks a solution.

7-10. Earlier a paralleling contrast was drawn between the outward acts of worship (giving, praying, fasting) and the inward attitudes of devotion (possessing, praying, judging). Since the opposite of judging is fasting, it seems fitting that Jesus here makes a lengthy statement on the importance of prayer. This statement is not out of place as some have assumed; rather, it is the Christian alternative to judging. If we would sincerely pray for those whom we are prone to criticize we would ultimately do them much more good. The three imperatives Ask, seek, knock are, in the original, in the present tense suggesting both perseverance and frequent prayer. In the English language the first letter of each word forms the acrostic A-S-K. Fervent and continual prayer is to be made on behalf of those for whom we are concerned.

God promises to answer all genuine prayer (vs. 8). Everything that we need for spiritual success has been promised to us. God leaves us no excuse for failure. Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you, for everyone that does such will receive an answer. You are not cut off in any way from the blessings and provisions of God for these are available to every one of His children.

11-12. Jesus illustrated His point by comparing the willingness of a human father to give his child a gift, contrasted to our heavenly Father who shall gladly give us what we need. The in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

MATTHEW 7:12

12 Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

13 ¶Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat:

14 Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

15 ¶Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.

16 Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

17 Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

term evil (vs. 11) is used here of man's sinful nature. Even sinful men are kind unto their children; therefore, how much more shall your heavenly Father delight to answer your prayers. Hence, rather than judging others, we are to treat them as we would like to be treated. The statement in verse 12, Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, is the biblical injunction which has often been called "the Golden Rule." Similar statements are found in both Jewish and Gentile sources, but usually in the negative form. The phrase, this is the law and the prophets, indicates that the statement made here by Jesus is not intended to be unique, but rather a summarization of the second table of the law. Verse 12 is not intended to be a total summary of Jesus' teaching and in no way exhausts or explains the gospel itself. An atheist could readily accept this statement alone. However, it is when we see this statement in the context of everything that Jesus taught that we understand its true significance. Rather than judge others we ought to pray for them. If we would rather have people pray for us than criticize us, then we ought to be willing to do the same to them.

d. The two alternatives: Character established. 7:13-27.

The closing section of the Sermon on the Mount presents two choices to the listener. These are presented in a series of contrasts: two ways (vss. 13-14); two trees (vss. 15-20); two professions (vss. 21-23); and two foundations (vss. 24-29). This was a common method of teaching in both Jewish and Greco-Roman thought.

13-14. Enter ye in at the strait gate (narrow gate) means that one must come in the narrow way of the gate in order to reach the path which leads to eternal life. The order of the gate first and then the way suggests the gate is the entrance by faith in Christ into the way of the Christian life. It is interesting to recall that Christians were first called those of "the way" (cf. Acts 9:2; 19:9; 22:4; 24:14). Though the many are on the broad . . . way that leadeth to destruction (eternal death), the gate which leads to life is so narrow that few there be that find it. Christ Himself is both the gate and the way (cf. Jn 14:6), and God enables men to find that gate (cf. Jn 6:44). In the immediate context of Jesus' day it could be assumed that His way was presented as that which is narrow and the way of the Pharisees as that which is broad. The contrast here is one between the way of grace and the way of works. There are many on the broad road of life who are seeking to arrive in heaven by means of their own works, but only a few have received the grace of God which guarantees them heaven. We are reminded of Jesus' statement, Many are called, but few are chosen (22:14).

15. The warning of Beware of false prophets fits appropriately with the concept of the two ways. Since many are being misled in the wrong way, it is obvious that they are being misled by wrong ones. False prophets were prevalent in the Old Testament, whereas God's true prophets were often in the minority (as in Elijah's confrontation with the prophets of Baal). These appear in sheep's clothing but are in reality ravening wolves. This is a perfect description of those preachers who have denied or distorted the truth of the gospel. They look like a lamb but they act like a wolf. Their description is similar to that of the great false prophet in Revelation 13:11.

16-20. A true test of a prophet was the conformity of his doctrine to that of the Scripture (cf. I Cor 14:37; Deut 13:1-5). Their fruits not only refer to actions of their lives, for these men are very, very sheepish, but to the doctrines which they proclaim. Having warned us against falsely judging others, Jesus now must remind us to beware and know such people. We are to be discerning enough not to be taken in by their cleverness.

The two trees are contrasted in relation to the fruit which they 19 Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

20 Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

21 ¶Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

24 ¶Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock:

25 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

26 And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

27 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

produce. The searching question, Do men gather grapes of thorns? reminds us of the origin of spiritual life which produces spiritual fruit. Man cannot produce such fruit out of his own unregenerate nature. Because he is a sinner by nature, he is a sinner by choice. Not only must his choice be changed, but so must his nature in order for him to make the right choice. Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit consistently, while a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit continually. Therefore, the normal and consistent production of fruit, whether good or evil, in a person's life will bear evidence whether or not that life is of God. Verse 19 makes it clear that the unfruitful life is a picture of the unregenerate which is cast into the fire. The term "fire" is used as an apparent picture of eternal punishment in hell. The evil (Gr sapros) trees are literally rotten and useless. While the production of fruit in the life of a Christian may vary, some thirtyfold, some one hundredfold, no true Christian has the option of producing no fruit at all. No fruit means no life. The absence of life is the absence of the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit. Thus, the fruitless life is the proof of an unregenerate heart which can only be cast into hell. Always in the New Testament the changed life is the proof of one's profession of conversion (cf. II Cor 5:17)

21-23. Not everyone professing Christ is genuinely saved. Even the outward verbal acknowledgment of His lordship is in itself not enough to save the unbeliever apart from true repentance and faith. A genuinely saved person is one that doeth the will of my Father, the Greek present tense meaning that he is continually living in obedience to the will of God as the normal course of his life. He may fail at times, but his general course of consistency is to obey the will of the Father. It is tragic to note that many will proclaim in that day, Lord, Lord and yet will be lost. On what do they base their profession? Their many wonderful works cause them to think that they have attained salvation and yet the response of Christ, pictured here as the Judge, will be I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. Those who are continually living in sin, as the normal course of their lives, have no assurance of salvation whatever. This does not mean that one must experience basic and initial changes in one's life to validate his claim to conversion. The phase "work iniquity" is also progressive in Greek (i.e., they continue to work iniquity).

24-27. In drawing His concluding illustration of the two foundations, Jesus begins with the word Therefore. On the basis of all that He has taught and illustrated, He concluded that all who both hear and do His sayings shall be saved. He is not adding works to faith, but, as James reminds us, He is showing faith by its works. Faith is the root of salvation and works are its fruit. The works of man do not produce his own salvation. In fact, to the contrary, this entire message shows that man's human efforts alone are futile in gaining his salvation. Having made His point, Jesus also clearly stated that while salvation is by faith, it is by a faith which shows itself in a changed life. There is a repentant faith, a life-changing faith, a faith that works!

The contrast here is threefold: the wise man is the one who hears and practices upon a foundation of rock; the foolish man does not practice these sayings and builds upon a foundation of sand. As a great master counselor, Jesus reminded His listener that hearing this message alone will not change his life. He must both hear and do what Jesus has said. The elements of the closing illustration are drawn from the simplicity of nature itself, the rock, the rain, the winds. The rain (Gr brochē) pictured here is that of a natural storm. However, it is implied as relating to the troubles and persecutions of life. The man whose house collapsed was at fault, not because he failed to labor, but because he did not lay the proper foundation. How lively must this

28 ¶And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine:

29 For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

CHAPTER 8

WHEN he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.

2 And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

3 And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

4 And Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man; but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

5 ¶And when Jesus was entered into Ca-per'na-um, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him.

6 And saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.

imagery have been to an audience accustomed to the fierceness of an eastern tempest and the suddenness and completeness with which it sweeps everything unsteady before it! The sand represents human opinion and the doctrines of men as opposed to these sayings (vs. 28).

28. The entire Sermon on the Mount is addressed to believers and presupposes faith in Jesus as Messiah. The works which are done by the believer are not based upon himself but upon the rock (vs. 24), who ultimately is Christ Himself (I Cor 10:4). He is the personal embodiment of all of His teachings. Thus, when He had finished the discourse, the people were astonished. Lenski (p. 314) notes that as Jesus spoke, crowds were in rapt attention, but when He ceased, attention relaxed and shocking amazement engulfed them.

29. The outstanding feature of His teaching was His authority, meaning the divine approval and authoritative constraint with which He delivered His message. Such straightforward preaching, based on the depth of one's own life, was in direct contrast to that of the scribes. The scribes were the copyists of the law and the theologians of their day. The scribes had to rely on tradition for their authority, whereas Christ was His own authority. This undoubtedly disturbed the Pharisees for He had no approval as an official teacher in their system. Rather than quoting the opinion of tradition, Jesus spoke as if He personally knew what He was talking about. He did!

The note of authority in the Sermon on the Mount warns the readers of Matthew's Gospel that they cannot ignore or reject Jesus' teaching without ruinous consequences. Why should we practice this sermon? Because of the beauty of its diction, its impressive pictures, its striking illustrations? No, we practice it because beyond its moral, ethical, and spiritual teaching is the person of the Preacher Himself! In the closing verses of this chapter we see that, without an ostentatious parade, our Lord calls attention to Himself as the focal point of the entire message. This is no mere restatement of the law but is the highest expression of the quality of Christian living which Christ alone can produce. The gospel is the message of the person and work of Jesus Christ. Its amazing "good news" is that He can do for us what we cannot do for ourselves. He can change a sinner into a saint!

2. His miracles: Signs of divine authority. 8:1-9:38.

a. The cleansing of a leper. 8:1-4.

8:1-4. Make me clean. According to the law of Moses, ceremonial uncleanness was attributed to leprosy (see Lev 13:45-46). Jesus . . . touched him, which, instead of bringing uncleanness to Jesus, caused the total cleansing of the leper! See thou tell no man. The purpose of Jesus in giving this command was to call attention away from the miracle itself and to appeal to the spiritual need in man. It is clear in the gospel accounts that the crowds were often attracted by Jesus' miracles, but not always by His message. Shew thyself to the priest, i.e., in obedience to the Mosaic law regarding cleansing. Offer the gift that Moses commanded. These gifts are found in Leviticus 14:2-32, where they are typical of Christ's atonement and the cleansing it provided. For a testimony unto them, i.e., as evidence to the priest that the leper had indeed been cleansed.

b. The healing of the centurion's servant. 8:5-13.

5-9. A centurion was a rank between that of an officer and a noncommissioned officer (somewhat equivalent to that of a modern sergeant-major). It was a position of great responsibility in the Roman occupation force (see the more complete account in Lk 7:2-10). Servant (Gr pais), meaning child or servant. Sick of the palsy means to be paralyzed and greatly afflicted. The 7 And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

8 The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.

9 For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

10 When Jesus heard it, he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

11 And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.

12 But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

13 And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour.

14 ¶And when Jesus was come into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever.

15 And he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose, and ministered unto them.

16 ¶When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick:

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by E-sā'ias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

18 ¶Now when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side.

19 And a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

20 And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

21 And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

statement does not necessarily mean that he was not personally present, but that the answer was given through messengers. For a similar use of the word said see 11:3. Servant in vs. 9 means "slave" (Gr doulos). The centurion was impressed with Jesus, who he likened to himself as one under authority. He recognized that in dealing with the realm of sickness and death Jesus had all the power of God behind Him.

10-13. The words from the east and west, are taken from Psalm 107 (with allusions also to Isa 49:12; 59:19; Mal 1:11). Here Christ is referring to the gathering in of the Gentiles through the preaching of the gospel, culminating in their final gathering at the time of His second coming. Sit down, i.e., recline (Gr anaklinō) to eat. It was customary in those days to recline at meals, resting on one's left elbow. There are also references to this ancient custom in the great banquet parables of the wedding feast of our Lord (see 22:1-14). The children of the kingdom, refers to those to whom the kingdom really belongs. The natural claim to that kingdom had been given to the Jews. Their reception of Christ as Messiah could potentially have brought in the kingdom, that had been promised by the Old Testament prophets. However, their eventual rejection of the Messiah caused the postponement of a literal kingdom on earth. Outer darkness refers to the condemnation of the second death. There shall be . . . gnashing of teeth. There is used emphatically to draw attention to the fact that such severe punishment is in fact a reality. Even though he was a Gentile, the servant was healed because of the faith of the centurion. The contrast to this incident drawn by Jesus emphasizes the foolishness of Israel's rejection of Him as Messiah.

c. The healing of Peter's mother-in-law. 8:14-17.

14-16. Laid (Gr balō, lit., to be laid out or sick in bed). In those days a bed was generally a mattress placed on the floor. Ministered unto them indicates that He attended to their needs with an immediate and complete cure. He cast out the spirits (i.e., evil spirits, meaning demons or devils). The gospel accounts are filled with incidents of demon activity and even resistance to the ministry of Christ. His power over their influence further vindicates His divine messiahship.

17. By Isaiah [Esaías] means that the following statement is taken from Isaiah 53:4. Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses. Kent (p. 943) notes that this indicates that these healings were only a partial fulfillment of what would be accomplished by Christ on the cross, when He would deal with the cause of physical sicknesses, sin itself.

d. The calming of the storm. 8:18-27.

18. He gave commandment to depart. In order to get away from the crowds and be alone with His disciples, Jesus gave the order for them to set sail.

19-27. The reference to a certain scribe is unusual since scribes were usually spoken in the plural. Master, I will follow thee. These words indicated that he was willing to follow Christ both spiritually and publicly. The word Master (Gr didaskalos) here means Teacher. Instead of making it easy to follow Him, Christ insisted that he count the cost of such commitment to discipleship. The Son of man is the title by which our Lord most frequently referred to Himself. The title originally came from Daniel 7:13 and had messianic significance. It must be understood that our Lord deliberately used this title of Himself in order to emphasize that He was, in fact, the Messiah. The

MATTHEW 8:22

22 But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.

23 ¶And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him.

24 And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, inasmuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was asleep.

25 And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish.

26 And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm.

27 But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

28 ¶And when he was come to the other side into the country of the Ger'ge-sēneś, there met him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way.

29 And, behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?

30 And there was a good way off from them an herd of many swine feeding.

31 So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.

32 And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters.

33 And they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

34 And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

CHAPTER 9

AND he entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into his own city.

2 And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy; Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

3 And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth.

4 And Jesus knowing their thoughts reference to another of his disciples must refer to a professed disciple who was unwilling to follow Him unconditionally. The request to bury my father probably meant he wanted to stay at home until his father had died. Jesus' strong reply, let the dead bury their dead, was not intended to be harsh, but rather to emphasize that the time to be about the heavenly Father's business was now. The tempest refers to a violent storm (Gr seismos). Jesus rebuked their little faith in light of the fact that He had commanded the trip across the Sea of Galilee. In one of His most awesome miracles, He simply rebuked the winds and the sea, resulting in an instantaneous miracle of total calm!

e. The healings of the Gadarene demoniacs. 8:28-34.

28. Gergesenes. The preferred reading is "Gadarenes." Gergesa was a town on the eastern slope of the Sea of Galilee and was included in the district of Gadara, one of the cities of the Decapolis. Both of these were included in the larger administrative district of Gerasa, whose center was the town of Gerasa in Gilead. Two possessed with devils. The description of two demoniacs is peculiar to Matthew; the parallel passages of the other synoptic writings mention only one. Instead of this being a contradiction, Mark and Luke emphasize the more predominant convert of the two, whereas Matthew gives the more complete account of both men with whom Jesus dealt.

29-34. What have we to do with thee . . . ? They reacted with resentment at Jesus' intrusion into their realm, meaning "What is there in common between us?" Their reference to Him as the Son of God indicates that the demons were fully aware of who Jesus was, and their question about being tormented before the time also indicates that they were aware of why He had come to earth. While the demons seemed to understand that they will ultimately come under the judgment of God, here their concern seems to be that of a premature suffering (Gr basanizō). The reference to a herd of many swine draws attention to the fact that they were being kept illegally by Jews who were living in this gentile region. Swine were considered unclean by the ordinances of the Mosaic law. The whole herd . . . perished. This is Jesus' only recorded miracle that was destructive in nature. The fact that Jesus granted the demons' request was because of His concern for the man. The spiritual principle in this incident is that those who are deliberately disobedient (as was the case of the pig-breeders) deprive themselves of divine protection and place themselves at the mercy of the forces of evil. Certainly, losing the herd of pigs, which was unlawful in the first place, was insignificant when compared to the man's gaining his spiritual health. They besought him that he would depart. Unfortunately this incident ends in tragedy as the people prefer their own business to the presence of the Saviour whose power they now feared.

f. The healing of the paralytic and lessons on righteousness. 9:1-17.

9:1-8. He entered into a ship, and passed over. Jesus never stayed where He was not wanted; thus, He returns to His own city, i.e., Capernaum (cf. 4:13). This is the incident where the paralyzed man was lowered through the roof by his four friends because of their inability to penetrate the density of the crowd (see also Mk 2:1-12; Lk 5:17-26). Jesus' statement, Thy sins be forgiven thee, shocked the crowds. In reality, Jesus attended to the man's spiritual needs before He dealt with his physical problem. This man blasphemeth. Because He claimed to forgive sins, Jesus was labeled a blasphemer by the religious leaders who were in attendance. Yet, Jesus instinctively knew the na-said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?

5 For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?

6 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house.

7 And he arose, and departed to his house.

8 But when the multitudes saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

9 ¶And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him.

10 ¶And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with him and his disciples.

11 And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?

12 But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

13 But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

14 ¶Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not?

15 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bridechamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast.

16 No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment, for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

17 Neither do men put new wine into old bottles: else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.

18 ¶While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler, and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.

19 And Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples.

20 ¶And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment.

21 For she said within herself, If I ture of their wicked attitude and asked them a pointed question, whether it was easier to forgive sins or heal sicknesses. He wanted them to understand that He not only had the power to deal with the symptom, but also the cause of the sickness, which was sin. The audience was stunned again when Jesus healed the man of his paralysis; and they marvelled, (lit., they were afraid).

9-12. The receipt of custom refers to the toll booth in the street where tax collectors sat to receive various taxes. In the house means at home. We know from the other synoptic writers that this house was Matthew's (see Mk 2:15; Lk 5:29, where the expression is phrased as "in his house"). The usage of the phrase meaning at home in this passage indicates that Matthew was both the owner of the home and the author of this writing. This statement serves as strong internal evidence for Matthew's authorship of this gospel.

13-15. The righteous. The word is used here in an ironic sense, meaning self-righteous. Ultimately, as the Scripture tells us, "there is none righteous, no, not one" (Rom 3:10). To repentance. Some older manuscripts omit these words; but the principle taught by our Lord here is that fasting is not an end in itself, but is to be practiced only under appropriate circumstances. The Pharisees' fasting was part of the righteousness of men, which the Lord condemned. The children of the bridechamber refers to the wedding guests. As long as the bridegroom is with them, i.e., while the wedding festivities last, which might be for some days. When the bridegroom shall be taken from them is an allusion to His coming death and ascension.

16-17. The principle expressed here is that Jesus Christ has come to bring in a new dispensation altogether, which cannot be fitted into the forms of the old Jewish economy. The principle taught here by illustration is that the rule of the Law must be replaced by that of Grace, which will now have free reign in the hearts of all believers. New cloth means unbleached cloth. The RSV reads "unshrunk." Bottles (i.e., skins) were frequently used in the ancient East as liquid containers. The strength of fermentation of the new wine would be too much for the partly worn, old, or inelastic skins and would cause them to break.

g. The healing of the woman with the issue and the raising of the ruler's daughter. 9:18-26.

18-19. A certain ruler, i.e., a magistrate. The other Gospels indicate that his name was Jairus (cf. Mk 5:22-43; Lk 8:41-56). Worshipped. This suggests that he recognized Jesus' deity and authority. In the parallel passages we are told that she was dying when the father first came and that she died while he was en route. Matthew combines these two phrases into one, saying, is even now dead.

20-22. I shall be whole (lit., I shall be saved). It was customary for a rabbi to address a young girl as daughter. Jesus' exhortation to be of good comfort means to cheer up. The further statement, thy faith hath made thee whole, indicates that God's blessing on our behalf is usually in proportion to our willingness to trust Him.

MATTHEW 9:22

may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

22 But Jesus turned him about, and when he saw her, he said, Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour.

23 And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise, 24 He said unto them, Give place: for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn.

25 But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose.

26 And the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

27 ¶And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us.

28 And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29 Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you.

30 And their eyes were opened; and Jesus straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it.

31 But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

32 ¶As they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil.

33 And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, It was never so seen in Israel.

34 But the Pharisees said, He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.

35 ¶And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people.

36 But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd.

37 Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few;

38 Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.

CHAPTER 10

AND when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.

23-26. The scene described here is typical of a Middle Eastern home where someone lay dead. Mourners were actually hired to make noise. The minstrels were fluteplayers. Jesus' statement that the maid is not dead, but sleepeth meant that her death, though real, was ultimately going to be a temporary "sleep" in light of the fact that He would quickly raise her back to life again. On the same principle, the "... dead in Christ . . ." (I Thess 4:16) are said to be asleep only in view of the certainty of their resurrection. It should also be observed that those whom Jesus brought back to life during His earthly ministry later died a natural death, whereas those who are resurrected at the last day shall never die again.

h. The healing of the blind and dumb men. 9:27-38.

27-32. This incident is also peculiar to Matthew's gospel. (cf. Lk 11:14-26). Two blind men call out, Thou son of David, which was a messianic designation. The implication of their address seemed to indicate that they had put their faith in Jesus as the Messiah. Into the house probably refers to Matthew's house as in verse 10. Believe ye . . . ? Notice the emphasis on faith again as the catalyst to this miracle as well as the previous one. See that no man know it (see note on 8:4). Their disobedience does not need to be viewed as a serious violation, but rather, as an overt exuberance from the effect of the miracle itself.

33-38. The connection between spiritual evil and physical illness is clearly illustrated in this incident. The prince of the devils is Satan himself. Fainted means they were distressed. The observation that they were as sheep having no shepherd is taken from Numbers 27:17. The quote is taken mainly from the LXX, but with altered construction. Verses 37-38 constitute one of the great missionary passages of the New Testament. Jesus pictures the world as a great spiritual harvest in need of laborers to gather it into the fold. He urges the disciples to pray that the Lord of the harvest will send forth the workers to gather it. Kent (p. 945) observes: "As so often occurs those who prayed were themselves sent."

3. His missionaries: Sending of the Twelve. 10:1-12:50.

10:1. The twelve disciples had been formed as a group some time previously. Now after a time of instruction and training they were sent on their first mission. This would be no ordinary preaching mission since they were also given power, or "authority" over demons and disease. Their miracle-working ministry was to attest to the legitimate claim of Jesus to be the Messiah.

2 Now the names of the twelve apostles are these; The first, Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; James the son of Zēb'e-dee, and John his brother;

3 Philip, and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican; James the son of Al-phæ'us, and Lēb-bæ'us, whose surname was Thād-dæ'us;

4 Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him.

5 These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Sa-mār'i-tanš enter ye not:

6 But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.

9 Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses,

10 Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat.

11 And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, enquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence.

12 And when ye come into an house, salute it.

13 And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it: but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.

14 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.

15 Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom

2-4. Apostles (Gr apostolos) is the technical term that later came to be applied to the twelve disciples. The literal meaning of the term is a "sent one." In this passage their twelve names are arranged in six pairs, which probably corresponded to the arrangement in which they were sent out on this mission. Simon is Peter, who heads all four lists of the Twelve (cf. Mk 3:16; Lk 6:14; Acts 1:13). Since he appears to be the most prominent disciple in the early stages of Jesus' ministry, as well as in the early period of the church, it may well be that he exercised a natural leadership over the others. It does not follow from this, however, that his leadership was necessarily passed on to successors. Bartholomew was generally considered to be identical with the Nathanael of John 1:45-51. Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus. Better texts read simply "Thaddaeus." Luke gives his name as Judas (Lk 6:16). Simon the Canaanite actually means the Cananaean. Since he had been a member of the nationalist party known as the Zealots, who resisted Herod the Great by force, he is also at times referred to as Simon the Zealot. Judas Iscariot has been variously interpreted as meaning that he was a member of the tribe of Issachar, or an inhabitant of Kerioth, or the one who carried the purse (Aram secariota, purse), or the one who was strangled (Heb iscara, strangling). It has been generally recognized that he was the only disciple who was not a Galilean.

5-10. The way of the Gentiles. There were several Greek cities in Galilee which existed separately from the Jewish life-style. The apostles were instructed to avoid these towns and to confine themselves to the Jewish cities only. Toussaint (p. 138) observes the dispensational interpretation of this emphasis, noting the exclusiveness of their ministry to the house of Israel only. The word Gentiles is in the objective genitive, indicating that they were not to enter into a road even leading to the Gentiles, nor were they to enter into a city of the Samaritans. Thus, it is proper to conclude that the legitimate offer of the kingdom of Israel was still being made by the rightful King. Had Israel accepted her King, she would have had her long-awaited kingdom. Therefore, it is properly noted that the kingdom of heaven is at hand. The apostles were to provide (better "get") nothing in the way of money in their purses (lit., belts). The fold of the robe or the girdle served the same function as our pockets. Scrip refers to a wallet, actually a small bag for holding various articles. Coats were the outer robes or tunics that corresponded to the Roman toga. The Greek of staves is actually singular, meaning staff, agreeing with Luke 9:3. Some have suggested that the meaning of Mark 6:8 is that they were to have one walking stick between a pair. The workman is worthy of his meat. They were to rely upon the gifts and hospitality of those to whom they preached. This same concept is quoted in I Timothy 5:18, in the lucan form. The idea here is that the preacher of the gospel is to be supported by the free-will contributions of those to whom he ministers. Thus, the ministry of preaching is always viewed in the New Testament as a faith venture.

11-16. Inquire means to search out. Hospitality was a normal part of Oriental life and many offers of accommodation were probably received; however, the disciples were restricted to accepting hospitality only from those who received their message. Shake off the dust of your feet is a symbolic act of rejection and condemnation, the idea being that not even the dust of a wicked city was worthy of them. Verily (Gr amēn) is a transliteration from the Hebrew meaning "truly," which gives emphasis to the statement that follows. Sodom and Gomorrha are referred to as an example of the divine judgment against those cities that reject God (see 11:23-24 for an application of this statement to Capernaum as well). Wise as serpents (cf. Gen 3:1). In the ancient east the serpent was commonly regarded as and Go-mōr'ra in the day of judgment, than for that city.

MATTHEW 10:16

16 ¶Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.

17 But beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues;

18 And ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles.

19 But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak.

20 For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.

21 And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child: and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death.

22 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

23 But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come.

24 The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord.

25 It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Bē-ēl'ze-būb, how much more shall they call them of his household?

26 Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known.

27 What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light: and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops.

28 And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

29 Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father.

30 But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

31 Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.

32 Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven.

33 But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the the wisest of beasts. A cautious wisdom was necessary in order to deal with the fierce opposition that the disciples would face.

17-22. Take no thought means do not be anxious (see also Mk 13:9-13; Lk 12:11-12; 21:12-19). It shall be given you promises that the inner prompting of the Holy Spirit would tell them what to say in each situation they would face. Children shall rise up against their parents is a summary statement of Micah 7:6 (cf. Mk 13:12). For my name's sake (i.e., because you belong to Me). They would endure great persecution because of their identification with Jesus Christ. But he that endureth to the end shall be saved is a promise of perseverance, not a teaching that salvation may be lost. Rather, it indicates that those who are truly saved will indeed endure to the end.

23-24. Till the Son of man be come. Premillennialists view this passage as referring to the time of the Great Tribulation and the Second Advent, which were in the distant future. Thus, the reference to the coming of the Son of man in this passage is to be viewed as eschatological. To imply that at this point Jesus merely viewed Himself as a forerunner to the yet-coming Messiah is ludicrous in light of all the statements made earlier in the Gospel of Matthew. Therefore, He must have His own Second Coming in view.

25-31. Beelzebub refers to Satan himself, the ultimate evil demon. The disciples are told to Fear . . . not. Their enemies can only take their physical life, which cannot prevent their blessed resurrection to life everlasting. To God alone belongs the power of the second death. In other words, Jesus reminded them that it was more important to fear Him who had authority over the soul as well as over the body and who can bring both to eternal condemnation in hell (Gehenna). It should be noted that God is the One who has authority to cast men into hell, and not Satan, who will himself be ultimately cast into everlasting fire. Conversely, Jesus reminded His disciples of the Father's loving care, even for the sparrows (common birds in Palestine). A farthing (Gr assarion) was a copper coin worth about one-sixteenth of a denarius. Without your Father, i.e., without His being concerned. Here we are reminded of God's gracious providential care over His saints.

32-37. Confess me, i.e., acknowledge that you belong to Me. In reality, secret discipleship is a practical impossibility. Jesus constantly called for an open confession of Himself by His followers. We must be willing to acknowledge Jesus as Lord and Saviour, with all that those terms imply. That our confession is to be before men clearly indicates that a public confession of true Christian faith is a virtual necessity. The warning, Whosoever shall deny me, is in the aorist tense, referring not to one moment of denial (such as Peter's), but to an entire lifelong resistance to Christ which shall never cease. Therefore, it is not a single act of denial which makes one unworthy of being a daughter against her mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in law.

36 And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

37 He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me.

38 And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.

39 He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.

40 He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.

41 He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward.

42 And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

CHAPTER 11

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities.

2 ¶ Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples,

3 And said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?

4 Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see:

5 The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them.

6 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

7 ¶ And as they departed, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

8 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses.

9 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet.

10 For this is he, of whom it is writ-disciple, but a refusal to confess Christ at all that eliminates one from being a true follower of Jesus Christ.

38-40. Taketh not his cross. This is the first mention of the Cross in the New Testament (for the theological significance see L. Morris, The Cross in the New Testament and The Apostolic Preaching of the Cross). It was the custom for the condemned man to carry his cross on the way to his own execution. There is plenty of evidence that our Lord anticipated the mode of His own death. These words come as the climax of His warning to the apostles that their mission would involve arrest and persecution, potentially culminating in condemnation to death. These important words also have a deep spiritual significance for every believer and constitute the basis of Paul's teaching about the identification of the believer with the cross of Christ (see Gal 2:20). Findeth his life means to gain something out of life for oneself. Here the word means the self-life, or natural life, as opposed to the spiritual life. Shall find it refers to a life emptied of self and poured out in the service of Christ in this world, and which will find full enjoyment and blessing in the world to come.

41-42. In the name of a prophet (i.e., as a prophet). The meaning of this statement is that those who are not prophets themselves may share in the labor and reward of the prophets by willingly supporting their ministry. One of these little ones is a reference to the fact that even the smallest service done to the most insignificant of Christ's servants shall be rewarded by the Lord Himself.

a. Excursus: John the Baptist and Christ. 11:1-30.

11:1-7. Verses 2-19 are a parallel with Luke 7:18-35. This imprisonment has already been mentioned in Matthew 4:12, but the circumstances leading up to it are not described in detail until 14:3-12, where the manner of John's death is also recounted. The works of Christ refers to His miracles. He that should come refers to the predicted Messiah of Old Testament prophecy whose coming had already been proclaimed by John. The blind receive their sight is an allusion to Isaiah 35:5; 61:1, where it is stated that this will be one of the works performed by the Messiah. John would certainly have understood the allusion. The poor have the gospel preached to them is another allusion to Isaiah 61:1. Hence, Jesus was clearly vindicating His messiahship to John who may have begun to question why Jesus had left him in prison.

8-11. But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? . . . more, i.e., much more (Gr perissos). The quotation in verse 10 is from Malachi 3:1. John was recognized as the foreordained forerunner of the Saviour and, technically, the last of the Old Testament prophets. Thus, he belonged to the Old Testament dispensation. This certainly emphasizes the clear distinction between the Old Testament era (i.e., before the resurrection) ten, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

MATTHEW 11:11

11 Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.

12 And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

13 For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John.

14 And if ye will receive it, this is E-lī'as, which was for to come.

15 He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

16 But whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, 17 And saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented.

18 For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, He hath a devil.

19 The Son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners. But wisdom is justified of her children.

20 ¶Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:

21 Woe unto thee, Chō-rā'zīn! woe unto thee, Bēth-sā'i-da! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sī'don, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.

22 But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sī'don at the day of judgment, than for you.

23 And thou, Ca-per'na-um, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom, in the day of judgment, than for thee.

25 ¶At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

26 Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight.

27 All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the and the New Testament era (after the resurrection). The weakest believer who has the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of the risen Christ is, therefore, in a more privileged position than the greatest of the Old Testament prophets. The expression, them that are born of women means mortal men, the idea being that the greatest of all in this life cannot be compared with the glory of the life to come.

12-15. The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence (Gr biazomai). The meaning of this saying, and the connection of verses 12-14 with preceding and following contexts, indicates that John opened the kingdom of heaven to sinners and thus became the culminating point of Old Testament witness. Jesus' statement that this is Elijah [Elias] indicates that He saw the ministry of John as the fulfillment of the prophecy of the coming of Elijah in Malachi 4:5-6. This is a valuable hint that we are not to over-literalize Old Testament prophecy. The meaning of Malachi 4:6 seems to be that John was to form a link between the Old and New Testaments. Most commentators have taken suffereth to be in the passive voice, indicating that the church has been suffering from the days of John until that of the author of this gospel (cf. also the parallel passage in Lk 16:16 where the same verb is used).

16-19. This generation refused to exercise its capacity to hear, but made excuses for rejecting both John and Jesus. Some have likened the illustration of Christ to that of children playing a game of "weddings" and then a game of "funerals." The idea is that the children cannot decide which game to play, therefore, they decide to play nothing at all. The reference to the rejection of John's ascetic ministry brought the charge that he was demon-possessed. However, Jesus' open contact with sinners brought the equally untrue claim that He was gluttonous, and a winebibber. But wisdom is justified of her children is probably the correct reading, even though some texts read "works" for children. The meaning is the same in either case. The differing life-styles of John and Jesus were justified in either case by their results.

20-24. The denunciation of Galilean cities which follows is recorded also by Luke, but in a different context (see Lk 10:13-16). Chorazin was about an hour's journey on foot north of Capernaum. Bethsaida was on the west side of the Sea of Galilee, about three miles southeast of Chorazin. Tyre and Sidon were both on the Mediterranean coast beyond the northern boundary of Palestine. Shalt be brought down to hell. The statement here is an allusion to Isaiah 14:13, 15, where it is spoken of the king of Babylon and probably refers to Satan himself.

25-30. Answered. The words that follow are the response of Jesus to the circumstances just described. Thank (Gr exomologeō) is literally to acknowledge. Babes refers to spiritual babes who receive God's revelation in simple faith. The yoke refers to the teaching of Christ, which is represented as being light in comparison with the burdensome teaching of the Pharisees (see 23:4). Ye shall find rest unto your souls. These words are taken from Jeremiah 6:16. The LXX has "ye shall find purification unto your souls" and is corrected by Matthew to the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28 ¶Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

29 Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

30 For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

CHAPTER 12

AT that time Jesus went on the sabbath day through the corn; and his disciples were an hundred, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.

2 But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath day.

3 But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungred, and they that were with him;

4 How he entered into the house of God, and did eat the shewbread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests?

5 Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless?

6 But I say unto you, That in this place is one greater than the temple.

7 But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

8 For the Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath day.

9 ¶And when he was departed thence, he went into their synagogue:

10 And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days? that they might accuse him.

11 And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?

12 How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath days.

13 Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

14 ¶Then the Pharisees went out, and held a council against him, how they might destroy him.

15 But when Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself from thence: and great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all;

16 And charged them that they should not make him known:

17 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by E-sā'ias the prophet, saying,

18 Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased: I will put my spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgment to the Gentiles.

original meaning in the Hebrew. Easy means good or kind. The entire passage is peculiar to Matthew's gospel.

b. Excursus: A dispute with the Pharisees. 12:1-50.

12:1-9. The sabbath day, i.e., the seventh day of the week, corresponding to our Saturday (cf. Mk 2:23-3:6; Lk 6:1-11). However, in New Testament times it began at sunset on Friday and lasted until the following sunset. The Pharisees had burdened the Sabbath with a multitude of detailed observances which were not laid down in the Mosaic law. Correspondingly, in this incident they had objected to the manner in which Jesus' disciples had plucked grain on the Sabbath, violating the command against reaping on that sacred day (Ex 20:10). In responding to their legalistic traditions, Jesus always referred to Scripture. Have ye not read . . . ? The passage referred to is I Samuel 21:1-6. The point that our Lord makes is that in the case of necessity the ceremonial law might be overruled. He uses the illustration of David eating the showbread. These loaves were placed on the table in the holy place in the Tabernacle each Sabbath. They were to be eaten only by the priest and his family (cf. Lev 24:5-9; Num 28:9). The priests prepared the sacrifices on the Sabbath in spite of the general prohibition of work. If the necessities of temple worship permitted the priests to profane the sabbath, there was all the more reason why the service of Christ would allow a similar liberty. I will have mercy, and not sacrifice. The application of this principle is that ethics are more important than ritual. The passage clearly asserts that Jesus had the right to interpret the Mosaic ordinances in light of their spiritual intention, rather than their literal application.

10-27. Withered (i.e., paralyzed). Luke 6 shows that this incident occurred on a different Sabbath. However, the objection of the Pharisees on this occasion was ultimately the same. They were in opposition to Jesus' healing on the Sabbath. The reference to their synagogue indicates that in this particular synagogue the Pharisees were predominant. He asked them the searching question, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days? The Old Testament made no such prohibition, but some rabbis considered healing as work. Jesus' response was that what one would be willing to do for an unfortunate animal, in sparing its life on the Sabbath, ought to be extended as a gesture of mercy to people in physical peril as well. The miracle only enraged the Pharisees further who immediately held a council (lit., took counsel). The Old Testament reference to my servant is here applied to the person of the Messiah Himself. The statement that he shall show judgment to the Gentiles is a prophecy that the righteousness of God would be made known to the Gentiles through the ministry of the Messiah. Till he send forth judgment unto victory means until the final triumph of righteousness which shall be brought about by Christ Himself. The question Is not this the son of David? is definitely a messianic title (see 9:27). Beelzebub refers to Satan. Jesus knew implies that He fully understood the true meaning and intention of their thoughts. His reference to your children meant the disciples of the Pharisees.

MATTHEW 12:19

19 He shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

20 A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory.

21 And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

22 ¶Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb: and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw.

23 And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the son of David?

24 But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Bē-ēl'ze-büb the prince of the devils.

25 And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand:

26 And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?

27 And if I by Bē-ēl'ze-büb cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges.

28 But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.

29 Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house.

30 He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.

31 Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

32 And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

33 Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit.

34 O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

28-30. The kingdom of God. Matthew's usual expression is the kingdom of heaven (e.g., 3:2). While some have attempted to distinguish between the meaning of the two, it is more likely that they mean the same thing. Is come unto you (lit., has come upon you unawares). The Lord's power over demons was evidence enough that He was the Messiah. Hence, spoil his goods . . . house refers to Satan as being defeated or ruined by the capture of souls from him for Christ by the gospel. It must be noticed that the kingdom of God was, in a sense, already present in the person of the King—Christ Himself! Jesus' admonition He that is not with me is against me clearly states that there is no middle course in relation to the authority of Christ as King and Lord. In Mark 9:40 we have the converse truth stated. The present passage applies to any person or position that is definitely anti-Christ. While the passage in Mark indicates that there may be minor differences (e.g., denominational distinctives) among genuine believers, Matthew's passage indicates that there can be no departure from the doctrine of Christ. Those who fail to affirm Him as the divine Son of God are ultimately against Him, no matter what kind of "appreciation" they claim to have for Him.

31-38. The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. This sin is that of deliberate rejection of Christ and His salvation. It is the ultimate sin that by its very nature puts a man beyond the opportunity of salvation. The reason for this is that it is the Holy Spirit who brings the offer of salvation to the heart of man. To reject Him is to act "presumptuously" and thus to "blaspheme" God. Those who reject His offer of salvation are in reality blaspheming the very nature of God Himself and the genuineness of His grace. The tree is known by his fruit. The point of this verse seems to be that the good works done by Christ were evidence of His personal goodness and should have prevented any such blasphemous saying as that spoken by the Pharisees. However, this illustration is conversely applied to the Pharisees who are known by their wickedness as well. By thy words does not refer to justification or condemnation on the basis of what one says, but to the outward evidence of the inward attitude of the heart. While the Pharisees asked for evidence of Christ's 35 A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things.

36 But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

37 For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

38 ¶Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee.

39 But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas:

40 For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

41 The men of Nin'e-veh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

42 The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

43 When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none.

44 Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished.

45 Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

46 ¶While he yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him.

47 Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee.

48 But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?

49 And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!

50 For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

claim, they overlooked the clear evidence that was to be seen in His miracles.

39-42. The word adulterous means unfaithful to God. It was a metaphor frequently used in the Old Testament for spiritual "adultery." The prophet Jonah [Jonas]. Here Jesus clearly refers to one of the most controversial stories in the Old Testament. Jesus uses Jonah's interment in the fish for three days and three nights as an illustration of the literal three days and three nights that He would spend in the grave Himself. The actual period was either, minimally, from Friday evening to Sunday morning (covering parts of three days idiomatically) or, maximally, from Wednesday evening to Sunday morning (covering seventy-two literal hours; see W. G. Scroggie, Guide to the Gospels, pp. 569-577). The reference to the whale's belly in verse 40 is unfortunate in the AV. The Greek word ketos means a great sea monster. The Old Testament references are to a "great fish" (e.g., Jon 1:17). It should be noted that our Lord placed this entire account on the same level of historical reality as that with which He Himself was dealing. To imply that Jesus was the "victim of the ignorance of His day" is ludicrous. He certainly did not show such victimization in dealing with other issues of life. The queen of the south refers to the Queen of Sheba (see I Kgs 10). Here our Lord contrasts her eagerness to hear the wisdom of a man (Solomon) with the refusal of His listeners to hear one greater than Solomon. Again, this statement must be taken in light of the deity of Christ, rather than as a presumptuous boast.

43-45. Jesus gives a striking parable of the precarious spiritual condition of the nation. The parable is that of a house well swept but unoccupied. The demon having been driven out, but finding no place to rest, returns with seven other spirits, resulting in an even greater degeneration. In using this illustration Jesus clearly indicated that though the Jews had been cleansed from their idolatry by the severity of the Babylonian exile, their unbelief and hardness of heart was in danger of producing an even worse moral condition than when they were idolaters. The moral reformation that had taken place after the captivity should have prepared Israel for the ministries of John and Jesus. Unfortunately, in most cases it fell short in that Israel's spiritual house was empty. Only by inviting Christ to occupy the position of Honored Guest and Head of the Home could Israel know the full blessing of God.

46-50. The chapter closes with a reference to his mother and his brethren. These brothers are presumably the children of Joseph and Mary born after the virgin birth of Jesus. While some have attempted to view them as cousins, this certainly is not implied in the gospel records. Kent (p. 951) believes that Jesus' preaching at Nazareth had already forced the family to move to Capernaum. By asking, Who is my mother? Jesus called attention away from earthly relationships to more important spiritual relationships. A believer is even closer to Christ than to a physical relative. This saying was not intended to be one of disrespect to Mary or to His brothers, for they too would come to share that spiritual relationship. It should also be noted that there is no suggestion here at all, however, that Jesus' mother had any special access to His presence or any particular influence over Him. By using this startling question, Jesus prepares the crowd to receive the precious truth that whosoever shall do the will of my Father was, in fact, His mother, His brother, His sister. Hendriksen (p. 542) suggests that it was to His inner circle of disciples that He gave this loving and honored designation. The beauty of this passage can be seen in the fact that while they had left all and followed Him, they were still often “of little faith” (8:26). Yet He was not ashamed to call them brothers (see Heb 2:11). Those who trust Him as their personal Saviour become adopted members of the family of God (see Rom 8:17, 29).

CHAPTER 13

THE same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea side.

2 And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

4. His mystery: Secret form of the kingdom. 13:1-58.

13:1-2. On one of the busiest days of Jesus' earthly ministry He gave an extended series of parables (seven in Matthew and four in Mark, including one not given in Matthew). In the overwhelming press of the crowd at a house, Jesus could not be reached by people, so He went into a ship from which He taught the multitude. This is the turning point in Matthew's gospel. Already sensing His impending rejection, Jesus now expresses the “mystery” form of the kingdom which will be the church. His early ministry involved a proclamation of the spiritual principles of the kingdom. The Jews, seeking a political and nationalistic kingdom, were now rejecting Jesus' concept of a kingdom of spiritual character. To bring in a political kingdom before men were born again would be a travesty. Therefore, an interval is now announced between the Messiah's original appearance and His final return. That interval is the Church Age, during which believers are citizens of the kingdom which is within them (Lk 17:21). The distinction between the church and the kingdom is not that one is more spiritual than the other. The church is the present (realized) form of the kingdom of God. The millennial kingdom, which is to come in the future (Rev 20:4) is another transitional form of the kingdom which will ultimately be presented to the Father to be the eternal kingdom of God (Rev 21).

3. Walvoord (p. 96) notes that this section introduces a new subject, a new approach and a new method of teaching by parables. He spake . . . in parables, a common method of teaching in the Near East, used to convey spiritual truth through a series of earthly comparisons. Jesus was an expert at this form of teaching. It should be noted, however, that parables did not always convert unbelievers who were often confused about their meaning. Tasker (p. 134) comments: “Jesus deliberately adopted the parabolic method of teaching at a particular stage in His ministry for the purpose of withholding further truth about Himself and the kingdom of heaven from the crowds, who had proved themselves to be deaf to His claims . . . from now onwards, when addressing the unbelieving multitude, He speaks only in parables (thirty-four in number) which He interprets to His disciples in private.”

a. The Parable of the Sower. 13:4-23.

4-10. The first parable is set in an agricultural context. A sower went forth refers to the ancient seed sower, planting a crop. The Greek definite article here is generic. Jesus later interpreted this parable Himself. The seed depicts the Word of God (vs. 19) and thus the sower is the gospel evangelist. The way side is the path trampled through the field. It was hard-packed and the seed found no root, thus the birds (demons? vs. 19, wicked one(s)) snatched it away. Here there was no response at all to the gospel. The second category is called stony places or the rock ledge beneath a thin, shallow layer of soil. This thin crust would warm quickly causing the seed to sprout instantly but without adequate rootage or moisture. Thus, the sun . . . scorched the crop and it withered away. The third

3 And he spake many things unto them in parables, saying, Behold, a sower went forth to sow;

4 And when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way side, and the fowls came and devoured them up:

5 Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth: and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth:

6 And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root, they withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them:

8 But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundred-fold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold.

9 ¶Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables?

11 He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given.

12 For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

13 Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand.

14 And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of E-sā'ias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

15 For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

16 But blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear.

17 For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

18 ¶Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower.

19 When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the way side.

20 But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it;

21 Yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while; for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended.

22 He also that received seed among group of seeds fell among thorns which had not been plowed. The thorns (wild growth) choked out the crop. The good ground represents well-plowed and prepared soil capable of producing a large crop. The statement, Who hath ears to hear, goes beyond physical hearing and implies an inner spiritual reception of truth. This prompted the disciples' question as to why He had spoken to them in parables. Whereas before, He had used parables to illustrate His messages, now they formed the basis of the message.

11-13. The Saviour's reply was that only the disciples were to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. The mystery implies a secret into which one must be initiated in order to understand it. The mystery revealed would be the new form of the kingdom during the interval between the first and second advents. Kent (p. 45) notes, "These parables describe the strange form of the kingdom while the King is absent, during which time the gospel is preached and a spiritual nucleus is developed for the establishment of the messianic reign." This special revelation is given only to the apostles who will become the foundation of that church. Those to whom this revealed secret is not given are those who have already rejected Christ. Thus, to the unbeliever, the parable form leaves him without understanding. Their rejection of Him leads to His rejection of them.

14-17. The quotation from the prophecy of Isaiah [Isaiah], (i.e., Isa 6:9-10) follows the LXX, emphasizing the obstinate unbelief of the people. As in Isaiah's day, the Jews had hardened themselves against God's truth and He had further hardened them in their unbelief. Their hearts had waxed gross (fat) and they would not, nor should not be converted, i.e., changed or saved. The faith of the disciples was evidence of their conversion and caused them to see and hear the truth which the prophets (vs. 17) had desired to know (cf. I Pet 1:10-12).

18-19. Jesus interpreted this parable Himself in verses 18-23. The sower is Christ working through the agency of His disciples to spread the gospel throughout the world. No longer is the message to be restricted to the house of Israel, but is to be declared to all men. The word of the kingdom is the gospel proclamation of Jesus the King and is not to be limited to an Old Testament Jewish-only message. Remember, these parables make it clear that the church is the present-day form of the kingdom. The key to interpreting the reception of the seed into the ground is the term understandeth, meaning to comprehend by believing faith (cf. vs. 23). The unsaved listener "understands" not and does not receive the seed, whereas the believer is one who both hears and "understands" the message and his life produces fruit to prove it. The reference to the heart in relation to the ground indicated that the quality of the soil represents man's heart response to the message.

20-23. The stony places are those shallow-hearted individuals who anon, "at once," receive (outwardly) the message with joy, i.e., enthusiasm or excitement. This emotional convert is not truly born again at all, for he hath not root and withers away. The one who is among the thorns (cares of this world) is the carnal, worldly convert, who never really breaks with his past. Worldliness and materialism choke the word in his life and he is finally unfruitful (unsaved). The one who received seed in the thorns is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful.

MATTHEW 13:23

23 But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundredfold, some sixty, some thirty.

24 ¶Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field:

25 But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

28 He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29 But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them.

30 Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn.

the good ground is the one who both heard the word and understood it, which also beareth fruit (evidence of true conversion). While such evidence may vary in its amount, all true believers will produce some fruit. No fruit means no spiritual life.

The Parable of the Sower has been variously interpreted. Some hold that only the first one was lost, while others believe that examples two and three lost their salvation. To the contrary, only the last one was genuinely saved and produced fruit to prove it. The others fell away (not from salvation, but their profession) and were unfruitful. Jesus said that the believers' fruit would vary, but He gave no one the option of being His follower and producing no fruit at all!

b. The Parable of the Tares. 13:24-30; 36-43.

24-27. This parable serves as a warning to the laborers in the field (which is the world, vs. 38). Unlike the Jewish form of the kingdom in the Old Testament where citizens could be easily recognized, during the Church Age converts will be made from all over the world and received upon their profession of faith. Thus, it will be easier to slip in some counterfeits who profess what they do not possess. The kingdom of heaven must refer to the church, which is the subject of these parables. The enemy is Satan and the tares (Gr zizanon, denoting "darnel," lolium temulentum) are false converts. The darnel was a weed that resembled wheat but did not come to fruition. The good seed . . . sprung up, and brought forth fruit again, emphasizing that true converts produce fruitful lives. By contrast, false (professing) converts produce no lasting fruit. It should be noted that a "fruit" is something which God must produce in us by His power (cf. Gal 5:22ff.), whereas, a "work" is something which man can do by his own effort. Singing, preaching, ushering, teaching, witnessing are all works; by contrast, loving people, having a deep-seated inner joy, being at peace with people, etc., are fruits of the Holy Spirit, as is righteousness and holiness. False converts may produce outstanding works but no real fruits.

28-30. The servants questioned what could be done with these tares. To uproot them would be to damage the entire crop: root up . . . the wheat with them. The implication seems to be that too much scathing of people's genuineness of faith may damage the saved before it exposes the lost. Let both grow together indicates that there will always be some false professors among true Christian believers until the time of harvest or judgment. Note that the tares are gathered, bound, and burned first, whereas the wheat is gathered into my barn (heaven). The same progression of judgment, then blessing, follows in Revelation 19-22.

The Parable of the Tares is interpreted later by Jesus in verses 36-43. It should be observed that only the main details are symbolic in a parable, the minor incidents (e.g., the servants) merely give substance to the story. The field is the world, not the church. The sower of the good seed is the Son of man, or Christ Himself who will also be the final Judge who evaluates the fruit. The gospel is to be sown where lost people are and where converts need to be made in the world. As Lord of the harvest, Christ directs this sowing process, i.e., the missionary mandate of the church. The children of the kingdom are the saved believers of the church, who are Christ's true followers. The harvest is the end of the world and the reapers are angels who play a decisive role in the final judgment. The fire represents hell, or the lake of fire, the destination of all unbelievers and false professors who deny Christ. By contrast, the righteous shall enjoy the eternal kingdom of their Father.

31 ¶Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field:

32 Which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

33 ¶Another parable spake he unto them; The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

34 All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them:

35 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world.

36 ¶Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house: and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37 He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man;

38 The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one;

39 The enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels.

40 As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

41 The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity;

42 And shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

43 Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

44 ¶Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

45 ¶Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls:

c. The Parable of the Mustard Seed. 13:31-32.

31-32. See Mark 4:30-43; Luke 8:18-19. The mustard seed is usually small and yet grows to a great size, though not as great as described here. The idea seems to be that the tiny beginning of the church will eventually culminate in great growth. Herbs (Gr láchanon) plants or vegetables. However, such numerical growth will come to harbor the birds i.e., evil ones. Atkinson (p. 790) holds that, "The parable accordingly foreshadows the growth of the church into a world power . . . we have here a perfect picture of the apostasy not condemned, as such, we are reminded that outward growth is not always a true picture of spiritual depth. Again, as with the tares, false professors clutter the branches of the true tree (Rom 11) of God's fruitful people, seeking to benefit their own interest."

d. The Parable of the Leaven. 13:33-35.

33-35. Kingdom of heaven is the spiritual form of the kingdom in the church. Leaven is a lump of old dough in a state of fermentation which contaminates the bread. Leaven is virtually always used as a symbol of evil (cf. Mt 18:6-12; Mk 8:15; Gal 5:9). Three measures of meal, a common baking quantity (cf. Gen 18:6), equivalent to one and a half gallons (Gr satón; Heb seah). Kent (p. 47) sees the woman here as the false prophetess, Jezebel (Rev 2:20) and the great harlot (Rev 17). Thus, the leaven is not just false profession of unsaved church members but false doctrine which they will attempt to bring into the church.

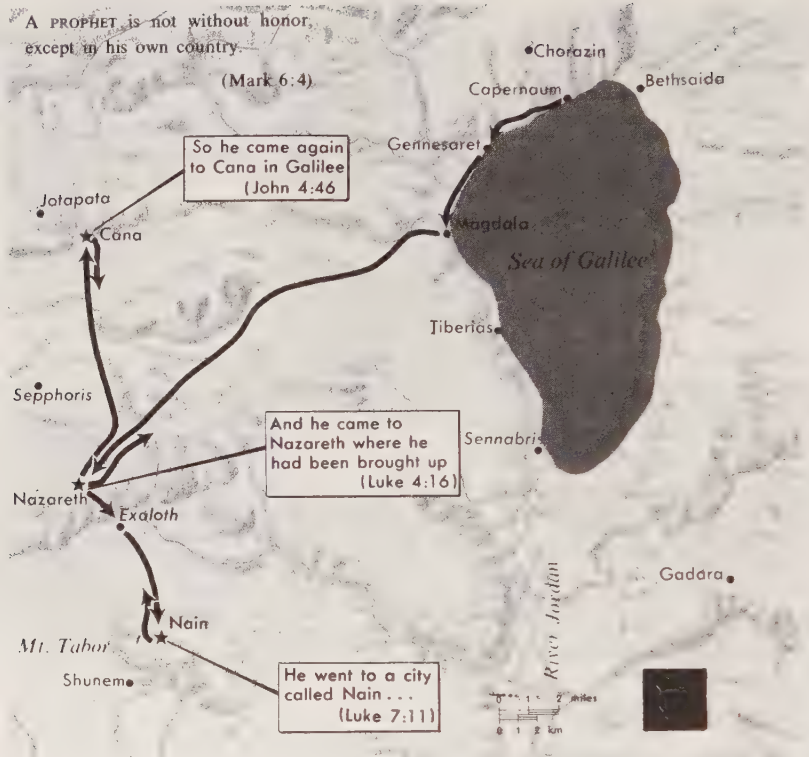

36-43. See notes on verses 24-30 above.

e. The Parable of the Hidden Treasure. 13:44.

44. This tiny parable has been subject to widely diverse interpretation. Some see Christ as the treasure hid in a field, for which the sinner must forsake all in order to obtain (cf. H. Kee, Matthew, in the Interpreter's Commentary on the Bible, p. 626). However, this view smacks of self-effort in obtaining that which only grace can give. It also violates the imagery of the other parables where Christ is the man. The treasure, then, represents His treasure people whom He bought and hid with Himself in God (Col 3:3).

f. The Parable of the Pearl of Great Price. 13:45-46.

45-46. The merchant man is Christ who comes to purchase, through His atonement, sinners who shall become goodly pearls. The one pearl of great price is the church for whom

Cana and Nazareth Revisited

46 Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

47 ¶Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind:

48 Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.

49 So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just,

50 And shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

51 Jesus saith unto them, Have ye understood all these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord.

52 Then said he unto them, Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.

53 ¶And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence.

54 And when he was come into his Christ gave His life, i.e., all that he had. If the pearl is Christ or the kingdom for whom a man must give all in order to obtain, then no man has ever yet given all that he has for Christ. While we receive Him as Saviour, we also progressively continue surrendering areas of ourselves to Him as we come to know better His will for our lives.

g. The Parable of the Dragnet. 13:47-50.

47-50. The dragnet. H. Staff (Matthew, in the Broadman Bible Commentary, p. 159) states, "It was pulled between two boats or taken out into the water by a single boat and drawn to shore by ropes." In such a process all kinds of fish and other objects would be caught together. The good were put into vessels, while the bad were cast away to be burned of fire (in hell). The imagery is similar to the Parable of the Tares.

h. Excursus: The use of parables. 13:51-58.

51-52. The disciples have been given the parables and the principles of interpretation. Thus, they reply Yea, Lord, or "yes," we understand. Since they clearly understood these parables, then obviously we are to understand them as well. An informed disciple is a true scribe who comprehends new and old truths and can rightly discern between them.

53-58. Jesus then gave His disciples a firsthand opportunity to witness the truth of these parables in action by teaching at the synagogue in His home town (Nazareth, not Capernaum). The people were astonished, i.e., greatly amazed or astounded.

own country, he taught them in their synagogue, inasmuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?

55 Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas?

56 And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things?

57 And they were offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house.

58 And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.

CHAPTER 14

AT that time Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus,

2 And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist; he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him.

3 ¶For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for He-rō'dī-as' sake, his brother Philip's wife.

4 For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her.

5 And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet.

6 But when Herod's birthday was kept, the daughter of He-rō'dī-as danced before them, and pleased Herod.

7 Whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask.

8 And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.

9 And the king was sorry; nevertheless for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.

10 And he sent, and beheaded John in the prison.

11 And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.

12 And his disciples came, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

13 ¶When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart; and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities.

14 And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with

Carpenter's son refers to the family trade of Joseph, Jesus' legal guardian and earthly "father," being the husband of Mary. The word "carpenter" (Gr tektōn) may refer to either a carpenter or a stone mason. The indication is that Jesus had learned His family's trade. There is no valid reason for understanding brethren and sisters in any sense but the normal one. They are Jesus' half brothers, the children naturally generated by Joseph and Mary after Jesus' virgin birth (cf. J. Broadus, Commentary on the Gospel of Matthew, pp. 310-312). Two of them, James and Judas (Jude), wrote New Testament epistles and played a prominent role in the early church. Some suggest that the family had moved to Capernaum, but that the sisters had married and remained at Nazareth ("with us"). Because they were offended at His message He did no mighty works (miracles) there due to their unbelief. His power was not limited by man's faith, but was exercised in response to it.

5. His malediction: Seriousness of rejection. 14:1-16:28.

a. The death of John the Baptist. 14:1-12.

14:1-2. The occasion of John's death signaled a time for Jesus to retreat, lest He provoke an early death, before the appointed time. Herod the tetrarch is Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great, the ruler of Galilee and Peraea. His ignorance of Jesus prior to this time is probably due to his self-indulgent, luxurious life-style that had little contact with religious figures. His guilty conscience over John's death caused him to think Jesus was John the Baptist risen from the dead. His fear of the resurrection indicates its widespread belief in those days. Matthew, then, recounts the story of John's murder at Herod's hands.

3-8. John had been arrested because of challenging the illegitimacy of Herod's divorce and incestuous remarriage. Herodias was the daughter of Aristobolus, a half-brother of Antipas. She had been married to her uncle, Herod Philip, and had borne him a daughter, Salome. However, she divorced her husband and married Antipas, who was already married himself. The king's own anger was already against John, but he feared the multitude and kept him alive because the people believed he was a prophet and indeed he was the last of the Old Testament prophets. Herodias was a guilty and vindictive ugly woman who wanted John dead and devised a plan to get rid of him. At the king's birthday party, her daughter performed a provocative and sexually enticing dance which so appealed to the drunken Herod that he promised with an oath that she could have whatever she wanted. Set up by her mother, she asked for John Baptist's head in a charger, i.e., a table platter.

9-12. The weak king complied and the forerunner of Jesus was slain. However, the vindication of the family was short-lived. Historical records confirm that the Herodian family never escaped bloodshed and violence (cf. H. Hoehner, Herod Antipas and S. Perowne, The Life and Times of Herod the Great). John's loyal disciples came bravely and obtained his body for burial and then informed Jesus, who departed into a desert place apart. We cannot fully comprehend the pressure Jesus was under at this time. Yet, in spite of His own heartache over John's death, He performs two major miracles for the multitude whom, loving, He cannot avoid healing and feeding.

b. The feeding of the five thousand. 14:13-21.

13-19. The stage was now set for the miracle of the feeding of the five thousand, which is the only miracle recorded in each of the four Gospels (see Mk 6:30-44; Lk 9:10-17; Jn 6:1-13). It became evening may refer to either three o'clock or sundown. Both times were used in Jewish reckoning and both may appear in the harmonization of the various accounts. While towns were nearby where food could have been purchased, it was getting compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

MATTHEW 14:15

15 ¶And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals.

16 But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart; give ye them to eat.

17 And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves, and two fishes.

18 He said, Bring them hither to me. 19 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves, and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

20 And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full.

21 And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children.

22 ¶And straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away.

23 And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening was come, he was there alone.

24 But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves: for the wind was contrary.

25 And in the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea.

26 And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.

27 But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid.

28 And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water.

29 And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30 But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me.

31 And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

32 And when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased.

late in the evening (cf. Lk 9:12). Jesus' suggestion to the disciples give ye them to eat, placed the burden of responsibility on them. According to the Gospel of John, Andrew, who had brought Peter to Jesus, now brought a boy's lunch consisting merely of five loaves and two fishes, i.e., small baked rolls and dried fish (an adequate lunch for a boy, but hardly a crumb compared to the immense crowd).

The simplicity of the story and its inclusion by all four evangelists eliminates any doubt of its true historicity. Old liberal interpretations are totally inadequate. Albert Schweitzer suggested that in actuality each person received only a small crumb or fragment and yet felt satisfied. Barclay hints that the boy's offering of his lunch convicted the crowd, so that they all got out their previously concealed lunches and shared them. None of these approaches is suggested in the text. Even Schweitzer's crumbs would add up to gigantic, unbelievable loaves in order for five to feed five thousand! The obvious miracle was the result of Jesus' divine person and power. As the Creator-God, He multiplied the bread, so that, as each piece was broken off, the original roll still remained intact. No wonder the crowd came back the next day seeking more. If the liberal interpretation of this passage was true, no one would have returned seeking more bread from Jesus (Jn 6:22-26)!

20-21. Not only is the miracle itself amazing but its result is equally stunning. Twelve baskets full of fragments remained over and above that which was eaten. The baskets (Gr kophinos) were small baskets carried on the arm and used as a satchel. These may have belonged to the disciples, who now receive a basketful of blessing as a result of their labor to feed others. Collection of the fragments emphasizes the adequacy and immensity of Christ's provision. Besides the five thousand men a large uncounted group of women and children were fed.

c. The walking on the water. 14:22-36.

22-27. Following the miraculous feeding, which John relates to the discourse on the Bread of Life, the disciples departed across the sea (of Galilee) by rented ship. Jesus dismissed the crowd and went up into a mountain apart to pray. That night the disciples encountered great difficulty from a contrary wind about three miles out in the lake (Jn 6:19). During the fourth watch, three o'clock to six o'clock A.M. Jesus came to them walking on the sea (another obvious miracle not to be explained away by His supposedly walking on stones out in the middle of the lake!) The nearly exhausted disciples, who had been rowing all night, were afraid, thinking he was a spirit (Gr phantasma), i.e., a ghost or apparition. Jesus reassured them, It is I.

28-32. Peter answered him in his characteristic impulsive manner. This part of the story is recounted only by Matthew, on whom it must have made a deep impression. Remember that he was in the boat at the time; perhaps he got wet when Peter climbed back into the ship. The incident is not presented as a parable, but an actual event involving three miracles (cf. Filson, p. 174): Jesus walks on the water, Peter temporarily does so, and the wind ceases immediately. Peter urged Jesus, bid me come unto thee on the water, not an unreasonable request for one who had just that day participated with the Saviour in the miracle of the feeding of the five thousand! However, Peter takes his eyes off the Saviour and fixes them on the surrounding conditions and begins to sink. With the concentration of his faith broken, Peter comes back under the control of the natural forces. The incident served as a good lesson in spiritual truth for all the disciples, to urge them not to be of little faith and doubt, i.e., doubting feeble believers.

33-36. The disciples worshiped him and recognized Him as the Son of God. Their spoken Aramaic of this phrase was a clear recognition of the deity of Jesus. No mere man deserved their worship and no mere man could do what He had done. It is no surprise, then, that the people of Gennesaret, on the plain to the northwest of the Sea of Galilee, were healed by simply touching the hem of his garment. This procedure may have been motivated by reports of the cure of hemorrhage which had previously occurred in this same region (cf. 9:20).

33 Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

34 ¶And when they were gone over, they came into the land of Gēn-nēs'a-ret.

35 And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased;

36 And besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole.

CHAPTER 15

THEN came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying,

2 Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread.

3 But he answered and said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?

4 For God commanded, saying, Honour thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death.

5 But ye say, Whosoever shall say to his father or his mother, It is a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me;

6 And honour not his father or his mother, he shall be free. Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.

7 Ye hypocrites, well did E-sā'ias prophesy of you, saying,

8 This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me.

9 But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

10 ¶And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand:

11 Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.

12 Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard this saying?

13 But he answered and said, Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.

14 Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

15 Then answered Peter and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable.

d. The conflict with the Pharisees over ritual. 15:1-20.

15:1-2a. See Mark 7:1-23. Of Jerusalem. It appears that the central religious leaders came to investigate the ministry and teaching of Jesus. The tradition of the elders. The Jews of our Lord's time believed that, in addition to the written law of Moses, there was an oral law given to Moses on Sinai and passed down from him by word of mouth till it reached the Great Synagogue or Council of Elders which succeeded Ezra after the return from the exile. This council lasted till 291 B.C. and seems to have been the source of the many accretions to the law of God which have been found in Judaism ancient and modern.

2b-9. Wash not their hands. The washing consisted of pouring a trickle of cold water over the outstretched hands. The Jews were not concerned with cleanliness but with ritual. Why do ye also transgress? The Lord here shows that additions to the Word of God ultimately contradict it. Honor thy father and mother. This is the fifth commandment of the Decalogue (see Ex 20:12; Deut 5:16). He that curseth . . . let him die the death (taken from the LXX of Ex 21:17). It is a gift. It was possible for a Jew by a legal quibble to dedicate his property to the Temple, thus avoiding the necessity of supporting his parents, although he could continue to enjoy the proceeds himself. Notice that the Lord interprets the command to honor our parents in a practical sense. For children it means to obey them (Eph 6:1-3) and for adults to support them. Our Lord condemns this common practice based on tradition since it completely defeats the purpose of the law. Commandments should rather be "Word of God." Verses 8 and 9 are from Isaiah 29:13 and follow the LXX where it differs from the Hebrew.

10-14. Defileth, i.e., makes him profane. The term is a technical one. The idea in Judaism was that to eat the wrong sort of food deprived a man of holiness and ultimately, therefore, of acceptance with God. The Jewish leaders showed offense at this deliberate contradiction of their own teaching. In two vivid pictures (vss. 13-14) our Lord tells His disciples that the Pharisees have no real mission from God and are themselves blind. They and all that their religion stood for would be destroyed.

15-20. Peter, acting on behalf of the others, asks for an explanation of the saying which had given such offense. Our

The Visit to Tyre, Sidon, and Caesarea Philippi

16 And Jesus said, Are ye also yet without understanding?

17 Do not ye yet understand, that whatsoever entereth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught?

18 But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man.

19 For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies:

20 These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

21 ¶Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon.

22 And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me. O Lord, thou son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.

23 But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us.

24 But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

25 Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me.

26 But he answered and said, It is not

Lord proceeds to elaborate the teaching for their benefit. Draught (Gr aphedrōn) means literally "latrine." They defile. The "they" is emphatic. Evil thoughts, i.e., evil schemes. Blasphemies, not only blasphemy in the modern, narrow sense of the word, but also criticism or libel of others.

e. The healing of the Canaanitish woman's daughter. 15:21-28.

21-25. The second withdrawal of Jesus followed John's death and further rejection by the religious leadership of Israel. Thus, Jesus actually left the country and went into parts of Tyre and Sidon leaving Herod's jurisdiction to retire to Phoenicia for a time of seclusion, which was interrupted by the woman of Canaan (lit., Canaanitish woman). Mark 7:26 calls her a Syro-Phoenician woman. The word translated "coasts" (Gr meros) means districts. This is the only known occasion during His ministry that our Lord went outside the boundaries of Palestine. The woman was a Gentile and descended from the Canaanites who inhabited Syria and Palestine before the conquest of the latter by Joshua.

26-28. By children the Lord means Jews, and by dogs, Gentiles. Our Lord's attitude was intended to test the woman's meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs.

27 And she said, Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table.

28 Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

29 ¶And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there.

30 And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them:

31 Inasmuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel.

32 ¶Then Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat: and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.

33 And his disciples say unto him, Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude?

34 And Jesus saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven, and a few little fishes.

35 And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground.

36 And he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude.

37 And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets full.

38 And they that did eat were four thousand men, beside women and children.

39 And he sent away the multitude, and took ship, and came into the coasts of Măg'da-la.

CHAPTER 16

THE Pharisees also with the Săd'ducees came, and tempting desired him that he would shew them a sign from heaven.

2 He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather: for the sky is red.

3 And in the morning, It will be foul weather to day: for the sky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?

4 A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the faith, which was rewarded by a miraculous healing. Jesus is not angry with her, but is trying to teach the disciples a valuable lesson. Having been rejected by the Jews, He now turns to the Gentiles, a move that will later shock some of His followers. He had healed Gentiles earlier, but here in Phoenicia He does not want to give the impression that he has totally abandoned Israel. The term used for "dogs" (Gr kynarion) means little dogs (pets), not wild, scavenging beasts. She replied that such dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table. She knew what could be hers, even as a Gentile and, thus she became an illustration of millions of Gentiles who would later be blessed by the Messiah of Israel. Great is thy faith. Jesus again commends Gentile belief (cf. 8:10).

f. The feeding of the four thousand. 15:29-39.

29-38. See also Mark 7:31-8:10. The supposition that this is a confused duplicate account of the feeding of the five thousand must be rejected. Both Matthew and Mark include the account of the two events and do so in such a way as to indicate that they quite clearly thought of them as two separate miracles. The incident evidently took place on the southeast shore of Galilee, near the gentile Decapolis. Therefore, many Gentiles seem to be among His listeners who glorified the God of Israel. This feeding took place after the crowd had been with Him for three days and were fed with Seven loaves and a few little fishes which were then distributed in a manner similar to the other feeding. This time seven baskets full remained. These baskets (Gr spyris) were much larger than those in 14:20.

39. The lesson to the disciples seems obvious: What you accomplish among the Jews will be duplicated among the Gentiles. Magdala (vs. 39) is Magadan, perhaps a suburb of Tiberias. In 16:9-10 Jesus refers to both feedings as separate events, even referring to the different numbers and using the different words for the baskets.

g. The Pharisees and Sadducees rebuked. 16:1-12.

16:1-12. The unbelieving leaders came seeking a sign from heaven, i.e., an outward miraculous manifestation, of which Jesus had already given many. Notice that miracles alone never save anyone. They only serve to authenticate and call attention to the message, which must be believed in order for salvation to be experienced in the soul. Instead of another miracle, He points them to the signs of the times, eschatologically related to the sky and His second coming. He referred to their ability to discern the coming weather by the sky and implied that they should have been able to discern the time of His coming also. The adulterous generation is used here in a spiritual sense, unfaithful to God, though the two often interrelate. The sign of the prophet Jonah is one of Jesus' favorites for it relates to His resurrection (see 12:38-40; Jn 2:18-22). This sign gives hope to sign of the prophet Jonas. And he left them, and departed.

MATTHEW 16:5

5 ¶And when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sād'du-ceeds.

7 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread.

8 Which when Jesus perceived, he said unto them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread?

9 Do ye not yet understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

10 Neither the seven loaves of the four thousand, and how many baskets ye took up?

11 How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sād'du-ceeds?

12 Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sād'du-ceeds.

13 ¶When Jesus came into the coasts of Cæs-a-re'a Phī-lip'pī, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

14 And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, E-lī'as; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15 He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

16 And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

17 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bār-jō'na: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

18 And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

the believer but is an indication of judgment for the unbeliever, who will be judged by the risen Christ at His second coming.

h. Peter's confession. 16:13-28.

13-17. See Mark 8:27-33; Luke 9:18-21. The coasts of Caesarea Philippi. This was a town in the extreme northeast of Galilee, near the source of the Jordan. Coasts (Gr meros) means districts. Verse 14 shows that public opinion placed our Lord on the highest human pedestal by identifying Him with one of the national heroes of the past, i.e., John the Baptist. Herod himself was a victim of this particular superstition (see 14:2). From 21:26 we know that He was held in high esteem as a prophet by the people. The coming of Elijah (Elias) was prophesied by Malachi (Mal 4:5) and the Jews often linked the name of Jeremias with the prophet foretold in Deuteronomy 18:15. Thou art the Christ. Simon Peter recognized and acknowledged openly our Lord's deity. He may have been speaking for all the disciples. Verse 20 suggests that it was a conviction which they all now shared. Peter further used the Greek definite article "the" to designate that Jesus was the Son of the living God.

18. Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church. The Greek word used for "rock" (Gr petra) is played against the name Peter (Gr petros) in the original. The Roman Catholic interpretation of this passage is that Peter was the foundation stone of the church, that he had a primacy among the apostles, that he became Bishop of Rome, and that his primacy was passed on to his successors, the popes. The verse will scarcely bear the first of these propositions and certainly none of the others. Protestant interpreters, with some patristic support (Chrysostom, Justin Martyr, and Augustine), have tended to identify the rock with Peter's faith or confession, or with our Lord Himself. The most straightforward interpretation seems to be that Peter is meant by the rock, but that he is not the exclusive foundation (J. Broadus). For the twelvefold foundation of the church see Ephesians 2:20; Revelation 21:14. This view seems borne out by the fact that the same words are spoken to all the disciples in Matthew 18:18 as are spoken to Simon Peter in 16:19. Therefore, the rock or foundation of the church is the confession (ultimately, the doctrine) of the apostles, which became normative for the true church.

The word here translated church (Gr ekklēsia) means literally "a chosen or called-out assembly." Thus the use of the word as a technical term for an assembly or group of believers in Christ was quite natural. It is not viewed as an external organization, denomination, or hierarchical system. The New Testament church, therefore, is a local, autonomous congregation or assembly of believers which is a "church" in and of itself. This is the first occurrence of the word in the New Testament and probably is used in prophetic anticipation. Jesus' prediction, I will build could be translated, "I shall continue to build" (Greek progressive future, see B. Chapman, New Testament Greek Notebook, p. 68). Since the commission in Matthew 10 sent the apostles only to the "house of Israel," and no further commission was given until chapter 28, there was no worldwide task for the disciples until the physical manifestation of the church at Pentecost. The same word was used in the LXX to translate "congregation" (Heb kahal) again emphasizing the local independent function of both a synagogue and a church.

Jesus promised that the gates of hell shall not prevail against the church (assembly). Some have viewed this as the inability of hell to overpower the church and see the church as being on the defensive against Satan. However, the phrase "shall not prevail" may be understood as meaning, "shall not stand against." The imagery would then picture the church as being on the attack against the gates of hell. Here hell (Gr hadēs) probably represents the kingdom of Satan, not just death and the grave. While Jesus' resurrection certainly will overcome the sting of death, it will also enable His church to aggressively and offensively attack the gates of hell (cf. usage as Satan's kingdom in Job 38:17; Isa 38:10; Ps 107:18) by snatching out victims from darkness into His glorious kingdom of light. One does not attack with gates; he defends. It is the church which is on the attack here and hell is on the defensive.

19-20. Our Lord then promised to Peter and the other apostles the keys of the kingdom. This means that Peter would have the right to enter the kingdom himself, would have general authority therein, symbolized by the possession of the keys, and preaching the gospel would be the means of opening the kingdom of heaven to all believers and shutting it against unbelievers. The book of Acts shows us this process at work. By his sermon on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:14-40), Peter opened the door of the kingdom for the first time. The expressions bind and loose were common in Jewish legal phraseology meaning to declare forbidden or to declare allowed. Peter and the other disciples (see 18:18) were to continue on earth the work of Christ in preaching the gospel and declaring God's will to men, and were armed with the same authority as He Himself possessed. Christ in heaven ratifies what is done in His name and in obedience to His word on earth. There is also a definite reference here to the binding and loosing of church discipline which will be further explained in chapter 18. The apostles do not usurp Christ's lordship and authority over individual believers and their eternal destiny, but they do exercise the authority to discipline and, if necessary, excommunicate disobedient church members. They should tell no man. The revelation was to remain the property of the disciples until after the Lord's resurrection.

21. Jesus then announced His coming rejection and death at Jerusalem. All this would be necessary in order to initiate the church as the spiritual form of the kingdom on earth. From that time forth. He would openly reveal His coming rejection since the disciples' faith was now established enough to bear it. Thus, from this point onward, our Lord's ministry takes on a somewhat different complexion as He seeks to prepare His followers for the suffering which awaited Him and which would so disappoint their hopes. Elders, i.e., the religious leaders. The word probably denotes members of the Sanhedrin. The words killed and rise again the third day clearly indicate the divine Messiah's awareness of His earthly mission and destiny. To predict His 19 And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

20 Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

21 ¶From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24 Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

25 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.

26 For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

27 For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

28 Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

CHAPTER 17

AND after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart,

2 And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

3 And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and E-li'as talking with him.

4 Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for E-li'as.

5 While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

6 And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

9 ¶ And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead.

10 And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that E-li'as must first come?

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, E-li'as truly shall first come, and restore all things.

12 But I say unto you, That E-li'as is death in view of His rejection was human, but to predict a supernatural resurrection could only be done by the God-man!

22-28. Be it far from thee. Notice the marginal readings of both AV and RV. The sentence seems to mean literally "Have mercy on yourself." Peter's instantaneous reaction to our Lord's new teaching shows how foreign to their way of thinking was this conception of His suffering. Satan. The Lord recognized in Peter's words a repetition of the temptations to avoid the cross which He had undergone in the wilderness. The word translated offense (Gr skandalon) means a trap or snare. Savorest (Gr phroneō) is very difficult to translate. It occurs in Romans 8:5 and Philippians 2:5, meaning to adopt and maintain an attitude of mind upon which the life and actions are based. Deny himself, i.e., refuse his own claims upon himself. Take up. The meaning is "lift up." It is a stronger word than that used in 10:38, and implies a lifting of the cross on high, so that all may see it. This is the strongest statement in the New Testament about the disciple's need to crucify himself to the claims of Christ's lordship over him. Lose his own soul means to lose one's life and perish. Shall reward every man according to his works. The words are adopted from the LXX of Psalm 62:12 and Proverbs 24:12. This great fundamental moral principle of the Old Testament is made more explicit here by our Lord in explaining that it will find its fulfillment at His return. Verse 28 has caused much difficulty and needless misunderstanding. Its fulfillment may be looked for in the transfiguration which follows immediately, an occasion on which the Apostle Peter asserts that the three disciples saw Christ's coming (cf. II Pet 1:16ff.) and also in the Lord's resurrection and subsequent glory.

6. His manifestation: Special transfiguration. 17:1-27.

17:1-9. See Mark 9:2-13; Luke 9:28-36. Peter, James and John represent the "inner circle" of leadership among the disciples (cf. Lk 8:51; Mt 26:37) and serve here as ample witnesses according to Mosaic law. They went into a high mountain apart, i.e., privately, by themselves. Tradition claims this took place at Mount Tabor, but a more probable location would be Mount Hermon, near Caesarea Philippi. Jesus was transfigured before them. The verb (Gr metamorphōō) indicates a transformation of essential form, proceeding from within. See Romans 12:2 and II Corinthians 3:18 where it is used of the spiritual transformation of the believer's new nature. The witness of Peter in II Peter 1:17-18 verifies the testimony that this was a real experience, not a vision. In His transfiguration, Jesus, as the personal manifestation of God's glory (cf. Jn 1:14, "we beheld his glory, even as the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth") reveals that glory temporarily to these key disciples. Later, in Revelation 1, His glorified resurrection form is permanently transfigured. Moses and Elijah were the representatives respectively of the law and the prophets (see Jude 9, where Moses' resurrection is implied, and II Kings 2:11 for the account of Elijah's being taken up into heaven). It is good for us to be here. Peter wished to retain the situation and so suggests building tabernacles or tents. A voice, i.e., the Father's voice (for the words spoken cf. 3:17). God the Father clearly indicated that Christ's authority completely superseded that of the Old Testament law and prophets. The warning, tell . . . no man, is to avoid a premature popular, but misdirected, awakening in His favor (cf. Jn 6:14-15).

10-14. The point of the disciples' question in verse 10 seems to be that, supposing that Jesus' resurrection meant the end of the world and the inauguration of the kingdom, they thought it would be necessary for Elijah, of whom they had been reminded by seeing him on the mountain, to come and appear publicly first. Our Lord's answer is a quotation from Malachi 4:5-6, come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them.

13 Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

14 ¶And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying,

15 Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatick, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

16 And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

17 Then Jesus answered and said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

18 And Jesus rebuked the devil; and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

19 Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out?

20 And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

21 Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.

22 ¶And while they abode in Galilee, Jesus said unto them, The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men:

23 And they shall kill him, and the third day he shall be raised again. And they were exceeding sorry.

24 ¶And when they were come to Capernaum, they that received tribute money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your master pay tribute?

25 He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers?

26 Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free.

27 Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money: that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

where the coming of Elijah was prophesied. (For the meaning of restore all things see Luke 1:17). He then repeats what He has told them already, i.e., that the prophecy foretelling the coming of Elijah was fulfilled in John the Baptist (see 11:14). He does not name him directly but recalls his suffering and compares with it the treatment which will be accorded to Himself (vs. 12). (On the significance of the transfiguration, see E. Harrison, A Short Life of Christ, pp. 150-164.)

15-23. The return down the mountain brought Jesus upon His powerless disciples who were attempting to cure a lunatic. The RV has "epileptic." Sore vexed, i.e., very ill. How long shall I suffer you? i.e., "can I endure you?" Unbelief. A better reading is "little faith," as in RV. As a grain of mustard seed. This seems to mean that faith, once implanted in the heart, grows naturally like a living organism. This mountain, i.e., any seemingly impossible obstacle or difficulty that stands in the Christian's way. Verse 21 is omitted by the more reliable texts. It seems to have been interpolated from Mark 9:29. The purpose of this incident is obvious. Since Christ alone is the glorified Saviour, the disciples' ability to work depends totally upon His empowerment. Bring him . . . to me clearly emphasizes this. It is never adequate to bring people to ourselves for our ideas; the true Christian evangelist must bring them to Jesus Himself. Christ emerges from this scene as totally dominant and the disciples as completely dependent upon Him, even to the point of being exceeding sorry or "greatly distressed" by His further announcement of His coming death, which so shocked them His prediction of His resurrection did not even register with their minds.

a. Excursus: Paying the temple tax. 17:24-27.

24-27. Jesus, as the glorified Son of God is greater than demons and also the Temple itself. The two incidents following the transfiguration clearly reassert His supremacy. Tribute money (lit., two drachmae) a technical term for the tax of half a shekel, which every Jew over twenty was expected to contribute to the upkeep of the Temple. The amount was about fifteen or eighteen pence. Prevented, used here with its seventeenth-century meaning of "anticipated." Of strangers. It was the subject races which were taxed first and most heavily. The children, i.e., the king's own race, were free. The Lord Jesus Christ was the Lord and owner of the Temple, and therefore it was not for Him to pay the tax. Action based on this fact might obviously be misunderstood, however, and under such circumstances our Lord would not give offense by seeming to be a lawbreaker. But note that in any matter where a fundamental principle was at stake, our Lord did not tone down His message in order not to offend (cf. 15:10-14). A piece of money, the silver tetradrachma, equivalent to the shekel and therefore the exact amount of the tax for two persons (cf. Atkinson, p. 794).

7. His mercy: Sanctification of forgiveness. 18:1-35.

a. Personal forgiveness. 18:1-14.

See Mark 9:33-37; Luke 9:46-48. This chapter forms Jesus' longest recorded statement regarding the principle of forgiveness. The act of forgiving one who has wronged us is one of the most responsible and spiritual activities in our lives and must be repeated continually throughout one's life. This serves as the last great discourse before the journey to Jerusalem and is given in response to the disciples' jealousy of one another and to prepare them for the crucifixion, an act they will have to learn to

CHAPTER 18

AT the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?

2 And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them,

3 And said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

4 Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

5 And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me.

6 But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

7 ¶ Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!

forgive. Mark 9:33 indicates the message was given "in a house," probably Peter's.

18:1-4. The dispute over Who is the greatest was settled by Jesus' emphasis that it was the one who was willing to forgive the most! Thereby, He cut down the basic human motivation of pride in order to be the greatest by calling for the "greatest" to be the one most willing to forgive, which is contrary to proud human nature. Atkinson (p. 794) suggests that the little child may have been a member of Peter's family. Be converted means a "turning" (Gr strepho) of one's whole life and person toward God. This is the true biblical picture of conversion. It is far more than mental acknowledgment of the truth or intellectual assent to certain ideas. He now speaks generically of man's need to turn to Him and of the evidence of that turning in an attitude of humility. Thus, He challenges the disciples' selfishness by making them examine the reality of their own conversion. To become as little children means to be born again (converted) as a newborn spiritual child, characterized by faith and humility.

5-7. Thus, the little child represents a new convert or young believer. To receive such a fellow believer is to welcome Christ Himself. Therefore, the basis of true Christian fellowship is established in Christ Himself. There can be no real fellowship with those who deny Him and have not been converted, but with any true believer fellowship may exist. This, of course, does not overlook the discipline of an errant believer. Offenses are viewed as a reality which must be accepted in the present world, but woe (the prophetic condemnation to death) to the one who is the source of the offense. Jesus very definitely took this matter seriously. A millstone is literally an "ass-stone," or a large grinding stone turned by an ass.

The Transfiguration

8 Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire.

9 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire.

10 ¶Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

11 For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

12 How think ye? if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

13 And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish.

8-14. Verses 8-9 repeat the same ideas as in the Sermon on the Mount (see note on 5:29-30). The hand, eye, foot are not the real source of temptation nor are they the real cause of offending others. Just as temptation arises from within, so does offending others and being offended. It should be noted that this message is dealing with both aspects of the problem. We are most likely to offend others when we are selfish and proud. At the same time, however, we are also most likely to be offended when we are selfish and proud. The reference to their angels (vs. 10) supports the idea of individual guardian angels for believers (not all children, in general) (see also Heb 1:14). Verse 11, while legitimate in Luke 19:10, seems to be inserted here, since the more reliable texts omit it. The truth of the statement, however, is reinforced throughout Scripture. Salvation is not just a privilege to be enjoyed by the elect, but is also to be shared with the lost that they too may be saved. Thus, it is not the Father's will . . . that any of these "little ones" should perish. The immediate context in Matthew relates "little ones" to believers but the cross reference in Luke 15:3-7 clearly refers to lost sheep. Thus, we may conclude that it is not the ultimate wish (or desire) of God that anyone perish. While God permits man to perish in his unbelief, He does not reprobate him to such condemnation against his will. Rather, all of heaven rejoiceth over every lost sheep which is saved. The contrast of the imminent danger to the lost sheep and the safety of those in the fold (of faith) clearly expresses where the majority of our attention and concentration should be in the ministry and activity of the church as we fulfill our commission to the world.

b. Church discipline. 18:15-35.

The setting of these verses fits into the context of church discipline. If a church member offends someone or refuses to forgive someone, what must be done? Three basic views have been given here for the synagogue or the church (Gr ekklesia). In either case the action is the same. The responsibility of action is threefold: (1) personal, "go and tell him"; (2) "two or three witnesses"; (3) corporate, "tell it to the church."

15-18. Tell him his fault means to honestly express the point of offense. This should not be done in vindictive anger, but it must be done in straightforward honesty. To fail to speak up is to be dishonest and will lead to harboring continued bitterness. The last phrase of verse 16 is taken from Deuteronomy 19:15, substantially from the LXX. This just and sensible principle of the Mosaic law is thus brought over by our Lord into the New Testament and established for the advantage of the Christian church. Neglect, better, "refuse," as a heathen man and a publican, i.e., as those who would not be admitted into the church. The obstinate sinner is to be cut off, at least temporarily, from Christian fellowship. Examples of this are to be found in I Corinthians 5:4-5 and I Timothy 1:20. The promise is here addressed to all the disciples.

19-20. Verse 19 is one of the great Gospel promises with regard to prayer. But note the close connection of the verse with those that precede and that which follows. The promise is specifically given to a gathering of disciples with Christ in the midst (vs. 20), called to discipline an erring brother (vs. 17). Their authority to do this is restated (vs. 18) and the promise can be claimed because they are acting on behalf of the Father, in the name of the Son. In my name, i.e., claiming and using My authority. Notice that the church in view here is operating in the future, in Christ's absence but by His authority.

21-22. All this teaching on forgiveness seemed overwhelming to the disciples, thus prompting Peter's question: Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me? Peter wrongly assumed that seven times were ample to forgive anyone. Jesus responded that 15 ¶Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

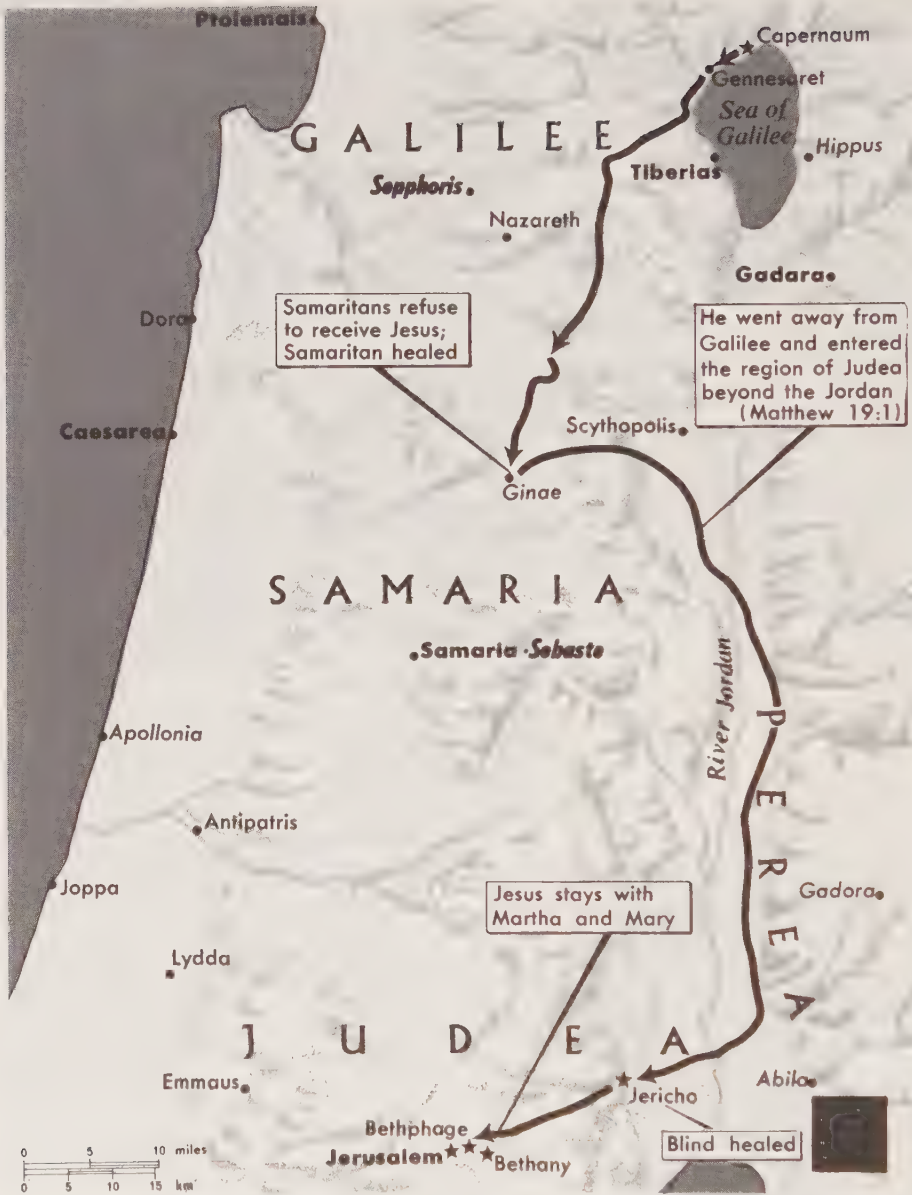

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican.

18 Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

19 Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

20 For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.

21 ¶Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?

Jesus' Last Journey to Jerusalem

22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven.

23 ¶Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents.

25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

seven was not only insufficient but that one should forgive seventy times seven, in other words, unlimited forgiveness must characterize the true disciple, not retaliatory listing of others' offenses in an attitude of limited forgiveness.

23-27. The Parable of the Unforgiving Servant (vss. 23-25) was used by Jesus to reinforce the power and importance of the principle of forgiveness. A certain king represents God, the sovereign Father (cf. vs. 35), to whom the debt is owed. The one who owed him is a servant or satrap who had access to the king's money, and represents the individual sinner. Ten thousand talents was an insurmountable debt equivalent to millions of dollars in our society. It represents the debt of sin which the sinner cannot possibly pay by himself. The command that he be sold . . . and payment to be made indicates his being 26 The servant therefore fell down, and worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

27 Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellowservants, which owed him an hundred pence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

29 And his fellowservant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

30 And he would not: but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 So when his fellowservants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me:

33 Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellowservant, even as I had pity on thee?

34 And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him.

35 So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

CHAPTER 19

AND it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judæa beyond Jordan;

2 And great multitudes followed him; and he healed them there.

3 ¶The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?

4 And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female.

5 And said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh?

6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

placed in a debtor's prison. However, an entire lifetime of service could never repay such a debt. The interpreter must stick to the main point of the parable and not be sidetracked by its minor details. The compassion of the king releases him and forgives (cancels) the debt. The picture illustrates God's total forgiveness when dealing with our sins at the point of salvation. The debt has been paid by Christ and we are set free from it forever!

28-35. The contrast in verse 28, where the same servant is unwilling to forgive his fellow servant a debt of a hundred pence (about ten dollars) is deliberately presented as a hideous hypothetical situation. As unbelievable as this action would be, that is how unbelievable it would be for a Christian disciple, who has been forgiven a lifetime of sin, to be unforgiving of others. In the story, such an unforgiving servant is called a wicked servant because no true believer would do such. The unforgiving servant is not one who was saved and then lost his salvation. The story is merely hypothetical; no one forgiven a debt of millions would behave this way, therefore, the intention of the parable is to challenge the genuineness of the disciples' conversion. A truly saved man would never behave like the man in the story, who was delivered to the tormentors (Gr basanistês, meaning "torturers" or "jailers"). This is certainly not a reference to purgatory. One behaving in this manner falls into the condemnation of the lost. The searching threat of verse 35 does not mean that a true believer will be lost, but if he claims to be born of God, he will act like a born-again person. True forgiveness "from the heart" of a regenerate man is one of the true signs of genuine salvation and conversion (cf. Eph 4:32). Saved people are both forgiven and forgiving. Unforgiving people prove that they have never been born of God.

B. In Judæa. 19:1-27:66.

1. His presentation as King. 19:1-25:46.

a. His journey to Jerusalem. 19:1-20:34.

(1). Jesus' teaching on divorce 19:1-12.

19:1-2. Verse 1 of chapter 19 indicates the close of another division of the gospel (see 7:28). With verse 2 it describes very briefly a journey from Galilee into the district of Judæa beyond Jordan (i.e., Peraea) which must have taken considerable time and into which the events of Luke 19:51-18:34 must largely be fitted. The teaching and incidents which follow in 9:3-20:34 also took place during the stay in Peraea. During the various movements on the way to Jerusalem, Matthew presents a varied series of events: Jesus' teaching on divorce, the confrontation with the rich young ruler, a parable, and a miracle.

3-6. The Pharisees came tempting him with a difficult question. They wanted to test His wisdom with one of the most controversial questions of their day and Jesus proved far superior to their expectations. Is it lawful they asked to challenge His interpretation of Mosaic law in Deuteronomy 24:1-5, where a "bill of divorcement" was allowed. The more strict school of Shammai held that divorce was lawful only upon a wife's shameful conduct; whereas, the more liberal school of Hillel gave the widest possible allowances for divorce. Kent (p. 67) is correct when he explains: "Thus Jesus was being asked, 'Do you agree with the most prevalent interpretation?' (Hillel's)." By asking Have ye not read, Jesus refers them back to God's original purpose in creation that they be one flesh. The passage in Genesis 2:24 indicates that being one flesh is one "person," and is not to be limited to sexual union. The Bible clearly indicates that sexual union does not itself constitute marriage, which is fundamentally a covenantal agreement between two partners for life (cf. Prov 2:17; Mal 2:14, "wife of thy covenant").

7 They say unto him, Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?

8 He saith unto them, Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.

9 And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery; and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery.

10 ¶His disciples say unto him, If the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry.

11 But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given.

12 For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

13 ¶Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them.

14 But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

15 And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

16 ¶And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?

17 And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

7-9. The question Why did Moses then command . . . ? revealed the misuse of Deuteronomy 24 by the Jews of Jesus' day. Moses did not command, he permitted divorce. God had instituted marriage in the Garden of Eden. He is not the Author of divorce; man is its originator. However, to protect the Hebrew woman from being taken advantage of by a verbal divorce, Moses commanded that it be done with a writing of divorcement, i.e., official written contract, permitting remarriage. The Jews tended to take this as an excuse or license to get divorced whenever they pleased. The original provision was for the protection of the wife from an evil husband, not an authorization for him to divorce her at will. Therefore, Jesus gave one exception to the no-divorce intention of God, for fornication (Gr porneia) "sexual sins," not to be limited to premarital sex only, but it includes all types of sexual sin: adultery, homosexuality, bestiality, etc. Among the Jews only the male could divorce, so Mark 10:12 reverses the statement for His gentile audience.

10-12. Since divorce, on any grounds, was common in those days (cf. rabbinical literature) the disciples felt it is not good to marry. The severity of Jesus' statement was in total contrast to the society of that day and represented the true intention of God. While divorce appears to be allowed in both Testaments (cf. Deut 24:1-5; I Cor 7:15, 27-28) it is never encouraged because it always violates God's original intention in marriage. Jesus' reply, All men cannot receive this saying, indicates that some are called to be married and remain married; others (who cannot receive this) are called to be single (never to marry). If God calls you to be married, He will enable you to remain married. On the other hand, some are called to be single and never marry for the kingdom of heaven's sake. A eunuch was a person who never married and often served as a royal official. Some were so born, due to physical or mental deficiency; some were made eunuchs of men, either by choice or by force; some had deliberately chosen to be single for the purpose of serving God without being tied to regular family responsibilities (e.g., Origen). Unfortunately the early church began to take this statement to mean that it was more spiritual to be single than to be married, and eventually celibacy became legislation within the Roman Catholic Church. The single life is not to be forced on anyone. Those who are called to it are able to receive it (i.e., accept) gladly.

(2). The rich young ruler. 19:13-30

13-17. Much assimilation from the parallel accounts in Mark 10:17-31 and Luke 18:18-30 has been done in some texts: see ASV for a better rendition of Matthew's original. The little children, for whom Jesus cared so much, were evidently of sufficient age to respond to Him (not infants) and He bade them come unto me revealing that, while all childhood professions may not be genuine, a child may follow Christ. By contrast to their simple obedience came the complex young rich man with all of his "hangups," calling Jesus Good Master, which the Saviour challenged, not as a denial of His deity, but to impress upon this seeker the seriousness of the implication. "Are you sure you really mean that?" would be a modern paraphrase. The young man's question, What good thing shall I do? implies that he wanted to perform some work that might gain him eternal life (salvation). Jesus' challenge was intended to elevate his concept of "good." The glib comment "good master" is followed by a request for something "good" that he may do to gain heaven. Jesus' concept of good was that which is divine. Therefore, only an act of God could grant eternal life. The Master's reply, If thou wilt enter into life, implies that the young man was still on the outside of such life.

The idea is this, if you want to gain eternal life, you must first of all enter it! The imperative keep the commandments (vs. 17) was intended to hit his point of pride, i.e. self-righteousness. Jesus did not believe that mere outward keeping of the commandments of the law brought anyone salvation. He had already told Nicodemus earlier that he must be born again (cf. Rom 3:20; Gal 2:16). Why, then, did He tell this young man to keep the commandments? The rest of the story reveals the answer. Jesus will go to great lengths now to show him that he has not kept the commandments and, therefore, is in need of God's grace.

18 He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness.

19 Honour thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

20 The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?

21 Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me.

22 But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

24 And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

25 When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

26 But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.

18-22. This list of commands in verse 18 centers on outward duties, rather than inward nature, which was the young man's real problem. He protested that he had kept these outward demands. Jesus then revealed his real weakness. The law had been summarized earlier by our Lord: "Love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart" and "love thy neighbor as thyself." Herein was the young man's real failure. His self-centered wealth and luxurious self-righteousness had blinded him to his real weakness. To expose this Jesus ordered, go and sell all your possessions and give to the poor . . . and come . . . follow me (vs. 21). This he would not do and went away sorrowful (grieved). What had Jesus done? Simply, He had shown him that he had not kept the commandments at all. He loved himself more than his neighbor (the poor) and he loved his possessions more than God (follow me). This passage teaches the seriousness of true discipleship, but it in no way teaches the average man that he must sell his possessions in order to be a Christian, or even a good one.

23-26. The further comment, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven shocked the disciples (note verse 25, "Who then can be saved?") who accepted the common notion of the day that the rich were blessed of God and therefore certainly saved. To correct that misunderstanding, Jesus explained the human difficulty for the rich to be converted. Hardly (Gr dyskolōs) implies with extreme difficulty, though not hopeless. The illustration of a camel going through the eye of a needle has been interpreted as a camel hair rope going through a needle; or an actual camel squeezing through a small gate, "the eye of a needle," next to the main gate at Jerusalem; or the absolute impossibility of a literal camel (Palestine's largest animal) literally going through a tiny needle's eye. The latter usage is most likely, following a similar Talmudic proverb about an elephant. Note, that they were not in Jerusalem at this time and that the first two suggestions, while very difficult, were within the realm of possibility, whereas the salvation of the rich is called humanly impossible (vs. 26). In fact, all human nature is incapable of saving itself and must rely on God's efficacious grace for that which is humanly impossible to become all things . . . possible with God. The salvation of a rich sinner is just as miraculous as the salvation of a poor sinner. Both are only possible with God!

27-30. Peter's response, we have forsaken all . . . what shall we have? was most ill-timed and certainly reflected a selfish motivation which would have to go. Nevertheless, Jesus answered the question. In the regeneration (Gr palinggenesia) refers to the renewed world of the future, the kingdom of righteousness which is yet to come: "the new heavens and the new earth." While the term is used for individual rebirth in Titus 3:5, here it looks to the future millennial kingdom where the apostles will judge Israel (literally). Forsaking earthly benefits will bring a hundredfold blessing and everlasting life. Yet, while rewards will be abundant, attitudes are still crucial and many who would be first shall be last and the last shall be first. On the believer's rewards see W. Kroll, It Will Be Worth It All.

27 ¶Then answered Peter and said unto him, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?

28 And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

29 And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

30 But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first.

CHAPTER 20

FOR the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his vineyard.

2 And when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

3 And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the marketplace.

4 And said unto them; Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way.

5 Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise.

6 And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

7 They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive.

8 So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

9 And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

10 But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny.

11 And when they had received it, they murmured against the goodman of the house, 12 Saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day.

13 But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny?

14 Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last, even as unto thee.

15 Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil, because I am good?

16 So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.

17 ¶And Jesus going up to Jerusalem took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them,

18 Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death,

19 And shall deliver him to the Gen-

(3). The Parable of the Laborers. 20:1-16.

20:1-14. This parable reinforced Jesus' teaching regarding true Christian service and riches. The householder is Christ Himself, the Master of the vineyard, the field of labor (service to the world through His church). Early in the morning, the first workers were hired at dawn. A penny (Gr denarion) represents a denarius, or a common day's wage. Others standing idle in the market place were not lazy but were in the common place of seeking employment. From this unemployed group, the householder hired additional workers at 9 A.M., noon, 3 P.M., and 5 P.M. The pay scale will be whatsoever is right, indicating Christ's justice to His laborers. When even (evening) was come, i.e., at the end of the day, every man was paid the same wage. Therefore, the first hired laborers murmured against the goodman. However, he reminded them that he had been just in paying them that for which they bargained. The statement, I will give unto this last even as unto thee, is Jesus' interpretation of the "last shall be first and the first last" (vs. 16). There is here, perhaps, a sweeping view of church history, in which those working in the last hour are promised equal blessing to His original disciples. Thus, Jesus warns against jealousy and impurity of motive in serving Him.

15-16. Verse 15 shows that, everything being of grace, God has the right to give or withhold at will. We must take care that this goodness of God does not provoke us to complaint. The point of verse 16 is that all Christians receive the same, the reward being everlasting life given on the ground of Christ's death for them. By earthly standards of judgment, expressed clearly in verses 11 and 12, such action is regarded as putting the last first and the first last. For many be called, but few chosen refers to the general call of the gospel and the efficacious call of grace. He speaks of the difficulty that many experience in believing and obeying the gospel because their minds are fixed on what they can get for themselves, whether in this world or the next.

(4). The coming suffering of Christ and His disciples. 20:17-28.

17-28. See Mark 10:32-34; Luke 18:31-34. The journey to Jerusalem is now resumed after the stay in Peraea. As the final events of His life draw nearer, our Lord again seeks to enlighten His disciples. Again they failed to understand, as is evidenced by the request of Zebedee's sons which immediately followed. But the fulfillment of these detailed predictions would strengthen their faith when the time came. Zebedee's children. From Matthew 4:21 we know that the two sons were the apostles tiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

20 ¶Then came to him the mother of Zēb'e-dee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

21 And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom.

22 But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.

23 And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

24 And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

25 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them.

26 But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister;

27 And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant:

28 Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

29 ¶And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him.

30 And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

31 And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

32 And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you?

33 They say unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened.

34 So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.

James and John. Grant, better, "command." The request and the indignation of the others which followed show that the disciples were still thinking in terms of the setting up of an earthly kingdom, in spite of the clear prediction of suffering and death which our Lord had just made. Some texts omit the last part of our Lord's question in verse 22 and it may have been inserted from the parallel passage in Mark 10:38. The same is true of verse 23. The cup and the baptism both refer, of course, to our Lord's suffering and death. To be ministered unto. It is not wrong to accept ministry. Christ accepted it. But it was not the purpose of His life and should not be the purpose of ours. His life (Gr psychē) literally "his soul." A ransom. This important phrase provides one of the few occasions on which the doctrine of substitutionary atonement is mentioned in the Synoptic Gospels. It implies a price paid for the deliverance of captives. The price lay in the necessity for His life to be laid down. His life thus became the cost of our redemption. Many does not necessarily restrict the extent of His death (as contrasted to "all"), but it does indicate that not all would receive His offer of salvation.

(5). The healing of the two blind men. 20:29-34.

29-34. See parallel accounts in Mark 10:46-52; Luke 18:35-43. The problems of harmonization prohibit any suggestion of "collusion" (Kent, p. 71). Luke places this event on the approach to the city, whereas, Mark and Matthew state as they departed from Jericho (vs. 29). In actuality there were two Jerichos. The Roman city lay about a mile east of Herod's winter headquarters (also called Jericho) where the wealthy friends of the Herodian family lived near the palace and fortress. The healing of the blind man, evidently, took place while Jesus was going from one city to the other. Luke's attention would be on the Herodian city, for his next recorded event, the calling of Zacchaeus, took place there. Two blind men are mentioned by Matthew, while the other synoptists refer to only the more prominent Bartimaeus. Rebuked by the crowd, they cry the louder, thou son of David, a messianic title, earlier avoided by Jesus in public, but now accepted as He approaches Jerusalem. The miracle of restoring their sight was so total that afterwards even they followed him. What a contrast! The rich young ruler rejects Him for worldly possessions; His own disciples argue over who will be the greatest; the laborers in the parable murmur. Yet, now two transformed blind beggars gladly follow Him! Of such is the kingdom of heaven!

b. His joyful (triumphal) entry. 21:1-46.

(1). The messianic arrival at Jerusalem. 21:1-11.

21:1-9. This event is traditionally known as the "Triumphal Entry," in which Jesus officially offers Himself to the nation of Israel as her long-awaited Messiah. However, in many ways it is far from a triumph, for the day ends in Jesus' public prediction of His rejection by His own people (see Mk 11:1-10; Lk 19:29-

CHAPTER 21

AND when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bēth'pha-gē, unto the mount of Olives, then sent Jesus two disciples,

2 Saying unto them, Go into the village over against you, and straightway

Jesus' Trial, Judgment and Crucifixion

ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt with her: loose them, and bring them unto me.

3 And if any man say ought unto you, ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them; and straightway he will send them.

4 All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying,

5 Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.

39; Jn 12:12-15). Bethphage was a village near Bethany, about a mile east of Jerusalem and apparently hidden from it by the summit of the Mount of Olives, which was the hill on the east of Jerusalem. The Lord hath need of them. The account of these closing events in our Lord's life shows that there were men and women in Jerusalem and its neighborhood who recognized Jesus as Lord. They may have become disciples during the earlier Jerusalem ministry described by John. The quotation in verse 5 is a combination of Isaiah 62:11 and Zechariah 9:9, taken substantially from the LXX. Thereon, that is, on the clothes. Hosanna is the transliteration of a Hebrew term meaning "please save," and occurs in II Samuel 14:4 and Psalm 118:25.

6 And the disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them.

7 And brought the ass, and the colt, and put on them their clothes, and they set him thereon.

8 And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strowed them in the way.

9 And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest.

10 ¶ And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this?

11 And the multitude said, This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

From the following verse of this Psalm the acclamation Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord is taken.

10-11. In verses 10 and 11 there is a contrast between the men of the city, who were ignorant of our Lord's identity, and the multitude who were able to answer their question. There were probably many Galileans in the latter who had come up for the feast and who already knew our Lord through His preaching and healing ministry in the north. In Jewish history and tradition the quoted Psalm was considered a messianic royal psalm and the riding of an ass's colt (not a horse) marked the official entry of the king (see A. Edersheim, Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, II, p. 736).

(2). The cleansing of the Temple. 21:12-17.

12-17. See Mark 11:15-19; Luke 19:45-47. A similar cleansing is recorded at the beginning of Jesus' ministry (cf. Jn 2:13-22), indicating His disdain for the corruption of organized religion which lacked purity of life and the power of God. Such a violent move was not to provoke a revolution, as such, but to bring about a true spiritual conviction. In light of the seriousness of what He had come to do, Jesus could not tolerate such gross perversion of the temple, i.e., the whole temple area on Mount Moriah including all the precincts and courts. Note that some texts omit the words of God. Money changers. Temple dues could be paid only in sacred coinage, and it was necessary to change one's money. The selling of doves was, of course, for purposes of sacrifice. This exchange became a source of extortion for the High Priest's family who personally controlled it. In reality, it amounted to a public bazaar. It is written. In his condemnation, our Lord quotes from the LXX of Isaiah 56:7 and Jeremiah 7:11. They were sore displeased. It was not just our Lord's popularity that angered them; the title "Son of David" which the children kept calling out implied messiahship. The cavils of the enemy were stilled, however, by the children's praise, as is suggested by the context of the psalm from which our Lord quotes (Ps 8:2). Bethany was a village on the eastern shoulder of the Mount of Olives, a little more than a mile east of Jerusalem. It was the home of Lazarus and his sisters.

(3). The cursing of the barren fig tree. 21:18-22.

18-22. See also Mark 11:12-14, 20-26. The fig tree fruit generally appears in February, followed by leaves, which are not formed until late spring. Thus, there should normally have been some fruit on the tree. The fig tree was often used as a symbol of the nation of Israel (cf. Hos 9:10; Joel 1:7) and while Jesus literally came upon a barren fig tree, He used the incident to fully illustrate Israel's desperate condition. The curse Let no fruit grow . . . for ever resulted in the almost immediate withering of the entire tree. While trees are non-moral, they, like all of nature, are subject to the word of Christ. The disciples . . . marveled at how this could happen so fast. Notice, that none of them questioned the morality of this incident, as have misguided modern commentators (cf. Kee, p. 636). Jesus told them how to do such astounding things: Have faith or absolute confidence in the power of God. The removal of the mountain may indicate

12 ¶ And Jesus went into the temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the moneychangers, and the seats of them that sold doves, 13 And said unto them, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves.

14 And the blind and the lame came to him in the temple; and he healed them.

15 And when the chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful things that he did, and the children crying in the temple, and saying, Hosanna to the son of David; they were sore displeased,

16 And said unto him, Hearst thou what these say? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea; have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?

17 And he left them, and went out of the city into Bethany; and he lodged there.

18 ¶ Now in the morning as he returned into the city, he hungered.

19 And when he saw a fig tree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the fig tree withered away.

20 And when the disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, How soon is the fig tree withered away!

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain,

MATTHEW 21:22

Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done.

22 And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

23 ¶And when he was come into the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and said, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?

24 And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in like wise will tell you by what authority I do these things.

25 The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him?

26 But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; for all hold John as a prophet.

27 And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And he said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

28 ¶But what think ye? A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work to day in my vineyard.

29 He answered and said, I will not; but afterward he repented, and went.

30 And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir; and went not.

31 Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They say unto him, The first. Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you.

32 For John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not; but the publicans and the harlots eliminating obstacles to giving the gospel to the Gentiles. Such appears to be the most likely meaning of the entire incident. Israel is the fruitless fig tree and the Gentiles are the mountain which shall be moved for God by the power of prayer.

(4). The question of authority. 21:23-46.

23. On Jesus' third day of successive visits to the temple (i.e., Herod's temple) His authority was challenged by the ever-threatened chief priests (Stagg, p. 201), including the High Priest, who was also president of the Sanhedrin, and elders, who were laymen or scribes and also served as members of the Jewish high court. In their own view, they were attempting to protect their laws and traditions against one who appeared to be a usurper who reinterpreted the law, rejected tradition and overthrew the moneychangers. Jesus had spoken with authority on matters which they considered their responsibility. Jesus did not challenge their right to question Him, but their hypocrisy and insincerity in such questioning.

They asked By what authority He had done these controversial things. Knowing that they would never recognize any authority but their own, He refused to answer them. Instead, He asked them about the authority of the baptism of John, which they had never officially sanctioned. To acknowledge that it was from heaven would be to condemn themselves for not receiving it and to claim it was of men (i.e., human origin) would upset the people. Their reply We cannot tell was begging the question and brought His clever response: Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

This incident forms the setting of the all-out attempt by the various religious authorities to expose and humiliate Jesus in chapter 22, which ends in their total frustration and embarrassment. The beauty and dynamics of these incidents reveal Jesus' mental prowess over the greatest minds of Israel. The divine Saviour is a genius, with no human peer. He can stump the Jews, mystify the Romans, and challenge the mind of any mortal man!

24-32. The Parable of the Two Sons (vss. 28-32) follows as an exposé of the hypocrisy of the religious leaders and as a vindication of John's ministry and the true work of God in general. The first son initially said I will not go (vs. 29), representing the immoral disobedience of the publicans and harlots who later repented under John and Jesus' preaching. Notice again, the connection between genuine repentance and changed action in verse 29 (repented, and went). No one who truly repents fails to show clear evidence of his inner heart change by his outward obedience. The second son promised to go but did not follow through with obedience. Jesus asked, "Which did the will of his father?" By answering, The first, the religious leaders had condemned themselves. This very effective teaching method is commonly used in the Bible as the juridical parable, whereby the answerer condemns himself by the obviously implied answer (e.g., Nathan's parable to David about the lamb; the Parable of the Good Samaritan, answering the prejudiced question, "Who is my neighbor?"). John had preached the way of righteousness (cf. II Pet 2:21) and the leaders had rejected him, even while claiming to be God's obedient servants. Thus, repentant sinners are more ready for the kingdom of God than disobedient religious leaders. The MSS support question on the variant reading in the Western Text must be decided in favor of the obvious intention of the parable (cf. discussion in Stagg, p. 202).

believed him: and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

33 ¶Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country:

34 And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it.

35 And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another.

36 Again, he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise.

37 But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son.

38 But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

39 And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

40 When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

41 They say unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons.

42 Jesus saith unto them, Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes?

43 Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

44 And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

45 And when the chief priests and Pharisees had heard his parables, they perceived that he spake of them.

46 But when they sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, because they took him for a prophet.

CHAPTER 22

AND Jesus answered and spake unto them again by parables, and said,

2 The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son.

3 And sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come.

33-39. Jesus quickly gave another parable, the Parable of the Wicked Husbandmen. Again, Jesus makes clear His divine authority by presenting Himself as the Son sent by the Father. The householder represents God the Father and the vineyard is Israel, a symbol of the theocracy which was familiar to the Jewish leaders (cf. Ps 80:8-16; Isa 5:1-7). The husbandmen were the priests and religious leaders and the far country is heaven. The anticipated fruit represents spiritual evidence of true conversion, which was to be the end result of the work of the husbandmen. Instead, the religion of Israel had degenerated into a formal system for the benefit of the priests who were now more concerned about perpetuating their own interests. The servants sent by the owner represent the Old Testament prophets who came to correct religious abuses in the nation and were also rejected by their contemporaries (though venerated by subsequent generations.) Last of all indicates that Jesus was God's final emissary to Israel. None has ever appeared since Him and none ever will until the Jews recognize Christ as their final Prophet and Messiah! The desire to kill the rightful heir of the Father had already been expressed by the Jewish leaders (cf. Jn 11:47-53), Jesus clearly foretold His coming rejection and death with the statement they . . . slew him.

40-43. Verse 40 represents the condemning question of the judicial parable, what will he do unto those husbandmen? Their reply again unwittingly condemned their own attitude of rejection toward Jesus. The other husbandmen will become the Gentiles (vs. 43). Jesus quoted Psalm 118:22-23 exactly from the LXX, relating His present rejection to His ultimate triumph (cf. Acts 4:11; I Pet 2:6-7 where the stone which the builders rejected is also quoted in relation to Christ). The Sanhedrinists represent the builders of Israel's religion, who rejected the real cornerstone of God, i.e., Jesus the true cornerstone of the foundation of the church, which will be that nation bringing forth . . . fruits (cf. I Peter 2:7-9 where the church is called a "holy nation"). Equating the vineyard with the kingdom of God, McClain (The Greatest of the Kingdom) notes that this clearly shows the kingdom as mediated to Israel through divinely appointed kings and now being transferred (mediated) to the church during the interval between Christ's advents.

44-46. The warning the kingdom of God shall be taken from you (vs. 43) was fulfilled at Pentecost when the "kingdom" was mediately transferred to the church (cf. Romans 9-11 which clearly promises Israel's restoration at the time of the Tribulation Period and the millennial kingdom). Yet within this warning of judgment, Jesus offers mercy by falling on this stone, i.e., falling upon Him in repentance and faith. But, His falling upon man in judgment will grind him to powder. Finally, the Pharisees and chief priests perceived that He was speaking of them and wanted to kill Him but feared the multitude because they looked on Him as a prophet.

c. His jealous critics. 22:1-23:39.

(1). The Parable of the Marriage Supper. 22:1-14.

22:1-3. In preparation for the major confrontation which was coming, Jesus gave the Parable of the Marriage Supper. While similar to the parable in Luke 14, this one differs in its occasion and details. Again, the kingdom of heaven must refer to the mediatorial aspect of the kingdom in the church age. The king is the Father and Christ is the son. The marriage must be taken in the full aspect of salvation, including union with Christ, culminating in glorification at the marriage supper which inaugurates the millennial age. Rejection of the invitation to

MATTHEW 22:4

4 Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage.

5 But they made light of it, and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise:

6 And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.

7 But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city.

8 Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy.

9 Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

10 So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

11 And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment:

12 And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless.

13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

14 For many are called, but few are chosen.

15 ¶ Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

16 And they sent out unto him their disciples with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man: for thou regardest not the person of men.

17 Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not?

18 But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites?

19 Shew me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny.

20 And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription?

21 They say unto him, Cæsar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's.

22 When they had heard these words, they marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

23 ¶ The same day came to him the Sad'du-ceeds, which say that there is no resurrection, and asked him,

24 Saying, Master, Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

25 Now there were with us seven attend constitutes disloyalty to the King, as well as discourtesy to the Son, and accounts for the severe treatment of the rebels (vss. 6-7) which included their city being burned up, an obvious reference to the coming destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70.

4-14. The bidden guests are the people of Israel, whereas those in the highways are the Gentiles. Both bad and good refer to moral and immoral sinners who alike need God's gracious invitation. The "highways" implies crossroads, as opposed to backroads. History has revealed the success of urban evangelization, which may be implied here. The man without the wedding garment came to the feast but had disregarded the propriety of the king's provision, since such garments were normally supplied by the host. The reference seems to be to the "robe of righteousness" which we must receive from the Lord in order to enter the marriage feast. Casting the unclad guest into outer darkness symbolizes the eternal judgment of the lost. Again the phrase is repeated, many are called, but few are chosen, to emphasize to the Jewish audience, who considered themselves to be God's chosen people, that the outward call of God was not sufficient for salvation apart from the efficacious call of grace.

(2). The Herodians: Question of tribute. 22:15-22.

15-22. See Mark 12:13-17; Luke 20:20-26. The Herodians were a party that favored the dynasty of Herod and stood for the Roman connection. They cared little or nothing for religion and normally were bitterly opposed by the Pharisees. The statements recorded in verse 16 were insincere and intended as hypocritical flattery. Their question was intended to place the Lord in a dilemma. If He said yes, He could be held up to the people as a traitor. If He said no, He could be denounced to the Roman authorities. Caesar, i.e., the Roman Emperor and head of the Roman state. Caesar was the family name of Julius Caesar, the first man who aspired to autocracy, and was taken over from him by his adopted son, afterwards the Emperor Augustus. It soon came to be regarded as a title. Penny (see 20:2). Render therefore unto Caesar. The Lord means that we are to give the civil magistrates all that is due to them, so long as it does not interfere with the honor due to God. Jesus had broken the Herodians' dilemma by making light of the ultimate significance of Caesar's claim. The idea is: "If the penny is his, let him have it!" Jesus' response, render unto God the things that are God's exposed the spiritual failure of the Herodians. In essence, Jesus made light of Caesar's temporal claim in favor of God's greater claim over men's lives.

(3). The Sadducees: Question of the Resurrection. 22:23-34.

23-29. The Sadducees made the next attempt to discredit Jesus and were even more severely humiliated. As the liberal party within first-century A.D. Judaism, they rejected belief in the supernatural, especially angels and the resurrection of the dead (see Paul's encounter in Acts 23:8ff.). Moses said is a reference to Deuteronomy 25:5, where the practice of levirate marriage called for an unmarried brother to take his widowed brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother:

26 Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh.

27 And last of all the woman died also.

28 Therefore in the resurrection whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her.

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God.

30 For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven.

31 But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, 32 I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.

33 And when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

34 ¶But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sād'du-ceeds to silence, they were gathered together.

35 Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, 36 Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

37 Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

38 This is the first and great commandment.

39 And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

40 On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

41 ¶While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, brother's wife to be his own (cf. Gen 38:8). This ancient practice was recognized by the Jews but rarely followed in those days. The absurd hypothetical case which follows represents another theological dilemma, this time attempting to discredit the legitimacy of the resurrection, which the Sadducees rejected. Thus, their question: whose wife shall she be? This extreme example must have been thought by them to be the ultimate proof of the foolishness of this doctrine. All seven brothers had been married to her, Therefore in the resurrection whose wife shall she be of the seven? They must have snickered as they asked such a ridiculous question, but the smile would soon be wiped off their faces by Jesus' reply. Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures. Jesus had extreme contempt for the Sadducees because they made light of the Bible and the power of God (i.e., His resurrection power, cf. Phil 3:10). This is His strongest recorded rebuke of this Jewish party.

42 Saying, What think ye of Christ?

30. Jesus then explained that in the resurrection men do not marry but are asexual as the angels. The infantile illustration of the Sadducees showed that they had no confidence in the power of a glorious resurrection to a new life. They thought that a resurrection would be the same kind of life as on earth and probably "spiritualized" their rejection of such a concept. To be as the angels means that resurrected believers will have a glorified non-mortal body (capable of neither reproduction nor destruction). The reference is not intended to imply that glorified men become angels nor that all earthly family relationships are lost in heaven. All resurrected (or raptured) believers will be in a state of perfect glorification and fellowship without any clannish prejudice.

31-34. Jesus further attacked the Sadducees' major belief in no resurrection at all, by quoting Exodus 3:6, a statement from the only part of the Old Testament which the Sadducees unquestioningly accepted. He related the eternal "I am" of God to the patriarchs (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) to demonstrate that they were of the living, or immortal (a fact unlikely to be denied by the Sadducees in a public dispute). God is not the God of the dead does not mean that He has no relationship to those who have departed; it means that the departed are not really dead, and are thus still responsible to the living God (cf. Heb 10:31). Thus the crowd was astonished and the Sadducees were put . . . to silence.

(4). The Pharisees: Question of the Law. 22:35-46.

35-40. Each group came with their most difficult question, representing their expertise and their point of departure from Jesus' doctrine. In other words, each came representing his own "hangups." Remember that each of these groups normally hated each other, but were united in their rejection of Christ. A lawyer, i.e., an expert expounder of the Old Testament law, equivalent to a Doctor of Theology today, asked Him, which is the great commandment in the law? The phrase "tempting him" implies that he was trying to draw Jesus into an argument regarding the Pharisees' extensive interpretations of over six hundred laws. Instead, Christ summarized the two tables of the law: i.e., (1) responsibility to God and (2) responsibility to man, by paraphrasing Deuteronomy 6:5 and Leviticus 19:18. Love the Lord thy God and love thy neighbor as thyself. The phrase with all thy heart, indicates the total being of a man in Hebrew thought and is part of the "shema," the Jewish confession of faith consisting of Deuteronomy 6:4-9; 11:13-21; Numbers 15:37-41. As the greatest commandment, it was of supreme importance and priority (cf. Filson, p. 237). No Pharisee could fault such an answer.

41-46. Jesus then counterquestioned the Pharisees: What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he? By asking them who is the Messiah, He gave them a clear opportunity to acknowledge whose son is he? They say unto him, The son of David.

MATTHEW 22:43

43 He saith unto them, How then doth David in spirit call him Lord, saying, 44 The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool?

45 If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?

46 And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions.

CHAPTER 23

THEN spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples,

2 Saying, The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat:

3 All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not.

4 For they bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

5 But all their works they do for to be seen of men: they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments,

6 And love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues,

7 And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.

8 But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.

9 And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven.

10 Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ.

11 But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant.

12 And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

13 ¶But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither

Him. Tasker (p. 213) states that Jesus "asked the all-important question 'What is your view of the Messiah?'" The question is similar to that earlier asked of the disciples in 16:15, where they gave the correct answer. The Pharisees' response, The son of David, was the common teaching of the scribes who accepted the Davidic lineage of the Messiah (cf. Mk 12:35). Jesus then called their attention to Psalm 110 which they already recognized as messianic (Edersheim, App IX). The psalm, whose Davidic authorship Jesus affirms, was given in the spirit, i.e., by inspiration of the Holy Spirit (so Atkinson, Hendricksen, Kent, Lenski) and in it David refers to the Messiah as his Lord, thus He is more than just his "son." Thus, the verse says: "The Lord (God) said to my Lord (the Messiah), Sit on my right hand, until I (God) put your enemies (the enemies of the Messiah) beneath your feet (the final messianic victory over all who oppose Christ)." Jesus totally stumped the Pharisees who wanted to believe in a human Messiah but not a divine Messiah. Thus, no one was able to answer him, i.e., defeat Him by question or debate and, therefore, no one dared ask Him any more questions. In one day Jesus had annihilated and humiliated the wisdom and craft of the leaders of each of Israel's religious organizations. "Hallelujah, what a Saviour!"

23:1-2. Jesus' final condemnation of the Pharisees fills the entire twenty-third chapter. This now represents His final and official rejection of them at the Temple, their very own stronghold of influence and security. Our Lord exposes the true hostility and hypocrisy of the religious leaders of Israel. See parallel passages in Mark 12:38-40; Luke 20:45-47. Sit in Moses' seat (Gr kathedra seat of authority) representing the synagogue chair which symbolized the origin and authority of their teaching.

3-6. Whatsoever they bid you observe, that . . . do. Bearing in mind the Scriptures that follow, it seems clear that this means all lawful things, i.e., it depends on the extent to which they do really sit in Moses' seat. It cannot include, for example, the traditions of the elders (see the condemnation of some of these in 15:1-20). But, as the verse goes on to show, the sin of the Pharisees lay more in their evil practices than in their teaching, for they themselves did not practice what they preached. They make broad their phylacteries. A phylactery was an amulet consisting of a strip of parchment on which was inscribed certain portions of the Pentateuch and which was rolled and placed in a small metal cylinder inside a square leather case. The cases were attached by the Jews with straps to their foreheads and to the back of their right hands, following a strictly literal interpretation of Deuteronomy 6:8-9. They were normally worn only during prayer, but the Pharisees appear to have worn them always and to have made them especially conspicuous. The borders of their garments were the fringes worn in obedience to Numbers 15:38-39. Uppermost rooms better, "chief place."

7-12. Rabbi is from a Hebrew word (lit., my teacher). Master, i.e., teacher. Call no man your father, i.e., in a spiritual sense. This appears to condemn the use of the word "Father" used in addressing the clergy in the unreformed churches, and to render of doubtful propriety the use of the word Padre (Italian for "Father") as a synonym for a chaplain. Masters, lit., guides or leaders, i.e., teachers. Servant means minister or attendant. Verses 10-12 are very typical of our Lord's teaching (cf. Lk 14:11; 18:14).

13-15. Ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men, i.e., you put stumblingblocks in the way of the sinner coming to repentance and conversion. Devour widows' houses, i.e., ex-suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

14 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation.

15 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.

16 Woe unto you, ye blind guides, which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor!

17 Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?

18 And, Whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty.

19 Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift?

20 Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon.

21 And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by him that dwelleth therein.

22 And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon.

23 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

24 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

25 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess.

26 Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

27 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.

28 Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

29 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous,

30 And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets.

31 Wherefore ye be witnesses unto tort money from the helpless and bring them into debt and bondage, while making an outward show of religion. The greater damnation, i.e., a more severe sentence. Proselyte. The Jews recognized two sorts of proselytes: those who agreed to the so-called seven precepts of Noah, and those who submitted to circumcision and became full Jews by religion.

16-22. These verses give illustration of the Pharisees' casuistry with regard to oaths. Temple (Gr naos actually the "sanctuary"). Our Lord teaches that all oaths are equally binding, and no man can expect to escape their consequences before God by making distinctions such as these.

23. Pay tithe of. A tithe or tenth of all produce was, by the Mosaic law, to be given for the use of the priests and Levites (e.g., Lev 27:30). Several species of mint grow in Palestine. Anise (Gr anethon) is better rendered "dill." It grew both wild and cultivated, its fruits being used for medicine. The seeds of cummin, which resemble caraways, were used as spice in seasoning. In such little matters the Pharisees were most careful to keep the law; yet they had completely overlooked its more important precepts.

24-26. Strain at a gnat, better "strain out a gnat." The Jews strained (Gr diylizo) wine before drinking it so as to avoid touching or swallowing anything unclean. But within they are full of extortion and excess. For "of" read "from." The Pharisees' living was obtained by extorting wrongfully from others.

27-33. Whited sepulchres. Since contact with a dead body rendered a person unclean according to the Mosaic law, it was the custom to paint graves white in order to make them conspicuous, and so to give the opportunity of avoiding contact with them. The children of them which killed literally "those who murdered." Generation or "offspring." The damnation of hell, i.e., being judged worthy of Gehenna.

yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets.

32 Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

33 Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

34 Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city:

35 That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zäch-a-rī'as son of Bār-a-chī'as, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar.

36 Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation.

37 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!

38 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

39 For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

CHAPTER 24

AND Jesus went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to shew him the buildings of the temple.

2 And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? verily I say unto you, There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

3 ¶And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

4 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you.

34-39. That upon you may come. The generation to which these words were addressed represented the culminating point of the whole sinful history of the nation, beginning with the murder of Abel by his brother Cain (see Gen 4; Heb 11:4) and going on to the murder of Zacharias and Barachias. In II Chronicles 24:20-21 we find the account of the murder of Zechariah son of Jehoiada "in the court of the house of the Lord." Since the books of Chronicles closed the Hebrew Old Testament canon, if this is the incident here referred to, the mention of Abel and Zacharias may be intended to cover the whole Old Testament revelation. The difficulty is that the Zechariah murdered in II Chronicles 24 was not the son of Berechiah. This Zechariah was the prophet (Zech 1:1). Though he lived after the exile and toward the close of Old Testament history there exists no tradition or record that he was murdered. Another possibility is that the Zechariah referred to here is identical with "Zechariah the son of Jeberchiah" mentioned in Isaiah 8:2, but nothing further seems to be known of him. This passage is also recorded by Luke (Lk 11:49-51) and was evidently understood by His listeners. Jesus' statement that they would not see me henceforth foreshadows His death, resurrection and ascension. Following His resurrection, Jesus only appeared to His followers and not to the world in general. From now on He must be received as personal Saviour by faith.

d. His judgment: Olivet Discourse. 24:1-25:46

24:1-4. This section forms Jesus' last major discourse and His most prophetic and apocalyptic message of the coming of the end of the world (or the present age). While the message includes a prediction of the imminent fall of Jerusalem, it also goes far beyond to point us to the distant future during which the "times of the Gentiles" will continue until the end of the Great Tribulation. Temple (Gr hieron) means the temple precincts. This prophecy of the very stones of the Temple being cast down was fulfilled in the time of the Emperor Julian who, in a futile attempt to rebuild the Temple, removed even the stones that had been left at the time of its destruction by Titus in A.D. 70. Jesus then left the city, crossed the Kidron Valley, and went east of Jerusalem to the mount of Olives from which He could look down on the temple courtyard. Here His disciples asked Him three questions: (1) when shall these things be? (i.e., the destruction of the Temple); (2) what shall be the sign of thy coming? (Gr parousia, technical term for the coming of the King); (3) and of the end of the world? (Gr aion, "the age"). Therefore, the entire discourse must be looked upon as answering all three of these questions. On the significance of the signs of the end of the age see Walvoord (pp. 179-195). He comments: "Premillenarians, accordingly, interpret the discourse as an accurate statement of end-time events, which will lead up to and climax in the second coming of Christ to set up His millennial kingdom on the earth" (p. 181).

Interpretation of the Olivet Discourse ranges widely from liberal (Allen, Moffat, McNeile, Kee, etc.) to conservative (among whom there is variation from amillennial, Hendricksen; to post-tribulational, Morgan; to pretribulational, Kent and Walvoord). Difference of interpretation may even be noted between Walvoord who views Matthew 24:4-14 as events of the Church Age leading up to the Tribulation Period and Kent (p. 85) who sees them as happening during the first part of the Tribulation Period. The key to interpreting this section rests in one's view of the "gospel of the kingdom" (vss. 13-14). Since Matthew has already shown in his selection of parables that the present form of the kingdom of heaven is the church, it seems more proper to view the events in these verses as relating to the entire Church Age and culminating especially at the end of it (thus John could say in general that he was a "companion in tribulation and in the kingdom," though he was still in the Church Age, of Revelation 1:9). Therefore, the "signs" of the end are general characteristics of the present age which shall be intensified as the age moves on to its conclusion. These are followed by more specific signs (vss. 15-26) of the Tribulation Period and the final return of Christ in judgment (vss. 27-31).

(1). Signs of the present age. 24:5-14.

5 For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

6 And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars; see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet.

7 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.

8 All these are the beginning of sorrows.

9 Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

10 And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.

11 And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many.

12 And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.

13 But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

15 When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand:)

16 Then let them which be in Judæa flee into the mountains:

17 Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take any thing out of his house:

5-14. Many shall come refers to the parade of false messiahs who have now spanned the centuries of church history and have led many astray into false religious cults. Wars and rumors of wars refer to peace being taken from the earth and the constant wars that have continually marked the "age of the Gentiles." Famines and pestilences. These events only mark the beginning of sorrows (Gr odin) "birthpangs." This is followed by martyrdom and the rise of false prophets and the abounding of iniquity. While Kent makes an interesting parallel of these events to the seven seals in Revelation, it still remains that the "gospel of the kingdom" refers to the missionary expansion of the church into all the world. It is hardly reasonable to hold that the Jews will spread the gospel throughout the entire world during the first half of the Tribulation Period of three and a half years when most conservative scholars view their coming national conversion at about the middle of the Tribulation (cf. Ez 37-39; Dan 9; Zech 12:10; 13:1-6). The gospel shall be preached in all the world (Gr oikoumenē), i.e., the inhabited world and unto all nations (Gr ethnos); "gentile nations," as contrasted with the Jews. Then shall the end come would then refer to the end of the church age.

(2). Signs of the Great Tribulation. 24:15-28.

15. Ye must be taken generically, since the disciples have not lived to see this take place. The abomination of desolation refers to Daniel 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; where Antiochus Epiphanes' profanation of the Jewish temple worship would foreshadow a similar and more severe act by the eschatological Antichrist. Whereas Antiochus offered a pig on the sacred altar of the Temple, the Antichrist will offer himself (II Thess 2:4)! The action of desecration by Antiochus, which David had predicted, will now be repeated in the future by the Antichrist as the signal of the beginning of the Great Tribulation and the breaking of the covenant "in the midst of the week" (Dan 9:27), i.e., the seventieth week of Daniel's prophecy, whose length is forty-two months (Rev 11:2), 1,260 days (Rev 12:6), or "time, and times, and half a time" (Dan 7:25; Rev 12:14). The holy place, i.e., Temple, which will be rebuilt. Kent (p. 86) rightly observes that this cancels limitation of Daniel's prophecy to just the days of Antiochus (Allen, p. 256) since Jesus, in His day, was still awaiting further fulfillment, and it likewise goes beyond the catastrophe of A.D. 70 (Stagg, p. 200), since it is called the greatest tribulation of all time (Mt 24:21).

16-28. The warning to flee into the mountains eschatologically looks beyond the first century to the Jews' flight from the persecution of the Antichrist (cf. Rev 12:6-14). Every Jew must flee and not look back. The reference to the sabbath day indicates these events will occur in a Jewish area, where 18 Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes.

19 And woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days!

20 But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath day:

21 For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.

22 And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened.

23 Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there: believe it not.

24 For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.

25 Behold, I have told you before.

26 Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not.

27 For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

28 For wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

29 ¶Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken:

30 And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.

31 And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

32 ¶Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh:

33 So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors.

such restrictions would be observed. Then shall be great tribulation makes our Lord's reference to Daniel 12:1 clearly evident as taking place just prior to the resurrection in Daniel 12:2. The terrible days of that time shall be shortened by the sudden return of Christ to destroy the Wicked One (II Thess 2:8). The false Christs may even refer to the False Prophet who aids the Antichrist with his miracle-working powers (Rev 13:11ff.). The phrase, if it were possible . . . shall deceive the very elect clearly indicates that those who have been truly saved cannot be deceived and fall away. For even if it were humanly possible, the Lord will stop it by shortening (hastening) His coming. The exclamation, Behold, I have told you before, indicates Jesus' belief in the predictive nature of this prophecy. The lightning shining from the east . . . even unto the west refers to the final aspect of Christ's return (not the Rapture) in judgment upon the earth. In I Thessalonians 4, He comes in the clouds for the church; in II Thessalonians 1-2, He comes to the earth with the church to judge the world.

(3). Signs of the coming Son of Man. 24:29-42.

29-31. The reference to the events Immediately after the tribulation, such as the sun being darkened and the stars falling, etc., refer to the cataclysmic events that will accompany Christ's return at the end of the Tribulation Period to establish His millennial kingdom on earth (see W. Price, Jesus' Prophetic Sermon, p. 118ff.). His return will be marked by the sign of the Son of man in heaven which will identify His coming to the tribes of the earth. What this sign (Gr semeion) will be is not explained here. Ancient commentators (e.g., Chrysostom) thought it to be the appearance of a cross in the sky, whereas Lange (p. 428) suggests it will be the shekinah glory of Christ Himself. It may, perhaps, even be the return of the star that marked His birth. In some way a visible manifestation will mark the gradual (cf. Acts 1:11, "in the same manner") return of Christ in judgment at the end of the Tribulation Period. As the earth revolves the various nations and tribes will be able to see this sign. Instead of repenting, though, they shall mourn. This indicates a severe, ritualistic mourning (cf. also Zech 12:10-12). The clouds of heaven indicate that Christ will come from heaven to the earth (cf. also Dan 7:13-14; II Thess 1:7-9). The angels are the same agents of judgment as in chapter 13. The elect are the saved who have come to faith in Christ by the grace of God and are gladly anticipating their Lord's return.

32-33. The illustration of the fig tree is referred to as a parable. The immediate context seems to refer to the fig tree in a natural (not symbolic) sense (see Walvoord, p. 192). While it is clear in Scripture that Israel is symbolized, at times, by the fig tree (ch. 21), the usage here simply seems to be that as these events reach the apex of their fulfillment, the actual and ultimate return of Christ follows immediately. Just as God has built into nature certain time indicators (e.g., trees budding), so He has built into history certain time indicators of coming future events. Jesus' reference to when ye shall see all these things has caused some to speculate that these predicted events only relate to the coming destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70, within the disciples' lifetime (cf. Tasker, p. 227; G. C. Morgan, p. 286, does not even attempt an explanation). Kent (p. 86) views the fig tree as Israel "budding" in the last days as a reborn nation. Walvoord (p. 192) agrees with Lenski (p. 951) that "all these things" refers to the preceding context of the Olivet Discourse.

34. Thus, the generation that shall not pass is the generation in whose lifetime all these signs occur and it is that generation that will not pass away until all these things be fulfilled. While some have attempted to relate "generation" (Gr genea) to the race of the Jews, indicating the survival of their race until Christ's return, this seems somewhat stretched. Arndt and Gingrich (p. 153) prefer "age" or "period of time." In other words, the previously listed signs will continue to multiply throughout the Church Age and reach their ultimate climax at the end of the age in the generation of those who will live to see the entire matter fulfilled in their lifetime. However, no time indication of length is clearly given so that all may anticipate the imminent return of the Master. Those who object that the "last days" began at Pentecost should also see II Timothy 3:1, where "last days" are yet coming (shall come) in the future. On the one hand, the final age began with the manifestation of the church and continues today. On the other hand, though, the final aspect of this age will be a last day of perilous times which will occur at the end of the age. Even Filson (pp. 257-258) agrees that Matthew certainly understood Jesus to be saying that "all these things" referred to the end of history in the distant future.

35-38. Verse 35-36 warn against attempts to set an exact date for Christ's return at the end of the Church Age (a warning unheeded by the Adventists in 1844, the Jehovah's Witnesses in 1916, and many others). To speculate that "day" and "hour" do not eliminate "year" is a gross oversimplification. The Father only knows the time of Christ's return since it has been set by His authority (cf. Acts 1:7). However, we are given a comparison to the days of Noah (and the Flood) which illustrate and prefigure the condition of humanity at the time of Christ's return. The last generation, like the one of Noah's day, is pleasure-oriented and self-gratifying by eating and drinking. The reference to marrying and giving in marriage may refer to carrying on the normal course of life without heeding the impending judgment. However, the indication may even be stronger in that Noah's generation was judged as the result of the collapse of the godly line of Seth by spiritual intermarriage with the ungodly line of Cain's descendants (see Gen 4-6 for the setting of the Flood story). The drastic destruction of the godly families of Noah's day was due to a casual and indifferent attitude about whom one married or to whom he gave his children in marriage. Thus, Jesus' warning is that the last generation will also be so pleasure-oriented that its families will collapse (a shocking observation in view of the current failure of the American family with one million new divorces every year!).

39-42. The observation that the people of Noah's day knew not the severity and suddenness of the coming destruction indicates that this last generation will be totally unprepared for the coming of the Son of man (i.e., the return of Christ to judge the world, see II Thessalonians 1:7-8). The reference to two being in the field or at work at the time of Christ's return implies the suddenness of His coming to separate the lost and the saved. The one taken and the other left has been variously interpreted as one being taken in the Rapture and the other left to impending judgment, or as the taken one being taken to judgment and the one left being spared (so Walvoord, p. 193 and Kent, p. 88-89). Kent notes that this separation occurs after the Tribulation (vs. 29) and correlates to "took them all away" (to judgment) in verse 39. The warning to watch therefore is repeated in 24:44; 25:13 and relates to the hour (a general period of time). Watch

34 Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.

35 Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.

36 ¶But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only.

37 But as the days of Nō'e were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

38 For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Nō'e entered into the ark, 39 And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

40 Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

41 Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

42 ¶Watch therefore; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

43 But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.

44 Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.

45 Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?

46 Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing.

47 Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods.

48 But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming;

49 And shall begin to smite his fellowservants, and to eat and drink with the drunken;

50 The lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of.

51 And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

CHAPTER 25

THEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom.

2 And five of them were wise, and five were foolish.

3 They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them:

4 But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

5 While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept.

6 And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.

7 Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps.

8 And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out.

9 But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves.

10 And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut.

11 Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

12 But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not.

13 Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

14 ¶For the kingdom of heaven is as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.

15 And unto one he gave five talents,

(Gr grēgoreo) is a Greek present imperative, meaning “be continuously on guard.”

(4). The Parable of the Two Servants. 24:43-51.

43-51. The Parable of the Two Servants follows to illustrate the seriousness of Christ’s second coming, a fact which Jesus never allegorized or spiritualized, but spoke of in the most serious terms: cut him asunder . . . weeping and gnashing of teeth. Kent (p. 89) notes that the evil servant (a usurper and impostor) “mistakes the uncertainty of the time of coming for a certainty that it will not be soon.” At Christ’s return, however, all hypocrites will be suddenly exposed and judged by the Lord.

(5). The Parable of the Ten Virgins. 25:1-13.

25:1-13. The Parable of the Ten Virgins explains the place of Israel’s true converts of the Tribulation Period in relation to the church. These virgins (Gr parthenos, cf. 1:23) are the attendants at the wedding, not multiple brides. The one bride of Christ is the church, John the Baptist is the best man (Jn 3:29, i.e., friend of the Bridegroom) and the prepared virgins are the saved of the Tribulation Period. While all share as the people of God, the church is accorded a unique relationship to the Master. The number five in each group does not necessarily indicate that half of humanity will be saved but that there are two types of people. The lamps seem to refer to their lives which are either prepared or unprepared. The oil refers to that which prepares them to give forth light and may properly be illustrative of the regeneration of the Holy Spirit. The fact that they all slept . . . While the bridegroom tarried implies a period of Jewish inactivity during the Church Age, while the Bride is gathered. Foolish (Gr mōros) means “stupid,” and is the designation for those who are carelessly unprepared. They had no oil at all, not an insufficient amount. The refusal of the five prepared virgins to share with those unprepared must not be taken as cruelty. If the oil represents personal possession of the Holy Spirit, He cannot be shared but must regenerate each person individually. Thus, the Lord responds, I know you not (vs. 12), indicative of 7:23. False profession will save no one and only brings the final judgment of Christ upon the unsaved.

(6). The Parable of the Talents. 25:14-30.

14-23. The Parable of the Talents further emphasizes the need for personal preparation and faithful service to the Master (see also Lk 19:11-28). The talents represent monetary values and are distributed according to ability (vs. 15). Far country indicating the time between Jesus’ first coming and His final to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey.

16 Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents.

17 And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two.

18 But he that had received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money.

19 After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

20 And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained beside them five talents more.

21 His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

22 He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them.

23 His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord.

24 Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed:

25 And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine.

26 His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed:

27 Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury.

28 Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents.

29 For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

30 And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

31 ¶When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory:

32 And before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

33 And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.

return during which He is in heaven. The three servants are typical of three types who are entrusted various tasks in accordance with their own ability. Not all are expected to produce the same results, but all are to be faithful with what they have had entrusted to them. Thus, the first two double their money, while the last one hides the one . . . in the earth. The phrase After a long time gives a veiled indication of the length of Christ's departure to heaven during the present age. Each of those producing results is commended by the Master: Well done . . . good and faithful servant and is promised to be a ruler over many things, with a view to continued service in the millennial kingdom.

24-25. The great mistake of the unfaithful servant was in misjudging the character of his Master: thou art a hard man. He could not have known the Master well to assume him to be severe and merciless. Atkinson (p. 801) observes, "The slave seems to have thought that whatever he did his master would be unjust to him." He failed to understand the real generosity of his Master who wanted him to experience the joys of service. Whereas the Parable of the Ten Virgins emphasized personal preparation for the coming of Christ, the Parable of the Talents stresses the importance of faithful service during His present absence.

26-30. The fact that the latter man is called wicked and slothful and an unprofitable servant (vs. 30) who is cast out into outer darkness, certainly indicates that he was not a true disciple of the Master. The idea of this illustrative parable is that all true believers will produce results (elsewhere, "fruits") in varying degrees. Those who produce no results are not truly converted. Those who deny soul-winning, personal evangelism, and church growth will find no comfort in this story. Those who hide their treasure (probably, the life-changing message of the gospel), because of a harsh view of the Master's sovereignty over them, reveal that they do not really love people and, therefore, their own salvation is questionable!

(7). The judgment of the nations. 25:31-46.

31-46. The judgment of the nations concludes our Lord's prophetic discourse. Christ's return in his glory to be enthroned on the throne of his glory marks the great interruption of history as He brings the Tribulation Period to an end and ushers in the millennial kingdom. This judgment of all nations must be distinguished from the Great White Throne Judgment at the end of the Millennium. The nations (Gr ethnos) are those peoples living through the Tribulation on earth at the time of Christ's return. This is a judgment of separation: sheep on his

MATTHEW 25:34

34 Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world:

35 For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:

36 Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me.

37 Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?

38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?

39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

41 Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:

42 For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink:

43 I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not.

44 Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee?

45 Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.

46 And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.

CHAPTER 26

AND it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples,

2 Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.

3 ¶ Then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Cā'ia-phas, right . . . goats on the left. At this judgment all nations (better, "all Gentiles") stand before Christ who then separates the sheep (the saved) from the goats (the lost) in a manner reminiscent of the wheat and tares parable. Some view this as the last general judgment (Atkinson, p. 801), whereas premillennial commentators see this as the judgment of the nations who have survived the Tribulation Period, with the saved going into the millennial kingdom. Note that these are living nations, whereas the Great White Throne Judgment is one of the wicked dead whose bodies are resurrected to face the final judgment of the lost. Thus, the saved are invited to come into and share the blessings of His Kingdom: Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom. The basis of their acceptance seems to be their treatment of the least of these my brethren, i.e., the saved of the Tribulation. The acts of kindness (vss. 35-38) were done by these sheep nations unto the persecuted Jewish believers and their converts during the reign of the Antichrist and now bring the blessing of God's salvation upon these nations. The acts of kindness do not themselves merit salvation apart from the atonement of Christ. Since the nations are the Gentiles and "my brethren" are neither, they must be the Jews. The goats are banished into everlasting fire or hell. Both the judgment and the blessed life are designated by the same adjective, "eternal" (Gr aiōnios), clearly indicating their equal duration. This eternal judgment is in keeping with Revelation 14:11; 19:15. No unsaved adults are admitted into the millennial kingdom when it is begun on earth. A natural and legitimate conclusion, then, is that the Rapture must occur before this event. Thus, the Rapture precedes the Tribulation Period, which itself precedes the millennial kingdom.

2. His rejection as King. 26:1-27:66.

These chapters describe the plot of the priests, the anointing of the Lord in Bethany, the betrayal, the institution of the Lord's Supper, the agony in the Garden, the Lord's arrest, His trial before the priests, Peter's denial, the trial before Pilate, and finally the crucifixion and resurrection.

a. His denial by His disciples. 26:1-56.

26:1 See also Mark 14:1-2, Luke 22:1-2. Jesus makes a final prediction of His death two days before Passover, which was eaten on the evening of Nisan 14. Thus the prediction was made on the twelfth of the month (April). The feast of the passover was the first feast on the Jewish yearly calendar and was kept in commemoration of the national deliverance from Egypt in the exodus under Moses. Passover takes its name from the Hebrew term related to the Death Angel passing over those who had applied the blood to their homes (cf. Ex 12). The Hebrew root pesach was transliterated into "pashcal" from which Christ's suffering is often referred to as His "passion." Passover time was a great high day among the Jews and thousands of pilgrims flocked to Jerusalem to observe it each year. Our Lord's death was the ultimate fulfillment of which the annual feast had been a shadow. It was followed by the seven-day Feast of Unleavened Bread (Nisan 15-21). Sometimes the entire period was generally referred to as Passover.

2-5. Jesus also predicted His betrayal. Son of man is His favorite designation of Himself. Betrayed (Gr paradidomi) is better translated here as "delivered up" or "handed over." The assemblage of the Sanhedrin takes place at the palace, (Gr aule meaning the courtyard of his residence.) Caiaphas was a Sadducee who had been appointed High Priest a few years earlier,

4 And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtily, and kill him.

5 But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people.

6 ¶ Now when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper,

7 There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.

8 But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste?

9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

10 When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me.

11 For ye have the poor always with you; but me ye have not always.

12 For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it for my burial.

13 Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

14 ¶ Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, 15 And said unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver.

16 And from that time he sought opportunity to betray him.

17 ¶ Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?

18 And he said, Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, The Master saith, My time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples.

19 And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover.

20 ¶ Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve.

21 And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

22 And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?

23 And he answered and said, He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.

24 The Son of man goeth as it is writ-about A.D. 18, just before Christ's earthly ministry began. Not on the feast means "not during the feast." Since many of Jesus' supporters from Galilee would be in Jerusalem during this time, the leaders did not want to upset the crowd whose emotions were at a high anyhow. Jesus ultimately foiled their plan and died at the very hour of the slaying of the Passover lambs.

6-16. The anointing at Bethany (cf. Mk 14:3-9; Jn 12:1-8) is related by John as taking place six days before Passover, indicating the one version is topical and the other chronological, since neither Matthew nor Mark dates the event. The chronological problems with the crucifixion have long been wrestled with by scholars, but the detailed accounts of factual material relating to such highly emotional material make their veracity all the more certain. These are no mere legendary accounts, embellished by Church tradition. They are highly factual and readable accounts of the most sublime narratives in Scripture. Simon the leper is mentioned only here and in the parallel Mark 14:3. By a comparison with John 12:1-8, it becomes a reasonable deduction that he was the father of Lazarus, Martha, and Mary. She did it for my burial. The point seems to be that the action was appropriate in view of His burial which was soon to take place, and that it might be regarded as symbolic or prophetic of the burial. This gospel, i.e., the good news of the Lord's death and resurrection (see also Mk 14:10, 11; Lk 22:3-6). Judas Iscariot (see Mk 3:19) . . . And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver. Actually, they weighed the amount to him, representing about a month's wages or the price of a common slave (see Stagg, p. 231). These words are substantially from the LXX of Zechariah 11:12. Betray him, i.e., hand Him over. The same verb is translated "deliver" in verse 15. The Last Supper is also related in Mark 14:12-16; Luke 22:7-13; and John 13:1-29. The Synoptics agree in the basic details and seem to assert that this was the Passover meal, whereas John clearly indicates that it was eaten before the Passover, with Jesus dying at the very hour the Passover lambs were slain (Jn 18:28; cf. I Cor 5:7). Liberal interpreters see the accounts as contradictory (Kee, p. 640); others suggest that Jesus followed the Essene custom of the Qumran community in taking the Passover meal on Tuesday (J. Walther, "Chronology of Passion Week," JBL, 1958, pp. 116ff.). However, it seems most likely that John, writing later, is simply clarifying the ambiguous points in the chronology, as he does elsewhere in his gospel in regard to other matters. Kent's material (pp. 97-109) on the chronology of the passion week is excellent and should be thoroughly considered.

17-24. The first day . . . of unleavened bread, or the fourteenth of Nisan (cf. Mk 14:12; Lk 22:7). The day actually began at sundown on the thirteenth. While Jesus said, I will keep the passover, the cross reference in Luke 22:16 notes He added, "I will not eat it," implying an interruption. Perhaps He did not want Judas to be aware of His certainty of the details. Only Jesus and the Twelve were present. At this crucial time Jesus announced one of you shall betray me. We cannot imagine the shock with which this statement must have jolted the disciples. For the first time, Jesus had clearly indicated that the betrayer would be one of the Twelve! They were exceeding sorrowful, indicating their grief over such an announcement. In the original language, the question Lord, is it I? suggests that a negative answer was cautiously expected by each one, "It is not I, is it?" Coupled with Peter's later defensive protest and subsequent failure, it seems clear that the entire group feared the possibility of failure. What a transformation would have to take place to change these cowards into the mighty apostles of the book of Acts!

ten of him: but woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born.

25 Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

26 ¶And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body.

27 And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it;

28 For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins.

29 But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

30 ¶And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

31 Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.

32 But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

33 Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.

34 Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

35 Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples.

36 ¶Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gëth-sëm'a-ne, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

37 And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zëb'e-dee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy.

38 Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.

25-26. Judas repeated the same question and Jesus' reply, Thou hast said, means "yes." The statement, He that dippeth, reveals the personal and intimate nature of the betrayal. Jesus took bread. The head of the Jewish household was accustomed to doing this during the Passover feast. Jesus gave a completely new significance to the action. This is my body. If the words of the Lord had intended to convey a transformation of the bread into His body they would have read "This has become my body." During the Passover feast the Jewish householder took bread in his hand and said, "This is the bread of affliction which our fathers ate in the land of Egypt," meaning, of course, that the one represented the other. By His words the Lord changed the whole significance and emphasis of the feast from looking back to the typical redemption from Egypt to faith in the redemption from sin accomplished by His death. For a clear example of the use of the word "is" as "represents" see Galatians 4:25. The bread and wine were only outward symbols of our Lord's death and a reminder to us of the cost of our redemption during our Lord's absence (cf. Lk 22:19). Nothing in the Gospels indicates that these were to be viewed as a means of grace, sacraments, or that they were physically necessary for one's salvation.

27-30. The cup. Three cups were passed around by the Jewish householder during the Passover meal; the third, which is probably that referred to here, being known as "the cup of blessing." My blood of the new testament taken from the LXX of Exodus 24:8 with allusions to Jeremiah 31 and Zechariah 9:11. The covenant in Exodus 24:8 was sealed with blood. The word testament (Gr diathëke) did not mean a covenant, which is an agreement between equals, but a settlement by a great or rich man for the benefit of another. As the most common form of settlement was, and still is, by testament or will, the word came to have this meaning almost exclusively. Shed for many for the remission of sins. Here is a clear statement that the death of Jesus was necessary to enable God to forgive sins. It, in fact, made it right or morally justifiable for Him to do so. That day, i.e., when He comes again in glory.

31-35. The quotation in verse 31 is taken from the LXX of Zechariah 13:7. Go before you, literally, lead you forth, going at your head, as an eastern shepherd leads his sheep. This does not mean that the Lord would go first to Galilee in the sense that the disciples must go there to find Him, but that He would appear to them at Jerusalem and lead them to Galilee. Though I should, better, "Even if I must." Peter's boast later sets the stage for his bitter denials of his Master. He promised to be more faithful than the others, thus later provoking Jesus' question, "Lovest thou me more than these?" (probably referring to the other disciples of John 21:15).

36-39. The scene in the Garden of Gethsemane is one of the most moving in all the New Testament. Gethsemane means "olive press" and was a lush garden east of the city near the slopes of the Mount of Olives. Jesus often resorted there for peace and quiet. He took the same inner circle as at the transfiguration (Peter, James, and John) further into the garden. My soul is exceeding sorrowful is found in the LXX of Psalm 43:5. The imperative watch means to keep awake in order to be prepared for whatever might come. The prayer for the cup to pass is not due to Jesus' fear of death. Many martyrs have faced 39 And he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour?

41 Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

42 He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

44 And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people.

48 Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he: hold him fast.

49 And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, master; and kissed him.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they, and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

51 And, behold, one of them which were with Jesus stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high priest's, and smote off his ear.

52 Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

53 Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?

54 But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?

55 In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out as against a thief with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me.

56 But all this was done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

terrible deaths without great fear. Jesus questions the will of the Father as to the necessity of drinking the cup. While this may refer to death ("he tasted death") it is more likely that the cup represents the wrath of God against sin, which divine wrath Christ would incur on the cross as man's sinbearer. In the awful anguish of that moment, the sin of the world was poured on Christ and He became "sin for us" (II Cor 5:21). His total submission to the will of the Father causes Him to be obedient, even unto a substitutionary death. The Innocent and Righteous One dies for the guilty. Herein is His ultimate exaltation as Lord (Phil 2).

40-46. In the meantime the disciples were asleep due to emotional fatigue and physical exhaustion. Again, He urged them to watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation. Several commentators unnecessarily relate this temptation to Christ (see Atkinson, p. 803), whereas in the context, He relates it to the disciples. Because they are not prayerfully watching, they will not be prepared for the tragedy that is about to happen. He reminded them that the spirit . . . is willing, but the flesh is weak. Man's regenerated spirit may have good intentions, but it must control his body (cf. Rom 12:1) in order to gain spiritual victory. The Greek present imperative indicates that they were to "continually keep watching." However, their fatigue causes the remark, Sleep on now. The immediate interruption of the soldiers causes Him to awaken them, let us be going.

47-50. The arrest took place in the Garden during the middle of the night as a mixed mob arrived to take Jesus. There can be little doubt that Jesus saw them approaching as there is always a full moon at Passover, and they probably also carried lighted torches (see Filson, p. 280). The Roman soldiers carried swords and the Jewish temple police had staves (clubs). The sign was necessary to identify Jesus to the Romans to whom He was unknown. Judas kissed him as the sign of betrayal of the One he still glibly called master (cf. Mt 7:23ff.). In response Jesus asked, friend wherefore art thou come? This convicting question was far more effective than an accusation, since Judas could not answer it.

51-56. One of them was Peter (Jn 18:10) who drew his sword, probably one of the short swords referred to in Luke 22:38. Attempting to defend Jesus, Peter struck a servant of the high priest's, and smote off his ear. In a typically impetuous move Peter had struck the one person who could have embarrassed them the most at the trial. Luke, a physician (22:51) tells us that Jesus healed him by replacing the ear (His last miracle) and John (18:10) tells us his name was Malchus. Jesus' rebuke: Put up again thy sword clearly revealed that His kingdom would not be brought in by force at that time. The statement they that take the sword shall perish with the sword is a statement of fact, but cannot be taken alone to teach nonviolence in all situations. Jesus has no lack of power by which to deal with these few enemies. Twelve legions of angels could be called to His aid. Each Roman legion has six thousand soldiers. Christ's restraint is due to His willingness to obey the will of the Father and so fulfill the scriptures. Even a well-intentioned defense by one of His disciples will not deter Jesus from the cross (on the meaning of these events, see F. W. Krummacker, The Suffering Saviour).

57 ¶And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Cā'ia-phas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

58 But Peter followed him afar off unto the high priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death;

60 But found none: yea, though many false witnesses came, yet found they none. At the last came two false witnesses, 61 And said, This fellow said, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

62 And the high priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

63 But Jesus held his peace. And the high priest answered and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God.

64 Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy: what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy.

66 What think ye? They answered and said, He is guilty of death.

67 Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted him; and others smote him with the palms of their hands, 68 Saying, Prophecy unto us, thou Christ, Who is he that smote thee?

69 ¶Now Peter sat without in the palace: and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee.

70 But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest.

71 And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

72 And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man.

73 And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee.

74 Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus, which said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he went out, and wept bitterly.

b. His denunciation by the Sanhedrin. 26:57-75.

57-65. See Mark 14:53-72; Luke 22:54-65; John 18:13-27. Palace, the open court around which the main buildings were built. Servants (Gr hyperetēs, "officers"). The evidence which was eventually brought forward (vs. 61) was based upon the Lord's words recorded in John 2:19, 21, nearly three years earlier! I adjure thee by the living God. This statement put a man on his oath and compelled an answer. The High Priest was seeking an admission which could be the foundation of a charge of blasphemy. Thou hast said, this means "yes." Hereafter, "Henceforth." The session at God's right hand began at the ascension (even, perhaps, at the resurrection). Note the allusion in our Lord's reply to Psalm 110:1 and Daniel 7:13. The second part of the phrase may refer as much to the ascension as to the second coming. The Jewish religious leaders would be witnesses of the victories of Christ after His resurrection. Buffeted, i.e., punched. Verse 68 is a sarcastic demand to be told the names and identities of those who were strangers to Him as a sign of supernatural knowledge. The incident ends with the charge of blasphemy and the indictment that He is guilty of death. There can be no doubt that the Sanhedrin took Him to be claiming to be the Messiah, which claim they violently rejected.

66-72. Peter's three denials occurred during the trial proceedings. Peter sat without in the palace or courtyard. We know from the Synoptics that he was warming himself by a fire, prepared by servants of the priests. The first denial was prompted by a damsel, or young maid, and the porters who had admitted him and John. Somehow she recognized him from an earlier meeting. The form of the denial, I know not what thou sayest, was merely a pretense of ignorance on Peter's part (similar to, "I don't know what you mean"). Feeling the pressure of the interrogation, Peter went into the porch, a passageway leading to the street. Then he was confronted by another maid, probably the outer gatekeeper who alerted the men (thus Luke's reference to a man as the interrogator) that This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth. The terms "Galilean" and "Nazarene" were probably used in a derogatory manner by these Judaeans. This time his denial was stronger, with an oath, in spite of Jesus' earlier warning against oath-taking (5:34). No pretended ignorance this time either; I do not know the man, he exclaimed.

73-75. The third denial came after a while (less than an hour) when he was accused because thy speech betrayeth thee or "makes you evident" (ASV) or "gives you away." Under the mounting emotional pressure and fear of being condemned along with Jesus, he began to curse and to swear. This emotional and sinful outburst was intended to make him appear unattached with Jesus. Later, this last great outburst of denial will be corrected by an emotion-packed reaffirmation of loyalty to the Saviour (cf. Jn 21:17). And immediately the cock crew, probably "cockcrowing" (i.e., the end of the Roman watch from midnight to 3:00 A.M.), verifying the illegitimacy of the trial which was being conducted during the middle of the night. And Peter remembered, not because he heard the noise, but as Luke (22:61) records: The Lord turned and looked upon him with a convicting glance from the balcony of the High Priest's house. Then he remembered the Saviour's warning and went out and wept bitterly. All these events related to the betrayal, arrest, and trial of Jesus show that He was completely in control of each situation even while being in the hands of His captors! See J. Stalker, The Trial and Death of Jesus Christ for a devotional discussion of these matters. On the theological significance of Christ's death see J. Denney, The Death of Christ; L. Morris, The Cross in the New Testament; J. Owen, The Death of Death; G. Smeaton, The Atonement According to Christ and His Apostles.

CHAPTER 27

WHEN the morning was come, all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death:

2 And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.

3 ¶Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders,

4 Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

5 And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself.

6 And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood.

7 And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in.

8 Wherefore that field was called, The field of blood, unto this day.

9 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value;

10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

11 ¶And Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest.

12 And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing.

13 Then said Pilate unto him, Hearst thou not how many things they witness against thee?

c. His deliverance to Pilate. 27:1-31.

27:1-2. See also Mark 14:1-15; Luke 23:1-25, John 18:28-19:16. Pontius Pilate the governor. Pontius Pilate was the Roman procurator of Judaea from A.D. 26 to 37, holding his office under the Prefect of Syria. His usual place of residence was Caesarea, but he was in Jerusalem during the festival in order to deal with any insurrection or trouble.

3-8. When he saw that he was condemned, which would be evident from seeing Jesus being taken to Pilate (a move that Judas may not have anticipated), he repented himself (Gr metameleomai, "to regret"). This word is different from the term for repentance to salvation (Gr metanoia). Judas shows every indication of still being unsaved: he betrays innocent blood for money, becomes guilty, returns the money, and commits suicide. These are the actions of a guilty conscience, not a forgiven and regenerate one. His admission I have sinned is not necessarily a true confession to faith. The reply of the priests reveals the real cruelty of their hearts: What is that to us? See thou to that. A. W. Tozer calls this the "great double-cross," wherein Judas betrays Christ in collusion with the priests, who in return, reject him! Judas then threw the money in the temple (Gr naos means "sanctuary") and hanged himself. It is generally supposed that "falling headlong" (Acts 1:18-19) happened while he was attempting to do this. Perhaps, hanging himself over the ledge, he then fell into the valley below. Bought, in such cases the purchase was made in the name of the man to whom the money had been paid and to whom the money by a legal fiction was supposed all the time to belong. By law, therefore, the man himself purchased the field (see Acts 1:18).

9-10. Some have expressed concern over the mention of Jeremiah in this passage on the basis that the quotation apparently comes from Zechariah. While there is an allusion here to Zechariah 11:12-13, the actual words do not agree with either the Hebrew or the LXX. The major difference is the addition of the word field, upon which the fulfillment claimed is based. This word, and the conception behind it, comes from Jeremiah 32:6-9, where the prophet refers to the purchase of a field for certain pieces of silver. It is obvious that Matthew's concept of prophetic fulfillment rests upon both passages. Thus, he combines both passages into one quotation, giving credit to Jeremiah as the older and more predominant of the two prophets. Hendricksen (p. 948) draws the same conclusion, noting that a major prophet is preferred over a minor one in a similar double reference in Mark 1:2-3. There Isaiah is credited instead of Malachi (see Mal 3:1). This is certainly to be preferred to Plummer's suggestion (p. 386) that it was a "slip of the memory."

11-31. Barabbas means the father's son in Aramaic and must be seen in contrast with Jesus, the Father's Son. Pilate's question, Why, what evil hath he done? comes late in the trial and represents a personal, though unofficial, acknowledgment of Jesus' innocence. Thus, Pilate attempted to shift the blame for Jesus' death to the Jews themselves. The dramatic answer, His blood be on us, eventually brought the wrath of God upon His own people. Certainly their subsequent suffering must be viewed in light of this self-condemnation (see comments by 14 And he answered him to never a word; inasmuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

15 ¶Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would.

16 And they had then a notable prisoner, called Ba-rāb'bas.

17 Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, Whom will ye that I release unto you? Ba-rāb'bas, or Jesus which is called Christ?

18 For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

19 ¶When he was set down on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.

20 But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Ba-rāb'bas, and destroy Jesus.

21 The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Ba-rāb'bas.

22 Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ? They all say unto him, Let him be crucified.

23 And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified.

24 When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.

26 Then released he Ba-rāb'bas unto them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

27 ¶Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers.

28 And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe.

29 ¶And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews!

30 And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

31 And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him.

32 And as they came out, they found a man of Cŷ-rē'ne, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

33 And when they were come unto a place called Gōl'go'tha, that is to say, a place of a skull.

34 They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink.

35 And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots: that McNeile, p. 413). Encouraged by their willingness to take responsibility for His death, Pilate then scourged Jesus in hope that a bloody beating would appease them (cf. Jn 19:1-6). It was this beating that left Jesus extremely weak and eventually caused His early death on the cross (some survived on crosses for several days). The scourging was a whipping with a leather whip with sharp pieces of bone and metal embedded in its thongs. The statement that Pilate delivered him means he officially turned Him over to his soldiers for execution. They took Him into the common hall (Gr praitōrion from Lat praetorium) or governor's quarters, probably in the castle of Antonia. They mocked His claim to be King by clothing Him with a scarlet robe (Gr chlamys). It was a military robe, usually fastened at the shoulder. The crown of thorns and the reed for a scepter added to their mockery.

d. His death for mankind. 27:32-66.

32-35. A man of Cyrene, Simon by name. Cyrene was a Roman province in North Africa where many Jews lived. They had a synagogue in Jerusalem (Acts 6:9), indicating that many of them lived there. His sons, Alexander and Rufus, later became well-known Christians (see Mk 15:21). Compelled (Gr ang-garevō, a technical term for requisitioned) to bear his cross. The cross was generally carried by the prisoner, which John 19:17 indicates was at first the case with Christ. Evidently, the weight was more than He could bear, due to His severe scourging. The transverse piece was usually carried separately and it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

attached by rope to the vertical pole at the place of execution (see Plummer, p. 393). Golgotha . . . a place of a skull. The name is a transliteration of the Aramaic word for skull and is equivalent to the Latin calvaria, probably due to the physical appearance of the hill. Presently two sites have been claimed as Golgotha: (1) the site of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre (which at that time was outside the wall) and (2) the hill north of Jerusalem known as "Gordon's Calvary" (which definitely resembles a skull, even until this day). They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall, an allusion to Psalm 69:21. This was customarily given to condemned prisoners to serve as a kind of anesthetic or anodyne. It was literally a drugged "wine" (Groimon.) The statement that He would not drink indicates that our Lord refused any mitigation of His sufferings on our behalf.

They crucified him. Crucifixion was a common means of execution.

36 And sitting down they watched him there;

37 And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

38 Then were there two thieves crucified with him, one on the right hand, and another on the left.

39 ¶And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads,

40 And saying, Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross.

41 Likewise also the chief priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said, 42 He saved others; himself he cannot save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him.

43 He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, I am the Son of God.

44 The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth.

45 ¶Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour.

46 And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, E'li, E'li, lā'ma sa-bach'tha-ni? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

47 Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, This man calleth for E-li'as.

48 And straightway one of them ran, and took a sponge, and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

49 The rest said, Let be, let us see whether E-li'as will come to save him.

50 ¶Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost.

36-44. Pilate placed a placard over Jesus' head with the accusation: THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS. Little did he realize how true this intended mockery of the Jews really was. Indeed, as Matthew shows, Jesus was the King of the Jews, whom they had rejected. The priests wagging their heads, an allusion to Psalm 22:7, said Thou that destroyest the temple . . . save thyself. However, that was the one thing Jesus could not and would not do. To save Himself would have meant the loss of the entire world. No wonder He had to have endured Satan's earlier temptation to satisfy Himself, for now He would conquer Satan's power forever by denying Himself! The further accusations, He saved others . . . He trusted in God . . . He said I am the Son of God were actually true in the opposite sense in which the priests intended them. The thieves (Gr lēstēs) were robbers, perhaps cohorts of Barabbas. The statement, cast the same in his teeth, means they repeated similar taunts to Him.

45-50. From the sixth hour . . . unto the ninth hour means from noon until 3:00 P.M. Mark (15:25) indicates Jesus had been placed on the cross at the third hour (9:00 A.M.). It is questioned whether this is Jewish or Roman time. The darkness was evidently supernaturally imposed since an eclipse of the sun at full noon is impossible. God's wrath was poured upon His Son during this time of darkness. At the ninth hour (3:00 P.M.) Jesus cried: Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani (Aramaic) for My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Here we have the high cost of the atonement to Christ, who was accused of God for us as our sinbearer (cf. II Cor 5:21; Gal 3:13) and suffered the agony of spiritual death for us. The sense of being forsaken was not necessarily caused by God the Father looking away from Him, but from His looking at Him in wrath, as He would look in judgment at a condemned sinner. He . . . cried . . . with a loud voice, as a shout of triumph, and yielded up His Spirit. In other words having borne the wrath of God's judgment against sin, He knew that He had triumphed over Satan and the curse of sin. His heel was "bruised," but the serpent's head had been "crushed." The yielding of His life was the result of His voluntary surrender of His life for the sake of His own.

51 And, behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent;

52 And the graves were opened; and

51-53. The events immediately following Jesus' death were remarkable indeed. The veil of the temple refers to either the curtain over the entrance to the Holy Place (which could be viewed from the porch) or to the curtain separating the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies (cf. Ex 26:31). The latter is most many bodies of the saints which slept arose.

53 And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

54 Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God.

55 And many women were there beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him:

56 Among which was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Joses, and the mother of Zēb'e-dee's children.

57 ¶When the even was come, there came a rich man of Ar-i-ma-thæ'a, named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus' disciple:

58 He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered.

59 And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, 60 And laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock: and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed.

61 And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre.

62 ¶Now the next day, that followed the day of the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, 63 Saying, Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, After three days I will rise again.

64 Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, He is risen from the dead: so the last error shall be worse than the first.

65 Pilate said unto them, Ye have a likely here and symbolizes the permanent opening of God's presence to man and man's direct access to God through the atoning death of Christ. Henceforth, all ceremonial services of priests and sacrifices would be done away for the Christian believer (cf. comments on the book of Hebrews). The earth did quake which was a visible manifestation of God's judgment on those who had wrongly crucified the Lord of Glory and it caused the graves to be opened and the saints which slept (departed Old Testament believers) arose. This incident is stated only by Matthew and indicates that the Old Testament believers were resurrected after His resurrection and appeared unto many. It is properly supposed that they were resurrected from "paradise," or "Abraham's bosom" and taken to heaven by the resurrected Christ (cf. Eph 4:8-9). For a discussion of a wide range of views on this see Lange (p. 528).

54-56. The centurion and they that were with him exclaimed: Truly this was the Son of God (vs. 54). Whether this was an affirmation of genuine faith (based on all they had witnessed) or merely a pagan appreciation of the awesomeness of the circumstances is not clear. However, we dare not minimize the spiritual effect these events could have had on them. Certainly the incident reveals how Jesus' life and character, even in the face of death, rose above the greatest qualities of pagan Rome. The witnesses also included several key women: Mary Magdalene (cf. Magdala, in Galilee. Some suggest she is the woman out of whom Jesus cast seven devils in that region. However, her identification as Mary is not clear); Mary the mother of James and Joses was the wife of Cleopas (Jn 19:25); the "other Mary" of verse 61; the mother of Zebedee's children was Salome (cf. Mk 15:40) and apparently a sister of the Virgin Mary.

57-61. The burial of Jesus' body was seen to by a rich man of Arimathea, named Joseph. In fulfillment of Isaiah 53:9, Jesus made His death with the rich. Joseph was a Sanhedrinist, who had become a disciple. His wealth enabled him to own a tomb at Jerusalem even though he lived nearly twenty miles away. Wealthy people in those days often selected their tombs while they were still living. He begged the body from Pilate and got it, undoubtedly not without personal risk on his part. With help from Nicodemus, a believing Pharisee (cf. Jn 3), he took the body from the cross and wrapped it in a clean linen cloth or shroud, in the typical burial custom of the day. On the possible legitimacy of the Shroud of Turin, see G. Habermas, Verdict on the Shroud. The body was then placed in Joseph's own new tomb . . . hewn out in the rock and covered with a great stone, generally rolled in a groove and into place securely over the opening of the tomb. Such a stone would be humanly impossible for one man to roll back by himself from the inside, thus nullifying the ridiculous view that Jesus had only passed out and later "revived" and got out of the tomb. All such anti-supernatural compromises with the text cause more interpretive problems than they supposedly solve. According to the text only the two Marys watched the burial and no disciples were present.

62-66. The next day . . . followed the day of the preparation. There is some question as to whether this was Saturday (the Sabbath), following a Friday crucifixion. However, John 19:14, 31 indicates that this "preparation day" was the day before the Passover feast day. This may account for Matthew's not using the term "Sabbath" here (cf. Kent, p. 709). He favors a Wednesday crucifixion, with the burial lasting a full seventy-two hours and taking literally the terms After three days and on the third day; by contrast see Atkinson (p. 805) who favors a Friday crucifixion based on Jewish "inclusive reckoning" of any part of a day equal to a full day. In favor of the Wednesday crucifixion it should be observed that the text does not specify "Friday," and this view can harmonize all the Sabbath refer-watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can.

66 So they went, and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

CHAPTER 28

IN the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

2 And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

3 His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

4 And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

5 And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

6 He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

7 And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

8 And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

9 ¶And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him.

10 Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

11 ¶Now when they were going, behold, some of the watch came into the city, and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

12 And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, 13 Saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept.

14 And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you.

15 So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

16 ¶Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them.

ences and resolve the problems of the Jewish leaders meeting with Pilate on the Sabbath and the women preparing spices on the Sabbath (see chart on "Chronology of the Crucifixion" and the detailed discussion and diagrams in W. Scroggie, A Guide to the Gospels, pp. 568-577).

III. TRIUMPH OF THE MESSIAH 28:1-20.

A. His Resurrection. 28:1-8.

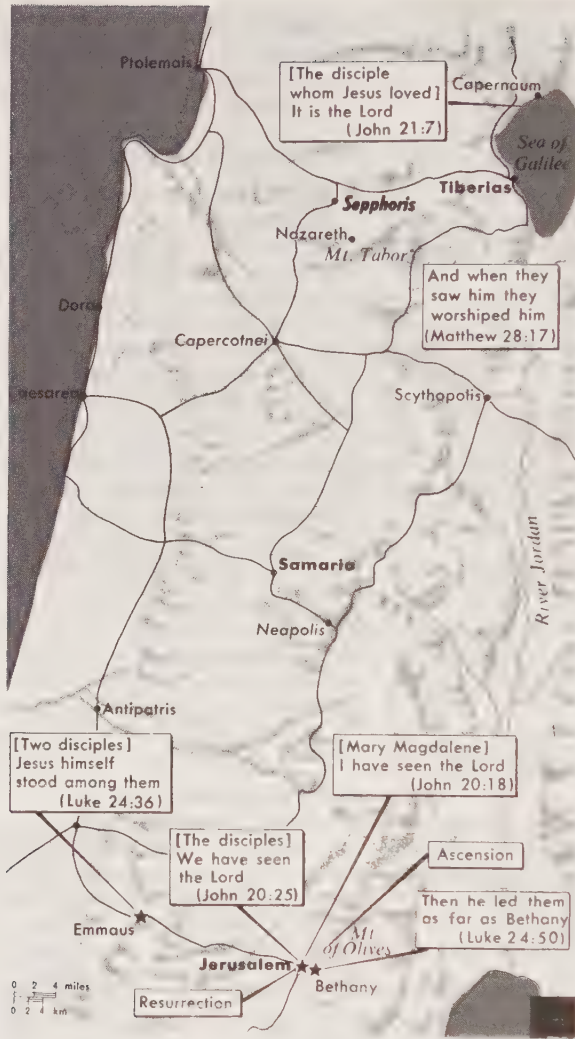

28:1-8. See also Mark 16:1-20; Luke 24:1-12; John 20:1-31. All four Gospels essentially agree in reporting the facts of the resurrection. The variety of details in each account supplement rather than contradict each other. The empty tomb was discovered in the end (Gr opse, used as improper preposition for "after") of the sabbath agreeing with the other evangelists. By Jewish reckoning the day ended at sunset and the new day began at the same time. Thus, Saturday night by our reckoning was actually Sunday by their calendar. Accordingly, the resurrection actually occurred sometime during the night, for by the time the women arrived as it began to dawn He had already risen from the dead. The earthquake and the angel (Mark's "man in white"), who rolled the stone away, did not come to let Jesus out of the tomb, but to reveal that it was empty and that He was gone already! Evidently Mary Magdalene left immediately to tell Peter and John. The angel told the other women, Fear not . . . He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. The pronoun "you" is emphatic: "you women, only, do not fear me" (as the guards did, who were paralyzed with terror). "They have come to see the grave, drawn there by sorrow, love, and, perhaps, inarticulate hope. For their loyalty and persistent love they hear first the news of the resurrection" (Filson, p. 302). The angel then instructed them to go unto Galilee to meet Him.

B. His Reappearance. 28:9-15.

9-15. Running ahead with fear and great joy they actually met Jesus and worshipped Him. We cannot imagine their emotional attitude at this moment when fear and joy gripped them simultaneously. Again, they were instructed to go before Him into Galilee. Here Matthew's account is considerably briefer and less detailed than the other Gospels (where we have specific accounts of Peter and John running to the tomb; Mary meeting Jesus; the appearance in the upper room; the appearance to more than five hundred believers at once; and the undeniably literal incident on the seashore, Jn 21). The one addition by Matthew is the falsified report of the guards in verses 11-15. Pilate had put the soldiers at the disposal of the Jewish Sanhedrin so they reported first to them. The assemblage gave large money or a large bribe to the soldiers to hide the truth of the resurrection with the lie, saying . . . His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept, a ridiculous statement in view of the disciples's earlier defection in the Garden. How could this band of cowards overpower an armed Roman guard? Thus, Matthew observed that this explanation was still commonly reported among the Jews in his day. On the theological significance of the resurrection see G. Habermas, The Resurrection of Jesus, An Apologetic; J. McDowell, The Resurrection Factor; G. Ladd, "The Resurrection of Jesus Christ," in Christian Faith and Modern Theology, pp. 261-284; W. Sparrow-Simpson, Our Lord's Resurrection; M. Tenney, The Reality of the Resurrection.

C. His Recommission. 28:16-20.

16-17. Now instead of sending His disciples back to the house of Israel, they are sent into all the world. The kingdom rejected by Jews will now be offered to the Gentiles in accordance with Jesus' earlier parables. This appearance in Galilee is not to be confused with the appearances at Jerusalem and is probably the same as the appearance to "above five hundred brethren" (cf. I Cor 15:6), with the eleven being among them. This is further implied by the statement, they worshiped him: but some doubted, which would be unlikely of the eleven after the earlier appearances and the "doubting Thomas" incident (Jn 20:28). This also implies a difference in Jesus' appearance after His resurrection, as also described by John, His own beloved disciple, who barely recognizes the resurrected-glorified Christ in Revelation 1. Lange (p. 556) adds the further explanation that "doubted" (Gr distazō) may also be translated "hesitated," in the sense that while they obviously saw Him, they hesitated to offer Him such unbounded worship. Prior to Christ's death and resurrection, His disciples, while recognizing His divine messiahship, did not openly worship Him in the manner that would now become customary. Otherwise, why would Matthew, writing to convince the Jews of Jesus, say so close to the end of his gospel that some "doubted"? The more obvious explanation is that as he wrote to the hesitant Jewish community, he was saying he understood their hesitation for he too was a Jew who had become a Christian.

The Resurrection and Ascension

17 And when they saw him, they worshipped him: but some doubted.

18 And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

19 Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

18-20. The Great Commission brings the first Gospel to its grand finale. Christianity is not represented here as the mere reverential devotion of disappointed men who honor their martyred leader. Here is a far different scene. The triumphant living Lord sends forth His ambassadors to proclaim His gospel throughout all the world. The Commission is not just an order but a pronouncement of victory (mundus regium Christi) by the risen Saviour through His disciples. All power or authority (Gr exousia) was now in the hands of Christ, in heaven and on the earth. On the basis of that authority and power the Christian disciple is to carry out the Great Commission of the church. Go ye is actually a participle and conveys not a command to go, but the assumption that the listener will automatically be going. In other words, the idea expressed is that “as you are going” make disciples, and Teach all nations could be translated “convert all Gentiles,” or “disciple all nations.” Thus the converting influence of the gospel is indicated here. Reaching the nations is not merely a matter of education but the full process of discipleship, i.e., teaching and training, beginning with conversion. The “all nations” makes it clear that the Commission to the church is a worldwide one, encompassing the entire missionary effort. The church is not to be merely “missionary-minded.” The church is the vehicle of Christ’s mission to the world and the two (church and mission) are inseparable. Every local church has a mission to its world. To attempt to eliminate this commission from the church age (as do the hyperdispensationalists) would be to leave the church without an assigned purpose from her Lord.

Baptizing the converted disciples is the first step of outward obedience to the Lord and brings entrance into the membership of the local congregation. “Baptize” (Gr baptizō) is an English transliteration, and means to “dip,” or “dunk,” or “immerse,” thus indicating its proper mode. Nowhere does this term ever indicate “sprinkling.” On baptism see A. Carson, Baptism in the New Testament; E. Hulse, Baptism and Church Membership; J. Warnes, Baptism; contra see J. Murray, Christian Baptism. These converts are to be baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. The “name” is singular, followed by an elliptical clause indicating that the one name is the name of each person of the Trinity. While baptismal references in Acts refer to being baptized in Jesus’ name (emphasizing His deity as Saviour) they in no way eliminate the significance of this formula given by Christ Himself. Nor do the three persons of the Godhead necessitate a trine immersion in each name. Furthermore, these baptized converts are to be taught all things that Jesus taught, thus the edifying and exhorting ministry of the church is seen as it develops in the book of Acts.

The closing promise, though given to the apostles, is transmitted by every generation of believers (cf. Jn 17:20). Christ’s promise of His presence, I am with you alway, guarantees the success of the church’s mission because it is really His mission carried out by His called-out disciples. The phrase unto the end of the world means until the end of the “age” (Gr aiōn). Therefore, the empowerment of Christ to the church to evangelize the world is available in every age, even unto the end of the church age. There is no excuse, then, for failing to exercise that power in our age. No time of apostasy will ever be so great as to nullify the true gospel ministry of the Bible-preaching church. In comparing the Great Commission with Jesus’ promise to continually build His church (ch. 18), we must conclude that He intended His church always to be spiritually militant and evangelistically aggressive as we take His claims of lordship to the entire world of our generation. Amen!

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- Allen, W. C. A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Gospel According to St. Matthew. In International Critical Commentary. New York: Scribners, 1925.
- *Alexander, J. A. The Gospel According to Matthew. New York: Scribner, Armstrong & Co., 1873.
- Atkinson, B.F.C. The Gospel According to Matthew. In New Bible Commentary. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1953.
- Barclay, E. The Gospel of Matthew. Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1958.
- *Broadus, J. A. Commentary on the Gospel of Matthew. In American Commentary Series. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1886.
- Calvin, J. Commentary on a Harmony of the Evangelists. Trans. by A. W. Morrison. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1972.
- Carr, A. The Gospel According to St. Matthew. Cambridge: University Press, 1913.
- Ellison, H. L. The Gospel According to Matthew. In A New Testament Commentary, Ed. by G. Howley. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1969.
- English, E. S. Studies in the Gospel According to Matthew. New York: Revell, 1935.
- Filson, F. V. Commentary on the Gospel According to St. Matthew. New York: Harper & Brothers, 1960.
- Gaebelein, A. C. The Gospel of Matthew. New York: Our Hope, 1910.
- *Hendriksen, W. Exposition of the Gospel According to Matthew. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1973.
- Hill, David. The Gospel of Matthew. In The New Century Bible. London: Marshall, Morgan & Scott, 1972.
- *Kent, H. A., Jr. Matthew. In Wycliffe Bible Commentary. Ed. by C. Pfeiffer and E. Harrison. Chicago: Moody Press, 1962.
- Lange, J. P. Commentary on the Holy Scriptures: Matthew. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, n.d.
- Lenski, R. C. The Interpretation of St. Matthew's Gospel. Minneapolis: Augsburg, 1961.
- McNeile, A. H. The Gospel According to St. Matthew. London: Macmillan, 1915.
- Morgan, G. C. The Gospel According to Matthew. New York: Revell, 1929.
- Plummer, A. An Exegetical Commentary on the Gospel According to St. Matthew. London: Robert Scott, 1909.
- Ridderbos, H. Matthew's Witness to Jesus Christ. New York: Association Press, 1958.
- Ryle, J. C. Expository Thoughts on the Gospels: Matthew. London: James Clarke, 1954.
- Stonehouse, N. B. The Witness of Matthew and Mark to Christ. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1958.
- *Tasker, R.V.G. The Gospel According to St. Matthew. In Tyndale New Testament Series. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1961.
- *Toussaint, S. D. Behold the King: A Study of Matthew. Portland, Or.: Multnomah Press, 1980.
- *Walvoord, J. Matthew—Thy Kingdom Come. Chicago: Moody Press, 1974.

The Gospel According To

MARK

INTRODUCTION

Authorship. Mark is commonly accepted as the author, the church fathers affirming this without controversy. In fact, they felt it necessary to explain how a seemingly improbable person like Mark came to compose this account. He became a close associate of Peter and for many years listened to his sermons and conversations about the Lord's life. Tradition says that those who observed his notes of Peter's sermons urged him to formulate them into a systematized life story of Jesus; if this were true, the source of the material would be Peter. Papias, bishop of Hierapolis, in the first half of the second century testified, "And John, the presbyter, also said this, Mark being the interpreter of Peter, whatsoever he recorded he wrote with great accuracy . . . and he was in company with Peter, who gave him such instructions as necessary, but not to give a history of our Lord's discourses" (Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History III, p. 39). It is probable that Papias as a young man had met the Apostle John. Ireneaus, bishop of Lyons, agrees, "Mark the disciple and interpreter of Peter, did also hand down to us in writing what has been preached by Peter." Likewise, Justin Martyr refers to Mark's work as the memoirs of Peter. Thus, we can picture the younger disciple, after hearing innumerable eyewitness accounts of the Saviour, feeling compelled to commit them to writing for the benefit of future generations.

The author's full name was John Mark (Acts 12:12). His mother, Mary, had servants, indicating the family was not ill-furnished. Besides by his mother, Mark was influenced by his cousin, Barnabas, who took him with Paul on the first missionary journey (Acts 13:5). Halfway through the journey Mark returned home (Acts 13:13). The reason for the departure must have been questionable for when Barnabas and Paul planned a second journey, Paul's insistence on excluding Mark was so intense that the two leaders parted company (Acts 15:39), Barnabas setting sail for Cyprus with Mark. Whatever Paul observed as a weakness in Mark at this point, in later years he commended Mark's efforts in the ministry (II Tim 4:11).

Little else is known of this disciple. However, his gospel does include an unusual event in connection with Christ's arrest. A young follower hurrying to escape lost his garment and sprinted away naked (Mk 14:51-52). Although it cannot be proven, most scholars understand Mark to be speaking of himself; there would be no other apparent reason for including this event.

His close association with Peter is not based on tradition alone; Peter himself mentions Mark in a manner which supports it (I Pet 5:13). It has been commonly held that Mark moved to Rome with Peter and remained there until both Peter and Paul died. He then moved to Alexandria and founded a church which later became quite influential (Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History II, p. 16).

Recipients. Tradition depicts Mark's work as arising from the entreaties of Roman Christians. The style and contents corroborate this belief including several "latinisms" such as those found in 4:21 (bushel), 12:14 (tribute), 6:27 (executioner), and 15:39, 44-45 (centurion). That Aramaic expressions are translated or explained (7:3-4), indicates the readers were not Jewish. Additionally, in Mark 15:21 where a man named Simon bears Jesus' cross, his sons are named, one of whom was Rufus, a resident of Rome (Rom 16:13). If the book were destined for another locality, this inclusion would seem peculiar.

Date and Place of Writing. The final composition took place after Peter's death, no earlier than A.D. 65, and before the fall of Jerusalem, A.D. 70. Papias, Clement of Alexandria, Origen, Eusebius, and Jerome all affirm or imply that the place of writing was Rome.

Purpose. If one finds specific emphases in the other Gospels (Jesus as King in Matthew, as Son of Man in Luke, and as Son of God in John), he may observe the Lord as Servant in Mark. A passage that lays stress on Christ's service says that He came "to minister" (10:45). Another factor which supports this is the growth of Roman intolerance toward Christianity, which was developing into open persecution. One author concludes, "The chief purpose of the gospel is to portray the personality of Jesus in such a way that the church in the hour of its severe trial would receive power to endure and remain faithful" (Davies, The Abingdon Commentary, p. 996). The design of the narrative also concurs with John who declared, "But these are written, that ye might believe . . ." (Jn 20:31).

Characteristics. Three areas of emphasis may be observed:

1. Activities, rather than teachings of Christ. The narration swiftly moves from one event to the next. In fact, the action itself is described frequently by the word "immediately" (Gr euthus). This style may reflect the impulsive, action-oriented personality of Peter, who furnished Mark with his information. Relatively few of Christ's teachings are included, the Olivet Discourse being the only one of substantial length (Mk 13).

2. Geography. The longest and initial location of Christ's ministry occurred in and around Galilee. A later phase describes extended trips to areas beyond. Finally, tension builds as He approaches and enters Jerusalem, where His rejection and death ensue.

3. Vividness of detail and realism. Looks, gestures and actions stand out. The author announces without hesitation that the Lord's relatives had concluded that He lost His senses (3:21) and that

MARK

“all men” were looking for Him. (1:35-38). During the Crucifixion the expressions of mockery and the details of His suffering draw a graphic picture of ineffable endurance.

OUTLINE

- I. The Introduction to Christ's Ministry. 1:1-13.
  - A. The Title. 1:1.
  - B. The Preparation for His Ministry. 1:2-13.
    - 1. John the Baptist. 1:2-8.
    - 2. Christ's baptism. 1:9-11.
    - 3. Christ's temptation. 1:12-13.
- II. The Ministry in Galilee. 1:14-7:23.
  - A. The Initial Stage. 1:14-3:5.
    - 1. The opening of the Galilaean Ministry. 1:14-15.
    - 2. Four disciples called. 1:16-20.
    - 3. Preaching tour of Galilee. 1:21-45.
    - 4. The healing of a paralytic man. 2:1-12.
    - 5. The call of Matthew. 2:13-17.
    - 6. Fasting. 2:18-22.
    - 7. The Lord of the Sabbath. 2:23-28.
    - 8. Healing on the Sabbath. 3:1-5.
  - B. The Results of Popular Growth. 3:6-35.
    - 1. Many healed by the sea. 3:6-11.
    - 2. The Twelve chosen. 3:12-21.
    - 3. The unpardonable sin. 3:22-30.
    - 4. Family ties. 3:31-35.
  - C. Parables. 4:1-34.
    - 1. Introduction. 4:1-2.
    - 2. The Parable of the Sower. 4:3-9.
    - 3. Christ's use of parables explained. 4:10-12.
    - 4. The Parable of the Sower explained. 4:13-20.
    - 5. The Parable of the Candle. 4:21-23.
    - 6. The Parable of New Standards. 4:24-25.
    - 7. The Parable about Growth. 4:26-29.
    - 8. The Parable of the Mustard Seed. 4:30-32.
  - D. The Journey to Gadara. 4:33-5:20.
    - 1. The storm calmed. 4:33-41.
    - 2. The healing of the Gadarene demoniac. 5:1-20.
  - E. Two Unique Miracles. 5:21-43.
  - F. Home Town Response. 6:1-6.
  - G. Activities, Pressures, and Rest. 6:7-56.
    - 1. The Twelve sent forth. 6:7-13.
    - 2. Death of John the Baptist. 6:14-30.
    - 3. Pressures. 6:31-36.
    - 4. Feeding the five thousand. 6:37-44.
    - 5. Walking on the sea. 6:45-52.
    - 6. Reception at Gennesaret. 6:53-56.
  - H. Pharisees and Tradition. 7:1-23.
- III. The Ministry Beyond Galilee. 7:24-9:50.
  - A. Tyre and Sidon. 7:24-30.
  - B. Decapolis. 7:31-8:9.
    - 1. A deaf-mute healed. 7:32-37.
    - 2. Feeding the four thousand. 8:1-9.
  - C. Passing Through Galilee. 8:10-26.
    - 1. The trip to Dalmanutha. 8:10-13.
    - 2. The leaven of the Pharisees. 8:14-21.
    - 3. The healing of a blind man. 8:22-26.
  - D. Caesarea Philippi. 8:27-9:1.
  - E. Mount of Transfiguration. 9:2-29.
  - F. The Secret Trip Through Galilee. 9:30-50.
- IV. The Concluding Ministry. 10:1-13:37.
  - A. Peraea (Beyond Jordan). 10:1-31.
    - 1. On the way. 10:1.
    - 2. The discourse on divorce. 10:2-12.
    - 3. Jesus' attitude toward children. 10:13-16.
    - 4. The rich young ruler. 10:17-22.
    - 5. The perils of riches. 10:23-31.
  - B. On the Way to Jerusalem. 10:32-52.
    - 1. On the road. 10:32-34.
    - 2. James' and John's request. 10:35-45.
    - 3. In Jericho. 10:46-52.
  - C. Near Jerusalem. 11:1-13:37.
    - 1. The Triumphal Entry. 11:1-11.
    - 2. Bethany. 11:12-26.
    - 3. Jerusalem. 11:27-12:44.
    - 4. Mount of Olives. 13:1-37.
- V. Christ's Death and Resurrection. 14:1-16:20.
  - A. The Events Preceding His Arrest. 14:1-42.
    - 1. The chief priests plot Jesus' death. 14:1-2.
    - 2. Mary anoints Jesus. 14:3-9.
    - 3. Judas plans to betray Jesus. 14:10-11.
    - 4. Preparation for the Passover. 14:12-21.
    - 5. The Lord's Supper. 14:22-25.
    - 6. On the Mount of Olives. 14:26-31.
    - 7. In the Garden of Gethsemane. 14:32-41.
  - B. The Arrest and Trials. 14:42-15:14.
    - 1. Betrayal and arrest. 14:42-52.
    - 2. The trial before the Jewish leaders. 14:53-65.
    - 3. Peter's denial. 14:66-72.
    - 4. The trial before Pilate. 15:1-14.
  - C. The Crucifixion. 15:15-47.
  - D. The Resurrection. 16:1-20.

COMMENTARY

I. THE INTRODUCTION TO CHRIST'S MINISTRY.
1:1-13.

A. The Title. 1:1.

1:1. The theme of Mark's book is the "Good News" (Gr euangelion) about Jesus Christ. The name, Christ, (Gr Christos) refers to His office (the Anointed One). His early life was only the beginning of this gospel, for the resurrection denies the story an ending.

B. The Preparation for His Ministry. 1:2-13.

1. John the Baptist. 1:2-8.

2-3. The forerunner had arrived according to divine prediction: As it is written in the prophets (Mal 3:1 and Isa 40:3).

4. John's preparatory ministry included two basic aspects: baptizing and preaching. Baptize (Gr baptizō) literally means "to dip into" or "to immerse" and its connection with repentance indicates that the ordinance held no inherent virtue or merit but merely symbolized an inward change of attitude toward sin. The root problem of John's listeners parallels that of contemporary society. They not only were sinful, but were insensitive to their condition.

5. Mark employs a hyperbole when he uses the word all to describe the response to his preaching. The translation "all the people of Judea were going out and were being baptized" more clearly brings out the significance of the imperfect tense used in Greek. Confessing stems from two Greek words which together mean "to say the same thing as." Genuine confession is not merely admitting guilt, but it places the same appraisal upon it that God does.

6. A simple, if not crude, life-style marks John's priorities. His ambitions and goals pertain to the One mentioned next, not to personal convenience.

7-8. This announcement contains implications regarding Christ's person and His function. His person: to untie someone else's shoes is the task of a menial servant. So eminent is He, that to untie His is a privilege! His function: John is but a man announcing the message and baptizing those who respond; he himself cannot affect the inner person. The One whom John introduces also will baptize, but not as a physical sign. His baptism will transform the soul by "the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost" (Tit 3:5).

2. Christ's baptism. 1:9-11.

9. Jesus' baptism is related in surprisingly simple language. Mark recounts that He left His home town and submitted to the rite.

10. The significance of this event lies in God's public approval of Jesus. The whole Trinity is involved. The Son submits to the ordinance; the Spirit rests upon Him; and the Father voices His pleasure. The form assumed by the Spirit, like a dove, may be related to Genesis 1:2, which pictures Him hovering (AV, moved) over the waters, as a hen resides on her nest. The Spirit longs to overshadow men with His infilling power. This was accomplished perfectly in the Son, because He submitted without any reservations.

11. The heavenly voice both qualified and identified Jesus. Others have been called beloved and pleasing, but He alone can

THE beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God;

2 As it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

3 The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

4 John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

5 And there went out unto him all the land of Judæa, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins.

6 And John was clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey;

7 And preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.

8 I indeed have baptized you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

9 ¶And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10 And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him:

11 And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

MARK 1:12

12 ¶And immediately the spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts; and the angels ministered unto him.

14 ¶Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God,

15 And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

16 ¶Now as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers.

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.

18 And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him.

19 And when he had gone a little farther thence, he saw James the son of Zēb'e-dee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets.

20 And straightway he called them: and they left their father Zēb'e-dee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

21 And they went into Ca-per'na-um; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

22 And they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

be termed my Son. There are many children, but He is the unique Son of God.

3. Christ's temptation. 1:12-13.

12-13. In verse 10 Jesus' baptism resulted in the Spirit's control and here one may observe the extent of His submission. Driveth comes from the Greek ekballō which may be translated "leads." It does convey a forceful guidance, which illustrates one area of Christ's self-humiliation. Matthew and Luke include the details of the temptation (Mt 4 and Lk 4), but Mark limits his account to a general statement.

II. THE MINISTRY IN GALILEE. 1:14-7:23.

A. The Initial Stage. 1:14-3:5.

1. The opening of the Galilaeen Ministry. 1:14-15.

14. In spite of all the miracles evidenced in Christ's life, the predominant characteristic of His ministry is described by the words Jesus came . . . preaching. In the oldest manuscripts the gospel of the kingdom of God is simply "the gospel of God" which may be rendered "the gospel from God," stressing its source.

15. What causes the kingdom of God to be at hand? The presence of the King! What does the King require of His servants? The answer is twofold: Negatively, repent (Gr meta-noēo) change their attitudes about their sin; specifically recognize its evil and forsake it. Positively, believe God's Good News centered in Christ.

2. Four disciples called. 1:16-20.

16. John 1:40-42 describes the first encounter Simon and Andrew had with Jesus. The reference to them as fishers names their business or livelihood, not their sport.

17. Jesus frequently appealed to people on the basis of their occupation or background. Instead of catching fish, would you not rather be netting men? The prerequisite: Come ye after me!

18. Their response to this unusual call indicates that they had had previous contact with Him. Forsook their nets. Their action involved more than sacrificing a few possessions. They were giving up their trade.

19. It is interesting that James' name captures the scene. John's name joins the former as his brother. In spite of this, John became "the beloved disciple," penned five New Testament books, and outlived the other disciples.

20. For Zebedee to have had hired servants, employees, indicates that his business was relatively prosperous.

3. Preaching tour of Galilee. 1:21-45.

21. Capernaum. Matthew and Luke mention a visit to Jesus' home town, Nazareth, prior to this event, and Matthew 4:13 informs us that Jesus made His residence in this city. Straightway. The Greek word euthus, translated "straightway, immediately, anon," is characteristic of Mark's style. Already it has been used in verses 10, 12, 18, and 20, and it is used over forty times throughout the book. Here it signifies that Christ Jesus began teaching on the first Sabbath after He arrived.

22. The Greek imperfect tense of they were astonished depicts action in motion. As Jesus taught, the people were not only astonished at His sermon as a whole, but they kept reacting with amazement at every truth that crossed His lips. Not as the scribes. The distinction in His manner was that He ignored the normal procedure of the scribes, who consistently quoted or made reference to the Old Testament and the ancient rabbis. Jesus taught authoritatively since His word was final!

23 And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out,

24 Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God.

25 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him.

26 And when the unclean spirit had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him.

27 And they were all amazed, inasmuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him.

28 And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

29 ¶And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her.

31 And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

32 ¶And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.

33 And all the city was gathered together at the door.

34 And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him.

35 ¶And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed.

36 And Simon and they that were with him followed after him.

37 And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee.

38 And he said unto them, Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth.

39 And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils.

40 ¶And there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneeling down to

23. The term unclean (Gr akathartos) bore special connotations to the Jewish mind. The Old Testament frequently distinguished between what was lawful and unlawful, accepted and rejected, and therefore may mean ungodly. "Demon" is a designation used interchangeably with unclean spirit.

24. When he recognized Jesus, I know thee, the unclean spirit questioned His presence: let us alone; what have we to do with thee . . .? The expression is a Greek idiom which could be translated, "What do we have in common?" It assumes that two parties have converged without a unifying bond. Therefore, he concluded, He must be here to destroy us.

25. Hold thy peace. Here and in verse 34 Jesus silences the demons, because they knew Him. Apparently His objection is that unclean persons should identify Him. Revelation would come at the proper time through pure vessels.

26. Torn. The unclean spirit caused the man to have convulsions before it left.

27. What new doctrine is this? Their question shows a basic purpose in healing. Jesus certainly was moved by physical suffering, but His eternal objectives outweighed temporal matters. Verses 14-15 named preaching as Jesus' primary ministry, and in this context the occasion of healing happens immediately after Jesus' authoritative lesson. At first the people responded negatively, because His method seemed bizarre, but when they witnessed Him casting out demons, they accepted His teaching on the basis of His power.

28-31. The phrase his fame (Gr akoē) commonly signified a news report or announcement. It relates to the event of the preceding verse rather than His person. Simon's wife's mother. Although the disciples' families are rarely mentioned in the New Testament, because of the inclusion of this incident, we learn that Peter was married, and it appears that his mother-in-law and brother lived with him.

32-34. In verse 28 it is said that the news of healing had spread immediately, and here the multitudes thronged after Jesus because they had heard. The same types of people were brought to Him as the ones recently healed: demon-possessed and diseased.

35-37. A great while before day. Two things may be noted regarding the time. First, He prayed very early, before other activities could distract or interfere. Second, the account comes the day after His encounter with many demons (AV, devils is better translated demons from the Greek daimonion). Ephesians 6:12 pinpoints the Christian's enemy; his actual battlefield lies in the realm of the spiritual. An even more remarkable aspect of this prayer is the lengths Jesus took to assure privacy. He went into a solitary place. The others, when they awoke, sought Him and finally when He was found, they complained that the multitudes were awaiting Him. He offered no apology, for what He was doing was well worth time and effort.

38-39. Jesus' stated objective in His extended ministry is to preach in the next towns. The miracles He performed provided the validity of His authority, and thus, His message.

40-42. Leper. In New Testament times, because of the unsanitary conditions, lepers were numerous. This one's petition him, and saying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

MARK 1:41

41 And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean.

42 And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed.

43 And he straitly charged him, and forthwith sent him away;

44 And saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man: but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

45 But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places: and they came to him from every quarter.

CHAPTER 2

AND again he entered into Ca-per'na-um after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house.

2 And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, no, not so much as about the door: and he preached the word unto them.

3 And they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four.

4 And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay.

5 When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee.

6 But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts,

7 Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? who can forgive sins but God only?

8 And immediately when Jesus perpertained to Jesus' desire, not His ability; he declared thou canst, "you are able!" The Lord's response is not routine. The healing resulted because He was moved with compassion. Since He is the Second Person of the Trinity, why would He need to put forth his hand and touch him? Yet the Lord typically touched when He healed. Since miracles were designed to verify Jesus as Lord, the touch would remove doubts as to the source of the healings.

43. Straitly charged . . . sent him away. Both verbs in this sentence are very strong. The first (Gr embrimaō) sometimes portrays a horse snorting in anger; the second (Gr ekballō) often was used to describe an excommunication from the synagogue. Although they are less forceful here, their presence indicates intense feelings. Jesus perceived that the man was more excited about his condition and experience than about the One who had healed him.

44-45. Verses 44 and 45 contrast the man's instructions with his actions. The first command prohibited him from telling what had happened, yet he not only disobeyed, but he became so involved in sharing his story that he apparently disregarded the other instructions also. To follow what Moses commanded would have affirmed that Jesus believed and fulfilled the Old Testament law.

No more openly. Jesus' fame even in this initial stage of His ministry was incredible. Crowds followed so heavily that it became impossible for Him to make His way through any city without creating a commotion.

4. The healing of a paralytic man. 2:1-12.

2:1. His entrance into Capernaum was unknown by the public, but it was noised. Someone discovered His presence and the news spread like wildfire.

2. When they heard where Jesus was, the multitudes swarmed about Him. The author lays stress on the situation by saying there was no room, not so much as about the door, which indicates the problem that the friends of the paralytic man faced. Preached. Although Jesus' fame was due to miracles, the narration more frequently has Him preaching the gospel.

3. They come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four. Why does it not simply say, "Four men came bringing their sick friend"? The wording shows that there were more than four in the group. Sick of the palsy (Gr paralytikos) refers to paralysis.

4. The crowded condition, for the press, prohibited an approach to the Lord. Uncovered the roof. Luke 5:19 identifies it as a tile roof, the tiles being made of hardened clay.

5. Perhaps many in the crowd reacted negatively to such an odd performance. A ceiling opening up, men lowering a pallet on which an invalid lay: what sort of group could this be? Jesus, however, saw their faith, not their deeds. His response may at first seem inappropriate. Thy sins be forgiven. Although their desire was physical, Christ's answer was very proper. First, the previous statement reveals Jesus' ability to discern beyond physical appearance (also Jn 2:24-25). The sin of the soul is worse than paralysis of the body. Secondly, this story testifies to Jesus' true identity as the Son of God. God alone can forgive sins, but the forgiveness of sins cannot be observed. Thus His identity was certified by a supernatural act.

6-7. The scribes immediately misinterpreted what Jesus declared. Instead of properly reasoning: He claims to forgive; only God forgives; therefore, He must be God; they conjectured on the basis of a false premise: this man cannot be God, therefore, He is blaspheming.

8-9. A proof test of His identity results from this encounter.

ceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts?

9 Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk?

10 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy.)

11 I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

12 And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

13 ¶And he went forth again by the sea side; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them.

14 And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Al-phaeus sitting at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him.

15 And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

16 And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?

17 When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

18 ¶And the disciples of John and of the Pharisees used to fast; and they come and say unto him, Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not?

19 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bridechamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast.

20 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

Jesus indirectly claimed to be God, but the scribes refused to accept it. How could deity be proved while discussing forgiveness? An area which could be subjected to investigation was used, the healing.

10. The demonstration of divine power proves to sinners that He indeed can forgive sins. Forgiven (Gr aphiēmi) which means "to send away," does not merely overlook sin, but actually removes it.

11. I say. Healing is not the result of involved methodology. A word from the Son of God, whose command brought forth the universe, is sufficient.

12. Before them all. Jesus' miracles were not obscure stories developed by isolated reports; the evidence was open for examination. We never saw it on this fashion. Occasionally, one reads that Palestinians in the New Testament era readily accepted the supernatural in Jesus, because they saw it frequently elsewhere, but this statement denies that.

5. The call of Matthew. 2:13-17.

13. Resorted . . . he taught. These verbs are in the imperfect tense in Greek, emphasizing progressive or continuous action. The following translation clarifies the expression: they "were coming to Him, and He kept on teaching them."

14. Levi. Both Mark and Luke use the Aramaic name, while Matthew employs the more familiar one. Son of Alphaeus. Since last names are uncommon, the father's name usually was added to prevent confusion. Sitting at the receipt of custom. Although Mark does not use the word publican, the description refers to a tax-collector. Follow me may be rendered "be following me" or "continue following me." Jesus prescribed a new life-style, not a temporary errand. Matthew followed. He turned over his money and books to his employer and took up an occupation arranged in heaven.

15-16. Scribes. Professional interpreters of the Old Testament. Pharisees. An extremely strict and ritualistic religious party, who concerned themselves more with the letter than the spirit of the law. How is it that . . . ? The question was not wrong in itself, for the Old Testament forbade wrong associations (Ps 1:1), but their attitude lacked compassion.

17. Jesus' compendious answer reveals the heart of God's Good News. Although the New Testament never condones sinful alliances, it consistently urges us to "win" sinners, for they are spiritually sick. The statement, I came not to call the righteous, was not given to morally segregate people; the New Testament affirms that all are depraved and under sin (Rom 3).

6. Fasting. 2:18-22.

18. Fasting means more than abstinence from food; that may be practiced for physical reasons. Scriptural fasting always involves a spiritual application, its basic purpose being to so seek God's person that temporal concerns pass unnoticed.

19-20. Christ's illustration, given as an explanation to the question in verse 18, relates to a specific purpose of fasting. It could be done because an individual hungers after a deeper knowledge of God, but more often it results from a desperate situation. Since the bridegroom was with His disciples, they had no need to fast. John the Baptist's disciples knew their leader remained in prison, but Jesus' disciples could rejoice with their Master. Children of the bridechamber refers to members of the wedding party.

MARK 2:21

21 No man also seweth a piece of new cloth on an old garment: else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse.

22 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles: else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles.

23 ¶And it came to pass, that he went through the corn fields on the sabbath day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn.

24 And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, why do they on the sabbath day that which is not lawful?

25 And he said unto them, Have ye never read what David did, when he had need, and was an hungred, he, and they that were with him?

26 How he went into the house of God in the days of A-bī'a-thar the high priest, and did eat the shewbread, which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them which were with him?

27 And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath:

28 Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

CHAPTER 3

AND he entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had a withered hand.

2 And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath day; that they might accuse him.

3 And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, Stand forth.

4 And he saith unto them, Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill? But they held their peace.

5 And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

6 And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herō'di-ans against him, how they might destroy him.

7 ¶But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judæa,

8 And from Jerusalem, and from ĩ-dū-mæ'a, and from beyond Jordan; and they about Tyre and Sĭ'don, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.

21-22. The illustrations about the new cloth and the new wine present a principle to which fasting may be related. A patch of new cloth has not previously been shrunk, and therefore would pull the old garment apart. Conversely, new wine expands as it ages and an old wine sack would have already reached its limit. Under the context of the ancient system, the Old Testament law, limitations had been reached, but Christ brought principles that stretched these. For instance, murder in the Old Testament is physical, but Jesus said that a man can murder by hating.

7. The Lord of the Sabbath. 2:23-28.

23. The word corn (Gr sporimos) actually refers to wheat or grain.

24. The Pharisees accused Jesus' disciples of breaking the Sabbath. Exodus 20:10 prohibits Sabbath work and Exodus 16:22 illustrates how that instruction relates to eating.

25-27. Two principles govern the uniqueness of the Sabbath. The first is illustrated in verses 25-26 and stated in 27. Jesus related David's unlawful act in I Samuel 21. David and his soldiers fleeing enemies had little time to acquire food, so they ate the showbread which was restricted for priests. Jesus' silence condoned the action, because the sabbath was made for man, that is, God instituted it for man's benefit.

28. The second principle is greater, because it encompasses God's nature. By definition He must be above any law which He establishes.

8. Healing on the Sabbath. 3:1-5.

3:1. Returning to the synagogue, He noticed a man with a withered hand. The condition was atrophy, the decreasing in size of a member of the body because of its lack of use.

2-5. The Pharisees, still accompanying Jesus, carefully observed Him, not hungering for spiritual food, like the crowds, but that they might accuse him. Earlier some of them might have had honest questions; at this point their motive became clear. The rhetorical question (vs. 4) destroys their argument by forcing a logical conclusion: would your interpretation of the law ever demand you to destroy life or do evil? No answer.

B. The Results of Popular Growth. 3:6-35.

1. Many healed by the sea. 3:6-11.

Christ's swift fame hardly could occur without affecting everyone. As the multitudes crowded after Jesus, the author relates His influence upon others also. Religious and political leaders began a conspiracy; Jesus Himself organized a team of apostles, His relatives disbelieved, and scribes publicly denounced Him as an emissary of Satan.

6-10. When they took counsel they did not merely share their adverse feelings in general terms. After agreeing to His death, they arranged meetings in which they could carefully plan the murder. Herodians refers to a political party which was loyal to Herod's family.

9 And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him because of the multitude, lest they should throng him.

10 For he had healed many; inso-much that they pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues.

11 And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God.

12 And he straitly charged them that they should not make him known.

13 ¶And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him.

14 And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach,

15 And to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils:

16 And Simon he surnamed Peter;

17 And James the son of Zēb'e-dee, and John the brother of James; and he surnamed them Bō-a-ner'gēs, which is, The sons of thunder:

18 And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the son of Āl-phæ'us, and Thād-dæ'us, and Simon the Canaanite, 19 And Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went into an house.

20 ¶And the multitude cometh together again, so that they could not so much as eat bread.

21 And when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, He is beside himself.

22 ¶And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, He hath Bē-ēl'ze-büb, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils.

23 And he called them unto him, and said unto them in parables, How can Satan cast out Satan?

24 And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand.

25 And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand.

26 And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end.

27 No man can enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, ex-

11. Two facts should be mentioned regarding the words fell down. First, the Greek prospipto, being in the imperfect tense, signifies continuous action: "they kept on falling down before Him and crying." Secondly, it may be that the reason for this action was not to worship, but to confuse the multitudes. If they heard unclean spirits announcing His title as the Son of God, they might think that good and evil in the spirit world are not totally opposite each other.

2. The Twelve chosen. 3:12-21.

12. See the discussion in 1:25.

13. A mountain. Its identity is uncertain, but it was the same one where the Sermon on the Mount was preached (Lk 6).

14. Although Mark and Luke use different Greek words for ordained, both mean "appointed" or "chosen" with him. Their relationship to their Lord preceded their service for Him.

15. Although the power of healing is not included in some manuscripts, Matthew 10:1 clearly affirms it.

16-19. For more about the background of the Twelve see Matthew 10:2-4 and Luke 6:12-16.

20. Not so much as eat bread. This statement implies what their purpose was. After a full day, they were hungry, but people would not leave them alone long enough for them to eat.

21. The word friends may be misleading. In Greek it literally means "those near" (Gr hoi par autou) and is an idiom which may refer to friends or relatives. Since the apostles would be His friends and were present with Him, it speaks of members of His family. John 7:5 says His brothers had not yet believed, so one may understand how they could declare He is beside himself. They sought to physically restrain Him from His irrational activities.

3. The unpardonable sin. 3:22-30.

22. These scribes probably were more prominent than others, because of their location, from Jerusalem. They presented an official evaluation of this new prophet to the public. Since His supernatural powers could not be denied, they were said to have originated in Beelzebub, a name referring to Satan.

23-27. In answer to the question of verse 23, How can Satan cast out Satan?, Jesus' remarks simply, "To even think so is ridiculous!" Divided kingdoms fall (vs. 24); divided houses fall (vs. 25); therefore, Satan warring against himself would be self-destruction (vs. 26). Furthermore, complete victory must precede enjoyment of conquered territory (vs. 27). The only way to establish the kingdom of God on earth is to remove the kingdom of evil. This explains why it is only rational to view exorcism as an act of God.

cept he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house.

28 Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme:

29 But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation:

30 Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.

31 ¶There came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him.

32 And the multitude sat about him, and they said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee.

33 And he answered them, saying, Who is my mother, or my brethren?

34 And he looked round about on them which sat about him, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!

35 For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother.

28-30. The attempt to generalize this offense to the persistence of unbelief ignores the correct definition of blasphemies, which specifically means “speaking against in order to hurt” (Gr blasphēmō) the Holy Spirit. In danger of eternal damnation would be better translated “guilty of eternal sin,” sin standing in place of “damnation” in the oldest manuscripts.

4. Family ties. 3:31-35.

31-32. His brethren and his mother (cf. vs. 21). One need not suppose that Mary agreed with her sons’ conclusion about Jesus. She probably joined her sons to prevent them from doing something rash.

33-35. Jesus set forth a question to advance a spiritual principle: eternal relationships surpass earthly ones. Neither religious activities nor memberships draw the Lord’s favor, but doing the will of God.

CHAPTER 4

AND he began again to teach by the sea side: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, so that he entered into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land.

2 And he taught them many things by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine,

3 Hearken; Behold, there went out a sower to sow:

4 And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way side, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up.

5 And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth:

6 But when the sun was up, it was scorched; and because it had no root, it withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8 And other fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and increased; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred.

9 And he said unto them, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 ¶And when he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve asked of him the parable.

11 And he said unto them, Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto them that

C. Parables. 4:1-34.

1. Introduction. 4:1-2.

4:1-2. By parables: the Greek word parabolē comes from two others (para, beside and ballō, to cast). Thus, a parable is a rhetorical device to explain truth. Especially in His lessons on the kingdom Jesus employed these story illustrations and with two effects: to believers they disclose truth; to unbelievers they hide it.

2. The Parable of the Sower. 4:3-9

3-6. Way side. Some fell, literally, “alongside the road” (Gr hodos), the hardened surface adjacent to the road or path. Stony ground (vs. 5) does not refer to a mixture of dirt and small stones, but speaks of huge slabs of rock with only a thin layer of soil upon them.

7. Thorns (Gr akantha) may be taken simply as weeds, not just thistles, any wild plants which grow among the planted crops.

8. Brought forth. No mention is made of the kind of produce. The purpose of the illustration centers around the type of ground.

9. This verse contains an often used quote in the New Testament, which aims at man’s tendency to ignore or make light of truth. The statement is another way of calling the listener to pay close attention.

3. Christ’s use of parables explained. 4:10-12

10-11. Unto you. Jesus said the truth is made clear to those who believe and follow Him. Them that are without. Without (Gr exō) would be better translated “outside” because it refers to those who are outside the kingdom of God.

are without, all these things are done in parables:

12 That seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

13 And he said unto them, Know ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables?

14 ¶The sower soweth the word.

15 And these are they by the way side, where the word is sown; but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these are they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness;

17 And have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

18 And these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, 19 And the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful.

20 And these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirtyfold, some sixty, and some an hundred.

21 ¶And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

22 For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad.

23 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he said unto them, Take heed what ye hear: with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you: and unto you that hear shall more be given.

25 For he that hath, to him shall be given; and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

26 ¶And he said, So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground;

12. Lest . . . they should be converted. A superficial understanding of this quote from Isaiah 6:9-10 has confused some about the Lord's instructions regarding evangelism. Here He explains that details about God's kingdom are not to be used to "prove" God's message to anyone. Faith precedes proof, not vice versa. People are won "through the foolishness of preaching" not scientific facts. If that were the case, faith would be nothing more than the recognition of revealed evidence.

4. The Parable of the Sower explained. 4:13-20.

13-15. Because the way side was hardened, the seed remains on top; similarly, the word does not penetrate a hardened heart, and Satan removes it easily.

16-17. Stony ground may have enough soil to cause initial growth, but no depth is established. As weather may ruin weak plants, adversity destroys those who base their faith on emotions. A person with a solid foundation would have counted the cost, which includes hardships and sacrifices as well as benefits.

18-19. No criticism is offered regarding the ground in the third category. The dedication was genuine initially, but later they allowed "things" to affect them. Their separation to the gospel softened as new appeals and attractions gained their attention. That which began as a minor tangent ends choking the Word of God right out of their lives.

20. The virtue of the good ground lies in its function. Yet the amount of its produce is not the issue, for some ground brings forth more than others. Even though the fruit may appear relatively meager, the fact remains, it brings forth fruit.

5. The Parable of the Candle. 4:21-23.

21-23. Verse 21 raises the question of a candle's (Gr lychnos) primary purpose, and 22 relates that purpose to God's kingdom. Jesus was reassuring them that although there is a time of mystery, the truth will be revealed.

6. The Parable of New Standards. 4:24-25.

24-25. The two verses at first may seem unrelated, perhaps even contradictory. They relate in that they are opposite; the careful wording shows agreement. First, our world system operates on the basic premise, "regardless of the method, gain equals success." But Jesus said, the way you measure (AV, mete) determines how you will prosper, the verb dealing with physical materials. Secondly, when gifts are distributed among people, the poor usually receive first, but Jesus announces possessors will receive first. Obviously, these principles apply to the kingdom of God. The selfish hoarding of physical goods (vs. 24) and unwillingness to accept absolute truth (vs. 25) are indirectly rebuked.

7. The Parable about Growth. 4:26-29.

26-27. As a farmer knoweth not how his seed becomes mature plants which produce fruit, Christians may enjoy fruitful lives without thoroughly understanding the process.

MARK 4:27

27 And should sleep, and rise night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how.

28 For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.

29 But when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 ¶And he said, Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

31 It is like a grain of mustard seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth:

32 But when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

33 And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it.

34 But without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

35 ¶And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side.

36 And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships.

37 And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.

38 And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish?

39 And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

40 And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?

41 And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

CHAPTER 5

AND they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Găd'a-rēneš.

2 And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit,

3 Who had his dwelling among the tombs; and no man could bind him, no, not with chains:

4 Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by 28-29. The emphasis of this parable is found in the expression of herself, which in Greek means “automatically” (Gr automatos). God’s procedure for growth does not need to be intellectually perceived to be experienced.

8. The Parable of the Mustard Seed. 4:30-32.

30-32. Mustard seed at the time of its sowing is extremely small compared to herbs, yet at maturity extends upward beyond any. As an illustration of the kingdom, the lesson stresses phenomenal growth; it would expand from a few to millions. That the fowls of the air may lodge in it suggests some impurity, since they are neither part of the plant nor permanent.

D. The Journey to Gadara. 4:33-5:20.

1. The storm calmed. 4:33-41.

33-36. The same day sometimes is referred to as the “busy day,” because it includes everything from 3:22.

37. The great storm of wind was a whirlwind or cyclone. The mountainous regions surrounding the Sea of Galilee often gave rise to unusually fast and vicious weather changes.

38. Hinder part (Gr prumna), the stern.

39. Rebuked may be translated “commanded.” The simplicity of the narrative stands out in such a dramatic scene. He sleeps; He arises; He commands; all is well!

40-41. Man is so reluctant to accept supernatural truth. Although they had seen demons cast out and diseases cured, the apostles perceived Christ as a prophet only. Witnessing His sovereignty over nature, they respond among themselves in fear, What manner of man is this! What emotions must have flowed as they pondered if their Master indeed was God Himself!

2. The healing of the Gadarene demoniac. 5:1-20.

5:1. An apparent discrepancy has been cited between Matthew’s and Mark’s accounts. The people are called Gadarenes in Mark (and Luke) but “Gergesenes” in Matthew. The discovery of the ruins of Khersa (Gerasa) on the lake shore disproved these claims because this location was in close enough proximity to the larger city of Gadara that a single event could be identified with either place.

2. Mark mentions a man, but Matthew reports that there were two. However, Mark does not specifically limit it to one. Probably one stood out as a leader. With an unclean spirit means demon-possessed.

3. His residence being among the tombs, the case was all the more unique. Even if a few tombs were abandoned, no rational person would choose such an environment.

4. All hope to bring this man under control had been abandoned. A few times others had tried to bind him . . . with chains only to see them broken and the man escape. His him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him.

5 And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones.

6 But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and worshipped him.

7 And cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not.

8 For he said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.

9 And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion: for we are many.

10 And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country.

11 Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding.

12 And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

13 And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand;) and were choked in the sea.

14 And they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done.

15 And they come to Jesus, and see him that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

16 And they that saw it told them how it befell to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine.

17 And they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts.

18 And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil prayed him that he might be with him.

19 Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.

20 And he departed, and began to publish in De-căp'o-lis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

21 ¶And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, much people gathered unto him: and he was nigh unto the sea.

22 And, behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, Jă-īrus by strength was supernatural, which can be accounted for by demonic presence. The word tame (Gr damazō) is better translated "subdue."

5. The demon had so affected the man's mental faculties that he had been cutting himself. This plus his continuous outcries must have kept people away from the area.

6. Although the Greek word proskuneō may mean worshipped, here it speaks of the more literal translation, "bowed down before Him." (For more about this approach, see R. Lenski, St. Mark's Gospel, p. 207).

7-10. See the discussion on 1:24 regarding the demon's outcry. The demon's name, Legion, stresses numerous spirits involved. A Roman legion consisted of six thousand soldiers, but this is used metaphorically. The New Testament often relates the seriousness of a problem to the number of demons at work (Mk 16:9; Mt 12:43; etc.).

11-13. That Jesus allowed the unclean spirits to enter the swine may be explained by two factors: First, it is better to have them away from their human victims, even if they do attack animals. And more importantly, pigs were unclean in the Old Testament law (Lev 11:7).

14-17. The response of the Gadarenes was typically human; they were afraid of the unknown. Fear had existed before because of the demoniac, but as long as he remained in his own domain, they could live with it. When Jesus restored the man, however, his radical change caused confusion and they began to pray him to depart. They preferred the status quo, where everything could be explained by natural means. Admittedly Jesus' apostles were frightened by their Master's supernatural powers (4:41), but they also believed and followed.

18-19. Naturally the liberated man wished to be with him, to listen at His feet, to observe every action, to express his gratitude, but even commendable desires are not always His will. The Lord sent him back to his family and relatives to testify of God's grace in his life. What greater way could the gospel reach them, for they must have known all too well of their relative's condition.

20. The former demoniac went beyond the call of duty. He undoubtedly made an immediate visit to his friends and relatives, but he was so enthusiastic about what Christ had done he shared his story with everyone he met. Decapolis (Gr deka, ten and polis, city) refers to an area of ten cities southeast of the Sea of Galilee.

E. Two Unique Miracles. 5:21-43.

21. Much people gathered unto him. Jesus' popularity had grown to such an extent that wherever He traveled word quickly spread and the crowds clustered.

22. Mark singles out one of the rulers of the synagogue, name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet.

23 And besought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death: I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live.

24 And Jesus went with him; and much people followed him, and thronged him.

25 ¶And a certain woman, which had an issue of blood twelve years,

26 And had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse,

27 When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched his garment.

28 For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole.

29 And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague.

30 And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes?

31 And his disciples said unto him, Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?

32 And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing.

33 But the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth.

34 And he said unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.

35 ¶While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house certain which said, Thy daughter is dead: why troublest thou the Master any further?

36 As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe.

37 And he suffered no man to follow him, save Peter, and James, and John the brother of James.

38 And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly.

39 And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth.

40 And they laughed him to scorn. But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.

41 And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Tā'i-tha cū'mī;

Jairus. The above description (Gr archisynagōgos) refers to a synagogue official who maintains the physical needs.

23. The despair felt by Jairus is evident in the narration. He calls his child little daughter (Gr thygatrion), connoting special endearment.

24. The scene exhibits the Lord's patience. Jesus walked away with Jairus and the people thronged him, continuously pressing toward Him. This word (Gr synthlibō) was used of a heavy load weighing upon a beast of burden.

25-29. The woman with the hemorrhage (AV, issue of blood) not only had the condition twelve years, but time and again endured painful treatments by many physicians. The doctors were unsuccessful, in fact the hemorrhage grew worse. The years of suffering and worry ended in a single act. Straightway she was healed and she knew it.

30. Jesus' power (Gr dynamis; AV, virtue) never was released without His knowledge and will. It was not a magical touch that caused healing. Many sick people had touched Him, but this particular woman was healed because Jesus permitted His power to deliver her. Turned him about in the press means that He turned around in the crowd.

31. The reason the Lord asked the question was to allow the woman to confess her act.

32-34. The importance of direct communication with God is accentuated, because experiencing God's power is not as vital as knowing Him. The woman could walk away not only with a restored body, but with His words of peace ringing in her heart.

35. Master (Gr didaskalos) means teacher.

36. To reassure Jairus after the tragic announcement Jesus said, Be not afraid, only believe, the Greek tense of the prohibition actually meaning, "Stop being afraid."

37. Often Peter and James and John are referred to as the "inner circle" because they were occasionally included in situations where no others were allowed. The phrase, the brother of James, suggests that John was the less prominent of the two.

38. The scene typifies an ancient Jewish wake, where outward expression was a sign of deep remorse.

39. When Jesus stated that the child only sleepeth, He did not mean that she was not actually dead (Lk 8:55), but that she soon would be aroused as if she had been sleeping.

40-43. They laughed him to scorn (Gr katagelaō): they intended to ridicule Him, but His only reaction was to dismiss them. Why did Jesus prohibit them from sharing the news of this miracle? Since opposition to Him had already grown from the religious leaders, raising a dead person might have terminated His ministry too early. Furthermore, He limited some of His greatest miracles to the witness of only a chosen few (Mk 9:2).

which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise.

42 And straightway the damsel arose, and walked; for she was of the age of twelve years. And they were astonished with a great astonishment.

43 And he charged them straitly that no man should know it; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

CHAPTER 6

AND he went out from thence, and came into his own country; and his disciples follow him.

2 And when the sabbath day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue; and many hearing him were astonished, saying, From whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands?

3 Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him.

4 But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house.

5 And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them.

6 And he marvelled because of their unbelief. And he went round about the villages, teaching.

F. Home Town Response. 6:1-6.

6:1. His own country was His home town, Nazareth.

2-3. Doubts about Jesus erupted from those who could never accept Him as more than a carpenter. Facts about His family seemed to confirm their judgment. Among the four half-brothers of Christ, two are well known. James presided over the Jerusalem church and wrote the book bearing His name, and Judas or Jude wrote the last New Testament epistle. The summary response, they were offended, is incredible. He had come to "seek and to save that which was lost" (Lk 19:10), to draw all men to Himself (Jn 12:32), and to provide abundant life (Jn 10:10), and yet those who lived near Him the longest "stumbled" (Gr skandalizō) before His presence.

4. The proverbial statement, a prophet is not without honor, but in his own country, explains why pastors often find the least acceptance as leaders among their own family and friends.

5. By definition God's omnipotence cannot be limited. When Mark said the God-man could there do no mighty work, the repression was self-imposed, based upon His own principles and volition. Furthermore, if God cannot work where there is no faith, then He will act when a person genuinely trusts Him.

6. He marveled. The Greek verb being in the imperfect tense, indicates continuous action. As His former neighbors continued to respond with questions full of doubt, He kept on marvelling at their lack of faith.

G. Activities, Pressures, and Rest. 6:7-56.

1. The Twelve sent forth. 6:7-13.

7-10. Jesus broadened His ministry by sending out teams to preach, to heal and to cast out demons. They were sent by two and two, a practice which was recommended in the Old Testament (Eccl 4:9).

7 ¶ And he called unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two; and gave them power over unclean spirits;

8 And commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; no scrip, no bread, no money in their purse:

9 But be shod with sandals; and not put on two coats.

10 And he said unto them, In what place soever ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place.

11 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Go-mōr'ra in the day of judgment, than for that city.

12 And they went out, and preached that men should repent.

13 And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

11. Degrees of judgment parallel the measure of revelation. It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah, because they did not have the opportunity to witness any miracle-working apostle.

12-13. And they went out, and preached that men should repent. The same message had been preached by John the Baptist and by our Lord himself, and now it was preached by the apostles. The message was confirmed by genuine miracles.

2. Death of John the Baptist. 6:14-30.

14-19. King Herod, actually a tetrarch, was Herod Antipas, second son of Herod the Great (Mt 2:1; Lk 1:5). (For more

14 ¶ And king Herod heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad:) and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him.

MARK 6:15

15 Others said, That it is E-li'as. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.

16 But when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead.

17 For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for He-rō'dī-as' sake, his brother Philip's wife: for he had married her.

18 For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

19 Therefore He-rō'dī-as had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him; but she could not:

20 For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and observed him: and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.

21 And when a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birthday made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee;

22 And when the daughter of the said He-rō'dī-as came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

23 And hesware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom.

24 And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptist.

25 And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger the head of John the Baptist.

26 And the king was exceeding sorry; yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her.

27 And immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison.

28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother.

29 And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

30 ¶ And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught.

31 And he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

32 And they departed into a desert place by ship privately.

background of this family, see J. A. Alexander, Commentary on the Gospel of Mark, pp. 151-152.)

Since John the Baptist played such an important role in Jesus' ministry, Mark felt compelled to include the account of his death. Also, the political scene was often overlooked, but here the governing official's reaction allows the reader to view another side of the story.

20-22. The secular world during the New Testament era was filled with mysticism and superstition. Thus, even though Herod did not understand his message, he feared John. Recognizing his dedicated life-style, Herod was reluctant to harm John lest God be vengeful.

23. Note the absurdity of this rash promise: Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom. "Herod was not a king and did not possess a kingdom; the tetrarchy he ruled he did not rule in his own right but under the Roman Emperor. It was not in his power to give the half or any part of it to whom he pleased" (R. Lenski, St. Mark's Gospel, p. 255).

24. Unto her mother. Children naturally look to their parents for guidance, but this unfortunate girl had a mother who not only was ungodly herself, but who did not hesitate to involve her daughter in her depraved plan.

25-30. For the sake of an unscriptural oath (Lev 5:4) and Herod's audience, one of the greatest men who ever lived was murdered.

3. Pressures. 6:31-36.

31-33. Slipping aside from the crowds, Jesus and the apostles acquired a boat and embarked for a private place. Once they were offshore some noticed the boat and many knew Him. The word knew (Gr epiginōskō) means "recognized," and since him is not found in the better Greek manuscripts, "them" could have been supplied just as easily.

33 And the people saw them departing, and many knew him, and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him.

34 And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: and he began to teach them many things.

35 And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed:

36 Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat.

37 He answered and said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat?

38 He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see. And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes.

39 And he commanded them to make all sit down by companies upon the green grass.

40 And they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and by fifties.

41 And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves, and gave them to his disciples to set before them; and the two fishes divided he among them all.

42 And they did all eat, and were filled.

43 And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments, and of the fishes.

44 And they that did eat of the loaves were about five thousand men.

45 ¶ And straightway he constrained his disciples to get into the ship, and to go to the other side before unto Bēth-sā'i-da, while he sent away the people.

46 And when he had sent them away, he departed into a mountain to pray.

47 And when even was come, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone on the land.

48 And he saw them toiling in rowing; for the wind was contrary unto them: and about the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, walking upon the sea, and would have passed by them.

49 But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out:

50 For they all saw him, and were troubled. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid.

51 And he went up unto them into the ship; and the wind ceased: and they were sore amazed in themselves beyond measure, and wondered.

52 For they considered not the miracle of the loaves: for their heart was hardened.

53 And when they had passed over, they came into the land of Gēn-nēs'a-ret, and drew to the shore.

Verse 33 should then begin, "A great many people saw them leaving and recognized them, so that they ran on foot . . ."

34. Tired and hungry, Jesus could easily have been disturbed by their persistence; His response is incredible! He was moved with compassion.

35-36. Perhaps the apostles had a selfish motive when they asked Jesus to dismiss the crowds, for they have nothing to eat. Verse 31 would indicate that they themselves had greater hunger.

4. Feeding the five thousand. 6:37-44.

37. Hungry and tired, Jesus appeared as other men, but suddenly the supernatural erupted. Give ye them to eat was a command to do the impossible.

38-44. The details remove all possibility of minimizing the event as something less than miraculous:

- The materials: five loaves, two fish.
- The audience: very organized (unusual stories could understandably result from a chaotic situation).
- The leftovers: twelve baskets (no one could claim that the people ate little because the food was scarce).
- The number of people: five thousand men (Gr anēr) definitely refers to adult males. The generic term (Gr anthrōpos) is not used here.

5. Walking on the sea. 6:45-52.

45-52. Verse 31 indicated that He wanted to rest, but here He exerted an urgency to pray. Jesus demonstrated His power not simply in order to aid the disciples, for He could have uttered an effective command from shore. This miracle aimed at confirming His identity. The apostles reacted beyond measure. The fact that they considered not the miracle of the loaves points to their reluctance to accept Jesus as God. They viewed His miracles as divine interventions upon His life.

6. Reception at Gennesaret. 6:53-56.

53. Gennesaret is located on the western shore of Galilee south of Capernaum and north of Tiberias. It was well known for its fertile soil.

MARK 6:54

54 And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they knew him.

55 And ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was.

56 And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched him were made whole.

CHAPTER 7

THEN came together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem.

2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled, that is to say, with unwashen, hands, they found fault.

3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders.

4 And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots, brassen vessels, and of tables.

5 Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands?

6 He answered and said unto them, Well hath E-sā'ias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.

7 Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

8 For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.

9 And he said unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.

10 For Moses said, Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death:

11 But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free.

12 And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother;

13 Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.

14 ¶And when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand:

15 There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man.

54-56. The enthusiasm displayed by these people was probably due to their close proximity to Capernaum, which functioned as a headquarters for the Lord. The news of miraculous healings continuously spread through their neighborhoods, and one day, unannounced, the Healer arrived. People hurried to their sick relatives and friends to bear them before His presence. So frantically was this performed that whithersoever He turned He met people with infirmities.

H. Pharisees and Tradition. 7:1-23.

7:1. The Pharisees, and certain of the scribes were undoubtedly sent by the nation's religious leaders from Jerusalem to observe and record any unlawful activity or teaching.

2. Mark 6:31 states that Jesus and His assistants were so busy that they often skipped meals. When they had time to eat, these "religious authorities" observed a breach of the law, eating with unwashen hands. Their fanaticism is apparent because their negative attitudes, seizing an insignificant detail of tradition, completely overlooked the laborious service that was rendered.

3-4. The apostles were characterized by their involvement in serving people, the Pharisees by their pertinacious adherence to Jewish law and custom. Holding is an intense expression which implies a strong, tight grasp as a hawk would seize its prey. Tradition (Gr paradōsis) comes from two words which mean "to give alongside of." Thus, Jewish tradition is men's statutes set alongside of God's law. It is not the law, but has been accepted and taught with equal authority.

5-7. Although it may appear that Jesus ignored their question, He actually strikes at the heart of the issue with such directness that they are offended. Why not keep tradition? Because you who practice it are just role-playing. Hypocrites (Gr hypokrites) originally referred to someone who acted in the theatre. They were merely imitating true spirituality. Their conception of religion was false because it was based upon outward conformity to a set of rules.

8-9. Usually when man affixes tradition alongside of inspired truth he centers his attention so much upon what is added that the original is neglected. Full well (Gr kalōs) is idiomatic as in "that's just great!" The Lord used sarcasm to reaffirm the folly of their conduct.

10-13. These verses present an example of how their tradition nullified the law. The precept, Honor thy father and thy mother, which included "honoring" by financial support, is among the Ten Commandments (Ex 20:12). It became customary for supposedly pious Jews to claim that their funds were already designated as a gift to God, when they were confronted with their parents' need. More than that, a Pharisee could impose a certain amount upon a layman, and if he replied, "But I am obligated to help my mother and father!" he could insist, "You are freed from this commandment, because that money is Corban (Greek transliteration of Hebrew qarban, meaning a gift for God); it is a God-appointed gift for His service."

14-19. Whatsoever . . . entereth refers to food, physical matter which contains no moral significance.

16 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable.

18 And he saith unto them, Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him;

19 Because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats?

20 And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man.

21 For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders,

22 Thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness:

23 All these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

24 ¶And from thence he arose, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and entered into an house, and would have no man know it, but he could not be hid.

25 For a certain woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet:

26 The woman was a Greek, a Sy-ro-phe-nī'cian by nation; and she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

27 But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs.

28 And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs.

29 And he said unto her, For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

30 And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

31 ¶And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of De-căp'o-līs.

32 And they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech; and they beseech him to put his hand upon him.

33 And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue;

34 And looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Eph'phatha, that is, Be opened.

20-23. That which cometh out He interprets as non-physical, anything stemming from the mind or heart. If actions, words, or thoughts originate in an evil, rebellious heart, they certainly must be contrary to God and righteousness.

III. THE MINISTRY BEYOND GALILEE. 7:24-9:50.

At this point in the narrative a new phase in Jesus' ministry begins. Previously He had remained in Galilee or in the vicinity of the Sea of Galilee, but henceforth His travels extend farther, although He limited them to the north.

A. Tyre and Sidon. 7:24-30.

24. Tyre and Sidon were two port cities along the Mediterranean Sea northwest of Galilee, and borders refers to the regions or neighboring communities surrounding them. Jesus' intent on this trip was not evangelism. He would have no man know that He was present. Perhaps He sought to find solitude after the trying encounter with the Jerusalem delegation.

25-26. Two words identify the woman. She was Greek and Syrophenician. The former categorized her as non-Jewish, while the latter indicates the unification of two countries, Syria and Phoenicia. The word besought explains the apparent reluctance of Jesus to heed a Gentile. It is a mild word (Gr erōtaō) which simply means "asked." He replies by testing the intent of her desire and faith.

27-28. Jesus' illustration of dogs is not an expression of contempt for Greeks. He is merely putting a test before her.

29. For this saying. Her words proved her heart attitude, and her request was granted. Devil (Gr daimonion) should be "demon."

30. The verb in the clause, her daughter laid upon the bed, does not adequately express the force involved. The Greek perfect passive may indicate she had been thrown upon the bed, the demon committing his last violent act before his departure.

B. Decapolis. 7:31-8:9.

31. From Phoenicia Christ journeyed southeast of the Sea of Galilee to Decapolis, the region of "ten cities."

1. A deaf-mute healed. 7:32-37.

32-34. Why did Jesus resort to this healing procedure when a word could do all that was necessary? It seems that He responded to people's attitudes and requests accordingly. Here they asked Him to touch the deaf-mute, so He obliged.

MARK 7:35

35 And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.

36 And he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it;

37 And were beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

CHAPTER 8

IN those days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them,

2 I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat:

3 And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far.

4 And his disciples answered him, From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness?

5 And he asked them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven.

6 And he commanded the people to sit down on the ground: and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them; and they did set them before the people.

7 And they had a few small fishes: and he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them.

8 So they did eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets.

9 And they that had eaten were about four thousand: and he sent them away.

10 ¶And straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dāl-ma-nū'tha.

11 And the Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him.

12 And he sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation.

13 And he left them, and entering into the ship again departed to the other side.

14 ¶Now the disciples had forgotten

35. The string (Gr desmos) of his tongue is that which binds the physical member, preventing clear speech. The noun is translated “fetter” or “bond” when describing the instrument which restrains a prisoner.

36-37. Tell no man. See comments on Mark 5:43 regarding these instructions.

2. Feeding the four thousand. 8:1-9.

8:1. Notice that Jesus called his disciples, but prior to the previous feeding of the five thousand they had worriedly approached Him about the need for food (Mk 6:35-36). Their faith had grown.

2-3. The bulk of these followers were from Decapolis, where Jesus was ministering (7:31), although some came from far. The latter perhaps had followed Him from Tyre and Sidon (7:31). Their desire to be with Him surpassed their feelings of hunger, for they had fasted three days.

4. The contrast between the need and the location is emphasized, From whence . . . here . . . in the wilderness.

5. Of course the Lord could have created food out of nothing, but He chose to use what was available, even though it appeared insignificantly small.

6-7. As with the previous miraculous feeding, the distribution was highly organized (6:39-40).

8. They . . . were filled (Gr chortazō). There was enough food for each to eat until his appetite was thoroughly satisfied. In fact, leftovers filled seven baskets (Gr spyris) which at times were large enough to hold men (Acts 9:25).

9. The number four thousand does not specify men as with the five thousand, so the size of the gathering could have been significantly smaller. Since there are those who attempt to merge the two accounts into one event, the significant differences should be noted: the number of people fed, the place, the time, the numbers of fish, loaves and baskets.

C. Passing Through Galilee. 8:10-26.

1. The trip to Dalmanutha. 8:10-13.

10. The location of Dalmanutha is unknown, although the context implies it is on the western side of the Sea of Galilee. The parallel passage in Matthew (Mt 15:39) calls it Magdala.

11. The Pharisees' approach to Jesus had an apparent motive, seeking of him a sign, but they actually came tempting him. Their appeal implied that Jesus' previous miracles were insufficient evidence that He was of God.

12-13. Matthew 13:58 sets forth a principle which relates the Lord's response to this religious party, “He did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.”

2. The leaven of the Pharisees. 8:14-21.

14-21. Take heed, beware literally means “Continue taking heed, keep watching,” because both imperatives are in the

to take bread, neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf.

15 And he charged them, saying, Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod.

16 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have no bread.

17 And when Jesus knew it, he saith unto them, Why reason ye, because ye have no bread? perceive ye not yet, neither understand? have ye your heart yet hardened?

18 Having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember?

19 When I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve.

20 And when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven.

21 And he said unto them, How is it that ye do not understand?

22 ¶And he cometh to Bēth-sā'i-da: and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him.

23 And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought.

24 And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees, walking.

25 After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up: and he was restored, and saw every man clearly.

26 And he sent him away to his house, saying, Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

27 ¶And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Cæs-a-re'a Phī-lip'pi: and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am?

28 And they answered, John the Baptist: but some say, E-lī'as; and others, One of the prophets.

29 And he saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth and saith unto him, Thou art the Christ.

30 And he charged them that they should tell no man of him.

31 ¶And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.

32 And he spake that saying openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.

33 But when he had turned about and Greek present tense. Leaven, or yeast, is a substance which ferments in order to produce its effect and spreads throughout every fiber of the dough. The diffusion of this souring substance illustrates an evil equality of false teachers. The Pharisees and Herod seem to be an odd combination. Matthew unites the Pharisees and the Sadducees (Mt 16:6) with a common leaven. If Herod belonged to the Sadducee sect, as many scholars believe, the common denominator would be their attachment to a false religion.

3. The healing of a blind man. 8:22-26.

22. In Bethsaida, a coastal city on the northeast point of Galilee, a certain party led a blind man to Jesus.

23-25. This miracle is unique because most of Jesus' supernatural acts occurred in a single word or touch. He put his hands again upon his eyes, in order to bestow perfect vision.

26. Jesus wanted as little publicity as possible. Besides the direct command here, verse 23 explains that He led the blind man outside the town before He healed him.

D. Caesarea Philippi. 8:27-9:1.

27. Caesarea Philippi lay north and slightly east of the Sea of Galilee, approximately the same distance from it as from Tyre. The first half of the name, obviously referring to Caesar, was common. The latter half distinguished it from the coastal city, Caesarea, by identifying it as a part of Philip's realm. Jesus' inquiry, Whom do men say that I am?, introduced the more direct question which followed.

28. The response was that of the masses rather than the religious leaders, who claimed that He was a messenger of the devil (Mark 3:22).

29-30. In Greek ye is emphatic; it was their conclusion about His person that was the issue. Peter retorted without any hesitation, Thou art the Christ. The Greek Christos comes from the word which means "to anoint," the "Anointed One" being the Messiah (Heb Mashiah). Matthew adds to this title "the Son of the living God" (Mt 16:16). Although the apostles seemed to recognize His true identity, confusion remained because like other Jews they were looking for a military leader.

31. This verse marks a turning point in the book. If there had existed hopes for an earthly kingdom established by Christ, they were now dismissed, because at this point he began to teach them of His suffering, rejection, death, and resurrection.

32-33. Jesus' announcement was made openly but Peter led Him aside to rebuke Him. The impulsive apostle cringed in unbelief at what he heard, and he quickly let it be known that he was unwilling to accept it. The harsh statement, Get thee looked on his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men.

MARK 8:34

34 ¶And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

35 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it.

36 For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?

37 Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

38 Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.

CHAPTER 9

AND he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.

2 ¶And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before them.

3 And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them.

4 And there appeared unto them E-l-i'as with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus.

5 And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for E-l-i'as.

6 For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.

7 And there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.

8 And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves.

9 And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they behind me, Satan, arose because the attempt to sway Christ from God's plan of salvation made him a tempter of the worst sort. Peter savourest not (did not set his mind on) the things of God, but rather on what his finite wisdom deemed best.

34. The disciples believed and yet they misunderstood Christ's plan. Therefore, He set forth some basic principles that explain the real meaning of life. Deny himself. Asceticism has its end in itself, but the type of self-denial proposed here aims to give the Lord Jesus Christ the preeminence. He Himself said, "Not my will, but thine be done" (Mt 26:39). Although self-denial means giving up one's rights, God does not usually require abandonment of personal property.

35-37. What a man attempts to save or gain, he ultimately will lose. On the other hand, if one loses all for the sake of Christ and the gospel he actually is preserving his life.

38. A man may speak boldly and candidly among friends. The test of character for a Christian comes when he must stand for Christ in the midst of adulterous and sinful men. The Lord's day will come, but do our lives demonstrate that we really believe it now?

9:1. This verse belongs at the end of chapter 8; it is the final statement in Christ's lecture about self-denial. Although He had just emphasized the spiritual over the physical, men seek and need physical evidence. Thus, it is promised: some . . . here, . . . shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power. Various interpretations have been offered regarding this statement. Since the transfiguration occurs next in the narration, that event probably symbolizes His coming with power because of the outward glory revealed.

E. Mount of Transfiguration. 9:2-29.

2. Peter and James and John, Jesus' closest companions, consisted of what is often called the "inner circle." The high mountain perhaps refers to Mt. Hermon, the highest in the vicinity of Caesarea Philippi. The word describing His transfiguration (Gr metamorphoō) signifies an outward manifestation of an inward change.

3. Although Matthew and Luke's accounts mention Jesus' change in countenance, Mark restricts his comments to the Lord's apparel. A fuller was one who professionally cleaned clothing.

4. Elijah [Elias] and Moses appeared with Jesus because of their close connection with Him in prophecy. Elijah stands out as the more prominent figure because his ministry more closely correlates with the messianic advents.

5-6. Peter misjudged in his suggestion primarily because his impulsive nature responded too quickly (Jas 1:19). Although he had just exalted Christ as the Son of the living God, here he placed Him on an equal plane with the two prophets.

7-10. Jesus' uniqueness is confirmed from heaven: This is my beloved Son: Hear him. Jesus frequently restricted people from proclaiming His miracles in order to allow God's plan of salvation to be carried out. Had His supernatural identity been revealed, people would not have permitted His death.

should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead.

10 And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean.

11 ¶And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes that E-li'as must first come?

12 And he answered and told them, E-li'as verily cometh first, and restor-eth all things; and how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought.

13 But I say unto you, That E-li'as is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

14 ¶And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

15 And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him saluted him.

16 And he asked the scribes, What question ye with them?

17 And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit;

18 And wheresoever he taketh him, he teareth him: and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and they could not.

19 He answereth him, and saith, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him unto me.

20 And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, straightway the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming.

21 And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child.

22 And oftimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

23 Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

24 And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.

25 When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him.

26 And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead.

27 But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.

11-13. The three apostles became puzzled about Elijah's connection with the Messiah in prophecy. The scribes claimed Elijah must first come (Mal 4:5-6), yet his recent appearance obviously was not before Christ. Jesus agreed with the scribes, but interpreted Elijah's coming spiritually. Verse 13 hints at Elijah's connection with John the Baptist and Matthew 17:13 confirms it.

14-15. Evidently the crowds were unaware that Jesus was near for when they saw Him they . . . were greatly amazed or surprised. Saluted means that they "greeted" Him.

16-17. The petitioner's desperation may be seen by his boldness. Jesus directed a question to the scribes but one of the multitude interrupted. Master means teacher. Dumb spirit may be rendered "a spirit of silence" or "a mute spirit."

18. The youth's problem was more than his inability to speak. The indwelling demon persistently gave him convulsions. Among other things, Jesus had empowered His disciples to cast out demons, but a terse indictment erupted from a despairing father: they could not, they did not have the power.

19. Jesus' expression of displeasure against the faithless generation was not specifically directed toward one person nor just a small group. The word generation refers to a whole race. The scribes continued to voice doubts, the disciples could not heal, and the father of the mute son came out of despair, not in genuine faith.

20. Tare means he caused his victim to have convulsions.

21-23. A full description is given of the condition. The length and severity are clearly expressed to dismiss any superficial conclusions that the ailment may have been temporary. The healing could only be interpreted as a miracle. The brief dialogue between the petitioner and the Lord teaches a fundamental principle about obtaining supernatural aid from God. As with this individual, human nature usually approaches God with doubts about His ability: if thou canst do any thing . . . But Jesus clarified the issue. The prerequisite for healing never is doubtful on God's part, only on man's. If thou canst believe, all things are possible.

24-27. The man, recognizing the burden laid upon him, confessed his imperfect faith: Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief. He longed for stronger faith, and God granted his request, not because He saw mature faith, but because He honored his desire for growth.

28 And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out?

29 And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.

30 ¶And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee; and he would not that any man should know it.

31 For he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day.

32 But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him.

33 ¶And he came to Ca-per'na-um: and being in the house he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34 But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves, who should be the greatest.

35 And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all.

36 And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them,

37 Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.

38 ¶And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbad him, because he followeth not us.

39 But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me.

40 For he that is not against us is on our part.

41 For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward.

42 And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea.

43 And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched:

44 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

45 And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched:

46 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

47 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck

28-29. Jesus' answer to the question, Why could we not cast him out?, is written three ways: (1) Verse 29 says by prayer and fasting; (2) a few manuscripts, including those on which the AV is based, add fasting; and (3) Matthew records that the reason for failure was "unbelief," with a brief illustration about mustard-seed-type faith following (Mt 17:20). The two accounts harmonize for if a person seeks God in a season of prayer, faith will result. Mark and Matthew simply chose different emphases.

F. The Secret Trip Through Galilee. 9:30-50.

30-32. The Lord Jesus knew that soon He would depart for Jerusalem (10:1). The final phase of His earthly ministry was drawing near. Therefore, this trip through Galilee was reserved for the edification of His disciples. Again He taught them about His death and resurrection, but they understood not. In fact, Matthew notes, "they were exceeding sorry" (Mt 17:23).

33-34. After they entered their house in Capernaum, Jesus asked the Twelve what they had been discussing on the journey. Apparently they felt guilty, for they held their peace. Even though no one answered, He began a discourse on the very subject they had been disputing.

35-37. Humility characterizes those who genuinely desire to serve Christ and His kingdom. A disciple should esteem himself as a servant (Gr diakonos), one who willingly attends to menial tasks and eagerly receives children without recognition or reward.

38-41. John's experience occasioned an injunction against judging. The expression He that is not against us is on our part, often is exaggerated to opposite extremes. Second John 10-11 exhorts Christians to guard against fellowship which condones false teaching, and yet we must be careful not to distort this command so as to foster spiritual cliques.

42. To offend (cause to stumble) one of these little ones is so serious that immediate death would be better than further involvement, and thus, greater judgment. A millstone refers to a large stone used in a mill for grinding, this particular type being large enough to require a donkey to move it.

43-48. Jesus used a hyperbole to impress His listeners with the gravity of sin. It would be better to sever a member of the body than to keep it and go to hell. It is obvious, however, that the real problem lies in the heart and mind. The word translated hell (Gr geenman) is a transliteration of Hebrew, and means the "valley of Hinnom." Lying to the south of Jerusalem, it was used as a rubbish heap and gradually adopted a spiritual application. Fires burned continuously and worms multiplied throughout the debris. Thus the statement, their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched, illustrates the eternal destruction of those who have not received the Saviour.

it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire:

48 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

49 For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt.

50 Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

CHAPTER 10

AND he arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judæa by the farther side of Jordan: and the people resort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them again.

2 ¶And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him.

3 And he answered and said unto them, What did Moses command you?

4 And they said, Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.

5 And Jesus answered and said unto them, For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept.

6 But from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female.

7 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife;

8 And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh.

9 What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

10 And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter.

11 And he saith unto them, Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her.

12 And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

13 ¶And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them.

14 But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

15 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.

49-50. These concluding statements stand as a warning to would-be offenders. Lest one follows an unrepenting road to hell, everyone shall be salted with fire, that is, a certain amount of affliction befalls everyone in order to stir them toward God. This kind of fire acts as salt. It takes something insignificant and adds meaning. On the other hand, if salt has lost his saltness, it becomes ineffective and even tribulation may not turn the sinner from his way. The last clause must be related to both the ideas which preceded. Have salt could be paraphrased, "Receive God's providential lessons" and have peace refers to their dispute over who was greatest.

IV. THE CONCLUDING MINISTRY. 10:1-13:37.

A. Peraea (Beyond Jordan). 10:1-31.

1. On the way. 10:1.

10:1. Although the other gospel writers tell us that Jesus made former trips to the south, this one toward Jerusalem marks a definite break in Mark's narrative. The only other time Jesus journeyed south in Mark's account was for baptism, but at this point Jesus' departure from the north was permanent.

2. The discourse on divorce. 10:2-12.

2-9. The reference to Moses demonstrates Christ's authority over the Old Testament. Although Moses permitted divorce (Deut 24:1), it was allowed because of the people's hardness of heart. Jesus, however, proclaimed God's perfect and ideal plan: they twain shall be one flesh.

10-12. After they had left the Pharisees and had found some privacy, the disciples sought a clearer statement about divorce. Anyone who divorces his or her mate, Jesus replied, and marries another is committing adultery. Elsewhere He added an exception: "save for fornication" (Mt 5:32; 19:9).

3. Jesus' attitude toward children. 10:13-16.

13. People commonly brought their sick friends and relatives to Jesus for healing, but on this occasion some brought young children. The disciples failed to see the potential that their Master did. He not only observed what men were, but what by the grace of God they could be.

14-16. Of such is the kingdom of God. A child does not become distracted by all the complexities of life. When he trusts, his faith is simple and unwavering. In fact, to possess salvation one must become as a little child.

MARK 10:16

16 And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

17 ¶And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

18 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God.

19 Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother.

20 And he answered and said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth.

21 Then Jesus beholding him loved him, and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up the cross, and follow me.

22 And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved: for he had great possessions.

23 ¶And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

24 And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God!

25 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, Who then can be saved?

27 And Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible.

28 ¶Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee.

29 And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's.

30 But he shall receive an hundred-fold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.

31 But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

32 ¶And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as

4. The rich young ruler. 10:17-22.

17-18. Jesus' reply, Why callest thou me good, does not deny that He is God. Many passages clearly state that He is God (Jn 1:1; Phil 2:6; Tit 2:13; Heb 1:8), and He Himself claims so (Jn 8:58; 10:30; 11:25). The response here is aimed at the young ruler's attitude toward himself. Verse 20 indicates that he considered himself to be good. Jesus wanted him to know of whom that adjective should be exclusively used.

19-21. The burden of keeping the whole law (Jas 2:10) was overbearing, yet this man claims adherence to its demands. As if those laws were not enough, Jesus adds to them, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give . . .

22. This was too much; he went away grieved. Does this story teach that salvation is merited by good works? One must remember that prior to the acceptance of the gospel a man needs to recognize his need. Jesus was aware of the man's self-righteous attitude, trusting in his observance of rules. Therefore, his need was for Christ to point out one thing thou lackest. Men must be cognizant of their sin and guilt before they can be ready for "good news."

5. The perils of riches. 10:23-31.

23-24. It is almost impossible to find an extremely wealthy person who is not trusting in his riches.

25-27. Verse 25 imagines an impossible act, and verse 27 reassures the bewildered apostles: with God all things are possible. There is an inference of salvation by grace. The Lord will make possible through Christ's death what man cannot do in himself.

28-31. Peter's claim, we have left all, may have been true, but it also reveals pride. Graciously, Jesus responds with a promise; whoever forsakes his life for the gospel will receive incomparable rewards. Since the relationships refer to spiritual ones in God's family, the things mentioned may speak of new homes opened in Christian hospitality as well as personal physical blessings.

B. On the Way to Jerusalem. 10:32-52.

1. On the road. 10:32-34.

32. They were afraid. Because they were going toward Jerusalem, they sensed impending doom.

they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him.

33 Saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles:

34 And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again.

35 ¶And James and John, the sons of Zēb'e-dee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire.

36 And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you?

37 They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory.

38 But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?

39 And they said unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized:

40 But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

41 And when the ten heard it, they began to be much displeased with James and John.

42 But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them.

43 But so shall it not be among you; but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister:

44 And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all.

45 For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

46 ¶And they came to Jericho: and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples and a great number of people, blind Bār-ti-mæ'us, the son of Ti-mæ'us, sat by the highway side begging.

33-34. Knowing their feelings, Jesus predicted what would happen to Him in greater detail than ever before.

2. James' and John's request. 10:35-45.

35-37. The petition exposes the instability of the apostles. They did not understand the salvation which was about to be accomplished, nor its implication on their life-styles. Notice how contrary this desire is to Jesus' recent discourse on humility (Mk 9:33-35).

38-39. The display of ignorance continues, for instead of admitting their frailty, they claimed ability to partake of the Lord's cup and baptism. Kindly, Jesus refrains from rebuking them.

40. God will reward His servants according to faithfulness. A position in heaven is granted, not upon request, but for whom it is prepared, based on faithful service.

41-44. The Gentiles' system of success (that of the secular world) is based on "getting ahead of the other guy." The philosophy of Christ refutes this. Christians are to serve and help others, to be other-centered and not self-centered.

45. The greatest example of this philosophy is our Lord Himself. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. The verb (Gr diakoneō) means to serve as an attendant, to wait on tables. The greatest service the Lord Jesus Christ could ever render for man was to give his life a ransom for many. He had foretold His death and resurrection several times, but this occasion bore special significance, because He interpreted His death. The impending doom would lead to ultimate victory. The ransom would be paid; slaves of sin set free. The last three words of this phrase merit individual treatment. Ransom (Gr lytron) signifies a loosing, debtors freed. For (Gr anti) specifically means "in behalf of" indicating a substitutionary death; He died in our place. Many simply emphasized a contrast in number: one person died, the ransom is paid for many.

3. In Jericho. 10:46-52.

46. Jericho was the "City of Palms," located just a few miles from the Jordan River.

MARK 10:47

47 And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

48 And many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

49 And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they call the blind man, saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee.

50 And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus.

51 And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight.

52 And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

CHAPTER 11

AND when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bēth'pha-gē and Bethany, at the mount of Olives, he sendeth forth two of his disciples,

2 And saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him.

3 And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him; and straightway he will send him hither.

4 And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without in a place where two ways met; and they loose him.

5 And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosening the colt?

6 And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go.

7 And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

8 And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord:

10 Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

11 And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple: and when he had looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

12 ¶And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:

47. Since Jesus was a rather common name, the phrase of Nazareth (lit., the Nazarene) clearly identified Him. Remarkably, Bartimaeus addressed Him as Son of David, aware of Jesus' ancestry and right to the Davidic throne.

48. The imperfect tense is employed in the Greek verb, stressing continuous action. They were attempting to silence this annoying cry, but he began calling even louder.

49-51. Jesus responded differently, commanded him to be called, because He perceived the man's need and his faith.

52. In reality it was the power of God that healed, but the man's faith was the channel by which that strength could flow.

C. Near Jerusalem. 11:1-13:37.

1. The Triumphal Entry. 11:1-11.

11:1. Bethphage and Bethany were very near Jerusalem, located on the opposite side of the Mount of Olives.

2. Jesus' knowledge of the animal's presence, ye shall find a colt, assumes that previous contact had been made with the owner (see the next verse). Its description, whereon never man sat, relates to a custom from the Old Testament (Deut 21:3; I Sam 6:7), which specifies that animals to be used for certain religious rites must not have previously been ridden, burdened, or harnessed for labor.

3-8. The statement the Lord hath need of him presupposes that the owners of the colt knew and wanted to obey Christ. It is possible, but very doubtful, that Jesus would have supernaturally imparted such a reaction. Their garments (vs. 7) refer to the long, thin outer robes. Zechariah 9:9 foresaw this event.

9-10. The jubilant exclamation exalted Jesus as "One who comes" or "the coming One," a Jewish title used for Messiah. The Hebrew equivalent of hosanna means "grant salvation," but here it signifies little more than an emotional expression. The people were expecting an earthly kingdom to be established, the kingdom of our father David. Their cry includes quotes from Psalm 118:25-26 and was chanted customarily at the Passover celebrations.

11. Mark is very brief, but Matthew informs us that Jesus healed many and had an encounter with the chief priests and scribes (Mt 21:14-15).

2. Bethany. 11:12-26.

12. The morrow would have been Monday of the passion week, the day after Palm Sunday. The expression he was hungry is one among many that proves Christ's humanity. The Second Person of the Trinity was a genuine man and felt the same physical needs as we do.

13. The normal order of growth in fig trees was that the fruit preceded the leaves. Therefore, the leaves presented a false picture, that fruit not only was present, but it was large and ripe.

14. Jesus' curse upon the fruitless tree was not the result of a quick temper; He used the occasion as an object lesson against hypocrisy and misrepresenting the truth.

15-16. The close proximity of the curse and the cleansing was not accidental. Jesus displayed His feelings toward false claims through the fig tree, and those businesses in the Temple undoubtedly professed to be helping worshippers by making objects of sacrifice available. Jesus recognized that their real motive was greed.

17. The quote from Isaiah 56:7 significantly includes of all nations. God's house is revered even by Gentiles as a place of prayer. What would visitors think of the Temple with such a worldly market within its gates? Even more important, how would they view the God of such a religion?

18-19. The religious leaders hated Jesus for His indictments against their hypocrisy, but here they began to conspire as a result of jealousy over His popularity as a teacher.

20. In the morning was Tuesday of the passion week.

21-22. The cursing of the fig tree is given a spiritual application. By faith this tree was destroyed; all things are possible if you Have faith in God.

23-24. The Lord's illustration is extreme so that it may dismiss all excuses which limit the faith principle. What could be more difficult than a mountain being removed and cast into the sea?

25-26. The request for forgiveness, besides needing faith as with other petitions, requires a willingness to forgive others. Trespases (Gr paraptōma) are offenses, false steps, or blunders.

3. Jerusalem. 11:27-12:44.

27-29. The chief priests and the scribes and the elders came to Christ in an official capacity putting forth the question regarding His authority, which was the paramount issue between them.

30-33. These leaders were not men of principle, for they considered answering Jesus' question according to popular response and not by conviction. Since either of the possible answers would create a negative reaction, they remained silent, 13 And seeing a fig tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find anything thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.

14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.

15 ¶And they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the moneychangers, and the seats of them that sold doves;

16 And would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple.

17 And he taught, saying unto them, Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves.

18 And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine.

19 And when even was come, he went out of the city.

20 ¶And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig tree dried up from the roots.

21 And Peter calling to remembrance saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig tree which thou cursedst is withered away.

22 And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God.

23 For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith.

24 Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.

25 And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespases.

26 But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespases.

27 ¶And they come again to Jerusalem: and as he was walking in the temple, there come to him the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders,

28 And say unto him, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority to do these things?

29 And Jesus answered and said unto them, I will also ask of you one question, and answer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do these things.

30 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? answer me.

31 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then did ye not believe him?

MARK 11:32

32 But if we shall say, Of men; they feared the people: for all men counted John, that he was a prophet indeed.

33 And they answered and said unto Jesus, We cannot tell. And Jesus answering saith unto them, Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

CHAPTER 12

AND he began to speak unto them by parables. A certain man planted a vineyard, and set an hedge about it, and digged a place for the winefat, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country.

2 And at the season he sent to the husbandmen a servant, that he might receive from the husbandmen of the fruit of the vineyard.

3 And they caught him, and beat him, and sent him away empty.

4 And again he sent unto them another servant; and at him they cast stones, and wounded him in the head, and sent him away shamefully handled.

5 And again he sent another; and him they killed, and many others; beating some, and killing some.

6 Having yet therefore one son, his wellbeloved, he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son.

7 But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours.

8 And they took him, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard.

9 What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? he will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others.

10 And have ye not read this scripture; The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner:

11 This was the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes?

12 And they sought to lay hold on him, but feared the people: for they knew that he had spoken the parable against them; and they left him, and went their way.

13 ¶And they send unto him certain of the Pharisees and of the Herodians, to catch him in his words.

14 And when they were come, they say unto him, Master, we know that thou art true, and carest for no man: for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth: Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar, or not?

15 Shall we give, or shall we not give? But he, knowing their hypocrisy, said claiming ignorance. Jesus, however, was straightforward, Neither do I tell you.

12:1. Christ used parables constantly in His ministry. He began to do so here with the prominent Jewish leaders. Hedge (Gr phragmos) means fence, probably a stone wall. The winefat (Gr hypolënon) was a receptacle below the winepress, into which the grape juice flowed through a wooden grate. The tower was erected to provide a safe storage area. Let it out (Gr ekdidómi) may be translated "rented it" or "leased it." All these details are listed to suggest the thorough business manner of the owner.

2. At the season, the time of harvest, the owner sent for the rental price which was paid not in cash, but of the fruit.

3-5. Many servants were sent to these vine-growers to collect the owner's share. None accomplished his mission. In fact, they were beaten, mistreated, and some even murdered. It seems hardly possible that a landowner would continue to send small parties when he could have sent a large band to forcibly take the land, or that servants would obey such dangerous orders. These facts not only are included for the purposes of the story, but they illustrate God's long-suffering with His people in the Old Testament.

6. The son obviously represents Jesus Christ Himself. The attitude with which the Jews should have accepted Him is expressed in the statement: They will reverence my son. However, God's eternal purpose was to send His Son to die for our sins (I Jn 2:2).

7-9. The ultimate act of violence, the slaying of the son, brought swift and final judgment upon those greedy men. Likewise, God endured the rebellious actions of His people for centuries. Their leaders had drifted so far from the truth that when the Son of God appeared, they rejected and murdered Him.

10-11. Psalm 118:22-23 is here fulfilled. The picture of a building parallels that of the church, of which Christ is head.

12-13. They (chief priests, scribes, and elders; Mk 11:27), having determined to destroy the Son, sent some Pharisees (2:16) and Herodians (3:6) to trap Him by something they might get Him to say.

14. The delegation introduced a "loaded" question, cleverly attempting to influence the way He answered. Carest for no man means not partial to any man (not even to the highest person in government). They wanted His answer to declare or imply disloyalty to Rome. Teachest the way of God in truth does not express their conviction, but hoped to appeal to Jesus' integrity. They judged that if He answered honestly, He would be "caught" by His own words.

15. Denarius (Gr dënarion) was the actual name of the coin called penny.

unto them, Why tempt ye me? bring me a penny, that I may see it.

16 And they brought it. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? And they said unto him, Cæsar's.

17 And Jesus answering said unto them, Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's. And they marvelled at him.

18 ¶Then come unto him the Sād'ducees, which say there is no resurrection; and they asked him, saying,

19 Master, Moses wrote unto us, If a man's brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

20 Now there were seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and dying left no seed.

21 And the second took her, and died, neither left he any seed: and the third likewise.

22 And the seven had her, and left no seed: last of all the woman died also.

23 In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of them? for the seven had her to wife.

24 And Jesus answering said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the scriptures, neither the power of God?

25 For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are as the angels which are in heaven.

26 And as touching the dead, that they rise: have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?

27 He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: ye therefore do greatly err.

28 ¶And one of the scribes came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the first commandment of all?

29 And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord:

30 And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment.

16-17. The Lord's question draws their attention to Caesar by the image and superscription. However, the principle that He sets forth calls for obedience to both the government (Rom 13) and God in their respective areas. Render (Gr apodidōmi) does not limit the expectation to paying tribute as in verse 14. It means "to pay back in full" whatever is owed. The word image suggests a further idea. Although the coin bore Caesar's image which pointed to his authority, man himself was created in God's image (Gen 1:26). Therefore, the picture was an image of Caesar immediately, but of God ultimately, implying that the emperor's authority is under divine sovereignty.

18. The Sadducees were a religious party, like the Pharisees, but differed from them in their liberal interpretation of the Scriptures. A foremost example of their liberal teaching is mentioned here, they say there is no resurrection. They recognized the fact of the doctrine of the resurrection in the Old Testament, but they refused to accept it literally.

19. Deuteronomy 25:5 is the passage referred to. Raise up seed (offspring) expresses a practice of levirate marriage whereby a brother of a childless, deceased man would marry the widow and rear children, designating the firstborn as the legal descendant of his brother.

20-23. The story obviously was an invention aimed at exposing the absurdity of relationships after the resurrection. If there really were a resurrection, they conjectured, seven men would be married to one woman in heaven.

24. The Sadducees' question reveals their unbelief in two fundamental areas: the Scriptures and God's power. Surprisingly, these men held prominent positions among the chosen people, yet did not recognize how foundational the resurrection was in Old Testament doctrine and living. Their problem began with the denial of the supernatural, the power of God.

25-27. The change which transpires in man from earth to heaven is extreme: they neither marry nor are given in marriage; but are as the angels which are in heaven.

28. One of the scribes. A scribe was a professional interpreter of the Old Testament.

29-30. Jesus quotes what is termed the "shema" from Deuteronomy 6:4-5; Hear, the first word in the Old Testament passage being shamac in Hebrew. The distinctive feature of ancient Judaism was that it held to monotheism among predominantly polytheistic cultures. In fact, "going after other gods" was one of the greatest sins. Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. The multiplicity of words emphasizes the thoroughness and fervency that our love for God should embrace.

31. The second commandment (Lev 19:18) fittingly joins the 31 And the second is like, namely

this, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

32 And the scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and there is none other but he:

33 And to love him with all the heart and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbour as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices.

34 And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. And no man after that durst ask him any question.

35 ¶And Jesus answered and said, while he taught in the temple, How say the scribes that Christ is the son of David?

36 For David himself said by the Holy Ghost, The LORD said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

37 David therefore himself calleth him Lord; and whence is he then his son? And the common people heard him gladly.

38 ¶And he said unto them in his doctrine, Beware of the scribes, which love to go in long clothing, and love salutations in the marketplaces,

39 And the chief seats in the synagogues, and the uppermost rooms at feasts:

40 Which devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayers: these shall receive greater damnation.

41 ¶And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury: and many that were rich cast in much.

42 And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites, which make a farthing.

43 And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in, than all they which have cast into the treasury:

44 For all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living.

CHAPTER 13

AND as he went out of the temple, one of his disciples saith unto him, Master, see what manner of stones and what buildings are here!

2 And Jesus answering said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

first, because genuine love for God naturally results in a love for others. "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets" (Mt 22:40).

32-34. The scribe's response shows deep insight. To love . . . is more than . . . The man recognized that loving God must be the foundation of any worthwhile service or sacrifice.

35-37. After numerous questions, Jesus reversed the situation by asking them one. It deals with David's relationship to the Messiah, Christ. He is both David's Lord and son. How could this be possible? The scribes remained silent, but the answer was not the issue anyhow. Jesus merely wanted to reveal that even the knowledgeable scribes with all their questions had their limits. The New Testament describes Christ as God-man: as incarnate God He was David's Lord; as man He was born in his line. Son means descendant.

38-39. Long clothing customarily was worn by distinguished persons for special occasions. Salutations or greetings were not simply acts of friendly courtesy; they loved recognition for their high positions.

40. Their love for praise paralleled their greed for money. Widows needing assistance to administer their estates often turned to "spiritual" leaders. Scribes gladly aided, managing a contrived plan for their own personal gain. For a pretense or "for appearance sake" declares the motive of long prayers. Greater damnation (judgment) results from this hypocrisy; it also tells us that there will be degrees of punishment.

41. The treasury speaks of an area where thirteen receptacles were placed to receive offerings and taxes for the Temple.

42. Two mites (Gr lepton) which make a farthing (Gr kodrantēs); approximately one fortieth of a penny (Gr dēnariōn) (Mk 12:15). Thus, the gift was very small. Amazingly, she did not keep one coin.

43-44. The amount of an offering does not always signify the measure of love of the one who gives. Often a more important factor is what is held back. She of her want (poverty) did cast in all, everything she needed to live by.

4. Mount of Olives. 13:1-37.

13:1. The disciples' interest in the attractive stones and buildings did not arise from aesthetic appreciation only. Matthew's account of the afternoon's events includes a significant statement just prior to their exit from the Temple: "Behold your house is left unto you desolate" (Mt 23:28 as quoted from Jer 12:7). Thus, they probably wondered why such beautiful buildings would be abandoned.

2. Jesus prophesied the thorough destruction of these edifices. There shall not be left one stone upon another. The Greek emphatic negative construction, has the idea "by no means" or "never."

3 And as he sat upon the mount of Olives over against the temple, Peter and James and John and Andrew asked him privately,

4 Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign when all these things shall be fulfilled?

5 And Jesus answering them began to say, Take heed lest any man deceive you:

6 For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

7 And when ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for such things must needs be; but the end shall not be yet.

8 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of sorrows.

9 ¶But take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten: and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them.

10 And the gospel must first be published among all nations.

11 But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye shall speak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

12 Now the brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause them to be put to death.

13 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

14 ¶But when ye shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing where it ought not, (let him that readeth understand,) then let them that be in Judæa flee to the mountains:

15 And let him that is on the housetop not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his house:

16 And let him that is in the field not turn back again for to take up his garment.

17 But woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days!

18 And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter.

19 For in those days shall be afflic-

3-4. Although the city of Jerusalem and its Temple were destroyed by Titus in A.D. 70, the apostles' question initiates a discourse (called the Olivet Discourse because of its location) regarding the events of the Tribulation Period. It is common in prophetic literature to predict in a single message events with both contemporary and eschatological fulfillments (Ezk 28; Isa 7:14).

5-6. One characteristic that marks the end of this age is the rise of many impostors. Even the word Christ is supplied in the AV, the previous clause identifies their claim to Him, in my name.

7-8. Such things must needs be, that is, even these wars come from God's perfect plan. The word troubles is not found in some of the oldest manuscripts. Beginnings suggests that even worse judgments will follow (Rev 6-9; 16).

9-11. Verse 10 appears parenthetical; world evangelism shall precede these afflictions. Problems in bearing witness are everywhere, but they are a necessary part of God's plan. Under the pressure, disciples may take comfort in the Holy Spirit's special guidance: for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

12-13. The extreme cruelty is illustrated not in physical terms but by the destruction of family ties. He that shall endure unto the end . . . shall be saved is used to support a good-works gospel. However, the New Testament teaching on this subject dismisses such an interpretation. Romans and Galatians specifically discuss this issue and clearly declare that salvation is based on faith (Rom 1:16; 3:20, 28; 4:3, 16; 5:1; Gal 3:10-14, 23-26). In this passage "one who endures" speaks of a genuine believer who perseveres to the end of his life. Be saved should be taken in a spiritual sense; it does not merely mean one will be delivered from earthly trials.

14. The abomination of desolation, meaning the abomination that desolates or appalls (Dan 12:1), has been applied to ancient events. Many Jews thought that Daniel's prophecy was fulfilled in 186 B.C. when Antiochus Epiphanes, the king of Syria, erected an idolatrous altar in the Temple of Jerusalem and sacrificed a pig thereon to the heathen god Jupiter Olympus. Others believe it referred to the entrance of Roman soldiers into the Holy Place before the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. Nonetheless, the entire discourse speaks of eschatological events, and the actions of the "man of sin" in II Thessalonians 2 corresponds to this description.

15-20. These verses vividly describe the terror involved; no other tribulation is equal to it, neither shall be. It, therefore, must be the Great Tribulation of the book of the Revelation.

MARK 13:20

tion, such as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, neither shall be.

20 And except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved: but for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days.

21 And then if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ; or, lo, he is there; believe him not:

22 For false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect.

23 But take ye heed: behold, I have foretold you all things.

24 ¶But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light,

25 And the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken.

26 And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory.

27 And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven.

28 Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near:

29 So ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors.

30 Verily I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done.

31 Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.

32 ¶But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father.

33 Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is.

34 For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning:

36 Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping.

37 And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch.

CHAPTER 14

AFTER two days was the feast of the passover, and of unleavened bread: and the chief priests and the scribes sought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death.

2 But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar of the people.

3 ¶And being in Bethany in the house

21-23. The false Christs and false prophets are so persuasive that they would deceive even God's elect, if it were possible.

24-27. Son of man. He who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords returns to judge men as a man.

28-29. The parable of the fig tree encourages readiness and alertness. As a blossoming fig tree signifies the nearness of summer, the fulfillment of Jesus' prophecy announces the end of the age.

30. During the first century, this generation did undergo the prophecies uttered in a general sense, but their full force awaits the Great Tribulation and Christ's coming in glory. In the latter sense the generation would be speaking of race or nation.

31-32. Jesus' divine and human natures may be observed in these verses. As God, He claimed infinite authority for His words. As man, His kenosis (or self-emptying) is stated regarding His knowledge: neither the Son.

33. Ye know not when the time is reminds the disciples of their priorities. The imminence of Christ's return should stimulate a new realization of the temporal nature of this life.

34-37. The following illustration aims at the attitudes of servants. They receive their orders and are to faithfully perform them until their master returns. Since they know not when the master of the house cometh, they must watch (Gr gregoreō), a word which specifically implies watching with alertness, staying awake. Unfortunately, disciples often conform to the world's emphasis on the temporal.

V. CHRIST'S DEATH AND RESURRECTION.

14:1-16:20.

A. The Events Preluding His Arrest. 14:1-42.

1. The chief priests plot Jesus' death. 14:1-2.

14:1-2. The two designations, the Passover and unleavened bread, refer to the same event which is described in Exodus 12:1-20.

2. Mary anoints Jesus. 14:3-9.

3-5. Although Mark spends little time introducing the occaof Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head.

4 And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her.

6 And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.

7 For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always.

8 She hath done what she could; she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.

9 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.

10 ¶And Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them.

11 And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

12 ¶And the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover?

13 And he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there shall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him.

14 And whosoever he shall go in, say ye to the goodman of the house, The Master saith, Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

15 And he will shew you a large upper room furnished and prepared: there make ready for us.

16 And his disciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

17 And in the evening he cometh with the twelve.

18 And as they sat and did eat, Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me shall betray me.

19 And they began to be sorrowful, and to say unto him one by one, Is it I? and another said, Is it I?

20 And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that dipbeth with me in the dish.

21 The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him: but woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born.

sion, John implies that it was a special celebration in honor of Jesus, with Mary, Martha, and Lazarus present. Simon the leper bears that title as a testimony to his healing, but that is all we know about him.

The story was included because of the manner by which Mary honored her Lord. The special significance of the anointing was its cost, around three hundred pence. A penny (Gr dénarion) was a day's wages. The statement, she brake the box, refers to a jar sealed in a manner which required breakage at the neck, and therefore its contents would be used at one time. Some of the disciples viewed this as an unnecessary extravagance.

6-9. Jesus defended her deed. It would have been commendable to give the money to the poor, but she had a better use. She hath done what she could to show her love for her Lord.

3. Judas plans to betray Jesus. 14:10-11.

10-11. Judas' betrayal at least in part was a reaction to Mary's act of reverence. It was he who "held the bag" (acted as treasurer) and regularly pilfered it. His love for money provoked an indignant response when three hundred pence worth of ointment was "wasted" on Jesus. Thus, he sought to betray, to give Jesus over to His enemies for just thirty pieces of silver (Gr argyrión).

4. Preparation for the Passover. 14:12-21.

12. The question, "Where . . ." rather than "should we make preparations" indicates that Jesus and His apostles faithfully participated in this ritual.

13-18. Jesus' instructions are based partially upon His omnipotence. That they would encounter a man bearing a pitcher obviously could not have been perceived by human wisdom. On the other hand, He likely had already made arrangements with the goodman of the house (Gr oikodespotēs), the manager.

19. The translation of their question, "Is it I?" would be improved by "It is not I, is it?" for the Greek construction suggests that they expected a negative reply.

20-21. John's account (Jn 13:24-26) indicates that He actually did not expose Judas by this statement. It merely emphasized the close friendship that the betrayer appeared to have with Christ.

22 ¶And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: this is my body.

23 And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them: and they all drank of it.

24 And he said unto them, This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many.

25 Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God.

26 ¶And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

27 And Jesus saith unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered.

28 But after that I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee.

29 But Peter said unto him, Although all shall be offended, yet will not I.

30 And Jesus saith unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.

31 But he spake the more vehemently, If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise. Likewise also said they all.

32 ¶And they came to a place which was named Gēth-sēm'a-ne: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I shall pray.

33 And he taketh with him Peter and James and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy;

34 And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and watch.

35 And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.

36 And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldst not thou watch one hour?

38 Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak.

39 And again he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words.

40 And when he returned, he found them asleep again, (for their eyes were heavy,) neither wist they what to answer him.

5. The Lord's Supper. 14:22-25.

22-24. This is my body was spoken symbolically, as when He called Himself the Door or the Vine. The new testament, prophesied in Jeremiah 31:31-34, is associated with regeneration (Jer 31:33), for the Mosaic law never provided the way to heaven. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom 3:23). Therefore, a new testament or covenant (Gr diathēke) was needed. Jesus' blood was shed for many, the word for meaning "in behalf of" (Gr hyper) which specifies a substitutionary death.

25. Indirectly Jesus informs them that His earthly life is almost over.

6. On the Mount of Olives. 14:26-31.

26. The hymn must have been one or more of the Hallel Psalms which were customarily included in the Passover celebrations (Alfred Edersheim, The Temple, p. 223).

27-28. Quoting Zechariah 13:7, the Lord predicted their disloyal flight of escape. Knowing that they would return to their home country, He speaks of His resurrection in specific terms. He would see them into Galilee.

29-31. Impulsively Peter responded to Christ's prediction in a forceful manner. Instead of defending himself, he might have obeyed the Lord's added command, "Watch ye and pray," in connection with I Corinthians 10:13. Overconfidence often precedes failure. The time, before the cock crow twice, refers to the third watch of the night.

7. In the Garden of Gethsemane. 14:32-41.

32. Although the Garden of Gethsemane was located on the same mountain, the Mount of Olives, it is mentioned separately as a special place of prayer and privacy for the Lord.

33-34. The inner circle, Peter and James and John, observed Jesus' agony. Significantly, it is Luke the physician who adds, "his sweat was as it were great drops of blood. . ." (Lk 22:44). Three expressions picture His inner feelings: (1) began to be sore amazed, (2) to be very heavy, and (3) exceeding sorrowful unto death. The first reveals His initial shock at what was to come; the second, His overwhelming sense of distress; the third describes the extent of His emotions. "Its (the agony) terrors exceeded his anticipations. His human soul received new experience—He learned upon the basis of things suffered (Heb 5:8)" (Kenneth Wuest, Mark in the Greek New Testament, p. 264).

35-36. Nowhere else in Scripture can one find a clearer picture of Jesus' humanity. His response to the hour lacks none of the emotions that other men would have felt. He, however, refused to allow inner feelings to direct Him, submitting to the Father's plan: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37-41. The command Watch ye and pray, may be translated "Keep watching and praying . . ." The spirit is described as ready (Gr prothymos), willing and eager to serve. Inwardly the disciples desired to keep praying, but fatigue won over their wills.

41 And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

42 Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

43 ¶And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and the scribes and the elders.

44 And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; take him, and lead him away safely.

45 And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, Master, master; and kissed him.

46 And they laid their hands on him, and took him.

47 And one of them that stood by drew a sword, and smote a servant of the high priest, and cut off his ear.

48 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and with staves to take me?

49 I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and ye took me not: but the scriptures must be fulfilled.

50 And they all forsook him, and fled.

51 And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him:

52 And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

53 ¶And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests and the elders and the scribes.

54 And Peter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants, and warmed himself at the fire.

55 And the chief priests and all the council sought for witness against Jesus to put him to death; and found none.

56 For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together.

57 And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying,

58 We heard him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands.

59 But neither so did their witness agree together.

60 And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

61 But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?

62 And Jesus said, I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

63 Then the high priest rent his

B. The Arrest and Trials. 14:42-15:14.

1. Betrayal and arrest. 14:42-52.

42-45. Mark identifies Judas, not by Iscariot, but after a fashion which emphasizes how incredible the feat was; he not only was among the followers, but one of the twelve. The company he brought included Roman soldiers and temple police, who were sent by the Jewish leaders named. The former carried swords, while the latter had staves (stout sticks.) Judas' greeting was that customary of a disciple to his rabbi: Master, master; and kissed him.

46-47. John 18:10 informs us that it was Peter who drew the sword and cut off Malchus' ear.

48-49. The party came out at night with weapons as if Jesus were a violent criminal against whom cunning and force must be applied. He could have been taken easily during the day; He had been teaching in the Temple publicly for the past three days. But the scriptures must be fulfilled refers to general prophecies of this violent hour.

50. The prediction found in verse 27 comes true.

51-52. This incident appears in Mark's account alone, and since no other purpose for its inclusion can be found, the young man was probably the author himself.

2. The trial before the Jewish leaders. 14:53-65.

53-54. The three groups mentioned along with the High Priest comprised the Sanhedrin or council (vs. 55), an official group of seventy men who held religious and civil authority in Israel. However, during the last forty years before the fall of Jerusalem (A.D. 70) executions were restricted to Roman authorities. That explains why the trial before Pilate followed this one.

55-59. The fundamental purpose of a court's existence is to execute justice, but this dishonorable court only sought for witness against Jesus to put him to death. Not succeeding, they resorted to false witness, but again they failed.

60. The High Priest turned directly to the defendant in hopes of clearer "evidence." While the response to Answerest thou nothing causes us to admire Christ's submission, the inquirer actually was seeking a statement of self-condemnation; he held his peace.

61-62. Art thou the Christ? Besides His affirmative reply, I am, Jesus quotes two Old Testament passages which clearly are messianic (Ps 110:1 and Dan 7:13).

63-64. The verdict reveals their spiritual ignorance. Jesus' clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses?

MARK 14:64

64 Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death.

65 And some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say unto him, Prophecy: and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

66 ¶And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high priest:

67 And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him, and said, And thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth.

68 But he denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into the porch; and the cock crew.

69 And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them.

70 And he denied it again. And a little after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galilæan, and thy speech agreeth thereto.

71 But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak.

72 And the second time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind the word that Jesus said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And when he thought thereon, he wept.

CHAPTER 15

AND straightway in the morning the chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes and the whole council, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him to Pilate.

2 And Pilate asked him, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answering said unto him, Thou sayest it.

3 And the chief priests accused him of many things: but he answered nothing.

4 And Pilate asked him again, saying, Answerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee.

5 But Jesus yet answered nothing; so that Pilate marvelled.

6 ¶Now at that feast he released unto them one prisoner, whomsoever they desired.

7 And there was one named Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection.

8 And the multitude crying aloud began to desire him to do as he had ever done unto them.

9 But Pilate answered them, saying, confession should have initiated at least some investigation, and with all the facts, its veracity. Instead, they cried blasphemy!

65. The unbelievably foul treatment against the holy Son of God seems worse in that it was commenced by national dignitaries. Isaiah 52:14 predicted hundreds of years before, “his visage was so marred more than any man.”

3. Peter's denial. 14:66-72.

66-68. The scene was just outside the palace of the High Priest who was conducting the trial in the upper story. The girl, one of the maids of the high priest, noticed Peter and then paused to get a closer look (Gr emblemō). Her accusation caught Peter off guard. He who had claimed allegiance even in the face of death quickly disowned his Lord. He then retreated out into the porch, a vestibule between the courtyard and the street.

69-71. The pressure increased as accusations continued, and added denials only led to further accusations: thou art a Galilean and thy speech agreeth thereto. The Judaeans detected a Galilean accent in Peter's words perhaps as a Georgian could recognize a New Englander. To curse and to swear (Gr anathematizō and omnyō) means Peter took oaths in God's name and called down curses upon himself in the event he was lying.

72. The cock crew and its sound immediately reminded Peter of the Lord's prophetic words. Luke adds that “the Lord turned and looked upon Peter” (Lk 22:61) which must have occurred while Jesus was being transferred to a temporary cell. The apostle's reaction, wept, pictures an extended time of bitter weeping.

4. The trial before Pilate. 15:1-14.

15:1. The Sanhedrin regathered in the morning to make the trial official and Matthew 27:1 reiterates their singular purpose, “to put him to death.” They discussed in detail the charges and how they would present them in order to gain the death sentence.

2. The insidious conspirators charged Christ with rebellion against the government (Lk 23:2), which explains Pilate's question, Art thou the King of the Jews? This simple affirmation does not include His detailed response (Jn 18:28-37), where He disassociates His kingdom from this physical and temporal world.

3-5. He answered nothing, “as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth” (Isa 53:7). Mark's account briefly reports that Pilate marveled, but in John 19:8-12 he is pictured with “fear” attempting to free Jesus.

6-7. The narration of Barabbas' release is introduced by two facts: verse 6 explains the annual custom at the Passover of freeing one prisoner of the people's choice, and verse 7 characterizes Barabbas as an insurrectionist and a murderer.

8. The crowd reminded Pilate of this precedent; they began to desire, or more accurately, “to ask” (Gr aitēō).

9-10. Pilate hoped the people would choose Jesus because he Will ye that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

10 For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him for envy.

11 But the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Ba-rāb'bas unto them.

12 And Pilate answered and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the King of the Jews?

13 And they cried out again, Crucify him.

14 Then Pilate said unto them, Why, what evil hath he done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

15 And so Pilate, willing to content the people, released Ba-rāb'bas unto them, and delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified.

16 ¶And the soldiers led him away into the hall, called Præ-tō'rī-um; and they call together the whole band.

17 And they clothed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head.

18 And began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews!

19 And they smote him on the head with a reed, and did spit upon him, and bowing their knees worshipped him.

20 And when they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and led him out to crucify him.

21 And they compel one Simon a Cŷ-rē'nī-an, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross.

22 And they bring him unto the place Gōl'go-tha, which is, being interpreted, The place of a skull.

23 And they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh: but he received it not.

24 And when they had crucified him, they parted his garments, casting lots upon them, what every man should take.

25 And it was the third hour, and they crucified him.

26 And the superscription of his accusation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

was beginning to discern the true source of the charges: the chief priests had delivered him for envy.

11. Precisely how the chief priests moved the people is conjecture, but it probably included special appeals for the rebel as a political and social leader and as a local resident. Conversely, they agitated the crowd against Christ, because He claimed to be God. More than factual evidence, their awesome power and position must have been the determining factors.

12-14. The extent of that influence was incredible, for less than a week before the people of this same city had honored Christ in His "Triumphal Entry."

C. The Crucifixion. 15:15-47.

15. Scourged him (Gr phragelloō). The Romans used short-handled whips with many leather lashes. On the ends of the lashes were tied small bits of metal or bone to cruelly rip the victim's flesh. They usually tied the prisoner to a low pillar so that his back was bent forward. This type of punishment would leave deep gashes, often exposing the bones.

16-20. The hall refers to the palace of 14:54 (Gr aulē), an open courtyard, which Mark identifies as Prætorium. Band (Gr speira), sometimes translated "cohort," technically included six hundred men though on occasion was used when the number was much less. The band was gathered to make a spectacle of their prisoner. The royal color, purple, and a crown of needle-like thorns served to mock the king while adding further torture. The reed, a royal staff, not only was painful in itself, but also drove the thorns further into His skull. Their abuse continued (imperfect tense in Greek) for some time until they wearied of their sport, and He was led away for execution.

21. The only information about Simon is his national origin, a Cyrenian, and the names of his sons. Since Rufus appears in Romans 16:13, and Mark's Gospel was written in Rome, the readers must have known the two brothers. Some commentators suggest that Simon's experience here eventually led to his conversion. At this time he was not a disciple for they forced (AV, compel) him into service.

22. Mark identifies the place of the crucifixion in Aramaic, Golgotha, and interprets it as the place of the skull. Two views exist regarding the location: (1) The traditional view, going back to the fourth century, places it at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre and argues that the name arose from the presence of skulls, because it was a place of execution; (2) Gordon's Calvary bases its location on the skull-like appearance of an adjacent cliff and a garden of tombs nearby. The Gospels mark it outside the city, but the location of the ancient walls cannot be conclusively determined, since Jerusalem was destroyed in A.D. 70.

23. They gave, or better, they were going to give (Greek imperfect tense) wine mingled with myrrh. The beverage acted as a stupefying drug commonly given to lessen the torture.

24. Psalm 22:18 predicted the disrespectful distribution of His clothing. Usually in Scripture casting lots involves religious connotations, a means to discover God's will, but here it is merely gambling.

25. The third hour was nine o'clock in the morning according to Jewish time.

26-28. Pilate's superscription, THE KING OF THE JEWS, caused a harsh reaction among the Jewish leaders (Jn 19:21-22).

The physical suffering in those final three hours on the cross

27 And with him they crucify two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left.

28 And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith, And he was numbered with the transgressors.

29 ¶And they that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days,

30 Save thyself, and come down from the cross.

31 Likewise also the chief priests mocking said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others; himself he cannot save.

32 Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. And they that were crucified with him reviled him.

33 ¶And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour.

34 And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Ē-lō'ī, Ē-lō'ī, lā'ma sa-bach'tha-ni? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

35 And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, Behold, he calleth E-lī'as.

36 And one ran and filled a sponge full of vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, saying, Let alone; let us see whether E-lī'as will come to take him down.

37 And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and gave up the ghost.

38 And the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom.

39 ¶And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

40 There were also women looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses, and Sa-lō'me;

41 (Who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him;) and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

42 ¶And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath,

43 Joseph of Ār-i-ma-thæ'a, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and was bad enough, but the Lord also endured continuous insults and mockery by those who observed.

29-30. They that passed by railed on him would be better translated "kept on blaspheming" (Greek imperfect tense). When Christ prophesied about the temple He had referred to His body (Jn 2:19-21), but these accusers derided Him because they thought He spoke of the building and thus His word had failed. The claim would be fulfilled just three days later.

31-32. He saved others; himself he cannot save, though not true, indirectly emphasizes the fact that He would not save Himself because He was willing to save others. Descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. Typical of fallen man, they confused the order of revelation. When a person believes in Christ, he begins to see. Spiritual understanding and discernment are results of spiritual illumination, which is accomplished by the new birth through the Holy Spirit.

33-34. The darkness which occurred at the sixth hour (noon until three o'clock) along with the outcry My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me (Ps 22:1) bespeak of the harshest hour of human history. Although the exact meaning of the separation is debated, Bible students agree that it induced the greatest anguish.

35-36. The reaction to His outcry, He calleth Elijah [Elias], implies His condition; He lacked the physical strength to speak clearly.

37-38. John 19:30 informs us of Jesus' final words before He gave up the ghost: "It is finished." And that declaration explains why the veil of the temple was torn from top to bottom. Jesus had paid the penalty of sin, and thus there was no longer a barrier between God and man. He Himself had said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life" (Jn 14:6). This veil was a heavy curtain that separated the Holy Place from the Most Holy Place, which the book of Hebrews relates typologically to Christ (Heb 10:19-20).

39. Officially a centurion had one hundred men under him, but his assignment undoubtedly warranted but a small band. Over against means he was facing Jesus as He expired. The meaning of the confession, Truly this man was the Son of God, may not have come from understanding lips. The word Son does not have a definite article before it, so it should be translated "a" son of God. As a Roman the title he employed could have merely recognized Jesus' righteousness (Lk 23:47).

40-41. Luke 8:2 describes the former life of Mary Magdalene. She had been demon-possessed. The other Mary was the mother of James the less, one of the Twelve. Salome was the wife of Zebedee and the mother of James and John (Mt 27:56).

42. The time factor is mentioned to explain the necessity of hasty action. The next day, the Sabbath, would begin at 6:00 P.M. according to Jewish time, and it was already past 3:00 P.M. Since burial was unlawful on the Sabbath, both permission and the act itself required swift achievement.

43. Joseph's home, Arimathea, is given to distinguish him from others bearing the same name. Honorable counselor identifies him as a prominent member of the national religious council, the Sanhedrin. Luke 23:51 adds that he did not con-went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

44 And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead.

45 And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

46 And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a stone unto the door of the sepulchre.

47 And Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of Joses beheld where he was laid.

CHAPTER 16

AND when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Sa-ló'me, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him.

2 And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

3 And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

4 And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great.

5 And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted.

6 And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

7 But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you.

8 And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed: neither said they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

9 ¶Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.

10 And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.

11 And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

12 ¶After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country.

13 And they went and told it unto the residue: neither believed they them.

14 ¶Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

done the illegal trial which condemned Jesus. Craved (Gr aiteō) means "asked for" the body.

44-45. Pilate marveled at Joseph's request, because he was surprised that Jesus had already died. This implies how intense the Lord's suffering was. Prior to the Crucifixion, His body had been terribly and repeatedly beaten, so much so that He later was unable to bear His cross.

46-47. Matthew 27:60 says the sepulcher or tomb was Joseph's, and John 19:39 adds that Nicodemus helped him.

D. The Resurrection. 16:1-20.

16:1-3. The narration of the resurrection begins with an explanation of the presence of the women at the tomb. As they journeyed, they wondered how they would remove the stone which was wheel-shaped and large enough to block the entrance of the sepulcher. Besides its size, the area immediately in front of the entrance was lower, and thus its removal was accomplished only with extreme difficulty.

4-5. Two angels were present (Lk 24:4), but one must have been the more prominent, as in Mark's narrative.

6-8. Be not affrighted is a negative command in the present tense in Greek which is accurately translated "stop being afraid." Neither said they anything to any man appears to be a direct contradiction to the other Gospel accounts, which affirm that the women reported the news to the apostles. The purpose of these verses, however, centers around their immediate reaction, not the final outcome. They were afraid to tell anyone along the way, but when they found the apostles, they privately shared what had happened.

This concluding section (vss. 9-20) was not included in the two oldest manuscripts nor in other ancient reliable sources. Therefore, many Bible scholars conclude that Mark ended his Gospel with verse eight. However, the final twelve verses are discussed in this commentary. (For its inclusion in the original text see R. C. H. Lenski, Commentary on St. Mark's Gospel, pp. 750-755.)

9. Mary Magdalene was probably given the privilege of being first to witness the resurrected Christ because of her unreserved dedication. Having been delivered from her former condition, out of whom he had cast seven devils she committed herself to Christ with ineffable gratefulness.

10-13. Three times in this passage the disciples' resistance to believe is mentioned. This negative emphasis parallels the need for signs mentioned in verses 17 and 18. The two . . . as they walked refers to Cleopas and his companion as they journeyed to Emmaus (Lk 24:13-35.) The residue speaks of the rest of the disciples with the exception of Thomas who would see the Lord eight days later (Jn 20:24-29).

14-16. A striking peculiarity about this particular rendering of the Great Commission relates to baptism: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. The ordinance may appear to be a prerequisite to salvation. However, the negative statement mentions believing alone: he that believeth not shall be

MARK 16:15

15 And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

16 He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

17 And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

18 They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

19 ¶So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God.

20 And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.

damned (Gr katakrinō to be condemned). In addition, baptism in the early church was the outward declaration of conversion, so even though the ordinance has no saving merit, the close connection is natural because it is the sign of genuine faith.

17-18. The distinctive emphasis of these signs causes some to conclude that the disputed ending of Mark was added to support the spiritual gifts that are listed. Since exorcism, speaking in tongues, handling snakes, and healing occurred in the books of Acts with drink any deadly thing being the single exception, one must admit that the passage could be harmonized with the New Testament on this subject.

19-20. Because of brevity, one might assume that the events occurred within a short time, as if He addressed them once and then immediately ascended. But actually He remained with them forty days (Acts 1:3). Signs following. This describes the pattern of apostolic preaching and ministry. Both leading figures in Acts, Peter and Paul, performed many miracles as a confirmation of the reality of their claims.

---

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Alexander, J. A. The Gospel According to Mark. London: Banner of Truth Trust, 1960.

Bruce, A. B. The Synoptic Gospels. In The Expositor's Greek Testament. Vol. 1. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, n.d.

Cole, Robert Alan. The Gospel According to St. Mark. In the Tyndale New Testament Commentaries. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1961.

*Cranfield, C. E. B. The Gospel According to St. Mark. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1963.

Earle, Ralph. The Gospel According to Mark. In the Evangelical Commentary on the Bible. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1957.

*English, E. Schuyler. Studies in the Gospel According to Mark. New York: Our Hope, 1943.

Erdman, Charles R. The Gospel of Mark. Philadelphia: Westminster, 1917.

Hendriksen, William. Exposition of the Gospel According to Mark. In the New Testament Commentary. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1975.

*Hiebert, D. Edmond. Mark: A Portrait of the Servant. Chicago: Moody Press, 1974.

Kelly, William. An Exposition of the Gospel of Mark. Ed. by E. E. Whitfield. London: Alfred Holness, n.d.

*Lane, William L. The Gospel According to Mark. In the New International Commentary on the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1974.

Lindsay, Thomas M. The Gospel According to St. Mark. In Handbooks for Bible Classes and Private Students. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1883.

Martin, Ralph P. Mark: Evangelist and Theologian. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1973.

*Morgan, G. Campbell. The Gospel According to Mark. New York: Revell, 1927.

Morison, James. A Practical Commentary on the Gospel According to St. Mark. 4th revised ed. London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1882.

Plummer, A. The Gospel According to St. Mark. In the Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools and Colleges. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1938.

Riddle, Matthew B. The Gospel According to Mark. In The International Revision Commentary on the New Testament. New York: Scribner, 1881.

Scroggie, W. Graham. The Gospel of Mark. London: Marshall, Morgan, and Scott, n.d.

*Swete, H. B. The Gospel According to St. Mark. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1956.

*Taylor, Vincent. The Gospel According to St. Mark. London: Macmillan, 1963.

Wuest, Kenneth. Mark in the Greek New Testament for the English Reader. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1950.

The Gospel According To LUKE

INTRODUCTION

Each of the four Gospels is written from its own perspective to present Christ to a particular group of readers. Matthew, who writes primarily for the Jews, presents Christ as Messiah and King in fulfillment of prophecy. Mark stresses the servant aspects of Christ's ministry in writing for those of Roman background. John proves Christ to be the Son of God, deity incarnate. Luke's emphasis is on the humanity of Christ. In fact, the characteristic title for Christ, found in the key verse, is the "Son of man" (Lk 19:10).

As you read the book of Luke other features will also stand out. Luke includes more than the other Gospels about women, children, the home, the Holy Spirit, prayer, and praise. As the Son of Man, Jesus has experienced our griefs and sorrows, and He is able to meet these needs. Naturally, Luke, the "beloved physician," gives special touches regarding sickness and healing too. There are also more unique parables in Luke than in any other Gospel.

Authorship. From the earliest of times, believers have witnessed to the fact that Luke wrote this Gospel. Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Clement of Alexandria, who all lived circa A.D. 180, positively state that Luke was the author. From that time to this, there has been no other opinion except in the case of some more recent radical theologians.

The proof that Luke was the author must be gleaned from the book of Acts. The same author evidently wrote both books and addressed them both to a man named Theophilus (Lk 1:3 and Acts 1:1). Neither book actually states who its author is, but there are enough clues in Acts to confirm the universal testimony of history that Luke penned both volumes.

The argument may be expressed simply in several points. (1) In Acts, the writer differentiates himself from others in the account by using the pronoun "we" when he is part of the action (Acts 16:10-17; 20:5; 21:18; 27:1-28:16). Otherwise, he simply says "they." Since the author refers to Paul, Silas, and Timothy (and a few others, cf. Acts 20:4) as "they," none of them could be the author of Acts. (2) The writer's awareness of sicknesses and the use of distinct medical terminology in both Luke and Acts suggest that he may have been a doctor. (3) Luke was both a doctor and one of Paul's closest companions and fellow laborers as shown in Colossians 4:14. The latter reference, with Philemon 24, proves Luke's association with Paul in Rome after the voyage of Acts 27 and 28. In addition, in II Timothy 4:11 at the close of Paul's second Roman imprisonment, he notes that only Luke is with him. Only Luke fits all the criteria for the authorship of history found in Luke and continued in Acts.

As for Luke's personal life, he is thought by many to have been a Gentile. His name is Greek and in Colossians 4:14 Paul lists Luke with other Gentile names rather than with the Jewish believers. In any event, he was a tremendous historian, missionary, church planter, traveller, and writer, as well as being a physician.

Date. It is evident that the book of Acts is a continuation of "the former treatise" (Acts 1:1), namely, the Gospel of Luke. This means that Luke had to have been completed prior to the writing of Acts. From the abrupt ending of Acts with Paul still in custody in Rome awaiting the outcome of his case, several ideas are suggested: (1) Luke may have intended to have the book of Acts end in Rome to present the gospel as having spread from Jerusalem to the very capital of the Empire. (2) More likely, the book of Acts ends where it does because Luke had nothing more to report. Paul's trial was at a standstill. The date of Paul's first two-year Roman detainment is usually pinpointed around A.D. 60-62, on the basis of the date Porcius Festus replaced Felix (Acts 24:27). Since Luke was written prior to this time, it is most logical to place it between A.D. 58-60 when Paul was imprisoned in Caesarea. This would have given Luke ample time to consult needed eyewitnesses and examine other official Roman and Palestinian records during the two-year stay in Caesarea.

Place. The precise place where Luke penned his gospel is not known. However, since it appears to have been written prior to the book of Acts, which was published around A.D. 61 or 62, several possibilities arise: (1) Some feel it may have been written in Greece, possibly on either the first or second missionary journey. But, there does not seem to have been enough time at that point for Luke to have consulted the many "eyewitnesses" (1:2) who would necessarily have lived in Palestine. (2) Caesarea, the Roman administrative capital of Palestine, is perhaps the most ideal location that could be suggested. Luke was with Paul during Paul's two-year detainment in Caesarea awaiting trial (Acts 24:27). From that city Luke no doubt would have been able to consult various early disciples, deacons, and other believers to obtain information for the writing of his Gospel, under the superintending work of the Holy Spirit (II Pet 1:21). The two-year interval also affords Luke ample leisure time for pursuing such activities as writing. (3) A third possibility would be Rome during Paul's two-year imprisonment there from about A.D. 60-62. But, such might crowd the writing of Acts, which was accomplished during the same period. Thus, Caesarea in Palestine is perhaps the most ideal and most likely place for the Gospel to have been written, both from the chronological as well as the fact-gathering perspectives.

OUTLINE

- I. The Prologue to Theophilus. 1:1-4.
- II. The Preparations for the Arrival of the Son. 1:5-2:52.
  - A. Gabriel's Announcement to Zechariah. 1:5-25.
  - B. Gabriel's Announcement to Mary. 1:26-38.
  - C. Mary's Visit to Elisabeth. 1:39-56.
  - D. John's Birth in Judaea. 1:57-80.
  - E. Jesus' Birth in Beth-lehem. 2:1-21.
  - F. Mary's Purification in Jerusalem. 2:22-38.
  - G. Jesus' Growth in Nazareth. 2:39-40.
  - H. Jesus' First Passover in Jerusalem. 2:41-52.
- III. The Public Presentation of the Son. 3:1-4:13.
  - A. The Words and Work of John the Baptist. 3:1-20.
  - B. The Baptism of Christ. 3:21-22.
  - C. The Genealogy of Christ. 3:23-38.
  - D. The Temptation of Christ. 4:1-13.
- IV. The Preaching of the Son in Galilee. 4:14-9:50.
  - A. The Preaching that Claimed Messiahship. 4:14-44.
  - B. The Miracles that Supported His Messiahship. 5:1-39.
  - C. The Choice of the Twelve. 6:1-49.
  - D. More Miracles and Parables in Galilee. 7:1-8:56.
  - E. Christ's Dealings with His Disciples. 9:1-50.
- V. The Peraean Ministry of the Son. 9:51-19:27.
  - A. Christ's Determination to Go to Jerusalem. 9:51-62.
  - B. Christ's Ministry with the Seventy. 10:1-24.
  - C. Christ's Parabolic Teaching Ministry. 10:25-13:21.
  - D. Christ's Growing Public Confrontation with Religious Leaders. 13:22-16:31.
  - E. Christ's Instruction of His Disciples. 17:1-19:27.
- VI. The Proffer of the Son's Kingdom and Its Rejection. 19:28-21:4.
  - A. Christ's Entry into Jerusalem. 19:28-46.
  - B. Christ's Public Teaching in Jerusalem. 19:47-21:4.
- VII. The Prophecy of Tribulation to Come. 21:5-38.
  - A. Prophecy About This Age. 21:5-19.
  - B. Prophecy About Jerusalem. 21:20-24.
  - C. Prophecy About Christ's Return. 21:25-38.
- VIII. The Passion of the Son. 22:1-23:56.
  - A. Christ's Final Night with His Disciples. 22:1-46.
  - B. Christ's Betrayal and Trial. 22:47-23:25.
  - C. Christ's Crucifixion. 23:26-56.
- IX. The Power of the Son Over Death. 24:1-48.
  - A. The Events Surrounding the Empty Tomb. 24:1-12.
  - B. The Walk to Emmaus. 24:13-32.
  - C. The Meeting in the Upper Room. 24:33-48.
- X. The Promise of the Son to the Disciples. 24:49-53.

COMMENTARY

I. THE PROLOGUE TO THEOPHILUS. 1:1-4.

The first eighty-two words of the text compose just one sentence, Luke's preface. It was customary in the first century to write a formal literary prologue for most works. The purpose of such a preface was to announce the reasons for writing, the methods followed, and the dedication of the work, often to the one paying for its production. Josephus, for example, a first-century Jewish historian, follows this same pattern in his Antiquities of the Jews. Luke's style and vocabulary in these opening four verses comprise perhaps the best example of classical Greek in the New Testament. It is also an indication of Luke's extraordinary education and his fitness for the task God gave to him of writing such a complete biography of Christ.

1:1. Many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration. Apparently there were a number of early attempts to record parts of Christ's life and work, and also the beginnings of the New Testament church after His death and resurrection. These early narratives were probably written by other believers, with whom Luke seems to classify himself (vs. 3 me also). They may have been truthful, authentic, and genuine accounts, but they were not God-breathed (II Tim 3:16), and thus passed off the scene as they were replaced by the inspired documents penned by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. Luke is not referring here to the accounts drawn up by the other gospel writers.

Those things which are most surely believed among us. This is more accurately rendered "the matters which have been fulfilled or accomplished among us." The terminology Luke

FORASMUCH as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us,

2 Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word;

3 It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Thē-ōph'i-lus,

4 That thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed.

5 ¶THERE was in the days of Herod, the king of Judæa, a certain priest named Zäch-a-rí'as, of the course of Á-bí'a: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elisabeth.

uses includes the material in the book of Acts as well as the Gospel, showing that at the outset he intended to pen a complete history of the events surrounding the beginnings, growth, and development of Christianity. The prologue to this gospel should also be seen as prefacing the book of Acts. In Acts 1:1-2 Luke refers to the gospel account as including "all that Jesus began to do and teach, until the day in which he was taken up." Acts simply continues the narrative of what Jesus continued to do and teach after He was taken up.

2. Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses. Luke received information that was handed over to him from eyewitnesses who had seen the very beginnings of the gospel account he relates. Who were these early eyewitnesses? Luke may have talked with Mary, the mother of our Lord, and with James and Jude, two of Christ's brothers who were prominent enough to have written New Testament books. James was also the leading elder in the church at Jerusalem (Acts 15:13, 19; 21:18; Gal 2:9). Naturally, Luke must have met some of the twelve original disciples. Luke even tells us that he spent some time with Mnason who was a disciple of longstanding, perhaps one who knew Christ personally (Acts 21:16). Of course, there were probably hundreds if not thousands still alive who had personally heard Jesus teach and had seen Him perform miracles just thirty years previously. In addition, Paul recorded in A.D. 52 or 53 that a great number of the five hundred who all on one occasion saw Christ after His resurrection were still alive (I Cor 15:6). They apparently joined the ranks shortly after Pentecost, and were some of the original deacons, such as Philip, who conveniently lived in Caesarea, and with whom Luke lodged for a while (Acts 21:8-10).

3. Having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first is more literally rendered "having traced or investigated accurately all things from the first." Luke expresses several ideas: (1) The length of his search took him back to the beginning of things. Only Luke recounts the birth announcements of Gabriel to Zacharias [Zechariah] and to Mary. (2) The breadth of his research has included "all things." He would naturally have to evaluate each piece of evidence in order to retain that which would be most useful. (3) The accuracy of his investigation is declared by his use of the Greek word akribōs which speaks of precision and exactness.

To write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus. Luke's mention of "in order" perhaps hints that some of the other accounts then in existence were not only fragmentary and partial, but also somewhat disarranged. Theophilus is referred to as one would address a Greek noble. He may have had a title, or Luke may simply be honoring him in a special way as the patron who is presumably financing the writing of this work.

4. The purpose of Luke's Gospel, as stated here, is to certify the truthfulness of those things wherein Theophilus has been taught or "catechized" (Gr katēchēō), regarding the Christian faith. One's faith is no more sure than the object upon which it rests. We can thank God that our faith rests firmly upon the unshakable historical facts recorded in His matchless Word.

II. THE PREPARATIONS FOR THE ARRIVAL OF THE SON. 1:5-2:52.

A. Gabriel's Announcement to Zechariah. 1:5-25.

5. In the days of Herod, the king. Luke is very exact in giving precise historical and chronological information. This is seen in these words, as well as other references to major historical persons, events and dates as in 2:1-3; 3:1-2, 19, and 23. This Herod, known as Herod the Great, was a descendant of Esau (cf. Gen 27:39-40). Born in 73 B.C., he was appointed King of the 6 And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless.

7 And they had no child, because that Elisabeth was barren, and they both were now well stricken in years.

8 And it came to pass, that while he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course,

9 According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord.

10 And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the time of incense.

11 And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord standing on the right side of the altar of incense.

12 And when Zäch-a-rí'as saw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

13 But the angel said unto him, Fear not, Zäch-a-rí'as: for thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John.

14 And thou shalt have joy and gladness; and many shall rejoice at his birth.

15 For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb.

16 And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God.

17 And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of E-li'as, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

18 And Zäch-a-rí'as said unto the angel, Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man and my wife well stricken in years.

19 And the angel answering said unto him, I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to shew thee these glad tidings.

20 And, behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.

21 And the people waited for Zäch-a-rí'as, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple.

22 And when he came out, he could not speak unto them: and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple: for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless.

23 And it came to pass, that, as soon as the days of his ministration were accomplished, he departed to his own house.

24 And after those days his wife Elisabeth conceived, and hid herself five months, saying,

Jews by the Roman Senate in 40 B.C. He ruled until his death in March or April, 4 B.C. Archelaus (Mt 2:22), Philip (Lk 3:1), and Herod Antipas (Lk 23:7-12, 15) were his sons. Herod Agrippa I of Acts 12:1-6, 19-23 was his grandson, and Herod Agrippa II of Acts 25-26 was his great-grandson.

6-10. Zechariah . . . and Elisabeth were very old and childless (vs. 7), a theme repeated throughout the Old Testament, as with Sarah, Rebekah, Manoah's wife, and Hannah. Zechariah was a priest, and he was serving for about a two-week period in the Temple. This Temple was built by Zerubbabel and others in 516 B.C., but since 20 B.C. was in the process of being enlarged and redone by Herod the Great (see Jn 2:20). Zechariah had the unique opportunity of offering incense before the Holy of Holies. The people outside prayed and awaited his blessing.

11-17. At that moment the angel Gabriel (vs. 19) appeared to Zechariah, who was suddenly shaken with fear, and said his prayers had been answered. Zechariah's prayer could have been (1) his long-standing request for a son, or (2) his general petitions for the coming of the Messiah, or (3) both. Both were shortly accomplished. This Gabriel was the same angel who appeared five hundred years before to Daniel (Dan 8:15-16; 9:21). No recorded revelation from God had been given to men for over four hundred years. Naturally, Zechariah was stunned. The content of Gabriel's message was twofold. (1) Elisabeth was to bear a son and name him John. (2) John would have the spirit and power of Elijah and was to prepare the way for the Messiah.

18-20. Zechariah expressed doubt, and so as both a punishment as well as a sign, he was stricken speechless for the ensuing nine months.

21-25. When Zechariah left the Temple he had no priestly blessing to bestow upon the people. Luke contrasts this initial occasion with the final episode of this gospel as Christ, our High Priest, ascended up into heaven while giving the apostles His blessing (Lk 24:50-51).

25 Thus hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men.

26 ¶And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, 27 To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

28 And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women.

29 And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be.

30 And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God.

31 And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS.

32 He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David:

33 And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?

35 And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.

36 And, behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren.

37 For with God nothing shall be impossible.

38 And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

39 ¶And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill country with haste, into a city of Juda;

40 And entered into the house of Zäch-a-rí'as, and saluted Elisabeth.

41 And it came to pass, that, when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary,

B. Gabriel's Announcement to Mary. 1:26-38.

26. And in the sixth month refers to the sixth month of Elisabeth's pregnancy. Once again, Gabriel was sent to announce a special birth, this time to Mary in Nazareth.

27. To a virgin. There is no doubt according to Scripture that Christ's birth was a virgin birth, totally without parallel either before or since. This is required for several reasons: (1) to fulfill Old Testament prophecy (Gen 3:15; Isa 7:14; Jer 31:22); (2) to avoid the Old Testament curse on the seed of Jeconiah (Jer 22:24-30), yet still be able to claim the Throne of David in the kingly line; (3) to be in accord with the theological implications of the inspiration of the Scriptures and Christ's sinless humanity. Through the miraculous virgin conception, Christ avoided receiving a sinful nature; (4) to avoid receiving a human father. Christ already had a Father, and it would be unsuitable to have a second one; (5) to avoid creating a new person, as is done in all normal conceptions. Mary's conception of Christ was to be the incarnation of an already existing person.

28. Blessed art thou among women. Mary was perhaps the best female descendant of David suitable for this matchless ministry of rearing the very Son of God. We must be careful not to downgrade Mary, nor to exalt her too highly.

29-33. Mary was naturally perplexed by all this, though she accepted it. Gabriel went on to explain that the Messiah Himself was to be born to her. The importance of verses 32-33 is that of the fulfillment of the Davidic Covenant of II Samuel 7:13-16, and of the messianic reign described in Isaiah 9:6-7.

34. How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? This was a legitimate question, given Mary's present marital status. Unlike Zechariah's question in verse 18, Mary expresses no doubt, but rather a humble submission to the will of God. Note verse 38 in this regard also.

35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee. These words express the completely miraculous nature of Mary's conception. It was accomplished by God alone in a unique, never-to-be-repeated way. But one asks, could not Mary transmit her sinful nature to the one conceived in her womb? Ordinarily this would be the case, but the phrase that holy thing which shall be born of thee declares that God supernaturally prevented this from occurring.

36-38. Gabriel's announcement to Mary concluded with the statement that Mary's elderly cousin Elisabeth had also conceived, and was in her sixth month of pregnancy. The words, For with God nothing shall be impossible, are applicable to what God was doing with both Mary and Elisabeth.

C. Mary's Visit to Elisabeth. 1:39-56.

39-40. Almost immediately after receiving Gabriel's message, Mary prepared to visit Elisabeth some sixty or more miles south of Nazareth in Judaeen territory. She remained there about three months (vs. 56).

41-45. Elisabeth was suddenly filled with the Holy Spirit when she saw Mary. Elisabeth's words in verses 42-45 indicate the babe leaped in her womb; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost:

42 And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

43 And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

44 For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

45 And blessed is she that believed; for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord.

46 ¶And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord,

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.

48 For he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

49 For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name.

50 And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation.

51 He hath shewed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

52 He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree.

53 He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away.

54 He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy;

55 As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever.

56 And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

57 ¶Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her.

59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zäch-a-r'ias, after the name of his father.

60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.

63 And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all.

64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.

65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these that God gave her a prophetic knowledge of Mary's condition, and filled her lips with the fruit of praise to Almighty God.

46-55. And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord. This section, commonly called the Magnificat, in many ways resembles Hannah's prayer of thanksgiving and praise to God recorded in I Samuel 2:1-10. It illustrates Mary's rich acquaintance with the Old Testament Scriptures and the closeness of her fellowship with the Lord.

56. Naturally, when Mary returned home after being away for three months, and was soon obviously with child, her fiancé, Joseph, was dismayed. Only revelation from heaven could substantiate Mary's explanation regarding her condition. Matthew 1:18-25 records how God met this need.

D. John's Birth in Judaea. 1:57-80.

57-59a. Eight days after the birth of Elisabeth's baby boy, he was to be circumcised in accord with the elements enumerated in God's covenant with Abraham in Genesis 17:10-14, and made part of the Law in Leviticus 12. The idea of circumcision seems to include three truths: (1) purification of the flesh; (2) separation unto God; and (3) identification as God's very own.

59b-63. And they called him Zechariah, after the name of his father. And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John. Zechariah, in his speechless condition had at least made known to Elisabeth the full content of the angel Gabriel's message in which the new son was to be named John. The friends and relatives were not aware of this fact; they wanted to name him after his father. They were greatly surprised to see the boy called John, which means in Hebrew, "Jehovah is gracious," or "Jehovah's gift." Certainly both were true regarding this gracious gift to Zechariah and Elisabeth. When the relatives questioned this new name, Zechariah confirmed the naming by writing "John" on a small wooden or wax tablet.

64-66. Immediately God miraculously ended Zechariah's long involuntary period of silence and he began praising God. These actions attracted great awe and amazement in that entire region. People began to take note of young John, and of the fact that the hand of the Lord was with him (cf. I Sam 2:21, 26).

sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judæa.

66 And all they that heard them laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And the hand of the Lord was with him.

67 ¶And his father Zäch-a-ri'as was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people,

69 And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;

70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:

71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;

72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant;

73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,

74 That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear.

75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.

76 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;

77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins,

78 Through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us,

79 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

80 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel.

CHAPTER 2

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

2 (And this taxing was first made when Cÿ-rē'nī-us was governor of Syria.)

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

67-79. The prophecy of Zechariah, found exclusively in these verses, was spoken under the power of the Holy Spirit. His words are filled with messianic importance with references to redemption or salvation in verses 68, 69, 71, 74, and 77. That God's unchanging covenant with Abraham was being fulfilled is mentioned in verses 72-73. In fact, there are no less than sixteen direct quotations or allusions to the Old Testament contained in these few verses. Zechariah utters a remarkable prophecy which heralds the coming of the Messiah and His forerunner. It is in some ways the New Testament reiteration of the last chapter of the Old Testament.

80. As with Christ, there is but scant mention of the childhood of John the Baptist. His work was to begin some thirty years later.

E. Jesus' Birth in Beth-lehem. 2:1-21.

2:1. A decree from Caesar Augustus. Augustus was the grandnephew of Julius Caesar, and was adopted as his son. After the murder of Julius Caesar, young Octavius Augustus ruled with Mark Anthony and Lepidus in a triumvirate. Then for more than forty years, from 27 B.C. to A.D. 14, Augustus served by himself as the first emperor of the Roman Empire. It was during his reign that Christ was born.

All the world indicates only the twenty-seven provinces ruled by the Roman Senate and the emperor. Taxed (Gr apographō), better translated as enrolled, signifies a census, upon which basis perhaps a future taxation would be made.

2. When Cyrenius was governor of Syria. Syria was the most important of all the Roman provinces, and Quirinius (Cyrenius) served in several capacities there at different times. Roman censuses came every fourteen years. The first one of which we have recorded knowledge came in A.D. 6. This earlier census then may have been set in motion in Rome about 8 B.C., while Quirinius was the military governor of Syria. Several years would be required to complete such a census.

3-6. Joseph had to travel from Nazareth, where he was living, to Beth-lehem for the census, because he was a descendant of

LUKE 2:4

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judæa, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:)

5 To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

6 And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

7 And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 ¶ And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

11 For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

15 And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

16 And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19 But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 ¶ And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

22 And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

23 (As it is written in the law of the King David of Beth-lehem. Mary accompanied Joseph on the sixty-five-mile journey.

7. Wrapped him in swaddling clothes. With no midwife to help, Mary wrapped baby Jesus in long bands of cloth such as were used in wrapping the bodies of the dead. That He was born to die is perhaps intimated here and in the later gift of myrrh from the wise men (Mt 2:11). Manger is a cattle-feeding trough. No room for them in the inn. All these things suggest poverty, loneliness, and even rejection (see II Cor 8:9). The exact date and place are not recorded by Luke, perhaps to guard against the vain worship which men often attach to such information.

8-11. God sent an angel to make the first announcement of the Saviour's birth to lowly shepherds. He is called the Deliverer, the Anointed One (Messiah) promised in the Old Testament, even the Lord Himself.

12. The uniqueness of the sign was the rarity of finding a baby in a manger.

13-15. Upon completion of his announcement, this angel was immediately joined by hundreds of dazzling angels who lit up the dark sky (see vs. 9, the glory of the Lord shone). Nothing like that had happened for hundreds of years. It must have made the intended impression on these shepherds.

16-18. They quickly found the Christ, and then spread the news of the miraculous events associated with His coming. All who heard it marvelled.

19-20. Mary was beginning to see God's attestation of her boy who was also the Son of the Highest. This was apparently the first confirmation she had had since her visit to Elisabeth, and the dream Joseph had received some months earlier.

21. The Saviour was officially named Jesus upon His circumcision at eight days old.

F. Mary's Purification in Jerusalem. 2:22-38.

22-24. About five weeks later, Mary and Joseph traveled five miles north to the Temple in Jerusalem to offer the sacrifice required by the law of Moses (Lev 12:6-8). This ended Mary's period of uncleanness which had last forty days from Christ's birth. The circumcision of a male child was apparently seen as removing some of the uncleanness, because a female child would Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord:)

24 And to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtledoves, or two young pigeons.

25 And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ.

27 And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law,

28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said,

29 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word:

30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation,

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;

32 A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against;

35 (Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also,) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

36 And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Pha-nū'el, of the tribe of A'ser: she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity;

37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.

38 And she coming in that instant gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.

39 And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.

40 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him.

41 ¶Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover.

42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem after the custom of the feast.

43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's cause uncleanness to remain for eighty days (Lev 12:5). The poverty of Mary and Joseph is seen in their offering a pair of doves rather than the more expensive lamb and a dove. The wise men of Matthew 2:1-12, who brought gold and other gifts, had not yet arrived. They came later after Mary and Joseph had moved from the stable into a house (Mt 2:11).

25-35. Before Christ was born, the Holy Spirit had ministered in a unique way to a man named Simeon, informing him that he would behold the long-promised Messiah before he died. Guided by the Holy Spirit, he entered the Temple at the precise moment that Mary and Joseph were there with the six-week-old child. He lifted the baby into his arms and uttered a special prophecy. He spoke of Christ as a light for the Gentiles, and as the glory of Israel. This made even Mary and Joseph take note (vs. 33). Verse 34 speaks of both the tremendous earthly and eternal difference it makes whether one trusts Christ to be his personal sin substitute. Verse 35 looks forward thirty-three years to the agony Mary will suffer while seeing her son crucified.

36-38. Anna a prophetess. Anna follows in the train of Miriam, Deborah, and Huldah in the Old Testament. Note that the tribe of Asher had not completely lost its identity. The godly of all Israelite tribes had come south to Judah prior to the 722 B.C. deportation of most in the northern tribes to Assyria. Later, James addressed all twelve tribes of Israel (Jas 1:1). Anna may have been over one hundred years old. She witnessed to the faithful remnant in Jerusalem regarding the newborn Messiah.

G. Jesus' Growth in Nazareth. 2:39-40.

39. After these Temple experiences, the wise men visited Christ in Beth-lehem, which precipitated Mary and Joseph's departure and sojourn in Egypt (Mt 2:1-14). This verse telling of the return to Nazareth corresponds with Matthew 2:19-23.

40. The boyhood of Christ was natural as far as physical growth was concerned, but extraordinary in relation to His attainment of wisdom and understanding of spiritual things.

H. Jesus' First Passover in Jerusalem. 2:41-52.

41-42. The Old Testament law required all Israelite males to appear before the Lord three times each year (Deut 16:16). Mary and Joseph were in the habit of attending Passover. At age twelve, Jesus accompanied them.

43-46. After three days they found him in the temple. Mary and Joseph had lost track of Jesus on the way back to Nazareth. They traveled a day out and a day back, and searched the city a third day before they found Jesus in the Temple. He was engaged in a profound discussion of theological topics with the journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.

45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

47 And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?

50 And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.

52 And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man.

greatest religious leaders of the day anywhere on earth. They knew the Old Testament and Jesus questioned them, as well as answered their questions.

47. Christ's understanding astonished everyone, even as His miracles would two decades later.

48-51. At this early age, the son of Mary knew He was also the Son of God. Perhaps in the routine of daily living, Mary and Joseph's initial awareness of the true identity of this Messiah-child had faded somewhat.

52. During the so-called silent years, Jesus matured in four ways: (1) mentally, i.e., in wisdom; (2) physically, i.e., in stature; (3) spiritually, i.e., in favor with God; and (4) socially, i.e., in favor with man.

III. THE PUBLIC PRESENTATION OF THE SON.

3:1-4:13.

A. The Words and Work of John the Baptist. 3:1-20.

3:1. In the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar. As always, Luke gives precise historical information. Tiberius took over as Roman Emperor after Augustus (see notes on 2:1). Augustus reigned from 27 B.C. until his death in A.D. 14. However, it appears that Augustus made Tiberius co-emperor during his final two years. Thus, his fifteenth year is probably to be equated with A.D. 26 or 27. This would correspond with Jesus' being about thirty years old at that time (Lk 3:23), and with John 2:20 which says the Temple renovation began by Herod in 20 or 19 B.C. had been going on for forty-six years.

2. The word of God came unto John. John followed in the train of many other Old Testament prophets, and the same formula is used to indicate God's revelation to him as to Elijah (I Kgs 18:1), Jeremiah (Jer 1:4), Ezekiel (Ezk 1:3), and others. John's ministry was in the wilderness, a barren area between the hill country and the Jordan.

3. Preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins. This should not be confused with Christian baptism, which began on Pentecost. Christian baptism, as explained by Paul in Romans 6:1-4, pictures death, burial, and resurrection in union with Christ. That meaning could only have been possible after the cross, since not even the disciples themselves understood anything about Christ having to die until after it was an accomplished fact (see Mt 16:21-23; Lk 19:11). John's baptism must have pictured a cleansing of heart and a preparedness to receive the Messiah, as evidenced by repentance. John's converts could be saved, but they were saved just as any other Old Testament saint was, such as Abraham, Job, Isaiah, or Daniel.

4-8. John's ministry was to prepare the way for the Messiah's appearance. His message was that of repentance for sin, and of a resulting change in one's life. His baptism was to picture the reality of that change, cleansing, and remission of sins. His

CHAPTER 3

NOW in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tī-be-rī-us Cæsar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judæa, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of i-tū-ræ'a and of the region of Trāch-o-nī'tis, and Ly-sa'ni-as the tetrarch of Ab-i-lē'ne,

2 Ān'nas and Cā'ia-phas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John the son of Zāch-a-rī'as in the wilderness.

3 And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins:

4 As it is written in the book of the words of E-sā'ias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

5 Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth;

6 And all flesh shall see the salvation of God.

7 Then said he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?

8 Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham.

9 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

10 And the people asked him, saying, What shall we do then?

11 He answereth and saith unto them, He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise.

12 Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do?

13 And he said unto them, Exact no more than that which is appointed you.

14 And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages.

15 ¶And as the people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not;

16 John answered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire:

17 Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his garner; but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable.

18 And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people.

19 ¶But Herod the tetrarch, being reproved by him for Herodias his brother Philip's wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done, 20 Added yet this above all, that he shut up John in prison.

21 ¶Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened, message was stern (vss. 7, 9) and demanded a change in one's life (vs. 8).

9. The axe is laid unto the root. The judgment of God was imminent upon these people and their nation. Only repentance could save.

10-14. Three groups responded to John's warnings: the people or multitude (vss. 10-11), the publicans or tax collectors (vss. 12-13), and the soldiers (vs. 14). John specified appropriate actions for each class of hearers.

15. The people were wondering whether John could be the Christ (Gr Christos), or Messiah (Heb Mashiach), repeatedly promised throughout the Old Testament (see Isa 9:6-7; 11:1-9; Amos 9:11; and Mic 4:1-3; 5:2). The Baptist clearly indicated here, and in John 1:19-29, that he was not their Messiah, but only His forerunner.

16-18. He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire. This prediction of John, which is found as well in the other Gospels (Mt 3:11; Mk 1:8; Jn 1:33), is repeated by Christ in Acts 1:5 just before His ascension into heaven. Later this baptism in (or with) the Holy Spirit occurred on the Day of Pentecost, as the Holy Spirit took up permanent residence in the bodies of the believing disciples. The baptism with fire seems to refer to a future judgment as explained in verse 17, perhaps that which purifies believers, or ultimately judges those who refuse to believe.

19. Herod the tetrarch. This Herod was one of the sons of Herod the Great who sought to kill the baby Jesus in Matthew 2. John, who was not afraid to preach against divorce, had publicly reproached this Herod for marrying Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip.

20. He shut up John in prison. Very early during Christ's public ministry (Mt 4:12; Jn 3:24), John was cast into prison at Machaerus, a fortress on the east side of the Dead Sea. As a result, he was not privileged to see many of Christ's miracles and later had personal doubts regarding Christ (Lk 7:18-23), which were soon dispelled.

B. The Baptism of Christ. 3:21-22.

21. The baptism of Christ was totally unique. It did not signify what John's baptism of repentance did, because Jesus had no sin of which to repent. Jesus' explanation was that it might "fulfill all righteousness" (Mt 3:15). It no doubt marks the beginning of Christ's public ministry and probably pictures

22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.

23 ¶And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Hē'li, 24 Which was the son of Māt'thāt, which was the son of Levi, which was the son of Mēl'chī, which was the son of Jān'na, which was the son of Joseph.

25 Which was the son of Māt-ta-thī'as, which was the son of Amos, which was the son of Nā'um, which was the son of Ēs'li, which was the son of Nāg'ge.

26 Which was the son of Mā'ath, which was the son of Māt-ta-thī'as, which was the son of Sēm'e-ī, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Juda.

27 Which was the son of Jō-ān'na, which was the son of Rhē'sa, which was the son of Zō-rōb'a-bel, which was the son of Sa-lā'thī-el, which was the son of Ne'ri,

28 Which was the son of Mēl'chī, which was the son of Ad'dī, which was the son of Cō'sam, which was the son of Ēl-mō'dām, which was the son of Er, 29 Which was the son of Jō'se, which was the son of Ē-lī-ē'zer, which was the son of Jō'rīm, which was the son of Māt'thāt, which was the son of Levi.

30 Which was the son of Sīmeon, which was the son of Juda, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Jō'nān, which was the son of E-lī'a-kīm,

31 Which was the son of Mē'le-a, which was the son of Mē'nān, which was the son of Māt'ta-tha, which was the son of Nathan, which was the son of David,

32 Which was the son of Jesse, which was the son of Ō'bed, which was the son of Bō'ōz, which was the son of Sāl'mon, which was the son of Nā-ās'son,

33 Which was the son of A-mīn'a-dāb, which was the son of Ā'ram, which was the son of Ēs-rōm, which was the son of Phā'rēs, which was the son of Juda,

34 Which was the son of Jacob, which was the son of Isaac, which was the son of Abraham, which was the son of Thā'ra, which was the son of Nā'chōr,

35 Which was the son of Sā'ruch, which was the son of Rā'gau, which was the son of Phā'lec, which was the son of Hē'ber, which was the son of Sā'la,

36 Which was the son of Ca'īnan, which was the son of Ār-phāx'ād, which was the son of Sem, which was for Christ a pledge of His future death, burial, and resurrection for the sin of the world.

22. Here, as in other places (the Great Commission, Mt 28:19; certain benedictions, II Cor 13:14; and other passages, I Cor 6:11; I Pet 1:2), all the persons of the Godhead are mentioned together, and distinguished from one another. On two other occasions, the transfiguration (Lk 9:35), and the Triumphant Entry into Jerusalem (Jn 12:28), God the Father similarly testified audibly regarding Christ.

C. The Genealogy of Christ. 3:23-38.

23. About thirty years of age. At the time Jesus began His public ministry He was thirty years old, as were the Levitical priests when they began their service (Num 4:47). Being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph. Luke is careful to explain Christ's unique parentage in light of His virgin birth. Jesus had no earthly father.

24-38. This genealogy differs from that in Matthew 1 in several ways. Matthew traces the line of descent beginning with Abraham and through the line of kings who directly followed David. This line alone could claim the Davidic throne. Luke, however, apparently gives Mary's blood-line, working backward from her father Heli, who would be Joseph's father by marriage. Mary is also seen to be a descendant of King David, but her line is followed all the way back to Adam. This firmly shows Christ to be completely human, yet a true descendant of David. Jesus' genealogy through Mary avoided the curse placed on David's kingly line following Zeconiah (Jer 22:30), yet allowed Him to claim the throne legitimately as a true human descendant of David, and as the adopted heir of the kingly line of Joseph.

the son of Nō'e, which was the son of Lā'mech,

37 Which was the son of Ma-thū'sā-la, which was the son of Ē'noch, which was the son of Jā'red, which was the son of Ma-lē'le-el, which was the son of Ca-Īnan, 38 Which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God.

CHAPTER 4

AND Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness,

2 Being forty days tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.

4 And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

6 And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

7 If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine.

8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:

10 For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee:

11 And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

12 And Jesus answering said unto him, It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

13 And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

14 ¶And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

15 And he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all.

16 ¶And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read.

D. The Temptation of Christ. 4:1-13.

The temptation of Christ was both a testing and a tempting. From the divine point of view, the Holy Spirit arranged a testing to show that Jesus qualified as free from sin. If He were not free from personal sin, He could not bear our sins. For Satan, it was a temptation to see if he could make Christ fall as had the first Adam. The temptation was real, yet it was impossible for God the Son to sin.

4:1. The wilderness. A barren region between the hill country and the Jordan Valley. The traditional site is northwest of Jericho.

2. Forty days. Jesus fasted during this entire period, in part as a spiritual preparation for the ministry in which He was about to engage.

3-8. If thou be the Son of God. Satan approached Christ assuming that He was God and could exercise divine power. However, for Christ to exercise His divine prerogatives at this point would be to step out of the pathway leading to the cross. Jesus met each temptation as a man. He quoted Scripture each time (Deut 8:3; 6:16; 10:20).

9-12. Pinnacle of the temple. The pinnacle is normally taken to mean the place where the southern and eastern walls of the city and temple area met. This place even today stands several hundred feet above the depths of the Kidron Valley below it.

13. For a season. These words, recorded only by Luke, indicate the fact that Satan was to similarly attack Christ again and again. Matthew and Mark record the ministry of angels to Christ at this point.

IV. THE PREACHING OF THE SON IN GALILEE.

4:14-9:50.

A. The Preaching that Claimed Messiahship. 4:14-44.

14. Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit. The Lord Jesus Christ was constantly and consciously yielded to the Holy Spirit (cf. Jn 3:34).

15. Taught in their synagogues. Practically every Jewish village had a synagogue. They were used to instruct in the Old Testament. When Jesus taught, as in the following account, He pointed to the fulfillment of the messianic Scriptures in Himself.

16. Nazareth. Nazareth is situated at the southern edge of the hill country of Galilee overlooking the beautiful Jezreel Valley. Jesus had grown up here, and everyone knew Him as the carpenter's son. As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day. Jesus set an example of regular 17 And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet E-sā'ias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written.

18 The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised,

19 To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.

20 And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him.

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And all bare him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son?

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself: whatsoever we have heard done in Ca-per'na-um, do also here in thy country.

24 And he said, Verily I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country.

25 But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of E-lī'-as, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land;

26 But unto none of them was E-lī'-as sent, save unto Sar-ēp'ta, a city of Sī'-don, unto a woman that was a widow.

27 And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Ēl-i-sē'us the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Nā'a-man the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath, 29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong.

30 But he passing through the midst of them went his way.

31 And came down to Ca-per'na-um, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the sabbath days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power.

33 ¶And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, attendance at the public worship services. They met on the Sabbath (Saturday), because they were still bound under the dispensation of law. After the resurrection and ascension of Christ, Christians began meeting on the first day of the week (Sunday, cf. Acts 20:7; I Cor 16:2).

17-19. Jesus participated in the service that day by opening the scroll (Gr biblion) and reading one and a half verses (Isa 61:1-2a). He read a portion that dealt directly with the earthly ministry of the Messiah (such as preaching and healing) and stopped just before the passage went on to describe His coming judgment in the end times.

20-22. The application was short and to the point, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears. This was a direct and full claim to be the Messiah.

23-30. Unfortunately, the people could not accept the fantastic claim of this thirty-year-old carpenter's son. Instead of believing Christ, and receiving the long-promised earthly kingdom He proclaimed, they were indignant and sought to cast Jesus over the side of the mountain into the valley far below. However, God supernaturally prevented them from carrying out their wicked intentions and Jesus went away unhindered.

31. Came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee. Since the elevation of Capernaum is six hundred fifty feet below sea level, Jesus had to go down from the higher elevations of southern Galilee. Christ taught several Sabbaths in their synagogue on the shore of the Sea of Galilee.

32. And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power. This statement characterizes all of Christ's teaching ministry (cf. Mt 7:28-29). Such words, supported by miraculous works, should have produced faith on the part of all. Most religious leaders, however, rejected His claims, and most common people followed Him for the wrong reasons.

33-37. Demon-possession was prevalent in Christ's time, and on numerous occasions Christ cast out these fallen angels. In the synagogue at Nazareth one such demon spoke to Christ from out

34 Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; the Holy One of God.

35 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not.

36 And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they come out.

37 And the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about.

38 ¶ And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house. And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her.

39 And he stood over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her; and immediately she arose and ministered unto them.

40 ¶ Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

41 And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he rebuking them suffered them not to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.

42 And when it was day, he departed and went into a desert place; and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

43 And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent.

44 And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee.

CHAPTER 5

AND it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Gēn-nēs'-a-ret.

2 And saw two ships standing by the lake: but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

4 Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing; nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes: and their net brake.

7 And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And of his human captive's body. Jesus rebuked him as an improper source for proclaiming who Christ was. Jesus' fame was spreading rapidly in every direction.

38-41. That same Sabbath day, Jesus instantly and completely healed Peter's mother-in-law (cf. I Cor 9:5) of a fever. Instead of being left weak, she immediately arose and waited on her visitors. After sundown, hundreds of sick and diseased assembled at Peter's door (cf. Mk 1:33), and Christ healed them all. None were sent away unhelped, and faith is not spoken of as a condition for being healed. These miracles performed by Christ, and later by the apostles too, were for the purpose of authenticating their ministry as from God. The Bible neither offers nor requires such a ministry for today.

42-44. Went into a desert place. Mark 1:35 records the fact that Jesus went early by Himself, and for the purpose of praying. Even as constantly busy as He was in ministry, He knew the necessity of a time alone with the Father at the beginning of each day. Let us not ignore His example.

B. The Miracles that Supported His Messiahship. 5:1-39.

5:1. Lake of Gennesaret. This is the Sea of Galilee. Jesus referred to it as a "sea" but here Luke calls it a lake. It is six hundred eighty-five feet below sea level, about seven miles wide, and twelve miles long. In Christ's day, it was abundant with fish.

2-3. From Peter's boat, Jesus taught the multitudes who stood on the shore. Jesus had met Peter previously (see Jn 1:41-42) and he had followed Christ in an intermittent fashion for some time. After this experience, however (cf. Mt 4:18-19), they forsook all, and followed him (vs. 11).

4-9. The miracle was that Christ commanded Peter to let down his nets in the deep to take a catch of fish. This was against the common practice of fishing at night, and near the shore. However, Peter obeyed and let down the nets. The result was a magnificent catch that pointed to Christ's deity and exposed Peter's sinfulness in contrast.

LUKE 5:8

they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

8 When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken:

10 And so was also James, and John, the sons of Zēb'e-dee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men.

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed him.

12 ¶And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold a man full of leprosy: who seeing Jesus fell on his face, and besought him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

13 And he put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will: be thou clean. And immediately the leprosy departed from him.

14 And he charged him to tell no man: but go, and shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing, according as Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

15 But so much the more went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

16 And he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.

17 ¶And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judæa, and Jerusalem: and the power of the Lord was present to heal them.

18 ¶And, behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

19 And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the housetop, and let him down through the tiling with his couch into the midst before Jesus.

20 And when he saw their faith, he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 And the scribes and the Pharisees began to reason, saying, Who is this which speaketh blasphemies? Who can forgive sins, but God alone?

22 But when Jesus perceived their thoughts, he answering said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts?

23 Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?

10-11. Leaving the vast catch was not a sinful waste of food, as some have supposed, because Zebedee and his servants would have been perfectly able to care for the haul. Jesus promised Peter and Andrew, and James and John that they would catch men from that time forward. The promise was certainly fulfilled.

12-13. A man full of leprosy. Leprosy is a dreadful disease that eats away the fingers, toes, ears, nose, etc. This man had an acute case, but knew Jesus could heal him if He only desired to. Jesus did, and instantly the leprosy was completely gone, not just arrested.

14. Tell no man. Jesus gave the command on several occasions, and it may seem strange to modern readers. The answer as to why Jesus said these words seems to have several aspects. (1) He was first to go to the Temple to show himself to the priest as the Law required (Lev 14). If the priest heard before his arrival that Jesus had healed him, the case might be prejudiced against him. (2) Jesus did not want to be known or sought merely as a miracle worker. His primary work was to be spiritual rather than physical.

15. Christ's fame continued to spread, nonetheless.

16. He withdrew . . . and prayed. Here is but another example Luke gives of Jesus' reliance on prayer. If Christ needed to pray much, how much greater must be the necessity with us.

17-19. Jesus' healing of the palsied man (Mk 2:1) is the backdrop for the great controversy that began to develop between Christ and the Jewish religious leaders. Luke noted (vs. 17) that some of these leaders had come from as far away as Jerusalem, some eighty miles distant.

The crowd was so great around the house where Jesus was that the palsied man had to be lowered through a makeshift hole torn in the roof by his four determined friends.

20. He saw their faith. The palsied man is probably to be included as having faith that Christ would heal him, as he was at least a consenting party to the action of his four friends. Jesus loved to see men act in faith, and thus responded: Man, thy sins are forgiven thee. Jesus' words were calculated to draw a particular reaction from the unbelieving Jews present.

21-24. Jesus was silently accused of blasphemy. The men rightly reasoned that only God could forgive sins. But they failed to consider the possibility that Jesus was indeed God! The omniscient Christ read their very thoughts. He pointed out that it would be easy for someone to say that another's sin was forgiven. No one could prove any differently. But the harder thing would be to heal a hopeless case of bedridden palsy. Jesus then proved He had the authority to speak the one thing by doing the other. He healed the man.

24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go into thine house.

25 And immediately he rose up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, glorifying God.

26 And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to day.

27 ¶ And after these things he went forth, and saw a publican, named Levi, sitting at the receipt of custom: and he said unto him, Follow me.

28 And he left all, rose up, and followed him.

29 And Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them.

30 But their scribes and Pharisees murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and sinners?

31 And Jesus answering said unto them, They that are whole need not a physician: but they that are sick.

32 I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

33 ¶ And they said unto him, Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?

34 And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bridechamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them?

35 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

36 ¶ And he spake also a parable unto them; No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old; if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old.

37 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish.

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved.

39 No man also having drunk old wine straightway desireth new: for he saith, The old is better.

CHAPTER 6

AND it came to pass on the second sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.

25-26. The reaction of the multitude was that the charge of blasphemy had been disproved. Jesus was vindicated; God was glorified.

27. A publican, named Levi. In Matthew and Mark, Levi is referred to as Matthew. Levi was a tax collector who worked for the Roman government, and was no doubt well off financially.

28. Upon Jesus' call of Follow me, Levi left all. He no doubt lost his job as a result. His commitment to Christ was complete and final. Levi was the writer of our first Gospel, Matthew.

29-31. Later, Levi's efforts to win his fellow tax collectors to faith in Christ was an occasion for the Pharisees to criticize Jesus and His disciples for dining with such sinners. Jesus replied that only those who are sick realize their need of a physician. The Pharisees were in need, but refused to acknowledge it.

32-35. Jesus indicated His own departure from the world in verse 32, probably for the first time. His death and resurrection had been personally foretold earlier (Jn 2:19-22). Jesus also said that fasting would become a practice of His disciples after His departure. This was fulfilled in New Testament church practice in Acts 10:30; 13:2; 14:23; and I Corinthians 7:5. The purpose for fasting is usually that one may give himself more fully to prayer and seeking the mind of the Lord in making special decisions. There may be some physical benefits to occasional fasting as well. New Testament fasting is always voluntary, never mandatory.

36-39. The two parables in this short paragraph relate the same message, only in different figures. New Testament truth cannot be bound up in the structure of the Old Testament law.

C. The Choice of the Twelve. 6:1-49.

6:1. The second sabbath after the first. This unique expression, which does not occur in some manuscripts, is either a manuscript error or a reference to the second of the seven Sabbaths between Passover and Pentecost (Lev 23:15-16). If it is the latter, then it helps to fully establish Christ's ministry as being about three and a half years in duration. This is easily marked by the three different Passovers mentioned in John's gospel (2:13; 6:4; and 12:1). Luke 6:1 would then refer to an additional Passover between John 2:13 and 6:4, thus accounting for three years of ministry between the four Passovers.

Plucked . . . ears of corn, and did eat. Jesus and His dis-

2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath days?

3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was an hungred, and they which were with him;

4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the shewbread, and gave also to them that were with him; which it is not lawful to eat but for the priests alone?

5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

6 ¶And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue and taught: and there was a man whose right hand was withered.

7 And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath day; that they might find an accusation against him.

8 But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose and stood forth.

9 Then said Jesus unto them, I will ask you one thing: Is it lawful on the sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy it?

10 And looking round about upon them all, he said unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand. And he did so: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

11 And they were filled with madness; and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus.

12 ¶And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God.

13 And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles;

14 Simon, (whom he also named Peter,) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew,

15 Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Al-phæ'us, and Simon called Zelô'te's, 16 And Judas the brother of James, and Judas Iscariot, which also was the traitor.

17 And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judæa and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sî'don, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

19 And the whole multitude sought to touch him: for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

ciples picked some grain (probably wheat) for immediate eating as they walked along.

2. The Pharisees considered this to be harvesting and, therefore, a violation of the Sabbath. Thus, the great Sabbath controversy was continued by Christ's enemies who sought to destroy Him.

3-5. The Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath. After countering with the Old Testament example of David who once ate the sacred shewbread, Christ announced that He was Lord or supreme over the Sabbath. For one to claim personal sovereignty over an institution of God was practically to claim deity.

6-8. On another Sabbath, the Pharisees watched Christ as He was teaching in a synagogue to see if He would heal a man's withered right hand. This was clearly a test case. The scribes and Pharisees were hoping Christ would violate the law, as they saw it, in order to accuse Him. A man could be put to death for violating the Sabbath.

9-10. Jesus turned the tables by asking the rhetorical question of whether it was permitted to do good on the Sabbath. Since no one would deny this, Jesus quickly restored the man's hand.

11. The envy of the Pharisees, however, only increased as they sought means to put Jesus out of the way (cf. Jn 11:53).

12. The selection of the Twelve was made after Jesus spent a night in prayer. Much prayer is often needed before such important decisions.

13. Disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles. From the larger company of learners (disciples), Jesus selected just twelve, no doubt a number with special significance (see Lk 22:30). This number was suited for group instruction and "discipling." Mark 3:14 gives the purposes of this selection as that they might be with Him, and that He might send them out to preach. These Twelve were to be special witnesses. The fact that they are called "apostles" (Gr apostellō) indicates their new position as "sent ones."

14-16. Besides this passage there are several other lists of the twelve apostles (Mt 10:2-4; Mk 3:16-19; Acts 1:13). The names sometimes vary because Bartholomew and Nathanael are the same person, Matthew is also named Levi, and Lebbaeus was sometimes called Judas (not Iscariot) and also had the last name of Thaddaeus.

17-19. Jesus' healing ministry was extensive, both in the number of people healed, the places from which they came, and the maladies of which they were relieved. Unlike modern-day healers, Jesus healed all who came to Him.

20 ¶And he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God.

21 Blessed are ye that hunger now: for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh.

22 Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

24 But woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation.

25 Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 ¶But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, 28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.

29 And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also.

30 Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

31 And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

32 For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them.

33 And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same.

34 And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again.

35 But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the

20. He lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said. This passage, which follows the selection of the twelve apostles, records some of their formal training from the lips of the Lord. Much of this sermon on the plain (vs. 17) parallels the Sermon on the Mount (Mt 5-7), but there are differences as well as similarities. Jesus no doubt spoke similar messages on various occasions, even as preachers do today.

Blessed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God. Certainly no one gets to heaven simply because he is financially destitute. Matthew 5:3 adds poor "in spirit." One must realize his spiritual poverty before he will ever trust God's provision for his need, but material poverty sometimes teaches one to depend on God entirely. The phrase kingdom of God is here equivalent to Matthew's "kingdom of heaven."

21. Hunger . . . shall be filled. Certainly not a prediction of more ample food supplies, this speaks of God meeting the spiritual needs of those who are hungry for what He has to offer.

22-23. Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you . . . for the Son of man's sake. There is no blessing for being hated because one is foolish, lazy, untrustworthy, inept, or unfaithful. One might deserve such treatment in these cases. But when one is hated simply because he is a good Christian, living a life of testimony for Christ, then he receives the blessing promised (cf. Jn 15:18-19; I Pet 2:19-20; I Jn 3:13).

24. Woe unto you that are rich. Money is not evil, but the love of money is (I Tim 6:10). Fortune sometimes causes one to live independently of God, and to believe in his own self-sufficiency. Wealth should be acknowledged as from God, and used in a sacred stewardship.

25-30. Here Jesus is seeking to inculcate a godly spirit, which is exactly the opposite of how we normally react to situations around us. The point is that a man must be a Christian before he can exhibit Christian behavior.

31. This verse contains what is commonly called "The Golden Rule." Some have claimed that Buddha, Confucius, and even some rabbinical writings, all prior to Christ, contain the same teachings. This is only partly true, because their statements occur only in the negative: "Don't do to someone else what you wouldn't want him to do to you." No positive action is contemplated. Jesus, however, requires His believers to initiate helpful actions toward others.

32-35. Jesus told His disciples that their actions must go far beyond even what is considered good morality by the world. The believer's standards far surpass those of the "sinner."

Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil.

36 Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

37 Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven:

38 Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again.

39 And he spake a parable unto them. Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?

40 The disciple is not above his master: but every one that is perfect shall be as his master.

41 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

42 Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.

43 For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit; neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

44 For every tree is known by his own fruit. For of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble bush gather they grapes.

45 A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

46 ¶And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?

47 Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like:

48 He is like a man which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock: and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it: for it was founded upon a rock.

49 But he that heareth, and doeth not, is like a man that without a foundation

36. The progression of instruction has moved from an attitude of "love your enemies" (vs. 27), to the positive general action of "The Golden Rule" (vs. 31), and then to the very specific activity of leading (vs. 35). Now Jesus says to be merciful as your Father also is merciful. The fatherhood of God comes only by being born into His family by the new birth (Jn 3:3-7). Christ said that prior to that experience, men are naturally the children of the devil (Jn 8:44).

37. Judge not, and ye shall not be judged. This statement, and its parallel in Matthew 7:1, is often misconstrued. It means not to act as God in passing some final judgment on an individual. Because we cannot fully see motives, we often judge falsely. But we are to be discerning. We must be able to identify wolves in sheep's clothing in order to warn others and to flee ourselves. As Jesus suggests in verses 43-44, the fruit one produces is an indication of what he is like.

38-40. Give, and it shall be given unto you. Our Lord had a lot to say about money. This is because money is so important, touches every life, and is so liable to misuse. In fact, both Solomon and Jesus gave many warnings regarding wine, women and wealth. Here the principle is that we cannot outgive the Lord. Naturally, all our substance belongs to God. But as we give it back to Him, He is always more generous in returning it to us again. Every cheerful giver knows both the joy of giving and the joy of God's blessed provision. God entrusts more wealth to those whom He knows will properly dispense it.

41-42. The mote that is in thy brother's eye. It is only human nature to see our brother's faults while overlooking our own. But human nature is sinful. Jesus notes that if one first takes care of his own faults, he may be able to help his brother. This correct order must be followed.

43-45. It is an unchangeable law that outward fruit resembles and reproduces the inward qualities of the tree. So with man, the mouth simply echoes the thoughts of the heart. One's speech is a good barometer of his spiritual condition. Each person must examine his own speech to see if it exhibits anger, bitterness, irritation, and gossip, or if it reflects cheerfulness, sympathy, and love.

46. Why call ye me, Lord . . . ? If one calls Christ Lord, then he had better not say what Peter said in Acts 10:14, "Not so, Lord." For he who acknowledges Christ as Lord, the only correct response is as Paul humbly said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" (Acts 9:6). Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments" (Jn 14:15). Nothing less will do.

47-49. The meaning of this short parabolic saying about the house built on the rock and that built on the sand concerns the foundation of one's life. Only those who actually do Christ's will have the sure foundation of Christ beneath them. All other ways, routes, and efforts will end in destruction.

built an house upon the earth; against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great.

CHAPTER 7

NOW when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, he entered into Ca-per'na-um.

2 And a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die.

3 And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this:

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.

6 Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself: for I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof:

7 Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

10 And they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

11 ¶And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

14 And he came and touched the bier: and they that bare him stood still. And

D. More Miracles and Parables in Galilee. 7:1-8:56.

7:1. He entered into Capernaum. It seems that Capernaum, on the northwest shore of Galilee, was Jesus' primary resting place during His great Galilean ministry. Matthew 9:1 calls it "his own city." Since Jesus had no home of His own (Lk 9:58), He must have stayed with one or more of the disciples who lived there (i.e., Peter's wife's family or Matthew).

2. Centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die. A centurion was a Roman soldier in command of at least one hundred men. There are approximately ten centurions mentioned in the New Testament, and each is presented in a good light. This centurion had numerous noble qualities.

3. He heard of Jesus. This no doubt refers to the tremendous healing miracles Jesus had done. He sent unto him the elders of the Jews. This centurion had great influence with the Jews, which was unusual.

4-5. These elders give two reasons as to why this Gentile was worthy of having Jesus come to heal his servant: (1) he loved the Jews though not many Romans did; and (2) he built the Jewish synagogue in Capernaum. The present synagogue ruins in Capernaum date from the fourth century A.D., and are clearly Roman in architecture, but with the Star of David, vine and branches, and other Jewish emblems quite evident. Perhaps this earlier synagogue was styled along the same lines.

6-10. Naturally, Jesus could effect healings even from a distance (Jn 4:46-53), but He went toward the centurion's house. When He had nearly arrived, the centurion sent word that he knew Jesus could simply give the command and the servant would be healed. This was said because he felt unworthy to have Jesus come under his roof. Jesus marveled at such a display of faith, and complied with the centurion's humble request.

11. The very next day Jesus journeyed about twenty-five miles into the Jezreel Valley to the city of Nain. It was a good-sized town in Christ's day. Many . . . disciples and much people were present. Luke records this event out of concern for stories about women, as well as the fact that this is one of only three recorded times Jesus raised someone from the dead. It had been approximately eight hundred years since Israel had seen someone raised from the dead. The last case was wrought by Elisha the prophet (II Kgs 4:14-37).

12. There was no doubt as to this man's condition. He was plainly dead, the funeral was over, the funeral procession was en route to the place of burial. Luke alone records that the dead man was the only son of his widowed mother.

13-15. Showing human tenderness and compassion toward the weeping mother, Jesus touched the open casket and said: Young man, I say unto thee, Arise. The object of recording that the young man spoke after arising was to give evidence that he was really alive.

LUKE 7:15

he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise.

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16 And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judæa, and throughout all the region round about.

18 ¶And the disciples of John shewed him of all these things.

19 And John calling unto him two of his disciples sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21 And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 Then Jesus answering said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached.

23 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

24 ¶And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparellled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts.

26 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.

27 This is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say unto you, Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist: but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.

29 And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him.

31 ¶And the Lord said, Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like?

32 They are like unto children sitting in the marketplace, and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

33 For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil.

16-17. The people responded correctly by noting that Jesus was a great prophet, and the report spread throughout the surrounding region and even south into Judæa.

18-26. John the Baptist, the Old Testament's predicted forerunner of the Messiah, was cast into prison shortly after he introduced Christ to Israel. Since the kingdom had not materialized in the interim, he began to entertain doubts regarding Christ's mission (vs. 20). That very hour, Jesus performed miracles predicted of the Messiah in Isaiah 61:1-2, and told John's disciples to convey that information back to John, which must have reassured the great prophet.

27. Jesus declared that John the Baptist was more than just an ordinary prophet. He stood last in the long line of prophets and actually heralded the personal presence of the Messiah, as predicted in Malachi 3:1.

28. Though John the Baptist was the greatest of the prophets, positionally he was still in the Old Testament period, and was martyred several years before the new dispensation of grace began after Calvary. He announced the coming kingdom, but never lived to see it. Thus, even the least of those who live on into the kingdom age will be in a far more advanced period of revelation, and will enjoy more privileges than did John.

29-30. The fact that God can be justified proves that the term signifies "to be declared righteous," not to make righteous. The people simply acknowledged God's righteousness.

31-35. John was ascetic, while Jesus ate normally, yet their severe critics found fault with both because these critics disagreed with the message proclaimed.

34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say. Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

35 But wisdom is justified of all her children.

36 ¶ And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37 And, behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment,

38 And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

39 Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for she is a sinner.

40 And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

41 There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42 And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most?

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he, to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45 Thou gavest me no kiss: but this woman since the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

47 Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

48 And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.

49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?

50 And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.

CHAPTER 8

AND it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him,

2 And certain women, which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils,

36-40. Upon one occasion Jesus was invited to eat in the home of Simon, a Pharisee. When a notoriously sinful woman came in and anointed Jesus' feet with valuable perfume, Simon thought evil of Christ for not refusing her favor. Christ's omniscience told Him Simon's thoughts, and He answered with a short parable.

41-42. Jesus said that a creditor forgave two debtors, one of whom owed ten times as much as the other. Jesus then asked Simon which debtor would feel the most love toward the creditor.

43-50. The answer, of course, is the one who was forgiven the most. The application Jesus makes to Simon and the sinful woman is that both have been forgiven, but that the one who has a greater amount to have been forgiven will appreciate that forgiveness most. The more we sense the lost and hopeless condition we were in, the more we will appreciate what Christ has done for us.

8:1. He went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Jesus' ministry was very extensive in Galilee, but His message was not that He would die for the sins of the world, but that He had come to establish the kingdom prophesied in the Old Testament. The twelve disciples were gaining matchless experience by being with the Son of God during these days of teaching and healing.

2-3. Also accompanying Christ and ministering to Him were a number of formerly demon-possessed women, whose lives must have evidenced complete transformation. Joanna is only mentioned here and in 24:10 in Luke's gospel.

3 And Jō'an-na the wife of Chū'za Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

4 ¶And when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he spake by a parable:

5 A sower went out to sow his seed: and as he sowed, some fell by the way side; and it was trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it.

6 And some fell upon a rock; and as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it lacked moisture.

7 And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprang up with it, and choked it.

8 And other fell on good ground, and sprang up, and bare fruit an hundred-fold. And when he had said these things, he cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

9 ¶And his disciples asked him, saying, What might this parable be?

10 And he said, Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; that seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not understand.

11 Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God.

12 Those by the way side are they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved.

13 They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

14 And that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection.

15 But that on the good ground are they, which in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience.

16 ¶No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

17 For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad.

18 Take heed therefore how ye hear: for whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.

19 ¶Then came to him his mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the press.

20 And it was told him by certain which said, Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee.

21 And he answered and said unto them, My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it.

22 ¶Now it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a ship with his disciples: and he said unto them, Let us

4-15. Jesus was famous for His parables. Parables are stories that are true to life and nature in every way, thus differing from allegories and fables. They are used to teach spiritual truths. Jesus used parables often, the New Testament recording about thirty separate stories. Jesus used parables for at least five reasons. (1) To attract attention. They have tremendous interest value, and everyone likes a story. (2) To prevent hearers from being repelled too quickly by normal direct statements. (3) To stimulate inquiry and to teach. These stories could easily be remembered, and were thus good vehicles for preserving the truth. (4) To reveal the truth, as some could understand a story taught in parabolic form more easily than regular teaching. (5) To conceal the truth. Often a story would protect the truth from the mockery of a scoffer who could not understand the meaning. One's spiritual condition frequently determined how much he would understand of what Jesus said. The parable of the four soils is found in every Gospel except John's. The four types of soils could easily be located within the same field. They represent the hearts (vs. 15) or minds of men. (1) The way side or pathway soil (vs. 12) is hardened and uncultivated, and the seed which represents God's Word cannot penetrate it. Note the influence of Satan in keeping this type of person from believing (cf. II Cor 4:4). (2) The rocky ground (vs. 13) has a thin layer of dirt over solid rock. This one is completely superficial and emotional, but has no root. (3) The thorny ground (vs. 14) is a double-minded man. He makes a profession, but it is unreal. (4) Only the good ground (vss. 8, 15) bears any fruit and represents a really saved individual. Jesus taught His disciples that they would sow much seed, but should not be distressed by seemingly poor results and some cases of apparent salvation which were in reality nothing but an outward emotional experience.

16-18. These verses contain a great principle regarding the outward indication of one's salvation: there should be no secret believers. Really saved people will grow in grace but mere professors will lose even that which they seem to possess.

19-21. His mother and his brethren. By today's standards, Mary and Joseph had a good-sized family. Four brothers and additional sisters are mentioned in Mark 6:3. Jesus was not here denying His normal family relationships or even downplaying their importance, but He was stressing the new and more important spiritual relationships resulting from belief in Himself.

22-25. Jesus stilled or walked upon the waters on several different occasions, here and again after the feeding of the five go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth.

23 But as they sailed he fell asleep; and there came down a storm of wind on the lake; and they were filled with water, and were in jeopardy.

24 And they came to him, and awoke him, saying, Master, master, we perish. Then he arose, and rebuked the wind and the raging of the water: and they ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said unto them, Where is your faith? And they being afraid wondered, saying one to another, What manner of man is this! for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

26 ¶And they arrived at the country of the Gād'a-rēneš, which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he went forth to land, there met him out of the city a certain man, which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any house, but in the tombs.

28 When he saw Jesus, he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God most high? I beseech thee, torment me not.

29 (For he had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderness.)

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? And he said, Legion: because many devils were entered into him.

31 And they besought him that he would not command them to go out into the deep.

32 And there was there an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And he suffered them.

33 Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

34 When they that fed them saw what was done, they fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country.

35 Then they went out to see what was done; and came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

36 They also which saw it told them by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed.

37 ¶Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gād'a-rēneš round about besought him to depart from them; for they were taken with great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again.

38 Now the man out of whom the devils were departed besought him that he might be with him: but Jesus sent him away, saying,

39 Return to thine own house, and shew how great things God hath done unto thee. And he went his way and thousand (Jn 6:17-21). By it, He demonstrated His complete and absolute sovereignty over the natural elements. Also these miracles proved Christ's deity to the disciples and to us.

26-40. The story of the maniac of Gadara took place at ruins today called Khersa in the eastern edge of the steep slopes overlooking the Sea of Galilee. The story illustrates several things about demon-possession. Some characteristics are: (1) insanity (prior to the action of verse 35). He was out of his mind, it being controlled by the demon; (2) indecency (vs. 27)—this often accompanied demonic control; (3) injury (vs. 29, cf. Mk 5:4-5)—he cut himself; and (4) infamy—his poor family must have lived in shame. That is what the devil drives man to. But this poor soul was delivered by Christ spiritually, physically, and mentally. The result was that he readily proclaimed far and wide what great things Jesus had done for him.

Many demons had controlled this man, and called themselves Legion (vs. 30). A Roman legion usually consisted of six thousand men, or ten cohorts of six hundred. They feared that Christ would send them into the deep (Gr abyssos). Apparently, while on earth Jesus did cast many demons into a place of confinement from which they will not be released until the Tribulation Period (cf. Rev 9:1-11). Jesus was certainly not responsible for the destruction of the herd of swine in the vicinity. The incident does reveal that demons may affect animals.

published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him.

40 And it came to pass, that, when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received him: for they were all waiting for him.

41 ¶And, behold, there came a man named Jā-īrus, and he was a ruler of the synagogue: and he fell down at Jesus' feet, and besought him that he would come into his house:

42 For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she lay a dying. But as he went the people thronged him.

43 ¶And a woman having an issue of blood twelve years, which had spent all her living upon physicians, neither could be healed of any,

44 Came behind him, and touched the border of his garment: and immediately her issue of blood stanch'd.

45 And Jesus said, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter and they that were with him said, Master, the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?

46 And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me: for I perceive that virtue is gone out of me.

47 And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling, and falling down before him, she declared unto him before all the people for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately.

48 And he said unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace.

49 ¶While he yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master.

50 But when Jesus heard it, he answered him, saying, Fear not: believe only, and she shall be made whole.

51 And when he came into the house, he suffered no man to go in, save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.

52 And all wept, and bewailed her: but he said, Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth.

53 And they laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead.

54 And he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, arise.

55 And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway: and he commanded to give her meat.

56 And her parents were astonished: but he charged them that they should tell no man what was done.

CHAPTER 9

THEN he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases.

41-42. Jairus had only had one child, a twelve-year-old daughter who was at the point of death when Jesus entered Capernaum. He came to Jesus for help, asking the Master to come quickly.

43. However, they were thronged with people, each with his own special needs, and progress toward Jairus' house was slow. In the multitude was a woman with an incurable hemorrhage. She was unclean according to Leviticus 15:19, and was not permitted to come near people, but she cared not for that if she could only be healed. She was desperate.

44-48. When she touched Jesus in faith she was healed. Jesus' omniscience caused Him to perceive her actions and He asked for the woman to identify herself, probably to reveal her publicly to the crowd and to further instruct her. Jesus said her faith had saved her.

49-50. After this incident and delay, messengers from Jairus' house came and reported the death of his daughter. Jesus knew this tried his faith, and told Jairus to continue believing and his daughter would be made well.

51. Jesus took only the parents and Peter, James, and John into the house. He preserved the sanctity of the home by not parading twelve men into this private place.

52-53. The little girl was really dead, but the death of a believer's body may outwardly be likened to sleep, which it resembles (cf. Jn 11:11-14; I Cor 11:30; I Thess 4:13-14). The Bible teaches no such doctrine as "soul sleep" as do some. At death, an individual's soul is either consciously (1) with the Lord (II Cor 5:8; Phil 1:21-23), or (2) in torment in hades awaiting the final resurrection to death (Lk 16:23).

54-56. Jesus raised the girl from the dead and her spirit reentered her body. Mark, who received much of his information from the eyewitness, Peter, records (5:42) that she arose and walked. No one could doubt this fantastic miracle.

E. Christ's Dealings with His Disciples. 9:1-50.

9:1. Christ granted His twelve disciples power and prerogatives over demons and sickness never exercised by man either before or after. The purpose of this was to place a divine seal of approval upon their message as well as to meet the needs of people.

2-6. The disciples preached the good news (vs. 6) of the kingdom of God. Spiritual birth into God's family was a requirement for entrance (Jn 3:3, 5) but the kingdom itself was to be earthly, with Jesus ruling the world from Jerusalem in fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy (Isa 2:1-4; 11:1-9; Amos 9:11-15; Mic 4:6-8).

7-9. Herod, who had beheaded John the Baptist (see Mt 14:1-12 and Mk 6:14-29), wondered if he had risen from the dead when he began to hear about the miracles Jesus was performing. His desire to see Jesus was fulfilled in Jerusalem during the mock trials prior to Christ's death (Lk 23:7-12).

10. The Twelve are called disciples prior to being sent out. They are called apostles (Gr apostolos), meaning "sent out ones," in this verse. The feeding of the five thousand occurred shortly after the death of John the Baptist. Jesus felt the need for privacy and for rest (Mk 6:31).

11. The plans for rest were laid aside when multitudes followed Jesus to a quiet area on the northern edge of the Sea of Galilee in the spring of the year (Jn 6:4).

12-17. All four evangelists record this great miracle, and each makes it clear that five thousand men, not counting women and children, were fed from the miraculous multiplication of five small barley loaves and two fishes. The miracle must have occurred as the disciples broke pieces from their tiny allotments and distributed them to the sitting crowds. The twelve baskets collected were like little travel bags and probably provided sustenance for the disciples as they went to the Passover which was approaching.

18-22. Peter's great confession, at Caesarea Philippi near Mount Hermon, occurred approximately six months prior to the crucifixion. It marks the beginning of any mention by Christ that He is going to be killed (vs. 22), which explains the reaction of Peter to such a prediction (see Mt 16:23). This time also marks the very first mention by Christ of the fact that He would establish His church (Mt 16:18). Jesus' use of the future tense in this initial prediction points to Pentecost when the church was first physically manifested.

2 And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.

3 And he said unto them, Take nothing for your journey, neither staves, nor scrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece.

4 And whatsoever house ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart.

5 And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them.

6 And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where.

7 ¶ Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead;

8 And of some, that E-lī'as had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again.

9 And Herod said, John have I beheaded: but who is this, of whom I hear such things? And he desired to see him.

10 ¶ And the apostles, when they were returned, told him all that they had done. And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city called Bēth-sā'i-da.

11 And the people, when they knew it, followed him: and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.

12 ¶ And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve, and said unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a desert place.

13 But he said unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they said, We have no more but five loaves and two fishes; except we should go and buy meat for all this people.

14 For they were about five thousand men. And he said to his disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company.

15 And they did so, and made them all sit down.

16 Then he took the five loaves and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed them, and brake, and gave to the disciples to set before the multitude.

17 And they did eat, and were all filled: and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets.

18 ¶ And it came to pass, as he was alone praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am?

19 They answering said, John the Baptist; but some say, E-lī'as; and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again.

20 He said unto them, But whom say ye that I am? Peter answering said, The Christ of God.

21 And he straightly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing;

22 Saying, The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day.

23 ¶And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me.

24 For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it.

25 For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be cast away?

26 For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.

27 But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God.

28 ¶And it came to pass about an eight days after these sayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray.

29 And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistening.

30 And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and E-l-i'as:

31 Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem.

32 But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for E-l-i'as: not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they feared as they entered into the cloud.

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

37 ¶And it came to pass, that on the 23-24. Jesus' challenge to His disciples was faithfulness, denial of self, and daily sacrifice. Its results are stated in paradoxical terms. If one lives merely for this life, the following life will be lost. But if one cares not about this life in order to serve Christ, only then will he secure life eternal.

25-26. For what is a man advantaged? This is still true. No amount of earthly gain can ever make up for the unutterable loss of one's soul.

27. There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God. This verse has to be a prediction that some of the disciples would see Christ in all His glory during the soon-coming transfiguration.

28. Peter, James, and John made up the inner circle of disciples. At the outer perimeter was the group of five hundred who saw Christ after His resurrection (I Cor 15:6). A bit closer were the seventy disciples who were sent out two by two to preach and heal (Lk 10:1, 17). Still closer were the Twelve, of whom these three were specially selected to witness this event, the raising of Jairus' daughter, and Jesus' agony in Gethsemane. Of these three, John the beloved was closest to Christ (Jn 13:23; 21:20). The mountain of transfiguration has been thought by some to be Mount Tabor in the Jezreel Valley, but many feel that Mount Hermon's slopes above Caesarea Philippi more naturally meet the idea of "high mountain" (Mk 9:2). Hermon's highest elevation is over 10,000 feet, while Tabor only reaches to 1,843 feet, but is a majestic solitary bell-shaped hill.

29. Christ's clothing and complexion were surrounded and filled with a magnificent glory that had not been seen by mortal man since God's glory left the Temple in Ezekiel's day.

30-31. Moses and Elijah stood as representatives of the Law and the Prophets, and discussed Christ's coming death at Jerusalem. It must have been a wonderful yet an awesome experience for Christ as He was encouraged by these two fearless and faithful Old Testament saints to finish the task for which He had come.

32-33. The three disciples were fast asleep while all this was transpiring, and were surprised by what they saw when they awoke.

34-36. God the Father spoke, This is my beloved Son: hear him. All attention was to be directed to Christ.

37-43. Jesus and the three disciples returned from the mountain to find the other disciples unable to cast a difficult demon next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

38 And, behold, a man of the company cried out, saying, Master, I beseech thee, look upon my son: for he is mine only child.

39 And, lo, a spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out; and it teareth him that he foameth again, and bruising him hardly departeth from him.

40 And I besought thy disciples to cast him out; and they could not.

41 And Jesus answering said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? Bring thy son hither.

42 And as he was yet a coming, the devil threw him down, and tare him. And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.

43 ¶And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God. But while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, 44 Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not; and they feared to ask him of that saying.

46 ¶Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be greatest.

47 And Jesus, perceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and set him by him.

48 And said unto them, Whosoever shall receive this child in my name receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me receiveth him that sent me: for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbid him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us.

51 ¶And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, out of a young boy. The boy's father was distraught. Apparently the disciples had not relied on God in prayer for the power they needed to cast out the demon (Mk 9:26). Jesus then immediately restored the lad. The full account is given in Mark 9:14-29.

52 And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the Sa-mâr'i-tans, to make ready for him.

44-45. For the second time in a month, Jesus clearly predicted His coming death in Jerusalem, but the disciples understood not this saying. They could not fit a crucified King into the kingdom plans which they were all so busily announcing to the people in every town and city. In fact, it was not until after the resurrection that they even began to understand how Christ's death fit into God's plan. The kingdom was to be postponed due to Jewish rejection of Christ, and the church age was to occupy the interval in between.

46-48. Jesus said that true greatness is achieved by humility. This is true, but must also be balanced with the biblical doctrine of labor, striving, pressing forward, and occupying till He comes. In all of our labors, and especially in our successes, we must not think more highly of ourselves than we ought (Rom 12:3).

49-50. Jesus was not in favor of a narrow sectarianism which looks askance at anyone not in "our group" or not approved by "our agencies." We should all serve the Lord the best we can, expose error and deceitfulness as Paul did, yet not be ruled by a spirit of divisiveness that would condemn all who do not conform to "our" way of doing things. Thus, Jesus reminded: he that is not against us, is for us. (For the converse truth see Mt 12:30; Mk 9:40.)

V. THE PERAEAN MINISTRY OF THE SON.

9:51-19:27.

This large section of material from 9:51-19:27 is almost totally unique to Luke. Only a few isolated events are recorded in the other Gospels. This section contains an account of Christ's basic ministry in Peraea, east of the Jordan. The great majority of the parables in Luke are included here, almost all of which appear nowhere else.

A. Christ's Determination to Go to Jerusalem. 9:51-62.

51-53. Between the October Feast of the Tabernacles (Jn 7:14; 10:21) and Christ's final Passover, a period of about six months, His life was in constant danger, especially in Judaea. During this time Jesus spent most of His time in Peraea. When He ventured into Jerusalem for the Feast of Dedication or Hanukkah in December (Jn 10:22), He was practically stoned (vs. 13). Thereafter He spent some time in Peraea (Jn 10:40),

LUKE 9:53

53 And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as E-I'as did?

55 But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.

56 For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

57 ¶And it came to pass, that, as they went in the way, a certain man said unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

59 And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

60 Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house.

62 And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

CHAPTER 10

AFTER these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come.

2 Therefore said he unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest.

3 Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves.

4 Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way.

5 And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house.

6 And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again.

7 And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give: for the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house.

8 And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you:

9 And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say,

11 Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

12 But I say unto you, that it shall be interrupted only by His mission to raise Lazarus. Luke tells us that Jesus was determined to go up to Jerusalem.

54-56. The beloved disciple John, with his brother James, was not always so loving and kind, as this passage notes. They were called Boanerges, sons of thunder (Mk 3:17), and needed to be transformed just like any other sinners.

57-62. Let the dead bury their dead (vs. 60) probably means let those who are spiritually dead bury the physically dead. Doing Christ's bidding is far more important than even attendance at the funeral of one's own father.

B. Christ's Ministry with the Seventy. 10:1-24.

10:1-2. Christ was a trainer of men. He gave these seventy men a burden for the souls of men. He told them that The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few. He sent them out two by two to help meet this need.

3-11. For the laborer is worthy of his hire (vs. 7) is quoted by Paul in I Timothy 5:18 as "Scripture." Even New Testament writings were counted as Scripture from the time they were written (cf. also II Pet 3:15-16 where Paul's epistles are called Scripture).

12-16. These verses definitely teach degrees of punishment, more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

13 Woe unto thee, Chō-rā'zīn! woe unto thee, Bēth-sā'i-da! for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sī'don, which have been done in you, they had a great while ago repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

14 But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sī'don at the judgment, than for you.

15 And thou, Ca-per'na-um, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust down to hell.

16 He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me.

17 ¶And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.

18 And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven.

19 Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you.

20 Notwithstanding in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven.

21 ¶In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

22 All things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 ¶And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see:

24 For I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

25 ¶And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

26 He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

29 But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour?

30 And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

31 And by chance there came down a based on degrees of sin according to how much light people had. Some will be judged more severely than others, and as a result receive greater punishment in hell than others. This doctrine is also taught by Christ in each of the other Gospels (see Mt 10:15-16; 11:21-24; Mk 6:11; Jn 19:11).

17-20. The seventy are thrilled that even demons are subject to them. Jesus sees the disciples' success as a foretaste of the complete defeat of Satan. The cross would signal Satan's final downfall (Jn 12:31) and his being cast into the lake of fire only follows naturally (Rev 20:10), though separated by a larger time interval.

21-24. Christ's disciples had tremendous privileges for which countless others before them longed. Their greatest joy, however, was to be regarding their own salvation (vs. 20).

C. Christ's Parabolic Teaching Ministry. 10:25-13:21.

25-29. The parable of the Good Samaritan was told by Jesus in answer to the self-justifying question of a lawyer, And who is my neighbor?

30. A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho. He was probably a Jew. The way down is from approximately 2600 feet above sea level to approximately 800 feet below sea level and is through a treacherous wilderness. Thieves and robbers waited for lonely travelers. This man was attacked, beaten, robbed, and stripped of clothes.

31-37. Two Jews, a priest and a Levite, passed by but did certain priest that way: and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.

LUKE 10:32

32 And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

33 But a certain Sa-mār'i-tan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.

34 And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35 And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

38 ¶ Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house.

39 And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

40 But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

41 And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things:

42 But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

CHAPTER 11

AND it came to pass, that, as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

2 And he said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth.

3 Give us day by day our daily bread.

4 And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil.

5 And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves;

6 For a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him?

7 And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee.

8 I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his nothing to help the poor man. Then a Samaritan (see Jn 4:9) came along and aided the robbed victim, even seeing to his full recovery by paying for his stay at an inn. This Samaritan was a true neighbor. He had a compassionate heart, a helping hand, and unlimited concern. He gave up personal comfort, physical energy, and valuable time. As one preacher expressed it, the robbers beat him up, the priest and Levite passed him up, but the Samaritan picked him up. The thief said, "What's yours is mine, I'll take it." The priest and Levite reasoned, "What's mine is mine, I'll keep it." But the Samaritan said, "What's mine is yours, we'll share it." Let us heed Jesus' final injunction to the lawyer, Go, and do thou likewise (vs. 37).

38-42. Mary . . . sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word, but Martha was cumbered about much serving. This familiar story appears only in Luke, and outside of this story Mary and Martha are only mentioned in John 11 and 12. Yet these two ladies are among the most famous of all Bible characters, and were some of our Lord's dearest friends. The lesson to be learned from this true story is that we must choose to do the best things, and not be overly concerned about ourselves through self-pity. There is nothing wrong with serving, but we must first sit at Jesus' feet and spend time with Him.

11:1. As He was praying . . . one of his disciples said unto Him, Lord, teach us to pray. Jesus set the example of prayer before His disciples (see a study of Jesus' Habits of Prayer by S. D. Gordon).

2-4. These verses contain what is commonly called the "Lord's Prayer," also found in Matthew 6:9-13. It is a model prayer to show us how to pray, not a pattern to be repeated in vain repetition. We are to (1) recognize God for who He is and glorify His name, (2) pray for His program and (3) His will to be accomplished, then (4) ask for daily food, (5) forgiveness of sins, and (6) deliverance from sin and evil. These points are elementary and not exhaustive. Mature prayer will not be limited to these initial requests, but should at least contain these basic points. An example of how Christ prayed is given in John 17, the second longest prayer in the Bible. The longest is found in I Kings 8 when Solomon dedicated the Temple.

5-10. The parable of the friend who came at midnight was told to reinforce an aspect about prayer. Although importunity is important in prayer, this parable is probably trying to show a contrast between God and the friend who eventually opened the door. God is more than a friend, and will certainly grant our needs much more readily than the man who had gone to bed.

friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

9 And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

10 For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

11 If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

12 Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion?

13 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

14 ¶And he was casting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to pass, when the devil was gone out, the dumb spake; and the people wondered.

15 But some of them said, He casteth out devils through Bē-ēl'ze-būb the chief of the devils.

16 And others, tempting him, sought of him a sign from heaven.

17 But he, knowing their thoughts, said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and a house divided against a house falleth.

18 If Satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand? because ye say that I cast out devils through Bē-ēl'ze-būb.

19 And if I by Bē-ēl'ze-būb cast out devils, by whom do your sons cast them out? therefore shall they be your judges.

20 But if I with the finger of God cast out devils, no doubt the kingdom of God is come upon you.

21 When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace:

22 But when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.

23 He that is not with me is against me: and he that gathereth not with me scattereth.

24 When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest; and finding none, he saith, I will return unto my house whence I came out.

25 And when he cometh, he findeth it swept and garnished.

26 Then goeth he, and taketh to him seven other spirits more wicked than himself; and they enter in, and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first.

27 ¶And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked.

28 But he said, Yea rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

29 ¶And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say,

11-13. In addition, God is our Father and desires to give us freely all things. One of the most precious gifts is naturally the Holy Spirit who abides with all believers today, but who was not resident in the lives of Old Testament saints.

14-23. After casting out a demon, Jesus was accused of casting out demons through the chief of demons, i.e., Satan (vs. 15). This wicked accusation on the part of some was equivalent to blasphemy against the Holy Spirit (Jn 12:10). Jesus performed His ministry through the power of the Holy Spirit, and this should have been evident to all unbiased seekers. Jesus used a piece of logic, however, to clear up the situation, noting that if Satan cast out his own demons, then he would be divided against himself, an unimaginable state of affairs.

24-28. After casting out a demon, Jesus wanted to stress the fact that a man's life must then be filled with good things, namely Christ and His salvation, or the man would be even more susceptible to the same calamity recurring than he was the first time. Mere self-reformation has no guaranteed results.

29-32. Jesus continually claimed to be God (Jn 5:17-18; 10:33), the Messiah (Jn 4:25-26), and the only way to heaven (Jn

LUKE 11:30

This is an evil generation: they seek a sign; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet.

30 For as Jonas was a sign unto the Nīn'e-vites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

31 The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

32 The men of Nīn'e-ve shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

33 No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

34 The light of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35 Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkness.

36 If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

37 ¶And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38 And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner.

39 And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41 But rather give alms of such things as ye have; and, behold, all things are clean unto you.

42 But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

43 Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying thou reproachest us also.

46 And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

47 Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

48 Truly ye bear witness that ye al-

14:6). Here He says that failure to heed His direct plain message, supported by signs and wonders, will result in condemnation. Even the Queen of Sheba and those who repented at Jonah's preaching in Nineveh had enough light to know what to do. How much more blameworthy will these be if they fail to trust Christ! Note that Jesus fully endorsed the historicity of Jonah in these verses. Critics who deny the biblical account of Jonah degrade Christ as well.

33-36. Since the eye admits into the life that which influences it, Jesus is concerned that it be fed light, in the moral sense of the term, rather than darkness. Then one will become as a shining light himself.

37-40. The Pharisees were very careful to maintain outward cleanliness, but sometimes were unconcerned about the inside. Jesus probably ate without washing on purpose to point this out to his host.

41-54. Notice how boldly Jesus spoke in these verses. Six times he uttered woes, and once called them fools (spiritually imperceptive), and once hypocrites. Jesus was just over thirty, and this did not sit well with the older generation. Jesus rightly accused them of deceit (vss. 41-42), pride (vs. 43), inconsistency (vss. 44-46), condoning murder and conspiracy (vss. 47-51), and hindering people from being saved (vs. 53). Luke notes how heated the discussion got in verse 53 where it says the Pharisees were rudely provoking Christ to speak about many such subjects in hopes (vs. 54) of being able to accuse Jesus of something in order to put Him to death. Christ was their thorn in the flesh.

low the deeds of your fathers: for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute:

50 That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation;

51 From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zäch-a-ri'as, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be requir'd of this generation.

52 Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered.

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things:

54 Laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

CHAPTER 12

IN the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known.

3 Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops.

4 And I say unto you my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

5 But I will forwarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?

7 But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

8 Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God:

9 But he that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God.

10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven.

12:1. Beware ye, of the leaven of the Pharisees which is hypocrisy. One way of teaching is to set the proper example. Jesus did that. Another way is to learn from the misconduct of others. Jesus pointed that out too.

2-3. It is sobering to think that everything we have ever spoken will one day be revealed. We must guard our hearts, minds, lips, and hands.

4-5. Jesus had much to say about hell. These verses tell us it is a place, that God has the power to cast into hell, and that this occurs after this life. The grave does not end it all.

6-9. But the child of God is secure in Christ, both now and forever. Nothing can ever harm a believer in this life, apart from the permission of God according to His perfect will.

10. The sin of blasphemy against the Holy Spirit could refer to the sin of seeing the Holy Spirit's working, and openly opposing it, such as attributing the miracles Christ performed to the power of Satan (cf. Lk 10:15). Or it could refer to an act which shows a state of sin in which there is a wilful, determined opposition to the power of the Holy Ghost. It could thus be the result of gradual progress in sin. Jesus accuses no man of such sin, but sternly warns against anyone coming to such a state of affairs. How do you avoid such a predicament? Harden not your hearts! Believe God, and trust Christ as your Saviour and Lord.

LUKE 12:11

11 And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:

12 For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.

13 ¶And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

14 And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?

15 And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully:

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

20 But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?

21 So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

22 ¶And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

24 Consider the ravens; for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them: how much more are ye better than the fowls?

25 And which of you with taking thought can add to his stature one cubit?

26 If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest?

27 Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

28 If then God so clothe the grass, which is to day in the field, and to morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith?

29 And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind.

30 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

31 But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.

32 Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

33 Sell that ye have, and give alms;

11-12. Jesus warned that believers would be persecuted, but He also held out assurance that He would guide in that day of trouble.

13-15. A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. What an important reminder this is in our materialistic age. Many seek after things, but all find that they do not satisfy. Jesus counselled, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Mt 6:33).

16-21. Jesus spoke the parable of the rich fool to two young inheritance seekers (vs. 13). There are more parables dealing with money than with any other subject. This is probably because there are so many snares and temptations that beset those who possess and/or seek to acquire money. The warning contained in this story is that of providing amply for the physical aspects of life, while ignoring preparations for the life to come. Wealth cannot secure one's salvation, but it can be used for heavenly good.

22-30. In these verses the Master exhorted His disciples not to fret about securing food or clothing. He goes from the lesser to the greater by noting how God provides food for the fowl (vs. 24) and coverings for the flowers (vss. 27-28). If that is true, how much more shall God provide for His own children.

31-33. As a summary statement, Christ promised seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you.

provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that fail-eth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.

34 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

35 Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning;

36 And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.

37 Blessed are those servants, whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

39 And this know, that if the good-man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through.

40 Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

41 ¶ Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all?

42 And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season?

43 Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing.

44 Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath.

45 But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the menservants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken;

46 The lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.

47 And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

48 But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

49 ¶ I am come to send fire on the

34. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. One of the greatest things a pastor can ever do for his people is to get them to give tithes and offerings to the Lord. If they do, their hearts will be attuned to God. Pastors who preach on godly giving do their people a great spiritual service.

35. Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning. Even though God will provide, the servant of Christ is to be about his Master's business until He comes. The parable that follows is drawn from the familiar Near Eastern wedding custom.

36. Men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding. In the Orient, the groom returned with his bride after claiming her at her father's house. This parable could be spoken mainly for the Jews who will welcome Christ back with His bride after the Tribulation Period, but it certainly has an application for the church today.

37-40. Several things are taught: (1) Expectancy. Servants should be looking for the Master's return. (2) Preparedness. Servants should have things in order. (3) Rewards. Verse 37 indicates rewards for the faithful servants, as is taught elsewhere (vss. 43-44; Lk 19:17). The figure of the thief is also given by Paul (I Thess 5:4). The coming of Christ is never to overtake a believer as a thief. We are to be waiting and watching for His return.

41-46. This portion is vitally connected to what precedes it, and acts as a further amplification. The obedient servant will be blessed and rewarded (vss. 42-44), but that servant who disobeys will suffer punishment (vss. 45-46).

47-49. The fact that there will be degrees of punishment is taught here. The torment of hell will not be uniformly felt. The light one possesses helps determine how responsible one is. Some will be found more guilty than others, but no lost man can claim innocence in that day.

earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled?

50 But I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished!

51 Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division:

52 For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two and two against three.

53 The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother; the mother in law against her daughter in law, and the daughter in law against her mother in law.

54 ¶And he said also to the people, When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is.

55 And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass.

56 Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky and of the earth; but how is it that ye do not discern this time?

57 Yea, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?

58 ¶When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, as thou art in the way, give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him; lest he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison.

59 I tell thee, thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last mite.

CHAPTER 13

THERE were present at that season some that told him of the Galilæans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.

2 And Jesus answering said unto them, Suppose ye that these Galilæans were sinners above all the Galilæans, because they suffered such things?

3 I tell you, Nay; but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

4 Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Si-lō'am fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you, Nay; but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

6 ¶He spake also this parable; A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none.

7 Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none; cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?

8 And he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it:

9 And if it bear fruit, well; and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

10 ¶And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath.

50. But I have a baptism to be baptized with. That which Jesus referred to as necessary for Him to undergo (see also Mk 10:38-39) was His own coming death which is referred to under several figures in the New Testament.

51-53. Christ is the ultimate divider. What men decide regarding Christ determines their ultimate destiny, and also draws the barrier lines between men.

54-56. Jesus declared that signs were clearly discernible relative to His ministry, yet men refused to heed these. Such men must bear the responsibility for their own destruction under such circumstances.

57-59. These verses teach that one must settle with his adversary (in this case, God) before it is too late. Verse 59 does not indicate that eventually one would get out of hell, because there no one has anything with which to "pay." It is too late.

13:1-5. Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. Twice Jesus repeated identical words to reinforce the necessity of repentance (vss. 3, 5). Calamity and destruction await all who refuse to heed the warning. Jesus perhaps has reference to the events of A.D. 70, and certainly beyond to eternal punishment.

6-9. He spake also this parable; A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard. This parable is found only in Luke, but both here and in the miraculous cursing of the fig tree in Matthew 21:18-21, the tree seems to stand for Israel. The lesson is that when God gives spiritual privileges, He has a right to expect fruit. One might also learn the danger of not producing fruit. Even though the Lord was merciful with Israel, He yet had to judge that nation. The three or four years in the parable are probably not meant to represent so many years of Christ's ministry, but rather an adequate time for testing fruitfulness.

10. And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath. This was Jesus' habitual Sabbath day practice. It so happened that these occasions became times when Christ healed

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.

13 And he laid his hands on her: and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath day, and said unto the people, There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath day.

15 The Lord then answered him, and said, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the sabbath day?

17 And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed: and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18 ¶Then said he, Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto shall I resemble it?

19 It is like a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden; and it grew, and waxed a great tree; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it.

20 ¶And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God?

21 It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 And he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying toward Jerusalem.

23 ¶Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, 24 Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.

25 When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the some as well. The religious leaders constantly tried to convict Jesus of breaking the sabbath restrictions with such miraculous works.

11. Only Luke records this case of healing. As a physician, he has an interest in and sympathy for stories about women, of which he records more than the other gospel writers. This woman had been bent over for eighteen years by Satan (vs. 16). Though all sickness cannot be uniformly blamed on Satan, the Bible does enumerate several cases, as in Job 2:6-7; Acts 10:38; I Corinthians 5:5, and II Corinthians 12:7.

12-13. Thou art loosed. Here the Greek tense is perfect and indicates that the curse was complete and certain.

14. The speech of the synagogue ruler was a hypocritical and underhanded way of criticizing Christ. It naturally drew a severe rebuke from the Lord.

15-16. Jesus' reply was that the Sabbath was not intended to prevent works of necessity or mercy. The application of this truth is as follows: some jobs today require Sunday employment, such as hospitals, law enforcement, and fire-fighting. Most other jobs, however, can often be performed on other days, even though Sunday of itself is not to be kept as the Jewish Sabbath. As a rule, Sunday is regarded as a day of worship, and we should not needlessly violate that principle, even though we realize there are exceptions.

17. Jesus' rebuke had its proper effect. His adversaries were ashamed, while His admirers were amazed and rejoiced. Nevertheless, a polarity was developing regarding Jesus.

18-19. Jesus parabolically indicated that a mustard seed sprouting into a tree over ten feet tall represented the kingdom of God. This probably signified the large or surprising growth of Christianity from a tiny seed. The birds that sat in the branches may picture evil as in Matthew 13:4 and 19, or they may simply be an indication of the fact that this herb was large enough to hold birds on its branches.

20-21. The kingdom of God was also compared to a woman who mingled leaven into several loaves of meal until they had all risen. Perhaps a majority of older interpreters have seen this as the spreading of good throughout the world via the church. But this would seem to contradict the fact that the wheat did not take over the tares (Mt 13) and Jesus' forecast in Matthew 24:37 that the end times would be as in Noah's day. Besides, leaven is a picture of that which corrupts, and represents sin (Ex 12:15; Lk 12:1; I Cor 5:6-8). It is better to view this as a picture of the externalism, unbelief, evil doctrine, and wordliness which tend to inflate the church. Only fire ends the work of leaven!

D. Christ's Growing Public Confrontation with Religious Leaders. 13:22-16:31.

22. Journeying toward Jerusalem. Here Luke brings us back to the theme of 9:51, that Jesus was on His final preaching tour and was to keep a divine appointment in Jerusalem.

23. Lord, are there few that be saved? This question drew a lengthy answer from Christ that was to serve as a warning against religious presumption.

24-27. Man's time of probation ends both suddenly and surely. Naturally, death ends man's opportunity for salvation. There is no truth to some so-called second-chance theories. But apparently at the judgment some may presume upon having once seen or known Christ. But one must know Christ in the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are:

LUKE 13:26

26 Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.

28 There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourself/ves thrust out.

29 And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

30 And, behold, there are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.

31 ¶The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence: for Herod will kill thee.

32 And he said unto them, Go ye, and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to day and to morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected.

33 Nevertheless I must walk to day, and to morrow, and the day following: for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

34 O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!

35 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

CHAPTER 14

AND it came to pass, as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath day, that they watched him.

2 And, behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropsy.

3 And Jesus answering spake unto the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath day?

4 And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go;

5 And answered them, saying, Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath day?

6 And they could not answer him again to these things.

personal way that characterized true faith and trust in His shed blood for one's salvation from sin.

28. The kingdom of God. This phrase has several prominent usages, for which see George N. H. Peters, The Theocratic Kingdom, and Alva J. McClain, The Greatness of the Kingdom. Here it has reference to the millennial kingdom when the Old Testament patriarchs will be resurrected to join Christ and the redeemed of all the ages during His one-thousand-year earthly reign. This fulfills numerous Old Testament prophecies (Isa 11:1-9; Mic 4:1-3) as well as Revelation 20:1-6.

29. Coming from the four winds could speak either of the regathering of Israel which will take place as the kingdom age begins, or of the cosmopolitan makeup of the kingdom. Both will be true.

30. The last being first and the first turning out to be last must have been a thought of momentous proportions for any Jewish hearers who considered it. Just think, those who judged Christ and condemned Him to death will one day stand before Him who is the Almighty God of the universe. Things will be different then.

31-33. The Pharisees told Jesus that Herod Antipas (see notes on Lk 1:5) planned to kill Him. Jesus replied that He would continue His work according to schedule (the three days are not intended to be taken literally) and then His work of redemption would be completed in Jerusalem (Jn 19:30).

34-35. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets. Christ knew that Jerusalem, not Herod, was the real threat to His life. The lament for Jerusalem realizes its bloody past, but also recognizes its blessed future, which will not occur until the end of the Great Tribulation.

14:1-6. Luke the physician is the only gospel writer to record this healing. Dropsy was literally internalized or excessive water in the tissues, and this is the only mention of it in the New Testament. This Sabbath situation was apparently a trap set up by Jesus' opponents. No man with this terrible dropsy disease would be invited to supper at the house of a chief Pharisee, let alone sitting right in front of Jesus. Verse 1 also indicates that they watched him. The Pharisees refused to answer Jesus' question, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath day? If they had answered "yes," they could not condemn Jesus for healing. But if they answered "no," they would have condemned themselves as indifferent to human suffering. Their silence was Christ's justification. If it was illegal, they should have said so. Thereafter, Christ healed the man. Christ's final question placed this Sabbath healing in its proper perspective as doing good or rendering help whenever necessary.

7 ¶And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room; lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 ¶Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompence be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

15 ¶And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

16 Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many:

17 And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18 And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

19 And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20 And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22 And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24 For I say unto you, That none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

25 ¶And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and said unto them,

7-11. And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden. The conduct of the guests at this Sabbath meal was such that Jesus commented on it with a parable. The idea of lowest and highest seats refers to the almost universal custom of designating places for honored persons at meals and other functions. Jesus warned against placing oneself at the "head table" unless invited to do so. Removal could result in dishonor. Contrariwise, if the lowly seat has been selected at first, the host would thereafter assign one to the proper dignity. This thinking is against our inclination. We want the best for ourselves. But Jesus would have humility before exaltation. We must be little in our own eyes before we can be large in His eyes.

12-15. Similarly, Jesus cautioned His followers to invite guests who could provide little promise of returning the favor. This action helps one's attitude to be correct with regard to giving and receiving. When we give without hope of return, we trust God to bless and provide any reward as He may or may not see fit either here or at the resurrection of the just (cf. Jn 5:28-29; Rev 20:4-6).

16-17. A certain man made a great supper, and bade many. This parable paints a picture of God's abundant provision and invitation of salvation, refused by the Jews, then offered with all speed and diligence to others not previously invited.

18-20. And they all with one consent began to make excuse. Literally, they began "to beg off." Someone once defined an excuse as "the skin of a reason stuffed with a lie." There are three classes of excuses, all false on the very surface: (1) No one should buy land without previously having examined it; (2) no one would ever purchase ten oxen without knowing their condition; and (3) the excuse about marrying a wife was evidently based on Deuteronomy 24:5, but this application was certainly novel. The I cannot come (vs. 20) actually means, "I will not come." These invited guests rudely, ungratefully, and purposefully refused to come, even though they fully understood their deceitful practice.

21-22. After that, all classes of previously uninvited guests were asked to come, and they did come. This probably speaks in part of the command to take the gospel to the Gentiles given after the rejection, crucifixion, burial and resurrection of Christ (Mt 28:18-20; Mk 16:15).

23-25. Compel them to come in. This must be regarded as a moral persuasion, not the use of physical force. Every effort is to be made by Christ's servants to bring the lost to Him. His Word must be used diligently to overcome the sinner's despair, as well as the arrogance of the self-righteous. Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost (Lk 19:10) and we are sent on the same task. God desires that all legitimate means be used to procure the acceptance of His gracious invitation. Many a soul has been 26 If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

27 And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.

28 For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?

29 Lest haply, after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, 30 Saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish.

31 Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first, and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand?

32 Or else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassage, and desireth conditions of peace.

33 So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple.

34 ¶Salt is good; but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be seasoned?

35 It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

CHAPTER 15

THEN drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him.

2 And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

3 ¶And he spake this parable unto them, saying,

4 What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

5 And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6 And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighled to Christ by the earnest, tearful, sincere pleading of a dedicated Christian worker yielded to the control of the Holy Spirit.

26. In the context of all other Scripture (Ex 20:12; Mt 5:44; Rom 12:10) this command must be interpreted in a comparative manner. Christ meant that one must place Him above all other relationships. To be Christ's disciple, He must be Lord. If He is not Lord of all, He may not be Lord at all!

27. Bear his cross. For one to bear a cross means to experience the shame and humiliation, as well as the toil and suffering, that this form of punishment suggests. Bearing one's cross is not an easy assignment; it is just being a true Christian with all that entails.

28-33. The short stories about considering the cost before building a tower or placing an army in the field is a picture of fully considering what it will cost before one becomes a Christian; for some, it may seemingly cost more than for others.

34-35. If the salt have lost his savor. A disciple must have certain essential qualities. If these are gone, he is useless to Christ, and as the saying goes "not worth his salt." The salt in use during Christ's time was impure, and the sodium chloride could be leached out of that common salt. This represents the type of disciple Christ does not want.

15:1-2. Publicans and sinners. Three stories with a common theme are recounted by Christ in this chapter to illustrate His love and concern for sinful men and women. The Pharisees and scribes murmured because Jesus showed such love and kindness to sinners.

3. And he spake this parable unto them. Both sinners and Pharisees alike were to hear and apply this parable. The word parable occurs only once in this chapter, perhaps pointing to one parable with three connected parts. In each story something is lost: (1) a sheep; (2) a shekel; and (3) a son. In each case, the lost object is found and produces rejoicing. The sheep is innocently lost, the coin carelessly lost, but the son willfully lost. The percentage of loss grows in each case from one out of a hundred, to one out of ten, to one out of two.

4. The sheep is an exceedingly dumb animal, seemingly not having much sense. As such, it is sometimes used to picture the lost spiritual condition of people (Isa 53:6; Jer 50:6; Mt 9:36; I Pet 2:25). This parable tells of a shepherd going out in search of one lost sheep while he leaves ninety-nine safely in the fold. It is almost a universal human characteristic to go after that which one loses. Jesus sees the plight of lost sinners and goes to seek and to save (Lk 19:10), while the Pharisees care little about lost sinners.

5. Layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing. The poor sheep was probably exhausted from wandering, exposure, and hunger. The shepherd did not mind the extra burden or journey because he rejoiced.

6-7. The friends and neighbors were summoned because of the shepherd's great joy and because they may have aided in the hours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.

7 I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.

8 ¶Either what woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?

9 And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbours together, saying, Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10 Likewise, I say unto you there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

11 ¶And he said, A certain man had two sons:

12 And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

13 And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

14 And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat; and no man gave unto him.

17 And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18 I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee.

19 And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20 And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him.

21 And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.

22 But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

23 And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry:

24 For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

25 Now his elder son was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard musick and dancing.

search. Jesus' remark that there is also joy in heaven over a sinner that repents perhaps sadly implies that not many rejoiced with Christ here on earth regarding these matters.

8-10. The story of the lost coin was perhaps told for women listeners. The coin was lost right at home. People may be members of good churches and still be lost and go to hell. The sheep may have had a vague idea it was lost, but this coin could picture those with no knowledge of being lost. We need to search for those who are lost to bring them to Christ. Joy in the presence of God's angels over repenting sinners (vs. 10) shows that they are interested in our salvation (cf. I Pet 1:10-12), though they do not aid it.

11. A certain man had two sons. In the two previous stories Jesus told how the Pharisees should act when lost sinners were found. In this longer story he pictured how they did act. They can see themselves in the person of the elder brother, who had his good and bad points. He was morally straight, a hard worker, and an obedient individual (vs. 29), but he was also proud and had no fellowship with the father. He was more willing to think of his brother's sin than of his repentance.

12-32. The younger son's conduct can be summarized in an alliterative fashion with just nine key words. His rebellion resulted in riotous living as he hit rock bottom before his realization to repent and return, where he experienced reception, reconciliation, and rejoicing. Ralph Earle sees his movements as from possessor to prodigal to pauper to penitent to pardoned. His wicked conduct was willful and inexcusable, but his repentance was complete and his forgiveness absolute. He is a picture of every man born on this earth and in need of a Saviour. It is almost ironical that everything the prodigal son sought in the far country was right at home. There was abundance, freedom, and rejoicing.

The father's part pictures God's love for lost sinners. He is kind, waits for the son, goes to meet him, perhaps to save him the deserved punishment he might have received from others for disgracing his family and village, and forgets his past life. He was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found (vs. 32).

26 And he called one of the servants, and asked what these things meant.

27 And he said unto him, Thy brother is come; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound.

28 And he was angry, and would not go in: therefore came his father out, and intreated him.

29 And he answering said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment: and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:

30 But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

31 And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.

32 It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found.

CHAPTER 16

AND he said also unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man, which had a steward; and the same was accused unto him that he had wasted his goods.

2 And he called him, and said unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee? give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward.

3 Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed.

4 I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

5 So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord?

6 And he said, An hundred measures of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fifty.

7 Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred measures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore.

8 And the lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely: for the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light.

9 And I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.

10 He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much.

11 If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches?

12 And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?

16:1-12. The contextual connection of the story of the unjust steward with the parable of the prodigal son is perhaps that both deal with wasting and abusing worldly goods. Verse 14 also takes notice of the covetous audience. The plot is that a rich man, upon discovering wastefulness in his steward, was going to dismiss him (vs. 12). To protect his future, the steward immediately began making friends on the outside by juggling the goods in favor of those who owed the master (vss. 3-7). The story continues to have the master commend the unjust steward for his prudence (vs. 8).

Many see a problem as to why Jesus used such a character as the unjust steward, and even told of his commendation. Christ could simply be stressing the use of one's money and influence to aid others for Christ's sake (vss. 9-12), but this does not seem to be it entirely. There are, of course, some valuable character qualities in the unjust steward that are worthy of imitation, including his quick decisiveness, his self-collectedness, his energy, and his tact. But the main lesson seems to lie in the larger idea of realizing he is about to be dismissed and doing something about it. Men should realize that death comes as a certainty, and that they must prepare properly for what comes afterward.

13 No servant can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

14 ¶And the Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things: and they derided him.

15 And he said unto them, Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God.

16 The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.

17 And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail.

18 Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery.

19 ¶There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:

20 And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores.

21 And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores.

13-15. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. This does not mean a man cannot be wealthy and still serve God. But the love of money is the root of all evil (I Tim 6:10). If a person desires wealth, then he ceases to please God. A man's loyalties cannot be divided, and God demands that everything be subservient to Him.

16. The law and the prophets were until John. Until the coming of John the Baptist and Jesus Christ, the only message Old Testament saints had was the law of Moses and the prophets. Since that time the kingdom of God is preached. John and Christ heralded a new order, the long-awaited kingdom age. John announced it as "at hand" (Mt 3:2) or as having come near. But even after John the Baptist was in jail and out of the picture, Jesus was still saying that the kingdom had not arrived, but was yet "at hand" (Mk 1:14-15). And every man presseth into it. Since the Jews rejected Christ's offer of the physical kingdom age and His rule over them, that dispensation and ministry was never inaugurated, though it shall be after the Great Tribulation (Mt 24:29-31; 25:31; Rev 19:11-20:6). But from the time of Christ to this day men can meet the spiritual requirements for entrance into that kingdom. In fact, the publicans and sinners often sought entrance with great earnestness and determination, while the Pharisees usually made no conscious efforts to enter. (See John 3:1-16 for the story of one who did.)

17-18. Jesus' teaching on divorce corrected the lax interpretation of the Jews based on their loose understanding of Deuteronomy 24, where Moses "permitted" divorce because of the "hardness of your hearts." While our Lord corrected and interpreted the Old Testament law, He did not eliminate it. The Law was part of God's inspired truth and therefore it will not fail. No exceptions are given to the matters of divorce in this passage (cf. Mk 10:11; I Cor 7:10-11ff., for further details). Some take the "exception clause" (Mt 19:9) to allow a divorce on the basis of "adultery," while others limit "fornication" (Gr porneia) to premarital sex. This view sees premarital unchastity as the only cause of "divorce" in breaking a Jewish engagement. A clear case of this was where Joseph suspected Mary of premarital unfaithfulness and desired to "put her away privily" (Mt 1:18-19). This interpretation allows no provision for divorce whatever. The seriousness of remarriage on non-scriptural grounds means that whosoever marrieth her that is put away (Gr apolelumenen from apoluo "to loose" or "divorce") also committeth adultery.

19-21. There was a certain rich man . . . and there was a certain beggar. This is the true account of a real history of two men, even though it is used much like a parable, i.e., to teach a particular lesson or to emphasize some principle. Some, however, contend that this is a parable saying that (1) the name Lazarus means "God helps" and is figurative or perhaps was intentionally chosen later because another Lazarus did come back from the dead; (2) it begins exactly as the preceding "parable" in Luke 16:1 (which incidentally is also not called a parable in the text); (3) it is used in parabolic fashion to prove a main point; (4) facts are presented in symbolic form; (5) it is in the context of other parables in Luke 15-18; (6) Christ would not have divulged such truths to unbelieving Pharisees; (7) the ability to see, hear, and communicate between heaven and hell after death is not possible; (8) the rich man would not have known Abraham and Lazarus by sight; and (9) in real life the names of rich men are given, while beggars' names are un-

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried;

23 And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

24 And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.

25 But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

30 And he said, Nay, father Abraham; but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

31 And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.

CHAPTER 17

THEN said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come:

known. Some of these points are well-taken, but none prove that this account was only a parable.

There are numerous arguments for this account being a real history. (1) Parables are hypothetical illustrations and never name specific individuals. Here not only Lazarus is named, but also Abraham (vss. 22-25, 29-30) and Moses (vs. 31). (2) Jesus said "there was a certain rich man." Harry Ironside noted, "Was there, or was there not? He definitely declared that there was." (3) Moses, Abraham, and the prophets are real people, whereas parables never refer to specific Old Testament saints. (4) Luke does not call this a parable as he does in thirteen other clear cases of parable so designated. (5) It is narrated like a real history. (6) Parables deal with the commonplace of what is known to be true to illustrate moral lessons, and come from natural life. This does not. (7) Hades is a reality, not a figure of speech. (8) There is no reason why Jesus could not have had in mind a particular case. He is describing what took place after death in the cases of two men for the moral profit of His hearers. (9) The conversation between the rich man and Abraham does not seem to lend itself to parabolic format. (10) Even a case history, as this is, could be used in parabolic fashion to teach a precise moral truth.

22. Abraham's bosom. This is a designation for where Abraham was, taken variously as being heaven itself or some other intermediate place.

23-25. And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments. Between death and resurrection the immaterial part of man goes either to be with the Lord, if he is saved (II Cor 5:8; Phil 1:23), or into conscious torment as here. Resurrection reunites the body to the soul, and the state of existence continues to be either with Christ, or in the punishment of eternal duration (Mt 25:41, 46).

26. A great gulf fixed. Once a person passes from this life his probation is ended, and his eternal destiny is fixed. It has been appointed by God that once a man dies, then comes the judgment (Heb 9:27).

27-30. I have five brethren. The rich man's name and town are probably omitted in Christ's recounting of this history because of the embarrassment it might bring to his family that was still living.

31. If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead. Another Lazarus did return from the dead and the religious leaders sought only to kill him, though some believed through his testimony (Jn 12:9-11). Several additional teachings about hell are contained in this brief history. Memory and personality continue there even in the midst of untold anguish, misery, and suffering. There is no returning or sending back of messages from hell; thus, no reincarnation, nor spiritism as it is thought of by those who are thereby deceived.

E. Christ's Instruction of His Disciples. 17:1-19:27.

17:1. At this point Jesus began to instruct His disciples more fully as the time drew near for going to the cross.

but woe unto him, through whom they come!

2 It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones.

3 ¶Take heed to yourselves: If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him.

4 And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent: thou shalt forgive him.

5 ¶And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith.

6 And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you.

7 But which of you, having a servant plowing or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go and sit down to meat?

8 And will not rather say unto him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink?

9 Doth he thank that servant because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not.

10 So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

11 ¶And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Sa-má-r'i-a and Galilee.

12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:

13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God,

16 And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Sa-már'i-tan.

17 And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18 There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

19 And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.

20 ¶And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation:

21 Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you.

2. Should offend one of these little ones. The little ones could be children as in a parallel passage (Mt 18:2-6), or older believers as well (Mk 10:24). Our lives must be carefully examined to see how they affect those around us, especially our families.

3-4. The rebuking of a brother who sins against someone is to be done privately, and forgiveness toward a repentant brother is to be offered unceasingly.

5-6. Asking God for anything, even for a sycamore tree to be uprooted and cast into the sea, will be accomplished, provided it is God's will. We may never ask with assurance for anything that is outside of God's will (1 Jn 5:14). To pray in the will of God we must have His Word abiding in us (Jn 15:7), because only His Word informs us with certainty regarding His will.

7-10. This short parable of service reflects upon what our attitude should be when we have done all that God has commanded. Instead of being proud we are to be humble enough to consider ourselves as useless, because we have simply done our duty. Compare what we are to say of ourselves with what Christ says to His faithful servants at the last day (Mt 25:21).

11. On His way to Jerusalem for the final Passover and his appointment with the Cross, Jesus passed between the borders of Samaria and Galilee across the Jordan and into Peraea.

12. Ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off. This group of ten men was composed of Jews and Samaritans alike, their common leprosy having erased the usual religious animosities (Jn 4:9). They stood afar off because of the command in Leviticus 13:45-46.

13-16. In response to their cry for mercy, Jesus commanded them to go show themselves to the priests (the plural perhaps referring to their respective nationalities or districts), as commanded in Leviticus 14:2-7. Only as they ventured off by faith did their healings occur. Only one of the ten, a Samaritan, returned to express thanks.

17-20. Why did the others not return to give thanks also? Perhaps it was because of superstition, ignorance, self-interest, or plain ingratitude.

21. The kingdom of God is within you. The word "within" (Gr entos) is used in the New Testament only twice, here and in 22 ¶And he said unto the disciples, The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it.

23 And they shall say to you, See here; or, see there: go not after them, nor follow them.

24 For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.

25 But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation.

26 And as it was in the days of Nō'e, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.

27 They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Nō'e entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.

28 Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded;

29 But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all.

30 Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.

31 In that day, he which shall be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back.

32 Remember Lot's wife.

33 Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it.

34 I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left.

35 Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

36 Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

37 And they answered and said unto him, Where, Lord? And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.

CHAPTER 18

AND he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint;

2 Saying, There was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man:

3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary.

4 And he would not for a while; but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man;

5 Yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

Matthew 23:26. Theological as well as contextual considerations suggest that it here be translated "among" meaning that the kingdom was present among the Pharisees in the person of the King, Christ Jesus.

22-24. Having spoken to the Pharisees of His messianic kingdom, Christ now turns to the disciples (vs. 22) to explain how men shall one day desire to see the kingdom, but will not be able to. Those will be the hectic days of the Great Tribulation (vs. 23, cf. Mt 24:21-31). At the conclusion of the Great Tribulation, Christ will come to set up His glorious kingdom, and His appearing will be as evident to all and as sudden as a great blinding flash of lightning (vs. 24).

25. However, before that day can come, Christ must, according to Old Testament prophecy, be rejected, suffer, and die (cf. Lk 24:25-27).

26-30. Christ compared the days of Noah and of Lot to the time when He would return in judgment with power and glory. In those earlier days men went about their ordinary pursuits without thought of God. It will be the same when Christ comes to set up the kingdom.

31-33. In those days, Christ's judgment will center on Jerusalem, as predicted in Daniel 11:45, because that is where the Antichrist will be located. Any Jews there in that day are here warned to flee quickly away (vs. 31), remembering the tragedy that befell Lot's wife who lingered and looked back (vs. 32).

34-36. Likewise, Christ's judgment shall overtake the entire earth at once. Some shall be in bed at night, while in other places the sun will be shining. The taking is probably for judgment in this context. The Rapture which occurs seven years prior to these events will be similar in nature, though with a good end in view.

37. The saying about the vultures being gathered together to the carcass is a proverbial way of expressing the judgment that is depicted above. It corresponds with other portions of Scripture that speak of this same feast at the conclusion of the Great Tribulation (Ezk 39:4; Rev 19:17-18).

18:1-8. And he spake a parable unto them. The verses that follow are often called the parable of the unjust judge. This judge was blatantly bad, unprincipled, lawless, and void of moral fortitude to do what was right. The poor widow, on the other hand, was helpless, friendless, destitute, and with no hope. Yet through her great persistence, the wicked judge was so bothered that he finally granted her request. Although Jesus taught perseverance in prayer in other places (Mt 7:7-8), He is here using a form of logic that reasons from the lesser to the greater. Jesus said, regarding God's children, that he will avenge them speedily (vs. 8). The idea is this. If this poor woman with no hope received help from a wicked unscrupulous judge, how much sooner and greater will be the help a loving heavenly Father gives to His own dear children.

6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith.

7 And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?

8 I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

9 ¶And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others:

10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.

11 The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

12 I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

13 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

14 I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 ¶And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them.

16 But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

17 Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

18 ¶And a certain ruler asked him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

19 And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? none is good, save one, that is, God.

20 Thou knowest the commandments. Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother.

21 And he said, All these have I kept from my youth up.

22 Now when Jesus heard these things, he said unto him, Yet lackest thou one thing: sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me.

23 And when he heard this, he was very sorrowful: for he was very rich.

24 And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he said, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!

25 For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it said, Who then can be saved?

27 And he said, The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.

When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth? (vs. 8). The implied answer is "no." The faith spoken of is probably the body of truth, or revealed doctrine, since the word is preceded by the definite article in the original. Improvement in the worldwide spiritual climate is not here predicted.

9-14. The former parable spoke of God's part in answering prayer. This one deals with man's part, and is addressed to the self-righteous. Jesus must have stunned His audience because the outcome of the parable was the opposite of what they would expect. The Pharisee really uttered no true prayer at all. The humble publican (tax collector) was forgiven and justified solely on the basis of repentant faith.

15-17. Little children . . . of such is the kingdom of God. Jesus loved children, and declared that adults must receive His message in simple trusting childlike faith if they would be saved.

18-23. What shall I do to inherit eternal life? This story of the rich young ruler illustrates several truths. Something usually stands in the way of a person coming to Christ. It may be pride, position, family, friends, a particular sin, or even wealth. In this man's case, it was money. Jesus does not ask every wealthy individual to sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor (vs. 22), but in this case, refusal to do so indicated unwillingness to become a disciple.

24-34. This led Jesus to remark on the difficulty of the rich coming to Christ. But with God, this practical impossibility is overcome. Verses 31-34 indicate a point in time less than two weeks before Christ's crucifixion (vss. 31, 35; 19:11, 28), when He clearly announced His coming death to the disciples. And they understood none of these things. (vs. 34, see also notes on 19:11).

LUKE 18:28

28 ¶Then Peter said, Lo, we have left all, and followed thee.

29 And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake,

30 Who shall not receive manifold more in this present time, and in the world to come life everlasting.

31 ¶Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.

32 For he shall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and spitefully entreated, and spitted on:

33 And they shall scourge him, and put him to death: and the third day he shall rise again.

34 And they understood none of these things: and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

35 ¶And it came to pass, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way side begging:

36 And hearing the multitude pass by, he asked what it meant.

37 And they told him, that Jesus of Nazareth passeth by.

38 And he cried, saying, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

39 And they which went before rebuked him, that he should hold his peace: but he cried so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

40 And Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought unto him: and when he was come near, he asked him, 41 Saying, What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? And he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight.

42 And Jesus said unto him, Receive thy sight: thy faith hath saved thee.

43 And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, glorifying God: and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

CHAPTER 19

AND Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.

2 And, behold, there was a man named Zāc-chæ'us, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.

3 And he sought to see Jesus who he was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him: for he was to pass that way.

5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zāc-chæ'us, make haste, and come down; for to day I must abide at thy house.

6 And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.

7 And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.

8 And Zāc-chæ'us stood, and said unto the Lord; Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I 35-43. The healing of blind Bartimaeus is recorded in all three synoptic Gospels, although he is named only in Mark, and presents several elements difficult to explain. Luke says the miracle occurred as Jesus drew nigh to Jericho (vs. 35), but Matthew says it was "as they departed" (Mt 20:29). Matthew and Mark may be referring to the old city while Luke speaks of Herod's newer city mentioned by Josephus and Eusebius. The healing may, therefore, have been performed between the two sites. Thou son of David (vs. 39) is a clear recognition by Bartimaeus of Jesus as Messiah. This terminology was also prominent in the Triumphal Entry into Jerusalem (Mt 21:15).

19:1-9. A man named Zacchaeus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich. Zacchaeus is a good example of a man whose riches did not prevent him from coming to Christ. But like so many today, what he needed was someone to explain the way of salvation to him. This Jesus did. This story is found only in Luke.

have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold.

9 And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house forso-much as he also is a son of Abraham.

10 For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

11 ¶And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.

12 He said therefore, A certain noble-man went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.

13 And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.

14 But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant: because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.

20 And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:

21 For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.

22 And he saith unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow:

23 Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?

24 And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.

25 (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)

26 For I say unto you, That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

27 But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over

10. The Son of man. This title of Christ was His favorite, and was never used by the disciples as they addressed Him. It speaks of His identification with mankind, yet it points to His uniqueness. Is come to seek and to save that which was lost. This is the key verse of Luke's Gospel. If this was the chief task of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, it should surely loom large in our own set of priorities.

11-12. As Jesus approached Jerusalem with His disciples and others traveling to the Passover, He told a parable to show that the kingdom they had been announcing would not be established immediately as they had thought. Instead, since Jesus had been rejected by the Jewish people, the kingdom would be delayed, and during the interval something new (the church) would be set up (Mt 16:18). In this parable of the pounds, the activity of professing believers during the church age is in view. Here each servant was given one pound, speaking of equal opportunity, whereas in the parable of the talents (Mt 25:14-30), each was given according to his ability.

13. Occupy till I come. We have a dual assignment: to work, and to wait. We must do both faithfully.

14-27. Christ's first coming was as Saviour; but when He returns, it will be as Judge. False professors and Christ-rejectors will alike be cast away (vss. 26-27).

them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

28 And when he had thus spoken he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem.

29 ¶And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bēth'pha-gē and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples, 30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.

32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as he went, they spread their clothes in the way.

37 And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen;

38 Saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

39 And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.

41 ¶And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it,

42 Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, 44 And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.

45 And he went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought;

46 Saying unto them, It is written, My house is the house of prayer: but ye have made it a den of thieves.

47 And he taught daily in the temple. But the chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him, 48 And could not find what they might do: for all the people were very attentive to hear him.

VI. THE PROFFER OF THE SON'S KINGDOM AND ITS REJECTION. 19:28-21:4.

A. Christ's Entry into Jerusalem. 19:28-46.

28-40. Christ's entry into Jerusalem was in direct fulfillment of such clear messianic prophecies as Zechariah 9:9 and Psalm 118:25-26.

41-44. These verses are both a lament and a prophecy. Christ laments His rejection and, as well, predicts the city's coming destruction. What was true of this city will also be true of each individual who rejects Christ. Jesus cared for them and He cares for men today.

45-46. Christ's judgment of those who were making merchandise in the Temple was His second such action. Three years before, Jesus cast out a similar group (Jn 2:13-22).

B. Christ's Public Teaching in Jerusalem. 19:47-21:4.

47-48. Christ's final days before death were spent in public and private teaching (Jn 13-17). In contrast, the Jewish leaders spent the time in conspiracy to commit murder.

CHAPTER 20

AND it came to pass, that on one of those days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him with the elders,

2 And spake unto him, saying, Tell us, by what authority doest thou these things? or who is he that gave thee this authority?

3 And he answered and said unto them, I will also ask you one thing, and answer me:

4 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say, Why then believed ye him not?

6 But and if we say, Of men; all the people will stone us: for they be persuaded that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, that they could not tell whence it was.

8 And Jesus said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

9 Then began he to speak to the people this parable; A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time.

10 And at the season he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the husbandmen beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant: and they beat him also, and entreated him shamefully, and sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent a third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? I will send my beloved son: it may be they will reverence him when they see him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

15 So they cast him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore shall the lord of the vineyard do unto them?

16 He shall come and destroy these husbandmen, and shall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid.

17 And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner?

18 Whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

19 And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him: and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20 ¶ And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so they might 20:1-8. The Jewish authorities (vs. 1) wanted to know what authority Jesus had to cast moneychangers out of the Temple (vs. 2). Instead of answering directly, Christ countered with a question about whether John the Baptist's ministry was of God or not. Since they refused to acknowledge or disown Jesus' forerunner (due to political expediency), they deserved no further revelation from Christ (vs. 8).

9-18. This parable is the New Testament parallel of Isaiah 5:1-7. In general terms, the householder represents God (yet not his mistaken optimism, vs. 13); the husbandmen stand for the Jewish religious leaders; the servants speak of the prophets; and the son represents Christ. In verse 15 Christ again predicted His own death. Verses 16-18 tell of future judgment and the final display of Christ's sovereignty (see also I Pet 2:6-7 and Dan 2:34).

19. The religious leaders knew instinctively that they were meant to be the wicked murderers in the parable.

20-24. As a result, they sought occasion to arrest Jesus and turn Him over to the Roman authorities for execution, since they had not the power of capital punishment (Jn 18:31).

deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

21 And they asked him, saying, Master, we know that thou sayest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God truly:

22 Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Cæsar, or no?

23 But he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why tempt ye me?

24 Shew me a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Cæsar's.

25 And he said unto them, Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which be Cæsar's, and unto God the things which be God's.

26 And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

27 ¶Then came to him certain of the Sād'du-ceed, which deny that there is any resurrection: and they asked him, 28 Saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without children.

30 And the second took her to wife, and he died childless.

31 And the third took her; and in like manner the seven also: and they left no children, and died.

32 Last of all the woman died also.

33 Therefore in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus answering said unto them, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage:

36 Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.

37 Now that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him.

39 Then certain of the scribes answering said, Master, thou hast well said.

40 And after that they durst not ask him any question at all.

41 ¶And he said unto them, How say they that Christ is David's son?

42 And David himself saith in the book of Psalms, The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 43 Till I make thine enemies thy footstool.

44 David therefore calleth him Lord, how is he then his son?

45 ¶Then in the audience of all the people he said unto his disciples,

46 Beware of the scribes, which de-

25-26. Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's. In these few words are clearly found the basis for the doctrine of the separation of church and state. Both are to exist, and neither is to be lord over the other as supreme.

27. The Sadducees were the Jewish religious liberals of that day. They denied resurrection, angels, and spirits (Acts 23:8).

28-32. The law of levirate marriage (a man required to marry his brother's widow) is found in Deuteronomy 25:5-10. It applied in the case of Ruth (Ruth 3:13-4:10).

33-36. Angels cannot be participants of either funerals or weddings. In the resurrection we shall be like them in these two respects also.

37-38. When Moses referred to God as the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, they had already died. Jesus pointed out that all live unto him.

39-40. Jesus' use of Scripture and logic was so correct and devastating that His opponents stopped questioning Him.

41-47. Jesus, however, pointed out the deity of the Messiah as seen in Psalm 110:1, where God the Father called Him Lord in distinction from Himself, and promised Him rulership.

sire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts;

47 Which devour widows' houses, and for a shew make long prayers: the same shall receive greater damnation.

CHAPTER 21

AND he looked up, and saw the rich men casting their gifts into the treasury.

2 And he saw also a certain poor widow casting in thither two mites.

3 And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all:

4 For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had.

5 ¶And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said,

6 As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

7 And they asked him, saying, Master, but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass?

8 And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived: for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.

9 But when ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass; but the end is not by and by.

10 Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:

11 And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven.

12 But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake.

13 And it shall turn to you for a testimony.

14 Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer:

15 For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

16 And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death.

17 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake.

21:1. The treasury is the place where the offerings and taxes for the Temple were received. Thirteen receptacles were located there.

2. Two mites (Gr lepton) were worth about one fortieth of a penny (Gr dēnariōn) (Mt 18:28). Since it was such a small amount and this was all she had, it is amazing that she did not keep one of the coins for herself.

3-4. She of her penury (poverty) cast in all the living that she had. She gave everything that she would need to buy food to sustain her life. The size of an offering is not always an indication of the measure of one's love for God. Often the amount that is held back is a better indicator of one's devotion.

VII. THE PROPHECY OF TRIBULATION TO COME.

21:5-38.

A. Prophecy About This Age. 21:5-19.

5-6. When Jesus finished teaching in the Temple area (20:1), He passed through the Temple treasury (21:1), and some commented on the splendor of the magnificent Temple reconstructed, enlarged and beautified by Herod. Jesus predicted it would be torn down (vs. 6).

7-19. Jesus words here are descriptive of the time leading up to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in A.D. 70, and also of the events preceding the Great Tribulation period when the Antichrist will enter a future Temple in Jerusalem to set himself up as God (II Thess 2:3-4).

LUKE 21:18

18 But there shall not an hair of your head perish.

19 In your patience possess ye your souls.

20 And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh.

21 Then let them which are in Judæa flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto.

22 For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled.

23 But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people.

24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

25 ¶And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring;

26 Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken.

27 And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory.

28 And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.

29 And he spake to them a parable; Behold the fig tree, and all the trees;

30 When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand.

31 So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand.

32 Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled.

33 Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away.

34 ¶And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.

35 For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.

36 Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man.

37 And in the day time he was teaching in the temple; and at night he went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives.

38 And all the people came early in

B. Prophecy About Jerusalem. 21:20-24.

20-24. These verses graphically portray Jerusalem's destruction by Titus in A.D. 70. Titus' Arch still stands today in Rome near the Coliseum at the entrance to the Roman Forum. It commemorates his capture of Jerusalem. And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles. This is taken by most to mean Jerusalem will be under the governmental control of non-Jews. This has been the case (with the exception of the Bar Kochbar revolt, A.D. 123-35) until Wednesday, June 7, 1967. Until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. On June 7, 1967, the "times of the Gentiles" were completed. Jesus did not predict what would happen after that time, but it may be assumed that Israel would come back into God's spotlight, and the return of Christ would be nearer. That is indeed the case. Jerusalem is today entirely under the governmental control of Israel, though they allow access to religious shrines for all faiths. Israel has constantly been on page one of our newspapers from that day to this.

C. Prophecy About Christ's Return. 21:25-38.

25-28. These verses are written for the Jews who will be looking for Christ to return at the end of the Great Tribulation. Satan will persecute the Jews, but God will protect them (Rev 12:13-17).

29-31. The fig tree is thought by many to be a symbol of Israel. This is seen in Luke 13. This parable probably means that Israel may be seen as a sign of the nearness of Christ's return and the setting up of His kingdom (vs. 31).

32. This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled. The generation spoken of is probably the one which sees the signs (especially those regarding the fig tree) come to pass. That generation will see God conclude this present age prior to the inauguration of His millennial kingdom.

33. God's Word, the Holy Bible, is more unshakable than the universe itself. In fact, the universe shall pass away.

34-38. These verses speak of the universal extent (vs. 35) of the Great Tribulation, and are a warning to those who will await Christ's return in that day (Rev 7:1-16 tells of the Jews and of the great multitude who will be saved during the Tribulation).

the morning to him in the temple, for to hear him.

CHAPTER 22

NOW the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Passover.

2 And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; for they feared the people.

3 ¶Then entered Satan into Judas surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve.

4 And he went his way, and communed with the chief priests and captains, how he might betray him unto them.

5 And they were glad, and covenanted to give him money.

6 And he promised, and sought opportunity to betray him unto them in the absence of the multitude.

7 ¶Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be killed.

8 And he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat.

9 And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare?

10 And he said unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in.

11 And ye shall say unto the goodman of the house, The Master saith unto thee, Where is the guestchamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?

12 And he shall shew you a large upper room furnished: there make ready.

13 And they went, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover.

14 And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

15 And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer:

16 For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

17 And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves:

18 For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.

19 ¶And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me.

20 Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testa-

VIII. THE PASSION OF THE SON. 22:1-23:56.

A. Christ's Final Night with His Disciples. 22:1-46.

22:1. Feast of unleavened bread . . . which is called the Passover. The Feast of Unleavened Bread began the fifteenth day of the first Jewish month (our March or April) and continued for seven days (Lev 23:4-8). The Passover and Feast of the First Fruits were both connected with the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and sometimes, as here, the term "Passover" stands for the entire observance. All Jewish men were required to be in Jerusalem for the Passover (Deut 16:16).

2-7. The Jewish leaders wanted to kill Jesus for what they considered to be the good of their nation. They reasoned that if people followed Christ as the Messiah, the Roman government would rise up and crush the "rebellion." (See John 11:47-53 for an exact statement of this.) However, they were not going to take Jesus during the Passover season because of the crowds. But, Christ was to die as our Passover (1 Cor 5:7). Judas' conspiracy and betrayal made this possible.

8-9. And he sent Peter and John. These men were ever together serving Christ. First they were fishermen, then among the inner circle of three disciples (Peter, James, and John). After this joint mission of seeking a room to observe the Passover, they were together mourning and at the garden tomb (Jn 20:1-10), in a boat on the Sea of Galilee (Jn 21:7, 20-24), and in preaching after Pentecost (Acts 3:1).

10-18. Christ's omniscience is clearly seen here as in numerous other clear predictions He made that were subsequently fulfilled.

19-23. When Christ instituted the Lord's Supper, Judas had apparently already departed (cf. Jn 13:21-30; Mt 26:26-30; Mk 14:18-26). The bread and wine represented Christ's broken body and shed blood in a futuristic sense. Today these same symbols commemorate Christ's body and blood given for us at Calvary. The command is this do in remembrance of me (vs.

ment in my blood, which is shed for you.

21 ¶But, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table.

22 And truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined: but woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed!

23 And they began to enquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing.

24 ¶And there was also a strife among them, which of them should be accounted the greatest.

25 And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors.

26 But ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve.

27 For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serveth.

28 Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations.

29 And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me;

30 That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

31 ¶And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat:

32 But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

33 And he said unto him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death.

34 And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

35 ¶And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing.

36 Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one.

37 For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me, And he was reckoned among the transgressors: for the things concerning me have an end.

38 And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough.

39 ¶And he came out, and went, as he 19). The frequency of the observance is stated in I Corinthians 11:25 as “this do ye, as oft as ye drink it.” The early church may have observed it quite often (Acts 2:42, 46; 20:7), but each local church is free to determine the frequency with which it will observe this ordinance.

The new testament, or new covenant, refers back to Jeremiah 31:31-34; Ezekiel 34:25-27; 36:26-27; and Zechariah 9:11. God promised Israel and Judah (the Jews) a new covenant in which He would restore them to their land, forgive their sin, and rule over them. This will be accomplished literally with God’s chosen people, Israel, not with the church. However, the basis for that new covenant was the shed blood of Christ. We, as believers today, participate in the salvation aspects of that new covenant, but not in the other unique benefits promised to Israel.

24-29. The Christian should strive for mastery and work hard but his attitude must ever be that of humility. Remember Luke 17:10.

30. Sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel. During the millennial (one thousand years) reign of Christ, the twelve apostles (Matthias probably replaces Judas Iscariot, Acts 1:15-26) will have governmental authority over the regathered twelve tribes of Israel (Jer 23:3-8). These will be literal Jews who live through the Great Tribulation, and perhaps resurrected Old Testament saints as well (Mt 8:11).

31-38. We can be encouraged to know that Christ also prays for us as He did for Peter. He knows what we experience (Heb 4:15), and He makes intercession for us (Heb 7:25). This that is written must yet be accomplished in me (vs. 37). Christ was very much aware of the Old Testament prophecies concerning the Messiah. Yet in no way did He contrive to fulfill these. He had nothing to do with Judas’ wicked act of betrayal (Ps 41:9), nor the offering of vinegar to drink (Ps 69:21; Jn 19:28-30), nor the manner in which the soldiers at the cross parted His garments (Ps 22:18; Jn 19:23-24). The matchless providence of God ruled and overruled in the affairs of men. We may also rest assured that nothing happens to us without God’s permission to work out His own unique will in each of our lives.

39-41. And he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.

40 And when he was at the place, he said unto them, Pray that ye enter not into temptation.

41 And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed.

42 Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done.

43 And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him.

44 And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow, 46 And said unto them, Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

47 ¶ And while he yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus to kiss him.

48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?

49 When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword?

50 ¶ And one of them smote the servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear.

51 And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.

52 Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves?

53 When I was daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against me: but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.

54 ¶ Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high priest's house. And Peter followed afar off.

55 And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.

56 But a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him.

57 And he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not.

mount of Olives. At the conclusion of Christ's meal and final instruction of the disciples (the Upper Room Discourse, only in John 13-17), Jesus passed over the narrow ravine of the brook Kidron (Cedron) to the Garden of Gethsemane (Mk 14:32; Jn 18:1). Peter, James, and John were selected to be near Christ during His agony of prayer (Mt 26:36-38), while the others remained some distance away.

42. Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me. The cup refers to Christ's coming death (Mt 20:22-23) with its accompanying physical and spiritual agonies (Mt 27:46). That event was variously referred to by Christ as His cup, baptism, and hour (Mt 20:22-23; Jn 7:30; 12:23, 27; 13:1; 17:1). Christ's human nature, though without sin, did fear death (Lk 12:50; Heb 5:7), yet more so than other men because He was to bear vicariously the sin of the entire world (Isa 53:6; Jn 1:29) and suffer the temporary loss of fellowship with God the Father (Mt 27:46). Nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done. Christ's human will always completely yielded to the divine will. It was natural for Him to be perfectly obedient to the Father.

43-46. The visit of an angel to strengthen Christ in answer to His prayer is only found in Luke. Though sometimes questioned by textual critics, these two verses are attested by the overwhelming majority of manuscripts, ancient versions, and church fathers. His sweat was as it were great drops of blood. This does not necessarily mean that Christ actually sweat blood, though He may have.

B. Christ's Betrayal and Trial. 22:47-23:25.

47-48. Judas came to arrest Jesus with a Roman cohort (Jn 18:3), although the full cohort may not have been present. They were taking no chances.

49-53. John 18:10 identifies Peter as the one who chopped off the ear of the servant of the high priest, whom John also identifies as Malchus. Peter was probably aiming for the head. Only God's providence saved Peter from becoming a murderer. Luke the physician is the only one to record the healing.

54. Brought him into the high priest's house. This was the first of several illegal trials (see James Stalker, The Trial and Death of Jesus Christ and Simon Greenleaf, The Testimony of the Evangelists). And Peter followed afar off. How easy it is to promise (Mk 14:29-31), and so hard to fulfill.

55-60. Peter's denial was wicked and sinful; he even cursed and swore in his denial (Mk 14:71). He was no more sinful than any of us.

58 And after a little while another saw him, and said, Thou art also of them. And Peter said, Man, I am not.

59 And about the space of one hour after another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him: for he is a Galilæan.

60 And Peter said, Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew.

61 And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, Before the cock crew, thou shalt deny me thrice.

62 And Peter went out and wept bitterly.

63 ¶And the men that held Jesus mocked him, and smote him.

64 And when they had blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophecy, who is it that smote thee?

65 And many other things blasphemously spake they against him.

66 ¶And as soon as it was day, the elders of the people and the chief priests and the scribes came together, and led him into their council, saying,

67 Art thou the Christ? tell us. And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe:

68 And if I also ask you, ye will not answer me, nor let me go.

69 Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God.

70 Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am.

71 And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth.

CHAPTER 23

AND the whole multitude of them arose, and led him unto Pilate.

2 And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying that he himself is Christ a King.

3 And Pilate asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answered him and said, Thou sayest it.

4 Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, I find no fault in this man.

5 And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

6 When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilæan.

7 And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

8 ¶And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him.

9 Then he questioned with him in

61-62. And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. This was one of Peter's lowest points. He had publicly denied Christ three times. Later, Christ made Peter publicly confess three times that he loved his Lord (Jn 21:15-19).

63-71. Though Jesus was violently abused, mocked, and ridiculed, He did not return the same (1 Pet 2:21-23). The only accusation they could make was Christ's positive reply to their question as to whether or not He was the Son of God. (vss. 70-71).

23:1. Led him unto Pilate. Pilate, the Roman governor of Palestine from A.D. 26-36, was in Jerusalem for the Passover feast. A stone inscription bearing his name was uncovered in A.D. 1961 in Caesarea, the ancient governmental headquarters.

2-5. Some of the charges the council (Sanhedrin) brought against Christ were manifestly false. Several times Pilate pronounced his verdict, I find no fault in this man (vss. 4, 14-15, 22). However, the Jewish leaders grew angry (vs. 5) and actually intimidated Pilate (Jn 19:12).

6-12. Pilate sent Jesus the Galilean to Herod Antipas, the governor of Galilee who was visiting Jerusalem for the Passover. He had earlier beheaded John the Baptist, and was desirous of seeing Jesus, but Jesus was silent before Herod and his mockers.

many words; but he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused him.

11 And Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

12 ¶And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves.

13 ¶And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people,

14 Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:

15 No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.

16 I will therefore chastise him, and release him.

17 (For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.)

18 And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Ba-rāb'bas:

19 (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

20 Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them.

21 But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him.

22 And he said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cause of death in him: I will therefore chastise him, and let him go.

23 And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified. And the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

24 And Pilate gave sentence that it should be as they required.

25 And he released unto them him that for sedition and murder was cast into prison, whom they had desired; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

26 ¶And as they led him away, they laid hold upon one Simon, a cŷ-rē'nĭ-an, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, that he might bear it after Jesus.

27 And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus turning unto them said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 For, behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck.

30 Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us.

31 For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

32 ¶And there were also two other,

13-24. And Pilate gave sentence that it should be as they required. Pilate had no backbone to stand up for justice, but instead succumbed to mob rule. Both share the immediate guilt for Christ's death, but it is also true that Christ laid down His life and that no man could take it from Him (Jn 10:17-18).

C. Christ's Crucifixion. 23:26-56.

26-33. Simon, a Cyrenian. This devout black Jew must have become a Christian. Mark records (15:21) that Simon was the father of Alexander and Rufus. The place, which is called Calvary. (vs. 33). No one actually knows the exact place where the crucifixion or burial occurred. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre is the traditional site but many appreciate Gordon's Calvary and the Garden Tomb because they give a better picture of what the site is presumed to be like in the early centuries.

malefactors, led with him to be put to death.

33 And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

35 And the people stood beholding. And the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar.

37 And saying, If thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.

38 And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 ¶And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

40 But the other answering rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

41 And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss.

42 And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.

43 And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise.

44 ¶And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.

45 And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

46 And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit: and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

47 ¶Now when the centurion saw what was done, he glorified God, saying, Certainly this was a righteous man.

48 And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts, and returned.

49 And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, stood afar off, beholding these things.

50 ¶And, behold, there was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man, and a just:

51 (The same had not consented to the counsel and deed of them;) he was of Ar-i-ma-thæ'a, a city of the Jews: who also himself waited for the kingdom of God.

52 This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 And he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and laid it in a sepulchre that

34-42. Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. As Christ and the martyr Stephen, we must be so controlled by the Spirit that in our darkest hour we will be able to speak these words and mean them.

Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew (vs. 38). These three languages were: (1) the universal tongues; (2) the official language of the Roman Empire; and (3) the official speech of the Jews. Compare all four gospel records to recover the complete reading of "This is Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews." This was probably written as a mockery to the Jews.

43. Today shalt thou be with me in paradise. The thief who asked Christ for salvation received it. The word paradise found only in two other passages (II Cor 12:4; Rev 2:7), indicates the domain of the righteous dead.

44. This darkness was supernaturally imposed.

45-49. Only the veil separated the priests from the Holy of Holies in the Temple. Its parting signified the opening to all men of the way to God. It represents Christ's flesh (Heb 10:20), the rending of which made our salvation possible.

50-53. Joseph . . . of Arimathæa (perhaps equivalent to Ramathaim, I Sam 1:1, about twenty miles northwest of Jerusalem) was a member of the council (Sanhedrin), but a devout and brave believer in Christ as Messiah. He, with Nicodemus (Jn 19:39), carefully wrapped Jesus' body in long strips of cloth, pouring in at the same time a sticky resinous mixture of myrrh and aloes. Both spices are obtained from trees. Nicodemus contributed about seventy pounds (by our weights), which was a rich amount fit for royalty.

was hewn in stone, wherein never man before was laid.

54 And that day was the preparation, and the sabbath drew on.

55 ¶And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath day according to the commandment.

CHAPTER 24

NOW upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared, and certain others with them.

2 And they found the stone rolled away from the sepulchre.

3 And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

4 And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men stood by them in shining garments:

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead?

6 He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in Galilee,

7 Saying, the Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And they remembered his words,

9 And returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 It was Mary Magdalene, and Jō-ān'na, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles.

11 And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

12 Then arose Peter, and ran unto the sepulchre; and stooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves, and departed, wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

13 And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Ēm-mā'us, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.

54-56. The preparation (Gr paraskeuē) was a common designation for Friday, though it could also refer to the day before a special feast. If we assume a Friday crucifixion (Jewish inclusive reckoning), Luke's reference to the commandment of Sabbath observance (cf. Ex 20:8-11) would identify the next day as Saturday. The women, then, rested on the Sabbath (Saturday) and returned to the tomb the following day (vs. 56; 24:1), which would be Sunday. If a Wednesday crucifixion is assumed (lit., seventy-two hours in the grave), the reference to the Sabbath would refer to the Passover itself.

IX. THE POWER OF THE SON OVER DEATH. 24:1-48.

A. The Events Surrounding the Empty Tomb. 24:1-12.

24:1. Upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came. It was probably no earlier than 5 A.M. Matthew says that it was beginning to dawn (28:1), and Mark says that they arrived at the tomb as the sun was rising (16:2). They refers to the women of 23:55-56, who are identified in 24:10.

2. The stone rolled away from the sepulcher. First-century sepulchers with round stone doors may still be seen in Jerusalem at the tomb of the kings, and at Herod's tomb. The openings are from the ground to about waist-high. This explains why various persons are said to stoop down to look in (vs. 12; Jn 20:5).

3-12. These women, as well as others later, actually entered into the tomb and saw two features which proved to them the miraculous nature of Christ's bodily resurrection from the dead. (1) The body was gone. (2) The grave clothes, or strips of cloth that had encircled the body with gummy resinous spices inlaid were still intact. It must have looked like an empty mummy shell. The resurrected body of Christ had passed through the cloth wrappings, leaving them undisturbed. That was what convinced Peter and others of the truth of the resurrection (Jn 20:6-8). If the mummy-like wrapping had been disturbed in any way, no one could have been sure of what had happened. Two men stood by them (vs. 4). Naturally, these two angels confirmed the story. They looked just like other men except for their bright appearance.

B. The Walk to Emmaus. 24:13-32.

13. Two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus. This is one of the most delightfully fascinating stories in the New Testament. One of the two was named Cleopas (vs. 18), who is mentioned elsewhere only in John 19:25, as the husband of a woman named Mary. The one returning with Cleopas may have been his wife, since both were in Jerusalem for the Passover. Emmaus was about seven or eight miles northwest of Jerusalem. It would take two to three hours to walk the distance.

LUKE 24:14

14 And they talked together of all these things which had happened.

15 And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them.

16 But their eyes were holden that they should not know him.

17 And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

18 And the one of them, whose name was Clē'o-pas, answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?

19 And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people:

20 And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21 But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre;

23 And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive.

24 And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but him they saw not.

25 Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken:

26 Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?

27 And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.

28 And they drew nigh unto the village, whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further.

29 But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them.

30 And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

31 And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight.

32 And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?

33 And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them,

14-16. As they walked they were discussing the events of the past several days, including Christ's crucifixion and the reports of His resurrection. As they walked, Jesus joined them, but they were supernaturally prevented from recognizing Him.

17-18. Jesus inquired as to their evident sadness, and was asked if He were only a stranger to the area, and did not know all the things that had happened in Jerusalem that weekend.

19-24. With a great sense of drama, Jesus, the very One about whom all these events had centered, replied, What things? Then they unfolded the account of how they had thought Jesus was the Messiah until His crucifixion had shattered their hopes. Yet, they added seemingly incredulous reports: (1) of His resurrection and (2) of the angels at the empty tomb, who clearly said that He was alive.

25-27. At that point, Christ, still unknown to these two travelers, took the part of one familiar with the Scriptures. He pointed out from Genesis to Malachi how it was predicted that the Messiah would suffer prior to His exaltation as King. He must have quoted from Psalm 22 and Isaiah 53, and drawn from such types as the smitten rock (Ex 17:6; I Cor 10:4). What a glorious Bible lesson it must have been for them, but how it must have grieved the Saviour's heart to witness such a lack of faith and understanding in the very ones who claimed to be His followers.

28-32. When they neared Emmaus Jesus did not want to impose on His walking companions, but they had learned so much and had such sweet fellowship that they insisted He spend the evening with them. We, too, can learn from such spontaneous Christian hospitality as these manifested. Jesus consented, and as they sat to eat, they asked their new friend (still not knowing He was the risen Christ) to ask God's blessing on their meal. He did so. Then when Christ broke the bread their eyes focused on His nail-pierced hands and they immediately realized it was their Lord. Jesus disappeared from their presence, and they recalled the walk and talk they had had with Him along the way.

C. The Meeting in the Upper Room. 24:33-48.

33. Having had the privilege of being a part of one of the most unique of the post-resurrection experiences, these two hastened back the eight miles into Jerusalem. They made their way to the upper room where they knew other disciples were gathered behind locked doors for fear of the Jews (Jn 20:19). The group present consisted of only ten of the apostles, Thomas 34 Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

35 And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

36 ¶And as they thus spake, Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

37 But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit.

38 And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts?

39 Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.

40 And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet.

41 And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye here any meat?

42 And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb.

43 And he took it, and did eat before them.

44 And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me.

45 Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures,

46 And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:

47 And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

48 And ye are witnesses of these things.

49 ¶And, behold, I send the promise being absent (Jn 20:24), the two from Emmaus, and others who had gathered. We do not know how large the crowd was, but it could have been close to twenty or more. The eleven is a collective term that was used to identify the group of disciples after the death of Judas, whether all were present or not.

34. As the two gained entrance, they were immediately told, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon. This appearance is only mentioned here and in I Corinthians 15:5. Christ was no doubt further preparing Peter for the leadership role he would assume in the early days of the church.

35. Then Cleopas and his companion related what had happened to them that afternoon.

36. While they were just finishing their story, Jesus miraculously appeared in their midst and said, Peace be unto you.

37. Of the apostles, apparently only Peter had, up to that time, seen the resurrected Christ. The rest had only heard the stories of the appearances. Now, when confronted with the reality themselves, they were shocked by the sudden and obviously miraculous nature of this appearance. Their immediate reaction was terror, and in that first impression they must have felt they were viewing some spiritual form of their resurrected Lord.

38-39. Jesus quickly corrected their mistaken theology by drawing attention to his completely physical body. He said, Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. Even with these clear words, given in the context of correcting a false view of the nature of Christ's resurrected body, there still persist some false cults and "isms" who maintain the heresy of a "spiritual resurrection" of Christ. The fact that Jesus said flesh and bones rather than "flesh and blood" does not necessarily indicate that His body had no blood. One cannot say, but flesh and bones usually do operate with blood. However, the life principle in a resurrected body may not be in its blood, but in the spirit of God.

40-43. In order to further prove the fact of His material bodily resurrection, Jesus gave a public demonstration by eating some broiled fish and part of a honeycomb.

44-45. All things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me. This verse opens up the Old Testament as to its prophetic and typical import regarding Christ. We know that the Old Testament is revealed in the New, while the New is concealed in the Old. Christ then opened their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures.

46. Our Lord continued to point out to these disciples that it is written that Christ should suffer and rise again the third day. This must refer to such Old Testament passages as Psalm 16:20, Isaiah 53:10, and the typology regarding Jonah. Even Genesis 3:15 may be considered as teaching the Messiah's resurrection; otherwise the "wound to the heel" would have been fatal!

47-48. These verses point to a coming change in dispensations, for whereas Christ had before strictly limited the apostles in their preaching to the Jews only (Mt 10:5-6), He now enlarges the Commission as extending to all mankind.

X. THE PROMISE OF THE SON TO THE DISCIPLES. 24:49-53.

49. In order for Christ's disciples to accomplish this task of

LUKE 24:50

of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

50 ¶And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

51 And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven.

52 And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy:

53 And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen.

the Great Commission, Jesus promised them power from on high. They were to remain in Jerusalem until the promised power was received. This promise involved the coming indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit mentioned the night before Christ's crucifixion (Jn 16:7-15), and previously at the Feast of Tabernacles (Jn 7:39). John the Baptist had also intimated this special ministry of the Holy Spirit for disciples after Pentecost (Lk 3:16), and Jesus reiterated this just prior to His ascension when he said, "Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence" (Acts 1:5).

50. The ascension of Christ occurred near Bethany, on the eastern side of the Mount of Olives. His ascension was in His physical bodily form, and Acts 1:11 assures us that "this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Christ's return will not be of a secret spiritual nature as some cults suppose, but He will return bodily.

51-53. He blessed them. Christ, in contrast to the speechless Zechariah in chapter 1, had a blessing to give these men. And they worshiped him. Jesus is entitled to worship only because He is Almighty God, the eternal, omnipotent Creator of the universe. Compare what happened to John when he mistakenly tried to worship a created being in Revelation 19:10 and 22:8-9. The text of the Authorized Version renders verses 52-53 correctly regarding Christ's deity.

The Gospel of Luke begins by announcing good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people (Lk 2:10), and it ends with disciples who are filled with great joy: And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Like those of old, we should be ready to carry this joy to others all around us. Let us imitate our Lord, who "came to seek and to save that which was lost" (Lk 19:10).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- Alford, Henry. The Gospel According to Luke. In The New Testament for English Readers. London: Revingtons, 1863.
- Arndt, William F. Gospel According to St. Luke. St. Louis: Concordia, 1956.
- Burnside, W. F. The Gospel According to St. Luke. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1913.
- Earle, Ralph. The Gospel According to St. Luke. In The Wesleyan Bible Commentary. Vol. 4. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1964.
- Ellis, E. E. The Gospel of Luke. In New Century Bible. New York: Thomas Nelson, 1966.
- *Erdman, C. R. Gospel of Luke. Philadelphia: Westminster, 1956.
- Farrar, F. W. The Gospel According to St. Luke. In The Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges. London: Clay and Sons, 1899.
- Gaebelein, Arno C. The Annotated Bible. Vol. 3. Neptune, N. J.: Loizeaux Brothers, 1970.
- *Geldenhuys, Norval. Commentary on the Gospel of Luke. In New International Commentary on the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1951.
- *Godet, Frederick L. Commentary on the Gospel of Luke. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, reprinted, 1957.
- Ironside, Harry A. Addresses on the Gospel of Luke. Neptune, N. J.: Loizeaux Brothers, 1947.
- Jones, W. B. and F. C. Cook. St. Luke's Gospel. In The Bible Commentary. Vol. 6. Ed. by F. C. Cook. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, n.d.
- Luce, H. K. The Gospel According to St. Luke. In The Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1936.
- *Marshall, I. H. The Gospel of Luke. In the New International Greek New Testament Commentary. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1978.
- *Morgan, G. Campbell. The Gospel According to Luke. New York: Revell, 1931.
- *Morris, Leon. The Gospel According to St. Luke. In The Tyndale New Testament Commentaries. Ed. by R. V. G. Tasker. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1974.
- Plummer, Alfred. A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on The Gospel According to St. Luke. In The International Critical Commentary. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1925.
- Ramsay, W. M. Luke the Physician. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1956 reprint of 1908 ed.
- Robertson, A. T. Luke the Historian in the Light of Research. Grand Rapids: Baker, reprinted, 1977.
- Ryle, J. C. Luke. In Expository Thoughts on the Gospels. Vol. 2. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, reprinted, 1956.
- Stonehouse, N. B. The Witness of Luke to Christ. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1961.
- Summers, R. Commentary on Luke. Waco: Word Books, 1972.
- *Tenney, Merrill C. The Gospel According to Luke. In The Wycliffe Bible Commentary. Ed. by Charles F. Pfeiffer and Everett F. Harrison. Chicago: Moody Press, 1962.

The Gospel According To

JOHN

INTRODUCTION

The Gospel of John remains today a favorite among Christians. Many ministers recommend this book to new converts as a training manual for Christian development. William Hendriksen prefaces his commentary on this gospel with the words of Scripture, "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground" (William Hendriksen, The Gospel of St. John, p. 3). This gospel is uniquely different from the Synoptics in that ninety percent of its content is not discussed by the other gospels even though John had these gospels at his disposal when he wrote. John carefully chose, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, only those events, miracles, and sermons, that would supplement his literary intent. The result of his effort is a gospel that "is the most amazing book that was ever written" (Hendriksen, p. 3).

Authorship. Although the author of this book is not mentioned by name, there is ample evidence externally and internally to conclude that John the apostle was the author.

1. External evidence. The writings of early church fathers often quote from the Gospel of John and attribute this Gospel to the Apostle John. "The external evidence for the early date and Apostolic authorship of the Fourth Gospel is as great as that for any book in the New Testament" (Henry C. Thiessen, Introduction to the New Testament, p. 162). Irenaeus, who was a pupil of Polycarp, a friend of the Apostle John, writes, "Afterwards, John, the disciple of the Lord, who also leaned upon his breast, did himself publish a Gospel during his residence at Ephesus in Asia" (Thiessen, p. 164). The importance of this statement is that Irenaeus quotes from the Gospel (21:20, 24) and attributes the authorship to the Apostle John.

2. Internal evidence. There are certain facts about the author that can be deduced from the content. When these facts are considered collectively, they complement the external evidence and indicated johannine authorship. First, it is clearly evident from the context that the author was a Jew. He understood and quoted from the Old Testament (12:40; 13:18; 19:37) and he had a thorough knowledge of Jewish feasts and customs: wedding feasts (2:1-12), ceremonial purification (3:25), various religious feasts (2:13, 23; 6:4; 13:1; 18:28), and burial customs (11:38, 44; 19:40). Second, he must have been a resident of Palestine. Throughout the gospel he gives detailed geographical descriptions that could be given only by a Palestinian resident. He knows the exact distance between Bethany and Jerusalem (11:18), that Jacob's well is deep (4:11), that Ephraim was near the wilderness (11:54), and many other important geographical details.

Third, the author was an eyewitness to the events he describes. He saw the glory of Jesus Christ (1:14), was at the crucifixion (19:33-35), knew the number and size of the waterpots used in Cana (2:6), knew the distance from the shore to the apostles' boat (21:8), and knew the number of fish caught (21:11). Fourth, he identifies himself with the disciple "whom Jesus loved" on five occasions (13:23; 19:26; 20:2; 21:7, 20). Since John's name is absent from the gospel, it would be logical to assume that he is its anonymous author.

Fifth, the style and vocabulary of the Gospel of John are strikingly similar to the epistles which bear his name. These five observations from the content of the fourth Gospel lead clearly to the conclusion that John the Apostle was the author.

Date and place of writing. Liberal scholars have placed the date of the book as early as A.D. 40, while other liberals have dated it around A.D. 140-170. However, conservatives agreed on a date late in the first century and between the years A.D. 85-95. This date is supported by the discovery of a papyrus fragment called P<sup>52</sup>. This papyrus manuscript is the earliest textual evidence of the New Testament so far discovered, and contains five verses of John (18:31-33, 37-38). Since this fragment is dated about A.D. 125, the original gospel had to be in circulation before the end of the first century (Robert G. Gromacki, New Testament Survey, p. 133). There is general agreement that John wrote this book from Ephesus where he spent the latter years of his life.

Purpose. John's purpose in writing this book is clearly identified in two verses (20:30-31): "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book: But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." There are three key words in these verses: signs, believe, and life. The signs (Gr sêmeion) are the miracles which John chose to describe in proving the deity of Christ. John selected eight signs to substantiate his thesis:

1. Turning water into wine. 2:2-11.
2. Healing the nobleman's son. 4:46-54.
3. Healing the impotent man. 5:1-15.
4. Feeding the five thousand. 6:1-14.
5. Walking on the water. 6:15-21.
6. Healing the blind man. 9:1-41.
7. Raising Lazarus. 11:1-44.
8. Providing the catch of fish. 21:6-11.

The second key word in John's statement of purpose is the word believe (Gr pisteuō) which means to trust or commit. John describes the miracles to prove the deity of Christ so that the readers "might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God."

The third key word describes the results of believing the person and work of Christ—"and that believing ye might have life" (Gr zōē). John's gospel is not merely an intellectual exercise, but rather a historical narrative about the Son of God with the express intent of producing life in the hearts of those who believe in the Son of God. The heartbeat of the Gospel of John is evangelism—pointing men to the “Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world” (1:29).

John further supplements his thesis that Christ is the Son of God by emphasizing the claims that Christ made about Himself. Christ claimed for Himself the very name of God. “Before Abraham was, I am” (8:58). In a review of familiar statements, John amplifies on the claim of Christ to be the “I AM:”

1. I am the bread of life. 6:35.
2. I am the light of the world. 8:12; 9:5.
3. I am the door. 10:7.

4. I am the good shepherd. 10:11, 14.
5. I am the resurrection and the life. 11:25.
6. I am the way, the truth, and the life. 14:6.
7. I am the true vine. 15:1.

John uses all the miracles and sermons of this gospel to develop an impeccable argument for the deity of Jesus Christ.

To those who have experienced this eternal life, a review study of this gospel will produce a deeper understanding and greater appreciation of the One who “came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God” (1:11-13).

OUTLINE

- I. Prologue. 1:1-14.
  - A. The Word in the Beginning. 1:1-2.
  - B. The Word in Creation. 1:3.
  - C. The Word after the Fall. 1:4-5.
  - D. The Word at Incarnation. 1:6-14.
- II. The Public Ministry of Christ. 1:15-12:50.
  - A. Christ Proclaimed by Individuals. 1:15-51.
    1. Testimony of John. 1:15-34.
    2. Testimony of disciples. 1:35-51.
  - B. Christ Performs His First Miracle. 2:1-25.
    1. Wedding at Cana. 2:1-12.
    2. Cleansing of Temple. 2:13-25.
  - C. Christ as Saviour. 3:1-36.
    1. Teaching of the new birth. 3:1-21.
    2. Testimony of John the Baptist. 3:22-36.
  - D. Christ as the Master Soul-winner. 4:1-54.
    1. Samaritan woman's sins forgiven. 4:1-45.
    2. Nobleman's son healed. 4:46-54.
  - E. Christ as the Son of God. 5:1-47.
    1. Healing of lame man. 5:1-18.
    2. Defense of His person. 5:19-47.
  - F. Christ as the Bread of Life. 6:1-71.
    1. Feeding of the five thousand. 6:1-14.
    2. Walking on the water. 6:15-21.
    3. Sermon on the Bread of Life. 6:22-59.
    4. Many turn away. 6:60-71.
  - G. Christ as the Master Teacher. 7:1-53.
    1. Teaching concerning His person. 7:1-36.
    2. Teaching concerning the Holy Spirit. 7:37-39.
    3. Division of people. 7:40-53.
  - H. Christ as the Light of the World. 8:1-9:41.
    1. Adulterous woman forgiven. 8:1-11.
    2. Sermon on the Light of the World. 8:12-59.
    3. Application of sermon by healing blind man. 9:1-41.
  - I. Christ as the Good Shepherd. 10:1-42.
    1. Sermon on the Good Shepherd. 10:1-21.
    2. Rejection of Christ's message. 10:22-42.
  - J. Christ as the Resurrection and the Life. 11:1-57.
    1. Power of Christ: Raising Lazarus. 11:1-46.
    2. Plan of the Pharisees. 11:47-57.
  - K. Christ as the Messiah. 12:1-50.
    1. Supper at Bethany. 12:1-11.
    2. Triumphal Entry. 12:12-19.
    3. Teaching on the cross. 12:20-50.
- III. The Private Ministry of Christ. 13:1-17:26.
  - A. Christ as the Servant. 13:1-38.
    1. Washing the disciples' feet. 13:1-20.
    2. Predicting His betrayal. 13:21-35.
    3. Predicting Peter's denial. 13:36-38.
  - B. Christ as the Comforter. 14:1-31.
  - C. Christ as the True Vine. 15:1-16:33.
    1. Christ and the disciples. 15:1-17.
    2. Disciples and the world. 15:18-27.
    3. Disciples and the Spirit. 16:1-33.
  - D. Christ as the Intercessor. 17:1-26.
- IV. The Passion Ministry of Christ. 18:1-21:25.
  - A. Christ and the Crucifixion. 18:1-19:42.
    1. His arrest. 18:1-11.
    2. His trials. 18:12-19:16.
    3. His crucifixion. 19:17-37.
    4. His burial. 19:38-42.
  - B. Christ and the Resurrection. 20:1-31.
    1. Christ revealed to Mary. 20:1-18.
    2. Christ revealed to the Ten. 20:19-23.
    3. Christ revealed to Thomas. 20:24-31.
  - C. Christ and the Commission. 21:1-25.
    1. Miracle of the fish. 21:1-14.
    2. Message to Peter. 21:15-17.
    3. Conclusion. 21:18-25.

COMMENTARY

I. PROLOGUE. 1:1-14.

John begins his gospel with a series of declarative statements about the deity of Christ. In contrast to the other gospels, John begins his gospel in eternity past. Matthew, who portrays Christ as the King, begins with a genealogy to prove His Davidic lineage. Mark, who presents Christ as the Servant, begins his gospel with the public activity of Christ as a Servant. Luke, who emphasizes the humanity of Christ, begins his gospel with a lengthy description of the events that led to the birth of Christ. John, who presents Christ as the Son of God, begins his gospel in eternity.

A. The Word in the Beginning. 1:1-2.

1:1. In the beginning. This opening statement is a repetition of the opening statement of the Bible (Gen 1:1). When time began, the Word was already in existence. Was the Word. This unique name for Christ (Gr logos) occurs only four times in the New Testament as a name (1:1, 14; I Jn 1:1; Rev 19:13) and is utilized only by John the apostle. Since words reveal the thoughts of one person to another, Christ as the Eternal Word is a revelation of God to man.

And the Word was with God. The words translated with God (Gr pros ton theon) could be rendered "face to face with God." Two important thoughts emerge from this statement. First, the Word is a distinct person. Second, the Word was enjoying communion and fellowship with another distinct person, God the Father. And the Word was God. Lest the reader assume that the Word as a distinct person is less than God, John concludes the verse with an emphatic statement that the Word was completely God. To lend the greatest possible emphasis to the importance of this statement, it literally reads "and God was the Word." The subject and predicate are reversed to underline the deity of the Word.

2. The same was in the beginning with God. This verse simply summarizes the deep theological truths revealed in the first verse.

B. The Word in Creation. 1:3.

Having established the eternity of the Word, John now describes His involvement in creation.

3. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. This verse establishes Christ as the subject of creation and not the object of creation. He was the Creator, not the created. One scholar translates the latter part of this verse as follows: "and apart from him not a single thing that exists came into being" (William Hendriksen, The Gospel of St. John, p. 71).

C. The Word after the Fall. 1:4-5.

4. In him was life. This verse opens with the preposition (Gr en), which means "in." Life is not from Him, or through Him, or by Him, but life is in Him. The life (Gr zōē) spoken of is not life in a physical sense but rather in a spiritual sense. John uses life fifty-four times in his gospel and first epistle to refer to the spiritual realm. And the life was the light of men. Christ is the Light shining in contrast to the darkness of this sinful world.

5. And the light shineth in darkness. In the previous verse both verbs are in the Greek imperfect tense denoting a past action. However, the tense of the verb "shineth" (Gr phainō) is the Greek present tense. Christ, who was the Light, continues to shine as the Light. And the darkness comprehended it not. The darkness referred to here is the unbelief and sin of mankind (3:19). It is the antithesis of the Light. The verb used here (Gr

IN the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

2 The same was in the beginning with God.

3 All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made.

4 In him was life; and the life was the light of men.

5 And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

katalambanō) means to “grasp, comprehend, put out, seize with hostile intent” (W. Wilbur Gingrich, Shorter Lexicon of the New Testament, p. 111). This implies a hostility between the Light and the darkness with the darkness unable to put out the Light.

D. The Word at Incarnation. 1:6-14.

6-8. These verses contrast Christ and John the Baptist. A review of the descriptive statement is given concerning John. First, He was not the logos, but rather a human individual. Second, he was sent from God. John was commissioned by God; he was not God Himself. Third, John was a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe. John’s purpose was to give testimony concerning Christ that would lead persons to a saving faith in the Light. Fourth, John was not that Light. The ministry of John the Baptist is similar to the ministry of Christians today: We are to give personal witness and testimony concerning the Light so that others might believe.

In the following verses John elaborates on the theme of Christ the Light. He studies the Light in a series of relationships: to the world in general (1:9-10); to the Jewish people (1:11-13); and to the disciples (1:14).

9-10. That was the true Light. Christ is the true, or genuine, or real Light. Which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. Christ is the one who gives to every man the light of reason and conscience. The result of this revelation was that the world knew him not. The verb used here (Gr gnōskō) means to acknowledge or recognize. The world rejected Him.

11-12. There is a very strong play on the words his own (Gr idios). In their first occurrence, they refer to what was His own, namely His own world (see vs. 10, and compare the same expression in 19:27 where it refers to a man’s home). In their second occurrence, the Greek gender has changed and the reference is to His own people, who by their rejection show Him to be truly despised (cf. Isa 53:3; Lk 19:14).

There are two actions delineated in verse 12: the action of man and the action of God. Man’s action is to receive and to believe. To receive means to accept for one’s self, and to believe means to place one’s trust in. Both of these concepts are a part of salvation. God’s action is to them gave he power to become the sons of God. The word power (Gr exousia) means the right or authority to become the sons of God.

13. The spiritual birth spoken of in the previous verse is not of blood. It is not on the basis of lineage or Jewish heritage. It is nor of the will of the flesh or a carnal desire. It is not of the will of man or human in its origin. It is of God. This birth is supernatural.

14. The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us. The verb translated “dwelt” (Gr skēnoō) means to tabernacle or live in a tent. The author testifies that we beheld his glory.

II. THE PUBLIC MINISTRY OF CHRIST. 1:15-12:50.

A. Christ Proclaimed by Individuals. 1:15-51.

In the remaining verses of chapter 1, Christ is proclaimed as Messiah by several individuals including John the Baptist, Andrew, Simon, Philip, and Nathanael.

1. Testimony of John. 1:15-34.

15. The writer again discusses the witness of John (1:7). Although Jesus comes after John, yet he was before him; He existed in eternity.

The verses are interjected into the testimony of John the Baptist and describe the personal testimony of the author.

6 ¶There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

7 The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.

8 He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

9 That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

10 He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

11 He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

12 But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name:

13 Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

14 And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth.

15 ¶John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me: for he was before me.

JOHN 1:16

16 And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.

17 For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

19 ¶And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou?

20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou E-lī'as? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.

22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?

23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet E-šā'ias.

24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.

25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor E-lī'as, neither that prophet?

26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water; but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;

27 He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things were done in Bēth-āb'a-ra beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

29 ¶The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.

30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

31 And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the

16. Of his fulness. This fulness is expressed in verse 14 and the writer now claims that of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace (lit., grace upon grace).

17. Continuing the thoughts of verse 14, a sharp contrast is made between the law of Moses and Jesus Christ. The law was given by Moses. The law had its place in revealing man's condition (Gal 3:24). However, the law did not provide grace and truth. Grace was to forgive and pardon the sinner and the truth (or the reality) was that which the sacrifices pointed to. These are found only in Jesus Christ.

18. God is a Spirit and cannot be seen by man (I Tim 6:16). The only begotten Son . . . he hath declared him. Christ has declared (lit., exegeted; Gr exēgeomai) or revealed God to man. The expression, the only begotten Son, has excellent manuscript evidence to support translating it, "the unique God."

19. And this is the record of John. The author now returns from a note of personal testimony to the record of John. This culminates in verse 34 with the words of John the Baptist. The Sanhedrin is alarmed at the ministry of John the Baptist, and so they send a delegation of theologians to ask him the question, Who art thou?

20-21. John denies that he is the Christ. He also denies being Elijah, whom the Jews expected to precede the Messiah (Mal 4:5). John did minister in the spirit of Elijah (Lk 1:17) and was even called Elijah by Christ (Mt 17:12), but he was not literally Elijah. John also denies being that prophet (Deut 18:15-18) or Christ Himself.

22-23. Unsatisfied with John's negation of their questions, they ask, What sayest thou of thyself? John answers with the words of Isaiah 40:3. He was simply a voice to make straight the paths or prepare the way of the Lord.

24-28. The investigating committee now becomes concerned with John's baptizing. Why baptizest thou then? John replies by stating that there is a vast difference between what he is doing with water, which is only a sign, and what the Messiah will do with the real thing, the cleansing power of the Holy Spirit (Mk 1:8). Concerning Him, John states that he is unworthy of even untying His sandal straps. These events took place in Bethabara beyond Jordan.

29. John seeth Jesus. The day after the committee investigates John, Jesus Himself appears on the scene. John makes the now familiar statement, Behold the Lamb of God. Christ is the fulfillment of the Old Testament lamb (Ex 12, 13; Num 28:4; Isa 53). Which taketh away. This is a Greek present participle which means "is taking away." What the Old Testament lamb could not do, the Lamb of God is doing. The sin of the world. The Lamb of God was not limited to the Jewish people but rather He reaches the entire world.

30-32. The message of John seemingly centered around this theme (1:15, 27). The apostle assumes that the reader is familiar with the Synoptics since the Spirit descending like a dove occurred at the baptism (Mt 3:13-17; Mk 1:9-10; Lk 3:21-22).

33-34. And I knew him not. The value of John's testimony to Christ is that God revealed it to him at the baptism of Jesus.

same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

35 ¶ Again the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples;

36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God!

37 And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou?

39 He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour.

40 One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Mes-si'as, which is, being interpreted, the Christ.

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cē'phas, which is by interpretation, A stone.

43 ¶ The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me.

44 Now Philip was of Bēth-sā'i-da, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

46 And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see.

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!

48 Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee.

49 Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel.

50 Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig tree, believest thou? thou shalt see greater things than these.

51 And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

Until that time John knew him not. This section relating John's testimony to Christ concludes with the statement that this is the Son of God.

2. Testimony of disciples. 1:35-51.

35-37. In the latter portion of this chapter, Jesus is revealed to certain disciples. These verses are the transition between the ministry of John the Baptist and the ministry of Christ. John the Baptist is with two of his disciples (Andrew and John, the author), and after pointing to the Lamb of God, they followed Jesus.

38-39. Jesus then asks an important question. What seek ye? In response to this question, the disciples ask with another question, where dwellest thou? They were interested in close communion and fellowship with Christ. Christ invites them to Come and see and They came and saw.

40-41. The true response of one who has found Christ is to bring others. Andrew tells his brother Simon, We have found the Messiah. Messiah (Gr Messias) means the Anointed One; it is the transliteration of the Hebrew Mashiach, which is often translated by the Greek Christos which is then transliterated into English as "Christ."

42. Simon comes to Christ and gets a new name, Cephas, which is by interpretation, A stone.

43. The day following. This is the last of four successive days discussed in chapter 1. Christ now does the finding and commands Philip to Follow Him.

44-46. Philip immediately findeth Nathanael and states, We have found him. Nathanael responds with doubt that Nazareth could produce the Messiah. But Philip gives the invitation, Come and see.

47. Jesus sees Nathanael coming and addresses him as an Israelite indeed in whom is no guile. This is a compliment to the honesty and sincerity of Nathanael.

48-49. Nathanael responds, Whence knowest thou me? Then Jesus reveals the penetrating eye of deity by telling Nathanael that even before Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee. In a previous moment of quiet devotion, Jesus had seen Nathanael. Nathanael then proclaims Christ as the Son of God and the promised Messiah.

50-51. This verse is more of a promise than a question. Because of Nathanael's faith, he would see greater things than these. Jesus now describes these greater things by referring to the Old Testament story concerning Jacob's ladder (Gen 28). Christ Himself was to be the Ladder between God and man since He was the Son of God (1:49) and the Son of man (1:51).

B. Christ Performs His First Miracle. 2:1-25.

In this chapter there are two events detailed which illustrate the emptiness and deficiency of Judaism. The empty water jars at the wedding feast describe the condition of Judaism in meeting the spiritual needs of the Jewish people. This emptiness is further described in the cleansing of the Temple, and Judaism is described as corrupt.

CHAPTER 2

AND the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there:

2 And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.

3 And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

4 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

6 And there were set there six waterpots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece.

7 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.

9 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was: (but the servants which drew the water knew;) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,

10 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

11 This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.

12 ¶After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples; and they continued there not many days.

13 ¶And the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,

14 And found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables;

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make

1. Wedding at Cana. 2:1-12.

2:1. And the third day. The third day after Jesus had attained two more disciples, Philip and Nathanael, He journeyed about eight miles north of Nazareth to Cana. The mother of Jesus was there. John does not mention Mary by name, which is consistent with his style, since he tends to leave himself and his close relatives anonymous (19:26-27).

2. Since the disciples had joined Christ so recently, there is the problem in resolving how they were all invited to the wedding feast. There are two possible answers: Jesus could have stopped in Nazareth on His way to Cana and accepted the invitation for His disciples; or second, Nathanael could have made the arrangements since he was from Cana.

3-5. When the wine failed, Mary came to Christ for help because she knew who Christ really was (Lk 1:26-38). Christ addressed her as Woman or "Lady"; no disrespect is intended. What have I to do with thee? Christ emphasizes that Mary should no longer think of Him as her son. Mine hour is not yet come. Throughout the Gospels, Christ is conscious that He is doing the will of the Father and each act has an appropriate time (7:6; 8:20; 12:23). Mary acknowledges submission to the Son of God and tells the servants whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

6-8. Jesus Christ uses the six waterpots of stone which could each contain from 17 to 25 gallons of liquid. When they were filled with water, Christ commands the servants to Draw out. This refers to dipping out the water. They were told to bear it (Gr pherō) to the governor of the feast. The verb used here is in the Greek present tense (progressive action), and perhaps hints that the process of serving must be continued no matter how ridiculous it seemed. The total volume of water changed to wine was about 100-150 gallons.

9-10. When the wine was tasted, it was proved to be of superior quality. The governor compliments the bridegroom, Thou hast kept the good wine until now. The symbolism is clear. The power of Christ filled the emptiness of the waterpots and that same power is able to fill the emptiness of Judaistic religion.

11-12. This beginning of miracles. The word used here for miracles (Gr semeion) means signs, and the apostle gives the reason for the sign: and manifested forth his glory. The sign drew attention to the power and glory of the One who performed it. In this story, Christ stands as the preeminent One. The faith of the disciples was strengthened because of this sign. After this incident, Christ returned to Capernaum. This was the home of James and John.

2. Cleansing of Temple. 2:13-25.

13. The Law required every male Jew twelve years old and above to attend the passover. Jesus went up to Jerusalem, the political and religious capital of Israel, and because of its geographical elevation, the Jews always talked about going up to Jerusalem regardless of the direction they were traveling from.

14-17. Christ found in the court of the Gentiles a terrible scene. The Sanhedrin was permitting the selling of sacrificial animals at exorbitant prices and permitting the changing of foreign currency into Jewish money, which was required for the temple tax. Christ makes a whip and drives out both the animals and the wicked merchants. He overturns the tables and scatters the coins across the floor. He commands the dove owners, Take these things hence. Christ then justifies this striking action, make not my Father's house an house of merchandise (Mal 3:1-3). Again, the failure of Judaism is emphasized. The disciples recall that this is the fulfillment of prophecy (Ps 69:9).

not my Father's house an house of merchandise.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18 ¶Then answered the Jews and said unto him, What sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

21 But he spake of the temple of his body.

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

23 ¶Now when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men,

25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

18. The Jews, who have been shocked by the action of Christ, demand a sign to substantiate His authority and conduct. However, this was a ridiculous request since the cleansing in itself was a sign (Mal 3:1-3).

19. Christ answers with a deep spiritual truth. Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up. Christ was referring to the destruction of His body and to His resurrection from the dead. The physical Temple was a type of Christ's body, and when the body of Christ was destroyed, the purpose and existence of the Jewish Temple were also destroyed. Consequently, the destruction of His body also meant the destruction of the Temple.

20-22. The Jews take Christ literally, and ignore the spiritual and true meaning of His statement. The author adds these words lest his readers miss the truth of Christ's statement. Even the disciples did not fully understand until he was risen from the dead. They believed the scripture, or the Old Testament prophecies, and the word which Jesus had said.

23-25. Jesus remained in Jerusalem for the Passover, and many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles. The word used to express belief (Gr pisteuō) is used in the next verse. But Jesus did not commit himself. Christ did not entrust Himself to them because they were not true believers. He concluded this because he knew all men. These were nominal believers whose only interest was the miracles. He did not need their testimony for he knew what was in man. These people had not accepted Him with saving faith, but rather they accepted Him as a powerful miracle worker.

C. Christ as Saviour. 3:1-36.

There are two separate incidents detailed in this particular chapter: the interview with Nicodemus, and the last testimony of John the Baptist. The interview with Nicodemus is of primary importance since it reveals the doctrine of the new birth.

1. Teaching of the new birth. 3:1-21.

3:1-2. In these opening verses, Nicodemus is introduced as a man of the Pharisees and a ruler of the Jews. The Pharisees were the religious separatists and the rulers (Gr archōn) who predominantly formed the Sanhedrin. Nicodemus came to Jesus by night so that he could personally talk with Christ. We know seems to indicate that other influential religious leaders were convinced that Christ was a teacher come from God because of the miracles.

3. After Nicodemus came to Christ, Christ made a statement about the new birth. Nicodemus then asked three questions about that statement. Except a man be born again. The word again (Gr anōthen) means "from above." Unless a person is born from above he cannot see the kingdom of God. The kingdom of God is His rule over His people and refers to everlasting life.

4. Nicodemus' questions reveal that he did not grasp the spiritual meaning of the Lord's statement. Nicodemus expects a negative answer to his rhetorical question. However, Christ answers by explaining this new birth.

5. To be a part of God's kingdom, one must be born of water and of the Spirit. There are three interpretations as to the meaning of water: it refers to the washing of the water of God's Word (I Pet 1:23); it refers to baptism; or it refers to physical birth. The latter of the three seems to be the most logical.

CHAPTER 3

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, named Nic-o-dē'mus, a ruler of the Jews:

2 The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nic-o-dē'mus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born?

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

JOHN 3:6

6 That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 Nic-o-dē'mus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?

13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.

14 And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up:

15 That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

16 For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

18 He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved.

21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

22 ¶After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of

6. Christ continues to contrast physical birth and spiritual birth. The flesh produces flesh while the Spirit produces that which is spiritual.

7. Marvel not. Do not be amazed or shocked. Ye must be born again. To become a part of God's spiritual kingdom, one must experience a spiritual birth.

8. The wind (Gr pneuma which is the same word used for spirit) cannot be seen or explained. The wind can only be heard or observed in relation to its effect. So is everyone that is born of the Spirit. The new birth is inexplicable. One can only observe the results.

9-10. Nicodemus asks his third question, How can? He asks the same question as before (3:4). Christ rebukes him, and in doing so, brings Nicodemus to the point of submission. Both master (teacher) and Israel have a definite article in Greek. Christ rebukes Nicodemus by asking, "Are you not the teacher of the Israel and you are ignorant of those things?" Nicodemus needed a new heart (Ezk 11:19).

The conversation now becomes one-sided. Christ teaches and Nicodemus listens.

11. Verily (Gr amēn, truly) I say unto thee. In speaking for His followers, Christ reminds Nicodemus that they were saying what they knew and were testifying to what they had seen. The reality of the new birth was known to them by experience. However, the question and blindness of Nicodemus led the Lord to say, Ye receive not our witness.

12-13. If Nicodemus did not accept earthly things, matters of spiritual nature which take place on the earth, then he would not believe heavenly things. Firsthand knowledge must come from the Son of man. Knowledge of heavenly things is only possible through Him that came down from heaven.

14-15. Christ now illustrates, from Numbers 21, the nature of God's plan of redemption. Sin had caused God to punish the Israelites with serpents. God commanded Moses to make a brass serpent, so that when the sick looked to that serpent, they would be healed. The Son of Man must be lifted up (on the cross) so that man bitten by the serpent of sin might have life eternal.

16. The gospel in a nutshell. The love of God shown in action. (1) The source of love—God. (2) The extent of love—the world. (3) The sacrifice of love—He gave his only begotten Son. (4) The results of love—whosoever believeth in him should not perish.

17. The Jews understood that the Messiah would come to condemn the Gentiles (Amos 5:18-20). Against this false teaching, Christ told Nicodemus that God's plan was to save the world.

18. Condemnation is reserved for the one that believeth not. There are only two kinds of people in the world: (1) those who have everlasting life as a result of faith in Christ; and (2) those who have not believed and as a result stand condemned already. They are already sentenced (condemned) and await only the execution of that sentence.

19-21. Christ as the Light is rejected by a dark world because their deeds were evil. Those who reject the Light also hateth (Gr miseō, detest, abhor) that Light, lest their deeds be exposed. In contrast to those who abhor the Light, he that doeth truth gravitates toward the Light to show that his deeds are wrought in God. Christ concludes their interview with an invitation for Nicodemus to leave his darkness and unbelief and come to the Light.

2. Testimony of John the Baptist. 3:22-36.

22-25. After these things. Following the interview with Nicodemus, Jesus traveled to Judaea and baptized. John, who was not yet cast into prison, was performing a similar ministry

Judæa; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

23 And John also was baptizing in Æ'nōn near to Sā'lim, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized.

24 For John was not yet cast into prison.

25 ¶Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.

26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.

27 John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.

28 Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him.

29. He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled.

30 He must increase, but I must decrease.

31 He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all.

32 And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; and no man receiveth his testimony.

33 He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true.

34 For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

35 The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

36 He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.

near Salim. A debate erupted over the baptism of Jesus and the baptism of John as to which had greater purifying ability.

26-29. They came unto John. They were probably disciples of John since their statement carried a hint of jealousy toward Christ (all men came to him) and they refused to mention Christ by name. John's disciples were concerned about the decreasing popularity of their leader. John quickly replied that each person is given a place of service from heaven. John had no right to claim any importance other than what God gave him. John's position was as the forerunner of Christ. Rather than regretting his loss of popularity to Christ, John rejoices in being the friend of the bridegroom. This my joy therefore is fulfilled. The reports that the crowds are attracted to Christ causes John to have joy.

30. He must increase, but I must decrease. Notice the must. In God's plan John must diminish and Christ must continue to grow. The comparison between Christ and John the Baptist is continued and brought to conclusion in verses 31-36.

31. Christ is from above and is above all, whereas John is of the earth and speaketh of the earth. Christ, because of His origin, is above all earthly things (3:13).

32. Christ is the one spoken of here. He testifies concerning what he hath seen and heard (3:11, 13, 31). Again, the rejection of that testimony is discussed.

33. The one who accepts Christ's testimony concerning Himself hath set to his seal (lit., to certify, attest, acknowledge) that God is true. The antithesis of this affirmation is found in I John 1:10.

34-36. Christ is the faithful witness who speaketh the words of God. Christ has received the fullness of God's Spirit (not the Spirit by measure). It is implied that all believers receive the fullness of God's Spirit. Beyond the fullness of God's Spirit, Christ has received all things as a result of the love relationship between the Father and the Son.

The Baptist's last testimony to Christ is perhaps his most powerful one. It calls for a decision. Believe, and one has everlasting life (3:16-18). And he that believeth not. This second believe is a difficult word in the original that is used in the first part of the verse (Gr apeitheō, to disobey, be disobedient). Literally, the one who disobeys shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him. Wrath (Gr orgē, anger, settled indignation) is abiding on the one who disobeys (Gr present tense is used to note a progressive and continual action).

D. Christ as the Master Soul-winner. 4:1-54.

There are two events described in this chapter. They are the contact with the Samaritan woman, and the healing of the nobleman's son. In the story of the woman of Samaria, we observe Christ as the personal soul-winner.

1. Samaritan woman's sins forgiven. 4:1-45.

4:1-3. The popularity of Christ was increasing to the extent that the Pharisees became alarmed. To avoid a confrontation, Jesus traveled north returning to Galilee.

CHAPTER 4

WHEN therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples,)

JOHN 4:3

3 He left Judæa, and departed again into Galilee.

4 And he must needs go through Samā'ri-a.

5 Then cometh he to a city of Sa-mā'ri-a, which is called Sy'chār, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore, being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well: and it was about the sixth hour.

7 There cometh a woman of Sa-mā'ri-a to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

9 Then saith the woman of Sa-mā'ri-a unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Sa-mā'ri-a? for the Jews have no dealings with the Sa-mār'i-tānś.

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again:

14 But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet.

20 Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jeru-

4-5. He must needs go through Samaria. Christ had a compelling compassion that drove Him to a woman in need. This was also the most direct route to Galilee. His journey took Him to Sychar, a city a few miles southeast of Samaria and near Mount Gerizim. According to Genesis 33:19, Jacob bought this parcel of ground and later gave it to his son Joseph (Gen 48:22).

6. Jacob's well was there. This was a well about one hundred feet deep. The writer now emphasizes the humanity of Christ in that He was travel-weary with his journey and consequently rested on (lit., upon) the well. The time of this incident was probably six o'clock in the evening.

7. A woman of Samaria. Note the contrast between chapter 3 and chapter 4. In the former, Christ deals with a man; in the latter, He deals with a woman. In the former, He deals with a Jew; in the latter, a Samaritan. In the former, he deals with a moral person; in the latter, an immoral person. Yet, He saves both. Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink. In receiving this woman, Christ transcends the barriers of race (He was a Jew and she was a Samaritan), religion, and rank (He was a teacher and she was a prostitute). Soulwinning crosses any barriers.

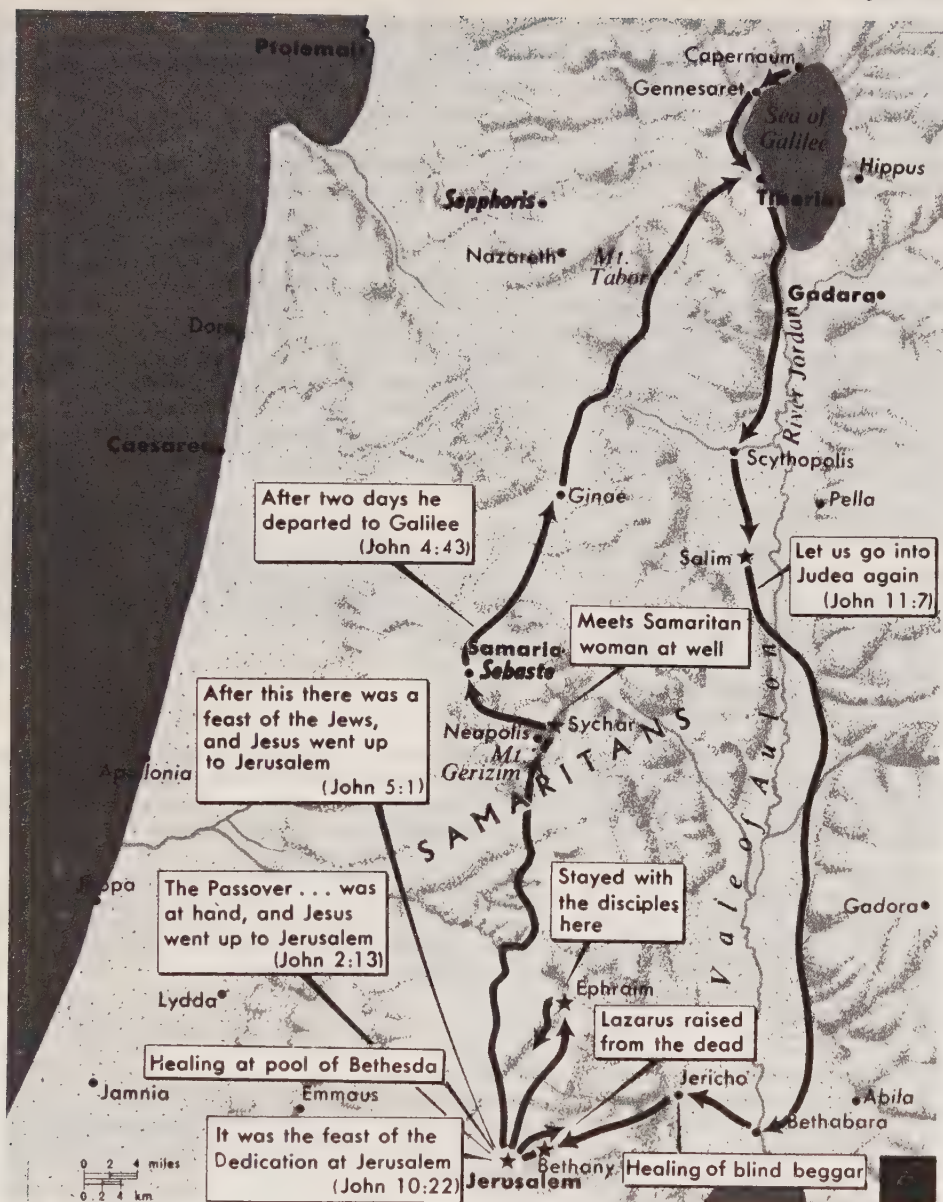

8-9. The request for water was a logical one since the disciples had gone into the city to buy meat. However, the woman is amazed at this request because of the natural animosity between the Jews and the Samaritans. This hatred was caused when, after the fall of Israel, the Jews who remained in Palestine intermarried with the heathen and were called Samaritans. They were not full-blooded Jews.

10-12. Christ answers the woman's hesitancy with a spiritual riddle. The gift of God refers to the living water. The emphasis now is taken off Christ's need for physical water and placed on the woman's need for spiritual water (7:37-39). The woman understands Christ to speak of the living water as that which is at the deepest part of the well. Art thou greater? The woman realizes that if Christ can do this, He is a greater person than Jacob.

13-15. Christ continues by stating that if one drinks of Jacob's well, he will need to drink again, but if one drinks of Christ's well, he shall never thirst. This water produces a well that keeps on bubbling into everlasting life. With this statement, Christ appeals to the woman's craving for satisfaction. The woman is still thinking on the physical level. She wanted this living water so that she would not have to come all the way out to Jacob's well every day.

16. Christ commands her to call her husband. It would seem the Lord changed the subject. That is not true. In order for the woman to understand the living water (4:10) concept, she must be aware of her need for that living water. Christ now begins to arouse her conscience and sense of guilt. Before anyone can be saved, he must see his need of salvation and be convicted of his sin.

17-20. Christ reveals her sinful condition. She was morally bankrupt. She acknowledges Christ as a prophet, and in so doing admits her personal sin which Christ revealed. The woman now desires to be taught by the prophet. Should she worship in Mount Gerizim or in Jerusalem?

Jesus' Visits to Jerusalem

salem is the place where men ought to worship.

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

22 Ye worship ye know not what: we know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews.

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him.

24 God is a Spirit: and they that wor-

21-23. The hour cometh. Christ reveals to the woman that where a person worships is unimportant. It is not limited to Mount Gerizim or Jerusalem. The Samaritans worshiped what they did not know; they had created their own religion. The Jews had divine guidelines for worship. Nevertheless, the hour cometh, and now is when God is to be worshiped in spirit and in truth. Two separate concepts are implied. The worship of the Father is not confined to a place but is rather an action of the heart. Second, all worship must be in keeping with the truth of God's revealed Word.

24. God is a Spirit. Spirit, the predicate, is mentioned first to ship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

25 The woman saith unto him, I know that Mes-si'as cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, he will tell us all things.

26 Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee am he.

27 ¶And upon this came his disciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman: yet no man said, What seekest thou? or, Why talkest thou with her?

28 The woman then left her waterpot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men, 29 Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 ¶In the mean while his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

33 Therefore said the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work.

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.

36 And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together.

37 And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth.

38 I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours.

39 ¶And many of the Sa-mār'i-tanś of that city believed on him for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did.

40 So when the Sa-mār'i-tanś were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them: and he abode there two days.

41 And many more believed because of his own word:

42 And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

43 ¶Now after two days he departed thence, and went into Galilee.

44 For Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.

45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galilæans received him, having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast: for they also went unto the feast.

46 So Jesus came again into Cana of emphasize the spiritual character of God. Notice the emphasis on the "must" of that type of worship.

25. The knowledge of Christ causes the woman to talk about the Messiah (Deut 18:15-16). She is still confused and resolves this confusion by admitting that the Messiah will tell us all things.

26. I that speak unto thee am he. The woman claimed that the only person who could answer her questions and doubt was the Messiah. What a surprise! This type of messianic revelation would have been dangerous in Jerusalem, but in this setting at the well, He deemed it safe. The Samaritan woman first saw a Jew, then a prophet, and finally the Messiah.

27-30. At that decisive moment, the disciples returned and were amazed that their Master broke tradition in speaking with the woman. The woman left her waterpot, showing her intention to return, and went to the men proclaiming the news about a man, which told me all things that ever I did. The question was not assertive but rather she herself wanted an answer. Is not this the Christ? The men went out to see.

31-34. The disciples want their Master to eat. Christ replies that His meat, that which gives Him spiritual nourishment and satisfaction, was to do the will of the Father and finish (or bring to completion) his work.

35. He impresses the urgency of God's work on the disciples. Do not wait four months to harvest, Lift up your eyes, . . . they are white already to harvest. Christ was referring to the crowd of Samaritans now approaching them. The soul-harvest is a matter of immediate urgency.

36-38. In the spiritual harvest of souls, one soweth and one reapeth, but both are able to rejoice in the harvest. Christ had sowed the seed, and now the disciples were ready to reap. Other people have laboured, that is, planted seeds, and soul-winners reap the benefits of their labors.

39-42. The fruit was harvested and many believed. The response caused the Samaritans to invite Christ to stay and He remained two days. Afterwards, many more believed. It was concluded that Christ was the Savior of the world—that is, for Jews, Samaritans, and Gentiles.

43-45. Christ returned to Galilee where He was not honored and respected like He was in Judæa. Those who had seen all the things in Jerusalem received (welcomed) Him.

2. Nobleman's son healed. 4:46-54.

46. While in Cana, a nobleman (Gr basilikos, royal officer)

Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Ca-per'na-um.

47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judæa into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought him that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth.

52 Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour, in the which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: and himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again the second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judæa into Galilee.

whose son was sick visited Him with a problem. It was a serious sickness at the point of death (4:47).

47-48. The royal officer was under two false impressions about the power of Christ. He thought Christ would have to travel to Capernaum to heal, and that Christ did not have power over death (ere my child die). Christ was concerned that the man's faith was based only on signs and wonders.

49-50. The nobleman compelled Christ to act, and Christ simply spoke the word. The man responded with a faith in the word of Christ and not the miracles of Christ. And he went his way. Faith is leaving our problem with Christ, accepting His Word, and going on our way.

51-53. The man returned and was met by his servants who brought news of the child's recovery. He recovered the same hour in which Christ spoke the word. The result was that the entire house believed or placed their trust and confidence in Christ.

54. This was the second miracle in Cana. The first miracle of turning the water into wine showed His power over the physical universe and His disciples believed. The second miracle proved that Christ's power was not limited by a distance of sixteen miles, and the entire house of the nobleman believed. Both miracles produced belief and life (20:30-31).

E. Christ as the Son of God. 5:1-47.

In this chapter Christ performs a miracle of healing on the Sabbath. He is questioned by the Pharisees and answers their criticism in a lengthy discussion proving Himself to be the Son of God.

1. Healing of lame man. 5:1-18.

5:1. There was a feast. Since the Greek definite article is missing, this feast was probably not the Passover. It could have been the Feast of Tabernacles.

2. Near the sheep gate there was a pool. There has been much debate over the location of this pool. In 1880 a painting depicting an angel troubling the water was discovered on the wall of the Church of St. Anne in Jerusalem. This discovery marked the site of the pool of Bethesda.

3-4. By this pool there lay a group of sick people waiting for the moving of the water. All the oldest manuscripts were copied without the latter part of verse 3 and all of verse 4.

5. Because the man had been sick for thirty-eight years does not mean that he had been at the pool for that length of time.

6. Note the three verbs: Jesus saw, Jesus knew, Jesus saith. Jesus sees each need, knows the depth of that need, and addresses Himself to meet that need. Christ's question seeks to probe the man's will to be healed.

7-8. Note the three verbs, Rise, take up, walk. The first verb symbolizes spiritual healing (salvation). The second verb symbolizes a break with the past (picking up the bed), and the last verb symbolizes Christian growth (walking on).

9. Obedience brought complete and instantaneous healing.

CHAPTER 5

AFTER this there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheep market a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Be-thēs'da, having five porches.

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water.

4 For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever then first after the troubling of the water stepped in was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

8 Jesus saith unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

9 And immediately the man was

JOHN 5:10

made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and on the same day was the sabbath.

10 ¶The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath day: it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away, a multitude being in that place.

14 Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.

15 The man departed, and told the Jews that it was Jesus, which had made him whole.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath day.

17 ¶But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.

18 Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father, making himself equal with God.

19 ¶Then answered Jesus and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.

20 For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel.

21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

22 For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.

25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself;

27 And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.

28 Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice,

29 And shall come forth; they that

The same day was the sabbath. This phrase becomes the controversial issue that upsets the Jews.

10-14. They referred to the Old Testament law (Ex 20; Jer 17:19-27). The man replied that anyone who could heal him instantaneously and completely also had the authority to tell him to carry his bed. The Jews did not ask, "Who healed you?" but rather, "Who told you to do this on the Sabbath?" The man did not know who healed him, and meanwhile, Christ had disappeared. The man goes to the Temple (probably to give thanks for healing) and meets Christ, who tells him not to continue in sin lest a worse thing come unto thee. Christ does not insinuate that he was sick thirty-eight years because of sin, but rather since his sins were forgiven, he must walk in a new life.

15. The man told the Jews that Jesus healed him. He did not answer their questions concerning the Sabbath.

16. Persecute Jesus. This verb (Gr diōkō) refers to continued hostile activity even to the point of death (sought to slay him).

17-18. Christ answers by establishing His authority to work on the Sabbath. He was coequal with God the Father. The Jews were angered even more by this statement and sought the more to kill him.

2. Defense of His person. 5:19-47.

19-24. Christ continues His claim to be equal with God. He states that whatever he seeth the Father do, He does also. Because of the Father's love, the Father sheweth him all things. Consequently, all that the Father doeth, the Son doeth. Christ claims that the Father will show Him greater works than the healing of the impotent man.

Two of the greater works are listed: the raising of the dead and the pronouncing of judgment. The raising of the dead refers both to a physical and spiritual accomplishment. The former occurs through resurrection and the latter through regeneration. Second, the Father does not set apart from the Son in pronouncing judgment, but has committed all judgment unto the Son. The raising of the dead and the judgment are closely related eschatological matters. One day all the dead will be raised to stand before Christ in judgment (the saved through the rapture to the Bema Judgment, and unsaved through the final resurrection to the Great White Throne Judgment, Rom 14:10; Rev 20:11-15). The father committed all judgment unto the Son so that the Son would be equal in honor with the Father. Note also that the Son is equal in character (17-18), in works (19-22), and in honor (23). If a person accepts Christ's word and believes in the Father, even now he is passed from death unto life (spiritual resurrection) and shall not come into condemnation (judgment).

25-27. These verses discuss the power of Christ to quicken the dead now. Because the Son hath life in himself (like the Father), the Son gives this life to those dead who hear His voice.

28-30. These verses discuss the future aspect (the hour is coming) of Christ's quickening power. Here physical resurrection is discussed, and two results are listed: the good unto the resurrection of life and the evil, unto the resurrection of have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.

30 I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

31 If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true.

32 There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

33 Ye sent unto John, and he bare witness unto the truth.

34 But I receive not testimony from man: but these things I say, that ye might be saved.

35 He was a burning and a shining light: and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

36 But I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.

37 And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape.

38 And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

39 Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.

40 And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.

41 I receive not honour from men.

42 But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you.

43 I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

44 How can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, and seek not the honour that cometh from God only?

45 Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father: there is one that accuseth you, even Moses in whom ye trust.

46 For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me.

47 But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?

damnation. Again, the perfect harmony and unity of the Father and Son relationship is discussed.

31-32. Christ has made the claim to be equal with God. He recognizes that the Jews would not formally accept the claim (witness) of one person. Jewish law required two witnesses. On the basis of one witness, Christ states that the Jews would accept that witness as not true. In the remaining verses, Christ calls several witnesses to establish validity for His claim: John the Baptist (vss. 33-35), His works (vs. 36), the Father (vss. 37-38), the Scriptures (vss. 39-47).

33-36. John's testimony is given in 1:19-28. Christ Himself did not need John's testimony, but He mentions it because it was true and if accepted one could be saved. John was a burning and shining light. However, although people were willing . . . to rejoice in his light, they were not willing to accept his testimonies concerning Christ. Nevertheless, Christ had greater witness than that of John. His works (miracles) gave evidence to His deity. They were evidence that the Father hath sent me (Gr apostellō, to commission, send on a divine mission).

37-38. Christ continues with another testimony, that of His Father. This testimony refers both to what was said by the Father at Christ's baptism (Mk 1:11), and to what the Father had said through the Old Testament Scriptures. Christ reminds them that they had neither heard his voice . . . nor seen his shape. The voice of God and the shape (image, likeness) of God are Christ Himself (14:19, 24; II Cor 4:4). They did not have His word abiding in them (as a permanent possession).

39. Search the scriptures. This is not necessarily a command. It may be taken as the Greek present indicative and could be translated "ye are searching." The Jews were constantly searching the Scriptures because it was recognized that they contained the secret of eternal life. These same Scriptures bear testimony of Christ. Yet these pious Jews had missed the very key to understanding Scripture—Christ (Jn 5:46; I Pet 1:10-11).

40-43. Because of their hardness of heart, they had rejected Christ. Christ does not receive honor (glory or praise) from men, because God's love (lit., love for God) is not in them. Christ had come in the authority of His Father with mighty miracles to prove His deity. They rejected Him. If one comes in his own name, him ye will receive. This was proved in that the Jews accepted false messiahs such as Theudas and Judas of Galilee (Acts 5:36-37). They will also accept antichrist (II Thess 2:8-10).

44-47. The Jews could not believe because they derived praise from each other rather than praise from God. The name Jew means "praised." The Jews had the utmost confidence in Moses and his writings. They claimed to be Moses' disciples (9:28), and yet they did not accept what Moses had said (Deut 18:15-18). If they had accepted Moses' writings, they would have accepted Christ, for he wrote of me. Moses' writing and Christ's words are both placed on the same level, divinely inspired and inerrant.

F. Christ as the Bread of Life. 6:1-71.

In this chapter Christ reaches the height of His popularity. Because of His power to meet physical needs, the people wanted to make Him king. However, when they realized that His ministry was spiritual, they rejected Him. Such are the events of this chapter.

CHAPTER 6

AFTER these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

5 When Jesus then lifted up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

6 And this he said to prove him: for he himself knew what he would do.

7 Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, 9 There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?

10 And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves; and when he had given thanks, he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12 When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

13 Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14 ¶Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.

15 When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himself alone.

16 ¶And when even was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea,

17 And entered into a ship, and went over the sea toward Ca-per-na-um. And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.

18 And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship; and they were afraid.

20 But he saith unto them, It is I; be not afraid.

21 Then they willingly received him into the ship; and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went.

1. Feeding of the five thousand. 6:1-14.

6:1-9. Christ went across the Sea of Galilee to the vicinity of Bethsaida (Lk 9:10). The multitudes, impressed by His miracles, followed Him. Jesus went up into a mountain. From His high vantage point, Christ observed the crowd approaching and asked Philip if they had bread for the people to eat. Bread (Gr artos, flat, round bread like the shape of pancakes). Christ explained why He asked this question—to prove him (Gr peirazō, to put him to the test). The Lord knew what he would do and is now putting Philip's faith to the test (Jas 1:2). A pennyworth (Gr dēnarios) was equivalent to one day's wages (Mt 20:2, 9, 13). Philip claims that two hundred days of wages would not be enough to give each a little. Andrew brings a lad (not necessarily a little boy) who has five barley loaves, and two small fishes. Andrew recognizes that this is so little to meet the need of so many. One commentator describes the problem this way: "Duty is not measured by ability, and ability is not measured by the sum-total of our resources" (J. D. Jones, The Gospel According to St. Mark, Scripture Truth).

10-11. Christ now takes command of the situation and has everyone sit down. The Lord gave thanks. Note the prayer of thanksgiving occurs before the miracle. The miracle provided as much as they would, whereas Philip's faith was so little.

12-14. The sufficiency of the miracle did not mean waste. All the leftovers were to be collected that nothing be lost. One should never waste God's blessings. The people saw the miracle (Gr sēmeion, sign) and were impressed. They proclaimed Him as that prophet (Deut 18:15-18) and probably thought Him to be the Messiah.

2. Walking on the water. 6:15-21.

15. Enthusiastic about this prophet, they are ready to make Him king, even to the point of kidnapping Him. But Christ's kingdom was not of this world (18:36). Thus He went into a mountain himself alone.

16-18. The disciples put out to sea, but were hindered by the darkness and by a great wind that blew. The wind would blow strongly through the narrow gorges between the hills causing severe storms.

19-21. They rowed twenty or thirty furlongs (Gr stadion), about a total of three or four miles. They saw Christ walking toward them on the water. The One who had fed five thousand was about to meet the needs of these twelve disciples. It is I; be not afraid (present imperative, "stop being afraid"). Matthew describes Peter's walking on the water (Mt 14:28-31). Although the disciples were far from the land when Jesus entered the boat, another miracle occurred: immediately (Gr euthēōs) the ship was at the land. Christ demonstrated His power over gravity (walking on the water), over the storm (stilling the winds), and over space (bringing the ship to land).

3. Sermon on the Bread of Life. 6:22-59.

22 ¶The day following, when the people which stood on the other side of the sea saw that there was none other boat there, save that one whereinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone;

23 (Howbeit there came other boats from Ti-be'-ri-as nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks:)

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Ca-per'na-um, seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed.

28 Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

30 They said therefore unto him, What sign shewest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31 Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

34 Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

35 And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

36 But I said unto you, That ye also have seen me, and believe not.

37 All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.

38 For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have ever-

22-25. The day following, those who had been fed by Jesus began looking for Him. Since they knew He did not cross the lake with His disciples, they were puzzled at His disappearing. They began a search that ended in Capernaum and they asked Christ, when camest thou hither? These people still had the desire to make Christ king.

26. Christ rebuked their motives. He stated that although the people had seen the signs, they had not accepted them for what they were (proof of His true messiahship), and they were only interested in the physical.

27. Labor not (Gr present imperative, "stop working for") the physical bread which perisheth. Rather, they should work for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, or work for the real food which produces everlasting life. That food is Christ Himself. His authority to give everlasting life rested in the seal (testimony) of the Father through His signs and miracles.

28-31. These people are confused. Christ offered to give them eternal life and they wanted to know what to do. Christ answered that acceptance with God or the work of God was to believe on him. The work is not something man does for God, but it is the act of receiving what God has done for man. The Jews ask for a sign to prove that they should believe on him. This shows what the Jews were thinking. They knew that Christ had made more bread out of already existing bread. Their claim was that Moses had done greater miracles than Christ; he had brought bread from heaven. Now, if Christ wanted these Jews to believe on him, He had better perform a greater sign than Moses.

32-35. Christ explains that the manna which Moses gave is of different character than the true bread. The true bread is a person, he which cometh, and is capable of giving life. The Jews want this bread, but they still think it is merely physical bread much like Moses' manna. Christ identifies Himself as the bread of life. The life spoken of is spiritual and not physical. To partake of this life means that one's spiritual hunger and thirst will be fully satisfied. Note the verbs cometh and believeth, indicating salvation.

36-38. They had seen Him but had not believed. All who were given (Gr pas, with participle; lit., Everything which the Father gives to me will come to me) describes God's sovereignty in salvation. Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out emphasizes human responsibility. Here Christ emphasizes the unity of the Father's will and the Son's will. To reject the Son is to reject the Father.

39-40. The Father's will revealed is the preservation of those who believe. A person cannot fall from grace. Everlasting life guarantees security because this is the Father's will. No one will be lost. Note the following references: Romans 8:29-30; Philip- pians 1:6; II Timothy 2:19; I Peter 1:4-5.

JOHN 6:41

lasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

46 Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

48 I am that bread of life.

49 Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead.

50 This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

51 I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

54 Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

56 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

58 This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

59 These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Ca-per'na-um.

60 Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is an hard saying; who can hear it?

61 When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

62 What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

63 It is the spirit that quickeneth; the

41-42. The Jews murmured (Gr songuzō, whispered) at these unusual claims of Christ. From a human perspective, Christ could not have descended from heaven because these people knew His human heritage. The Jews are almost cynical in their attitude. "Why, we have known you from your childhood, and now you make these ridiculous claims expecting us to believe in you."

43-44. Christ returns to His message of life. In order for a person to come to the Bread of Life, the Father must draw him. This verb (Gr helkuō) is also translated draw in the sense of "dragged" (Acts 16:19; 21:30). People cannot be saved at all unless God through the Holy Spirit draws them.

45-47. Christ describes this drawing process. It is accomplished through the Bible. When a man hears and learns, he comes to the Father. Salvation is impossible apart from hearing the Word of God. It is through this preaching that God draws people to Himself (Isa 54:13). The learning does not mean complete knowledge of the Father; this complete knowledge is only for the Son.

48. See notes on verse 35.

49-50. Moses' manna was not eternal (see vss. 32-35). In contrast to Moses' manna, this true Bread will not let man die.

51. Christ further describes this Bread. It is His flesh. He clearly refers to His vicarious death on the cross that will provide life for the world.

52. The Jews are still thinking of eating physical food rather than spiritual food.

53-54. Christ complicates the situation further by adding except ye . . . drink his blood. The Jews were forbidden to drink blood (Lev 7:26-27) and this additional statement must have added insult to injury. However, the Jews misunderstood. Leviticus 17:11 clearly states that life is in the blood. Accepting the sacrifice of the body and blood of Christ is the basis for eternal life.

55-58. As food and drink are offered to meet physical needs, so the flesh (meat) and blood of Christ are offered to meet spiritual needs. To assimilate this spiritual bread and drink is to be affected both spiritually (life) and physically (raised in the last day).

59. This message was preached at the synagogue in Capernaum.

4. Many turn away. 6:60-71.

60. The disciples were offended by the thought of eating Christ's flesh and drinking His blood (hard saying). These disciples are a general group larger than the Twelve.

61-62. Christ asks them if they would accept the fact that He came from heaven when they see Him return to heaven.

63. Christ now explains. He did not intend for them to eat flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.

64 But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

65 And he said, Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

66 ¶From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

67 Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

68 Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life.

69 And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

70 Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?

71 He spake of Judas Iscariot the son of Simon: for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

CHAPTER 7

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him.

2 ¶Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

3 His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judæa, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest.

4 For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou do these things, shew thyself to the world.

5 For neither did his brethren believe in him.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, My time is not yet come: but your time is always ready.

7 The world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast; for my time is not yet full come.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

10 ¶But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.

11 Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

12 And there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for physically of His flesh; that would profit nothing. Rather, it is His spirit (person) which gives life. The words He spoke were spirit and life. They were not dead, but they carried the potential of producing life. Accept what He said (His words) and they would have life.

64-65. Unbelief stopped people from coming to Him. They did not accept His words and, consequently, they would not draw to Him (cf. vs. 44).

66. Many of those who were impressed by the signs now left Christ because of their unbelief.

67. Christ turns to the Twelve and wants to know if they will also go away. This question is phrased in such a way as to expect a negative answer.

68. Peter had understood the teaching of his Master. The message of Christ was not dead words to Peter, but they were full of spirit and life and were the words of eternal life.

69. We believe and are sure. Peter had partaken of the Bread of Life and had assurance of that belief. Assurance always follows true salvation (I Jn 5:13). Peter proclaims Jesus as the Christ (the anointed, holy, and chosen One).

70-71. Jesus knows that not all the Twelve have accepted Him. One was a devil (Gr diabolos, slanderer, false accuser).

The chapter ends differently than it begins. It begins with the crowds wanting to make Him king and closes with Christ questioning whether His Twelve will leave Him, as everyone else. The Twelve affirm their confidence through Peter, but even one of them is a devil and will eventually betray the Bread of Life.

G. Christ as the Master Teacher. 7:1-53.

1. Teaching concerning His person. 7:1-36.

7:1-5. After these things. After many people had forsaken Him (6:66), Christ remained in Galilee because of a Jewish plot to kill him (5:18). The Feast of Tabernacles was a harvest feast which commemorated the years of wilderness wandering. His brethren. His brothers (James, Joseph, Simeon, and Judas) perceived that Christ should go to the feast and exert His influence by performing mighty works. Their desire was that Jesus would impress all the people at the feast openly. They gave this bad advice because they themselves had not believed in the spiritual ministry of the Messiah. They wanted someone who would unite the Jewish people and establish a kingdom.

6-7. Christ's time to go to the feast had not yet come. He knew that if He would go, the Jews would kill Him, and that time had not yet come. The world (people separated from God) could not hate Christ's brethren because they were part of that world. They hated Christ for His message that exposed sin.

8-9. My time is not yet fully come. Christ's time to go to Jerusalem and be crucified had not yet become full. He had no desire to gain popularity and influence people with His works.

10-13. The Lord eventually went to the feast in secret (that is, without public fanfare). Perhaps He traveled the back roads with only His twelve disciples. The Jews refers to the religious hierarchy. Where is he? They had hostile intentions (15:18). The people were divided in their opinion of Christ. Some thought Him a good man (moral, honest), while others thought He was a deceiver (interested only in leading people astray).

JOHN 7:13

some said, He is a good man: others said, Nay; but he deceiveth the people.

13 Howbeit no man spake openly of him for fear of the Jews.

14 ¶Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?

16 Jesus answered them, and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17 If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory: but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me?

20 The people answered and said, Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

22 Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision; (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers;) and ye on the sabbath day circumcise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath day receive circumcision, that the law of Moses should not be broken; are ye angry at me, because I have made a man every whit whole on the sabbath day?

24 Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

25 Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he, whom they seek to kill?

26 But, lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit we know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple as he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am: and I am not come of myself, but he that sent me is true, whom ye know not.

29 But I know him: for I am from him, and he hath sent me.

30 Then they sought to take him: but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come.

31 And many of the people believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

32 ¶The Pharisees heard that the people murmured such things concerning him; and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.

33 Then said Jesus unto them, Yet a

Because the Jewish hierarchy had not stated their opinion, the people feared expulsion from the synagogue if their open opinion conflicted with the Sanhedrin.

14-16. Halfway through the feast, Christ went to the Temple and began to teach. The Jews were outraged at His boldness and objected to His teaching. They were amazed that He could be educated without ever having studied formally. Christ establishes a higher authority for His teaching than Jewish schools: God the Father.

17-18. To understand His teaching, one must have the desire to do the will of God. With this commitment a person could evaluate the authenticity of Christ's teaching. This person would also realize that Christ was not seeking his own glory but rather the glory of the One who sent Him.

19-20. To do God's will is to obey God's law. Christ is saying that these Jews had not kept the law, and consequently, they were not doing God's will. Therefore they were not in a position to properly evaluate His message. In fact, they wanted to break the sixth commandment by killing Christ. The people are unaware that the leaders have plotted to kill Christ, and they assume that Christ is insane: Thou hast a devil.

21. One work. The healing of the impotent man on the Sabbath, recorded in chapter 5, caused them to plot His death (5:18).

22-23. Christ appeals to the Jewish rite of circumcision which could be performed on the Sabbath. If that work of ceremonial cleansing could be performed on the Sabbath, then a work of complete healing should also be performed. The Jews had no logical answer for this convicting question.

24. Christ tells them to stop judging on the surface. Judge righteous (just) judgment.

25. The attitude of the Sanhedrin is found in verse 15, the attitude of the pilgrims in verse 20, and now the Jerusalemites who are aware of the leaders' plot react to Christ.

26. They are amazed that Christ spoke boldly (openly), and for a moment think that perhaps the rulers have been convinced that He is the Messiah.

27. The idea was quickly dismissed since they believed that the Messiah would appear suddenly, but everyone knew that Jesus came from Nazareth. The true Messiah, according to the leaders, would come from Bethlehem.

28-29. Christ acknowledges their opinion about his earthly home. However, they were unaware of His divine origin. The Lord thoroughly knows the Father who sent Him. The Jerusalemites did not accept Him as the true Messiah.

30-31. Because of these divine claims with regard to origin, they were anxious to arrest Him. However, His hour of divine appointment had not yet come, and all the hatred and plots of the Jews could not harm Him. Many believed on Him (Gr construction indicates saving faith) on the basis of His miracles.

32-34. The leaders have had enough. People are actually accepting this Jesus as the Messiah, and the leaders decide to apprehend Him. Christ indicates that in a little while (about six months or the time between the Feast of Tabernacles and the Passover) He would return to the Father. The Jewish nation little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.

34 Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me; and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?

36 What manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me; and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

37 ¶In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink.

38 He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet.

41 Others said, This is the Christ. But some said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 Hath not the scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was?

43 So there was a division among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

45 ¶Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46 The officers answered, Never man spake like this man.

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?

48 Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?

49 But this people who knoweth not the law are cursed.

50 Nic-o-dē'mus saith unto them, (he that came to Jesus by night, being one of them.)

51 Doth our law judge any man, before it hear him, and know what he doeth?

52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.

53 And every man went unto his own house.

would then seek Him but their search would be in vain. They could not go to the Father, because in rejecting Him they had rejected the Father.

35-36. The Jews did not understand the spiritual meaning of Christ's statement. They thought that after Christ's failure in Judaea, He would go to the dispersed (Jews who lived around the world) and teach the Gentiles (Gr hellēn, Greeks). Unknowingly, these leaders had uttered a true prophecy. Christ, through His disciples, would spread His message around the world.

2. Teaching concerning the Holy Spirit. 7:37-39.

37. The last day. The seventh or eighth day of the feast. During the feast, a priest would fill a golden pitcher with water from the pool of Siloam and carry it to the altar at the Temple where he would pour it through a funnel leading to the base of the altar. Probably, after this ceremony, Christ invited those who thirsted to come to Him and drink. The emptiness of Judaism is emphasized in that it fails to satisfy.

38. The one who believes not only gets satisfied (vs. 37), but also that person becomes a channel of blessing to others; out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water (Isa 44:3, 4; 55:1-2).

39. This indwelling blessing would be available through the Holy Spirit after Christ was glorified (ascended into Heaven). The Spirit in the Old Testament came upon people, but Christ promised that the Spirit would come to live in people.

3. Division of people. 7:40-53.

40. Christ's invitation is responded to in different ways. Some thought He was a prophet.

41-42. Some thought He was the Messiah. Others said He could not be the Messiah because the Messiah was predicted to come from Beth-lehem. They were correct about this, but they were incorrect in that they assumed Christ was born in Galilee. Consequently, their conclusion that Christ was not the Messiah was also wrong.

43-44. There was division among the people.

45-46. The group whom the Pharisees sent to arrest Christ returned without Him. They were overwhelmed by the message and manner of Christ and were powerless to apprehend Him.

47-49. The Pharisees were mad and sought to instruct officers that an intellectual and spiritual leader would not believe in Christ. Only those who knoweth not God's law are deceived. They describe these people as cursed, the scum of society.

50-52. Nicodemus . . . being one of them, that is, being one of the rulers that were violating the law in judging a man without hearing him. They ignored Nicodemus' question and told him that if he would search the Scriptures, he would discover that no prophet had ever come out of Galilee. This again shows their ignorance of the Scripture, since Jonah, Nahum, and Hosea came from Galilee.

53. The Sanhedrin adjourns and the people go home.

H. Christ as the Light of the World. 8:1-9:41.

There has been debate over the authenticity of this story of the woman taken in adultery. Many older manuscripts do not include it. However, it is included in the AV and will be dealt with here.

CHAPTER 8

JESUS went unto the mount of Olives.

2 And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them.

3 And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst,

4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5 Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?

6 This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7 So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

10 When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more.

12 ¶Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

14 Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true: for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.

15 Ye judge after the flesh; I judge no man.

16 And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.

17 It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.

18 I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me.

19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, Ye neither know me, nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20 These words spake Jesus in the treasury, as he taught in the temple: and no man laid hands on him; for his hour was not yet come.

1. Adulterous woman forgiven. 8:1-11.

8:1-6. These verses are closely connected to 7:53. When everyone went home, Jesus went unto the mount of Olives. Afterward He returned to the Temple to teach. The scribes and Pharisees brought to Christ a woman who had been caught in adultery. The Feast of Tabernacles had just been celebrated and acts of immorality during that festive week were not unusual. The scribes attempted to put Christ in a dilemma. If He answered that the woman should be stoned, He would be violating the Roman law which forbade such acts. If He answered that she should not be stoned, He would be violating Moses' law (Deut 22:24). They did this to tempt Him (Gr peirazo, "to entice to sin").

There are several theories about what Christ wrote on the ground. First, that He wrote the sins of the scribes and Pharisees. Second, that He wrote the Ten Commandments. Third, that He wrote a message to the Pharisees.

7-8. After pressing the issue, Christ answered the accusers. In answering, He did not abolish Moses' law; rather, He applied that law to the lives of those who had accused the woman. Again, He wrote on the ground and silence convicted the crowd.

9-11. They left, probably not out of conviction, but rather they had been defeated in their attempt to trap the Son of God. The sinner is left alone with the only person who was perfect and able to condemn her. In mercy and love, He forgave her and told her to go, and sin no more.

2. Sermon on the Light of the World. 8:12-59.

12. Following the incident of the adulterous woman Christ made His second "I am" statement: I am the light of the world. Christ shines as the Light in the world of darkness and sin. He that followeth. If one accepts and trusts the leading of that Light, he . . . shall have the light of life.

13-14. The Pharisees objected to Christ's testimony because all testimonies must be substantiated by witness. Christ knew His origin and no man could testify to that. Consequently, the Pharisees could not disprove His testimony.

15-16. Christ accused the Pharisees of judging from an external perspective. I judge no man. Although Christ had perfect knowledge, He came, not to judge, but to save (3:17-18). If I judge. Those who reject the saving ministry of Christ must be judged, and they will be judged correctly. It is judgment from both the Father and Son.

17-18. The law required two witnesses (Deut 17:6). Two men. Two human witnesses. If the law required two human witnesses for accuracy, how much more dependable is the witness of two divine persons, the Father and the Son.

19-20. The Jews had rejected Christ and in doing so had rejected the Father. His hour was not yet come (see 7:30).

21 Then said Jesus again unto them, I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins: whither I go, ye cannot come.

22 Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come.

23 And he said unto them, Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world.

24 I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.

26 I have many things to say and to judge of you: but he that sent me is true; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 They understood not that he spake to them of the Father.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

29 And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.

30 As he spake these words, many believed on him.

31 Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed;

32 And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

33 They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

35 And the servant abideth not in the house for ever: but the Son abideth ever.

36 If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 I know that ye are Abraham's seed; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.

38 I speak that which I have seen with my Father: and ye do that which ye have seen with your father.

39 They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

40 But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.

41 Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; we have one Father, even God.

42 Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I

21-22. Again, Jesus pronounces the sentence on those who reject Him (7:33-34). I go my way, refers to His going back to the Father. Those who had rejected Him would die in their sins and would not be able to be with Christ and the Father. The Jews ignored His message to them and wondered what was going to happen to Christ.

23-24. The Jews who rejected Him were from a different world than Christ. Note the contrast: from beneath and from above. Failure to accept Christ is the basis for everlasting death (3:36).

25. Who art thou? (lit., "You, who are you?"). These Jews were blind and deaf. Christ had made it clear Who He was.

26-27. Christ had many things to tell them which would add to their judgment. Those things were true because He received them from the Father. The Jews were blinded by prejudice and unbelief. Christ had clearly explained on several occasions that the Father had sent Him (5:36-37), and yet they did not accept it.

28-29. When ye have lifted up. This refers to the cross and eventually to the glory that would follow. Then, they would know that Christ was the Messiah and that He and the Father were in agreement (Phil 2:9-11).

30-31. Many believed. The test of their true faith is given in the conditional clause, If ye continue in my word. This is not the basis of true faith, but rather the result. This is true discipleship.

32-33. Abiding in His Word gives greater knowledge of the truth and sets one free from sin (vss. 34-35, 37). They appeal to their religious heritage. They are not like the heathen who are in bondage to idolatry; they are Abraham's seed.

34-35. Christ eliminates the segregation of Jew and heathen, and declares that Whosoever is continually committing sin is the slave of sin. The slave is temporary and can be sold at any time. The son, who is related to the master, lives in the house for ever. Israel, as the slave, had the temporary blessing of God's house.

36-37. Everyone who wants freedom must be emancipated by the Son (cf. the Son with the truth in vs. 32). Even though these people had the advantages of being Abraham's seed, they desired to kill the One Abraham rejoiced to see (8:56). Their hearts were so filled with hatred that they had no place for Christ's word.

38. Note the contrast between my Father and your father. He would eventually tell them who their father was (8:44).

39. These people claimed Abraham as their father. Christ gives a logical sequence of statements. Given the assumption that they were Abraham's children, they would do the works of Abraham (he believed in God, Gen 15:6).

40. However, these people wanted to kill Christ. Such works were not characteristic of Abraham; consequently, these people were not Abraham's children.

41. They did have a father. We be not born of fornication. The We is emphasized. This is an insinuation that Jesus was illegitimate and that they were truly of God the Father.

42-43. Christ refutes this claim on the basis that they did not love Him. Their lack of spiritual understanding was attributed proceeded forth and came from God; neither came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word.

44 Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

46 Which of you convinceth me of sin? And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?

47 He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

48 Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well that thou art a Sa-mār'i-tan, and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered, I have not a devil; but I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

50 And I seek not mine own glory: there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death.

53 Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makest thou thyself?

54 Jesus answered, If I honour myself, my honour is nothing: it is my Father that honoureth me; of whom ye say, that he is your God:

55 Yet ye have not known him; but I know him: and if I should say, I know him not, I shall be a liar like unto you: but I know him, and keep his saying.

56 Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad.

57 Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am.

59 Then took they up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

CHAPTER 9

AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?

3 Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

to the fact that they cannot hear my word. They could not because they had totally rejected Him.

44-45. Christ now identifies their father the devil. Physically, they were Abraham's children, but spiritually, they were the devil's children. They were acting like the devil. He was a murderer and they wanted to murder Christ. He abode not in the truth and they had rejected the truth. He is the father of lies. Since these people were the sons of a liar, they rejected the truth.

46-47. Christ substantiates His claim to be speaking the truth on the premise that no one could charge Him with sin. Why do ye not believe me? Christ answers His own question. They had rejected Christ because of their relationship to the devil. They were not of God.

48-51. Angered by the implications of Christ's accusations, they struck back by accusing Christ of being a demon-possessed Samaritan and not a true Jew. Such an accusation dishonored the Father and would result in judgment. To keep means to accept and rest upon. To those who did this was the promise of not seeing death.

52-53. The Jews state that now they know He has a demon, after all, every one of the great men of the Old Testament had died. This must disprove Christ's promise that whoever would keep His word would not die. Their conclusion: the word of Christ was not true.

54-55. Christ answers their question by claiming that He does not seek glory for Himself, but for the Father. If He states that He does not know the Father, He will be a liar like the Jews.

56-58. The joy of Abraham refers to the birth of Isaac. Abraham saw in Isaac the hope of mankind and the promise of a Messiah. He saw the promise afar off (Heb 11:13). Limited to physical understanding, the Jews could not comprehend how Christ saw Abraham. Christ now makes the strongest statement of this entire dialogue. Before Abraham existed, I am. Christ was from eternity and was the great "I AM" (Ex 3:14).

59. Angered by Christ's accusation that they belonged to the devil and that Christ was God, they attempted to kill Him. They were only doing the works of their father, the devil (8:44).

3. Application of sermon by healing blind man. 9:1-41.

This entire chapter illustrates the Light of the World in action as He reaches into the darkness of one man's life, opens his eyes, and sets him free.

9:1-2. Christ is confronted with a man which was blind from his birth. The disciples immediately raise a theological question. Was the blindness a result of the man's sin or his parents' sin? A common belief among the Jews was that physical sickness directly resulted from sin (Ex 20:5).

3-7. Christ is looking to the future, not the past. The blindness gave opportunity for God's power to be manifested. I (probably Gr "We") must work the works. The disciples had asked the question, "Why?" but Jesus was interested in 4 I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

6 When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,

7 And said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Si-lō'am, (which is by interpretation, Sent.) He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

8 ¶The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9 Some said, This is he: others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he.

10 Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11 He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Si-lō'am, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12 Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13 ¶They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14 And it was the sabbath day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16 Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

17 They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, He is a prophet.

18 But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19 And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20 His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind:

21 But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

22 These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

24 Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God the praise: we know that this man is a sinner.

25 He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not: one

“What?” What could be done for the man’s need? This statement is the premise for the action that is about to follow. No explanation is given as to why Christ chose this method in healing the blind man. He was probably testing the blind man’s faith and obedience. Christ sent him to Siloam and told him to wash. This story is similar to that of Naaman. However, the blind man responded immediately and was healed.

8-9. There is confusion over the man’s identity. The miracle had changed the man’s appearance. Finally, the man said, I am he.

10-12. Having been assured that it really is the man who was blind, the next logical question was how he had received his sight. The man related the story and the neighbors responded by wanting to know the location of Jesus.

13-14. Because the man had been healed on the Sabbath, the neighbors took him to the Pharisees. To make clay on the Sabbath was illegal.

15. Again. The second time he was asked to tell his story of healing.

16-17. The Pharisees knew Christ had broken the Sabbath. Since Christ had broken the Sabbath, He could not be of God. Others argued that it was impossible for a sinner to perform miracles. Since Christ did perform a miracle, maybe He was not a sinner. There was a division among them. They asked the man his opinion of Christ. He responded that He is a prophet.

18-21. The Jews refused to admit the miracle until they talked to the man’s parents, who confirmed that this was their son and that he was born blind. However, they did not explain the means of what happened.

22-23. Because they were afraid of the Jews, they wanted their son to speak for himself. The Jews had agreed that anyone who would recognize Christ as the Messiah would be excommunicated from the synagogue.

24. They recall the blind man. Give God the praise. They want the blind man to attribute the miracle to God alone and to admit that Christ is a sinner. Rather than being objective, the Jews had already made up their minds about Christ; He was a sinner.

25. Note the I know not and the I know. The Jews said we know He is a sinner, but the man says, I know not if He is a thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then said they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes?

27 He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28 Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are Moses' disciples.

29 We know that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is.

30 The man answered and said unto them, Why herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.

31 Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth.

32 Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33 If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34 They answered and said unto him, Thou wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us? And they cast him out.

35 ¶Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God?

36 He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him?

37 And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

38 And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him.

39 ¶And Jesus said, For judgment I am come into this world, that they which see not might see; and that they which see might be made blind.

40 And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, Are we blind also?

41 Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should have no sin: but now ye say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth.

sinner, but I know, whereas I was blind, now I see. The receiving of sight is a fact, not an opinion.

26-27. Again, the Jews ask him what happened and how it happened. The man becomes impatient with their repeated questions. Will ye also be his disciples? If I repeat it again, will you become Christ's disciples?

28-29. Angered by the fact that their authority has been questioned by a beggar, the Jews make a distinction between the followers of Christ who broke the Sabbath and the followers of Moses who obey the law.

30. The blind man now rubs salt in the wound. It is astonishing, he argues, that the religious leaders did not know where Christ came from when He had performed such an outstanding miracle. How could these leaders be knowledgeable and yet not know something so important?

31-33. The blind man continues his argument as follows: God only listens to those who do his will and not to sinners. This man performed a miracle that no one else had ever done, and God helped him do it; therefore, Christ is not a sinner, for if he were, he could do nothing.

34. The Pharisees had been defeated by a poor beggar and so they cast him out of the synagogue.

35. Christ found the outcast and began to meet his spiritual needs. Dost thou believe on the Son of God?

36-37. The man is ready to believe but needs some direction. Christ reveals Himself.

38-39. The man responds in faith and worships Christ. Observing the man's humble response, Christ declares that He came to judge. Those who do not see but who want to see (the blind man), will see. Those who think they see (the Pharisees) will be made blind.

40-41. In disdain, the Pharisees ask, Are we blind also? If ye were blind. If you were ignorant of God's law, Jesus responded, and yet desired to be saved, then ye should have no sin. You would be saved. We see. You are proud in your religious enlightenment, and ye have rejected me. Therefore, your sin remaineth.

I. Christ as the Good Shepherd. 10:1-42.

This story is an allegory rather than a parable (vs. 6); this means that the details are relevant to the main idea. In this allegory Christ is referred to as the Good Shepherd and as the door into the sheepfold.

1. Sermon on the Good Shepherd. 10:1-21.

10:1. Thieves and robbers attempt to enter the sheepfold by climbing over the wall. The Oriental sheepfold normally consisted of four walls of stone with one door and no roof. The fold refers to Israel (vs. 16), and the thieves and robbers refer to the Jewish leaders who are trying to lead Israel while avoiding the door (Christ).

2. The true leader enters by the door and is the only shepherd of the sheep.

3-4. The true shepherd has a unique relationship with his sheep. He calleth them by name. He leadeth them, putteth

CHAPTER 10

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3 To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

4 And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice.

5 And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This parable spake Jesus unto them: but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

7 Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep.

8 All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them.

9 I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture.

10 The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.

12 But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13 The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14 I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine.

15 As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep.

16 And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again.

18 No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.

19 ¶ There was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings.

20 And many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him?

21 Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?

22 ¶ And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the dedication, and it was winter.

23 And Jesus walked in the temple in Solomon's porch.

24 Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them, I told you, and ye believed not: the works that I do them forth, and goeth before them. The sheep respond by hearing his voice, knowing his voice, and following Him.

5-6. A stranger will they not follow (Gr emphatic negation; "never follow?"). Their reaction to the stranger is totally opposite to that of the shepherd. They flee. They are not acquainted with the voice of strangers. They did not comprehend this story of the shepherd and the sheep.

7-8. Verily, verily. Christ begins His explanation with the same statement that He began His story. I am the door. Entrance into the fold is by Him and Him alone. The ones who came before were the scribes and Pharisees who attempted to enter the fold other than through the door.

9-10. Again, Christ emphasizes that He is the door. If any man enter in, he shall be saved (note vs. 10, they might have life refers to salvation). Also, that person will find pasture (in vs. 10, referring to abundant life) or the constant nourishment necessary to maintain life. The scribes and Pharisees steal, kill, and destroy. Christ gives life (salvation) and gives it abundantly.

11. Besides being the only door into the sheepfold, Christ is also the good shepherd. He is good because He giveth his life for (Gr hyper), in behalf of, for the benefit of the sheep (cf. Ps 23).

12-13. The scribes were merely hirelings (hired people) who had no true love and concern for the welfare of the sheep. In the moment of danger the hireling runs away.

14-16. The Pharisees are strangers, but Christ knows His sheep. The Pharisees have no love for the sheep, but Christ gives His life for them. Christ has a relationship to the sheep similar to His relationship with His Father. Christ now states that His fold will include both Jews and Gentiles (Acts 10:28).

17-18. The Lord further amplifies His statement saying that He will lay down His life in a voluntary act of sacrifice. I lay it down of myself. He had that power (right).

19-21. The Jews were divided in their opinion. Some thought He was mad and demon-possessed, while others were impressed by His miracle on behalf of the blind man.

2. Rejection of Christ's message, 10:22-42.

22-24. About two months had elapsed between the previous account and these events. Does thou make us to doubt? The Greek idiom means literally "lift up our soul." How long will you keep us in a state of suspense? Tell us plainly.

25-26. Christ had already told them (6:35; 7:37-39; 8:23-25). The problem was they had rejected what Christ had said about Himself. Christ had supplemented His claims by His works.

JOHN 10:26

in my Father's name, they bear witness of me.

26 But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

27 My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:

28 And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.

29 My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30 I and my Father are one.

31 ¶Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them, Many good works have I shewed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?

33 The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

34 Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?

35 If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken;

36 Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?

37 If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

38 But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works: that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him.

39 ¶Therefore they sought again to take him: but he escaped out of their hand.

40 And went away again beyond Jordan into the place where John at first baptized; and there he abode.

41 And many resorted unto him, and said, John did no miracle: but all things that John spake of this man were true.

42 And many believed on him there.

The cause for their unbelief is rooted in the fact that they were not His sheep.

27-28. Note the verbs used to describe Christ's sheep. They hear and follow their shepherd. This obedient response is totally opposite that of the Jews. Note the verbs used to describe the shepherd. He knows and gives eternal life. He promises that they shall never perish (Gr emphatic negation; "never perish"). To further emphasize their security, He adds the phrase, "into the ages" (Gr idiom meaning "forever") or for all eternity they shall never perish. No one can take these sheep out of Christ's hand.

29. Besides being in the hand of Christ, these sheep are in the hand of the Father and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30. I and my Father are one. God the Father and God the Son are in agreement in the matter of the believer's eternal security. On the basis of this passage, no one should ever doubt the eternal security of his salvation. Once a person is genuinely saved, he is saved forever.

31. The Jews are angered that Christ would claim equality with the Father, and took stones to stone him.

32. Christ again makes the Jews face His works, and asks them to define which good work deserves such cruel treatment. These good works reflected His supernatural origin, and should be the basis for accepting Him as Christ and not the basis for stoning Him.

33-34. The Jews ignored what Christ did, and were judging Him on what He said. Christ had made Himself God. In defending His claims, Christ meets the Jews on their ground and makes His appeal to the law. Ye are gods. This refers to Psalm 82:6, and deals with Hebrew judges because they were interpreters of divine law and justice.

35-36. Christ states that if the Jews were willing to call these judges gods because the word of God had come to them, why did they accuse Him of blasphemy when the Father, who had sent the word to the judges, sent Him and set Him apart for a divine mission?

37-39. If His works do not substantiate His claim, then do not believe Him. Christ appeals to their unbelief. I do. If His works agree with His message, and if they still do not believe, Christ exhorts them to consider again His works, so that they may know, and believe. Now they try to arrest Him because of these blasphemous claims.

40-41. Christ retires from the public scene. However, they find Him, and the ministry of John the Baptist is remembered. Even though John did no miracle, yet all that he had said about Christ was true (1:19-36).

42. Many believed. (See Merrill C. Tenney, John the Gospel of Belief, pp. 163-167.)

J. Christ as the Resurrection and the Life. 11:1-57.

This chapter deals with the resurrection of Lazarus and the Jewish reaction to the miracle. It is apparent that the fame of Christ had reached national prominence, and that this was of great concern to the Jews who feared that the Romans would punish them if Christ influenced the people to follow Him.

1. Power of Christ: Raising Lazarus. 11:1-46.

11:1-2. The setting for this miracle is described. Lazarus had become ill; his sisters Mary and Martha send to Christ for help.

CHAPTER 11

NOW a certain man was sick, named

Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha.

2 (It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.)

3 Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.

4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.

5 Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was.

7 Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judæa again.

8 His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee; and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world.

10 But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

11 These things said he: and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep.

12 Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.

13 Howbeit Jesus spake of his death; but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

14 Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

15 And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe; nevertheless let us go unto him.

16 Then said Thomas, which is called Did'y-mus, unto his fellowdisciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.

17 Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already.

18 Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off:

19 And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him: but Mary sat still in the house.

21 Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

22 But I know, that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again.

3. Note that they do not ask Christ to do anything. They simply make Him aware of their need, and know that because He loves and cares He will respond appropriately.

4. This sickness is not unto death. This means that the final result of Lazarus' sickness will not be death. The final result will be for the glory of God. Sin is not the source of all sickness. Sometimes God permits sickness in order to reveal His glory. Greater glory was manifested in raising Lazarus from the dead than if Christ had simply healed him.

5-6. Jesus loved. In the hour of crisis and need, remember that God loves us. Christ delays His going to Bethany. This might seem strange since Lazarus had a great need; however, note again the previous verse. His waiting is based upon His love.

7-8. The disciples are alarmed when Christ wants to return to Judæa, because the last time He was there they tried to stone Him (10:31).

9-10. Are there not twelve hours in the day? Christ alludes to the fact that His time on the earth is a final period of time and it cannot be changed. A person who walks in the light of God's will cannot be harmed, but the person who does not stumbleth.

11. Lazarus sleepeth. Death is often referred to as sleep (Gen 47:30; Mt 27:52; I Thess 4:13). However, in no way do these passages teach a state of soul-sleep or unconsciousness. Death for the saint is restful sleep from the problems of this world, but a full consciousness of another world (Phil 1:23).

12-13. The disciples thought that Lazarus was physically asleep and assumed that sleep would be good for his illness.

14. Finally, Christ clarifies His statements by telling them plainly, Lazarus is dead.

15. Christ is happy that He was not with Lazarus when he died. Had He been there, He would have healed him and prevented death. Now He must perform a greater miracle that will increase the faith of the disciples.

16. Thomas, called Didymus (Gr "twin"), encourages the disciples to go with Christ, that we may die with him. The outlook for safety in Judæa is dim and Thomas feels that Christ will be killed, and as a result they will be killed as well.

17. Four days. Lazarus probably died around the same time that the messenger came to Christ (11:3).

18-19. Bethany was about two miles from Jerusalem. Many residents of Jerusalem had come to Bethany to comfort Mary and Martha.

20. Note the contrast in personalities. Martha is a woman of action, whereas Mary is a woman of quiet reflection (Lk 10:38-42).

21. This statement is not critical of Christ's action, but it is a statement of grief that if Christ could have been with Lazarus he would not have died.

22. This verse displays great hope in Christ's ability to ask from God; however, Martha did not have the resurrection of her brother in mind.

23-24. Christ assures Martha that her brother shall rise again. She interprets this to mean in the last day. Martha, like

JOHN 11:24

24 Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said unto her. I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:

26 And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?

27 She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.

28 And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, The Master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 As soon as she heard that, she arose quickly, and came unto him.

30 Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him.

31 The Jews then which were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary, that she rose up hastily and went out, followed her, saying, She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

32 Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw him, she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled, 34 And said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see.

35 Jesus wept.

36 Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him!

37 And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?

38 Jesus therefore again groaning in himself cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.

39 Jesus said, Take ye away the stone, Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days.

40 Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God?

41 Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the people which stand by I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth.

44 And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with graveclothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

many Christians, does not appropriate the promises of God for now. God is able to meet our needs in the present as well as in the future.

25-26. I am. This is the fifth of the seven I am statements (6:35; 8:12; 10:9; 10:11; 14:6; 15:5). Christ is the resurrection (He raises those who are dead in sin) and the life (He gives to them eternal life). Those who believe in Christ, though they may die physically, shall live. Beyond that, those who really have Christ's life shall never die.

27. Yea, Lord: I believe (Gr perfect tense; emphasizes certainty, "I do believe"). Martha had accepted the I am (vs. 25) as the Christ (Messiah), the Son of God.

28. Martha returns and quietly tells Mary that Christ has arrived.

29-30. Mary now goes out to meet the Master.

31-32. The Jews observing her haste, and assuming that she is going to the grave, follow her to comfort her. Note that the words of Mary were the same as Martha's (11:21). How many times they had repeated these words to each other in the last four days.

33. He groaned in the spirit. The verb used here means to become angry. Christ was probably angry at the root cause of all this sorrow and grief, i.e., sin.

34-35. Jesus wept. Jesus broke out into tears. Here we are reminded of the humanity of Christ and His love and concern for His people.

36-37. The Jews saw the love of Christ, but some of them debated whether or not He could have prevented this tragedy by healing Lazarus.

38-39. Christ came to the tomb and ordered someone to roll away the stone. Martha objected to this strange request since Lazarus' body would stink.

40. Christ reminded her of His previous statements (11:25-26).

41-42. Christ offered a prayer before He performed the miracle. The prayer was one of thanksgiving rather than requesting. He is thankful that the Father hast heard. Because He is in close communion with the Father, this miracle is possible. He prays so that the people may believe that thou hast sent me.

43-44. Lazarus, come forth. The voice of omnipotence speaks and the dead responds. Here is a picture of many Christians who are alive in Christ but are still bound by the graveclothes of the world. They cannot work because their hands are bound, they cannot walk because their feet are bound, and they cannot witness because their mouths are bound. Christ Jesus orders: Loose him.

45 Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.

46 But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

47 ¶Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.

48 If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

49 And one of them, named Cā'ia-phas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50 Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this spake he not of himself; but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;

52 And not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53 Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.

54 Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called E'phra-im, and there continued with his disciples.

55 ¶And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves.

56 Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?

57 Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should shew it, that they might take him.

CHAPTER 12

THEN Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.

2 There they made him a supper; and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him,

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

45. The miracle brought results. First, many believed on him.

46. Second, some went back to Jerusalem to report this incident to the leaders.

2. Plan of the Pharisees. 11:47-57.

47-48. Third, the Sanhedrin became angry and were afraid that if people continued to follow Christ, the Romans would think the Jews were planning a rebellion and would take their leaders into captivity.

49-50. Caiaphas presents a solution. He reasons that if Jesus lives, the nation will die. Therefore, in the interest of patriotism, Jesus must die so that the nation will live.

51-52. Little did Caiaphas realize the real truth of what he was saying. Christ would die to save the nation spiritually, whereas Caiaphas intended Him to die to save the nation politically. Again, the cosmopolitan nature of Christ's death is emphasized (10:16).

53-54. The Sanhedrin had formally decided to kill Christ. Knowing about their plan, Christ removed Himself from the public view.

55-57. As the pilgrims came to Jerusalem for the Passover there was much excitement and enthusiasm over the ministry of Christ. Popular opinion among the common people was in His favor. However, the leaders made it clear that anyone who saw Christ should report it, that they might take him.

K. Christ as the Messiah. 12:1-50.

There are four separate sections in this chapter: (1) The anointing of Jesus (vss. 1-11); (2) the Triumphal Entry (vss. 12-19); (3) the Greeks seek Christ (vss. 20-36); and (4) the Jews reject Christ (vss. 37-50). In all these events, Christ emerges as the true Messiah.

1. Supper at Bethany. 12:1-11.

12:1-2. Six days before the passover. Although there is debate concerning which day Christ entered Bethany, most commentators conclude that it was Saturday evening. According to Matthew 26 and Mark 14, the supper took place at the house of Simon the Leper. Martha, true to her personality, was serving (Lk 10:40). Perhaps this was a meal designed to thank the Lord for what He had done for Lazarus and Simon.

3. A pound of ointment of spikenard. Mary took twelve ounces (the weight of a Roman pound) of this perfume and anointed the feet of Jesus. This perfume was extracted from the root of the nard plant which is grown in India. It was a costly import. This was an act of love and devotion to the Lord. Nothing is wasted if it is given to the Lord.

4-5. Contrasted to the generosity of Mary is the selfishness of Judas. He had estimated the ointment to be worth three hundred pence or the amount of wages a person would receive for three hundred days' work.

6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.

7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone: against the day of my burying hath she kept this.

8 For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always.

9 ¶Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.

10 But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death;

11 Because that by reason of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus.

12 ¶On the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, 13 Took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.

14 And Jesus, when he had found a young ass, sat thereon; as it is written, 15 Fear not, daughter of Sion; behold, thy King cometh, sitting on an ass's colt.

16 These things understood not his disciples at the first: but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him.

17 The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record.

18 For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? behold, the world is gone after him.

20 ¶And there were certain Greeks among them that came up to worship at the feast:

21 The same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bēthsā'i-da of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.

23 ¶And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.

6-7. Judas was not concerned for the poor. He had been stealing (he was a thief) from the treasury (the bag). If the perfume had been sold, he could have stolen some of the three hundred pennies. Christ rebuked Judas. Mary, anticipating the death of her Saviour, anointed the body of Christ. In doing this prior to His death, she was expressing her complete love and devotion.

8. What Mary did was more important than feeding the poor; however, Jesus implied that Christians must minister to the poor, since the poor always ye have with you.

9-11. Lazarus had become a phenomenon since Christ had raised him. However, the religious leaders wanted to kill Lazarus, because many had believed on Christ after observing what He had done for Lazarus.

2. Triumphal Entry. 12:12-19.

12-13. On the next day. On Sunday, many of the people who had come to the feast took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet him. It should be noted that those who sought to honor the Lord were pilgrims, not the residents of Jerusalem. Hosanna. The Greek is a transliteration of Hebrew meaning "Save, I beseech thee" (cf. Ps 118:25). They proclaim Christ as the King of Israel, and the One who comes in the name of the Lord (Ps 118:25-26). These people were expecting Christ to establish David's kingdom.

14-15. John now moves from the public scene to the private scene where Christ mounts a donkey. This action was in fulfillment of prophecy (Zech 9:9). The donkey was used in the Old Testament by kings who were bringing peace, while the horse was used when the kings rode into battle. Daughter of Zion. This symbolically represents Jerusalem and its inhabitants. Jerusalem should stop being afraid because their own King was coming.

16. The disciples understood these things after the ascension of Christ and the coming of the Holy Spirit, who called these things to their remembrance (7:39; 14:26).

17-19. The raising of Lazarus had caused great excitement in Jerusalem. Many who proclaimed Him as the King of Israel did so because of the miracle He performed in raising Lazarus. The Pharisees responded to this excitement by concluding that the world (everyone) is gone after him.

3. Teaching on the cross. 12:20-50.

20-21. The attention is now turned from the Jews to the Greeks. Some Greek proselytes had come to worship at the feast. The Greeks approached Philip and asked for an interview with Christ.

22. Philip consulted with Andrew, and they both approached Jesus. Why did Philip consult Andrew? Probably because he was wondering whether Jesus would consent to a Gentile interview since His mission was to Israel.

23. Jesus did not talk directly to the Greeks. He conveyed His message through Andrew and Philip. The hour. This does not refer to a sixty-minute period, but to the general time period when the Son of man should be glorified. This glorification is explained in the next verse.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

25 He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

26 If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honour.

27 Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

29 The people therefore, that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered: others said, An angel spake to him.

30 Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes.

31 Now is the judgment of this world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.

33 This he said, signifying what death he should die.

34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth forever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? who is this Son of man?

35 Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them.

37 ¶But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him:

38 That the saying of E-sā'ias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore they could not believe, because that E-sā'ias said again,

40 He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

41 These things said E-sā'ias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him.

42 ¶Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue:

43 For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

44 ¶Jesus cried and said, He that be-

24. Seeds which are not sown are alone. The seeds which are sown, die, and in so doing bring forth a harvest. Christ used this to illustrate His death, which will produce a rich spiritual harvest.

25-26. This principle of death producing life is applicable to the disciple as well as the Master (Mt 10:37-39; Mk 8:34-38). The reward for following Christ is honor with the Father.

27. The awful agony of approaching death grips Christ's emotions. Save me. This does not imply disobedience or weakness on the part of Christ. "A man may shrink from an experience which he, nevertheless, wants to undergo; e.g., an operation. So it is also with Christ" (Hendriksen, p. 200).

28. Christ's ultimate desire is to glorify His Father's name. The Father answers from heaven that His Name has been glorified (through the obedient ministry of His Son), and it will be glorified again (through the death, burial and resurrection of the Son).

29. The people heard but did not understand. They assumed that an angel had spoken to Him.

30-31. The voice was also for the people so that they would recognize Christ as God. Christ is referring to His judgment of sin through His death, and His defeat of Satan (I Cor 15:54-57).

32-33. Christ would draw all men (including the Greeks) to Himself through the cross (be lifted up). Christ would die on a cross lifted up.

34. The Jews were expecting Christ to reign forever. They were puzzled that He was talking about death. Their Messiah would not die.

35-36. Christ answered their question with a solemn warning that if they did not receive the Light, darkness would come upon them. The Light would soon be removed.

37-38. In spite of all the miracles, they believed not on him. This rejection of Christ had been prophesied by Isaiah. They rejected what they heard (our report) and what they saw (the arm of the Lord in powerful miracles).

39-41. Could not believe. God does not prevent people from being converted. In His judgment, as a result of man's unbelief, God sometimes hardens the heart.

42-43. Many leaders believed on him but were unwilling to confess Him for fear of the Pharisees.

44-45. The series of statements that conclude this chapter are lieveth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me.

45 And he that seeth me seeth him that sent me.

46 I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness.

47 And if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not: for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

CHAPTER 13

NOW before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.

2 And supper being ended, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him;

3 Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God;

4 He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel and girded himself.

5 After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6 Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter saith unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.

9 Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him, He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12 So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13 Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14 If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

Christ's final public messages to Israel. Knowing Christ means knowing the Father. Seeing Christ means seeing the Father.

46. See notes on 8:12.

47-48. Christ's purpose is not to judge, but to save. Those who rejected the words of Christ would be judged by those words in the last day.

49-50. The Father gave Christ to speak, and His words are life everlasting.

III. THE PRIVATE MINISTRY OF CHRIST. 13:1-17:26.

A. Christ as the Servant. 13:1-38.

The setting for chapters 13 through 17 is given in 12:36: and did hide himself from them. During this time prior to His death, Christ limits His ministry to His disciples.

1. Washing the disciples' feet. 13:1-20.

13:1. Christ's appointed time had come when He would leave this world. He loved them unto the end (or to the uttermost).

2-3. In the midst of this loving scene one can observe the work of Satan, for it was Satan who put the idea of betrayal into Judas' mind. To fully appreciate the Lord's humility, one must remember that all things had been given into his hands. The all-powerful One was about to wash His disciples' feet.

4-5. It was customary in Oriental homes for the servant to wash the feet of guests to remove the dust. However, Christ had requested privacy for His supper and, consequently, no servant was present. The disciples were too proud to perform this menial task; therefore, the Lord took the basin and washed the feet of His disciples.

6-7. Impulsive Peter strongly objected to this act of humility. Christ responded to Peter's question by implying that there is a deeper meaning in washing feet. One day Peter would understand that this was a graphic illustration of Christ's humility.

8-9. Peter responds. Thou shalt never wash my feet. Christ is thinking of His overall humiliation and death when He states that if Peter is not washed, he has no part with Christ. Peter is still thinking about physical washing.

10-11. A person who is washed (i.e., saved, Tit 3:5) does not need another bath. However, many times his feet may get dirty from the world, and he needs his feet washed (I Jn 1:7-9).

12. Christ now asks them if they have understood the meaning of what He has done.

13-14. If the Master and Lord is willing to humble Himself to the point of washing His disciples' feet, then the disciples should be willing to do the same thing.

15 For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

17 If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

18 ¶ I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel against me.

19 Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he.

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled in spirit, and testified, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me.

22 Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake.

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter therefore beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake.

25 He then lying on Jesus' breast saith unto him, Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered, He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him.

29 For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then having received the sop went immediately out: and it was night.

31 ¶ Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.

32 If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him.

33 Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you.

34 A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.

35 By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

15. Given you an example. Christ is not instituting an ordinance of footwashing, but is showing an example of humility. He does not command us to perform this act, but to acquire the attitude that this activity displays.

16-17. Blessing (happy are ye) is the result of practicing a life of humility and service.

18. I speak not of you all. Not all the disciples would have blessings on their lives because they were humble. One of the group who would eat with Christ would betray Him. Christ is speaking of Judas (cf. Ps 41:9).

19-20. Christ forewarned the disciples that this would take place. The disciples did not later question Christ's choice of Judas since this was all a part of God's plan. To accept Christ means to accept the Father.

2. Predicting His betrayal. 13:21-35.

21-22. The time had come to clearly state that one of the disciples would betray Him. This brought sorrow and grief to the Lord. The disciples were shocked, and in amazement they looked (kept on looking) one on another.

23-24. John, the beloved disciple, was leaning on Jesus. This was the customary way to recline at the table. Simon probably assumed that John knew the identity of this betrayer.

25-26. John asked, who is it? Christ did not identify the betrayer by name, but stated that He would give the sop (a piece of bread dipped in sauce) to the betrayer. Sop was usually given as a token of friendship. Even in betrayal, the Lord loved Judas.

27. Now the progress of Satan; 13:2 states, the devil having now put into the heart. Satan went a step further and took full possession of Judas.

28-29. The whole company of disciples did not understand this. Christ had addressed His statement about the sop to John and consequently, he was the only one who understood its implications.

30. It was night. Note the symbolism here. As Judas went out from the Saviour to betray Him, he was surrounded by darkness. This symbolizes the evil and sin surrounding the action of Judas.

31-32. With the exit of Judas the scene is now set for the death and ultimate glorification of Christ. God would glorify the Son through the Son's passion, and would show the close relationship between the two.

33. Little children. This is the only time this phrase is used in the Gospels.

34. Christ commands them to love, as I have loved you. The love Christians should display for each other must be a sacrificial love similar to the Lord's love.

35. Grasp the meaning of this verse. In a day of church schisms and divisions, the words of Christ have deep, significant meaning. The world should recognize us as followers of Christ because our relationship to each other is permeated with love.

36 ¶Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter said unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thy sake.

38 Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

CHAPTER 14

LET not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me.

2 In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

3 And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.

4 And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

5 ¶Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

7 If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also: and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

8 ¶Philip saith unto him, Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us.

9 Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father?

10 Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.

11 Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works' sake.

12 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father.

13 And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

3. Predicting Peter's denial. 13:36-38.

36-38. Peter is still a little confused. Christ tells him that he will follow afterwards. Peter's time of death had not yet come (Heb 9:27). Note Peter's impulsiveness. He wants to be with Christ now. Christ predicted the exact opposite of Peter's claims. Peter said he would die, but Christ died. Peter would deny his Master.

B. Christ as the Comforter. 14:1-31.

There is a close connection between the events of chapter 13 and the promises of chapter 14. In chapter 13 the disciples had been rebuked for their lack of humility. They were instructed that Christ would soon leave them. They were told that one of their number would betray his Master, and Peter had been rebuked. To offset the depression produced by this startling revelation, Christ brought a message of hope and encouragement.

14:1. Let not your heart be troubled. This is the foundational statement of the entire chapter. To settle the emotions of the disciples, Christ lists the reasons why their hearts should not be troubled (Gr trassō, stir up, disturb, throw into confusion). Believe. Both times this Greek verb (pisteliō) can be interpreted as imperative. Christ stirs both their faith in God and their faith in Him. This settles a troubled heart.

2. The disciples should be comforted with the fact that Christ is going to prepare an abode for them in heaven (my Father's house).

3-4. I will come again. This is the promise that brings hope to troubled hearts. The emphasis of His coming is not on the dwelling places but on the prospect of being with the Saviour (Gr pros; lit., face to face). The way to heaven is through Christ Himself.

5. Overwhelmed with grief at the prospect of Christ's leaving, Thomas does not understand the meaning of Christ's statement. Thomas objects that since he does not know where Christ is going, how could he possibly know the way to get there?

6. Christ answers with another I am statement. The way. Christ is the only way to heaven (10:9). The truth. Christ is the embodiment of all truth (8:32). Life (1:4; 3:16). No man can approach the Father unless he does so through Christ.

7. From henceforth ye know him. To know Christ is to know the Father. The disciples knew Christ; therefore, they knew the Father.

8. Philip asks for a theophany (manifestation of God's glory) similar to Moses' (Ex 33:18-23).

9. So long time with you. Christ had stated this truth about seeing the Father through the Son throughout His ministry (1:18; 10:30).

10. The words and works of Christ surely must indicate a unique relationship between the Father and the Son.

11. The disciples were weak in their faith. Christ exhorts them to Believe what He has said, or simply to believe on the basis of His works.

12. What a promise this is. Greater works. The works of Christ were limited to a small geographical area and to a specific people. The disciples' works would be worldwide in their reach and would affect all people. In this way, they were greater. Christ's going away would cause Him to send the Holy Spirit.

13-14. Note the relationship of works to prayer (Acts 1:14; 2:42; 3:1; 4:31). Effective prayer is in my name. This is prayer in agreement with the desires of Christ. The result of prayer is the glorification of the Father, not self-glorification.

14 If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it.

15 ¶ If ye love me, keep my commandments.

16 And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever;

17 Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.

18 I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you.

19 Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also.

20 At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you.

21 He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas saith unto him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?

23 Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

24 He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

25 These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.

26 But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

27 Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.

28 Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father: for my Father is greater than I.

29 And now I have told you before it come to pass, that, when it is come to pass, ye might believe.

30 Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.

31 But that the world may know that I love the Father; and as the Father

15. Love is not sentimental emotionalism; it is obedience to the commandments of God.

16. Comforter (Gr paraklētos, one called alongside to help). Christ would pray the Father, and they would receive a Helper. Another (Gr allos, another of the same kind). This would indicate that the Comforter would be of the same quality and character as Christ. The Comforter would be God. For ever. Christ would go away (14:2), but the Helper would remain for ever.

17. Spirit of truth. The Helper is the Holy Spirit (16:13). The world cannot receive the Spirit. This Spirit would have a twofold ministry. He would dwell with them (be in their midst), and He would be in them (dwell within).

18. Comfortless (Gr orphanos, lit., I will not leave you as orphans). I will come. Christ would be with them through the ministry of the Holy Spirit.

19. Very soon the world that hated Him would no longer be able to see Him. The disciples would see Him. They would see Him because they were spiritually alive, and the Holy Spirit would glorify Christ to them (16:14).

20. At that day. In the day of the dispensation of the Holy Spirit they would recognize the relationship between the Father and the Son and themselves: Christ in the Father, the disciples in Christ, and Christ in the disciples.

21. True love is demonstrated by obedience to the Lord's commandments. This love and obedience to Christ will cause the Father to love them. Christ too will love those who obey, and will reveal Himself to them through the Spirit and the Word.

22. Judas is thinking of Christ's revealing Himself to the world as the Messiah and cannot understand this limited revelation.

23-24. The answer of Christ is based on obedience. The Father and the Son will come only to those who love and prove their love by obedience. Abode. Through the Spirit, both the Father and the Son will make their home in the believer. Disobedience to the Word of Christ is also rejection of the Father's Word.

25-26. Christ had spoken These things while He was with the disciples, but the Holy Ghost would teach them all things. The Spirit would also cause them to remember the things that Christ had told them. The ultimate fulfillment of this promise is the completion of the canon of the New Testament.

27. Peace. In the hour of sorrow for the disciples, Christ promised a unique kind of peace that is different from the world's peace: My peace. This peace would calm troubled and fearful hearts.

28-29. True love would cause the disciples to rejoice because Christ was going away. This departure would bring glory to Christ and would enable the Holy Spirit to come. Christ foretold these events so that when they happened they would increase the faith of the disciples.

30. Christ would not continue to teach them. The prince of this world cometh. Satan, through the behavior of Judas, was coming. Hath nothing in me. Christ is the sinless Son of God, and Satan had no part in Him.

31. Christ will not resist those who come to kill Him. In obedience to the Father's commandment, He is ready and willing to die. Arise, let us go hence. The hour for which Jesus gave me commandment, even so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

JOHN 15:1

CHAPTER 15

I AM the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman.

2 Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you.

4 Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

5 I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing.

6 If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

7 If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

8 Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples.

9 As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love.

10 If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.

11 These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.

12 This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you.

13 Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.

15 Henceforth I call you not servants; 246 came had arrived. He must now go to the cross, and He is ready. He voluntarily goes forward to meet His death.

C. Christ as the True Vine. 15:1-16:33.

Although there is a difference of opinion among commentators over the meaning of all that is discussed in this chapter, there is one basic truth upon which all agree. The basic truth of this chapter is that just as the branch cannot bear fruit unless it abides in the vine, Christians cannot bear fruit unless they have an abiding relationship with the True Vine, Jesus Christ.

1. Christ and the disciples. 15:1-17.

15:1. The true vine. In the Old Testament, Israel is referred to as a vine. However, in this verse, we find the True or Real Vine is Christ Himself. The husbandman. The Father is the husbandman, or the One who owns the vineyard and who takes care of it.

2. He taketh away. Just as the husbandman disposes of branches that bear no fruit, so the Father judges those who bear no spiritual fruit. He purgeth it. The husbandman prunes (Gr kathaireō) the branches which bear fruit in order for them to bear more fruit. In like manner, God the Father cleanses Christians who are bearing fruit to bring them to bear more fruit. Fruit is the natural product of a living organism. Spiritual fruit is a spiritual product of a spiritual union (Gal 5:22-23).

3. Cleansing is produced through the Word of God.

4. Abide in me. In order to be a fruitful Christian, one must learn to depend on Christ and let the power and Spirit of Christ flow through him.

5. Christ now clearly states the implications of this story. He is the vine and we are the branches. Note the total dependence upon the Vine. Without that abiding relationship ye can do nothing. In verse 2 it refers to more fruit, and in verses 5 and 8 it refers to much fruit.

6. This does not refer to everlasting punishment in hell. Note that there are results of not abiding in Christ as a branch. The man himself is not the branch; the branch represents the fruits of his relationship with Christ. When the Christian fails to abide in Christ, he withers, dries up, and his fruit or works will be judged by fire (1 Cor 3:12-15).

7-8. Those who abide in Christ, and who permit His words to abide in them, have a blessed promise that Christ will perform whatever they ask. This is a blessed promise of the Father.

9-10. In the center of this unique abiding relationship is the love of God. Christ exhorts His disciples to continue in my love. It is interesting to note that this is the first fruit of the Spirit mentioned in Galatians 5:22. Christ remained in the Father's love because He obeyed Him. We remain in Christ's love because we obey His commandments (14:21, 23-24).

11. The second fruit of the Spirit is joy. The abiding relationship also gives us Christ's joy. Christ promises them fruit, answered prayer, love, and joy as the result of abiding in Him.

12. This is the second commandment found in chapter 15. The first is abide in me (vs. 7), and now Christ commands them to love one another. He defines the extent of that love in the phrase, as I have loved you.

13-14. Love is giving sacrificially for others. Love is not an emotional feeling, but it is the act of giving (3:16). To be a friend of Christ means to obey Him.

15. Because of their obedience, Christ could now call them for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you.

16 Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.

17 These things I command you, that ye love one another.

18 ¶ If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.

19 If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.

21 But all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they knew not him that sent me.

22 If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin: but now they have no cloak for their sin.

23 He that hateth me hateth my Father also.

24 If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin: but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father.

25 But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They hated me without a cause.

26 But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

27 And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.

CHAPTER 16

THESE things have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended.

2 They shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service.

3 And these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But these things have I told you, that when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And these things I said not unto you at the beginning, because I was with you.

5 But now I go my way to him that friends. As His friends, they were told all the things that Christ had heard from the Father.

16. Although they were Christ's friends, this was by His choice, not their choice. Ordained you (Gr tithēmi, appointed you). Bring forth fruit. It is evident that the fruit refers to love and its results (15:8-14). Note the progression. To abide means to bear fruit; to bear fruit means to experience answered prayer (he may give it you).

17. Again Christ returns to the theme of love. Loving one another is a command, not an option.

2. Disciples and the world. 15:18-27.

18. Christ turns from the subject of love to the subject of hate. Hate (Gr miseō) occurs eight times in the rest of the discourse. World (Gr kosmos). This includes all who are not friends of Christ.

19. The world can love only those who are of the world. Since the friends of Christ have been chosen out of the world the world, logically, hates them.

20-21. The disciples could expect the same treatment as their Lord received. Some would persecute them, while others would keep their message. The root of the world's rejection of the disciples was their rejection of the Father who had sent the Son.

22-23. If Christ had not come, the people would not have been guilty of rejecting Him. But He did come, and now they had no excuse for their sin. The Jews claimed to obey the Father, and yet they hated the Son. In reality, they hated both the Father and the Son.

24-25. Even though Christ had performed works that should have caused them to believe, they still rejected and hated Him. Yet even in their rebellion and hatred, the Jews were fulfilling God's plan (Ps 69:4).

26-27. Christ now concludes His discourse on hatred by reminding the disciples that they will not be alone. The Spirit of truth will testify (bear witness) of me. The witness of God's Spirit will cooperate with that of the disciples to give powerful testimony to the mission and purpose of Christ.

3. Disciples and the Spirit. 16:1-33.

16:1. These things. Christ had forewarned the disciples about the hatred they would encounter in the world.

2-3. The hatred would be so strong that eventually they would be excommunicated from the synagogue. This meant isolation from the social life of Israel. It meant loss of employment and rejection by their own families. Doeth God service. They would also be killed in the name of God (Acts 26:9-11). The root cause of this persecution is the world's rejection of both the Father and the Son.

4. Christ did not want the disciples to be unprepared for the trial of their faith. At the beginning. Since Christ was with them from the beginning, there was no reason to discuss this persecution. Now He is going away (Jn 14), and He wants to prepare them.

5-6. The disciples had not been interested in where Christ sent me; and none of you asketh me. Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

7 Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you.

8 And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment:

9 Of sin, because they believe not on me;

10 Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more;

11 Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

12 I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.

13 Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come.

14 He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

15 All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

16 A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father.

17 Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me: and, Because I go to the Father?

18 They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? we cannot tell what he saith.

19 Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye enquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see me?

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, That ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice: and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 And ye now therefore have sorrow: but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you.

23 And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, was going; they were concerned only about the sorrow that they were experiencing because He was going away.

7. I tell you the truth. He explains the necessity of His departure. If the disciples would understand this truth, they would have reason for triumph and not tragedy. It was necessary for Christ to go so that the Holy Spirit would come (14:16).

8-9. The work of the Spirit is now described. Reprove (Gr elengchō, convict or convince). The ministry of the Holy Spirit is a convicting and convincing ministry. He will convict of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. The Holy Spirit, through the Word of God and preaching, convicts men of their sin.

10. Of righteousness. Although the world would reject the work of the Righteous One, the Father would accept it (I go to my Father). God's Spirit would convict men of true righteousness.

11. Of judgment. Satan, the prince of this world, had already been judged (Gen 3:15). The final judgment would come. The Spirit will convict men of this final judgment.

12. After describing the Spirit's work in the world, Christ now elaborates on the Spirit's work with regard to the disciples. The disciples were not ready spiritually to accept all that Christ wanted to tell them.

13. All truth. The Spirit would guide (lead) them into a complete knowledge of all truth. What the Spirit hears, He will speak. This indicates the close relationship of the Trinity. Things to come. The book of Revelation is an example of this.

14-15. The Spirit will glorify Christ. Again, the close unity of the Trinity is implied.

16. A little while. Very soon Christ would go away, but He promised them that a little while and they would see Him. This refers to both facts: that the Holy Spirit would reveal Christ to them, and that Christ would return again (Jn 14:3). All this was possible because Christ was returning to the Father.

17-18. The disciples are confused by this statement, a little while.

19-20. Christ explains. The disciples would weep at the death of Christ, but the world would rejoice, thinking that they were finished with Christ. However, the sorrow of the disciples would be turned to joy through the resurrection, the coming of the Holy Spirit, and the return of Christ.

21. Using as an example the pain of childbirth and the joy that follows, Christ illustrates the future experience of the disciples at the death and resurrection of their Master.

22. I will see you again. This refers to both the resurrection and the advent of the Spirit. The permanent indwelling of the Spirit would produce a permanent joy.

23. The day would come when it would be impossible for the disciples to personally ask Christ for things. However, if they Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name; ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full.

25 These things have I spoken unto you in proverbs; but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, but I shall shew you plainly of the Father.

26 At that day ye shall ask in my name; and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you:

27 For the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world; again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

29 His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb.

30 Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe?

32 Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world.

CHAPTER 17

THESE words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

2 As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

3 And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

4 I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do.

5 And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

6 I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.

requested the Father in Christ's name, he will give it you. Since Christ has returned to the Father, the prayers of Christians must be made to the Father in the name of the Son.

24. Until then, prayer had been made directly to God. Now they were to pray in the merits of the finished work of Christ. Note the order: ask, . . . receive, . . . joy may be full.

25. Proverbs (Gr paromoids, veiled sayings). Christ had not spoken openly because the disciples would not understand. However, when the Spirit came, Christ would reveal the Father plainly. This occurred through the inspiration and writing of the epistles.

26-27. Prayer made in Christ's name was not so that Christ could somehow convince the Father to answer the prayers. The Father will answer prayer because of His love for the disciples.

28. Here is the entire purpose of Christ. His eternity, His humiliation, and His exaltation are all implied in this verse.

29-30. The disciples now realize that Christ is speaking to them openly. They realize that Christ knows all things, and would reveal them without the disciples asking questions. Their conclusion is faith, that Christ came forth from God.

31-32. Thrilled with these revelations, the disciples are quickly reminded that soon they would scatter at the arrest of their Master. Christ would be alone, and yet in that hour the Father is with me.

33. Note the origin of in me . . . peace. They had peace in Christ, but in the world they would have tribulation. Be of good cheer (be courageous). Even though they would be opposed by the world, they should remember that Christ had overcome the world.

D. Christ as the Intercessor. 17:1-26.

This chapter contains the prayer of Christ for His disciples. In many aspects, it is a model prayer for all Christians.

17:1. Lifted up his eyes to heaven. This was a common practice when one prayed, since He was addressing Himself to God. Father. Christ uses this term six times in His prayer. The hour. The moment of crisis had come when Christ would consummate His earthly ministry. Glorify thy Son. The hour that Christ referred to was not only the hour of death, but also His resurrection and exaltation.

2-3. Christ had been given power (authority) over all flesh (all mankind). This authority extended to the giving of eternal life. As many as thou hast given. This refers specifically to the disciples and generally to those of all flesh whom God has given to Christ. Eternal life results in a true knowledge of both God and Jesus Christ.

4. I have glorified thee. Christ has brought glory to the Father by fulfilling His will and completing His task (4:34; 6:38). Note that Christ views His death as having been completed. He is so certain and sure of His atonement that He can speak as if it had already been completed.

5. Christ again asks the Father to glorify Him. He desires that glory which He had in eternity past, but which He voluntarily laid aside to redeem mankind (1:1-3, 14).

6. Christ made known (manifested) the Father's name to those who followed Him. These disciples had been given to Christ by the Father. Note the results of Christ's revelation of the Father: they have kept thy word. An evidence of true conversion is obedience to the Word of God.

JOHN 17:7

7 Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee.

8 For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.

10 And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them.

11 And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are.

12 While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled.

13 And now come I to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.

14 I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

15 I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil.

16 They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

17 Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.

18 As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

19 And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.

20 Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word;

21 That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

22 And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one:

23 I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that

7-8. The disciples had come to understand that all things (the message and the mission of Christ) which Christ had were ultimately from the Father. Christ was faithful in giving the Father's words to the disciples. The disciples accepted the message, and obtained a twofold knowledge: they understood that Christ had come from God, and that God had sent Him.

9. I pray for them. Christ's concern was for His own (Rom 8:34; Heb 7:25). I pray not for the world. This does not mean that Christ is unconcerned about the unsaved (Lk 23:34). However, His prayer for sanctification, glorification, and protection is only applicable to those who belong to Him.

10. Christ is praying to the Father in behalf of the disciples, and is confident that His prayers will be answered, since the disciples belong to the Father as well as the Son.

11. Note that Christ is again speaking as if His death had already occurred (17:4). Keep (Gr tēreō, keep watch over, guard, or preserve). Christ prays for the Father to stand guard over the disciples in the wicked world. That they may be as one. This does not mean that Christ wants all denominations to be as one; He is praying that the disciples would be united in their stand against the wickedness of the world.

12. Christ states that during His earthly ministry, He guarded the disciples. None of them perished (compromised with the wicked world). The son of perdition. The word perdition means the lost one. Note the synthesis of human responsibility and God's purpose. Judas was lost by his own volition, but his behavior was a fulfillment of divine prophecy (Ps 41:9).

13-14. Christ was about to leave the earth, and He was conscious of the void that He would leave with His disciples. He requests that His joy would fill them. It was the disciples' acceptance of Christ's word that caused the world to hate them.

15. Christ did not want the disciples taken out of the world because He would fulfill His purpose in their lives while they were in the world. He wanted them to be delivered from the evil one (Satan himself, Mt 6:13; I Pet 5:8).

16. The disciples did not belong to the world, they belonged to Christ (17:9-10).

17-18. Sanctify (Gr hagiazō, make holy, consecrate, dedicate, purify, set apart). This is the positive aspect of being delivered from the world. This process of becoming holy could only be accomplished through the Word of God. The disciples had been commissioned to go into the world.

19. I sanctify myself. Christ does not state that He is in the process of becoming holy; He is referring to His self-sacrifice and total commitment. It is His example that should stir His followers to that same type of surrender.

20. Beginning in this verse and continuing through the remainder of the prayer, Christ now prays for His entire church. The first part of the prayer was for the disciples; this part includes believers today. He prays for everyone who will believe on Him.

21. May be one (see notes on 17:11).

22. The Father had manifested Himself through the Son, and now the Son manifests Himself through His followers. This is glory.

23. Made perfect. The idea here is that of completeness, not the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.

24 Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.

25 O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me.

26 And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them.

CHAPTER 18

WHEN Jesus had spoken these words, he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cē'dron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his disciples.

2 And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples.

3 Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons.

4 Jesus therefore, knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him, Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

7 Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye? And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he: if therefore ye seek me, let these go their way:

9 That the saying might be fulfilled, which he spake, Of them which thou gavest me have I lost none.

10 Then Simon Peter having a sword drew it, and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Māl'chus.

11 Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up thy sword into the sheath: the cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 Then the band and the captain and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and bound him.

13 And led him away to Ān'as first; for he was father in law to Cā'ia-phas, which was the high priest that same year.

14 Now Cā'ia-phas was he, which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

15 ¶ And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple: that dissinless perfection. The ultimate result of that unity will be that the world will see God's love revealed through the believers.

24. This is Christ's final request. He desires that all who believe on Him would see His glory (Rev 1:12-18).

25-26. Righteous Father. Because the Father is righteous, He will fulfill all that the Son has requested for His followers. To declare God's name is to declare God's love, for God is love.

In this prayer, Christ prays for Himself (vss. 1-5); for His disciples (vss. 6-19); and for His entire church (vss. 20-26).

IV. THE PASSION MINISTRY OF CHRIST. 18:1-21:25.

A. Christ and the Crucifixion. 18:1-19:42.

1. His arrest. 18:1-11.

18:1. After the prayer of chapter 17, Jesus takes His eleven disciples to a garden (Gethsemane). The brook mentioned refers to a stream that flows only during the winter season.

2-3. Ofttimes. Frequently Christ had taken His disciples to this place of seclusion. Judas came to the garden with a large crowd. Band (Gr speira) refers to a Roman cohort of six hundred soldiers. John, however, is using the term in its more general sense of "a detachment." Note the paradox: they came with torches to take the Light of the world, and they came with weapons to arrest the Prince of Peace.

4. Christ was completely aware of Judas' plan. Went forth. Probably Christ went from the garden to meet the crowd as they approached the gate. It was at this point that Judas kissed the Master (Mt 26:49).

5. Jesus of Nazareth. This was the name that appeared on the official arrest warrant issued by the Sanhedrin and the Roman government. I am. Again, Jesus states His deity (8:58).

6. The crowd was caught off guard by the unusual behavior of Christ. He calmly faced the crowd, identified Himself, and made no effort to escape.

7-8. Again He asked the crowd whom they sought. He requested that the disciples be left alone. In the moment of personal crisis, the Shepherd's concern was not for Himself, but for His sheep.

9. The Scripture mentioned deals with spiritual preservation rather than physical protection. Perhaps the disciples had already been arrested, and Christ knew that "it would have been too severe a test for their faith" (Hendriksen, p. 380).

10-11. Impulsive Peter proceeded to cut off a slave's ear with his sword (Gr machaira, denotes any long knife). Christ rebuked him by stating that He will drink of the cup which the Father hath given me. This cup refers to the suffering and agony of the cross.

2. His trials. 18:12-19:16.

12. The cohort and the temple guard take Jesus (arrest Him). They bound the One who had come to set them free (8:36).

13-14. They took Him to Annas. Although he was not at this time the high priest, nevertheless Annas had a great influence over the Sanhedrin. Christ was taken there for a preliminary examination. Annas would then give his advice to Caiaphas. Caiaphas had already drawn a conclusion regarding Christ's destiny.

15-16. Another disciple. This probably refers to John.

ciple was known unto the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high priest.

16 But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

17 Then saith the damsel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith, I am not.

18 And the servants and officers stood there, who had made a fire of coals; for it was cold: and they warmed themselves: and Peter stood with them, and warmed himself.

19 ¶The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

22 And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by struck Jesus with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high priest so?

23 Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but if well, why smitest thou me?

24 Now An'as had sent him bound unto Cā'ia-phas the high priest.

25 ¶And Simon Peter stood and warmed himself. They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high priest, being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off, saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him?

27 Peter then denied again: and immediately the cock crew.

28 ¶Then led they Jesus from Cā'ia-phas unto the hall of judgment: and it was early; and they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the passover.

29 Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee.

31 Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death:

32 That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying what death he should die.

33 Then Pilate entered into the judgment hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

Palace. Here was the courtyard located in the center of the building. Peter could not enter the courtyard. John talked to the woman who controlled the entrance, and Peter was finally admitted.

17-18. John records only one of Peter's three denials. He was aware, however, that three were predicted by Christ (13:36-38). Here is a picture of a defeated man who had denied the Lord. He was warming himself by the fires of those who had arrested his Master.

19. The high priest. This refers to Annas (cf. 18:13). This was not a true trial since the Sanhedrin had not been assembled. The purpose of this inquisition was probably to gather evidence. Annas was interested in Christ's disciples and His doctrine. He was interested in the number of followers that Christ had gained.

20-21. Openly. Christ does not answer the question directly. He appeals to the fact that He taught His doctrine openly. Why askest thou me? Christ refused to be a witness for Himself. He asked Annas instead to produce witnesses who could testify about His teaching. Failure to produce reliable witnesses (those who heard me) would make the trial illegal.

22-24. One of the officers hit Christ in order to make Him answer the high priest. Again Christ appealed to them to produce witnesses who could testify that He had done evil. If they could not, then the behavior of the officer and the arrest itself were wrong. Annas could not answer the Lord, and he sent Him to Caiaphas.

25-27. Prior to describing the trial before Caiaphas, John interjects Peter's last two denials of the Lord. The crowd around the fire asks Peter if he is one of Christ's disciples, and he denies it. Then one of the relatives of Malchus states that he saw Peter in the garden. Again, he denies the Lord. Immediately the cock crew. This refers to "the third of four watches into which the night was divided" (Wycliff Bible Commentary, p. 363).

28. The trial before Caiaphas is not mentioned in John's narrative (Mt 26:57-68). Hall of judgment. They took Him to the governor's place of residence. Note that the Jews did not enter their gentile quarters. They were more interested in ceremonial purity than justice.

29-30. Pilate asks for the formal accusation that they were bringing against Christ. This was a logical question. The Jews had not prepared a formal indictment. They wanted Pilate to accept the fact that they would not bring a person to him if he were not a malefactor (evildoer).

31. Pilate, unaware that the Jews want to kill Christ, tells them to judge the case and pass sentence according to your law. The Jews could not legally execute anyone. They wanted Pilate to pass the death sentence on Christ.

32. The Jews used the method of stoning to execute criminals. If Pilate were to authorize death, it would mean crucifixion. This Roman method of execution had been predicted by Christ (Mt 20:17-19).

33. John does not describe all the details of the trial. It is assumed that the reader knows from the other gospels that a charge has been brought against Christ because He claimed to be the King of Israel. Pilate now questions Christ about this accusa-

34 Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me?

35 Pilate answered, Am I a Jew? Thine own nation and the chief priests have delivered thee unto me: what hast thou done?

36 Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence.

37 Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

39 But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the pass-over: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?

40 Then cried they all again, saying, Not this man, but Ba-rāb'bas. Now Ba-rāb'bas was a robber.

CHAPTER 19

THEN Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they went on him a purple robe,

3 And said, Hail, King of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

4 Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that I find no fault in him.

5 Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man!

6 When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him.

7 The Jews answered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 ¶When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid;

9 And went again into the judgment hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

tion. He may have asked this question with irony. It was ridiculous that this seemingly helpless prisoner would think Himself to be the King.

34-35. Christ desired to know whether Pilate was asking this question for the Jews or for himself. The Jews were looking for a political king and He was not at that moment their king. Pilate dismissed any prior conversation with the Jews. He simply wanted to know, what hast thou done?

36. Christ then explains the nature of His kingdom. He has no political motives in mind. His kingdom is a spiritual one which is not expanded or defended by military force.

37. Pilate wants to know if Christ is really a king. He was still confused about Christ's concept of a king and a kingdom. Pilate assumed Christ to be a political king. To this end. The purpose for which Christ was born of royal inheritance (as King of kings) was to bring truth to mankind. Those who are born again of that truth hear His voice (10:4).

38. Still confused about the spiritual purposes of Christ, Pilate asks the question, What is truth? The answer was standing before him (14:6). Satisfied that Christ is not a political threat to the Roman authorities, Pilate declares Christ to be innocent.

39-40. Pilate, although declaring the innocence of Christ, was fearful of the angry Jewish leaders. Since it was customary to release a prisoner at the Passover, Pilate attempted to place the responsibility of Christ's destiny in the hands of the Jews. It must be remembered, however, that each man is personally responsible for his relationship and actions to Christ. Pilate probably assumed that the majority would want Christ released since He was a popular person. Instead, the crowd asked for a robber (Mt 27:19-21).

19:1. Pilate orders Jesus to be scourged, hoping that the Jews would accept this rather than execution. The scourge was made of thongs to which were attached sharp pieces of metal and pieces of bone. The prisoners were beaten across the back, having the flesh and sometimes the organs torn. Many prisoners died from this cruel punishment.

2-3. The soldiers mock and torture Christ by their actions. They force a crown of thorns on His head, causing blood to flow down His face. They hit Him and dress Him like a king.

4-5. Pilate presents Christ dressed in a purple robe, with a crown and a reed. The robe is drenched with blood from the gaping wounds received from the scourging. Behold the man. Pilate clearly states that Christ is no king. He is simply a man. It is interesting to note that Pilate declares Christ innocent, yet subjects Him to a terrible beating.

6. Rather than being appeased, the angry multitude chants, Crucify, . . . Crucify . . . Frustrated, Pilate tells them that if Christ is to be crucified, they will have to do it. No fault. This is the third time that Pilate declares the innocence of Christ.

7. According to Roman law, Christ was innocent. The Jews now appeal to their law. Christ had claimed to be God, and by Jewish law, He should die (Lev 24:16).

8-9. When Pilate hears that Christ claimed to be the Son of God, he is more afraid. Superstitious Pilate had already been warned by his wife about Christ (Mt 27:19) and now he realizes that he may be dealing with the Son of God. Pilate immediately attempts to discover the origin of this person standing before him. An answer would be useless, since Pilate was spiritually blind.

JOHN 19:10

10 Then saith Pilate unto him, Speak-est thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered, Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him: but the Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cæsar.

13 ¶When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment seat in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gāb'ba-tha.

14 And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour: and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King!

15 But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cæsar.

16 Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him away.

17 And he bearing his cross went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew Gōl'go-tha:

18 Where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst.

19 ¶And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

21 Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered, What I have written I have written.

23 ¶Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

24 They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots. These things therefore the soldiers did.

25 ¶Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Clē'o-phas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by,

10-11. Fearful and confused, Pilate attempts to hide his weaknesses by the statement, I have power. Christ reminds him that the only authority he has is that which has been given to him by a higher source. Greater sin. Although Pilate was responsible for his actions to Christ, Caiaphas, who had planned the entire plot to kill Christ, had committed a greater sin and would be more accountable to God.

12. Fearful of Christ, and knowing that He was innocent, Pilate again attempted to release Him. The Jews made their final argument, thou art not Caesar's friend. If the Jews contacted Caesar, and explained that Pilate released a king who threatened Roman authority, Pilate would be guilty of treason against Rome.

13-14. Pilate was ready to make his decision. (For a discussion of the chronology of the events of the crucifixion see notes on Mt 26.) Behold your king. It was apparent that Pilate hated the Jews and in scorn he gives them their king, poor, miserable, and beaten.

15-16. Driven by the crowd and not his conscience, Pilate succumbs to the wishes of the Jews.

3. His crucifixion. 19:17-37.

17. Christ was already weakened by the treatment of the soldiers, and now they make Him carry His cross. Golgotha. Called a place of a skull probably because its physical appearance resembles a skull, this place was also called Calvary (Lk 23:33).

18. They crucify Him between two criminals.

19-20. Since Christ had not been found guilty of a crime, Pilate placed a title above the cross. It was written in Aramaic, the language of the Jews; Greek, the language of culture; and Latin, the official language of Rome.

21-22. The chief priest was furious, and demanded that the title be changed from a statement to a claim. Pilate, vacillating in his character, now refused to change under pressure.

23-24. Four soldiers normally carried out the crucifixion sentence. Each soldier took one garment, and because of the value of the seamless inner coat, they cast lots for it. Unknowingly, the soldiers were actually fulfilling Old Testament Scripture (Ps 22:18). These things therefore the soldiers did. Bruised, beaten, mocked, tortured, compelled to carry His cross, Christ is now left hanging naked before the angry mob.

25. Contrasted to the soldiers and the crowd, John mentions three women who loved the Lord: Mary, His mother; Mary, the wife of Cleophas; and Mary Magdalene.

26-27. Woman. Although Mary was His earthly mother, Christ as her Redeemer and Saviour refers to her in that redempwhom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son!

27 Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

28 ¶After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

29 Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and they filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon hyssop, and put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost.

31 ¶The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that sabbath day was an high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

32 Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs:

34 But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water.

35 And he that saw it bare record, and his record is true: and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe.

36 For these things were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken.

37 And again another scripture saith, They shall look on him whom they pierced.

38 ¶And after this Joseph of Ar-i-ma-thæ'a, being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews, besought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus: and Pilate gave him leave. He came therefore, and took the body of Jesus.

39 And there came also Nic-o-dē-mus, which at the first came to Jesus by night, and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about an hundred pound weight.

40 Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury.

41 Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid.

42 There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAPTER 20

THE first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, tive relationship. Here is love again. Christ tells John to take care of His mother. This teaches that everyone has a responsibility to provide for and take care of his parents.

28. The life and death of Christ was a constant fulfillment of prophecy (Ps 22:15). This statement was another evidence of His physical suffering.

29. Vinegar (Gr unuo). This was a very strong wine.

30. It is finished. (The Gr perfect tense denotes the certainty of the fact.) Gave up the ghost. He died and gave His Spirit to God.

31. To permit a body to remain on the cross until the next day was a violation of Jewish law (Deut 21:22-23). Legs might be broken. Since the victim would press on his legs to lift his chest enough to breathe, if the legs were broken, this would hasten death. The victim would not be able to breathe.

32-33. When they came to Christ, they did not break His legs.

34. One of the soldiers took a spear and pierced his side.

35. John adds that he personally witnessed the events he has just described.

36-37. The importance of the piercing, and the fact that they did not break Jesus' legs, is given in that it fulfilled prophecy (Ps 34:20; Zech 12:10). Even these wicked soldiers in their duties were completing the plan of God.

4. His burial, 19:38-42.

38-40. Joseph and Nicodemus, who were secret disciples, now came into the open, and prepared the body of Christ for burial. Both men were wealthy, and they were members of the Sanhedrin (Lk 23:51; Jn 3:1).

41-42. They quickly prepared the body for burial, and put it in a new sepulchre near the place of the crucifixion. They intended to finish their preparations after the Sabbath (Lk 24:1).

B. Christ and the Resurrection. 20:1-31.

1. Christ revealed to Mary. 20:1-18.

20:1. On Sunday, Mary Magdalene came to the tomb with spices to anoint the body of Christ (Mk 16:1; Lk 24:1). Seeth the stone taken away. Mary would have had trouble removing the stone; now her problem is worse. The body is missing.

2. Mary runs to tell startling news to Peter and John (the other disciple, whom Jesus loved). These two were considered whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the LORD out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

JOHN 20:3

3 Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4 So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And he stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie,

7 And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8 Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

11 ¶But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre,

12 And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.

13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my LORD, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rab-bō'nī; which is to say, Master.

17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the LORD, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

19 ¶Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his to be the leading disciples and were a part of Christ's inner circle (Lk 9:27-29).

3-4. Peter and John immediately made their way to the tomb, first walking together, and then running together. Perhaps John was younger than Peter, since he arrived there first.

5. John, stooping down, looks in, and observes the linen clothes lying there. However, the resurrection does not explain this phenomenon in the disciple's mind (20:9).

6-7. Impulsive Peter does not stop outside the tomb, but goes inside. What Peter saw was strange. Everything was neat and orderly in the tomb, except that the body of the Lord was no longer there. The headband was folded and lying in a separate place from the rest of the grave clothes. It was now obvious that the body had not been stolen.

8-9. John entered the tomb, and saw and believed. The teaching of Christ's resurrection now began to dawn on them, and their sight now turned to faith as they realized that Christ had risen again from the dead.

10. Overwhelmed with their observations and the faith it produced, they returned home.

11. It is logical to assume that Mary returned to the tomb after Peter and John have returned home. She has no knowledge of the Lord's resurrection. She too stoops down and looks into the tomb.

12. Two angels. No explanation is given for the appearance of the angels to Mary and not to the two disciples. It is interesting to note that heaven is interested in the resurrection.

13-15. Why weepest thou? This is a time of joy and triumph; therefore, the angels want to know why Mary is weeping. Mary wants to know where the Lord's body is lying so that she can complete the embalming process. Mary is so overcome with sorrow and grief that she does not even recognize Jesus. He asks the same question that the angels asked, and He receives the same answer.

16. Mary. She now recognizes the person to whom she is speaking and calls him. Rabboni (Master).

17. Touch me not (Gr haptomai, to cling to or to take hold of). Christ told Mary to stop (Greek prohibition with present tense) clinging to Him because, by doing so, she could not keep the Lord there with her. His destination was to go to the Father. Note the warm and close terminology used: my brethren, your Father, your God. This is the new relationship between the disciples, the Son, and the Father.

18. The command given to Mary is the command given to all Christians: go and tell that Jesus is risen.

2. Christ revealed to the Ten. 20:19-23.

19. First day of the week. The Sabbath commemorates the creation of the world, but Sunday, the first day of the week, commemorates the redemption of the world. Fearful and confused, the disciples meet in secret. Christ appears to them apparently by coming through the wall. Peace. To the troubled disciples, Christ brings a message of peace.

20. Several important concepts emerge from this action: Jesus had a real body; His body had been resurrected (not just side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the LORD.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost:

23 Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.

24 ¶But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Did'y-mus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the LORD. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 ¶And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My LORD and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 ¶And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.

CHAPTER 21

AFTER these things Jesus shewed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Ti-be'ri-as; and on this wise shewed he himself.

2 There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Did'y-mus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zëb'e-dee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately: and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then Jesus saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now

His spirit), and the nail prints proved that He was Jesus and not someone else.

21. The resurrection had certain implications for the disciples. It gave them Peace, and it implied a commission: So send I you.

22-23. He breathed. This gift of the Holy Spirit is connected with the action of forgiving or retaining sins. It was not the work of the disciples to forgive sins, but the work of the Holy Spirit through the disciples as they fulfilled the Great Commission (Mt 28:18-20). Christ gave the disciples authority to state that forgiveness of sins was possible.

3. Christ revealed to Thomas. 20:24-31.

24-25. No explanation is given for Thomas' not being with the other disciples. Perhaps he was alone mourning the death of his Master. When the other disciples tried to comfort him with the news of the resurrection, he refused to accept it until he had actually touched the hands, feet, and side of the Saviour.

26. One week later, Christ appears again to the disciples (including Thomas), and gives the same message of Peace.

27. Compare this verse with verse 25. Christ answers all of Thomas' requests. Christ commands him to do what he said was necessary for him to believe.

28-29. My Lord and my God. Thomas now recognizes both the resurrection and the deity of Christ. Thomas based his faith on sight. Christ promises a blessing for those who believe upon hearing instead of upon seeing.

30. Many other signs. The greatest sign found in the writings of John is the sign of the resurrection (For a detailed description of the importance of this event see Josh McDowell's Evidence that Demands a Verdict.)

31. A detailed analysis of this verse is given in the Introduction to this Commentary.

C. Christ and the Commission. 21:1-25.

1. Miracle of the fish. 21:1-14.

21:1. Showed he himself (Gr phaneroō, to reveal or make known; show or manifest). Jesus now reveals His glory to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias (Galilee).

2. Peter, Nathanael, James, John, and two other unnamed disciples were together.

3-4. Again Peter is the man of action. I go a fishing. Although the Greek present tense (I am going to fish) is used here and normally denotes continual action, this does not necessarily mean that Peter intended to return permanently to his former occupation. As they arrive at the shore after a frustrating night, they see Jesus, but for some providential reason, they do not recognize Him.

5-6. Children (lit., lads). This question and negative answer was a blow to these fishermen's egos. Fishermen would not usually respond immediately to this unusual request by a stranger on the shore. However, there was something compelling about this Stranger that caused them to obey without an objection.

JOHN 21:7

they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits,) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three: and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

12 Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.

15 ¶So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs.

16 He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

18 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old,

7-8. It is the Lord. John finally recognizes that this Stranger is the Lord. Peter again is the first in action; he puts on his coat, for he was naked (lit., "stripped" of his overcoat). Peter's enthusiasm to be with the Lord would indicate that he was not fishing in disobedience to the Lord's command. The rest of the disciples now join the Lord and Peter.

9-11. Christ had already prepared a meal when they arrived. It consisted of fish and bread. Bring of the fish. They count the number of fish and discover that although there were one hundred fifty-three fish, yet was not the net broken.

12-13. Come and dine. Christ invites them to breakfast. The disciples are speechless in the presence of their risen Lord.

14. Shewed himself (see notes on 21:1).

2. Message to Peter. 21:15-17.

15. After breakfast, the attention of the Lord is upon Peter. Peter had denied his Lord three times, and now the Lord asks Peter three times, Lovest thou me? Two Greek words for "love" are played against each other in the original: Agapaō, when used in distinction from the other, connotes love as an emotion of deep appreciation based upon careful consideration. It means to recognize the worth of someone and esteem him highly. The synonym phileō, when used in distinction as here, connotes "love" as a pure, intense "feeling of love." It is a personal, warm, intimate relationship like that between family members. It is a love that is more spontaneous than philosophical. Jesus asks Peter, lovest thou me more than these? This refers to the other disciples. Peter had boasted of his loyalty, and yet had denied his Lord. The other disciples had not denied the Lord. Consequently, the Lord is really probing the sincerity of Peter's love. Peter answers, using a different word (Gr phileō). "I have a deep affection for You." Feed (Gr boskō, feed, graze, or tend to) my lambs. Christ is commissioning Peter to a pastoral office of caring for His sheep.

16. Jesus asks, lovest thou me (Gr agapaō)? Peter responds, I love thee (Gr phileō). Feed (Gr poimainō, shepherd) my sheep.

17. Jesus asks a third time, and the third question is the most convicting. The first two times, Jesus was asking Peter if he loved Him (using agapaō). Now the third time Jesus changes the verb to phileō. Peter is grieved, and he appeals to the omniscience of his Master. Thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee (Gr phileō). It is interesting to note that in Christ's commissioning Peter to tend to the sheep, the first time He tells Peter to feed His lambs, the second and third times to feed His sheep (using two different Greek words).

3. Conclusion. 21:18-25.

18-19. Christ now prophesies that one day Peter's freedom would cease. Old. This indicates that Peter will have a long, useful life of service. Thou shall stretch forth thy hands. This language could refer to crucifixion, and church tradition concurs thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.

19 This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

24 This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and we know that his testimony is true.

25 And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Amen.

that this is how Peter died. Glorify God. What confidence the Lord gives to the one who had denied Him. Peter would be faithful to the end, and would bring glory to God through his death. Follow me. The Lord calls Peter to a life of total commitment to Him.

20-23. Jesus begins to leave, and as Peter follows Him, he turns around and sees John following. Having been told about his future, Peter wants to know about John's future. The emphasis of Christ's rebuke is that Peter should not be concerned about John, but about the job which he must do. The disciples misunderstand the rebuke. They had forgotten the if. The future of John was not their business.

24. The disciple. This refers to John. Testifieth. The entire book of John is a testimony to the deity of Jesus Christ. We know. The we probably refers to the elders in the church of Ephesus. They are not identified by name.

25. John concludes by reminding his readers that he has described only a small portion of all that Jesus did.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- Barclay, William. The Gospel of John. In The Daily Study Bible. 2 Vols. 2nd ed. Philadelphia: Westminster, 1956.
- Barrett, C. K. The Gospel According to St. John. London: S.P.C.K., 1962.
- Gaebelein, A. C. The Gospel of John. Wheaton: Van Kampen Press, 1936.
- Godet, Frederic. Commentary on the Gospel of John. Trans. by Timothy Dwight. 2 Vols. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, reprinted, n.d.
- *Hendriksen, William. A Commentary on the Gospel of John. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1953.
- Ironside, Harry. Addresses on the Gospel of John. New York: Loizeaux Brothers, 1942.
- Kelly, William. An Exposition of the Gospel of John. Denver: Wilson Foundation, reprinted, 1966.
- *Kent, Homer A., Jr. Light in the Darkness: Studies in the Gospel of John. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1974.
- Lange, John P. The Gospel According to John. In Lange's Commentary on the Holy Scriptures. Trans. and ed. by Philip Schaff. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, reprinted, n.d.
- Lenski, R. C. H. The Interpretation of St. John's Gospel. Columbus: Lutheran Book Concern, 1942.
- Lightfoot, R. H. St. John's Gospel: A Commentary. Ed. by C. F. Evans. Oxford: Clarendon, 1956.
- Luthardt, Christoph Ernst. St. John's Gospel, Described and Explained According to Its Peculiar Character. Trans. by C. R. Gregory. 3 Vols. Edinburgh: T. and T. Clark, 1876-78.
- Morgan, G. Campbell. The Gospel According to John. Westwood, N. J.: Revell, 1933.
- *Morris, Leon. The Gospel According to John. In The International Commentary on the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1971.
- *Pink, Arthur W. Exposition of the Gospel of John. 3 Vols. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1945.
- Plummer, Alfred. The Gospel According to St. John. In Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools and Colleges. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1905.
- Scroggie, W. Graham. St. John, Introduction and Notes. In Study Hours Series. New York: Harper and Brothers, 1931.
- *Tasker, R. V. G. The Gospel According to St. John. In The Tyndale New Testament Commentaries. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1960.
- *Tenney, Merrill C. John: The Gospel of Belief. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1960.
- Vine, W. E. John: His Record of Christ. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1957.
- Westcott, B. F. The Gospel According to St. John: The Authorized Version with Introduction and Notes. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1950.

THE ACTS

Of The Apostles

INTRODUCTION

The Acts of the Apostles is unique among the books of the New Testament. One of the most influential books of all time, it forms the essential link between the gospel accounts of Jesus and the only account of the beginning of His church. The book of Acts is our chief source of information about the first century. As Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John record the gospel as evidenced in the life of Jesus Christ, Acts records the gospel as evidenced in the lives of those who followed Him. Luke writes his first letter (the Gospel according to Luke) to tell what Christ did while on earth through His physical body (see Lk 1:1-4). His second letter (the Acts) was written to tell what Christ was doing while in heaven through His spiritual body, the church.

The story in Acts moves rapidly from one episode to another. It records the birth and the growing pains of the fledgling church. It reveals the vitality of the first-century faith. It maps out the master plan for world evangelization. The first half of the book essentially records the ministry of Peter, the second half the ministry of Paul. Sub-themes in the lives of Stephen, Philip, and others are also revealed. But essentially the book of Acts records the working of the Holy Spirit in the lives of the New Testament church.

Authorship. Although the book of Acts is anonymous, and not even its title indicates authorship, yet a nearly universal tradition ascribes this writing to Paul's physician-friend, Luke. In the prologues to both Luke and Acts the author refers to himself by the first person pronoun. Theophilus, the recipient of both writings (Lk 1:4; Acts 1:1), obviously knew the identity of the author.

1. External evidence. The uniform tradition of the early church ascribes this work to Luke. The oldest extant list of New Testament writings, known as the Muratorian Fragment, which dates from the later half of the second century A.D., lists both the third Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles as the work of Luke. The so-called antimarcionite prologue to Luke (ca. A.D. 150-180), in discussing the third Gospel comments, "and afterwards this same Luke wrote the Acts of the Apostles." In his Against Heresies (A.D. 185), Irenaeus takes for granted that Luke is the author of Acts. Clement of Alexandria (ca. A.D. 155-215) quotes from the Acts in Stromata and says, "As Luke in the Acts of the Apostles relates that Paul said, 'Men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.'" In his work On Fasting, Tertullian (ca. A.D. 150-220) frequently quotes from or alludes to Acts naming Luke as the author. And Eusebius, in his Ecclesiastical History, published in A.D. 324, explicitly mentions Luke as the author of two books, the Gospel and the Acts. Origen (ca. A.D. 185-254) and others add their voices to the testimony of scholars that spans a hundred years attesting that Luke is the author of the Acts of the Apostles.

2. Internal evidence. Likewise, there is an overwhelming abundance of internal evidence to the authorship of Acts by Luke. First, an analysis of the style and language of both the third Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles makes it clear that whoever wrote the first also wrote the second. If Lucan authorship can be proved for the Gospel which bears his name, it can also be proved for the Acts. Secondly, the medical terminology which is characteristic of the vocabulary of the Acts necessitates that the author either be a physician or one well versed in that discipline. Since the traditional author is known to have been a physician (Col 4:14), it seems conclusive that Luke authored the Acts. Thirdly, there is a great deal of archaeological and epigraphal evidence which points to the fact that the author of Acts was well familiar with the first-century world. As an educated man, Luke would have been well traveled and would have personally known the Mediterranean world of the first century. Finally, a reading of the book makes it clear that the writer was a companion of Paul in many of the adventures recorded in Acts. In the so-called "we" passages the author describes the situation in the first person (16:10-17; 20:5-15; 21:1-18; 27:1-28:16). A survey of Paul's close associates produces only one individual who could have authored the passages which record these experiences. Timothy was in the presence of those awaiting Paul's arrival at Troas. Neither Titus nor Silas was with Paul on the journey to Rome or in Rome. The only close associate who fits the facts is Luke.

Date and place of writing. There is strong evidence to date the Acts of the Apostles in the first century. The style and vocabulary of the writer is certainly that of this era. He has a command of facts that is best explained by his being an eyewitness to them. The tone of the writing seems to rule out the possibility that it was written after the organized attack on the church by the Roman emperor Domitian (A.D. 81-96).

Apparently Acts could not have been written beyond the turn of the second century, for there are possible references to the text of Acts in the Epistle of Barnabas (ca. A.D. 100) and in Justin Martyr (ca. A.D. 150). Likewise, the earliest possible date for the completion of Acts is two years after Paul's arrival in Rome as a prisoner (Acts 28:30-31). Thus the book must have been composed sometime between A.D. 61-62 and approximately A.D. 95.

Although most conservative scholars place the date of writing between A.D. 62 and A.D. 68, a very good case can be made for the early 60's. First, there is an apparent excitement in the record of the "we passages" which most likely existed shortly after the events occurred. Secondly, the lack of any discussion of the fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 would seem to preclude a date of writing beyond that date. Thirdly, the abrupt ending of Acts is best explained by a drawing to a close of Paul's two-year imprisonment in Rome. Luke had to finish his writing in order to once again sail with Paul.

Although arguments can be advanced for other early dates, there seem to be no facts prohibiting a date of A.D. 62-63 for the writing of Acts. Even though the place of writing is not mentioned by name, it is reasonable to assume that if the A.D. 62-63 date is correct, then the place of writing is Rome. As attending physician to the Apostle, Luke would certainly have had time to write the historical account of Acts during that two-year house arrest of Paul at Rome.

Purpose. Although the book of Acts does not contain any indication of the author's purpose, it nevertheless cannot be divorced from the Gospel of Luke. Since these two works are an integral whole, with coherent purpose running throughout, it is safe to assume that the purpose stated clearly in the initial verses of Luke is still the purpose for the writing of the Acts. In the words of the author himself: "Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us, Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word; It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus, That thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed" (Lk 1:1-4).

Since the church was growing so rapidly in the Roman world, those who joined its ranks needed an authoritative account of its birth and early history. Thus Luke sets himself to the task of giving a coherent account of the life of Jesus Christ as it was lived through those closest to Him. Thus the birth and development of the church, the preaching of Peter, and the missionary activity of Paul became the motifs of the most accurate history of the first century, i.e., the Acts of the Apostles (see the discussion of Sir William Ramsey, St. Paul the Traveller and the Roman Citizen, p. 7ff.).

OUTLINE

- I. The Birth of the Church at Jerusalem. 1:1-3:26
  - A. From Resurrection to Ascension. 1:1-14.
  - B. Twelfth Apostle Chosen. 1:15-26.
  - C. Pentecost. 2:1-13.
  - D. Peter's Preaching. 2:14-3:26.
- II. Persecution and the Expansion of the Church. 4:1-9:31.
  - A. Persecution Before the Sanhedrin. 4:1-22.
  - B. Character of the Persecuted Church. 4:23-5:16.
  - C. Persecution before the Sadducees. 5:17-42.
  - D. Persecution of Stephen. 6:1-8:4.
  - E. The Ministry of Philip. 8:5-40.
  - F. Conversion of Saul. 9:1-31.
- III. Peter and the Beginning of Gentile Christianity. 9:32-12:25.
  - A. Peter's Healing Ministry. 9:32-43.
  - B. Cornelius Receives the Gospel. 10:1-48.
  - C. Peter Defends His Ministry. 11:1-18.
  - D. Continued Persecution. 11:19-12:25.
- IV. Paul's First Missionary Journey: Its Effect. 13:1-15:35.
  - A. Commissioning of Barnabas and Saul. 13:1-13.
  - B. The First Foray into Asia Minor. 13:14-52.
  - C. Iconium, Derbe, and Lystra. 14:1-28.
  - D. The Council of Jerusalem. 15:1-35.
- V. Paul's Second Journey: Christianity Spreads Westward. 15:36-18:22.
  - A. A New Team. 15:36-16:5.
  - B. A New Direction. 16:6-40.
  - C. Flight from Thessalonica to Athens. 17:1-34.
  - D. The Corinthian Ministry. 18:1-22.
- VI. Paul's Third Journey: Reinforcement. 18:23-21:14.
  - A. The Prolonged Ephesian Ministry. 18:23-19:41.
  - B. From Macedonia to Miletus. 20:1-16.
  - C. Farewell to the Ephesians. 20:17-38.
  - D. Return to Palestine. 21:1-14.
- VII. Paul's Journey to Rome. 21:15-28:31.
  - A. The Apprehension of Paul. 21:15-22:30.
  - B. Paul's Defense before the Sanhedrin and Pharisees. 23:1-22.
  - C. Paul's Defense before Felix and Festus. 23:23-25:12.
  - D. Paul's Defense before Agrippa. 25:13-26:32.
  - E. The Journey to Rome. 27:1-28:10.
  - F. Conclusion. 28:11-31.

COMMENTARY

I. THE BIRTH OF THE CHURCH AT JERUSALEM.

1:1-3:26.

A. From Resurrection to Ascension. 1:1-14.

THE former treatise have I made, O Thē-ōph'i-lus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach.

2 Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen:

3 To whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God:

4 And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me.

5 For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?

7 And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.

8 But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Sa-mā'ri-a, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

9 And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel;

1:1-2. The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus. The relationship between Luke and Acts has already been discussed. It is obvious that the Gospel of Luke is the former treatise mentioned here. There is no reason to suppose that Theophilus was not a real person, although some would translate literally as "dear to God." In that event, Luke would be addressing those Christian readers in general. However, the title of respect, "most excellent" as found in Luke 1:3, makes it most improbable that the author is addressing a company of individuals. Whether Theophilus is a Jew or Greek cannot be absolutely determined. The absence of the honorific title here in Acts 1:1 may not mean a loss of affection but rather a deepening friendship between Luke and Theophilus.

3. Many infallible proofs. The resurrection ministry of the Lord was accompanied by unmistakable signs. Over a period of forty days between His passion and ascension Jesus appeared at frequent intervals to His apostles. No one could seriously doubt that He was alive. The adjective "infallible" (Gr tekmerion) is employed in the AV in order to extract the complete meaning. So infallible were the "proofs" of Christ's resurrection that the author does not feel it necessary to list them for his first-century readers.

4-5. Wait for the promise of the Father. Much ink has been used attempting to explain these five words, the promise of the Father. Various passages of Scripture make it clear that the promise of the Father (Joel 2:28; Acts 2:16) and also the promise of the Son (Jn 14:16, 26; 15:26; 16:7) were references to the arrival of the Holy Spirit of God.

6-7. Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom of Israel? Even after the resurrection ministry of our Lord, the disciples were yet confused about His true purpose in coming to live among them. Jesus did not answer the apostles' question concerning the precise time when God would restore the kingdom of Israel, but He did promise them something far more important in those seconds prior to the ascension.

8. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you. The power to which He referred was not political, but spiritual. When the Holy Ghost came upon the disciples they would be clothed with heavenly power. As Jesus had been anointed at His baptism with the Holy Spirit and power, so now His disciples will share in that anointing. The Holy Ghost will come upon them in power. Ye shall be witnesses unto me. Jesus came to bear witness of the Father and His love for mankind. The apostles would bear witness of Jesus' death and resurrection, proving God's love for mankind. The references to Jerusalem, Judaea, and Samaria, and the uttermost part of the earth, give the widening circles of the witness to God's love. Actually this verse provides a table of contents and divine outline for the entire book of Acts: (1) witnessing in Jerusalem (chs. 1-7); (2) witnessing in Judaea and Samaria (chs. 8-12); and (3) witnessing unto the uttermost part of the earth (chs. 13-28).

9-11. Having commissioned His disciples, the Lord was now prepared to disappear from their sight and make no further resurrection appearances. As the cloud received Him out of their sight, the Lord was once again restored to the glory which He had with the Father before the world began (Jn 17:4-5). As those gathered looked steadfastly toward heaven, two men in white appeared, whom Luke obviously intends his readers to un-

11 Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 ¶Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.

13 And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Al-phae'us, and Simon Ze-lo'te's, and Judas the brother of James.

14 These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

15 ¶And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of names together were about an hundred and twenty.)

16 Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.

17 For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry.

18 Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Acél'da-ma, that is to say, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and his bishoprick let another take.

21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph called Bár'sā-bas, who was surnamed Justus, and Mat-thí'as.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen.

25 That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Juderstand as angelic messengers (cf. Mt 28:3; Jn 20:12). They gave to the followers of the Lord Jesus the tremendous promise, this same Jesus . . . shall so come in like manner. Not another and in a different way, but this same Jesus in the same way, would descend for believers as they had seen Him ascend from them. Between ascension and His return for them, however, would be an interval of time in which the Holy Spirit would empower His church to carry on the ministry of worldwide evangelization.

12-14. To the disciples their duty was clear. They were to return to Jerusalem and wait there for the empowerment of the Spirit of God. Thus they came to the upper room where the Eleven continued with one accord in prayer and supplication.

B. Twelfth Apostle Chosen. 1:15-26.

15-17. Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples. It is clear that the Apostle Peter has now become the undisputed leader of the apostolic band. The bumbling, denying Peter has now become the rock and is the principal preacher of Christianity following the ascension of the Lord. Peter clearly understands that the defection of Judas and his subsequent replacement are both fulfillments of Old Testament prophecies. The Lord also applied Psalm 41:9 to the defection of Judas (Jn 13:18). Peter here adduces further "testimonies" from the Psalter indicating that they must continue following the plan of God, as they understand it to be.

18-20. Now this man purchased a field . . . insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood. "The account of Judas' faith (vss. 18-20) is not inconsistent with that set forth by Matthew (27:3-10). The field was probably bought by the legally-minded priests in Judas' name. Amid the crazed inconsistencies of despair he may have laid claim to it in consequence, and in bitter irony made it the scene of suicide. The two accounts preserve different but equally true details from the rest of the shocking story, and the field won its sombre name on more than one count" (E. M. Blaiklock, Acts of the Apostles, p. 53).

Further evidence confirming the prophetic character of Judas' death is given by Luke in Peter's quotation from the Psalms. The former, from Psalm 69:25, is a prayer that the final resting place of the foes of the psalmist will be a place of desolation. The latter, from Psalm 109:8, is a prayer to the enemy of the psalmist that a possible replacement will be found for the psalmist.

21-23. The essential criteria for the replacement for the apostolic band were twofold: this person must have been with the Lord from His baptism by John unto His ascension; and, more importantly, he must have been a witness of the resurrection, as the others were. Joseph called Barsabas . . . and Matthias. Of either man we know nothing. We even hear no more of Matthias in the New Testament, although a legend of Ethiopian martyrdom is known.

24-26. A momentous decision was about to be made. Immediately the disciples set themselves to praying, seeking the will of the Lord. Specifically, they asked that the Father would make known unto them which of the two candidates had already been chosen by God. And they gave forth their lots. The disciples did not now engage in a bit of gambling. We must das by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Mat-thi'as; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

CHAPTER 2

AND when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

4 And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

6 Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

7 And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galilæans?

8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

9 Pär'thi-ans, and Medes, and E'lamites, and the dwellers in Mês-o-po-tā' remember that before lots were cast they selected two men whom they judged most worthy to fill Judas' vacancy. Having passed that difficult screening test, they were now prepared to receive the will of God. Casting lots to discern God's will was a very respectable Hebrew custom. The disciples believed in God's providence and perhaps even remembered, "The lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord" (Prov 16:33). Divine will is now known; the lot fell to Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

C. Pentecost. 2:1-13.

Pentecost was the third great Israelite feast mentioned in Leviticus 23. It was a harvest festival fifty days after the Passover week. This particular Pentecost, however, was to have greater significance than those which had preceded it. Old Testament Pentecost occurred fifty days after Israel left Egypt and the Passover lamb was slain. New Testament Pentecost occurred fifty days after Christ rose from the dead, the Lord being our Passover Lamb. Old Testament Pentecost celebrated the birth of the nation Israel (Ex 19:5). New Testament Pentecost celebrated the birth of the church (2:41-47). Old Testament Pentecost witnessed the slaying of some three thousand souls (Ex 32:28). New Testament Pentecost witnessed the saving of some three thousand souls (2:41). The former pointed typologically to the latter.

2:1-3. They were all with one accord in one place. The word translated with one accord (Gr homothymadon), meaning likemindedness, occurs twelve times in the New Testament, eleven of which are found in the book of Acts. This shows the unity of purpose among these early disciples.

The coming of the Holy Spirit of God with power was accompanied by two manifestations. The first was the sound of a rushing mighty wind, and the second was cloven tongues like as of fire. The wind is symbolic of the Spirit of God. In Ezekiel 37, Ezekiel prophesies that the wind would blow upon the dead bones in the valley of his vision. He was actually prophesying the coming of the Spirit of God upon Israel. Here that same wind is used to symbolize the Spirit's presence. In addition to the audible wind, an appeal was made to their eyes as the cloven tongues of fire appeared. Again, Matthew and Luke both report that John the Baptist foretold of One who would baptize "with the Holy Ghost, and with fire" (Mt 3:11; Lk 3:16). Together the fire and wind make a graphic picture of the coming of the Spirit of God.

4. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues. Although glossolalia is not always a proof of the presence of the Spirit of God, for many pagans practiced speaking in other tongues, nevertheless here, as the Spirit gave them utterance, these men at Pentecost were given an unnatural ability to speak in tongues that were not their own. The word translated tongue (Gr dialektos) can mean language as well as dialect. The various languages being spoken corresponded to the nationalities of those present (cf. 2:8).

5-11. And there were dwelling at Jerusalem, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. From farflung lands and many languages, Jews had come from the Diaspora to celebrate the Feast of Weeks in Jerusalem. This was because only at the Jerusalem Temple could they attend these special sacrificial services (Num 28:26 ff.). News of the strange events taking place on Pentecost quickly spread throughout the city. And they were all amazed and marvelled. It was not immediately evident how these Galilean Jews could be speaking in the tongues of each of the listeners. A lengthy and impressive list of the nationalities of those present is now given. They were all there: Parthians to Phrygians; Cretans to Cappadocians; Elamites to Egypt-mī-a, and in Judæa, and Căp-pa-dō'- ci-a, in Pontus, and Asia,

10 Phrýgĭ-a, and Păm-phŷlĭ-a, in Egypt, and in the parts of Lĭb'ŷ-a about Cŷ-rē'ne, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes,

11 Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

12 And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another,
What meaneth this?

13 Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.

14 ¶But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judæa, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

16 But this is that which was spoken
by the prophet Jō'eĭ;

17 And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy:

19 And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath;
blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

21 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him, being delivered by the deter-minate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope:

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

28 Thou hast made known to me the tians. The astounding testimony of each one was, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

12-13. Although all were amazed, others mocking said, These men are full of new wine. The new wine (Gr gleukos) is "sweet wine." Pentecost is too early for new vintage wine, August being the next vintage. So different were these disciples at Pentecost that those who looked on mocked them as if they were drunk.

D. Peter's Preaching. 2:14-3:26.

14-16. But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice. Having been a disciple of the Lord, and a follower, Peter is now ready to assume a role of leadership. Even though he is the principal preacher of Christianity after the ascension, nevertheless, we must notice that the Eleven stand behind him giving their full support to his message. Peter warns the onlookers that the one hundred and twenty are not drunken as everyone thought, but what they are viewing is in actuality a fulfillment of prophecy. They should not be surprised at what they see, for it was predicted hundreds of years before by the prophet Joel.

17-21. These verses are a quotation of Joel 2:28-32 in which the prophet announces the coming day of the Lord. Joel's prophecy was given in the midst of a call for repentance from the nation Israel (Joel 2:12-14). Peter quotes that prophecy in the same context.

"The wonders and signs to be revealed in the world of nature, as described in verses 19 and 20, may have more relevance in the present context than is sometimes realized: it was little more than seven weeks since the people in Jerusalem had indeed seen the sun turned into darkness, during the early afternoon of the day of our Lord's crucifixion. And on the same afternoon, the paschal full moon may well have appeared blood-red in the sky in consequence of that preternatural gloom. These were to be understood as tokens of the advent of the day of the Lord, 'that great and notable day,' a day of judgment, to be sure, but more immediately the day of God's salvation to all who invoked His name" (F. F. Bruce, The Book of Acts, p. 69).

22-24. Jesus of Nazareth . . . being delivered by the deter-minate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have . . .
crucified and slain: Whom God hath raised up. Peter now gets to the main theme of his message. In the ears of his hearers, he rehearses the death, burial, and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ. One who accomplished mighty works and signs and wonders through the power of God had been taken and crucified and slain. It was the howling mob that cried, "Crucify Him!" However, all who participated in putting the Lord to death were unconsciously fulfilling the determinate counsel and foreknowl-edge of God. It was God's purpose that the Messiah should suffer death for us (cf. Lk 24:25, 46; Acts 17:3; 26:23). But if the Messiah's suffering and death were ordained by the determinate counsel of God, so was His resurrection and glory.

25-28. As support for his message, Peter appeals to the Old Testament. His quotation comes from Psalm 16:8-11. These prophetic words, so Peter argues, were fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth and in no one else. Therefore, the Messiah whom David promised was in fact Jesus of Nazareth.

ACTS 2:29

ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

30 Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;

31 He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.

32 This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.

33 Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 ¶ Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?

38 Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41 ¶ Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.

42 And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.

43 And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.

44 And all that believed were together, and had all things common;

45 And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.

46 And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, 47 Praising God, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

29-32. Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David. Peter now clarifies the prophecy which he has just quoted. It is evident that prophecy did not literally find its fulfillment in David, for the patriarch died and is buried and is in a sepulchre that very day. But Jesus Christ's triumph over death in the resurrection confirms the veracity of this Old Testament prophecy. Therefore the prophecy was not made of David himself, but of his descendant, Jesus of Nazareth. They are all witnesses of the resurrected Lord and could attest to the veracity of the prophecy.

33-36. Peter continues to illustrate that the patriarch David is not the Messiah, For David is not ascended into the heavens. The exaltation of Christ allows Him to sit at the right hand of the Father and thus send the Holy Spirit of God on His believers. This David could not do, for he had not ascended into the heavens. In proof of this, Peter appealed to Psalms 110:1 which he quotes as evidence that David addressed the Lord Jesus as One on high. Peter's conclusion: that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37-40. Peter's preaching was tremendously effective, for those who heard were pricked in their heart. Those listening asked, what shall we do? Peter's answer to them was, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ. This is one of the most controversial verses in the New Testament. In understanding it we must remember that it was originally stated as a message to Israel concerning their national crime of murdering their Messiah. It is unwise to link baptism with the remission of sins for nowhere do the Scriptures teach that salvation is dependent on baptism (see I Cor 1:17; cf. I Cor 15:1-4, where Paul clearly states what the gospel is and baptism is not included). Those who insist upon baptismal regeneration literally "rob Paul to pay Peter" (see II Pet 3:15-16).

41-47. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. by the Holy Spirit of God, so effective was Peter's first sermon that three thousand souls were added unto the church that day. Not only is evangelism evident here, but growth in the church is evident as well. Each one saved was then nurtured in the faith as he continued to learn the doctrine of the apostles, to fellowship with the believers, to sit in equality at the Lord's table, to pray and share his burdens with others of like precious faith.

And not only that; all that believed were together, and had all things common. The enjoying of all things in common among those of the early church should not be interpreted as communism. This was an early system of mutual ownership (2:45) which is distinct from communism. Communism says, "what is yours, is mine." "Common-ism" says, "what is mine is yours also." At the birth of the church, this system was absolutely necessary for many who came to know the Lord were repudiated by society and disinherited by family. This system was temporary, and had its problems (cf. Acts 5:1; 6:1). It is a system which gave rise to laziness (II Thess 3:7-10) and had to be clarified by the Apostle Paul.

Nevertheless, in the harmony of the early church, the people continued likeminded, Praising God, and having favor with all the people. This unity of purpose produced much fruit and daily the Lord added to His church.

The Jewish Diaspora in the Times of Jesus

CHAPTER 3

NOW Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

2 And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;

3 Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms.

4 And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us.

5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.

7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.

8 And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.

9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God:

10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

11 ¶ And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12 And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

13 The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.

14 But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you;

15 And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses.

16 And his name through faith in his name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know; yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers.

18 But those things, which God before had shewed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted

3:1-6. So strong was the bond of love between these early believers, that people of diverse backgrounds found themselves strangely teamed together. A prime example is that of Peter and John. Peter was impetuous, forthright, and very bold. John was more quiet and retiring, one who was tender and compassionate. Yet at the established hour of prayer, Peter and John went up together into the temple. Their unity is rewarded by the Lord. As they entered the Temple compound through the Gate Beautiful, probably given this name because it was a gate of Corinthian bronze, which had such exquisite workmanship that it "far exceeded in value those gates plated with silver and set in gold" (Josephus, Jewish Wars, vs. 5:3), they met a man who had been lame from his mother's womb. When the man asked alms of Peter and John, Peter intensely fixed his eyes upon the lame man and with a piercing gaze the apostle offered the lame man much more than silver and gold. Peter's classic response was, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. At that authoritative command, given in the authority of the name of Christ Jesus, the lame man did that which he could never do before.

7-11. The progression of verbs used by Luke to describe the activity of this lame man is very interesting. When Peter took the man's hand, immediately the feet and ankle bones of the lame man received strength which was not their own. The man leaped up, walked, putting one foot in front of the other, and accompanied the two disciples into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God. Those standing by looked on in amazement. Obviously they recognized the man as the lame beggar who had been a familiar sight at the Gate Beautiful. Having passed through this gate at the entrance to the Temple, they made their way along the eastern wall of the outer court to the colonnade named after Solomon. Here a crowd of spectators thronged around the man and the disciples. They stood in amazement and were ready for some explanation.

12-18. The astute Peter immediately recognized an opportunity to preach his second great sermon. He begins with the question, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? Because he is appealing to a Jewish audience, he makes reference to the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, but quickly draws the focus of that reference to God's Son, Jesus. To accurately identify Him, and to cause them to feel remorse, Peter described Jesus as the One delivered up to Pilate, the One whom they had denied, the Holy One and the Just. The Jewish mob of Jerusalem killed the Prince of Life, but God had raised Him from the dead. It was through His name, that name once humbled and cried out against, that this lame man had been healed. Peter pressed the point that he was not healed magically or naturally but supernaturally through the power invested in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. His purpose again was to bring them to the belief that Jesus was indeed the predicted Messiah and that which happened to Him, His suffering and death, had been foretold by the mouths of the prophets.

19-21. Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out. Peter's second sermon follows the lines out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

20 And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

21 Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you.

23 And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

24 Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.

25 Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed.

26 Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.

CHAPTER 4

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sād'du-ceeds, came upon them.

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide.

4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And Ān'as the high priest, and Cā'ia-phas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

8 Then Peter, filled with the Holy of his first. He makes reference to the Lord Jesus and His messiahship and then calls for repentance on the part of those who crucified the Lord of Glory. Interestingly, the gift of the Holy Spirit is not mentioned in this sermon, for he is speaking nationally to Israel and not individually to the Israelites. It is in the context of this national message that he mentions the times of refreshing and the times of restitution of all things. The word rendered "refreshing" (Gr anapsysis) is and may be translated "respite" (cf. Ex 8:15). Prior to the time when God shall send Jesus Christ again, He who has now ascended into heaven, the believing remnant of Israel will repent and turn to God in preparation for the Millennium which is to follow (cf. Deut 30:1-3; Zech 12:10-14). Peter implores national Israel to repent of their sins so that they may be part of that remnant when the "times of refreshing" come.

The word rendered "restitution" (Gr apokatastasis, vs. 21) should perhaps be rendered "fulfillment" or "establishment." It is a restoration to the former state in the program of God. Although at the time of writing things looked very bleak for national Israel, nevertheless Peter assures the Israelites that God will once again deal with Israel in a blessed and bountiful way (cf. Rom 11:26-27).

22-26. The apostle introduces the testimony of Moses to support his case in a call for national repentance. The words that follow are from Deuteronomy 18:15ff. Moses is there warning the children of Israel not to follow after the practices of the Canaanites, but to trust God to raise up a prophet like Moses from among their brethren. Peter contends that that prophet was indeed the Lord Jesus Christ, whom the Jews had crucified.

The prophetic testimonies of Samuel and the subsequent prophets are added to that of Moses. The whole of Old Testament prophetic testimony is to show that Jesus was indeed the expected Messiah, but in the plan of God, was crucified, buried, and raised from the dead. In addressing the children of the prophets, Moses makes reference to the fact that the Israelites are the heirs to the covenants made to Abraham and others. Hence God is vitally interested in having the Israelites repent and receive Jesus Christ as Messiah and Saviour so that He may turn away every one of you from his iniquities.

II. PERSECUTION AND THE EXPANSION OF THE CHURCH. 4:1-9:31.

A. Persecution Before the Sanhedrin. 4:1-22.

4:1-4. Such a crowd had gathered around Peter and John at Solomon's colonnade that the priest, the captain of the Temple (an official referred to in literature as the chief sagan) and the Sadducees seized them. Traditionally the priests and High Priests came from the ranks of the aristocratic Sadducees. These three groups were angered at the fact that Peter and John taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead, a doctrine to which the Sadducees were violently opposed. The end result was that Peter and John were bodily thrown into prison and incarcerated until the next day. However, from Peter's second sermon five thousand men believed, another great victory for the faith.

5-7. The next morning the Sanhedrin met to discuss this problem. Their meeting probably took place just west of the temple area, across the Tyropoeon Valley, in the open-air gathering place known as the Xystos (i.e., "polished floor"). Present were Annas, the senior ex-High Priest, his son-in-law Caiaphas, the present High Priest, John, Alexander, and other kinsmen of the High Priest who cannot be identified with certainty. They were not at all concerned that a man was healed or that a sermon was preached, but in what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

8-12. Always boldly ready to preach, and having been suc-

Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders which is become the head of the corner.

12 Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

13 ¶Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves,

16 Saying, What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people; for all men glorified God for that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was shewed.

23 ¶And being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is:

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with cessful in his first two endeavors, Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, now begins his third sermon. He boldly asserts that the man was healed in the power, by the authority of, and in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. Then, as has now become his practice, he preaches the death, burial, and resurrection of the Lord Jesus and links that to the well-known Old Testament Scripture, "The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner" (Ps 118:22). The once-despised Jesus of Nazareth, now glorified and at the right hand of the Father, was the One by whose authority this man was healed. If the Sanhedrin insists on repudiating the name and power of Jesus, they must also insist on repudiating the possibility of salvation, for there is none other name under heaven given, whereby we must be saved. Healing, tongues, the church, the Spirit of God, even God the Father Himself is not the point of contact with sinful man. Jesus Christ alone is the One by whom salvation comes to mankind.

13-22. These highly educated and sophisticated members of the Sanhedrin were completely astonished at the boldness of Peter and John. Obviously they had no formal training in the rabbinical schools, yet they ably defended their actions and sustained a theological disputation with the Supreme Court of the nation. There was but one answer: they had been with Jesus. Their only recourse was to release Peter and John.

After they had done so, the Sanhedrin then attempted to deal with their dilemma. A miracle had been performed in their midst and all of Jerusalem knew it. They could not deny the miracle. However, they could attempt to keep the news of that miracle from spreading to other communities. The decision: let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

Peter and John were recalled to the chambers of the Sanhedrin and advised that they could never again speak or teach in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. Actually, the Sanhedrin had little hope that they would obey this command. There was only one course of action for Peter and John: we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. This open defiance only provoked an additional threat by the Sanhedrin. Their arrest and release were only to increase the number of believers in Jesus of Nazareth. The New Testament church had been born, was expanding rapidly, and had two eloquent spokesmen in the persons of Peter and John. Nothing could stand in the way of its development. Persecution only hastened the inevitable growth of the church.

B. Character of the Persecuted Church. 4:23-5:16.

23-30. Having been finally released by the Sanhedrin, Peter and John returned to where the other disciples were gathered and recounted for them what had just taken place. It was an occasion for rejoicing and together, with one accord, they made their prayer unto God. It was a prayer of thanksgiving.

They addressed God as Sovereign Lord (Gr despotēs, cf. Lk 2:29; Rev 6:10). God is the Sovereign Creator of all, and as such was in complete control of the Sanhedrin situation. After addressing the Lord in typical Hebrew language, the disciples then quoted the opening words of Psalm 2 (vs. 25). Next came a rehearsing of Satan's attempts to thwart the purpose of God as represented by Herod Antipas, Tetrarch of Galilee and Peraea (cf. Lk 23:7ff.), and Pontius Pilate. They are not concerned, however, with Satan's attempts for they are convinced that what happened to the Lord Jesus (and now to them) was foreordained by the counsel of God. The Sanhedrin and others may threaten them, but they can never defeat them. "If God be for us, who the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together.

28 For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word.

30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.

31 And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 ¶ And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

33 And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

35 And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

36 And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

CHAPTER 5

BUT a certain man named An-a-ni'as, with Sap-phi'ra his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

3 But Peter said, An-a-ni'as, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And An-a-ni'as hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, wound can be against us?" (Rom 8:31). In the midst of persecutions and threats, the disciples pray that with all boldness they may speak thy word, By stretching forth thine hand to heal. Here the medical language of Luke comes to the fore. The word translated "heal" (Gr iaosis) is used elsewhere twice by Luke and by no one else in the New Testament. This offers good evidence for the authorship of Luke. The disciples' prayer closes with a petition that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.

31. And when they had prayed, the place was shaken. This first-century fledgling church was not only a persecuted church, and a Spirit-filled church, and a powerful church, it was also a praying church. They had found that prayer was the ground of power. So evident was the Spirit of God that the place in which they were assembled shook as with an earthquake when their prayer was offered up. Again, they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. While this was a fresh filling of the Spirit, it cannot be considered a fresh baptism. The only baptism by the Spirit of God they would experience had already occurred at Pentecost. With increased filling came increased boldness to speak the Word of God.

32-37. Characteristic of a praying church is its lack of selfishness. Each member of this Jerusalem church was interested in the welfare of each other member. The expression, of one heart and of one soul, shows the remarkable unanimity of this Spirit-filled community. Richer members of the church made provision for those who were poor. No one was in want or hunger. Those who had houses or land sold them in order to see to the welfare of others. Money was brought and laid at the apostles' feet and distribution was made to everyone according as he had need. No one made windfall profits; no one was impoverished.

Joses . . . surnamed Barnabas . . . Having land, sold it. The exact etymology of Joses' name Barnabas is not clear, but he does show himself to be a true "son of consolation [encouragement]." As a Levite from the island of Cyprus, he was not unfamiliar with Jerusalem, for he had relatives there (see 12:12; Col 4:10). The land which Barnabas sold may have been great or little, but whichever, he brought the money and willingly laid it at the apostles' feet to be distributed to every man according as he had need. Here is a fine example of Christian commitment that goes beyond mere words.

5:1-6. The account of Ananias and Sapphira occurs within the context of, and right on the heels of, the account of the generosity of Barnabas in sharing with other believers. As Barnabas has sold a possession and brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet, so too this husband-and-wife team, Ananias and Sapphira, sold a possession. The difference between Barnabas and them, however, is seen in the second verse, And kept back part of the price. Ananias and Sapphira had apparently not learned the lesson that there is no such thing as secret sin. The psalmist David had to exclaim, "O God, thou knowest my foolishness, and my sins are not hid from thee" (Ps 69:5; see also Moses, Ex 2:11-14; and Achan, Josh 7:21-22).

When Peter confronted Ananias with whether or not Satan had filled his heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, the apostle made it abundantly clear that the practice of "common-ism" was definitely not communism. Peter asserted, While it remained, was it not thine own? What belonged to Ananias was indeed his and did not belong to the church, unless he gave it to them. Like-him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 ¶And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And of the rest durst no man join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)

15 Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one.

17 ¶Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sād/du-ceeds,) and were filled with indignation,

18 And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and wise, after he sold the land, Ananias could do with the money whatever he wished. If he shared it with the believers of Jerusalem who were less fortunate than he, it would be out of concern and love for them, not out of requirement. Since he chose to give it to the church in the same manner that Barnabas had given, he should not have attempted to lie to God and His servants by claiming that he had given his all. A lie to the servant of God was tantamount to lying to the Spirit of God Himself.

When Ananias learned that he had lied unto God, he fell down, and gave up the ghost. Ananias was struck dead for his sin against God, and the young men bound him in grave linen, carried him out, and buried him.

7-11. Unaware of what had happened to her husband, about three hours later Sapphira came before Peter and the other disciples. A similar question was asked her concerning the selling of her possession. Because she had conspired with her husband to lie to the Spirit of God, and attempted to increase her image in the eyes of the other believers, Peter predicted that the feet of those that carried out her husband would also carry out Sapphira.

Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost. As predicted, the men quickly came and bore her body away to be buried alongside her husband. Satan first attacked the church from without, persecuting it as a roaring lion. Now he has attacked the church from within, persecuting it as a serpent. But the end result is still the same: And great fear came upon all the church. All who had assembled as believers in Jerusalem were brought into a right relationship with God because of persecution. This not altogether unhealthy effect of persecution must have caused havoc in the dominions of darkness.

12-16. The shock of the double death of Ananias and Sapphira apparently sparked the apostles to double their efforts in behalf of the Lord. Many signs and wonders wrought among the people. This paragraph is a summary of the great things that have been accomplished through the Spirit of God (cf. 2:43-47; 4:32-35). The sick were brought into the streets on beds and couches and so evident was the presence of the Spirit of God on these men that even the very shadow of Peter passing over someone might cause the healing of that person. For miles around the news spread, and the sick and those possessed by unclean spirits were brought to the disciples. The end result was a record of performance that should cause distrust of modern-day healing campaigns: and they were healed every one.

C. Persecution before the Sadducees. 5:17-42.

17-28. Not long before this Peter and John had been released from the court of the Sanhedrin with a stern warning. But the additional healings and the multitudes which crowded around the disciples caused the High Priests and the Sadducees to become very indignant. They ordered that the disciples should be seized and thrown into the common prison. It was there that another miracle occurred. Their escape from the common prison was not accomplished by a deus ex machina, as in the Greek tragedies, but by a real angel or "messenger" from the Lord. They were released from prison and were told, Go, stand and speak in the temple. Having been warned and imprisoned, the disciples could not be deterred from this heavenly command.

Early the next morning they entered the Temple and did as they had been commanded by the angel. When the Sanhedrin convened to discuss the matter of the disciples, whom they thought were in prison, they felt it necessary to bring the disciples before them once again. Thus an officer was sent to the prison to retrieve them, but returned with the news that the found them not in the prison, they returned, and told,

23 Saying, The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now when the high priest and the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them,

28 Saying, Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us.

29 Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree.

31 Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

32 And we are his witnesses of these things: and so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 ¶When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Ga-mā'li-el, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theū'das, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought:

39 But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.

40 And to him they agreed: and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

prison doors were securely shut and the keepers were on duty outside the doors, but no one was to be found in the prison. The immediate concern of the High Priest, the captains of the Temple, and the chief priests was that the miraculous release of the disciples would be yet another story that would grow, causing even greater popularity for the followers of the Lord Jesus. Thus the officers were commanded to bring Peter and the others from the Temple, but without violence for fear of the people.

When they took their place before the Sanhedrin, the president of the court (the High Priest) reminded them that they had previously been warned about preaching in the name of Jesus. They thought the disciples were attempting to place responsibility for the death of Jesus on the leaders of the Sanhedrin. In questioning Peter, the High Priest attested to a fact that is truly miraculous in light of the great persecution the early church had received. In just a short time, due to the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit of God, the High Priest exclaimed to the disciples, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine. This remains as an example and a challenge to every church of every age to do likewise.

29-32. We ought to obey God rather than men. Peter is not so much advocating open defiance against the state as he is absolute dependence upon God. Having yet another golden opportunity to preach Christ and Him crucified, Peter falls back upon his pattern of making reference to the slaying of Jesus and the cursed hanging upon a tree (Deut 21:23; Gal 3:13). Also his message contains a note of repentance and forgiveness of sin, as well as his repeated claims to be among the witnesses of these things.

33-40. So enraged at the defiance of the believers in Christ were the Sadducees that they were about to pass judgment on the disciples and sentence them to death. However, the pharisaic members of the court, although in the minority, still had a very powerful and persuasive voice in the judgments of that court. Perhaps the most respected man of the entire Sanhedrin was the renowned Pharisee named Gamaliel. This rabban, a doctor of the law, was the leader of the famous school of Hillel. He had many illustrious disciples, among them Saul of Tarsus (cf. 22:3). When this prestigious elder rose to speak, everyone listened.

With calmer heads now prevailing, Gamaliel cautioned the Sanhedrin concerning their intentions to put the disciples to death. First he reminded them of an insurgent named Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody. It is obvious that Gamaliel did not believe Theudas was anyone of importance, but his following grew to four hundred persons before he was slain and his patriots scattered. Nothing for certain is known of this man except that he was probably one of many insurgents who arose in Palestine about the time of Herod the Great in 4 B.C.

Again, Gamaliel reminded the Sanhedrin of a more successful insurgent, Judas of Galilee. This man had a larger following in his revolt of A.D. 6, when he incited a nationalist revolt against paying tribute to Caesar when God alone was Israel's true King (see Josephus, Jewish War ii. 8.1: Antiq. xviii. 1.1). The taxing for census referred to was that of Publius Sulpicius Quirinius when he was the imperial legate of Syria for the second time (A.D. 6-7).

Gamaliel's counsel and advice to the Sanhedrin is classic. It is this. If the movement which involves these disciples of Jesus of 41 And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER 6

AND in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations.

2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

3 Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

4 But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 And the saying pleased the whole multitude; and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prôch'o-rus, and Ni-cã-nor, and Ti'mon, and Pãr'me-nas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch:

6 Whom they set before the apostles; and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.

7 And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.

8 ¶And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 Then there arose certain of the synagogue

Nazareth is not of God, it will come to nothing. But, on the other hand, if it is of God, the Sanhedrin certainly would not want to fight against it. This put the Sanhedrin on the horns of a dilemma. They hated the movement, but the reasoning of Gamaliel and his "wait and see" policy had to be adopted. The end result was that when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go. A now common procedure, releasing the disciples and forbidding them to preach in the name of Jesus, took on one additional feature. This time the disciples were beaten before they were released.

41-42. Having received the harshest punishment to date, the disciples were in no way disheartened. On the contrary they were rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name. Increased persecution simply evoked increased dedication. So much so that daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

D. Persecution of Stephen. 6:1-8:4.

6:1-4. And in those days. This passage may be regarded as an epilogue to what has preceded. The time has now come for an important advance in organization in the New Testament church. This organizational advance arose out of a rift between the Grecians and the Hebrews. Both of these groups were Jews, the Grecians were Greek-speaking Jews and the Hebrews were Aramaic-speaking Jews. As is so frequently the case, a conflict arose over a minute concern. Since the wealthy of the Christian community had sold their goods to provide for the poor, some of the Grecian Jews felt their poor and widows were being neglected in favor of the more traditional Hebrew-speaking Jews.

Thus the Twelve called the disciples together and asked them to seek out seven men of good reputation, men who would be responsible for administering the charitable allocations. Upon the appointment of such men, the Twelve could give themselves to the ministry to which they were called: prayer, and to the ministry of the word. The twentieth century church would do well to take this advice given by the Twelve. Many church leaders today are not free to devote themselves to the two prime aspects of their ministry, prayer and the preaching of the word. Members of the local assembly must assume positions of responsibility in order to free the pastor to do the job for which he has been called.

5-8. And they chose Stephen . . . and Philip and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas. The suggestion of the Twelve was readily accepted by the church of Jerusalem. Seven men were chosen to fulfill the obligation of deacon. The first named is Stephen, who is a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost. This description is not without substance as the next chapters of Acts portray. Philip is also mentioned and he too will figure heavily in the next chapters. Of the others, less is known. A later tradition suggests that Prochorus was an amanuensis of John the evangelist and became Bishop of Nicomedia and was subsequently martyred at Antioch. The last-named man, Nicolas, is mentioned as not a Jew but a proselyte from Antioch. Some have speculated that he was the founder of the Nicolaitans in Revelation 2:6, 15. This, however, cannot be said with great certainty.

And the word of God increased. At this point Luke interprets the narrative of this organizational advance to give a progress report on the church's activities. Five other such reports punctuate this history of Acts (see also 9:31; 12:24; 16:5; 19:20; 28:31). Perhaps the interjection here is to indicate that the church need not choose between evangelistic zeal and the social and physical concerns of its constituency. Both advanced together.

9-15. Then there arose certain of the synagogue . . . dis- gogue, which is called the synagogue of the Lib'er-tines, and Cŷ-rē nī-anš, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cī-lī-čia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 Then they suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.

12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council.

13 And set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law:

14 For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.

CHAPTER 7

THEN said the high priest, Are these things so?

2 And he said, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken; The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mēs-o-po-tā'mi-a, before he dwelt in Chār'ran.

3 And said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall shew thee.

4 Then came he out of the land of the Chāl-dē'ans, and dwelt in Chār'ran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them puting with Stephen. The ministry of Stephen is the link between the establishment of the church in Jerusalem and the conversion of the Apostle Paul. As Stephen entered the synagogue to preach in the name of Jesus Christ, he encountered opposition. Apparently this synagogue was one which catered to those who were either from the dispersion or descendants of those from areas outside of Palestine. Specifically, this synagogue of the Libertines was made up of those who were Cyrenians, Alexandrians, and Cilicians. The dispute with Stephen brought little success to the Jews. They were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

These stubborn men, however, did not give up when they were beaten philosophically. They simply resorted to baser tactics, slanderous charges of blasphemy against Moses and God. Apparently in the first century the charge of blasphemy included more than a profane use of the ineffable name of the God of Israel (Mishnah, Sanhedrin vii. 5). Since Stephen had said nothing against Moses or God, they had to introduce false witnesses, a common practice among the Jews (see also Mt 26:59-61; Mk 14:55-59). These false witnesses stirred up the people by saying that Stephen spoke blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law. The false witnesses then alluded to a portion of Stephen's message in which he quoted Jesus' statement about destroying the body, and it being raised again in three days (cf. Mt 26:61; Mk 14:58). As this statement was misinterpreted when Jesus uttered it, now it is misinterpreted when Stephen reported it. Thus the persecution of Stephen began and he was dragged before the council. There they looked upon him and saw his face as it had been the face of an angel. This is not to intimate that he had the gentle, effeminate face often portrayed in medieval paintings of angels. Rather his face was aglow with the love of the Lord Jesus for these his persecutors.

7:1. Then said the high priest, Are these things so? In response to the question of the High Priest concerning the false allegations leveled against Stephen, this Spirit-filled deacon replied with what amounts to an early apology for the Christian faith. It is a general historical account of the moving of God in the lives of Abraham and his descendants. But when Stephen makes his application to this historical account (vss. 51-53) it is evident that he shows Christianity to be the natural fulfillment of the promises made to Abraham and the Patriarchs. He does not divorce his heritage from his newfound belief in the Messiah. Instead, he shows that Jesus of Nazareth is the fulfillment of Jewish heritage and those who have not recognized Him as Messiah are indeed traitors to their forefathers.

2-5. Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken. As Stephen begins his apology, he addresses them in a polite manner, not what one would expect of false witnesses. In these verses he addresses himself to the call of Abraham (Gen 12) and to his removal by faith from Ur of the Chaldees to Haran. Also mentioned is the possession of the Promised Land and Abraham's faith that this land would be retained forever, when as yet he had no child.

6-10. His seed should sojourn in a strange land. This section records the rite of circumcision given to Abraham as a sign of God's covenant with him and the birth of Isaac, Jacob, and into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.

7 And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and serve me in this place.

8 And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.

9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt: but God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.

11 Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chánaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls.

15 So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers.

16 And were carried over into Sýchem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Ēm'môr the father of Sýchem.

17 But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt.

18 Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtilly with our kindred, and evil entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

20 In which time Moses was born, and was exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months:

21 And when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.

22 And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.

23 And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but they understood not.

26 And the next day he shewed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

the twelve Patriarchs. Also the deliverance into Egyptian bondage is addressed here.

11-16. Joseph was made known to his brethren. In these verses the touching story of Joseph, sold into slavery and risen to power, is recorded. When Jacob learns that his beloved son is still alive, he migrates to Egypt where there is corn and food for all his family. Here the Patriarch dies and his body is taken to Shechem for burial.

17-22. Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph. Stephen now relates the birth and early life of Moses. His learning and wisdom in the sciences of the Egyptians is noted, and that he was mighty in word and in deed.

23-29. It came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel. Now when Moses was forty years old and he spied an Egyptian beating one of his brethren. Moses' anger brought him to commit murder and he slew the Egyptian and hid him in the sand. When this atrocity was made known, Moses had to flee to the land of Midian where he begat two sons.

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou diddest the Egyptian yesterday?

29 Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Mā'di-an, where he begat two sons.

30 And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sī'na an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight; and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him.

32 Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush.

36 He brought them out, after that he had shewed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the wilderness forty years.

37 This is that Moses, which said unto the children of Israel, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear.

38 This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness with the angel which spake to him in the mount Sī'na, and with our fathers: who received the lively oracles to give unto us:

39 To whom our fathers would not obey, but thrust him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt,

40 Saying unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

41 And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 Then God turned, and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness?

43 Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Mō'lōch, and the star of your god Rēm'phan, figures which ye made to worship them; and I will carry you away beyond Bāb'y-lon.

44 Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen.

45 Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God

30-36. Next in order in Stephen's historical account of Israel is the call of Moses in a flame of fire in a bush. The speaker is obviously the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob and the place where Moses stood was holy ground. Moses was commissioned to return to Egypt and to stand in the court of Pharaoh demanding that God's people be released from bondage. After showing the Egyptians great wonders, Moses would lead the children out of the land across the Red Sea and into the wilderness for forty years.

37-43. A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren. Although Stephen is yet a great distance from the conclusion of his apology, he begins to lay the groundwork for his contention that the New Testament church is a natural result from those who have received Jesus as Messiah. Even Moses proclaimed that God would raise a prophet up from among the Israelites, whom they should hear and obey. That prophet was Jesus Christ.

The church (Gr ekklēsia) in the wilderness is a reference to the assembly of the people of God at the foot of Mount Sinai. Here Stephen makes reference to the idolatry of his forefathers and the worship of the golden calf. In addition the Israelites worship the host of heaven, represented specifically by the planetary deities Moloch and Remphan. His purpose is to show that the nation Israel has the history of needing prophets like unto Moses and Jesus Christ. They also have a history, however, of not receiving those prophets. Interestingly, Stephen had just been charged by the false witnesses with speaking blasphemous words against Moses. But now his purpose is to show that those guilty of disrespect to Moses are his heirs, the Israelites, and not his new companions, the Christians.

44-50. Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness. The attention of the deacon is focused on the building of both the tabernacle and the Temple. He makes reference to the tabernacle in the wilderness and the fact that it was brought in with Joshua into the possession of the Gentiles. The Greek form of Joshua, which is translated "Jesus" (AV) in Hebrews 4:8, may be a purposeful allusion to the fact that the one who led Israel into the land of inheritance bears the same drave out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David;

46 Who found favour before God, and desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 But Solomon built him an house.

48 Howbeit the most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet,

49 Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool: what house will ye build me? saith the Lord: or what is the place of my rest?

50 Hath not my hand made all these things?

51 ¶Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye.

52 Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 Who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it.

54 ¶When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

55 But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, 56 And said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God.

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord, 58 And cast him out of the city, and stoned him: and the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul.

name as the One who can lead Israel into the land of eternal life.

Next, reference is made to the days of David and the fact that it was his desire to build the house of the God of Jacob. This his son Solomon was permitted to do. Howbeit the most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands. Stephen quickly draws his apologetic to the person of Jesus Christ. At His trial, the Lord said, "I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and in three days I will build another made without hands" (Mk 14:58). This reference is obviously to clarify the charge which the false witnesses brought against him (cf. 6:14). Stephen has shown that the Temple, as well as the tabernacle, which preceded it, was never intended to be the permanent dwelling place of God. Jesus of Nazareth gave a correct perspective to the Temple of Jerusalem and its relationship to the God who dwells in the hearts of believers.

Stephen's argument has now been concluded. However, he must yet convince his hearers that what he says is legitimate. Therefore, he has to undertake concluding remarks which will make the application of this historical argument.

51-53. Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears.

In making his conclusion Stephen appeals to a descriptive term which had been used many times of the Jews. God Himself complained that His people were "stiffnecked" (Ex 33:5). That they were "uncircumcised in heart and ears" meant that while they were circumcised in the physical sense, nevertheless their disobedience in not receiving the message of the prophets caused them to be ungodly in their hearts and lives. The resistance of the present generation of Jews to the work of the Holy Spirit is something that their forefathers also exhibited.

The coming of the Just One. Stephen now addresses himself to the present hardness of this stiffnecked people. Characteristic of being a prophet of God in the nation Israel was undergoing extreme persecution and, more often than not, martyrdom. Stephen depicts the Lord Jesus as one in a long line of such prophets whom the Jews betrayed and murdered. Again the tie with Christianity is made in the history of Judaism. The forefathers had killed the messengers who foretold of the coming of the Just One; but they themselves had gone even further in bringing the Just One Himself to a violent death.

54-56. When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart. The testimony of Stephen in his application to the council did more to increase their ire than anything imaginable. The verb used here, and in Acts 5:33 (Gr diapriō) expresses the cutting done by a saw. It is designed to show how deep their feelings were, and the similar expression, they gnashed on him with their teeth, although not literally done, was always an expression of rage.

Saw the glory of God, and Jesus. Stephen makes no retaliation to the irritated council. Instead he fastens his attention on the heavens, which, during this transition period of Acts, are said to have opened so that Stephen could see the glory of God, and (or "even") Jesus standing on the right hand of God.

Although the glory of God usually represents the shekinah glory of the Old Testament, Jesus is nevertheless the Glory of God. Now ascended into heaven, Jesus has again received the glory which He had with the Father before the world began (Jn 17:5). It is that glory that all men have come short of, and in essence, it is that glory that shows each of us to be sinners (Rom 3:23). Stephen was given the unique opportunity to view Jesus as the Glory of God in heaven.

57-60. Again incensed by the calm, quiet attitude of Stephen, the crowd rushed upon him, crying for his death. Dragging him out of the city, they stoned him. Since this is the Jewish form of death, it would indicate that the Sanhedrin and the members of the council provided the oversight for the murder of Stephen. Although this was not legal, and apparently Pilate either turned 59 And they stoned Stephen, calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.

60 And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep.

CHAPTER 8

AND Saul was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judæa and Sa-má'ri-a, except the apostles.

2 And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.

3 As for Saul, he made havock of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women committed them to prison.

4 Therefore they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.

5 ¶Then Philip went down to the city of Sa-má'ri-a, and preached Christ unto them.

6 And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were a deaf ear to the situation or was not apprised of it, nevertheless the action was carried out in the rage of the Jews.

As was customary, the witnesses cast the first stones. This duty was prescribed both in the Mishnah and also in the Law itself (cf. Lev 24:24; Deut 17:7). In order to throw the first stone the witnesses would divest themselves of their outer garments. These garments were placed at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul. At this first introduction to the man Saul, one very important element is frequently overlooked. Nowhere is it stated or even intimated that Saul, later the Apostle Paul, actually participated in the death of Stephen. Saul consented to his death, guarded the garments of those who first stoned him, but is not said to have actually cast a stone himself.

Lord Jesus, receive my spirit. This utterance of Stephen, and the one to follow, echoes the Lord's utterances from the cross. On his knees and being constantly bombarded with stones, Stephen's one concern was not for himself but for those who were his persecutors. As the Lord cried unto the Father, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do" (Lk 23:24), so too, Stephen cries unto the Lord in a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. When the men of Israel were at their worst, the man Stephen was at his best. He interceded to the Lord God of heaven for those who persecuted him. Even in death his concern was for their eternal life.

8:1-4. There was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem. The murder of Stephen precipitated a persecution unlike any seen heretofore. This time the target was not just the individual, Stephen, but the church as a whole. The most severe persecution must have fallen upon the Hellenistic Jews, for from this time onward the church at Jerusalem appears to have consisted almost entirely of Hebrew or Aramaic-speaking Jews. Although the persecution was deadly, nevertheless it accomplished the direct will of God. This persecution caused the dispersion of the Jews of the Jerusalem church throughout the regions of Judæa and Samaria, except for the apostles who remained in Jerusalem. Thus the Lord's command in chapter 1, verse 8 was fulfilled by the persecution of chapter 8, verse 1.

It was directly against the Jewish law to make lamentations at the funeral of an executed person (see Mishnah, Sanhedrin vi. 6). However, certain devout men gave Stephen the burial that was due this first Christian martyr. And what is the "young man" Saul doing while this is going on? He has become the prime mover in the campaign against the church. With papers of permission from the authority of the Sanhedrin and high priest, Paul harassed the church, smashing down doors and arresting men and women in their homes, sending them off to prison. He did so as a zealous Pharisee, fully believing that he was keeping the Law pure from those of this new Christian sect whom he considered to have prostituted the Law. Then what was the result of Saul's and the others' harassment? They that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word. Not only was persecution the means by which the gospel spread to other regions in Palestine, but also it caused the gospel to go to much further fields as well (cf. 11:19ff).

E. The Ministry of Philip. 8:5-40.

5-7. Then Philip . . . preached Christ unto them. It is difficult to say whether "the city of Samaria" was actually the city that bore that name in the Old Testament. At this period of history it had been rebuilt by Herod the Great as a great city and given the name Sebaste in honor of the Roman Emperor (Gr sebastos; Lat equivalent augustus). It may be that he went to a city in the region of Samaria and may even have been Gutta, which Justin Martyr (Apology i, 26) designates as the birthplace possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

8 And there was great joy in that city.
9 But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Sa-má-rí-a, giving out that himself was some great one:

10 To whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God.

11 And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

12 But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

13 Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done.

14 ¶Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Sa-má-rí-a had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John:

15 Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost:

16 (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.)

17 Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, 19 Saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

20 But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money.

21 Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

of Simon the Sorcerer. Whatever the case, Philip had great success in his preaching efforts there. These efforts were accompanied by healing, casting out of unclean spirits, and other signs of the presence of the Holy Spirit in him.

8-13. In the midst of the joy over those who had believed in Jesus of Nazareth as Saviour and those who had been healed, Luke introduces the infamous Simon the Sorcerer. Frequently known as Simon Magus, this man has been the subject of much of early Christian literature. Ireneus (Against Heresies i.) names Simon as the founder of gnosticism. Justin Martyr (Apology i, 26) mistakenly ascribes an ancient inscription in the city of Rome to Simon. In the pseudo-Clementine Recognitions and Homilies the legend about Simon's becoming the nemesis of Peter is greatly elaborated. Also the apocryphal Acts of Peter tell how the Christians of Rome were corrupted by this man's false teaching. Whether any of this is historical or not is presently beside the point. What is known is that this sorcerer had great sway over the people of Samaria. So bewitching was his sorcery that it was said of him, This man is the great power of God.

When those who had been bewitched by Simon came to know the Lord as Saviour, through the preaching of Philip, and were baptized, Then Simon himself believed also. There seems to be some little doubt about the legitimacy of Simon's conversion. There is no sign of repentance. There is no confession of sin. But there is the statement that he continued with Philip and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done. Apparently Simon wanted the secret of Philip's power. His only concern was not for his own soul but for the ability to get close to Philip and learn the secret of his ability to heal the sick and perform miracles.

14-24. They sent unto them Peter and John. When the news of Philip's preaching and the subsequent conversion of the Samaritans reached Jerusalem, it was necessary for the Jewish church there to send their two key representatives in order to investigate these "conversions." The church at Jerusalem had been all Jewish; this assembly was all Samaritan. Thus Peter and John descended the heights of Jerusalem into Samaria and prayed that these believers would receive the Holy Spirit. The Samaritan believers had been baptized in water in the name of the Lord Jesus, but as yet the Holy Spirit had fallen on none of them. Therefore, Peter and John placed their hands upon them and they received the Holy Ghost.

This special function of Peter and John was not to be repeated. The first instance of the Holy Spirit's coming upon a group of individuals was in the upper room with the one hundred twenty. They were Jews; these Samaritans were not present. Thus Peter and John bring the power of Pentecost to another group of people. This will occur twice again in this transition period of Acts: at the household of Cornelius when Gentiles receive the Holy Spirit (ch. 10) and when the disciples of John the Baptist receive the Holy Spirit (ch. 19). The baptism of the Holy Spirit, as it occurred in each of these groups, was never to be repeated again. Every believer is baptized into the body of Christ the instant he believes (I Cor 12:12-13). Subsequent baptisms of the individual by the Holy Spirit are unknown in Scripture.

He offered them money, Saying, Give me also this power. In further proof of the spurious character of Simon's so-called conversion, one can see his materialistic view of God. He attempted to buy that which is God's prerogative alone to give.

Simon was quite taken back by the stern rebuke he received from Peter. Peter sized up the situation and immediately diagnosed the problem: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. A call for repentance was accompanied by Peter's perception that Simon was yet caught up in the bitter gall-root of superstition and his fascination with magic, and sorcery was still for him a bond of iniquity. Terror-stricken, Simon begged Peter to pray for him, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

25-29. With the conclusion of the matter concerning Simon Magus, Peter and John returned to Jerusalem, apparently accompanied by Philip. Their evangelistic efforts among the Samaritans continued along the road. However, an angel of the Lord spoke unto Philip, advising him, Arise, and go toward the south. Philip was specifically instructed to go into the region of Gaza, a narrow desert strip which provided access along the sea to the great Sinai Peninsula. Philip obeyed and, in consequence of that, encountered a man of Ethiopia.

This man had apparently come to Jerusalem to worship, which may mean that he was a God-fearing Gentile. As a eunuch he was the chamberlain to the Queen of Ethiopia. Candace was not the name of the queen but rather a title given to the mother of each Ethiopian king (see Bion of Soli, Aethiopica 1). This Ethiopian eunuch had come to a position of great trust under the authority of the queen. Upon his return from Jerusalem, while sitting in his chariot reading from the prophet Isaiah, the Spirit of the Lord moved upon Philip, telling him, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. This expression shows the definite moving of the Spirit of God in evangelism. What the Spirit of God commanded, Philip could not fail to do.

30-35. Understandest thou what thou readest? Having been moved by the Spirit of God to speak to this man, and recognizing the exact portion of Isaiah that the eunuch was reading, Philip received his cue to initiate conversation. The question concerning his ability to understand what he read was natural enough since this man was Ethiopian and not Jewish. The eunuch's response also indicates this, How can I, except some man should guide me? The Ethiopian's need and Philip's apparent ability to meet it precipitated the invitation for Philip to come and sit in the chariot with the man. The actual passage which the man was reading was Isaiah 53:7ff. This event recorded in the New Testament sets the New Testament seal of approval on the interpretation of Isaiah 53 and the Servant passages as pertaining to Jesus Christ. When the eunuch asked Philip whether or not the prophet was speaking of himself as the sheep before the slaughter and the lamb dumb before his shearer, Philip boldly opened his mouth and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus. There was no question in the mind of Philip that the Suffering Servant of Isaiah 53 was Jesus of Nazareth. Luke recorded this as fact. We must accept it in the spirit in which it was recorded, i.e., as a prophecy concerning the sacrificial death of Jesus Christ.

36-40. Here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? We don't know how far or to what spot Philip and the Ethiopian had traveled. Perhaps it was the Wadi el-Hesi northeast of Gaza, which is the traditional sight. Wherever the spot was, there was sufficient water to perform baptism. Although some manuscripts do not include verse 37, it does fit perfectly into the story and gives the sense of what Philip must have told the Ethiopian eunuch. If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. Apparently this whole discussion concerning baptism was precipitated by Philip's instruction to the eunuch subsequent to salvation. He must have told the eunuch that the next step in a believer's life is a physical sign of baptism which outwardly speaks of the believer's death to the world and resurrection to new life in Christ. The confession of faith and the lordship of Christ made by the eunuch was absolutely sincere: I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Such public confession of new faith was a common practice when a convert was formally admitted to the Christian fellowship by baptism. Because of the evidence in the eunuch's life, and his sincere confession of the 25 And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Sa-mār'i-tans.

26 ¶And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gā'za, which is desert.

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ē-thī-ō'pī-a, an eunuch of great authority under Cān'da-če queen of the Ē-thī-ō'pī-ans, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, 28 Was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Ē-sā'ias the prophet.

29 Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Ē-sā'ias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest?

31 And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth:

33 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away; and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found at A-zō'tus; and passing through he preached in all the cities, till he came to Cæs-a-re'ā.

deity of Christ, Philip and the eunuch descended into the water and the eunuch was baptized.

Immediately another miracle occurs. After coming up out of the water the Spirit of the Lord caught Philip away so that he was no more seen by the eunuch. Philip next appeared at Azotus, the old Philistine city of Ashdod, some twenty miles north of Gaza. From there he proceeded along the coastal highway to Caesarea preaching in all the cities along the way. The ministry of Philip is a refreshing interlude in the great persecutions endured by the early church. It is as if Luke, guided by the Spirit of God, knew just when to put a note of encouragement into his history, for the next chapter deals again with the persecutions engineered by Saul of Tarsus.

CHAPTER 9

AND Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

5 And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

6 And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

F. Conversion of Saul. 9:1-31.

9:1-2. And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter. This phrase (Gr empneonapeiles) is a difficult one to translate. Literally, Saul “breathed in” threatening and slaughter. Perhaps this is just designed to mean that with every breath he took, he became more adamant against the Christian believers.

As the narrative now returns to Saul of Tarsus, we may note that he pushes his campaign against the Christians far beyond the reaches of Jerusalem. Thus this zealous Pharisee procures extradition papers from the High Priest in Jerusalem to bring back any of this way who have fled to Damascus. For Christianity to be described as “The Way” is a common occurrence (cf. 19:9-23; 22:4; 24:14, 22). It was Saul’s desire to bind the disciples and drag them back to Jerusalem for trial by the council of the Sanhedrin, of which the High Priest was president.

3-9. Suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven. Armed with official papers from the High Priest, Saul set out for Damascus to bring back the refugees from Jerusalem and Judaea who had fled by dint of persecution. He almost made it to the capital of the Syrian Empire when one of the most phenomenal events recorded anywhere on the pages of history occurred. Although it was midday (cf. 22:6; 26:13), a light shined out of heaven that completely engulfed the light of the sun. So awesome was this light that Saul fell to the ground recognizing his inferiority to the One generating the light. In addition, he heard a voice, a phenomenon the rabbis call “the daughter of the voice (of God).” The voice of One far superior to him said, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

Here a great truth is seen. Although Saul had set out to Damascus to continue his persecution of Christians, it is the Lord who speaks to him and says, “Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?” All sin, regardless of its character, is ultimately directed against the Lord God. There is no such thing as private or personal sin. Every sin that is committed affects others, but in its terminal point, every sin affects God. Saul thought he was persecuting meaningless Christians; instead he was persecuting the Lord God of heaven. This is the same reaction given by the young Joseph when Potiphar’s wife attempted to seduce him. He responded to her, “How then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?” (Gen 39:9). Even the prodigal son recognized this, for when he came to himself, he determined to return to his father and say, “I have sinned against heaven, and before thee” (Lk 15:18). In anger, sin must be directed against an object. In lust, sin may be directed against a person. But in actuality, all sin is directed against God.

Who art thou, Lord? Immediately the Pharisee recognized that he was dealing with someone superior to himself. The reply which he received was undoubtedly the least expected, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. Naturally, this caused Saul to tremble in amazement, but his response was the only one possible when one meets his superior and is vanquished: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Saul was commanded to arise and enter the city, while those who journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

“On the surface this statement appears to conflict with Luke’s own statement in chapter 22:9, ‘That what were with me beheld indeed the light, but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.’ This does not contradict 22:9. The verb ‘to hear’ (Gr akouō) in Greek governs an accusative (22:9; or a genitive, 9:7). The genitive is partitive and in itself conveys the idea that they did not apprehend the sound in its entirety. Hence, the genitive at 9:7. It was correct to use the accusative in the second context. The accusative signifies the complete domination of the object, and the company did not understand the purport of the words. Admittedly this distinction is often blurred, but Luke is a careful writer” (E. M. Blaiklock, The Acts of the Apostles, pp. 92-93).

When his eyes were opened, he saw no man. When Paul finally arose from the Damascus road he was unable to see. Thus, his companions led him by the hand to Damascus and he was three days without sight. It is not beyond the realm of possibility that the events recorded in II Corinthians 12:1-4 occurred during this three-day period.

10-12. And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias. Ananias was apparently a Damascene Jew who believed in Jesus as the Messiah. The Lord appeared unto him in a vision, calling his name, and he answered, I am here, Lord. The request of the Lord to Ananias was probably the strangest request this man would ever receive. It was, go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire . . . for one called Saul, of Tarsus. The escapades of the zealous Saul were well-known in Damascus. For Ananias to receive a vision from the Lord asking him to seek out a man who made it his religious practice to throw Christian men and women into prison must have been almost too much for Ananias to take. Nevertheless, it was explained to him in the vision that Saul himself had had a vision in which he saw a man named Ananias coming toward him, placing his hand upon him, and causing him to receive sight.

13-16. As expected, Ananias was quick to object to this request. In explaining that he had heard of the evil this man had done to the saints in Jerusalem, Ananias is simply being cautious in living his Christian testimony and is not guilty of cowardice. His objections are overruled, however, and his concerns alleviated by the Lord who said, for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles. Paul later would make frequent references to the fact that he was called of God to be the apostle to the Gentiles (see Gal 1:15-16). As Saul had been the minister of suffering to many believers, he himself would now be the recipient of much suffering, both at the hands of believers, and especially at the hands of his own kinsmen, the Jews.

17-22. And Ananias . . . putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul. What a difference three days can make in a man’s life. Seventy-two hours earlier the chances of a Jewish believer addressing the threatening Saul as “brother” would have been nil. But now Saul and Ananias are all part of the same family. Ananias understands that Saul has come to him so that he might receive his sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost. Immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales. Probably speaking metaphorically, Luke here records that finally after three days of temporary blindness Saul has now regained his sight. After being baptized, presumably at the hands of Ananias, Saul received strength and remained a number of days with the disciples at Damascus.

During those days Saul was not idle. He preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God. This is the only reference to Jesus Christ as the Son of God in the book of the Acts. It is significant that it occurs very early in the preaching of 10 ¶And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ān-a-nī’as; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ān-a-nī’-as. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth, 12 And hath seen in a vision a man named Ān-a-nī’as coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ān-a-nī’as answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel:

16 For I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name’s sake.

17 And Ān-a-nī’as went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

19 And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

20 And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.

21 But all that heard him were amazed, and said; Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ.

23 ¶And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill him:

24 But their laying await was known of Saul. And they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall in a basket.

26 And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, he assayed to join himself to the disciples: but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple.

27 But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

28 And he was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem.

29 And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians: but they went about to slay him.

30 Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cæs-a-re'a, and sent him forth to Tarsus.

31 Then had the churches rest throughout all Judæa and Galilee and Sa-mâ-ri-a, and were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied.

32 ¶And it came to pass, as Peter passed throughout all quarters, he 284

Paul, indicating that he immediately recognized not only the messiahship of Christ Jesus, but also His deity as well.

One can imagine the astonishment of those Jews in the synagogue at Damascus when they heard the man, whom they all respected and to whom they looked for leadership in quenching the spreading flame of Christianity, stand up in their midst and proclaim Jesus of Nazareth as God. The Damascus Jews were completely taken back; they could not believe their eyes or ears. But Paul proved that his conversion was real, in that he confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus.

23-25. And after that many days were fulfilled. In these verses the account of Paul's escape from Damascus is recorded. II Corinthians 11:32-33 adds even greater detail to the account of this escape. We know that it occurred during the reign of Aretas IV (9 B.C.-A.D. 40), the leader of the Nabataean Kingdom who extended his influence as far north as Damascus. The expression "many days" may lead us to the impression that his escape from the city occurred only a few days after his conversion. Such is not the case, for Galatians 1:17-18 clearly indicates to us that upon salvation Paul did not go to Jerusalem or confer with other of the apostles but once receiving his sight went to Arabia (the Nabataean Arabia), returned again unto Damascus, and apparently there communed with the Lord and preached for the space of about three years. His preaching was so successful that the Jews and Nabataeans watched the gates day and night to kill him. Their plans were foiled, however, when one of those who came to know the Lord through the ministry of Paul, who had a house built upon the wall, enabled Paul to escape by night by letting him down over the wall in a basket. From here Paul journeyed south to Jerusalem.

26-31. Paul spent the bulk of his life as a loner. He was one solitary man on a dedicated mission to the Gentiles. But when a friend was needed, God always saw to it that a friend was there. In Damascus that friend was Ananias. Now it is Barnabas' turn. And when Saul was come to Jerusalem . . . But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles. Like that of Ananias, the initial reaction of the disciples in Jerusalem to the presence of Saul was one of fear. Thus Barnabas presented Paul as one who had been genuinely saved by the grace of God and who had spoken boldly of the Lord Jesus in Damascus. Now that he was in the great Jewish city of Jerusalem, Paul did not change his tactics. Back in Jerusalem for the first time since he left there with extradition papers from the High Priest, Paul is not warmly received as he would have been had he not had the Damascus road experience. However, Paul again speaks out boldly against the Grecian Jews. Quite a little stir followed and they sought to slay Paul. Thus some of the brethren whisked him away to Caesarea, the Mediterranean seaport city built by Herod the Great, and from there he took a ship to his native Tarsus.

With Saul of Tarsus now safely entrenched on their side, and his defection to the ranks of Christianity so sudden that a replacement was not readily available, Then had the churches rest throughout all Judæa and Galilee and Samaria, and were edified. One great period of persecution has ended; others will follow; but for now the church has weathered its first great storm, withstood its first great critics, and won its first great adversary, Saul of Tarsus. Thus the local assembly of God's people, walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, was multiplied.

III. PETER AND THE BEGINNING OF GENTILE CHRISTIANITY. 9:32-12:25.

A. Peter's Healing Ministry. 9:32-43.

32-35. The last time Peter was mentioned in the narrative of Acts was in 8:25 when he returned with John from their visit to came down also to the saints which dwelt at Lyd'da.

33 And there he found a certain man named Æ'nē-as, which had kept his bed eight years, and was sick of the palsy.

34 And Peter said unto him, Æ'nē-as, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately.

35 And all that dwelt at Lyd'da and Sâ'ron saw him, and turned to the Lord.

36 ¶Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this woman was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as Lyd'da was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not delay to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, while she was with them.

40 But Peter put them all forth, and kneeled down, and prayed: and turning him to the body said, Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, presented her alive.

42 And it was known throughout all Joppa: and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa with one Simon a tanner.

CHAPTER 10

THERE was a certain man in Cæsare'a called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band.

2 A devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always.

3 He saw in a vision evidently about the ninth hour of the day an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

5 And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea side: he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called Samaria. During this period Peter appears to be carrying on an itinerate ministry among those Christian communities of Judæa. Thus he comes to a stronghold of Jewry, the city of Lydda (Lod in the Old Testament). This city, in the ancient Philistine territory, had a Christian assembly. One of the believers in the church at Lydda was a certain man named Aeneas, which had kept his bed eight years. When Peter encountered this man, immediately he said unto him, Aeneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. This command probably meant to get up and begin carrying on a normal life. This miracle caused many of the city of Lydda and the surrounding plain of Sharon to turn to the Lord.

36-38. Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha. Today known as Jaffa, Joppa was a Mediterranean coastal city about ten miles northwest of Lydda. There also was a Christian community in which a certain disciple was named Tabitha or Dorcas (Gr dorkas, meaning gazelle), who had endeared herself to that Christian community because she was full of good works and almsdeeds. However, Dorcas had fallen ill, died. She was prepared for burial and placed in the upper chamber. Apparently having heard of the healing of Aeneas by Peter, some disciples from Joppa sent to Lydda to fetch Peter, hoping that he could come and perform an even greater miracle on the behalf of their beloved Tabitha.

39-43. Peter quickly removed himself from Lydda and arrived in Joppa. There he saw the lifeless body of Tabitha already washed, in accordance with the Jewish custom of "purification of the dead," and prepared in the upper room. She was surrounded by weeping widows who had come to display the coats and garments which Tabitha had made for them. "But Peter sent them and the other mourners out of the room, as he had seen his Master do before he raised Jairus' daughter from her deathbed; and then he uttered a short sentence differing only in one letter from the word of Jesus to Jairus' daughter. Whereas Jesus had said Talitha cumi (Mk 5:41), Peter now said Tabitha qumi (Tabitha arise)" (F. F. Bruce, The Book of the Acts, p. 212). The result of the mighty power of the Spirit of God in Peter was that Tabitha opened her eyes, sat up, gave her hand to Peter, and he presented her alive to all the saints and widows who waited outside. Again, due to this miracle, many throughout the region round about Joppa believed in the Lord. Peter had a fruitful ministry there, being accommodated by the hospitality of one Simon a tanner.

B. Cornelius Receives the Gospel. 10:1-48.

10:1-8. The city of Caesarea, the major seaport city of New Testament Palestine, was located some distance up the coast from Joppa. Here a man named Cornelius lived. He was a centurion of the band called the Italian band. The word translated "band" (Gr speira) is equivalent to the Latin word cohors (cohort). A cohort, or tenth part of a legion, may have consisted of up to six hundred men, and was divided into centuries each commanded by a centurion. But when used in reference to auxiliary provincial troops, it meant a regiment of a full thousand men. Thus Cornelius would have been one of the leaders of a rather sizable group of Roman soliders.

In addition to Luke's information that this man was a Roman soldier, we also learn that he was a devout man, and one who feared God. This would place Cornelius among the "God-fearers" who were so prevalent in the first century. These were Gentiles who were not prepared to enter into the Jewish community as proselytes but were attracted to the morality and ethical standards of the monotheistic Jewish religion. Therefore some of them attended the synagogue services and were greatly knowledgeable in the practices of the Jewish religion. Hence, Cornelius gave much alms and prayed to God.

two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶On the morrow, as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, Peter went up upon the housetop to pray about the sixth hour:

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 And saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth:

12 Wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten any thing that is common or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

16 This was done thrice: and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 Now while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men which were sent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate,

18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 While Peter thought on the vision, the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing: for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius; and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22 And they said, Cornelius the centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

One day Cornelius had a vision of an angel of God coming to him with a vital message. At first he was afraid; but then was assured that his alms-giving and prayers had been looked upon by God with favor. The language of verse 4 is couched in sacrificial terms similar to those found in the book of Leviticus.

The message which the angel had for Cornelius was that he should call for one named Simon, whose surname was Peter, and who lodged with one Simon the tanner in the city of Joppa. Cornelius was assured that Simon Peter would be able to tell Cornelius why the Lord had appeared unto him in such an unusual way. The centurion wasted no time in dispatching two of his household servants, and a soldier as devout as himself, south to the city of Joppa.

9-18. Peter went up upon the housetop to pray. The forthcoming meeting between Cornelius and Peter was well prepared by the Lord. Both Cornelius and Simon Peter had a vision paving the way for their meeting. Peter's vision came the day after that of Cornelius. The representatives of the Roman centurion were almost to Caesarea when Peter went to the top of Simon's house to pray. The quietest and most retiring spot in an Eastern house is the housetop (cf. I Sam 9:25-26). At about noon, as was the Jewish custom, Peter entered into a period known as "the midday prayer." While praying, and waiting for lunch to be prepared, he fell into a trance. In this trance Peter saw the heavens open and a vessel descending unto him that appeared to be a great sheet knit at the four corners. This huge sheet was being lowered from heaven and inside were all manner of fourfooted beasts . . . and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air. The distinction between clean and unclean was very sharply drawn in the Levitical law (Lev 11:41-44; 20:25; see also Deut 14:3-20).

To the complete amazement and astonishment of Peter, a voice came to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat. Peter's ancestral sensitivities at this point must have been at the breaking point. His Jewish conscience would never permit him to eat that which was prohibited by Levitical law; and thus his answer was, Not so, Lord, claiming that he had never eaten anything that was unclean. But Peter was about to learn his first major lesson in the new covenant. The abolition of Jewish ceremonial laws was about to be graphically illustrated to the apostle. Since the Lord Jesus' original command and commission to the disciples was "go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not. But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Mt 10:5-6). Peter could not readily accept the commission he was receiving now. But on the cross of Calvary God had already broken down the middle wall of partition (Eph 2:14-18) between the Jews and Gentiles, and thus the voice from heaven spoke to Peter a second time saying, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common (unclean). Three times this interchange of conversation took place.

19-21. And while Peter doubted what he had seen in the vision, nevertheless he had no time to dwell on that doubt. Immediately the representatives of Cornelius appeared at Simon's house, standing before the gate and inquiring whether or not Peter lodged there. The apostle was still on the roof in a trance, but what he had learned was soon to be practiced. God is not looking for a debate from Peter, just obedience.

22-29. Upon hearing that the men from Cornelius had arrived, Peter immediately made his way down to greet them. This could have been a very tense moment, Jew meeting Gentiles, but in fact it appears to be one filled with great hospitality. The men informed Peter that Cornelius was a centurion, a God-fearer, a man who was well respected among the Jews.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And the morrow after they entered into Cæs-a-re'a. And Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and worshipped him.

26 But Peter took him up, saying, Stand up; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing.

31 And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God.

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 ¶Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

36 The word which God sent unto the Immediately Peter invited them in, undoubtedly to share the meal for which he had been waiting, and to give them lodging. It was now close to evening and the journey of more than thirty miles back to Caesarea could not have been undertaken immediately. Thus, the next day, Peter, accompanied by six other Christians from Joppa, went with the men to Caesarea.

The day after that they entered the city and found Cornelius anxiously awaiting their arrival. When Peter approached, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and worshipped him. Probably this reaction was evoked from the unusual character of the vision which instructed Cornelius to seek Peter's counsel. The word "worshipped" (Gr proskyneō) is one that is commonly used for any act of reverence or respect. But being a strict Jew, Peter could not allow Cornelius to behave in such a manner, and commanded him, Stand up; I myself also am a man.

When Peter was invited into Cornelius' house he undoubtedly did not expect to find the great company of kinsmen and friends of the centurion. His immediate thought was to justify his presence among them and give adequate explanation for this apparent breach of Jewish law. Jews and Gentiles had no ordinary social intercourse between each other. Thus it would be highly unlikely for Peter to enter the home of a Roman centurion. Because of the Levitical dietary restrictions, the least likely practice Peter, as a Jew, would find himself engaging in was eating at the table of a Gentile. Nevertheless this was about to take place. In explaining how uncommon it was for a Jew to keep company with a Gentile, or come unto one of another nation, Luke uses a word (Gr allophylos "one of another nation") which is found only here in the New Testament. However, it is a common expression like "Philistines" (see Jud 3:3). Thus Peter is saying that it is highly unlikely that he would dine in the household of an "uncircumcised Philistine."

What then was his reason for doing so? God hath showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean. Hence, Peter immediately began to inquire of Cornelius the reason for which he requested Peter's presence.

30-33. In answer to the apostle's question, Cornelius explains that four days ago he was fasting when he received a vision from the Lord. He saw a man standing before him in bright clothing. This angel of the Lord instructed him to send to the house of Simon the tanner in Joppa and request a man named Simon, whose surname is Peter, to come to Caesarea and speak with him. Cornelius did not hesitate but immediately dispatched his representatives to bring Peter to this house. Cornelius still does not understand exactly why this has happened, but he shows a complete readiness to receive whatever Peter has to say. He says, Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God. On that occasion Peter had a captive audience, those who received willingly what the Holy Spirit of God impressed upon him to say. God has led both Peter and Cornelius to this hour. It is evident in this transitional book of Acts that He has also led both the Jews and Gentiles to this hour. It is evident that the Gentile writer Luke recognized the importance of this hour because of the space he dedicated to it in his narrative. The program of God stands sure, but in the eyes of Peter and Cornelius, and those who witnessed these events, this program appears to be undergoing fundamental changes. For the first time Jew and Gentile could sit down with some measure of commonality.

34-43. Then Peter opened his mouth. This expression is a unique one which is generally used to introduce something of extreme importance. The weighty material which follows is perfectly in keeping with the expression. What Peter has to say in the next verses will run counter to centuries of racial prejudice between Jews and Gentiles.

children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:)

37 That word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judæa, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;

38 How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him.

39 And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree:

40 Him God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly;

41 Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead.

43 To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.

44 ¶While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

45 And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

46 For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

The great lesson which Peter has learned is that God does not play favorites. God is no respecter of persons. Anyone from any nation may be saved, all on the same basis of faith. Any man who does justly and loves mercy and walks humbly before God may receive the salvation provided by God (Mic 6:8). The animosity toward Gentiles and the unbeliefability that Gentiles could even be saved, doesn't appear at all to enter into Peter's speech. What was once impossible, is now possible. What was once unacceptable is now, by the grace of God, acceptable. What was once unheard of is now being boldly spoken by Peter. Gentiles may actually be saved in the same way that Jews have been saved.

At this point, Peter summarizes the life and teaching of the Lord Jesus, and the disciples' relationship to Him. He makes reference to the fact that Jesus' ministry was in both Judæa and Galilee after His baptism by John (vs. 37) and that the ministry of the Lord Jesus was not only approved by God the Father and God the Spirit, but was accompanied by signs of their approval (vs. 38). The disciples were witnesses to the death of the Lord Jesus (vs. 39) but many were witnesses to the fact that He was raised from the dead on the third day (vs. 40). Those who witnessed the post-resurrection activity of the Lord Jesus were chosen by God to do so and were commanded to testify to the world that Jesus Christ was indeed alive (vss. 41-42). The end result of the life and death of the Lord Jesus was not only predicted by the prophets but has proved to be the only entrance into salvation. Through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. It is now obvious to Peter that "whosoever" included both Jews and Gentiles.

44-48. The Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. Here is the second incident of a special, nonrepeated, transitional baptism of the Spirit of God. The first was the descending of the Spirit to the Samaritans who believed (8:17). Like that incident, this too was the baptism of a group of believers, not an individual. Like that event, this baptism occurred to open a new field of evangelistic ministry and give validity to that new field. So unusual was this event that even those Jews who accompanied Peter were astonished because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost. The baptism of the Spirit of God, and the subsequent speaking with tongues magnifying God, is clearly not in the context of everyday salvation experience. As the restrictive preaching of the original Twelve was broadened to the Samaritans and now to the Gentiles, it was necessary for them to have a similar experience to the Jews at Pentecost. This event, however, has been incorrectly called "the Pentecost of the Gentile World" This is not a Pentecost for non-Jews. It is a unique, one-time-only occurrence which was designed to show the Jews the validity of Gentile salvation. There would have been good reason to doubt whether Cornelius and his household were actually saved or not, had not his salvation experience been accompanied by the baptism of the Spirit and speaking in tongues. During that age these were characteristic evidences of salvation. The fact that this occurs in historical context should be reason enough not to assume that this will become a normative or continuing practice.

Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized. . . ? Peter recognizes that as they have received the outward manifestation of the Spirit of God in their hearts, it is also necessary for them to show the world that they have identified with the death, burial, and resurrection of the Lord Jesus; thus, he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Peter does not appear to have baptized these converts himself, anymore than Paul did his converts (I Cor 1:13-17).

CHAPTER 11

AND the apostles and brethren that were in Judæa heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him,

3 Saying, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them.

4 But Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it by order unto them, saying,

5 I was in the city of Joppa praying: and in a trance I saw a vision, A certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came even to me:

6 Upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter; slay and eat.

8 But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.

9 But the voice answered me again from heaven, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

10 And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11 And, behold, immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Cæsare'a unto me.

12 And the spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house:

13 And he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

14 Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning.

16 Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

C. Peter Defends His Ministry. 11:1-18.

11:1-3. Long before Peter returned to Jerusalem, the news of the conversion of Cornelius preceded him. Although the text makes specific reference to the apostles and brethren that were in Judæa, undoubtedly the character of Peter's revolutionary activities in Judaism must have come to the attention of the High Priest and others of more traditional Judaism. Thus both the more zealous Jewish believers and the greatly zealous Jewish unbelievers were waiting for Peter's arrival and explanation as to why he entered the house and ate with the heathen.

It is unnatural for Luke, a Gentile himself, to make reference to these Jews as the circumcision. The distinction is again seen in the record of what the Jews inquired of Peter, Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised. It is clear that the harmony which existed in Caesarea did not exist yet in Jerusalem.

4-17. Peter apparently understood his best defense to be a straightforward offense. Thus, Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning and expounded it. In no way did Peter shrink away from giving complete details of what had happened at both Joppa and Caesarea. Quickly and completely he related to them the trance into which he fell in Joppa (vs. 5) and the great sheet which he saw coming down out of heaven. Fastening his eyes on this unbelievable object, and noticing the content, Peter was shaken by a voice from heaven saying, Arise, Peter; slay and eat (vs. 7). As one would expect in rehearsing these events for the circumcision, Peter makes direct reference to his initial opposition to this proposition (vs. 8) but also makes sure that they understand that it is God who is speaking to him (vs. 9).

Again when he was approached by the representatives of Cornelius, Peter alludes to the fact that the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting (vs. 12). Then too there was the account that Cornelius had been prepared by his own vision from the Lord to receive Peter. Cornelius was told that Peter would tell him words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved (vs. 14).

Now Peter reaches the climax of his account. He makes reference to the fact that the Holy Ghost fell on them at Caesarea, in the same manner as on us at the beginning. In concluding the defense of his actions, he makes reference to the teaching of the Lord Jesus concerning baptism and, in accordance with that teaching, these Gentile believers were baptized with water. Finally, and most forcefully, Peter informs the circumcision that these Gentiles have believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, even as the Jews had done. Peter's terminal statement is phrased in the form of a question, to which there is no obvious answer, and from which there is no retreat: What was I, that I could withstand God? If the Jewish believers of the church at Jerusalem are to question Peter's action, they must first question the direct leading of God the Father, provision of salvation by God the Son, and verifying signs of God the Spirit. Absolutely no one was ready to do that.

18. They held their peace, and glorified God. No rebuttal was made to Peter's argument; none could be. It has now become evident to the Jewish believers of Jerusalem that Gentiles may indeed become believers as well. It was also within the plan of God to grant repentance unto life to those with whom the Jews would not associate. In the minds of Jewish Christians, the evangelization of Gentiles would mean a drastic reappraisal

19 ¶Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cý-rê'ne, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.

22 ¶Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch.

23 Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul:

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they as-of their own position before God. With this initial foray into previously untapped Gentile territory, the door has been opened for a flood of salvational activity on behalf of non-Jews throughout the world. The door which was cracked by Peter was crashed by Paul. Most who read these words must do so out of thankfulness and gratitude toward God for the event that occurred on that day centuries ago in Caesarea.

D. Continued Persecution. 11:19-12:25.

19-21. After a brief interlude in which the ministry of Philip, the conversion of Saul of Tarsus, and the varied ministry of Peter are elaborated upon, Luke now returns in his narrative to the point of the story at which he departed in 8:1. Under the dint of fierce persecution which arose when Stephen was stoned, the believing Jews of Jerusalem were scattered as far away as Phoenicia, Cyprus, and Antioch. Phoenicia is a narrow strip of coastline in northern Palestine, one hundred twenty miles long and only about twelve miles wide. It extends from the river Eleutherus southward to approximately the region of Mount Carmel. Cyprus is an island just off the coast of, and in sight of, Phoenicia. The historians Philo and Josephus both speak of a Jewish colony on this island. Antioch, some fifteen miles from the mouth of the Orontes River, was the capital of the Greek kingdom of Syria. It was founded by Seleucus Nicator in 300 B.C. in honor of his father Antiochus, one of Alexander the Great's generals. Antioch was made a free city in 64 B.C. when Syria was incorporated into the Roman Empire. The ministry of persecuted Jews who fled north and westward to these areas was characterized by preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

However, there were some bold men of Cyprus and Cyrene (a city in the province of Libya in Africa) who dared to speak unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus. These Grecians are not to be thought of as those Greek-speaking Jews mentioned earlier. There is good manuscript evidence that the rendering here ought to be "Greeks," instead of "Hellenists" (Grecian Jews). If this rendering is followed, it would more greatly substantiate the reason for the statement unto the Jews only in the preceding verse. Men of Cyprus and Cyrene had actually begun to preach the gospel to Greeks at Antioch. Also the reference to preaching the Lord Jesus tends to make an understanding of the Grecians being actually non-Jews all the more probable. If they were actually Jews, the evangelist would refer to Jesus as Messiah, the fulfillment of the hope of Israel. Instead, however, he refers to him in Greek terms, "Lord" (Gr kyrios), and "Saviour" (Gr sôtēr). Since the hand of the Lord was on these efforts, a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord. Although an Ethiopian eunuch and a Roman centurion have already been saved, this preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles is on a far broader scale than the Jews had ever seen before.

22-26. These things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem. It was only a short time until the events which had taken place in Antioch were made known unto the church at Jerusalem. As had been the situation when Peter and John were dispatched to Samaria to investigate the missionary activity of Philip there, so too now the Jerusalem church must send someone to Antioch to do the same. Who better to investigate the activities of Jews from Cyprus than a Jew from Cyprus? Thus Barnabas was sent forth by the Jerusalem church. Whatever report Barnabas returned with could be trusted, for Barnabas was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and faith. Thus, upon arrival at Antioch, when Barnabas viewed the situation there and saw that at Antioch a great number of Gentiles had been saved by the grace of God, he was glad, and exhorted them all.

sembled themselves with the church, and taught much people. And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

Apparently Barnabas was to do more than just observe the activities of the Antiochene Christians. He must have become the advisor to them from the mother church in Jerusalem. But Barnabas quickly realized that the job was too big for one man, for Antioch was a large city, with a population at this time of perhaps five hundred thousand or more. Therefore he began to consider those who might assist him in this task. He needed someone who was of stellar quality and character, and yet someone who could sympathize with both the Jews and the Gentiles who were being saved. There was no question in the mind of Barnabas; there was only one man. Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus for to seek Saul.

Some years earlier Saul of Tarsus had been escorted to Caesarea by the Christians of Jerusalem, and from there he took a ship to his native Tarsus of Cilicia. Now Barnabas travels to Tarsus in order to seek out Saul, who probably had been disinherited for his commitment to Christ (Phil 3:8) and was undoubtedly buried in the mass of humanity at Tarsus, engaged in tentmaking. All this time Saul was being prepared by the Lord for a greater work and he was patiently waiting for the time of the initiation of that work to come. Apparently Barnabas did not immediately locate Saul, for the verb "to seek" (Gr anasēteō) implies a searching with great difficulty. But when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. The next year in Antioch proved to be one of great accomplishment. Under the ministry of Barnabas and Saul, the Christians of Antioch grew both in depth and number. And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. This refers to a practice with which the nimble wits of Antioch prided themselves. They are known to have coined words to describe persons and events. Perhaps as a derogatory term originally, Antiochenes called those who had claimed Jesus as Messiah the "Christ-ones." Thus, as an accurate historian, Luke did not hesitate to record that the followers of the Lord first came to be popularly known as Christians at Antioch.

27 ¶And in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them named Ag'a-bus, and signified by the spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar.

29 Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judæa:

30 Which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

27-30. And in these days came prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch. In the first-century church, a prophet belonged to a recognized order in the church (cf. 2:17-18; 13:1; 20:23; 21:9-10; I Cor 12:28-29; Eph 4:11). One of these prophets was a man named Agabus who indicated, prophesying under the influence of the Spirit of God, that there should be great dearth throughout all the world. Luke is interested in pinpointing the exact time of this famine. Thus he goes one step further in identifying it by saying that the famine occurred in the days of Claudius Caesar (41-54 A.D.). Many extrabiblical sources make note of a succession of bad harvests and extreme famine throughout the entire Roman Empire, especially Palestine, during the reign of Claudius.

In response to this prophetic announcement, the believers at the church of Antioch determined to send relief unto the brethren who lived in Jerusalem and its environs. Thus, they set aside a certain percentage of their income to collect a contribution to be sent to the believers of Judæa. This relief fund was to be sent to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul. This social and communal interest the church at Antioch had for the church at Jerusalem is not only a pleasing expression of the love of the Lord Jesus for the brethren (Jn 10:35), but it marks the beginning of the Pauline practice of accepting the responsibility for caring not only for the souls of those to whom he ministered but for the bodies as well. The church at the end of the twentieth century could well take a lesson from the church at the end of the first century.

12:1-2. Herod the king. The Herod mentioned in this chapter is Herod Agrippa I. Agrippa I was the grandson of Herod the Great and his first wife named Mariamne. This Mariamne was a Hasmonean princess and therefore provided the tie between

CHAPTER 12

NOW about that time Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church.

2 And he killed James the brother of John with the sword.

3 And because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take Peter also. (Then were the days of unleavened bread.)

4 And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains: and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals. And so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

Herod and the Jews. Born in 11 B.C., Agrippa I was sent to Rome to live upon the execution of his father, Aristobulus, in 7 B.C. While a young lad in Rome he became intimate friends with members of the imperial family, especially with Gaius, who was the grandnephew of the emperor Tiberius. In A.D. 37, Gaius succeeded Tiberius as emperor and, in consequence of their long friendship, he awarded the tetrarchies of Philip and Lysanias in southern Syria to his friend Agrippa. It was at this point that Agrippa took the title "king." Some two years later, Galilee and Peraea were added to Agrippa's kingdom when his uncle Herod Antipas was deposed by emperor Gaius. However, Agrippa's kingdom was even further enhanced by the addition of Judaea in A.D. 41 when, upon the assassination of Gaius, Claudius became the Roman emperor. In the fact that he was a descendant of the Hasmonean royal family, Agrippa enjoyed unusual popularity among the Jews. He went out of his way to win their support. Thus it is not surprising to find a notation in Luke's historical account concerning Agrippa's persecution of the nemesis of the Jews, the early church.

And he killed James . . . with the sword. The first of the apostles to fall victim to martyrdom, and the only one recorded on the pages of the Sacred Text, was James, the son of Zebedee. His death fulfills the promise of Jesus that he would drink of His cup and be baptized with His baptism (Mk 10:39). Although this promise was made to both James and John, John outlived all the other apostles, but nevertheless suffered "for the Word of God and the testimony of Jesus" (Rev 1:9). In his Ecclesiastical History (ii. 9) Eusebius preserves a tradition, which was first found in Clement of Alexandria, that the officer who was attached to James and commissioned with guarding him, was so impressed with the apostle's witness, that before James was martyred, this officer confessed Christ as Saviour and was beheaded with the apostle.

3-7. He saw it pleased the Jews. Agrippa's policy to maintain a spirit of goodwill with the Jews got a real boost in the death of James. So elated were they that this apostle was martyred, Agrippa next attempted to take the life of Peter. Peter was apprehended and put into prison on the first day of the Festival of Unleavened Bread. He was therefore incarcerated throughout the entire festival with the intent to bring him to public trial after this period had ended.

The apprehension of Peter did not discourage the Jerusalem church. Rather it set them to praying (Jas 5:16). On the night preceding the day Herod Agrippa I would have brought Peter forth for trial and execution, a very strange phenomenon occurred in that prison. Sleeping between two soldiers, and bound with two sturdy chains, with the keepers of the prison standing guard just outside the door, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison. The light apparently emanated from the angel and Peter was quickly roused, probably unaware of what was happening to him. When the angel struck Peter on the side to awaken him, his chains, the passports to his execution, fell from his hands.

8-11. Gird thyself . . . Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me. The instruction of the angel to Peter was to prepare himself for leaving the prison. Peter was still in a daze, not fully knowing what was happening to him. He wasn't quite aware whether this was indeed a vision or in fact someone leading him from the depths of the prison. After leaving his cell, Peter successfully, by the leading of the angel, made his way through the first and second wards, the two guarded checkpoints before the gate that led to the city. Apparently with his garment cast about him, and in the obvious power of the Spirit of God, Peter and the angel were permitted to pass through these two wards. There would be no hope, however, of passing through the iron gate, for it was securely shut. However, this miraculous escape

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark; where many were gathered together praying.

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken, named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, It is his angel.

16 But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

17 But he, beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go shew these things unto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and went into another place.

18 Now as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death. And he went down from Judæa to Cæs-a-re'a, and there abode.

would not be prevented by a locked gate which opened to them of his own accord. With the gate opening unaided by anyone, the angel and Peter passed on through one street, and at that point the angel departed from him. Once Peter found himself alone, he had opportunity for the first time to appraise his situation. And when Peter was come to himself. With the cool night air in his face, and the immediate danger of the prison behind him, Peter could now fully appreciate that the Lord hath sent his angel to deliver Peter out of the hand of Herod and spoil the anticipation of the Jews the next morning. Peter sized up the situation correctly: this indeed was a miracle of God effected by the prayers of righteous saints.

12-15. Once Peter had come to his senses, his first reaction was to apprise the other disciples of his release. Therefore he made his way to a well-known meeting place for believers; he came to the house of Mary the mother of John. This is the first introduction to a man who will play a vital role in the transmission and recording of the gospel over the next thirty years. John Mark is the son of Mary and it is to their house that Peter made his way. As Peter knocked on the gate, his knock was answered by a young girl perhaps standing guard to warn the praying disciples of approaching Roman soldiers. The door upon which Peter knocked was the street door. This would give entrance to a courtyard or a long hallway from the street to the sanctuary of the home. When the young girl heard Peter's voice and recognized it, she opened not the gate for gladness. So excited was Rhoda to hear the voice of the imprisoned apostle that in her excitement she neglected to let him in. Rather she ran and told the others that Peter was at the street gate. Their immediate response was one of disbelief. Thou art mad. So insistent was Rhoda that she had actually heard the voice of Peter, that those who prayed inside amended their assessment of Rhoda by assuming that perhaps she had heard a voice, although certainly not Peter's voice. Perhaps this was the voice of his angel who had come in Peter's stead.

16-19. But Peter continued knocking. Just as persistent as Rhoda was in insisting that Peter was outside the door, so persistent was Peter in knocking upon the door. There was but one way to solve this puzzle; those inside must answer the door. When they did, and they saw Peter standing there, they were astonished. Peter made a gesture which told them not to say a word, for he was yet unaware that his escape had not been discovered. His immediate thought was for the others and he said, Go show these things unto James, and to the brethren. James, the brother of the Lord Jesus and a pillar of the Jerusalem church, and the brethren or elders (11:30) would have to be warned because, with the escape of Peter, their lives would be in danger as well.

Now as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers. One can imagine the consternation that would have occurred in the minds of the two soldiers on either side of Peter, chained now to no one, the soldiers who stood guard outside the cell, now with no one to guard, and those who guarded the first two wards leading to the outside of the prison. No one had an explanation as to what happened to their prisoner. When Herod looked for him and the report came that he was not to be found, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death. The penalty for losing a prisoner was severe in the Roman Empire, and these men took very seriously their responsibility in keeping prisoners secure. But now nothing could be done; the prisoner was gone. Because of this, Herod Agrippa I departed from Jerusalem and went to reside at Caesarea, his other capital.

Although these verses do not advance the narrative, they do provide great insight into the death of Herod Agrippa I. Luke is 20 ¶And Herod was highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon: but they came with one accord to him, and, having made Blās'tus the king's chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because their country was nourished by the king's country.

21 And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them.

22 And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And immediately the angel of the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost.

24 ¶But the word of God grew and multiplied.

25 And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their ministry, and took with them John, whose surname was Mark.

CHAPTER 13

NOW there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Nī'ger, and Lucius of Cŷ-rē-ne, and Mān'a-en, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them.

3 And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

always interested in keeping a historical perspective in the book of Acts. Thus he includes these verses.

20-23. For an unknown reason, the people of Tyre and Sidon have fallen out of favor in the eyes of Agrippa. This was a very precarious situation for them since the seaboard Phoenician cities of Tyre and Sidon depended entirely on the green fields of Galilee for their food supply. This had been the case for centuries (cf. I Kgs 5:9 ff.). Realizing that they must again be restored to the good graces of the king, residents of this town befriended the king's chamberlain, Blastus.

At this point Luke's account is paralleled by an extrabiblical account which provided confirmation of the accuracy and validity of Acts. Josephus (Antiquities xix. 8.2) records that on the birthday of the emperor (upon a set day), Agrippa held a large festival in which he donned a robe made of silver throughout. As he entered the theater of Caesarea at day break, the silver glittered in the morning sunlight and was so resplendent that all who looked upon it were immediately enamored with the king. Luke records that the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god and not of a man. Josephus says the cry invoked by the crowd was, "Be gracious unto us! Hitherto we have revered thee as a man, but henceforth we acknowledge thee to be of more than mortal nature." Agrippa relished and revelled in the plaudits that had been thrown his way. He was claimed to be a god; and he did not deny the claim. Therefore, the Lord smote him, because he gave not God the glory. Herod's receiving the praise due only to Jehovah, and his subsequent death, are not without precedent. But his own particular species of blasphemy is recorded by Luke to be the single cause of his death.

24-25. But the word of God grew and multiplied represents another of Luke's progress reports periodically seen in this historical account (cf. 6:7; 9:31). At this point Barnabas and Saul set out from Jerusalem taking with them John Mark. They apparently had just come to the city with the relief offering collected from the Antiochene believers and are now returning to Antioch. The death of Herod Agrippa I probably occurred prior to their departure from Antioch.

IV. PAUL'S FIRST MISSIONARY JOURNEY: ITS EFFECT. 13:1-15:35.

A. Commissioning of Barnabas and Saul. 13:1-13.

13:1-3. The first official gentile mission was carried by Paul and Barnabas, who were sent by the church at Antioch to Cyprus and the cities in the southern part of the Roman province of Galatia. This church was characterized by many outstanding Christians and prophets and teachers. Simeon . . . called Niger, the Latin word meaning "black," was apparently a nickname for his dark complexion and suggests that he was perhaps of African origin. Some have suggested that he may have been Simon of Cyrene (cf. Mk 15:21) who carried Jesus' cross. The designation for Manaen . . . brought up with Herod means that he was a "foster brother." This term was generally used of children who were brought up in the royal court, and later the phrase was retained as an actual title. Herod is Herod Antipas who ruled Galilee and Peraea between 4 B.C. and A.D. 39. The relationship between them is one of the remarkable apologetic notices of the book of Acts. Ladd (Wycliffe Bible Commentary, p. 427) suggests that the prophets gave or were given direct revelation from God by the Holy Spirit and the teachers were gifted in the interpretation of that revelation. Thus, the utterance of the Holy Ghost probably came through a prophet. During a time of fasting and prayer, which was always especially significant for the early church, the Holy Spirit designated the two most eminent and gifted leaders among the entire group to become the first actual missionaries. While it is true that every Christian was to carry on the mission of the church (cf. Mt 28:20, notes), these men became the first actual "sent-ones." It should be noted that they . . . laid their hands on them refers to the church at Antioch as the sending agency. Thus in its purest form, the New Testament local church sent forth missionary representatives from the midst of its own congregation. In the book of Acts we find no reference to mission boards or organizations as such. Nor do we find single individuals sending forth missionaries apart from the commission of the church. In other words, as the Great Commission was given to the apostles who were to become the foundation of the church, it was, therefore, given to the church, not to individuals. The laying on of hands did not impart any special power nor qualification to the missionaries, but "expressed its fellowship with Barnabas and Paul and recognized them as its delegates or 'apostles'" (F. F. Bruce, p. 261).

4-7. Seleucia (vs. 4) was the port of Antioch from which they sailed for Cyprus, the large island off the shore in the Mediterranean Sea. It was formally annexed by Rome in 57 B.C. and later became a province governed by an imperial legate. After 22 B.C. Augustus gave its control to the Roman Senate and it was thereafter administered by a proconsul. Thus, Luke accurately indicates the magistrate's title as "governor." Salamis (vs. 5) was the eastern port of Cyprus and was its largest city. There were several synagogues there because of the large Jewish population. John Mark accompanied the apostles. He was the cousin of Barnabas whom they had recently taken with them from Jerusalem to Antioch (cf. 12:25). He was to serve as their minister, or "attendant." Some have suggested that his responsibility was that of instructing new converts in the gospel. He later would write the Gospel of Mark. Paphos was the official capital of the province in those days. Elymas (vs. 8) is referred to as a sorcerer (Gr magos) and a false prophet. In essence he was a magician or astrologer attached to the political entourage as an "advisor" to the governor Sergius Paulus. Some have suggested that he is to be identified with Lucius Sergius Paulus who is known to have been one of the curators of the Tiber during the reign of Claudius.

8-12. Elymas was an alternate name for Bar-Jesus whose original Aramaic name means "Son of Salvation" but was in fact a "magician" and "false prophet." As he sensed the governor was accepting the message of Barnabas and Saul, he realized his own position would be endangered. Therefore, he attempted to sway Sergius Paulus from the faith. While this passage uses interchangeable names, it very interestingly shifts at this point from Saul to Paul. Paul is the Greek form of the Semitic name, Saul. Because of the correlation to the governor's name, and the fact that they are now in distinctly Greek-influenced territory, Paul changes the outward usage of his name as a matter of cultural identification with the people whom he is trying to reach with the gospel. Paul's rebuke of this false prophet is stern and straightforward. He calls him a child of the devil and enemy of all righteousness. He rebukes his perversion of the truth and strikes him with temporary blindness. Amazed and stunned by the power of these servants of the Lord over his resident magician, the proconsul believed . . . the doctrine of the Lord (vs. 12). W. Ramsay (The Bearing of Recent Discovery on the Trustworthiness of the New Testament, p. 165) argues that there is evidence that the next two generations of his family were known as Christians.

13. Leaving Barnabas' native land of Cyprus, they sailed to the country bordering Paul's homeland. Pamphylia was a district on the coast of Asia Minor which included the city of Perga, some twenty miles inland. For some unexplained reason John Mark forsook them and returned to Jerusalem. Specula-

4 ¶So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Se-leu'ci-a; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Sal'a-mis, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews; and they had also John to their minister.

6 And when they had gone through the isle unto Pa'phos, they found a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jē'sus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man; who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But E'l'y-mas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

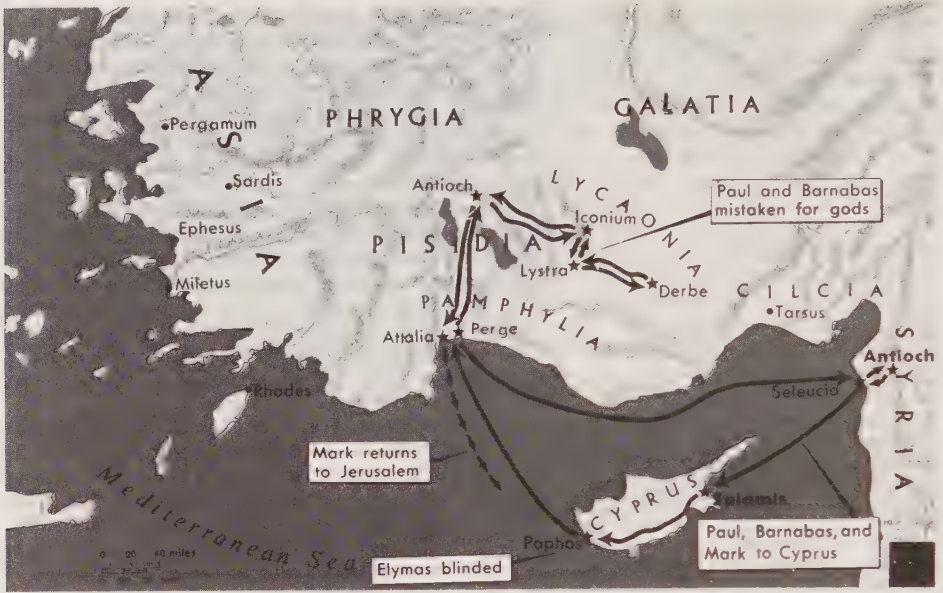

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,) filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him.

10 And said, O full of all subtilty and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the deputy, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 ¶Now when Paul and his company loosed from Pa'phos, they came to Per'ga in Pām-phŷl'i-a: and John departing from them returned to Jerusalem.

The First Missionary Journey of Paul

tion at this point needs to be contained since we are not told why he left. It could have been due to news of an emergency, fear of strange territory, or uncertainty as to the new change of direction in their mission. It seems obvious later that Paul looked upon his action as inexcusable desertion and refused to give him a second chance (cf. 15:37). On the other hand, Barnabas reconciled with Mark and restored him for effective ministry in the future.

A number of important and practical observations can be made from this incident. Paul, standing for the truth and the severity of their mission, demanded total allegiance which later led him to a new partner. Barnabas, however, equally a servant of the Lord, was able to restore one who had fallen as his new partner. An objective look at this incident makes it difficult to judge which was right or wrong, if indeed either were. The unavoidable "split" is ultimately overruled by the Lord to accomplish a double ministry.

B. The First Foray into Asia Minor. 13:14-52.

14-16. The phrase Antioch in Pisidia is mistranslated in the AV. Actually Antioch was not in Pisidia but near the region of Pisidia and thus came to be known as Pisidian Antioch. The so-called "South Galatian" theory and the "North Galatian" theory arise from the designation of this province. Most conservative commentators hold to Ramsay's view that the Epistle to the Galatians was written to these cities of southern Galatia (cf. Ladd, Tenney, etc.). Others (Bruce) hold the opposite. Ramsay (St. Paul the Traveller, pp. 94 ff.) infers from Galatians 4:13 that Paul caught malaria in the low-lying territory around Perga and went to recuperate in the higher altitudes of southern Galatia. Following their normal custom, Paul and Barnabas went to the synagogue of the Jewish community on the Sabbath day. Paul seemed to give great importance to the evangelization of Roman colonies (such as this one) which were stationed at strategic points along the imperial roads within the empire. The rulers of the synagogue were not clergymen but lay leaders or officers who were given the authority to invite anyone from the audience to give a word of exhortation. Notice that Paul stood up and that he beckoned with his hand. Thus, we observe 14 ¶But when they departed from Per'ga, they came to Antioch in Pi-sid'-i-a, and went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and sat down.

15 And after the reading of the law and the prophets the rulers of the syna-gogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and beckon-ing with his hand said, Men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience.

17 The God of this people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, and with an high arm brought he them out of it.

18 And about the time of forty years suffered he their manners in the wilderness.

19 And when he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Chā'naan, he divided their land to them by lot.

20 And after that he gave unto them judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years, until Samuel the prophet.

21 And afterward they desired a king: and God gave unto them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.

22 And when he had removed him, he raised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will.

23 Of this man's seed hath God according to his promise raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus:

24 When John had first preached before his coming the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel.

25 And as John fulfilled his course, he said, Whom think ye that I am? I am not he. But, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the word of this salvation sent.

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.

30 But God raised him from the dead:

31 And he was seen many days of them which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, 33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give you the sure mercies of David.

35 Wherefore he saith also in another something of the authoritative presentation of his message as he both stands to speak and gestures to the audience. The Men of Israel were Jews and ye that fear God were Gentiles who worshiped the God of the Jews and accepted the demands of the Law (cf. 10:2).

17-41. Paul's sermon in the synagogue in Pisidian Antioch recounted the history of God's deliverance of the Jewish nation from the time of Moses through the reign of David. Several important dates are given within this message. The forty years . . . in the wilderness (vs. 18) and the four hundred and fifty years (vs. 20) in the land of Canaan (vs. 19). The seven nations conquered in the land of Canaan are listed in Deuteronomy 7:1: "the Hittite, the Girgashite, the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite." The four hundred and fifty years may be intended to cover the period up to David's reign or the entire four hundred year period of sojourn in Egypt, along with the forty years of wandering in the wilderness and ten years of the initial period of conquest until the actual distribution of the land (cf. Josh 14). Paul especially identifies the line of God's promised Messiah through David . . . their king (vs. 22). God's promise has been kept to Israel in providing a Saviour, Jesus (vs. 23). The reference to John the Baptist (vs. 24), his preaching, and the baptism of repentance seems to provide very early authoritative reference to the historicity of John's ministry as it is quoted here by the Apostle Paul. One should also note the connection between John's "baptism of repentance" and the people of "Israel," indicating, as do the Gospels, that John's ministry was not that of initiating the church but bringing to a conclusion the ministry of the Old Testament prophets.

The resurrection of Christ is the central theme of victory in Paul's sermon as it was in the majority of New Testament evangelistic messages. Notice that the gospel centers in the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ in this sermon. It should be observed that true gospel preaching does not really occur until this central theme of the person and work of Christ in relation to salvation has been declared. The agents of His message are called witnesses (Gr martyrs, from which we derive "martyr"). These messengers of God were declaring the glad tidings (vs. 32) of the promise which God has made to their fathers and was now fulfilled in their lifetimes.

In verse 35 Paul quotes Psalm 16:10 as referring to Christ since it could not refer to David who had died and remained dead. Therefore it must refer to his promised descendant, the Messiah, whom Paul was now declaring to be Jesus Christ. The fact that Christ rose from the dead literally and physically is emphasized by the statement that he saw no corruption (vs. 37). On the basis of his triumphal death and resurrection, forgiveness of sins could now be offered to Paul's hearers. The key to receiving these benefits is faith. So all that believe are justified (vs. 39). Justification (Gr dikaioō) involves the declaring of one righteous. This, then, is the good news or glad tidings of the gospel.

psalm. Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

36 For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 ¶Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

39 And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware therefore, lest that come upon you, which is spoken of in the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 ¶And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them the next sabbath.

43 Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

44 ¶And the next sabbath day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles.

47 For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto i-cō-ni-um.

52 And the disciples were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost.

42-45. The excitement of this new message of forgiveness of sin and impartation of righteousness created a great deal of excitement. After the synagogue service, many indicated their readiness to accept the message. This reception seems to have been the greatest among the religious proselytes (vs. 43). During the week the report of the impact of this service was so great that by the next Sabbath the synagogue was filled with Gentiles desiring to hear Paul's message. Unfortunately, such a crowd of Gentiles provoked the Jews to envy, and they began contradicting and blaspheming Paul's message.

46-52. In the face of this rejection by his Jewish listeners, Paul reminded them that it was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to them and if they judge themselves unworthy of everlasting life, then he will turn to the Gentiles (vs. 46). This rejection on the part of the Jews at the synagogue, however, did not stop the influence upon the Gentiles, who were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord. Thus the response by the Gentile "God-fearers" seems to have been outstanding. Without a doubt this incident serves as the great turning point in Paul's missionary strategy. While he will continue to offer the gospel to the Jew first, he will concentrate his major attention on the most responsive element of society to whom he is preaching: the Gentiles. Thus, it is said that as many as were ordained to eternal life believed (vs. 48). At this point the primary significance of this reference to predestination is more historical than it is theological, though the one does not detract from the other. That God is sovereign in sending His messengers to carry His message wherever He will, is obvious from both Scripture and the history of the church. It is the living Lord of heaven, Jesus Himself, who directs the activities of His messengers and opens and closes the doors of opportunity which He sets before them! There can be no doubt that the apostles were to be personally responsible for carrying the message of Christ to the hearts of men.

Again we notice that the "Acts of the Apostles" are really the Acts of Christ carried on through His apostles. Not only was the gospel rejected here by the majority of the Jews, but they in turn stirred up the "devout and honorable women," or those of high and influential standing. The persecution against Paul and Barnabas is the first such action recorded against the missionary enterprise of the early church. The shaking of the dust off their feet implied their recognition of the rejection of their message and their rejection in turn of those who had refused Christ's salvation. Notice that the disciples were not discouraged by this incident but were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost (vs. 52).

C. Iconium, Derbe, and Lystra. 14:1-28.

14:1-5. Following their previously established pattern, Paul and Barnabas went first to the synagogue of the Jews which was located in Iconium, in the eastern district of Phrygia. The text indicates that a great multitude (vs. 1) of both Jews and Greeks believed. However, the unbelieving Jews began to stir up opposition again to the message of the apostles. Since it took a while for the opposition to become effective, Paul and his team were able to remain there preaching for a long time. In Luke's typically historical fashion, he does not indicate how long a period of time this actually was, making an exact chronology of Paul's travels almost impossible. Finally, the hostile Jews succeeded in inciting a riot which caused Paul and Barnabas to have to leave Iconium. Verse 3 indicates that the message of the gospel was the word of His grace and that their ministry was also accompanied by signs and wonders, or miracles.

6. The missionary team fled into Lystra and Derbe which are described as cities of Lycaonia. Luke's ancient contemporaries seemed to refer to these cities as being outside the district of Lycaonia, leading many scholars to challenge his accuracy. The investigation of this matter was the great turning point in archaeologist Sir William Ramsay's life as this reference caught his attention and careful examination of the matter proved Luke to be correct. Beginning as a critic of the veracity of the book of Acts, Ramsay became one of its strongest defenders (see Bearing of Recent Discovery on the Trustworthiness of the New Testament, ch. 3).

7-15. The missionary-apostles preached the gospel (Gr eu-angelizomai), or the "good news" of Christ's death and resurrection. The preaching was followed by the healing of a crippled man who never had walked (vs. 8). The miracle was based upon the man's faith and was total and instantaneous, for he immediately leaped and walked (vs. 10). The people became ecstatically overwhelmed and began to speak in their native dialect indicating that these men were gods, thinking that they were Jupiter and Mercurius (Mercury). Therefore, the priest of Jupiter brought a sacrifice unto them which resulted in their rebuking the people and reminding them that they were human beings who had come to turn them from these vanities unto the living God. Paul's usage of his term in pagan cities seems to be deliberate to distinguish God the Creator as the only God whom he represented. The names "Jupiter" and "Mercury" are the Latin equivalents for the Greek names of these gods, Zeus, the father of gods, and Hermes, the messenger of the gods. Greek mythological literature is filled with references to these deities.

16-18. Paul's apologetic speech reminded them that in times past God had allowed the nations to go their own ways but had

CHAPTER 14

AND it came to pass in i-cō'nī-um, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed.

2 But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord, which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But the multitude of the city was divided; and part held with the Jews, and part with the apostles.

5 And when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles, and also of the Jews with their rulers, to use them despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They were ware of it, and fled unto Lys'tra and Der'be, cities of Lyc-a-o'-ni-a, and unto the region that lieth round about:

7 And there they preached the gospel.

8 ¶And there sat a certain man at Lys'tra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak: who stedfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed,

10 Said with a loud voice, Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lyc-a-o'-ni-a, The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mer-cū'rī-us, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, they rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out,

15 And saying, Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein:

16 Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.

ACTS 14:17

17 Nevertheless he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

18 And with these sayings scarce restrained they the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

19 ¶And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and ĩ-cō'nī-um, who persuaded the people, and, having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead.

20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Der'be.

21 And when they had preached the gospel to that city, and had taught many, they returned again to Lys'tra, and to ĩ-cō'nī-um, and Antioch, 22 Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

23 And when they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

24 And after they had passed throughout Pī-sīd'ī-a, they came to Pām-phŷl'ī-a.

25 And when they had preached the word in Per'ga, they went down into Āt-ta'li-a:

26 And thence sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

not left Himself without witness. The concept of this message was to show them that the great Creator-God was revealing Himself to them through nature, a message which Paul indicates in Romans 1-2 was sufficient to make men responsible to God, but not sufficient to bring them to salvation. The Lord had allowed the nations to go their own way, because they had previously rejected His way (cf. Gen 10-11, which forms the great turning point in God's dealing with man). The effect of the sermon was to restrain the people from honoring them as gods. There can be no doubt that the early Christian disciples did not consider themselves worthy of worship or sainthood. They rejected any special place of spiritual authority or recognition. They clearly saw themselves as men simply doing God's work by carrying out the commission which Christ had left to His church.

19-20. No reference is actually made to a Jewish synagogue in Lystra, but probably such a synagogue existed, for when the Jews from Antioch and Iconium came there they were able to raise up strong opposition against Paul. He was eventually stoned and left for dead (vs. 19). Paul evidently refers to this event in II Corinthians 11:24-25, where he mentions being caught up into the "third heaven." The abrupt nature of the narrative at this point seems to indicate a miraculous deliverance of some sort. Any man stoned in such a manner without receiving severe physical injuries, both externally and internally, would be a miracle indeed! The reference in Galatians 6:17 to the "marks of Jesus" may well refer to the scars received from this stoning. There can be no underestimation of the shock which must have come upon the people of the city when Paul rose up (vs. 20) and came back into the city probably to continue his preaching. Note that the disciples were present at this "resurrection." The next day they left and went to Derbe, a frontier city of the province of Galatia. No opposition is recorded in this city, where it is said they made many disciples.

21-25. Having completed this initial tour, they returned to each city in reverse order, Confirming the souls of the disciples (vs. 22). This sets the pattern for the concept of "follow-up" work among new converts, whom they exhorted to continue in the faith. This does not mean that a born-again believer might stop believing and thus lose his salvation, but rather, emphasizes the importance of continued growth in the Christian life. This process of growth will bring us through much tribulation to enter the kingdom of God, which here must refer to heaven. The reference to "tribulation" is not to the Tribulation itself, but to the continued troubles and sufferings of the church throughout all ages. The fact that they ordained them elders in each church indicates that the leadership of each local congregation rested in the authority of its own men. While the leaders of the church at Jerusalem had spiritual influence over the local congregations, nowhere do we find any hierarchical structure in the early church. One predominant church did not overrule the affairs of another. Certainly the church at Jerusalem remained the spiritual standard during these early years because of its geographical proximity to the origin of the Christian faith. But even there great latitude was permitted toward the individual local congregations. The "elders" (Gr presbuteros) were spiritual leaders who shared the oversight of the church and from among whom a "bishop" or pastor was chosen as their leader. The elders were similar to the pastoral staff of most of our churches today. They engaged in the spiritual oversight of the church, whereas the deacons were designated as servants of the congregation.

26-28. The missionary team then sailed to Antioch from the seaport Attalia. Upon their return to their sending church they gathered them together and rehearsed all that God had done. Certainly this experience sets the pattern of sent missionaries

27 And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

28 And there they abode long time with the disciples.

CHAPTER 15

AND certain men which came down from Judæa taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.

2 When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question.

returning to the sending church with a report of their evangelistic activities. Note that God . . . opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles (vs. 27). Again we observe that Christ, the Lord of the church, is sovereignly directing her affairs from heaven. The church in Antioch had now become independent of the "mother church" in Jerusalem. Thus they remained there a long time. This again is one of Luke's characteristically indefinite references to time. It is generally assumed that this first missionary journey took about one year and was followed by another year of recuperation and preparation in Antioch.

D. The Council of Jerusalem. 15:1-35.

15:1-2. The Council of Jerusalem is one of the great turning points of the book of Acts, as are the conversions of Paul and Cornelius. The relation between the Jewish and Gentile believers in terms of admission to membership in the church was the issue of this discussion. In the beginning, the church consisted almost entirely of converted Jews who had automatically been circumcised as Old Testament believers. Even Peter, earlier, had great difficulty making the transition to full fellowship with the Gentiles. The establishment of a predominantly Gentile church in Antioch and now the success of the Gentile mission in Galatia refocused attention upon fellowship with these growing churches. Church growth certainly underlies the basic themes represented by Luke in the book of Acts. The power of the message of the gospel is demonstrated by the fact that it gains reception and response almost everywhere. When the Jewish converts from Judæa arrived in Antioch, they insisted that ye be circumcised in order to be saved (vs. 1). The text later (vs. 5) indicates that these converts were from among the Pharisees, the strictest of the sects of the Jews. The disputations would also seem to indicate that some of the early believers still looked upon Christianity as a movement within Judaism at this point (cf. Ladd, p. 435).

It should be noted that a substantial difference of opinion exists among commentators as to whether or not this visit to Jerusalem is represented in Galatians 2 or not. Harrison (Wycliffe Bible Commentary, pp. 698-699) argues for this (cf. also Lightfoot, Galatians, pp. 125ff. and Ladd, pp. 435ff.), and others argue that the Epistle to the Galatians was written shortly before the Council of Jerusalem, which would adequately explain why that epistle makes no allusion to that Council. Since the discussions and decisions of the Council were distinctly relevant to the issue at hand in the Epistle to the Galatians, it would seem highly unlikely that Paul would not have made reference to this decision. Thus, Paul's visit to Jerusalem in Galatians 2 seems to be equated with the famine-relief visit of Acts 11. No matter how important that interview was when Paul wrote to the Galatians, its importance was erased by that of the Jerusalem Council which took place soon afterwards. According to the text of Acts the visit that Paul paid to Jerusalem at the time of the Council was his third visit after his conversion (cf. 9:26; 11:30; 12:25). In the Epistle to the Galatians Paul tells of two visits which he paid to Jerusalem after his conversion, the first being identified with that of Acts 9 and the second with that of Acts 11, rather than with this visit in Acts 15. Bruce argues that a "reasonable and satisfying sequence of events" can be reconstructed by accepting the view that the Epistle to the Galatians was written to the young churches founded by Paul and Barnabas during their first missionary tour and that it was written at Antioch shortly before the Jerusalem Council. The rapid progress of Gentile evangelization in Antioch, Cyprus, and Asia Minor posed a serious threat to the Jewish Christians at Jerusalem. It was this issue which was settled by the epochal conference at Jerusalem.

3 And being brought on their way by

3-6. The Jerusalem church welcomed the delegation from the church, they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles; and they caused great joy unto all the brethren.

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders, and they declared all things that God had done with them.

5 ¶But there rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

6 And the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter.

7 And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

9 And put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.

12 ¶Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:

14 Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

16 After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up;

17 That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

18 Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain from pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood.

21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day.

22 ¶Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; name-

Antioch and listened eagerly to the story of their successful evangelization of the Gentiles in Galatia, which caused great joy unto all the brethren. Objections by the Pharisees which believed (or Christian converts from among the Pharisees) led to a formal conference of the apostles and elders with the delegation from Antioch. While the leaders were involved in the discussion, verses 12 and 22 show that the whole church participated in the ultimate decision. The wrong decision at this point would have thrown the church back under Jewish bondage to the law and would have stalled the expansion of the church as designed by her Lord.

7-11. Paul's earlier rebuke of Peter in Antioch (cf. Gal 2:11) had taken effect. Now, as the leader of the apostles, Peter reinforced his original position on the Gentile mission as he had with Cornelius. He reminded them that God had accepted the Gentiles by faith alone and not on Jewish terms. Peter emphasized that it was God's choice to give the gospel to the Gentiles and that He who directed this mission had given them the Holy Ghost even as He had done unto the Jewish believers. Therefore, there exists no difference (vs. 9) between Jewish and Gentile believers, for both have their hearts purified by faith. The entire discussion of this matter and its final conclusion should have guarded the church over the centuries against any concept of salvation by works or faith plus works. Each speaker in this conference made it clear that salvation is by faith alone. Peter emphasized that salvation was through the grace of the Lord. Thus, the book of Acts is consistent throughout in emphasizing that salvation is of God and does not originate with man.

12-21. The impact upon the congregation was such that the multitude kept silence, giving Barnabas and Paul an opportunity to review the results of the Gentile missionary enterprise. Then the turning point came when James, the brother of our Lord, spoke decisively in regard to this matter. While all of the apostles appeared to be actively involved in this discussion, it seems clear from this passage that James, the pastor of the church at Jerusalem, was the ultimate leader and his decision was accepted by the others. Rather than Peter or Paul being in the leadership role at this point, James alone assumes that responsibility. This incident gives great understanding of the authority of the pastor's leadership in the church. Even the leader of the apostles, Peter, and the church's outstanding missionary spokesman, Paul, could not overrule his decision. It should also be observed that all of these men essentially agreed in how to handle this matter. Spirit-directed ministry will always reflect harmony and fellowship in vital matters of this nature. The reference to the tabernacle of David which is fallen down (vs. 16) seems to be a reference to the spiritual leadership of the Jewish nation, not a literal reference to the Temple as such. Therefore, the rebuilding referred to here may not necessarily be to the reconstruction of the Tribulation or millennial Temple, but rather to the ultimate rebuilding of the nation of Israel itself at the time. James' decision was that they no longer trouble the Gentiles who had turned to God (vs. 19), referring to the drastic nature of their conversion. However, he suggested that they write unto them that they abstain from idols, from fornication, from things strangled, and from blood (vs. 20). Each of these prohibitions related to particular pagan offenses which were especially objectionable to orthodox Jews.

22-29. The final decision was reached with such unanimity that it pleased . . . the apostles and elders, with the whole church. Thus, we find the first major ecumenical council ending with total harmony. Messengers were then chosen to take a ly, Judas surnamed Bār'sā-bas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner: The apostles and elders and brethren send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Ćī-l'ċia.

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul,

26 Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by mouth.

28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things;

29 That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the consolation.

32 And Judas and Silas, being prophets also themselves, exhorted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them.

33 And after they had tarried there a space, they were let go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

36 ¶And some days after Paul said unto Barnabas, Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them John, whose surname was Mark.

38 But Paul thought not good to take him with them, who departed from them from Pām-phŷl'ċ-a, and went not with them to the work.

39 And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto Cyprus;

40 And Paul chose Silas, and departed, being recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.

41 And he went through Syria and Ćī-l'ċia, confirming the churches.

letter to Antioch explaining the decision. Judas and Silas (who appears later as Paul's companion) were to communicate the Council's findings by word of mouth and also by carrying a letter from the apostles and elders at Jerusalem to the church at Antioch. Paul and Barnabas returned to Antioch where they remained and were accompanied by Judas and Silas as representatives from the Jerusalem church to which they returned. The letter is quoted in its entirety in verses 23-29. It is clear, direct, uncomplicated, and simple. It is neither artificially "spiritual," nor unnecessarily lengthy. The letter is referred to as the epistle (vs. 30).

30-35. The reception at Antioch was joyous and the issue was permanently settled in that church. Judas and Silas are referred to as being prophets (vs. 32). Paul and Barnabas were engaged in the activity of teaching and preaching (vs. 35). The reference seems to indicate that several men were involved in the teaching and preaching ministry of this congregation and that the entire membership was mobilized in the task of evangelism. The reference to "prophets" clearly seems to be that of the task of preaching or proclaiming the Word of God.

V. PAUL'S SECOND JOURNEY: CHRISTIANITY SPREADS WESTWARD. 15:36-18:22.

A. A New Team. 15:36-16:5.

36-41. After some time passed (again the amount of time is vaguely stated), Paul initiated to Barnabas the idea of returning to the cities where they had established churches. It should be noted that they did not merely establish believers who were unattached from each other in the cities to which they had gone, but rather they established churches, or local assemblies of believers, in each city.

The disagreement over John, whose surname was Mark, brought about the division of the first missionary team. Paul objected to taking Mark, who had departed from them from Pamphylia earlier. The difference was so sharp that each took a new assistant and traveled in a different direction—Barnabas taking Mark and sailing to Cyprus; Paul choosing Silas and departing into Cilicia. Much speculation has been done over the nature of this division; however, it is presented by Luke in a matter-of-fact tone. Evidently each man had a preference for his native land in his missionary work. Barnabas returned to Cyprus; Paul returned to his native Anatolia. As a missionary handbook, Acts indicates that immediate evangelization is most effective in a context where one is most familiar with the people and their needs. This does not mitigate against cross-cultural evangelism, for Paul would be engaged in such throughout most of his career. However, as a training model, the immediate

CHAPTER 16

THEN came he to Der'be and Lys'tra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, named Ti-mō'the-us, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed; but his father was a Greek;

2 Which was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lys'tra and Ī-cō-nī-um.

3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.

4 And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

5 And so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily.

6 Now when they had gone throughout Phrŷg-Ī-a and the region of Ga-lā'tia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia,

7 After they were come to Mŷs'ia, they assayed to go into Bī-thŷn'Ī-a: but the Spirit suffered them not.

8 And they passing by Mŷs'ia came down to Troas.

implication seems to be that one receives his best early training for evangelism within his own cultural context. The new teams evidently were both very effective. Barnabas was able to recover and rebuild the life of Mark whom Paul later referred to as one whom he appreciated (cf. Col 4:10; II Tim 4:11). In the meantime, Paul was able to develop the qualities which he had observed in Silas. In either case God's work was extended, and again the Lord of the church must be seen as sovereignly operating over and above the affairs, and even the disputes, of men.

16:1-5. Paul returned to Derbe and Lystra where he selected Timothy, the son of a Jewess who was a believer. This outstanding young man would become his travel companion and later would be one of the leaders of the early church. He is the same Timothy to whom the epistles bearing his name were sent. The cultural barrier to evangelism of the Jews centered on the issue of circumcision. Therefore, since Timothy was a half-Jew, Paul circumcised him so that he would be acceptable to the Jews in their forthcoming Jewish ministry. This action can hardly be looked upon as a compromise of conviction in relation to chapter 15, since Paul had spoken so strongly in favor of the Gentile mission. It should be remembered, however, that Paul was not giving up on the Jews, though he must have experienced a growing awareness of the Gentile thrust of his mission. He would continue to go "to the Jew first" and then to the Gentiles. This incident teaches us that cultural accommodation in relation to missionary evangelism is often vital to the furtherance of the gospel. It should be observed, though, that such accommodation is made in matters of external preference and should not be made in matters considered morally sinful (see this principle expressed in I Cor 9:20). Ladd notes that it was probably at this time that Timothy was set aside by the elders in Lystra for missionary activity, referred to in I Timothy 4:14 (p. 441). The initial stage of the second missionary journey took them back to the churches which had been established on the first journey and were now increased in number daily (vs. 5), emphasizing again Luke's apologetic approach to church growth as proof of the power of the gospel. As in the earlier reference to the church at Jerusalem (2:42ff), these churches are said to have been growing in number daily. This would certainly mean that conversion was occurring as a result of every-member evangelism, not just evangelistic preaching on Sundays. While such preaching is never mitigated against in the New Testament, daily personal evangelism seems to have been the strength of the early church. Thus, the pattern of aggressively evangelistic, soul-winning church ministries is modeled for us in these early New Testament churches.

B. A New Direction. 16:6-40.

6-8. The geographical movement which ultimately led the missionary leader to Troas is viewed differently in relation to the "North Galatian theory" or the "South Galatian theory." The latter seems the most reasonable; that they came to Phrygia and the region of Galatia, not as separate regions but as a single area: Phrygian Galatia. Thus their journey would have taken them from Derbe and Lystra through this part of Galatia directly westward to the great cities of the province of Asia. It hardly needs to be mentioned that this is not a reference to the continent of Asia, but to the province of that name within a peninsula of Asia Minor. Nevertheless, a great deal of allegorical interpretation and preaching has often been done by those misunderstanding this reference. Traveling through this area they then turned northward toward Mysia and Bithynia and again were restrained by the Holy Spirit. Consequently, they came to the seaport of Troas (ancient Troy). From this spot on the edge of the geographical continent of Asia, their attention would be turned across the straits to Greece and the continent of Europe.

9 ¶And a vision appeared to Paul in the night; there stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

11 Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Sām-o-thrā'cia, and the next day to Nē-āp'o-lis;

12 And from thence to Phī-lip'pī, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony; and we were in that city abiding certain days.

13 And on the sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither.

14 ¶And a certain woman named Lyd'i-a, a seller of purple, of the city of Thŷ-a-tī'ra, which worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

15 And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us.

16 ¶And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of divination met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying:

17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These men are the servants of the most high God, which shew unto us the way of salvation.

18 And this did she many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned and said to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour.

9-12. The famous Macedonian vision takes place at this point. Paul had been postponed by the Holy Spirit from preaching in Asia Minor (a mission which would be engaged in later). At this point, certainly some sense of concern, perhaps even confusion, must have gone through the apostle's mind. Why had they traveled all the way to the seaport of Troas? It was here that a vision appeared to Paul, evidently sent by God and not merely the product of his own imagination. In the vision a man of Macedonia (northern Greece) called to them to Come over . . . and help us. We note the need to preach the gospel in each of these areas. It may be also said that they did not attempt to second-guess God. They had just come from the east, they had been forbidden to go south or north, so they waited. God's ultimate will is not always the easiest thing to find, but once found, it becomes the most blessed! In the vision at Troas Paul saw the man of Macedonia and prepared a team of evangelists to enter Europe. Evidently, at this point, the author, Luke, joined the team. The reference to "we came" indicates that the story is now autobiographical. Luke was a physician, an intellectual, an author, and Greek by background. Thus, by adding an educated Greek doctor to the evangelistic team, they would only enhance their effectiveness in the new mission. Whether Luke was a practicing physician in Troas at the time, or whether he was there for some other purpose, or whether he joined them along the way, is difficult to tell. Nevertheless from this point it is obvious that he continues in Paul's company to Philippi. Thus, the evangelistic team now consists of Paul the leader, Silas his assistant, Timothy the young man, and Luke the intellectual. While this four-man team is in no way designed to set a necessary precedent, it is interesting that the variety of their backgrounds added balance and flexibility to the team. (On the "we" sections see also 20:5; 21:18; 27:1.) The group took ship from Troas and sailed to the island of Samothracia and on to Neapolis.

13-15. They arrived at Philippi, a Roman colony, made up of transplanted Roman citizens. Colonies were usually located at strategic points throughout the empire and enjoyed such privileges as self-government. Evidently, there was no Jewish synagogue there, since Paul and his team went to the riverside seeking the Jewish "place of prayer." There they met Lydia (perhaps a proper name, "the Lydian") designating the region in which Thyatira was located. She was a seller of purple, indicating that she had learned the dye and textile business of her hometown, and had brought it to Philippi. (On the significance of this industry in Thyatira, see E. M. Blaiklock, Cities of the New Testament, pp. 107-111.) She seems to have been a Gentile "God-fearer" (or Jewish proselyte). She was saved and baptized and her household followed her example. A woman of wealth and great position, she undoubtedly had a number of servants and attendants. The reference to her "household" does not necessarily refer to small children. Conversions in the book of Acts seem to be limited to adults or older young people.

16-18. The demoniac girl who followed Paul and disturbed his preaching services was miraculously healed. Spirit of divination (Gr pythōn). The priestess of Delphi was called "the python" after the serpent that had guarded the oracle, and the word was also used of soothsayers. Such a person was thought to be inspired by the god Apollo who was associated with the giving of oracles. This girl was demon-possessed and her uncontrolled utterances were considered to be the utterances of a god. Paul exorcised a demon from this slave girl and set her free. She had previously followed them around chanting, These men are the servants of the most high God (vs. 17). Just as a demon had recognized Jesus as the "Holy One" (Mk 1:24), so this demon recognized the divine power upon Paul and his companions. The demon was cast out of her in the name of Jesus

19 ¶And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the marketplace unto the rulers,

20 And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city,

21 And teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.

22 And the multitude rose up together against them: and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them.

23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely:

24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

25 ¶And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them.

26 And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed.

27 And the keeper of the prison

Christ. Only by His personal power and authority resident in the one who uses His name can such be accomplished.

19-24. This miracle led to their being cast into jail, because of the complaint of her masters. Having delivered her from demon power, they had rendered the girl incapable of "soothsaying." Thus she was now a financial liability to those who owned her. Paul and his companions were taken to the magistrates, equivalent to the Latin praetor. They were especially criticized for being Jews (vs. 20). The objections against them were increased by the citizens of Philippi because of their being Romans. This later explains Paul's action in demanding a proper apology since he was also a Roman! The mob was incited to near riot and Paul and Silas were beaten, probably by "lictors," who attended the magistrates. Each lictor carried a bundle of rods and an axe, symbolizing the power to inflict capital punishment. This symbol was later popularized by the Fascists in Italy in the twentieth century. Paul and Silas were then jailed as anarchists. The personal touches of the stories of Philippi had led Ramsay and Blaiklock (p. 124) to assume that Luke may have been a Philippian himself. On the other hand, Rackham (Acts of the Apostles, pp. 278-281) strongly rejects this. Most others are undecided. Bruce notes that the "double discomforts of the lictors' rods and the stocks was not calculated to fill Paul and Silas with joy" (p. 337).

25-34. However, at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang. Such singing must have startled and surprised both the jailor and the prisoners. We thus have here the first "sacred concert" ever held in Europe and one that eventually "brought down the house"! The great earthquake shook the prison foundations to the point that the doors were opened and everyone's bands were loosed. While this may seem strange, modern-day earthquake phenomena certainly verify the actual possibility of awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

The Second Missionary Journey of Paul

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here.

29 Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?

31 And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

32 And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway.

34 And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

35 And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying, Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out.

38 And the serjeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.

39 And they came and besought them, and brought them out, and desired them to depart out of the city.

40 And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of Lyd'ia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

CHAPTER 17

NOW when they had passed through Ām-phīp'o-līs and Āp-ol-lō'nī-a, they came to Thēs-sa-lo-nī'ca, where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures,

3 Opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ.

4 And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.

such an incident. The jailor, hearing that all the prisoners had escaped and that he had failed his responsibility, prepared to kill himself. Then Paul cried out, Do thyself no harm. The fact that he came in trembling and fell down before them implies that he was shaken not only by the incident but by the evident power of God which had been demonstrated in the earthquake. His question, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? appears to be genuine and Paul's answer is really the gospel in a nutshell: Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Using the tragedy of the moment as an opportunity to present the truth of the gospel, the two missionaries told him that faith in Jesus as Lord was the way of salvation for himself and his family. The jailor and his entire household believed their message and were baptized that very night. This evidence of "household conversion" does not imply that the family was saved simply because the father believed, but rather because each one in particular believed. Nor does it imply that infants were baptized along with the rest of the family. We are told nothing of the ages of the family members. The jailor's first Christian act of mercy was to wash the stripes of Paul and Silas, which before apparently had been left unattended.

35-40. After receiving apologies from the terrified city officials, who now learned that they had shamelessly beaten two Roman citizens, the team left Philippi and moved on to Thessalonica. Notice that Paul used his Roman citizenship as an opportunity to bring credibility upon the new believers in the community. Upon leaving the prison they returned to Lydia's house and comforted . . . the brethren. Apparently Luke stayed behind to oversee the new work and to add leadership to its direction. The use of "we" is not mentioned again until 20:5, when Paul returns to Philippi on his third journey, when Luke evidently rejoins the missionary team.

C. Flight from Thessalonica to Athens. 17:1-34.

17:1-4. Paul, Silas, and Timothy journeyed westward along the great military road, Via Egnatia. They passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia. Why they passed by these cities we are not told. However, it should be observed that Paul followed definite missionary strategy in establishing churches in key centers which could form evangelistic outreach centers around their location. Thus, he moved on to Thessalonica the chief city and capital of the province of Macedonia. In his epistle to this church (I Thess 1:8) Paul indicated that the gospel had gone forth from them into Macedonia and Achaia. The cities bypassed were not small towns, for Amphipolis was itself a major community, though it declined in significance after this time. In Thessalonica Paul discovered a synagogue of the Jews, and went there three consecutive sabbath days. Paul spent at least these three weeks in the home of Jason organizing a church from the Jewish converts, while working as a tentmaker that he might not be a burden to the believers (cf. I Thess 2:9; II Thess 3:7-12). However the three weeks only refers to the time Paul was allowed to present his case in the Jewish synagogue. Again Luke's chronological references are vague and it is possible that they spent a great deal of time in this community establishing an

5 ¶But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;

7 Whom Jason hath received; and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus.

8 And they troubled the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.

10 ¶And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Be-rē'a: who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were more noble than those in Thēs-sa-lo-nī'ca, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.

12 Therefore many of them believed; also of honourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

13 But when the Jews of Thēs-sa-lo-nī'ca had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Be-rē'a, they came thither also, and stirred up the people.

14 And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Ti-mō'the-us abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Ti-mō'the-us for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry.

17 Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him.

18 Then certain philosophers of the Ēp-i-cū-rē'ans, and of the Stō'icks, encountered him. And some said, What outstanding local church. Paul's method of evangelism was to "reason" with them out of the scripture. This does not mean that he merely used philosophic arguments, which he attempted to tie to the Old Testament, but rather that he presented prophecies that related to Christ, His death and resurrection, to prove to them that this Jesus, whom I preach is . . . Christ.

5-10. Some of the Jews believed and a great multitude of the Greeks. The gospel was once again opposed, however, by the unbelieving Jews who dragged Jason into court and unsuccessfully attempted to put him in jail. The rulers of the city, literally "politarchs," were responsible for reviewing the case. Since the term "politarch" was unknown in Greek literature until recent archaeological discoveries, some commentators wrongly accuse Luke of being inaccurate in his designation. The disciples were referred to as those who had turned the world upside down (vs. 6) referring to the impact of their ministry in the previous places. One needs to be careful not to allegorize this statement too strongly. They had obviously not yet won the world to Christ but they were in the process of bringing about a confrontation with the wills of men which left no doubt as to the clarity and definiteness of their message. They were literally shaking communities with the gospel! They were also accused of claiming to have another king, . . . Jesus. Ladd (p. 446) very vividly notes that this may explain why there is such little reference to Christ as king or to the "kingdom" in the epistles, since the term "king" was the common Greek designation for the Roman emperor and could be easily misunderstood. Rome was tolerant of many things but not rebellion against the emperor. This may explain Paul's preferred usage in the Gentile epistles of the term "Lord." The designation also helps us understand the concept of Christ's lordship; it is recognizing him to be King of one's life. Jason had to put up a security (or bond) which would be forfeited if there were any further disturbances. In the meantime, Paul and Silas slipped away at night unto Berea and went to the Jewish synagogue which was there.

11-14. In Berea Paul found the people more open-minded than at Thessalonica for they received the word with all readiness of mind. This open reception to the gospel message caused them to spend a considerable amount of time establishing the church in this community where the people searched the scriptures daily. This would imply that the method of Jewish evangelism was again basically the same, concentrating on the fulfillment of Old Testament predictions of the Messiah as related to Jesus. We are told that many of them believed. It should be observed again that Luke continually emphasizes the numerical growth of the early church as proof of the power of its message. Eventually Paul had to escape because of the hostility of the Jews of Thessalonica who came to Berea and stirred up opposition to his message. Thus, Paul departed for Athens. In the meantime Silas and Timothy remain in Berea to minister to the believers, while awaiting the opportunity to rejoin Paul as soon as possible.

15-34. Athens was no longer a city of great political or commercial influence but had remained the world's most famous intellectual center of thinking. Even Roman students desired to go to Athens for their university training. It should be noted that Paul's original strategy did not include the evangelizing of this city. But as he waited there for Silas and Timothy, he was greatly disturbed by the idolatry in which he saw the city engulfed. Again, he went to the synagogue daily to preach to the Jews and to the open marketplace to preach to the Gentiles. He was invited to explain his message at the open forum on Mars Hill by the Epicureans and Stoics who were the leading schools of thought among the Greek philosophers. The former group had been founded by Epicurus in about 300 B.C., believing in the existence of gods but never their interference in the affairs of will this babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto Ar-ē-ōp'a-gus, saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

20 For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.

21 (For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

22 ¶Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

23 For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

24 God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is LORD of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands;

25 Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation;

27 That they should seek the LORD, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us:

28 For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring.

29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device.

30 And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent:

31 Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.

32 ¶And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.

33 So Paul departed from among them.

34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Di-o-nýs'i-us the Ar-ē-ōp'a-gīte, and a woman named Dām'a-ris, and others with them.

men. Their philosophy of life was one of pleasure and freedom from fear of death. "Eat, drink, and be merry," was their motto. On the other hand, the Stoics founded by Zeno at approximately the same time believed in the brotherhood of all men and held to the high moral principles of a life of self-denial. To these men Paul certainly may have seemed to be a babblers (Gr spermologos), literally a "seed-picker."

Gaining the opportunity to share his personal philosophy with these Athenians, Paul used the immediate surroundings as an opportunity in which to present his message. Observing the numerous temples, statues, and idols of their religious mythology, Paul began by announcing that he believed that they were too superstitious and, so much so, that he had even found an inscription To the Unknown God (vs. 23). This Unknown God Paul then declared to them to be the Creator, Governor, Saviour, and Judge of the world. In essence, he was announcing to them that he knew the real God, who was unknown to them in spite of their extreme religiosity. Standing on the Areopagus and facing the crowd, Paul had his back to the great temples of the city, which would be instantly observed by his audience to whom he announced that God dwelleth not in temples. Certainly his point would be vividly made to his listeners. It should be observed that in addressing these pagan philosophers Paul did not quote extensively from the Old Testament which would have related only to a Jewish audience. Nothing in the text itself indicates that Paul used the wrong approach with his audience. In fact, he actually quoted from two Greek poets: Epimenides of Crete and Aratus of Cilicia. By referring to men as the offspring of God Paul is not implying by any means that all men are saved, but rather, that they are all God's creatures and, therefore, responsible to Him. The ignorance of their past may have been overlooked (not "winked at," AV), but God was now calling all men everywhere to repent. This makes it clear that the message of repentance was not limited only to believers, nor to the Jews, but was issued to all men everywhere as the passage clearly says. On the nature and significance of the doctrine of repentance see H. Ironside, Except Ye Repent. It is foolish to argue, as do some dispensationalists, that repentance is not necessary for salvation, when the New Testament Scriptures clearly say that it is. (On this matter see also E. Hindson, Glory in the Church, pp. 75-83.) The central biblical theme of Paul's message was the resurrection of Christ from the dead. This was the crucial content of the gospel as proclaimed by the early evangelists and caused a mixed reaction in the audience: some mocked . . . Howbeit certain men . . . believed. Among these converts were Dionysius the Areopagite, meaning that he was a member of the Areopagus itself. A woman named Damaris, and others also believed. Little is said in the New Testament of the converts at Athens. While a church does appear there later in history, there is no reference to a local church at Athens as such at this time. This does not mean that such a church was not organized there at this point, but that we have no record of it. Paul apparently stayed only a brief time in this city and moved on to Corinth where he would eventually spend a great deal of time and effort, and to whose church he would write two major epistles.

D. The Corinthian Ministry. 18:1-22.

18:1-17. Here Paul met a Christian Jew named Aquila and his wife Priscilla, who had recently been driven from Rome by the anti-Semitic activities of the empire at that time. There are inscriptions in the catacombs which hint that Priscilla was of a distinguished family of high standing in Rome. Later, in Ephe-

CHAPTER 18

AFTER these things Paul departed from Athens and came to Corinth;

2 And found a certain Jew named Āq'ui-la, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla; (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome:) and came unto them.

ACTS 18:3

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: for by their occupation they were tentmakers.

4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when Silas and Τι-mō'the-us were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ.

6 And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

7 And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

8 And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the LORD with all his house; and many of the Co-rin-thi-ans hearing believed, and were baptized.

9 Then spake the LORD to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace;

10 For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.

11 And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 ¶And when Γāl'li-ō was the deputy of A-chā'ia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat, 13 Saying, This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.

14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Γāl'li-ō said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you:

15 But if it be a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters.

16 And he drave them from the judgment seat.

17 Then all the Greeks took Σōs'the-nēs, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment seat. And Γāl'li-ō cared for none of those things.

18 ¶And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aq'ui-la; having shorn his head in Cēn'chre-a: for he had a vow.

19 And he came to Eph'e-sus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.

20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not:

21 But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return sus, a church met in their home (cf. I Cor 16:19). In later years they apparently moved back to Rome (cf. Rom 16:3-5). At this time Silas and Timothy caught up with Paul. They had been left behind at Berea with instructions to meet Paul in Athens, but this had evidently not worked out. Silas had left Berea for Philippi to help Luke with the new church there (cf. 18:5). Timothy, at Paul's request, had gone back to Thessalonica to oversee the work there (cf. I Thess 3:1). Both men now meet Paul in Corinth. Silas brought a financial gift for Paul from the Philippian church for his missionary support, which is referred to in II Corinthians 11:8 and Philippians 4:15, and Timothy brought a good report concerning the work in Thessalonica. Crispus (vs. 8) was the chief ruler of the synagogue and was gloriously converted along with many other Corinthians, all of whom were baptized. So great was the response in this city that Paul remained there a year and six months. The conversion of Crispus and his family must have been a tremendous defeat for the Jews and a great incentive to Paul's continued mission. However, the success of the ministry caused Paul to remain here for a full eighteen months, during which period he wrote I and II Thessalonians. In time, however, the unbelieving Jews dragged Paul into court before the governor Gallio accusing him of blasphemy. Because of the religious nature of the case, Gallio quickly dismissed it. Gallio (vs. 12) was the brother of the philosopher Seneca. Since proconsuls (deputy) served a two-year term it is relatively certain that this incident must be dated in A.D. 51 or 52. The Jews evidently thought to put pressure on the new Roman governor by instigating a riot and bringing Paul before the judgment seat, accusing the evangelist of propagating a religion that was contrary to the Roman law, which recognized Judaism as a legitimate religion, but had not officially recognized Christianity as such. It was technically illicita as a religion in the eyes of the Roman government. Therefore, Gallio's decision would have been epoch-making for the fate of Christians in the province of Achaia. Not to be denied, an unruly Greek mob (doubtless organized by the Jews to harm Paul) grabbed Sosthenes, who had succeeded Crispus as ruler of the synagogue, and severely beat him in the presence of Gallio. It has been suggested that this experience may have later led to his conversion to Christ (cf. I Cor 1:1!)

18-22. After remaining in Corinth yet a good while beyond the year and a half, he took Aquila and Priscilla and left for Ephesus. At this time we are told that he had shorn his head . . . for he had vowed a vow (vs. 18). Evidently, before leaving Corinth, he assumed a Nazarite vow and during the period of the vow allowed his hair to grow uncut and at the end of the period, cut his hair. While Paul strongly refused to allow the demand of the Old Testament law to be imposed upon Gentiles, he himself, as a Jew, continued to practice many of its demands in order to increase his effectiveness in Jewish evangelism. Arriving at Ephesus he left Aquila and Priscilla and there remaining only a short time himself and refusing their invitation to stay longer, he bade them farewell (vs. 21), or bid their leave. He was determined to return to Jerusalem to keep this feast. While this phrase is lacking in the majority of texts, there again unto you, if God will. And he sailed from Ēph'e-sus.

22 And when he had landed at Cæs-a-re'a, and gone up, and saluted the church, he went down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Ga-lā'tia and Phrÿg't-a in order, strengthening all the disciples.

24 ¶And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ēph'e-sus.

25 This man was instructed in the way of the LORD; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the LORD, knowing only the baptism of John.

26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aq'ui-la and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into A-chā'ia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace:

28 For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publickly, shewing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ.

CHAPTER 19

AND it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ēph'e-sus: and finding certain disciples,

2 He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.

4 Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

is no other explanation for his hasty return to Palestine. He promised to return again to Ephesus if God will (vs. 21). Such an attitude should condition all of our plans in relation to the work of God (cf. Heb 6:3; Jas 4:15). Paul landed at Caesarea, went from there and saluted the church, and from there went down to Antioch (vs. 22). The church must be the one at Jerusalem to whom he reported and then returned to Antioch, his sponsoring church. Again we notice a great deal about missionary strategy in the activities of the Apostle Paul.

VI. PAUL'S THIRD JOURNEY: REINFORCEMENT.

18:23-21:14.

A. The Prolonged Ephesian Ministry. 18:23-19:41.

23-28. Paul left again for Asia Minor (modern Turkey) visiting and encouraging the churches there. He covered the country of Galatia and Phrygia where he strengthened the disciples. About this time an eloquent Bible teacher named Apollos (born in Alexandria, Egypt) arrived in Ephesus on a preaching tour. Apollos had learned of the ministry and message of John the Baptist from Jewish pilgrims while still in Egypt but knew nothing beyond that point. He came to Jerusalem during the days of our Lord's earthly ministry. He had heard of the message of John the Baptist that the Messiah was soon to come and that this coming was fulfilled in the life of Jesus. Armed with these limited facts, he traveled afar faithfully proclaiming what he knew. Apollos is described as an eloquent man being mighty in the scriptures, meaning that he was an effective speaker and especially able to present the messiahship of Jesus to the Jews. He is described as being fervent in the spirit (vs. 25). This is an interesting statement in regard to the fact that his followers in chapter 19 are unaware of the Holy Spirit, giving us insight into the Old Testament believers who, though they were regenerated and probably indwelt by the Holy Spirit, were unaware of a full understanding of the nature of His work in them. Aquila and Priscilla were impressed with his ability and took him in and expounded the way of God more perfectly, implying that they brought him to a full understanding of the Christian gospel. Eventually he felt called to Corinth and departed, carrying with him the written recommendations of fellow believers in Ephesus. In Corinth he was greatly used of God in the apologetic ministry of convincing the Jews by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ (or Messiah). Notice that he used the Word of God as the focal point for his apologetic approach which resulted in a great number of conversions.

19:1-3. Paul's two-year stay at Ephesus was marked by three noteworthy events. The first was his confrontation with the disciples of John who had not heard whether there be any Holy Ghost (vs. 2). These followers of John's preaching had believed the truth that John had proclaimed but had not yet been informed of the full message of the gospel including the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. Several questions arise in relation to this incident. The Greek participle should be translated "when you believed" rather than "since ye believed" (AV). This passage does not imply that one receives the Holy Spirit after salvation, since the rest of the New Testament makes it clear that the Holy Spirit is received at the time of salvation and that every true believer has received the Holy Spirit, or been a partaker of the Holy Spirit (cf. I Cor 12:3, 7, 11, 13). Paul then asks them unto what they had been baptized, and they replied Unto John's baptism (vs. 3).

4-7. John's baptism of repentance in verse 4 clearly distinguishes the baptism of John from Christian baptism. His was a baptism of repentance in preparation for the coming of Jesus Christ. It was not a baptism of identification with the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, for at that point He had not

5 When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the LORD Jesus.

6 And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.

10 And this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the LORD Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

12 So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

13 ¶Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call yet died. Baptisms or “washings” were frequently employed in Jewish spiritual matters. Therefore, it is a mistake to regard John the Baptist as beginning a Christian ministry of baptism. Certainly, he was not the founder of the “Baptist” church! Upon hearing Paul’s explanation, these disciples of John who were caught in a dispensational overlap from the Old Testament era were baptized (Gr baptizō) in the name of the Lord Jesus. Again, the use of baptized indicates the form of baptism as immersion, or dipping or dunking into water (to symbolize death and resurrection). The identification with the name of Jesus was to emphasize the significance of this baptism as distinctly Christian as opposed to that of John in preparing the Jews for the first coming of the Messiah. The references to being baptized in the name of Jesus in the book of Acts do not necessarily imply that the baptismal formula given in Matthew 28 was not used, but that the emphasis was especially upon identification with the person of Christ. Paul then laid hands upon them, and the Holy Ghost came on them and as a result they spoke with tongues, and prophesied. This experience is designated to illustrate the oneness and unity of the church. Since believers are baptized by one Spirit into one body (cf. I Cor 12:13), there can be no offshoot groups of disciples outside the church. Ladd (p. 454) correctly observes, “It is beside the point to debate whether or not these disciples were Christians before Paul met them, even as it is futile to question whether the apostles were saved before Pentecost. They were disciples of the Lord Jesus but with an incomplete knowledge of the Gospel.” Like the believers in Samaria (cf. 8:16-17), these followers of John, who believed in the Lord to the point which they had truth revealed to them, now experienced an extension of Pentecost to include all believers. Like the other transitional groups in Acts, the original disciples, the Samaritan believers, the Gentile converts, and now these wandering followers of John the Baptist, each new group receives the baptism of the Holy Spirit in a dramatic outward manner, resulting in speaking in tongues. This is never intended to be normative for all believers and certainly not for all time. In writing to the Corinthian church which was completely overbalanced in regard to the gift of tongues, Paul had to remind them that they all had received the baptism of the Spirit, but all of them were not intended in the first place to receive the gift of tongues (cf. I Cor 12:13; and 12:29-31).

8-12. For the next three months Paul continued his synagogue ministry and, upon being opposed there, rented a public hall and carried on the work. He probably taught from 11 A.M. to 4 P.M. and worked as a tentmaker both before and after this time period. God performed several unusual miracles through Paul at this time so that even handkerchiefs or aprons taken from his body caused healing of disease and the exorcism of evil spirits. The total ministry in Ephesus lasted for about two years and centered in the school of one Tyrannus (vs. 9). As a result of this concentrated ministry virtually all of the province of Asia (in Asia Minor) heard the Word of the Lord Jesus (vs. 10). The unique position of the ministry of the apostles, as the foundation of the early church, was attended by a series of unusual miracles. While the dynamic of their preaching and their gospel message was to be repeated in every age, it has become obvious throughout church history that direct revelation from God ceased with the closing of the canon of New Testament Scripture as did other revelational gifts, such as tongues and predictive prophecy. While God still heals as a result of answered prayer, healing by means of a handkerchief is no longer legitimate for the church any more than raising the dead, which was also done by the early disciples.

13-20. A family of vagabond Jews composed of Sceva, a priest, and his seven sons had been watching Paul do his mighty over them which had evil spirits the name of the LORD Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preach-eth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Scē'va, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?

16 And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Eph'e-sus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the LORD Jesus was magnified.

18 And many that believed came, and confessed, and shewed their deeds.

19 Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.

20 So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed.

21 ¶After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and A-chā'ia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome.

22 So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Ti-mō'the-us and E-rās'tus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

23 ¶And the same time there arose no small stir about that way.

24 For a certain man named De-mē'-trī-us, a silversmith which made silver shrines for Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Eph'e-sus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands:

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnifi-miracles and decided to attempt an exorcism of their own. Traveling Jewish exorcists were common in the ancient world. Listening to the name of Jesus, which Paul used to command evil spirits to come out of people, they attempted to use the same name as a sort of magical charm. However the evil spirit replied: Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye? Then the man who was demon-possessed jumped upon them, beat them up, and stripped them naked. Exorcism is dangerous unless the exorcist is anointed by the Holy Spirit and is dealing genuinely with real demon powers. The story of the incident spread quickly and resulted in a great revival in which many people came to believe in the name of the Lord Jesus (vs. 17) and forsook their former practice of black magic. Over $10,000 worth of occult scrolls and magic charms were burned at a public bonfire. It was normally thought by magicians that if their magical secrets were made public, they would lose their potency. Therefore, a public discrediting of their practice was seen as a genuine conversion of turning from evil to Christ. It is often noted, even today, by missionaries in such places as Haiti where voodoo is still practiced, that a private confession of faith is almost worthless until the individual is willing to go to his home, bring out his occult objects, and openly and publicly destroy them.

21-22. Paul's ultimate plan for his future ministry is revealed in his statement that he would go to Jerusalem and afterwards must also see Rome. He planned to revisit the churches in Macedonia and Achaia in order to collect money for the needy saints at Jerusalem, and after taking this collection to the church he intended to visit Rome itself. Romans 15:24-28 seems to imply that he did not intend to stay in Rome for an extended period of time but merely stop there on his way to Spain. It was his normal policy to preach the gospel where it had never been preached and to avoid building on another man's foundation. The personal motivational drive and dynamic of this man is almost incomprehensible to the modern reader. Having already extended himself throughout Asia Minor and the peninsula of Greece, he now reveals his plan to move westward into Italy and ultimately to Spain, which was the western extremity of the Roman Empire of that day. The extensive nature of his travels has rarely been repeated by missionaries even in the modern era. However, the next verse indicates that he stayed in Asia and sent Timothy and Erastus to Macedonia. Luke does not mention Timothy between the time he rejoined Paul at Corinth (cf. 18:5) and this point, but he obviously had continued with the Apostle Paul in Ephesus. Nor does Luke record the fact that Paul had previously sent Timothy to Corinth to deal with certain problems in the church (cf. I Cor 4:17; 16:10).

23-41. In the meantime a riot was instigated in Ephesus by a silversmith named Demetrius whose business of selling silver shrines of the Greek goddess Diana had been severely threatened by Paul's preaching. The statement that there arose a stir about that way (vs. 23) refers to the way of Christ or the Christian faith. Demetrius was able to rally several workmen of like occupation (vs. 25) with the objection that Paul's preaching was destroying their income. The statement: This Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people reveals the dynamic and extensive nature of the success of Paul's ministry in Ephesus. The New Testament later makes it clear that the church at Ephesus was one of the outstanding churches of the apostolic period. A church which, though she had left her first love in Revelation 2, nevertheless was an outstanding, warmhearted church, was one of the greatest examples of the New Testament. It is amazing that the spiritual growth of the Ephesian church was contemporary to the spiritual confusion and carnality of the cence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings, they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the E-phē'sians.

29 And the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught Gaius and Ar-is-tār'chus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theatre.

30 And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not.

31 And certain of the chief of Asia, which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

33 And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And Alexander beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defence unto the people.

34 But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the space of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the E-phē'sians.

35 And when the townclerk had appeared the people, he said, Ye men of Eph'e-sus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the E-phē'sians is a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?

36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly.

37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.

38 Wherefore if De-mē'trī-us, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, the law is open, and there are deputies: let them implead one another.

39 But if ye enquire anything concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a lawful assembly.

40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse.

41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly.

CHAPTER 20

AND after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia.

2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece.

3 And there abode three months. And when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia.

4 And there accompanied him into Asia Sōp'a-ter of Be-rē'a; and of the Thēs-sa-lō'nī-anś. Ar-is-tār'chus and Corinthian church. Notice that Luke continually emphasizes the principle of church growth and numerical evaluation of evangelism throughout the book of Acts. Not only is Paul preaching the truth, but the truth is producing results! Obviously, Paul must have had more than just a handful of believers to cause the silversmiths to riot in the fashion in which they did. In many cities throughout the world today, people are not opposed to the church because they are not even aware of the threat which she poses to their life-style!

Soon the huge city amphitheater, capable of seating twenty-five thousand, was packed with a howling mob that chanted hysterically for two uninterrupted hours: Great is Diana of the Ephesians (vs. 34)! The temple of Diana, whose Greek name was Artemis, was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. The image within the temple was of a woman carved with many breasts to signify the fertility of nature. The original stone from which the image had been carved was reported to have "fallen from heaven," leading many historians to believe that it may have been a meteorite. Paul determined to appear in the arena along with some of the believers who had been dragged there by the mob, but was persuaded at the last minute by the Christians not to go there. It is very likely that, had he appeared before the mob as the leader of the Christian movement, he would have occasioned his death long before his arrival in Rome. The text indicates that the crowd was in such a state of hysteria that they were confused and many did not even understand why they were there. Apparently some of the Jews feared being condemned along with the Christians and put forth a man named Alexander to make a speech in defense of them, but he was shouted down by the crowd and chaos prevailed. Finally order was restored by the townclerk (vs. 35) who reminded them that the city was not in danger of being destroyed by these Christians since Ephesus was known throughout the world of her day as the worshipper (actually "temple keeper") of Diana. He also reminded them that the Christians in question were not sacrilegious men nor robbers of churches (lit., robbers of temples). He then challenged the legitimacy of the procedure since the silversmiths had not gone to the deputies (proconsuls) to bring formal charges against these people through proper channels. Anything other than that, he reminded them, would be determined in lawful assembly (Gr ekklēsia, "congregation," and the same word used to designate the "church"). This reference shows us that not all assemblies referred to in Scripture are church assemblies. The reference here is simply to the legal gathering of Roman citizens, which was a democratic local organization.

B. From Macedonia to Miletus. 20:1-16.

20:1-6. After the riot had ceased, Paul was convinced of the stability of the church at Ephesus and was now free to depart into Macedonia to revisit and strengthen the churches there. The apostle's departure from Ephesus is recorded in II Corinthians in relation to his visit to Troas to await the arrival of Titus, whom he had previously sent to Corinth to deal with the serious problems among the believers there. Titus' delayed arrival eventually brought news of improved conditions in the church and occasioned the writing of Paul's second letter to the Corinthians, which he sent to them by the hand of Titus and another brother. After spending three months in Greece, Paul was preparing to sail for Syria when he discovered a plot by the

The Third Missionary Journey of Paul

Se-cūn'dus; and Gaius of Der'be, and Tī-mō'the-us; and of Asia, Tých'i-cus and Trōph'i-mus.

5 These going before tarried for us at Troas.

6 And we sailed away from Phī-lip'pī after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days.

Jews against his life and decided to return through Macedonia instead. It is probably during this time that he wrote the Epistle to the Romans. Several people accompanied him including Sopater, Aristarchus, Secundus, Gaius, Timothy, Tychicus, and Trophimus. Again we note that Paul rarely worked alone and usually carried a team of evangelists and ministers with him. Many of these men are referred to elsewhere in the New Testament. Upon their arrival in Philippi, Luke also rejoined the team; the second "we" section of Acts begins at verse 5, runs through verse 15 of chapter 20, and is resumed again in 21:1. The reference to the keeping of the days of unleavened bread (vs. 6) shows Paul's adherence to his Jewish past, and yet the reference to the gathering of believers at Troas upon the first day of the week to preach and celebrate the Lord's Supper clearly emphasizes the distinct non-Jewish nature of the New Testament church. Although Paul was in Troas for seven days (vs. 6), he apparently did not meet with the local church for the purpose of breaking bread until the first day of the week (vs. 7). The New Scofield Bible states: "The fact that Paul and others sometimes attended Sabbath services in Jewish synagogues (17:1-3) does not prove that the apostolic church kept the seventh day as a special day of worship. It only shows that the early missionaries took the gospel message wherever and whenever they found people gathered together (5:19-20; 13:5; 16:13, 25-33; 17:17, 19, 22; 18:7; 19:9; 25:6, 23). This witness was carried on daily (2:47; 17:17; 19:9) in every possible way (I Cor 9:19-22). The early churches were specifically warned against submitting themselves to the bondage of any legalistic observance of Sabbath days (cf. Col 2:16; Gal 4:9-11). On the other hand, in the exercise of their Christian liberty (Rom 14:5-6), these same churches voluntarily chose the first day of the week as an appropriate time for fellowship and worship (Acts 20:7; I Cor 16:2), the day on which the Lord arose and repeatedly appeared to His disciples (Jn 20:19-24, 25-29). It was a new day for a new people belonging to a new creation (II Cor 5:17), a day of commemoration and joy (Mt 28:9 margin, "service" Mt 28:10), and spiritual rest (Heb 4:9-10). This observance of the first day of the week is corroborated by the early fathers in the writings of Barnabas (A.D. 100), Ignatius (A.D. 107), Justin Martyr (A.D. 145-150), and Irenaeus (A.D. 155-202). The Edict of Laodicea (fourth century A.D.) did not change the day of worship from the seventh day to the first day of the week, as sometimes alleged, but rather put the stamp of official approval upon an observance already long established in the early churches" (pp. 1194-1195).

7-16. The meeting at Troas continued . . . until midnight. The service was held in an upper room on the third floor, with illumination provided by many smoky lamps which would have made the air thick and stuffy. Tragically, a young man named Eutychus fell asleep and fell from the third loft and was taken up dead (vs. 9). It seems clear from early custom that the Christians often met on Saturday night as well as Sunday morning. Early Jewish reckoning observed the beginning of the new day at sunset, continuing through the night and the next day until sunset again. Rackham (p. 379) notes that the meeting was held in a private house in the uppermost room which was the most removed from any possibility of interruption. Either Eutychus fell out of the upper window and landed on the ground outside the house or he fell down through the house to the bottom floor of an open area. Paul came and embraced him after the manner of Elijah and Elisha and bade them Trouble not yourselves because his life is in him. This would seem to indicate that even though he had every outward appearance of being dead, his spirit had not yet departed from his body. This would also explain modern instances where people are pronounced legally dead for a few moments and yet are still brought back to life. Once the spirit leaves the body there is no possibility of life returning, except by direct miraculous resurrection from God Himself. Paul raised the young man alive to the thrill and amazement of the congregation. The next day Luke and the other members of the party sailed from Troas to Assos, while Paul traveled afoot (by land). Again we notice the reference to "we" in verse 14. The rest of the missionary party met the apostle at Assos and sailed to Mitylene, the chief town of the island of Lesbos, from which the myth of the homosexual girls (lesbians) originated. From there they sailed between the mainland and the islands of Chios and Samos, until they came to Miletus, on the mainland of Asia Minor. Paul wanted to take time to go inland from there to visit the church at Ephesus, but could not arrive in time for the day of Pentecost, so he arranged for the elders of the church to meet him at the seaport of Miletus a few hours away.

C. Farewell to the Ephesians. 20:17-38.

17-21. Paul's sermon to the Ephesian elders is important in revealing the simple structure of the early church, the nature of apostolic authority, and the content of apostolic preaching. Paul sent for the Ephesian elders, who hurried to meet him at Miletus during a layover in his ship's schedule. On this occasion the apostle delivered his third main recorded discourse. He began

7 ¶And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eū'ty-chus, being fallen into a deep sleep; and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

10 And Paul went down, and fell on him, and embracing him said, Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.

11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.

12 And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.

13 ¶And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Ās'sōs, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.

14 And when he met with us at Ās'sōs, we took him in, and came to Mīt-y-lē'ne.

15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chī'ōs; and the next day we arrived at Sā'mōs, and tarried at Trō-gŷl'li-um; and the next day we came to Mī-lē'tus.

16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ēph'e-sus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost.

17 ¶And from Mī-lē'tus he sent to Ēph'e-sus, and called the elders of the church.

18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,

19 Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations, which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews:

20 And how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publickly, and from house to house,

21 Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there:

23 Save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me.

24 But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

26 Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men.

27 For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God.

28 Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

his message by reviewing the past two years and the tears and toils he had while serving the Lord in Ephesus. The church leaders or elders (Gr presbyteros) were the overseers (vs. 28, Gr episcopos) or guardians of the church and "bishops." It becomes obvious from Paul's interchangeable usage of the two terms that a bishop was also an elder. It is also clear that there was a plurality of elders in the church. It seems that early church custom was for one of the elders to eventually become the bishop or pastor of the church. This would parallel the modern situation in most evangelical churches which are led by a pastoral staff (elders) who in turn are led by the pastor himself (the bishop). Paul's statement about his preaching clearly reveals the nature and content of early New Testament preaching of the gospel. The message which was profitable unto them which he had taught both publicly and from house to house (i.e., privately) was the same message for both Jews and Greeks (vs. 21). That message had a twofold thrust: Repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. This verse along with several others in the book of Acts makes it clear that repentance was an essential ingredient in the preaching of the gospel. Those who have argued that repentance is not to be preached to the unsaved, but only to the saved, or only to the Jews, certainly do not develop such a view from this passage of Scripture! Paul makes it clear that part of his essential message to both Jews and Greeks was that they repent and believe. Ironside (Except Ye Repent) emphasizes that one must repent in his overall attitude toward God in order to have genuine saving faith in Christ. Therefore, both repentance and faith are essential to salvation and inseparable from salvation.

22-28. Paul exclaimed that he was going bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, emphasizing the sense of divine compulsion which he felt. The spirit here must be identified with the Holy Spirit who is referred to in verse 23. Paul was determined to finish my course with joy and to testify the gospel of the grace of God to as many men as possible. This preaching he refers to as preaching the kingdom of God (vs. 25), which must refer to the gospel proclamation of the church which he was establishing. Again, we see that the present-day form of the kingdom is the church. This in no way denies the literal nature of the coming millennial kingdom, but clearly indicates that the church is the mediatorial form of the kingdom at the present. Otherwise, this reference would have to be looked upon as if Paul were still preaching a Jewish kingdom message (so, hyperdispensationalists). Paul could claim that he was pure from the blood of all men, meaning he had fully preached and testified to as many men as possible and had a clear conscience toward all men with whom he had contact regarding the nature of their soul. The book of Acts makes it very clear that Paul was an intense soul-winner and gospel evangelist. One should note, however, that being pure from the blood of all men does not mean that he had witnessed to every single person he had ever seen, or every single person in the world, which would obviously be a human impossibility. The point is that Paul had a clear conscience before God and man, knowing that he had used every occasion and opportunity to witness to those that he had come in contact with in his extensive travels. He was also pure of the blood of all men because he had fully declared unto them all the counsel of God.

He then reminded the elders to Take heed . . . unto yourselves and unto all the flock over which the Holy Spirit had made them overseers. The nature of pastoral care in the church is clearly placed in the hands of leadership. It should be observed that Paul did not call for the entire church to come to meet him in Miletus, which also would have been a human impossibility. Rather, he called for the designated and ordained leaders of that church. The New Testament throughout clearly emphasizes the importance of pastoral leadership in the local church. While that church is an independent, local congregation, its authority has been invested, nevertheless, in certain designated leaders. These leaders are the representatives of the congregation, not its dictators. The church is the Lord's and not man's to begin with. Thus, Christ, the Lord of the church, invests His authority in men who are to lead and oversee the direction of His church. They are His undershepherds and thus carry His authority as revealed in the Scriptures. However, it should equally be observed that they are not dictators who rule after the whim of their own wills, apart from the will of God. Their responsibility is to feed the church of God (vs. 28) which has been purchased with his own blood. This passage has varying manuscript support, and a problem has arisen centering on the idea of God purchasing the church with His blood, rather than the blood of Christ. Therefore some ancient texts read "the church of the Lord." However, the more favorable reading (followed by the AV) is church of God. Bruce (p. 16) suggests the translation, "which he hath purchased with the blood of his Own." The actual rendering is definitely to the blood of Christ which was shed for the church, which is ultimately the church of God. His blood was shed as an atoning death for all men. Christ's atonement is efficacious only for those who by faith receive Him as Saviour and become part of His church.

29-38. Paul then previewed the future and warned them that after his departing, grievous wolves would enter in among them not sparing the flock. He further reminded them that some of these men would arise from among your own selves. Paul later wrote to Timothy who was in Ephesus concerning these grievous wolves (see I Tim 1:3-7). His warning was later fulfilled in the apostasy of such men as Hymenaeus, Alexander, and Philetus. In general, however, the church at Ephesus was an outstanding example of the early New Testament church, and Paul finished his interview and last farewell to these Ephesian elders with tears. He knew that he could leave them because he was leaving them in the hand of God, so he commended them to God and to the word of his grace. Here Paul seems definitely to express confidence in the inspired Scriptures which were now becoming more and more available to the early church. This sure word of prophecy is that which is able to build you up. Paul was "warning" the leaders of the church by admonishing them (Gr noutheteō) and by "confronting" them with their responsibilities in this matter. (On the significance of "nouthetic confrontation" see J. Adams, Competent to Counsel.) The touching farewell gives us a keen insight into the warm fellowship of the early church. Paul kneeled down and prayed with his converts and they all wept . . . and kissed him (following the common early Christian greeting of the "kiss of peace"). It is also interesting to note that they sorrowed most because they would not have the opportunity to hear him speak again, more so than sorrowing over missing his presence. The implication here is clearly that their loyalty to Paul was based on his message of truth rather than on his personality.

29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

30 Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.

31 Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.

32 And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified.

33 I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel.

34 Yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me.

35 I have shewed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

36 ¶And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down, and prayed with them all.

37 And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him.

38 Sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship.

CHAPTER 21

AND it came to pass, that after we were gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a straight course unto Cō'ōs, and the day following unto Rhodes, and from thence unto Pāt'a-ra:

2 And finding a ship sailing over unto Phe-n'icia, we went aboard, and set forth.

3 Now when we had discovered Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and sailed into Syria, and landed at Tyre:

D. Return to Palestine. 21:1-14.

21:1-7. Paul and his party resumed their trip by boat sailing between the islands of Coos and Rhodes, where they apparently anchored overnight. From there, they reached Patara, a city on the mainland, where they found shipping that would take them directly across the sea to Syria (or Phoenicia) on the near eastern mainland, just north of Israel. Landing at Tyre, Paul spent seven days with a group of disciples while the ship apparently unloaded its cargo (vs. 3). It was here that Paul was warned by a group of prophets in the church who disclosed through the Spirit that he should not go to Jerusalem. It would for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And finding disciples, we tarried there seven days; who said to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And when we had accomplished those days, we departed and went our way; and they all brought us on our way, with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and we kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.

6 And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ship; and they returned home again.

7 And when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Ptōl-emā'is, and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8 And the next day we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto Cæs-a-re'a; and we entered into the house of Philip the evangelist, which was one of the seven; and abode with him.

9 And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy.

10 And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judæa a certain prophet, named Āg'a-bus.

11 And when he was come unto us, he took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages, and went up to Jerusalem.

16 There went with us also certain of the disciples of Cæs-a-re'a, and brought with them one Mnā'son of Cyprus, an old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us unto James; and all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry.

20 And when they heard it, they gloriseem that the apostle made a mistake here, though this is a highly debated issue. He had already been warned during the beginning of his ministry to: Make haste and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem: for they will not receive thy testimony concerning me (22:18). Paul's motive for going to Jerusalem at this time seems to have been his great love for his people and his hope that the gifts of the Gentile churches, sent by him to the poor saints at Jerusalem, would open the hearts of the law-bound Jewish believers to the gospel of God's grace. At any rate, it is significant that his stop at Jerusalem was one of the very few where absolutely no fruit whatsoever was recorded. Whether he had a constraint of the Spirit which was stronger than that of the disciples at Tyre, or whether this must be seen as an act of disobedience to the will of God, since we are told that the men at Tyre spoke through the Spirit, is difficult to discern. Nevertheless, Paul did go to Jerusalem and ultimately did go "bound unto Rome."

8-14. Paul next went to Caesarea where he visited the home of Philip the evangelist, previously one of the deacons of the Jerusalem church, who had engaged in evangelism in Samaria and on the coastal plain. He is the same fellow who led the Ethiopian eunuch to Christ. He last appeared in Caesarea (8:40) and apparently made his permanent home there. His four daughters, virgins, are referred to as "prophetesses." These girls are the last ones mentioned in the Bible who had this gift (others were Miriam, Ex 15:20; Deborah, Jud 4:4; Isaiah's wife, Is 8:3; Huldah, II Kgs 22:14; and Anna, Lk 2:36). While he was there, a prophet named Agabus came from Jerusalem and symbolically acted out the fate that he foresaw for the apostle in Jerusalem and predicted that he would be delivered into the hands of the Gentiles. He bound his hands and feet with the apostle's belt ("girdle") and was joined by the other believers in pleading with Paul not to go on to Jerusalem. Luke indicates again by using "we" that he joined the appeal to Paul. Paul, fighting back the tears, told them not to weep for him because he was ready if necessary to die at Jerusalem for his Lord. No one could prevail over him. They committed him to the will of the Lord (vs. 14). Paul next stayed with Mnason of Cyprus, who is referred to as an old disciple, referring to the fact that he was a disciple from the earliest days (rather than being a reference to his age). With such a person Paul would feel most comfortable. On Paul's arrival in Jerusalem he was gladly received by the brethren and went unto James, the pastor of the church, who met him with all the elders. It would appear that there were no other "apostles" residing in Jerusalem at this time.

VII. PAUL'S JOURNEY TO ROME. 21:15-28:31.

A. The Apprehension of Paul. 21:15-22:30.

15-26. Paul met with the leaders of the church at Jerusalem and reported to them what God had wrought among the Gentiles. They were thrilled with the report and glorified the Lord. They reported to him that a rumor was making its rounds among the Christian Jews in Jerusalem (of whom vs. 20 says there were "many thousands," indicating the gigantic size of the church there at the time) to the effect that he was telling all Jews who were among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs of their forefathers. In order to avoid misunderstanding and such a misrepresentation, Paul submitted himself to a vow (vs. 23) to show them that the charges were nothing and that he himself walked orderly in his own personal life. The leaders then reminded him that, as touching the Gentiles which believed, they would abide by their original decision. Therefore, it becomes obvious that while the church was large and the number fied the Lord, and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all zealous of the law:

21 And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: We have four men which have a vow on them;

24 Them take, and purify thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may shave their heads: and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, are nothing; but that thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law.

25 As touching the Gentiles which believe, we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul took the men, and the next day purifying himself with them entered into the temple, to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them.

27 And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and laid hands on him,

28 Crying out, Men of Israel, help: This is the man, that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place: and further brought Greeks also into the temple, and hath polluted this holy place.

29 (For they had seen before with him in the city Tróph'i-mus an E-phé'-sian, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.)

30 And all the city was moved, and the people ran together: and they took Paul, and drew him out of the temple: and forthwith the doors were shut.

31 And as they went about to kill him, tidings came unto the chief captain of the band, that all Jerusalem was in an uproar.

32 Who immediately took soldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them: and when they saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left beating of Paul.

33 Then the chief captain came near, and took him, and commanded him to be bound with two chains; and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And some cried one thing, some another, among the multitude: and when he could not know the certainty for the tumult, he commanded him to be carried into the castle.

35 And when he came upon the stairs, so it was, that he was borne of the soldiers for the violence of the people.

of Christian disciples was great at this time in Jerusalem, there was still not yet a clear-cut break with their Jewish heritage. It should be observed, however, that the law is not evil in and of itself, but that it is insufficient to bring a man to salvation. By retaining allegiance to the moral aspects of the law, these Christian Jews were retaining the good part of their cultural and spiritual heritage, while acknowledging Christ as Lord. After the destruction of the Temple and the subsequent dispersion these Jewish Christians eventually discarded the Jewish distinctions. The believing Jews would later come to understand that it was unnecessary to retain outward observance of the ceremonies of Judaism, when the Temple no longer existed. The future nature of the church in general was already being developed in the Gentile churches where Paul's missionary efforts were bringing about the most significant results. This should also be a reminder to us that many times the original mission station may eventually become a mission field. We in America need to remember that the gospel came to us from Europe, which today is desperately in need of the same gospel! We should also remember that the gospel has gone forth from us to Latin America, Africa, and Asia and that missionary statistics now claim that the greatest church growth of this century is actually going on outside of North America! The pattern of the expansion of the church throughout its history seems to indicate that God continues to move and bless where the gospel seed is being planted in fresh ground.

27-40. In spite of his submission to the vow, Paul was set upon by a mob of unbelieving Jews who saw him in the Temple and mistakenly concluded that he had brought a Gentile in with him. A riot was stirred up by Jews which were of Asia, where Paul had just completed his most extensive evangelism. These would appear to be related to the same people who had so violently opposed him during his missionary journeys. The uproar that resulted nearly brought about Paul's death, and he was spared only by the commander of the Roman garrison stationed there. Soldiers were normally housed in the Tower of Antonia, northwest of the temple area, having easy access to the temple courtyard by two flights of stairs. During the time of trouble these soldiers could run into the courtyard to restore order. The chief captain (Gr chiliarchos) brought a band of soldiers and centurions, numbering at least two hundred men, and intervened just in time to save Paul's life so that the Jews left beating of Paul (i.e., they stopped beating him). He was then arrested by the chief captain, chained and carried by the soldiers to the top of the stairs and into the castle (i.e., "bar-racks"). The violence of the people (vs. 35) was so extreme that the soldiers literally had to fight off the crowd in order for the captain to speak personally to Paul. Upon arriving in the barracks Paul asked if he could speak to the captain, who was surprised to find that he could speak Greek (note that there can be no doubt that Greek was freely spoken as the common language of that day as the form of communication between both Romans and Jews). The Roman chiliarch was surprised because he thought Paul was that Egyptian who had earlier rallied four thousand men in an attempt to overthrow the government. History records that this revolt was led by an Egyptian Jew who rallied supporters called in Latin, sicarii, "dagger men," because each carried a dagger (Lat sica), with which he might assassinate military and political leaders. The revolt had been crushed by the Roman procurator, Felix, but the Egyptian had escaped. Paul assured the tribune that he was a Jew, and that he had the 36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, Away with him.

37 And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?

38 Art not thou that Ē-gŷp'tian, which before these days madest an uproar, and leddest out into the wilderness four thousand men that were murderers?

39 But Paul said, I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Ći-l'ċia, a citizen of no mean city; and, I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people.

40 And when he had given him licence, Paul stood on the stairs, and beckoned with the hand unto the people. And when there was made a great silence, he spake unto them in the Hebrew tongue, saying,

CHAPTER 22

MEN, brethren, and fathers, hear ye my defence which I make now unto you.

2 (And when they heard that he spake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more silence: and he saith.)

3 I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Ći-l'ċia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamā'li-el, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God, as ye all are this day.

4 And I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

5 As also the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the estate of the elders: from whom also I received letters unto the brethren, and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there bound unto Jerusalem, for to be punished.

6 And it came to pass, that as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9 And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

10 And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

11 And when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.

12 And one Ān-a-nī'as, a devout man according to the law, having a good report of all the Jews which dwelt there, 13 Came unto me, and stood, and said unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And the same hour I looked up upon him.

right to enter the temple precincts and that he was also a citizen of the important city of Tarsus; and it is also likely that he asserted his Roman citizenship in order to receive fair treatment from the Roman soldiers. It is interesting to note that Paul's citizenship was a protection to him which his Master Jesus did not have. Standing on the stairs he beckoned with the hand (an interesting reference to the use of gestures in speaking) and addressed the people in the Hebrew tongue (certainly a reference to the native Aramaic dialect which was the common Jewish language of both Palestine and western Asia at that time. Since many of the Jews of the Diaspora could speak only Greek, the apostle captured the attention of the native crowd by speaking in their own dialect. The New Testament makes it clear that the apostle was certainly trilingual, if not quadrilingual, speaking Hebrew, Greek, Aramaic, and probably to some degree Latin).

22:1-21. In the latter chapters of Acts we find the most extensive personal references to Paul's life and experiences. From these an extensive biography may be gleaned of this important early church leader. On his life see Conybeare and Howson, The Life and Epistles of Paul, and Lenski, St. Paul; on the significance of his theology see Bruce, Paul and Jesus, Ridderbos, Paul: An Outline of His Theology. It is interesting to note that Paul made his defense on the same Roman stairway where Pilate had condemned Christ to death some twenty-six years earlier. The attitude of the Jewish mob also reflects a similar treatment of the Lord's servant who had returned, in one last desperate appeal for the Jews to come to Christ. Paul used the opportunity to relate his conversion on the Damascus road. He also emphasized his Jewish heritage as one brought up in this city (i.e., Jerusalem) and educated by the outstanding rabbi of that time, Gamaliel, and being a Pharisee in his zeal for the law. Then he reminded the Jews that he himself had originally persecuted this way, referring to the "way of Christ." Paul went on to explain the Damascus vision, the voice that cried to him, and his resulting question, Who art thou, Lord? and the response: I am Jesus of Nazareth (vs. 8). The statement in verse 9 that those that were with him saw the light but heard not the voice has been wrestled with by some commentators in comparing the statement in 9:7 where the soldiers also heard the voice of Christ. Kent, From Jerusalem to Rome (p. 166), observes, "it may be significant that the verb 'to hear' uses different grammatical cases for its object in these two instances. Perhaps in 9:7 the use of the genitive case implies that they heard a sound coming from some identified source, whereas the accusative case in 22:9 indicates that they did not hear it as intelligible speech." Paul further emphasized that he then was instructed to go into Damascus where he would meet a man who would tell him what to do. He then explained that man was Ananias who was a devout man according to the law (an obvious apologetic appeal), who then told them that the God of our fathers had chosen him to know his will and see that Just One (referring to Christ) and that he should be a witness unto all men of what he had seen and heard. Paul further referred to the incident of the martyr Stephen and his part in his death and how he had hoped originally to bring the message of Christ only to the Jews, but instead the Lord said, I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles (vs. 21).

ACTS 22:14

14 And he said, The God of our fathers hath chosen thee, that thou shouldst know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldst hear the voice of his mouth.

15 For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.

16 And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptised, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord.

17 And it came to pass, that, when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance;

18 And saw him saying unto me, Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem: for they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

19 And I said, Lord, they know that I imprisoned and beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee:

20 And when the blood of thy martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him.

21 And he said unto me, Depart: for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.

22 ¶And they gave him audience unto this word, and then lifted up their voices, and said, Away with such a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live.

23 And as they cried out, and cast off their clothes, and threw dust into the air,

24 The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the castle, and bade that he should be examined by scourging; that he might know wherefore they cried so against him.

25 And as they bound him with thongs, Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?

26 When the centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, saying, Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said, Yea.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, But I was free born.

29 Then straightway they departed from him which should have examined him: and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

30 On the morrow, because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he loosed him from his bands, and commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear, and brought Paul down, and set him before them.

CHAPTER 23

AND Paul, earnestly beholding the council, said, Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.

2 And the high priest Ān-a-nī'as com-

22-30. Until this point the crowd had retained a hostile silence, but with the mention of Paul's divine call to the Gentiles, they burst into rage, demanding that he be taken away . . . from the earth because he was not fit to live. The hostile Jewish mob tore their clothes, and threw dust in the air and made such a tumult that the chief captain brought him into the barracks. They then prepared to scourge him. At this point Paul reminded the man with the whip that it was unlawful to scourge a Roman who was uncondemned by lawful trial (vs. 25). The chief captain was amazed to discover that Paul was a Roman citizen and assumed that he had obtained this freedom with a great sum of money. To which Paul replied that he was free born (vs. 28), by virtue of having been born in the colony city of Tarsus. In fact, the chief captain was now even fearful of the fact that he had bound Paul in the first place, so he decided to allow him to appear before the chief priests and all their council (i.e., the Sanhedrin), to determine wherefore he was accused of the Jews and whether any adequate grounds existed for a legal proceeding against Paul.

B. Paul's Defense before the Sanhedrin and Pharisees. 23:1-22.

23:1-10. Paul began by protesting his innocence before the council, stating that he had lived in all good conscience before God. Throughout his epistles and recorded sermons, there are numerous references by Paul to the importance of having a clear conscience with God and man. Ananias was the high priest of manded them that stood by him to smite him on the mouth.

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?

4 And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's high priest?

5 Then said Paul, I wist not, brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.

6 But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sād'du-ceeds, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sād'du-ceeds: and the multitude was divided.

8 For the Sād'du-ceeds say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man: but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God.

10 And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

14 And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul.

15 Now therefore ye with the council signify to the chief captain that he bring him down unto you to morrow, as though ye would enquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 And when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

Israel from about A.D. 48-58. A crude and overbearing man, he was angered by Paul's claim and commanded someone who stood by him to smite him on the mouth. Jesus similarly had been struck during His trial (see Jn 18:22). In response to the action of the high priest, Paul replied: God shall smite thee, thou whited wall (vs. 3). The term "whited wall" suggests a whitewashed coating over a precarious, tottering wall (cf. Bruce, p. 451). Paul's outburst might seem strong to some, until one realizes the tremendous pressure that he was under and the tension of the moment in which his life was literally at stake! Also note that the action of the high priest was contrary to the law. The crowd, however, was shocked by Paul's response in "reviling" the high priest. Paul then seemed to change the tactic of his defense. Realizing that the situation was "stacked" against him, Paul replied that he did not know that he was the high priest, probably the result of the action and character which he displayed, for certainly he would have been dressed in some manner to indicate who he was. Instead, Paul recognized that the Sanhedrin, of which many feel he was himself originally a member (cf. Blaiklock, p. 176), as the ruling body of the Jews was composed of both Pharisees and Sadducees. They held the majority, and differed with each other on important matters of doctrine, such as, the Resurrection, angels, and the nature of supernatural intervention. Paul used their difference to gain an opportunity to save his own life. He openly identified himself as a Pharisee and a believer in the resurrection of the dead, thus causing an immediate split between the assembled Pharisees and the resurrection-denying Sadducees. The clamor became so intense that Paul was removed by the Roman commander and the interview before the Sanhedrin came to a close. Paul's statement that he had been called into question because of the hope and resurrection of the dead (vs. 6) was true in light of the fact that he believed in the resurrection as the hope of the dead! The Pharisees naively arose to Paul's defense, but the dissension became so intense that Paul was returned to the barracks.

11-22. One of the heartwarming and encouraging statements of Paul's entire life occurred at this point when that night the Lord stood by him, referring to a literal appearance of Christ who came to tell Paul to be of good cheer for he must bear witness also at Rome. Paul had often hoped to get to Rome, and at Ephesus he even made plans to go to Rome, but at this point he was not even sure he would get out of Jerusalem alive. But now, for the first time, God had confirmed his original plan. It is difficult to state honestly these many centuries later whether Paul made a mistake in going to Jerusalem, or whether the Lord knew all along that he would go to Jerusalem, and warned him so that he would be prepared for the ultimate consequences, and used his arrest as the opportunity to get him to the place where he ultimately wanted to go. Certainly Paul's life shows us time and again that God can overrule the most difficult of human circumstances in order to accomplish His will. He may even overrule our own will so that His ultimate will may be done. The next day certain of the Jews banded together . . . under a curse in a unified effort to kill Paul. The extent of their fanaticism can be understood when we realize that the execution of this plot certainly would have meant the death of many of them at the hands of the Roman guard who protected Paul. Such intense religious fanaticism was common among the Jews of that day. Paul's sister's son (a nephew) learned of their lying in wait (ambush) and came to warn Paul. This is the only reference in the New Testament to Paul's family, and we have no clear indication as to who this person was. The Roman commander quickly removed Paul that night to Caesarea (vs. 23), protected by four hundred seventy armed soldiers. He sent a letter on ahead to Felix in Caesarea, explaining why Paul was being transferred to his authority.

ACTS 23:19

19 Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him, What is that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said, The Jews have agreed to desire thee that thou wouldest bring down Paul to morrow into the council, as though they would enquire somewhat of him more perfectly.

21 But do not thou yield unto them: for there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now are they ready, looking for a promise from thee.

22 So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou hast shewed these things to me.

23 And he called unto him two centurions, saying, Make ready two hundred soldiers to go to Cæs-a-re'a, and horsemen threescore and ten, and spearmen two hundred, at the third hour of the night;

24 And provide them beasts, that they may set Paul on, and bring him safe unto Felix the governor.

25 And he wrote a letter after this manner:

26 Claudius Ly'si-as unto the most excellent governor Felix sendeth greeting.

27 This man was taken of the Jews, and should have been killed of them: then came I with an army, and rescued him, having understood that he was a Roman.

28 And when I would have known the cause wherefore they accused him, I brought him forth into their council:

29 Whom I perceived to be accused of questions of their law, but to have nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bonds.

30 And when it was told me how that the Jews laid wait for the man, I sent straightway to thee, and gave commandment to his accusers also to say before thee what they had against him. Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to An-tip'a-tris.

32 On the morrow they left the horsemen to go with him, and returned to the castle:

33 Who, when they came to Cæs-a-re'a, and delivered the epistle to the governor, presented Paul also before him.

34 And when the governor had read the letter, he asked of what province he was. And when he understood that he was of Cī-lī'cia;

35 I will hear thee, said he, when thine accusers are also come. And he commanded him to be kept in Herod's judgment hall.

CHAPTER 24

AND after five days An-a-nī'as the high priest descended with the elders, and with a certain orator named Ter-tūl'us, who informed the governor against Paul.

C. Paul's Defense Before Felix and Festus. 23:23-25:12.

23-35. Paul was transferred under heavily armed guard to Felix the governor (or procurator). The troop departed during the third hour of the night, between nine and ten P.M., and brought him safely unto Caesarea. The transcript of the official letter sent by the tribune, Claudius Lysias, unto Felix is given in length, verses 26-30. The nature of the letter seems to indicate that the tribune was afraid that he might have accorded some improper treatment to this Roman citizen, and therefore, wanted to make sure that the situation was properly handled. In the morning they arrived at Antipatris, some forty miles from Jerusalem and well on the way to Caesarea. Being out of immediate danger of the Jews, the majority of the guard returned and seventy horsemen (cavalrymen) accompanied Paul the remaining distance. Learning that Paul was a citizen of Cilicia, the governor agreed to hear the case when the accusers arrived to bring formal charges against him.

24:1-9. Antonius Felix was the governor of Judaea from A.D. 52-59 and was a man of servile origin who owed his unprecedented advancement to the influence of his brother at the imperial court of Claudius. His governorship was marked by a period of unrest and several Jewish uprisings which resulted in

2 And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuse him, saying, Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietness, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence,

3 We accept it always, and in all places, most noble Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 Notwithstanding, that I be not further tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldest hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5 For we have found this man a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 Who also hath gone about to profane the temple: whom we took, and would have judged according to our law.

7 But the chief captain Ly'si-as came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8 Commanding his accusers to come unto thee: by examining of whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things, whereof we accuse him.

9 And the Jews also assented, saying that these things were so.

10 ¶Then Paul, after that the governor had beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself:

11 Because that thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem for to worship.

12 And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city:

13 Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets:

15 And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.

16 And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now after many years I came to bring alms to my nation, and offerings.

18 Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult.

ruthless response by Felix, which in turn alienated more Jews and led to further revolts. Tacitus, the Roman historian, wrote of him: "Felix indulging in every kind of barbarity and lust, exercised the power of a king in the Spirit of a slave" (Histories V, 9). He had three successful marriages to princesses, which elevated his status among the Romans. The first of the three was the granddaughter of Antony and Cleopatra; the third was Drusilla, the daughter of Agrippa. After five days, Ananias arrived with the elders and a professional orator named Tertullus to present a formal case against Paul. As the official representative of his client, he began to accuse (i.e., made his charges) to the governor against Paul. Years after this incident Ananias was assassinated and his son Jonathan became the high priest and was later assassinated by Felix! Paul was accused of treason, religious heresy, and desecration of the Temple. Since Tertullus' name is a common Roman designation, it may be that he was a Hellenistic Jew or that he was a hired attorney on behalf of the Jews. The reference to our law would seem to indicate the former to be true. The flattering speech was in fact the exact opposite of the truth; instead of great quietness (vs. 2) and clemency (vs. 4), Felix was noted for his ferocious temper and prevailing discontent throughout his realm. The charges brought against Paul claimed that he was a troublemaker among all the Jews throughout the world and that he was the ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes (vs. 5). The term "sect" was used by Josephus to designate the various parties and divisions within Judaism, indicating that the opposition still considered the Christians as an unorthodox break within Judaism. This is the only place in the New Testament where the followers of Jesus are called Nazarenes. The term continued to be used as a derisive designation for Christians in Hebrew and Arabic. It is certainly not wrong to call the followers of Jesus "Nazarenes," but there is no precedent within the Scriptures for churches ever to call themselves by this term. "Nazarene" was at times a term of derision used by Judeans against the Galileans within the Jewish nation and, therefore, did not necessarily carry any spiritual connotation.

10-21. Paul waited until the governor beckoned unto him to speak. Beginning with a modest compliment, he openly denied the charge of stirring up rebellion. To the first charge, he pointed out that he had only been in Jerusalem for twelve days and could not have possibly created all the alleged trouble in that brief time. In regard to the second charge, he showed that he was actually more orthodox than some members of the Sanhedrin who denied the doctrine of the resurrection. Concerning the third charge, he reminded the court that the Jews in Jerusalem itself could not make that indictment stick, which was the only legitimate charge that could have occasioned his death according to the law. Felix wisely decided to defer any action until he received the official testimony of Lysias, the arresting Roman commander. The only charge which Paul accepted was to confess . . . the way which they call heresy (vs. 14). Notice again that Christianity is referred to as "the way" (of Christ). Paul emphasized the importance of having a conscience void of offense toward God and man (vs. 16). Having a clear conscience was vital to the preparation for spiritual warfare. He proceeded to explain that the Jews from Asia (vs. 18) who had originally accused him were not even there to bring formal charges against him (since they had by now returned to their homeland). Paul ended his defense by pointing out that he was really called into question in regard to his view of the resurrection of the dead (vs. 21).

ACTS 24:19

19 Who ought to have been here before thee, and object, if they had ought against me.

20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil doing in me, while I stood before the council,

21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called in question by you this day.

22 ¶And when Felix heard these things, having more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and said, When Ly-si-as the chief captain shall come down, I will know the uttermost of your matter.

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, and to let him have liberty, and that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

24 And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife Drū-sil'la, which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith in Christ.

25 And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee.

26 He hoped also that money should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.

27 But after two years Pôr'ci-us Fēs'-tus came into Felix' room: and Felix, willing to shew the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.

CHAPTER 25

NOW when Fēs'tus was come into the province, after three days he ascended from Cæs-a-re'a to Jerusalem.

2 Then the high priest and the chief of the Jews informed him against Paul, and besought him,

3 And desired favour against him, that he would send for him to Jerusalem, laying wait in the way to kill him.

4 But Fēs'tus answered, that Paul should be kept at Cæs-a-re'a, and that he himself would depart shortly thither.

5 Let them therefore, said he, which among you are able, go down with me, and accuse this man, if there be any wickedness in him.

6 And when he had tarried among them more than ten days, he went down unto Cæs-a-re'a; and the next day sitting on the judgment seat commanded Paul to be brought.

7 And when he was come, the Jews which came down from Jerusalem stood round about, and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove.

8 While he answered for himself, Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cæsar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Fēs'tus, willing to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, Wilt 22-27. When Paul's defense was finished, Felix had a more perfect knowledge of that way, meaning that he had a more accurate understanding of the Christian faith. Eventually Paul had the opportunity to speak to both Felix and his wife Drusilla. This girl was the youngest daughter of Herod Agrippa I (the murderer of James, ch. 12) and the sister of Agrippa II and Bernice (25:13). She was not yet twenty years old and had already left an Assyrian king to marry Felix. She was a Jewess and died twenty-one years later in the eruption of Mount Vesuvius! The passage says that he sent for Paul to explain to him the faith in Christ (vs. 24); and as Paul preached righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, the message was brought home with such conviction that Felix trembled. Obviously disturbed by what he heard, he responded with his now infamous statement, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee (vs. 25). The closing verses of the chapter indicate that he had hoped for a bribe from Paul in order to release him; however, the bribe was never forthcoming and after two years Felix was recalled to Rome by the emperor Nero under an accusation of bad administration by the Jews of his dominion. Porcius Festus succeeded him as procurator of Judaea, and Felix left Paul in prison for his successor to decide his fate. Thereby, he hoped to pacify the Jews who were now bringing the accusations against him.

25:1-12. In A.D. 58 Felix's soldiers put down a riot of Jews in Caesarea with such violence that he was replaced by Festus, a more fair and honorable ruler, but one who was unable to control the situation in Palestine which had now become a hotbed of revolution and within twelve years would come under the wrath of the emperor himself. Upon his arrival in the province, Festus went from Caesarea to Jerusalem (vs. 1). There, the high priest and the Jews again brought charges against Paul, requesting that he be sent to Jerusalem, in hope that they might ambush him on the way. Instead, Festus resisted their pressure and returned to Caesarea where the Jews were forced to come and make formal charges against the apostle before the judgment seat (Gr bēma). When Festus suggested that Paul return to Jerusalem to be tried, the apostle then appealed to Caesar's judgment seat (vs. 10). It is clear that Paul was willing to accept the penalty of death if he had done anything worthy of death (vs. 11). Festus, seeing an immediate way out, honored the appeal to Caesar (who was Nero, having begun his reign in A.D. 54). The early years of his rule were gentle in nature and gave no hint of the awful cruelties which would soon follow.

thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10 Then said Paul, I stand at Cæsar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged: to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Cæsar.

12 Then Fës'tus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, Hast thou appealed unto Cæsar? unto Cæsar shalt thou go.

13 ¶And after certain days king A-gríp'pa and Bernice came unto Cæs-are'a to salute Fës'tus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Fës'tus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

15 About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered, It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have licence to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore, when they were come hither, without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 But had certain questions against him of their own superstition, and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because I doubted of such manner of questions, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

21 But when Paul had appealed to be reserved unto the hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Cæsar.

22 Then A-gríp'pa said unto Fës'tus, I would also hear the man myself. To morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 And on the morrow, when A-gríp'pa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Fës'tus' commandment Paul was brought forth.

24 And Fës'tus said, King A-gríp'pa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying that he ought not to live any longer.

25 But when I found that he had committed nothing worthy of death, and that he himself hath appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

26 Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto my lord. Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and specially before thee, O king A-gríp'pa,

D. Paul's Defense Before Agrippa. 25:13-26:32.

13-21. Agrippa II was the son of Herod Agrippa (12:1) and Bernice, who was the sister of both Drusilla and Agrippa. She had previously been married to her uncle until his death, and was now living with her brother in a relationship widely rumored to be incestuous. She later left him for another pagan king, then deserted him and finally became the mistress of both the Roman emperor Vespasian and his son Titus, who later destroyed Jerusalem in A.D. 70. Upon hearing about Paul from Festus, Agrippa requested an audience with the famous prisoner. Paul was brought into the palace court and in chains preached Christ to his royal guests. It is interesting to note that Agrippa, who had come to power in A.D. 53, controlled most of Palestine at the time and supervised the appointment of the high priest in Jerusalem. His powerful influence in Jewish affairs certainly made Paul's interview with him one of extreme importance. Festus related how Paul had been left there from the time of Felix and how he doubted of such manner of questions (vs. 20) because of his lack of understanding of the nature of Jewish matters, since he was new to that territory. The term Augustus (vs. 21) is misleading since the word is a translation of the Latin Augustus, meaning the "revered" or "august one." This term was applied to all Roman emperors, of whom Augustus Caesar had been the first. Again note that the emperor at this time was Nero. The modern equivalent for this term would be similar to "his majesty" (Gr sebastos). Because of Paul's appeal to Caesar, no further action could be taken by these royal rulers.

22-27. A further hearing was set up before Festus, Agrippa, Bernice, and an advisory council consisting of the chief captains (or military tribunes) and principal men of the city. Luke's purpose in including these appearances before public officials in such lengthy detail seems to be of an apologetic nature in defense of Christianity. Such statements as that he had committed nothing worthy of death (vs. 25) are used to verify the credibility of this great Christian leader. While the book of Acts first centered on the ministry of James and Peter, it has now shifted totally to that of Paul, undoubtedly due to Luke's close relationship to him. Festus went on to explain that the entire process seemeth to me unreasonable, since no proven charge had ever been established against Paul.

that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write.

27 For it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes laid against him.

CHAPTER 26

THEN A-gríp'pa said unto Paul, Thou art permitted to speak for thyself. Then Paul stretched forth the hand, and answered for himself:

2 I think myself happy, king A-gríp'pa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews:

3 Especially because I know thee to be expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

4 My manner of life from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation at Jerusalem, know all the Jews;

5 Which knew me from the beginning, if they would testify, that after the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee.

6 And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers:

7 Unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come. For which hope's sake, king A-gríp'pa, I am accused of the Jews.

8 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 Which thing I also did in Jerusalem: and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them.

11 And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

12 Whereupon as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests,

13 At midday, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me and them which journeyed with me.

14 And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in the Hebrew tongue, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

15 And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest.

16 But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee;

17 Delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee,

26:1-12. Paul's defense before Agrippa began again with a gesture of salutation as he stretched forth the hand. Paul expressed his gratitude that he was able to make his defense before Agrippa since he was an expert in Jewish customs and affairs. Paul's approach, notes Ladd (p. 478), was to convince him that faith in Christ was the ultimate fulfillment of Jewish belief. Therefore, the apostle outlined his upbringing as a Jew in the straitest sect of the Jewish religion as a Pharisee (vs. 5). Paul centered his appeal on the question of the resurrection and God's power to raise the dead (vs. 8). He went on to explain that he himself had thought and done many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth. Notice that the early Christian movement always identified itself closely with Jesus' name. He explained how he imprisoned believers ("saints," Gr hagios). He went on to explain that he even compelled them to blaspheme. A better translation would be "tried to make them blaspheme." The tense of the Greek word indicates that Paul failed in his attempt to bring them to blasphemy, an experience which certainly would have left a marked impression upon the young Jewish inquisitor!

13-23. This account gives more details into Paul's experiences as a persecutor than any other passage in the New Testament. Having laid this background, the apostle now began to explain the Damascus vision which occurred at midday, in which Christ appeared to him and called to him in the Hebrew tongue (vs. 14). The phrase it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks means that it was "painful" to kick back against the "goads," used to prod beasts of burden. This was a proverbial saying in Latin and Greek, but is unknown to us in Hebrew or Aramaic. Paul's terminology is such that it would be most understandable to his Gentile listeners. Then, Paul clearly recounted the voice as identifying himself as Jesus whom thou persecutest (vs. 15). He went on to explain that Jesus was sending him to the Gentiles . . . to open their eyes. Paul was making it clear that his very defense before these earthly kings was a fulfillment of the mission upon which his Lord had sent him! Thus, he could offer forgiveness of sins (vs. 18) unto his Gentile listeners. He drew the story of his conversion to a close by announcing: Whereupon O king Agrippa, I was not dis-

18 To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king A-grīp'pa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:

20 But shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judæa, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance.

21 For these causes the Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me.

22 Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come:

23 That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles.

24 ¶And as he thus spake for himself, Fēs'tus said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.

25 But he said, I am not mad, most noble Fēs'tus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner.

27 King A-grīp'pa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest.

28 Then A-grīp'pa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian.

29 And Paul said, I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds.

30 And when he had thus spoken, the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them:

31 And when they were gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying, This man doeth nothing worthy of death or of bonds.

32 Then said A-grīp'pa unto Fēs'tus, This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Cæsar.

obedient unto the heavenly vision (vs. 19). He then quickly summarized his entire ministry preaching to them of Damascus . . . Jerusalem . . . Judæa . . . and then to the Gentiles (vs. 20). In each case, and to each group, he had preached that they should repent and turn to God. Again, there can be no doubt that repentance was an essential ingredient to salvation and was a vital part of Paul's apostolic preaching! He went on to explain that it was for these causes (those of his evangelistic mission) that the Jews had taken him and wanted to kill him. However, he explained that he had obtained the help of God (vs. 22) and that God had kept him alive until that day witnessing both to small and great of what Christ had suffered and that He had risen from the dead to show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles (vs. 23).

24-32. Festus, a Gentile who was unaware of Jewish thinking and Old Testament teaching, was shocked and uttered with a loud voice: Paul, thou art beside thyself (or insane). Reference to his much learning which had made him mad indicates that it was obvious that Paul was a man of unusual intelligence but must have gone crazy from all of these religious investigations. While the point is not made directly by the story, it seems obvious that Luke recounts this incident to show that Christianity could be no mere invention of the mind of man but only the revelation of the truth. Only the life-changing experience of conversion could drive a person like the Apostle Paul for so many years to remain faithful to what had happened in his life on one given day so many years before. Paul protested that he was not mad but was speaking the truth in soberness (Gr sōphrosynē, "temperate," "self-control," of "balanced mind"). He also appealed to Agrippa, that as an expert in Jewish affairs, he understood the things of which he had spoken because these things were not done in a corner. He was reminding him that the events of the death and resurrection of Christ were hardly a secret and were openly known to anyone who had any knowledge of Jewish affairs at all. Paul's final appeal, Believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest, must be seen as an appeal to the king who evidently showed some outward indication of conviction and concern at that point. However, Agrippa, evidently embarrassed by the presence of Festus, was not about to make such an admission, and his response, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian, is probably best understood as a parody on Paul's appeal: "In short, you are trying to make me play the Christian." Paul, however, went on to say that he wished they were both almost, and altogether true believers! After dismissing him, they conferred among themselves and decided that he had done nothing worthy of death or of bonds (vs. 31). Again, Paul's innocence was verified by Roman officials who agreed that he might have been set at liberty had he not appealed unto Cæsar. Because of the formality of such an appeal, the legal process had to be carried through. It is most likely that Festus and Agrippa sent some kind of letter of explanation to the emperor along with their unusual prisoner who was now finally on his way to Rome!

E. The Journey to Rome. 27:1-28:10.

27:1-14. Paul never seemed to be able to do anything half-should sail into Italy, they delivered Paul and certain other prisoners unto one named Julius a centurion of Augustus' band.

Paul's Voyage to Rome

2 And entering into a ship of Adramyttium, we launched, meaning to sail by the coasts of Asia; one Aristerchus, a Macedonian of Thessalonica, being with us.

3 And the next day we touched at Sidon. And Julius courteously entreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go unto his friends to refresh himself.

4 And when we had launched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus, because the winds were contrary.

5 And when we had sailed over the sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia.

6 And there the centurion found a ship of Alexandria sailing into Italy; and he put us therein.

7 And when we had sailed slowly many days, and scarce were come over against Cnidus, the wind not suffering us, we sailed under Crete, over against Salmone;

8 And, hardly passing it, came unto a place which is called The fair havens; nigh whereunto was the city of Lasea.

9 ¶ Now when much time was spent, and when sailing was now dangerous, because the fast was now already past, Paul admonished them,

10 And said unto them, Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 Nevertheless the centurion believed the master and the owner of the ship, more than those things which were spoken by Paul.

12 And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Pheheartedly and the journey to Rome is itself an exciting and unusual story. A group of prisoners had collected at the headquarters of the Roman officials in Caesarea, and Paul was sent with them to Rome under the charge of a centurion and the cohort of Augustus' band (an unidentified military formation). The final "we" section of the book picks up again with verse 1. Thus Paul was accompanied by Luke, who had originally arrived with him at Jerusalem, and is assumed to have remained nearby during the two-year imprisonment in Caesarea. The obscure but faithful Aristarchus (as Blaiklock calls him, p. 189) also accompanied them. References to him appear in Colossians 4:10 and Philemon 24. The ship of Adramyttium refers to a seaport on the Aegean opposite the island of Lesbos. They went north along the Palestinian coast to Sidon, where Julius, the centurion, allowed Paul to go ashore briefly to visit his friends. Because the prevailing winds blow from the west, the ship sailed between Cyprus and the mainland, rather than going directly into the winds which were contrary. Eventually they had to head out into the open sea below Cilicia and Pamphylia and finally came to Myra, a Lycian port, where larger ships could be found. There they transferred to an Alexandrian grain ship and headed for Rome. Sailing against the wind, they finally arrived with difficulty at Cnidus, on a promontory point at the southwest tip of Asia Minor. From this point they had to choose whether they would wait for a more favorable wind moving westerly, or whether they would sail southward to Crete itself. The statement, the wind not suffering us, means the wind did not allow them to go on. Therefore, they chose the alternate route and sailed southward around Salome at the eastern end of Crete and coasted along westward on the leeward side of the island. Eventually they came to the port called Fair Havens which was, and still is, about halfway along the coast and beyond which the land slopes downward, exposing ships to the open wind. By the early fall the winter winds become fierce, and by mid-November all sailing was an impossibility in the Mediterranean in those ancient times because the ships were not large enough to withstand the winter storms. Paul admonished his superiors not to attempt the journey under such dangerous circumstances. The fast (vs. 9) to which Luke refers is the Day nī'ce, and there to winter; which is an haven of Crete, and lieth toward the south west and north west.

13 And when the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, loosing thence, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But not long after there arose against it a tempestuous wind, called Eū-rōc'ly-dōn.

15 And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, we let her drive.

16 And running under a certain island which is called Clau'da, we had much work to come by the boat:

17 Which when they had taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship; and, fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, strake sail, and so were driven.

18 And we being exceedingly tossed with a tempest, the next day they lightened the ship:

19 And the third day we cast out with our own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And when neither sun nor stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope that we should be saved was then taken away.

21 ¶But after long abstinence Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss.

22 And now I exhort you to be of good cheer: for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship.

23 For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, 24 Saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cæsar: and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.

25 Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me.

26 Howbeit we must be cast upon a certain island.

27 But when the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in Ā'dri-a, about midnight the shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country;

28 And sounded, and found it twenty fathoms; and when they had gone a little further, they sounded again, and found it fifteen fathoms.

29 Then fearing lest we should have fallen upon rocks, they cast four anchors out of the stern, and wished for the day.

30 And as the shipmen were about to flee out of the ship, when they had let down the boat into the sea, under colour as though they would have cast anchors out of the foreship,

31 Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved.

32 Then the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.

33 And while the day was coming on, Paul besought them all to take meat, of Atonement which generally falls at the end of September. Through the influence of the master and owner of the ship, they attempted to sail to the more commodious port of Phoenix on Crete. Leaving the Fair Havens they were able to follow close along the shore of the island because the south wind blew softly. Thinking they had made the right decision, they got away from the safety of the port and were caught on the open seas by a tempestuous wind called Euroclydon (a hybrid word meaning "northeaster").

15-26. Luke then vividly recounts the story of the treacherous voyage which drove them twenty-three miles across the turbulent sea to the offshore island of Clauda. During this time the passengers had to aid the crew and struggled desperately to haul aboard the ship's boat, which was towing, water-logged, behind. Fearing the quicksands (Syrtis, the graveyard of many ships off the north African coast), they struck sail (probably meaning they set storm sails) and were driven by the wind. When the storm did not abate the next day, they were forced to "lighten" the ship by throwing the cargo overboard; and when it did not call the following day, they threw over all the extra tackling and gear. The storm then continued for many days and the ancient sailors lost all hope of navigation because they could not see the stars. The reference to being saved (vs. 20) refers to the salvation of their lives from the storm. Paul's unusual leadership now arose to the forefront as he stood up in the midst of the storm and rebuked the sailors for not listening to his original advice and then reassured them that no man would die, in spite of the loss of the ship. He announced that the angel of God had appeared unto him in the storm to assure him that he would be brought before Caesar (vs. 24). There can be little doubt that Paul's unique experience on the road to Damascus was not limited by a one-time event in his life. Time and again God continued to put His miraculous mark of approval on His unusual servant. In the midst of our greatest personal dangers we can have the confidence that God is with us.

27-44. Blaiklock's (pp. 190ff.) vivid description states: "They were, indeed, at the end of human resource. They had looped and tautened cables precariously round the hull, to bind the straining timbers against the stress of the violent seas, and the leverage of the mast; they cut loose all dispensable tackling and gear to lighten the vessel." As they drifted across the sea of Adria (a reference to the entire eastern Mediterranean, not the Adriatic Sea), they could tell they were approaching land, probably due to the sound of breakers crashing against the shore or the rock. As the depth soundings revealed that the water was becoming more shallow, they cast four anchors (vs. 29) in an attempt to secure the ship before drifting into the shore. The alert apostle frustrated an attempt by the shipmen (crew) to escape in the boat launch, leaving the rest on board. Therefore, the soldiers cut the ropes and let the smaller boat drift off. Toward daybreak, Paul then urged them all to have something to eat, a suggestion that paid off later. In unique Christian style he gave thanks to God in presence of them all (vs. 35). Certainly a true believer can never become reluctant or embarrassed to ask God's blessing over his meal in a public situation in light of the example of the Apostle Paul. The total number of people saying, This day is the fourteenth day that ye have tarried and continued fasting, having taken nothing.

34 Wherefore I pray you to take some meat: for this is for your health: for there shall not an hair fall from the head of any of you.

35 And when he had thus spoken, he took bread, and gave thanks to God in presence of them all: and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were they all of good cheer, and they also took some meat.

37 And we were in all in the ship two hundred threescore and sixteen souls.

38 And when they had eaten enough, they lightened the ship, and cast out the wheat into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they discovered a certain creek with a shore, into the which they were minded, if it were possible, to thrust in the ship.

40 And when they had taken up the anchors, they committed themselves unto the sea, and loosed the rudder bands, and hoised up the mainsail to the wind, and made toward shore.

41 And falling into a place where two seas met, they ran the ship aground; and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmoveable, but the hinder part was broken with the violence of the waves.

42 And the soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape.

43 But the centurion, willing to save Paul, kept them from their purpose; and commanded that they which could swim should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land:

44 And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass, that they escaped all safe to land.

CHAPTER 28

AND when they were escaped, then they knew that the island was called MELT-ta.

2 And the barbarous people shewed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold.

3 And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand.

4 And when the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, No doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

5 And he shook off the beast into the fire, and felt no harm.

6 Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and said that he was a god.

7 ¶In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius: who re-on the ship was two hundred seventy-six. Finally, they cast even the remaining wheat into the sea. Therefore the ship owner's attempt to get his cargo to Rome in time to get the best price had now totally failed. At daybreak they attempted to run the ship aground in a creek which parted the shore. They cast off the anchors and, using the rudder bands (two large steering oars on either side of the ship), they attempted to make the shore with a small "foresail." However, they did not make it and ran the ship aground. The bow of the ship was stuck on the shoal, while the force of the waves against the stern began breaking the ship in two. Had Paul not stepped to the forefront as he had and won the confidence of the centurion, all the prisoners would have been put to death by the soldiers' counsel (vs. 42). This action would have followed traditional Roman discipline to kill their charges rather than risk escape. The centurion, however, willing to save Paul and many of those who could swim did so and the rest floated in on boards, and some even on the pieces of the ship. Nevertheless, they all were able to reach land safely from the sandbar. The incident reveals the outstanding faith and character of the Apostle Paul, who emerged as the hero of the story in spite of being a prisoner on the ship!

28:1-10. Again the reader is amazed that Paul's spiritual determination does not quit even under such difficult circumstances. In spite of his imprisonment, the series of trials, and now the traumatic shipwreck, Paul dominated the scene on the island of Melita (modern Malta) lying about a hundred miles south of Sicily. Melita is related to the Canaanite word "refuge" and was at one time part of the territory of Carthage, and the peasantry still spoke the Phoenician language. The term barbarous does not refer to primitive people, but rather those who spoke an unintelligible language. A better rendering would be "foreigner." A fire was kindled to warm them from the cold winter rain and Paul helped gather sticks for the fire, when a viper (snake, which had hibernated in the wood pile) fastened on his hand (i.e., bit him). The Melitians assumed that the snakebite had been inflicted in punishment of Paul's misdeeds. The common concept was that the goddess of justice, Dike, would use tragedy to catch up with her victims. When Paul shook off the snake unharmed, they changed their minds and decided that he was a god (vs. 6). Note that the verb changed their minds (Gr metaballō), meaning to change their "opinion," is a completely different word from the theological term "to repent" (Gr metanoō). As a result, the chief man of the island (the leading official), named Publius, lodged them for three days in his villa estate. His father lay sick of a fever and bloody flux (hemorrhage). Dysentery and fever were common on the island ceived us, and lodged us three days courteously.

8 And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever and of a bloody flux: to whom Paul entered in, and prayed, and laid his hands on him, and healed him.

9 So when this was done, others also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed:

10 Who also honoured us with many hours; and when we departed, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

11 ¶And after three months we departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle, whose sign was Castor and Pollux.

12 And landing at Syracuse, we tarried there three days.

13 And from thence we fetched a compass, and came to Rhé'gi-um: and after one day the south wind blew, and we came the next day to Pū-tē'o-li:

14 Where we found brethren, and were desired to tarry with them seven days: and so we went toward Rome.

15 And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us as far as Ap'p'i-fō'rūm, and The three taverns: whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage.

16 And when we came to Rome, the centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guard: but Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him.

17 And it came to pass, that after three days Paul called the chief of the Jews together: and when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, though I have committed nothing against the people, or customs of our fathers, yet was I delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans.

18 Who, when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me.

19 But when the Jews spake against it, I was constrained to appeal unto Cæsar; not that I had ought to accuse my nation of.

20 For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain.

21 And they said unto him, We neither received letters out of Judæa concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came shewed or spake any harm of thee.

22 But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this of Malta and often took many lives. Paul came to the man and prayed, and laid his hands on him, and healed him. These unusual miracles completely dominate the story of their three-month winter sojourn on this island. Afterwards they continued "healing" the people of the island. Because of the change of the verbs for "healing" some have suggested that the subsequent "cures" may have been wrought by Luke the physician as well as by Paul. However, note the same use of the latter verb for the healing done by Peter in Acts 5:16. The ultimate concept seems to be that even in the presence of a medical doctor, miraculous healing was being done by the Apostle Paul!

F. Conclusion. 28:11-31.

11-16. Since the shipwreck had taken place during the early part of November, three months later would have put them near the end of February. Again they departed in a ship of Alexandria (vs. 11) which had wintered at Melita and which bore the sign of Castor and Pollux. Ancient sailing vessels often took their names from their figureheads, these being the dioscuri, meaning "the sons of Zeus," who were regarded as the patron deities of sailors. Sailing directly north they came to Syracuse, the most important city on Sicily at that time. The quaint archaism of the AV, fetched a compass, means they "made a circuit," or had to tack back and forth in order to reach Rhegium on the southern toe of Italy. They reached Puteoli on the bay of Naples, the regular port of arrival for grain ships coming from Alexandria. Here they spent seven days with brethren. By this time in the history of the early church Christian believers could be found almost anywhere throughout the entire empire. From Puteoli the land route was taken to Rome which normally included a barge passage through the Pontine Marshes and reached its terminus at the Appii Forum, some forty-three miles from Rome. Three Taverns was about ten miles closer and both were stopping places where travelers might lodge for the night. The reference in verse 16 is the last of the "we" statements in Acts. But since Luke is mentioned in Paul's letters which were written from Rome (cf. Phm 24; Col 4:14), it must be understood that he remained with Paul throughout this Roman imprisonment. It is not likely that Paul was actually put in jail or prison at this time, but was actually under personal attachment to a soldier whose responsibility was to bring him before the authorities at the proper time. Paul was able to dwell in a home.

17-31. The two-year imprisonment is briefly recorded by Luke in which Paul spent the greater amount of the time in a hired house (vs. 30), where he was allowed to receive visitors including many of the Jews and the Christians of the community. Very interestingly Paul put forth an aggressive attempt to evangelize the Jews at Rome who were totally ignorant of his disastrous encounters back in Palestine. To them he expounded and testified the kingdom of God (vs. 23) and some believed . . . and some believed not. Luke records the apostle's tireless effort to carry on his mission but then records the statement of Isaiah, quoting 6:9-10, which describes the spiritual dullness of the Jews. Luke, himself a Gentile, seems convinced that only a minority of the people of Israel would be converted to the true gospel; therefore the statement is made again that the salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles (vs. 28), reaffirming the ultimate Gentile mission of Paul. During the two-year wait for his court trial, Paul continued Preaching the kingdom of God and teaching the doctrine of the Lord Jesus Christ. Again the reference to the kingdom of God must refer to the church and not to continued Jewish preaching at so late a time in the apostle's ministry. His preaching was continued with all confidence, no man forbidding. The book obviously ends abruptly, which has caused most commentators to believe that Luke wrote right up until the present time and closed the book at the point sect, we know that every where it is spoken against.

23 And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, Well spake the Holy Ghost by E-sā'ias the prophet unto our fathers,

26 Saying, Go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive:

27 For the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

28 Be it known therefore unto you, that the salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles, and that they will hear it.

29 And when he had said these words, the Jews departed, and had great reasoning among themselves.

30 ¶ And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, 31 Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him.

at which they had now arrived. No statement is made of Paul actually going to trial before Caesar, nor of his traditional release and a two- or three-year interval, finally ending in his reimprisonment and death in A.D. 68. The two pastoral epistles (I Tim and Tit) seem to reflect a continued traveling and preaching ministry of Paul which cannot be properly fitted into the narrative of the book of Acts, whereas II Timothy reflects the atmosphere of imprisonment awaiting final execution. In the early stages of these last events Paul seems confident of his release and looks forward to a continued ministry, whereas, in his last letter to Timothy he accepts the fact that he has "finished his course" and inevitable execution awaits him. Most writers agree that during the Roman imprisonment Paul penned the letters of Ephesians, Colossians, Philemon, and Philippians, and that he was eventually released and once more traveled throughout the empire preaching Christ, perhaps as far west as Spain, before his final arrest and martyrdom in Rome. It is not likely that Luke, who so carefully narrates the exciting experiences of Paul's encounter with worldly kings, would have omitted his appearance before Caesar had such already taken place at the time of the writing of this book. It would appear then that the narrative ends as it does because it had caught up with history. Luke has brought us up to the most contemporary point in the apostle's life at this time. The narrative is closed and the message is sent off to the church, who shall forever be grateful, that a sovereign God was pleased to send into Paul's company one so capable and prepared under the hand of grace to recount in such accurate historic detail the events of the greatest servant of Christ in the history of the church. The unfinished ending of the Acts of the Apostles does not conclude beside the Tiber River, but in reality continues on in our own day and time as the living Lord of the church continues to build His church, against which the gates of hell shall not prevail! Hallelujah!

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- *Alexander, J. A. A Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. London: Banner of Truth, reprint of 1857 ed.
Baumgarten, M. The Acts of the Apostles or the History of the Church in the Apostolic Age. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1854.
- *Blaklock, E. Acts of the Apostles. In Tyndale New Testament Commentary. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1959.
- *Bruce, F. F. The Acts of the Apostles. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1951. (Based on Greek text.)
- *_____ Commentary on the Book of Acts. In New International Commentary. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1954.
- *Carter, C. and R. Earle. The Acts of the Apostles. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1959.
Erdman, C. The Acts. Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1919.
Foakes-Jackson, F. J. and K. Lake. The Beginnings of Christianity. 5 vols. London: Macmillan, 1920-1933.
Gloag, P. A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1870.
Hackett, H. B. A Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1851.
- *Jensen, I. Acts: An Inductive Study. Chicago: Moody Press, 1968.
Kent, H. A. From Jerusalem to Rome: Studies in the Book of Acts. Grand Rapids: Baker, 1972.
Ladd, G. E. Acts In Wycliffe Bible Commentary. Chicago: Moody Press, 1962.
Lindsay, T. The Acts of the Apostles. 2 vols. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1884.
Lumby, J. The Acts of the Apostles. In Cambridge Greek Testament. Cambridge: University Press, 1899.
- *Morgan, G. C. The Acts of the Apostles. New York: Revell, 1924.
Rackham, R. The Acts of the Apostles. In the Westminster Commentaries. New York: Macmillan, 1901.
Ramsay, W. Pictures of the Apostolic Church: Studies in the Book of Acts. Grand Rapids: Baker, reprint of 1910 ed.
Ridderbos, H. The Speeches of Peter in the Acts of the Apostles. London: Tyndale Press, 1962.
- *Scroggie, W. G. The Acts of the Apostles. London: Marshall, Morgan, Scott, 1931.
Thomas, W. H. G. Outline Studies in the Acts of the Apostles. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1956.,

The Epistle To The ROMANS

INTRODUCTION

No other portion of Holy Scripture so completely sets forth the great doctrines of the Christian faith as does Paul's Epistle to the Romans. No other product of the pen has ever more powerfully confronted the mind of man with the great truths of God. All of man's alibis, all of his pretenses, all of his attempts at self-justification are mightily struck down by the truths of this book. In this, his magnum opus, every argument which man can muster against the claims of God are thoroughly demolished with unanswerable logic by the Apostle Paul.

Romans has rightly been called "the Constitution of Christianity," "the Christian Manifesto," "the Cathedral of the Christian Faith." There is nowhere to be found a more complete compendium of Christian doctrine. Herein are recorded the doctrines of justification, sanctification, divine election, condemnation, the perseverance of the saints, total depravity, the last judgment, the fall of man, the revelation of God in nature, the final restoration of the Jews, and many more. This epistle stands at the head of Paul's epistles as the brazen altar did before the Holy Place. You could not enter the tabernacle until you passed the brazen altar. Likewise, you cannot enter the great doctrinal portions of the New Testament without first passing Romans. It is the gateway to New Testament truth. It is basic training for the Christian. By the Holy Spirit of God, it is the masterpiece of Paul.

The Church at Rome. As the capital of the empire, Rome was the largest and most important city in the first-century world. Located about fifteen miles from the Mediterranean Sea, Rome was a teeming metropolis. In 1941 an inscription was discovered at Ostia which indicated that in A.D. 14 the city had a population of 4,100,000 (see Jack Finegan, Light From the Ancient Past, p. 288).

It is impossible to determine with great certainty who founded the church of this great metropolis. There are, however, several contenders for this honor who can be eliminated. First, it is evident that Paul did not establish the Roman church. Romans 1:10-11, 13, 15 all make reference to the fact that Paul had never been to Rome at the writing of this epistle. He obviously could not have founded the church there. Secondly, Peter must be ruled out as well. The view of the present Roman church, which adamantly holds to Petrine founding of the church in Rome, is based on an erroneous statement of Eusebius in his Ecclesiastical History, Book II, Chapter 14. This church historian inaccurately records that Peter went to Rome during the second year of the reign of the Roman Emperor Claudius to encounter the impostor Simon Magus, the sorcerer who tried to buy the power of the Holy Spirit (Acts 8:18-19). The second year of the reign of Claudius would have been A.D. 42. However, Peter was a pillar in the church of Jerusalem, not Rome (Gal 2:9). He is frequently mentioned as being active in Jerusalem (Acts 9). He was certainly in Jerusalem up until and through the Council of Jerusalem (Acts 15). Since the Council of Jerusalem can be dated A.D. 49, it would have been highly unlikely for Peter to be in residence in Rome earlier than that.

Besides, in the salutation of the last chapter of Romans, Paul salutes twenty-seven individuals by name. If Peter was bishop of the church by that time, why did Paul not mention his name as well? Also, Luke has been demonstrated to be the most accurate historian of the first century A.D. (see Sir Wm. Ramsay, St. Paul the Traveller and the Roman Citizen, pp. 1-10). If Peter, as prominent as he was, had founded the church at Rome, how could Luke have overlooked such an important fact in recording the history of the early church in Acts? In addition, in Romans 15:20 Paul writes, "Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation." If Peter had founded the church at Rome, why was Paul so anxious to preach there? (Rom 1:15). These considerations would make it appear impossible that Peter established the Roman church.

If neither Paul nor Peter established this church, then who did? Two possibilities exist. The first arises from those present at the Day of Pentecost. Acts 2:9-11 mentions that among those in Jerusalem on that eventful day were "strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes." It is quite possible that believing Jews carried their new faith and the message of the gospel back to the imperial city and founded the church there. Another possibility is that families from Pauline churches in the East settled in Rome and, discovering the faith of each other, gathered together to worship independently of the Jewish synagogues. Either way, the church at Rome apparently owed its origin to the migration of Christians from the eastern part of the empire who were converted through their contact with the gospel there.

It is generally accepted that when Paul wrote Romans there was a church of considerable size at Rome. The contents of this epistle make it evident that the Roman church was comprised of both Jews and Gentiles. There was a Jewish community in Rome as early as the second century B.C. It was greatly enlarged by Pompey's conquest of Judaea in 63 B.C. when Jewish prisoners-of-war marched in his grand procession. Cicero makes reference to the size and influence of the Jewish colony in Rome in 59 B.C. (Pro Flacco 66). In A.D. 19 the Jews of Rome were expelled from the city by a decree of Emperor Tiberius. Another mass expulsion took place in the reign of Emperor Claudius (A.D. 41-54). This expulsion caused Aquila and Priscilla to migrate to Corinth where they encountered Paul

ROMANS

(Acts 18:2). But the effects of this expulsion order were temporary, for less than three years after the death of Claudius, Paul wrote of the Jewish Christians in Rome, speaking of their faith as a matter of common knowledge. The original nucleus of the church must have been Jewish.

However, the Gentile element in the Roman church was predominant at the time of writing. Even though Paul addressed the Jews in 4:1 when he spoke of Abraham as "our father, as pertaining to the flesh," there are many direct references to the Gentiles. In his introduction Paul spoke of "obedience to the faith among all nations" (1:5). Paul desired fruit among the Romans, "even as among other Gentiles" (1:13). After he reviewed God's dealings with Israel in chapters 9-11, it is to the Gentiles that Paul gives concluding admonitions (11:13). Later when he wrote to the Philipians from Rome, Paul intimated that it was among the Gentiles that the gospel had chiefly taken hold in Rome (Phil 1:13; 4:22). The church which had begun in Jewish hearts had taken on a decidedly Gentile tone.

Place of writing. The contents of the Epistle to the Romans indicate that it was written from Corinth on Paul's third missionary journey. The events of this epistle fit perfectly into the chronology of Acts 20:1-5. Paul's eastern journeys were over; his face was set toward the West (Rom 15:23-24; Acts 19:21). At this time Paul was heading to Jerusalem with the collection for the poor (Rom 15:24-27). This he did at the close of his three months' visit to Corinth (Acts 24:17). This collection was emphasized in his Epistles to the Corinthians (I Cor 16:1-4; II Cor 8:9). Romans must have been written about the same time as the Corinthian epistles, only a bit later. When he wrote the epistle, Paul mentioned that with him were Timothy, Sosipater, Gaius, and Erastus (Rom 16:21-23). Timothy, Sosipater (Sopater), and Gaius were all mentioned as being with Paul in Corinth during his three months' visit (Acts 20:4). By cross-referencing we note that those mentioned in Romans were the same men who were with Paul at Corinth and it was from there that he wrote the Epistle to the Romans.

Date of writing. It is possible to pinpoint the date of writing even further than simply Paul's three-month stay at Corinth. The absence of defensive tactics by Paul and the tranquil tone of the epistle suggest that it was written toward the end of his stay in Corinth, after the troubles at Corinth had been quieted. Since all navigation on the Mediterranean ceased between the middle of November and the middle of March, the plans of Phoebe to travel to Rome would hardly have been made before the spring. Thus it is likely that the date of the Roman epistle was the spring of A.D. 57, although estimations range from A.D. 56-58.

Purpose of writing. During the decade A.D. 47-57 Paul had spent most of his time intensively evangelizing the territories which border the Aegean Sea and planting churches throughout Asia Minor and Greece. His eastern campaign was now concluded, but his task was by no means complete. During the winter of A.D. 56-57, which he spent at the house of his Corinthian friend Gaius, he apprehensively looked forward to an immediate journey to Jerusalem where he hoped the gift he bore from the gentile churches to the poor Jewish saints at Jerusalem would help salve the wounds of controversy and strengthen the bonds between the mother church and the churches of the Gentiles. Once this mission was complete, Paul could continue his dream to labor where no man had labored and build where no man had built. His choice was Spain, the oldest Roman colony in the West. But a journey to Spain would afford opportunity to realize another lifelong ambition, to visit Rome and spend some time with the believers there.

The purpose of his epistle to these Roman believers was as follows: (1) To enlist the cooperation and support of the church at Rome for the inauguration of his missionary campaign in the West. Paul realized the strategic and political importance of this city. He needed the assistance of the believers of Rome to launch him into missionary activity in the West as the church at Antioch had done in the East. (2) Paul also wanted to enlist the prayer support of the Roman Christians for his forthcoming venture at Jerusalem (15:30-33). He was concerned about the outcome of his journey there and rightly so. (3) Paul was emphatic in his claim to be the apostle to the Gentiles. Since Rome was the capital of the gentile world it was entirely appropriate that he visit the church there. (4) Paul knew that the Roman church had come into existence without the authoritative leadership of an apostle of the Lord. Thus Paul wanted to add validity to their existence by instructing them in the faith through his epistle. (5) Paul desired to deposit a compendium of theological truth and the capital city of the empire was the natural place for him to do so. Besides, Paul was apprehensive about the immediate trip to Jerusalem and perhaps the Epistle to the Romans would be his final opportunity to draft a theology of the Christian faith in a written, changeless form. As Adam W. Miller says, "He bequeaths to them in the form of the Epistle the gospel that he would preach to them, should he be permitted to reach there, and if not, they have his letter to read and refer to again and again" (Adam W. Miller, An Introduction to the New Testament, p. 209). Paul certainly fulfilled these purposes. This epistle has proved to be one of the bulwarks of evangelical Christianity.

Authorship. That Paul was the author of the Epistle to the Romans is indisputable and universally acknowledged. On internal grounds, Paul claims to be the author (1:1). The writer makes personal references which can only apply to Paul (cf. 11:13; 15:15-20). The style, argument, and theology are all Pauline. On external grounds quotations from this epistle are found in Clement of Rome, Ignatius, Justin Martyr, Polycarp, Hippolytus, Marcion, the Muratorian Canon, and the Old Latin and Syriac Versions. Romans was recognized as Pauline and a canonical writing since the time of Irenaeus, A.D. 130-202.

Although Pauline authorship is indisputable, some critics have questioned the authenticity of chapters 15 and 16. It seems certain that Marcion did not include the last two chapters in his canon. There is also evidence that the early Latin Version ended the epistle with chapter 14 and the doxology of 16:25-27. However, there is no extant Greek manuscript which omits these chapters.

These two chapters have been assaulted basically on three grounds. Critics charge: (1) The large number of personal greetings in chapter 16 is improbable if Paul had never visited Rome; (2) the commendation of Phoebe was not appropriate to a church Paul had never met; and (3) the suitability of 15:33 as an ending to the epistle makes the addition of chapter 16 unlikely. These criticisms, however, are weak and can be otherwise explained. The great Roman system of roads would have made it easy for Paul to have met the people mentioned in chapter 16 or to have known them before they moved to Rome. Since Paul was well enough known to the church at Rome to have written an epistle to them, he was well enough known to have commended Phoebe to them. And, although 15:33 does make an appropriate ending, nevertheless its style is unparalleled in all the Pauline Epistles. The word "grace" occurs in each of Paul's benedictions except 15:33 (cf. Rom 16:24; I Cor 16:23; II Cor 13:14; Gal 6:18; Eph 6:24; Phil 4:23; Col 4:18; I Thess 5:28; II Thess 3:18; I Tim 6:21; II Tim 4:22; Tit 3:15; Phm 25). Hence, there is no reason not to accept all sixteen chapters of the Epistle to the Romans as authentically Pauline.

The importance of Romans. It is likely that the importance of the Epistle to the Romans cannot be overstated. In the summer of A.D. 386 Aurelius Augustinus, a native of Tagaste in North Africa and Professor of Rhetoric at Milan, was on the brink of beginning a new life. Taking up his scroll he read, "Not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof" (Rom 13:13-14). "No further would I read," he said, "nor had I any need; instantly, at the end of this sentence, a clear light flooded my heart and all the darkness of doubt vanished away" (Confessions viii. 29). Such was the conversion experience of St. Augustine.

In November, 1515, an Augustinian monk and Professor of Sacred Theology at the University of Wittenberg, Germany, began to expound this epistle to his students. As he prepared his lectures, he became more and more convinced that the just shall live by faith. "I greatly longed to understand Paul's Epistle to the Romans," he wrote, "and nothing stood in the way but that one expression,

'the righteousness of God.' . . . Night and day I pondered until . . . I grasped the truth that the righteousness of God is that righteousness whereby, through grace and sheer mercy, he justifies us by faith. Thereupon I felt myself to be reborn . . ." (Luther's Works, Weimar edition, Vol. 54, pp. 179 ff.). Through the reading of this epistle, Martin Luther was born into the family of God.

On the evening of May 24, 1738, John Wesley unwillingly attended a society meeting at Aldersgate Street where someone was reading Luther's Preface to the Epistle to the Romans. Wesley wrote in his journal, "About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for my salvation; and an assurance was given me that he had taken my sins away, even mine; and saved me from the law of sin and death" (Works, 1872, Vol. I, p. 103). This event, more than any other, launched the Evangelical Revival of the eighteenth century.

The great Swiss Reformer John Calvin said of this epistle, "When any one understands this Epistle, he has a passage opened to him to the understanding of the whole Scriptures." James I. Packer, twentieth-century theologian, comments that "there is one book in the New Testament which links up with almost everything that the Bible contains: that is the Epistle to the Romans. . . . From the vantage-point given by Romans, the whole landscape of the Bible is open to view, and the broad relation of the parts to the whole becomes plain. The study of Romans is the fittest starting-point for biblical interpretation and theology" (James I. Packer, Fundamentalism and the Word of God, pp. 106ff.).

In his commentary on Romans the well-known Greek scholar Frederic Godet observed that "The Reformation was undoubtedly the work of the Epistle to the Romans, as well as of that to the Galatians; and the probability is that every great spiritual revival in the church will be connected as effect and cause with a deeper understanding of this book." One cannot say what might happen if Christians undertake an intensive study of this epistle. What happened to Augustine, Luther, Calvin, and Wesley, which left a mark on the world, could happen to us today. So, let the reader beware. Do not begin a serious study of this epistle unless you are willing to bear the consequences. Reading through Romans repeatedly results in revival.

OUTLINE

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| I. Introduction. 1:1-17. A. Salutation to the Romans. 1:1-7. B. Expression of Personal Feelings. 1:8-15. C. Statement of the Theme. 1:16-17. II. The Righteousness of God Needed. 1:18-3:20. A. The Need of the Heathen. 1:18-32. | 1. The heathen have clearly seen God. 1:18-20. 2. The heathen have clearly rejected God. 1:21-23. 3. The heathen have clearly become reprobate. 1:24-32. |
|---|---|

ROMANS

- B. The Need of the Moralist. 2:1-16.
    - 1. Condemned by his own judgment. 2:2:1.
    - 2. Condemned according to truth. 2:2-5.
    - 3. Condemned according to works. 2:6-10.
    - 4. Condemned without respect of persons. 2:11-16.
  - C. The Need of the Jew. 2:17-3:8.
    - 1. His law cannot make him righteous. 2:17-24.
    - 2. His circumcision cannot make him righteous. 2:25-27.
    - 3. His birth cannot make him righteous. 2:28-29.
    - 4. His arguments cannot make him righteous. 3:1-8.
  - D. The Need of the Whole World. 3:9-20.
    - 1. The charge against the whole world. 3:9.
    - 2. The indictment against the whole world. 3:10-18.
    - 3. The defense on behalf of the whole world. 3:19a.
    - 4. The verdict against the whole world. 3:19b-20.
- III. The Righteousness of God Provided. 3:21-8:39.
- A. The Provision for Justification. 3:21-5:21.
    - 1. Justification is by faith alone. 3:21-31.
    - 2. Justification is illustrated in the Old Testament. 4:1-25.
    - 3. Justification brings blessings to its recipients. 5:1-11.
    - 4. Justification is imputed to us as was sin. 5:12-21.
  - B. The Provision for Sanctification. 6:1-7:25.
    - 1. Sanctification and the principle of sin. 6:1-14.
    - 2. Sanctification and the practice of sin. 6:15-23.
    - 3. Sanctification and the law. 7:1-14.
    - 4. Sanctification and the conflict within. 7:15-25.
  - C. The Provision for Assurance. 8:1-39.
    - 1. The assurance of the righteousness of God. 8:1-4.
    - 2. The assurance of the indwelling Spirit of God. 8:5-13.
    - 3. The assurance of eternal heirship. 8:14-25.
    - 4. The assurance of present intercession. 8:26-27.
    - 5. The assurance of the eternal purpose of God. 8:28-34.
    - 6. The assurance of the eternal presence of God. 8:35-39.
- IV. The Righteousness of God Exemplified. 9:1-11:36.
- A. Righteousness Exemplified in Divine Sovereignty. 9:1-33.
    - 1. Sovereignty exhibited in Israel's identity. 9:1-8.
    - 2. Sovereignty exhibited in God's personal choices. 9:9-13.
    - 3. Sovereignty exhibited in God's powerful will. 9:14-24.
    - 4. Sovereignty exhibited in Israel's partial blindness. 9:25-33.
  - B. Righteousness Exemplified in Human Responsibility. 10:1-21.
    - 1. Nearness of the gospel: opportunity for responsibility. 10:1-10.
    - 2. Offer of the gospel: ground for responsibility. 10:11-15.
    - 3. Disobedience to the gospel: failure of responsibility. 10:16-21.
  - C. Righteousness Exemplified in Israel's Future. 11:1-36.
    - 1. Israel's rejection leaves a remnant. 11:1-10.
    - 2. Israel's rejection is not permanent. 11:11-24.
    - 3. Israel's restoration is prophesied. 11:25-32.
    - 4. Israel's restoration evokes praise. 11:33-36.
  - V. The Righteousness of God Enacted. 12:1-15:13.
    - A. Righteousness Produces a Life of Transformation. 12:1-21.
      - 1. Transformation exhibited in humility. 12:1-8.
      - 2. Transformation exhibited in love of the brethren. 12:9-16.
      - 3. Transformation exhibited in honor before the world. 12:17-21.
    - B. Righteousness Produces a Life of Subjection. 13:1-14.
      - 1. Subjection to the state. 13:1-7.
      - 2. Subjection to the citizens of the state. 13:8-10.
      - 3. Subjection to the timetable of God. 13:11-14.
    - C. Righteousness Produces a Life of Consideration. 14:1-15:13.
      - 1. Consideration for a brother weak in the faith. 14:1-13.
      - 2. Consideration for our neighbor. 14:14-23.
      - 3. Consideration as we have Christ as example. 15:1-13.
  - VI. Conclusion. 15:14-16:27.
    - A. The Presentation of Personal Feelings. 15:14-33.
      - 1. Explanation for writing. 15:14-16.
      - 2. Vindication for writing. 15:17-21.
      - 3. Paul's plans following the writing. 15:22-29.
      - 4. Paul's plea for prayers on his behalf. 15:30-33.
    - B. The Presentation of Personal Greetings. 16:1-23.
      - 1. Commendation of Phoebe. 16:1-2.
      - 2. Greetings for friends in Rome. 16:3-16.
      - 3. Warnings to friends in Rome. 16:17-20.
      - 4. Greetings from friends with Paul. 16:21-23.
    - C. The Concluding Doxology. 16:24-27.
      - 1. The worthy recipient of praise. 16:24.
      - 2. The ascription of praise. 16:25-26.
      - 3. The benediction. 16:27.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-17.

A. Salutation to the Romans. 1:1-7.

The epistolary form which Paul uses is thoroughly consistent with other authors of the New Testament era. Paul begins each of his epistles with his own name, gives his salutation, adds a note of thanksgiving for his readers (Galatians is the only exception) and then, in epistles dealing with theological problems, he launches into a doctrinal section followed by a practical section. Finally, personal greetings and an autograph conclude his letters. The basic form does not essentially vary from epistle to epistle.

1:1. Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle. Paul calls himself a servant (Gr doulos, bondsman) of Jesus Christ. In his mind, since a Roman slave was answerable only to his master, Paul was not just servant to the Lord but slave as well and answerable only to Him (I Cor 4:1-4). In addition, he was a "called" apostle. Paul claimed apostleship on at least four grounds: (1) he was a chosen vessel of God (Acts 9:15); (2) he was personally commissioned by Christ (Acts 9:6); (3) he had actually seen the risen Lord (I Cor 9:1-2); and (4) he was the recipient of divine revelation (Gal 1:10-12, 16-17).

Separated unto the gospel of God. Paul was set apart for the ministry of the gospel long before the Damascus road experience (Gal 1:15). With the pedigree of Paul (Phil 3:5-6), he would have made an excellent minister to his people, the Jews. But in the providence of God, Paul was separated unto the gospel of God as an apostle to the Gentiles (Acts 9:15). Thus a disastrous schism between the Jewish and gentile factions of the early church was avoided through the unique ministry of Paul.

2-3. With the mention of the gospel (Gr euangelion) of God, the apostle begins an explanation of the person of that gospel, Jesus Christ. In the AV the first sentence of Romans includes one hundred twenty-six words and encompasses seven verses. We can proceed directly from verse 1 to verse 7 without losing Paul's train of thought. But the mere mention of the gospel of God prompts him to include the interlude of verses 2 through 6 in which he describes this gospel as that Which he had promised afore by his prophets in the holy scriptures. The gospel was not an innovation but had been preannounced by the Old Testament prophets from Genesis 3:15 to Malachi 4:2. By quoting sixty-one times from the Old Testament, Paul indicated to the Jews that their Scriptures were really speaking of Jesus Christ. Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord expresses the subject of the gospel. The gospel is not about Jesus Christ, the gospel is Jesus Christ. Which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh. The Davidic descent of Jesus Christ was the fulfillment of the promise that one from the chosen line would sit on the throne of David forever (II Sam 7:13; Jer 33:17).

4. And declared to be the Son of God with power. Notice that although Jesus Christ was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, He was not made the Son of God. The word rendered declared (Gr horizō) has the meaning of "appointed" or "marked out by unmistakable signs." It is used in Acts 10:42; 17:31 of Christ's appointment as Judge. Christ was not made but eternally is the Son of God. This fact graphically and unmistakably was revealed to the world according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead. There is an obvious antithesis between according to the flesh and according to the spirit. Here is a distinction between the two states of Christ's humiliation and His exaltation. Christ's humiliation came when He voluntarily was made in the likeness of men (Phil 2:7) and

PAUL, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God,

2 (Which he had promised afore by his prophets in the holy scriptures.)

3 Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh;

4 And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead:

5 By whom we have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith among all nations, for his name:

6 Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ:

7 To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints: Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

8 First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world.

9 For God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of his Son, that without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers;

10 Making request, if by any means now at length I might have a prosperous journey by the will of God to come unto you.

11 For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established;

12 That is, that I may be comforted together with you by the mutual faith both of you and me.

13 Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come unto you, (but was let hitherto,) that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other Gentiles.

His exaltation when He was resurrected by the Holy Spirit of God.

5-6. Grace and apostleship. Probably better translated “grace of apostleship,” Paul regards his calling as a heavenly gift. The purpose of his apostleship is for obedience to the faith among all nations, for his name. Paul wants to bring the nations of the world, both Jew and Gentile, into obedience to the faith (i.e., the body of doctrine which he teaches). Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ. The expression the called is a favorite one of the apostle to indicate those who have trusted the Lord Jesus as Saviour (cf. 8:28).

7. To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints. Sainthood is not to be identified with the practice of canonization which later arose out of the Roman church. The saint is one called of God and “holy,” that is (Heb quadosh) set apart to God. The saints of Rome were beloved of God, which marks them out as the undeserving yet grateful recipients of God’s love, Grace to you and peace. One of the interesting features of the Pauline style is that in every one of the Pauline Epistles these two words appear together. Grace and peace are never separated by Paul (cf. Rom 1:7; I Cor 1:2; II Cor 1:2; Gal 1:3; Eph 1:2; Phil 1:2; Col 1:2; I Thess 1:1; II Thess 1:2; I Tim 1:2; II Tim 1:2; Tit 1:4; and Phm 3). The reason is that Paul, a Hebrew of the Hebrews but the apostle to the Gentiles, was the bridge between the Jews and Gentiles of the first-century church. Grace is the typical Greek greeting (charis) whereas peace is the usual Hebrew greeting (shalom). Paul always uses both to bind Jews and Gentiles together in the Lord.

B. Expression of Personal Feelings. 1:8-15.

8. Your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world. So strong was the faith of these Roman believers that, as the church of the Thessalonians (I Thess 1:8), Paul speaks of it in world-wide terms. The expression throughout the whole world is the common one for “everywhere.”

9. Whom I serve with my spirit. Without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers. Paul’s prayer life is intertwined with his life of service. The word the apostle uses for service (Gr latruō) is that of the function of a priest in the Temple and is very frequently used by Paul to mean worship (cf. Phil 3:3; II Tim 1:3). A great deal of Paul’s priestly service to the Lord was his regular program of intercessory prayer on the behalf of other believers (cf. Eph 1:16; Phil 1:3; Col 1:3; I Thess 1:2; II Tim 1:3; Phm 4).

10-13. Paul now states his purpose in wanting to come to Rome. He says, For I long to see you (in current idiom, “I am homesick for you”). This deep longing of Paul to be with the Roman believers arises out of three reasons. First, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift. Paul wants to be more than a blessing to them, he wants to build them up in the most holy faith and explain to them more fully what it means to be “in Christ Jesus.” Knowing that this local church had not had the apostolic stamp of approval placed on it, Paul wishes to visit them to do so. Secondly, Paul desires the Romans to reciprocate, that I may be comforted together with you. It has been the lifelong desire of the apostle to preach the gospel in Spain where no man had laid a foundation. Rome was to be a stopover for that journey. Paul would need lodging, food, and Christian fellowship. He desires the Roman believers to provide these for him. Finally, verse 13 indicates that Paul’s desire is not only to evangelize Spain but also the capital of the Gentile world. He says, that I might have some fruit among you also. An evangelist at heart, Paul does not look to Rome simply as a launching pad for further evangelistic effort but as a needy field itself.

Even as among other Gentiles would seem to indicate that 14 I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise.

although the nucleus of the Roman church was originally Jewish, it is now predominantly a Gentile church.

14. I am debtor. Paul views himself as a debtor to the whole world. He has been placed in debt by the love of Jesus Christ (II Cor 5:14). The Pauline concept of Christian service is that each believer is deeply in debt. It is probably this same concept that inspired Isaac Watts to pen the words of the hymn "At the Cross" when he said, "But drops of grief can ne'er repay the debt of love I owe. Here, Lord, I give myself away, 'tis all that I can do." Paul felt he had a responsibility to give nothing less than himself to the propagation of the gospel by which he was saved.

To the Greeks, and to the Barbarians. In the Jewish mind, there were but Jews and heathen; in the Greek mind there were Greeks and barbarians; but in God's mind there are but the saved and the lost (I Jn 5:12). From the golden age of Athens under Pericles in the fifth century B.C. until the decline of the empire, Greece was more highly civilized and educated than any other society of its time. However, when Paul contrasted the Greek with the barbarian, it is evident that he included the Romans with the Greeks. Rome was heir to Greek culture and learning. Most people looked upon Rome as a militarized extension of the Grecian Empire. This is not to say that the Romans had no culture of their own, but that it was successfully synthesized with the Grecian so as to form a new culture, the Graeco-Roman. The Roman orator-author Cicero (106-43 B.C.) places Greece and Rome in the same category in his treatise De Finis, On Ends. He says, "not only Greece and Italy, but also every foreign country." Therefore, Paul can readily say to the Romans that he is debtor both to the Greeks (Gr Hellenes), including the Romans, and the less civilized barbarians (Gr barbaroi).

15. I am ready to preach. This expression appears to be the middle statement of a trilogy of three first-person statements concerning Paul's preaching of the gospel of Christ. The first segment is I am debtor. The third statement is I am not ashamed.

All of us are debtors to Christ. All of us should be unashamed of the gospel of Christ. But not all are ready to preach that gospel. Paul was not only able and willing, but he was ready to preach as well. He was a clean vessel, not just a chosen vessel. He was ready to be used of God. Paul was like the old country preacher who, when asked how he prepared his Sunday sermon, said, "I read myself full, think myself clear, pray myself hot, and let myself go." Many believers are not ready to be let go because they are not read full, clear-minded about Christian doctrine, or prayed up. Paul was ready to be "let go" and sent to Rome by any means.

C. Statement of the Theme. 1:16-17.

16. For I am not ashamed of the gospel. In stating the theme of the gospel as the good news that Christ died for our sins, Paul makes a bold claim that he is not ashamed of that news. He may have had our Lord's warning in the back of his mind (Lk 9:26). Someone might well ask why Paul could have been ashamed of the gospel. Perhaps he would be ashamed to spread the gospel because of the fierce persecution for those who had come to believe in this message. As a Jew, Paul could have been ashamed of the gospel because the Jews abhorred it as subverting the law. As an educated man he might have been ashamed because to the wise Greek the gospel was sheer foolishness. He may have been ashamed of the gospel of Christ because, by the pagans, Christians were branded as atheists, a brand no Pharisee could tolerate. This atheism was not a theoretical denial of the existence of the gods (Gr asebeia), but was a practical refusal to recognize pagan deities as truly God (Gr

15 So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also.

16 For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.

atheos). For those whom the Romans considered to be “Christian atheists,” the consequences were severe, perhaps forced labor in mines or even capital punishment.

Although for these and other reasons Paul could have been ashamed of the gospel of Christ, there is never a hint in the Pauline corpus that he ever was ashamed. Quite the contrary (cf. Rom 9:33; 10:11; II Tim 1:8, 11-12, 16). It is the power of God unto salvation. Paul now gives the reason why he is not ashamed of the gospel of Christ. It is the power of God, the great and admirable mystery which has been hidden with God from before the foundation of the world. The gospel, through the agency of the Holy Spirit of God, does what no amount of mere human reasoning or argumentation can do. The gospel compels men to face the reality of their own sin and guilt, the inevitability of divine judgment, and the need for a perfect substitute to make atonement for sin, if man is to survive at all. The gospel is the dynamite (Gr dinamis) which blasts away self-complacency, self-delusion, and sinful self-reliance. This nothing else can do, for nothing else is in itself the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

To the Jew first. Paul has deliberately proclaimed that the gospel is for everyone. He did so because there were many Jewish believers who thought the gospel was not for the heathen, the Gentile. Paul says no. The gospel is for all, it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone, without distinction of age, sex, race, or condition. But faith is the key to receiving the gospel and the gospel is to be proclaimed first to the Jew.

From the days of Abraham the Jews have always been highly distinguished from all the rest of the world in many and great divine privileges. They are the royal family of the human race. They are the rightful heirs to the Promised Land. They are the chosen nation of God. They were given the oracles of God. They had a covenant with Jehovah God. It was through the Jews that Christ Jesus came. Originally the preaching of the gospel was addressed to them exclusively (Mt 10:5-6). During His ministry on earth Jesus Christ was a minister to the circumcision only (Rom 15:8). The spread of the gospel was to begin in Jerusalem, the center of Judaism (Acts 1:8). Paul did not forget that the gospel was to be first directed toward God’s chosen nation, Israel, but the words and also to the Greek indicate that Paul was well aware that the message of the gospel is a universal message, for everyone needs it. It is not for just the Jew or the Roman citizen, it is not just for the wise, but it is for the heathen and the Roman slave as well. The gospel is open to all, it is for everyone, but there is a condition or restriction put on that everyone. That restriction is faith. The gospel is for all who believe. It is efficacious to everyone that believeth.

17 For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith.

17. For therein links verse 17 with verse 16; “for in it,” that is in the gospel, is the rightness of God revealed. This explains why the gospel is the power of God.

The gospel is “dynamite” because through it the righteousness of God is revealed. Righteousness is that aspect of God’s holiness which is seen in His treatment of His creatures. Simply, righteousness is how God treats us. Jesus Christ is our righteousness. He is how God treats us. We are unrighteous, unholy, and unlovely. Yet Christ died for our sins (I Cor 1:30).

How is righteousness obtained? From faith to faith. Righteousness is received by faith in Christ Jesus and is in turn revealed in faithful living. Thus, in answer to the question, “How are the righteous to live?” Paul quotes Habakkuk 2:4, “The just shall live by faith.” This faith implies more than mere acceptance of Christ’s righteousness for salvation. It implies a life style that is characterized by faith and righteous living. It was this truth that excited Martin Luther and initiated the Protestant Reformation (1:18).

II. THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD NEEDED.

1:18-3:20.

A. The Need of the Heathen. 1:18-32.

With the introduction complete, thanksgiving made, and the theme of his epistle stated, Paul now turns to the heart of the doctrinal teaching in Romans. Paul has both good news and bad news for the world. The good news, which will shortly follow, is that God has provided an atonement for our sins. The bad news, which he explores first, is that all men need atonement for their sins. Before you can appreciate the good news, you must know that there is bad news. Before Paul tells us that the gift of God is eternal life, he tells us that the wages of sin is death. Verse 18 begins the groundwork which Paul lays for his case against man's self-righteousness. His aim is to show that the whole world is morally bankrupt, unable to receive a favorable verdict at the judgment bar of God, and desperately in need of divine mercy and pardon.

1. The heathen have clearly seen God. 1:18-20.

18. For the wrath of God is revealed. God's attitude toward the sin of mankind is not one of tolerance. He does not simply hold man accountable for what may be reasonably expected of him in view of man's nature as a sinner. If God did, His holiness and purity would be soiled by complicity with our guilt. God hates man's sin. His wrath is a holy aversion to all that is evil. Wrath is as essential to divine righteousness as love and mercy are. God could not be free from wrath unless He were also free from all concern about His moral universe.

Against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men. Ungodliness has to do with religion, our relation to a sovereign God. Unrighteousness has to do with morality, our relation to our fellowman. Ungodliness is sin against the being of God. Unrighteousness is sin against the will of God. Man is both a religious sinner (he is ungodly) and a moral sinner (he is unrighteous). The unrighteous man lives as if there were no will of God revealed. The ungodly man lives as if there were no God at all. God's wrath is against both.

Who hold the truth in unrighteousness. The word hold (Gr katechō), carries the meaning of "hold down," "keep back," or "suppress." Those who are unrighteous and ungodly restrain the truth of God's righteousness. The meaning of this word is clearly seen in the way it is used in Luke 4:42, "And when it was day, he (Christ) departed and went into a desert place; and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them." Paul contends that the heathen have had the righteousness of God revealed to them, yet they suppress the truth of His righteousness for they are ungodly and unrighteous.

19-20. The apostle now anticipates the question: "If these ungodly men do not have full knowledge of God, are they then really lost?" The key word in Paul's answer is the first word of verse 19, Because. Paul will now present two lines of argument which will prove that the condemnation of the sinner does not rest upon the depth of his knowledge of God but upon what use he makes of that knowledge. That which may be known of God is manifest in them. Paul's first reason that the heathen are lost (or any man who willingly suppresses the knowledge of God) is because of the revelation of God in nature. Man has a sufficient knowledge of God to make him responsible to God. That knowledge arises from the fact that the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen (cf. Ps 19:1). Man's mind is capable of drawing obvious conclusions from effect to cause. To the animals below us the phenomena of nature may just be a spectacle before their eyes, but make no impression on their minds. But to man, they have a language, a communica-

18 For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness;

19 Because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto them.

20 For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse:

21 Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened.

22 Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools,

23 And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things.

24 Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonour their own bodies between themselves:

25 Who changed the truth of God into 344

tion. They awake wonder, awe, a basic idea of God and His righteousness. Even his eternal power and Godhead. Nature does not simply give the impression that God is an abstract principle but a real person, the Supreme Person, transcendent above His creation and not part of it. The testimony of nature alone is sufficient to lead man to an understanding of the personal, righteous nature of God, so that they are without excuse.

2. The heathen have clearly rejected God. 1:21-23.

21-23. Paul's second line of argument is that the heathen are lost because of the revelation of God to the conscience. They glorified him not as God. As if the natural world around us isn't enough, God has planted in the heart of every man the knowledge that there is a righteous God. Though the heathen knew that He was God and deserved to be glorified, they willfully chose not to glorify Him as God. They did not ascribe to His person the holiness, perfection, and sovereignty which are His alone. Neither were thankful. To add injury to insult, the heathen accepted the good things of nature from the hand of God, but were not thankful for them. But became vain in their imaginations. In order to suppress the witness of the ordered structure of the universe, and the innate testimony of the conscience, fallen man had to develop a reasoning process of imagination. This reasoning is described by God as vain because the whole structure of man-made philosophy is devoid of divine truth and therefore invalid. Thus, by suppressing the truth of God and believing their man-made falsehood, they plunged their foolish heart deeper into darkness. When they exalted their human reasoning and paraded their wisdom before their peers, they acted as fools. The foolish heart is not one deficient in intelligence but one deficient in the moral understanding of who God is.

Laboring under the handicap of this extreme deficiency, the heathen changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image. By creating a god suitable to their own fallen conception of deity the heathen have violated the first commandment. They have devised their own concept of divinity and placed it above the one true God. Made like corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things. More than just conceptualizing what they thought God ought to be, the heathen actually created animal-like images of their concept of God. In so doing they violated the second commandment.

The apostle has thus given two reasons why the man without God is lost and deserving of condemnation: (1) because of the revelation of God in nature (vss. 19-20); and (2) because of the revelation of God in their conscience (vss. 21-23). The wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all who suppress the truth of these two witnesses. To the heathen who does not suppress this fundamental light, the Lord Jehovah grants additional enlightenment of His person. But whoever is guilty of suppressing the available truth about God does not receive light unto salvation.

3. The heathen have clearly become reprobate. 1:24-32.

24. Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness. Ungodliness and unrighteousness have a definite terminal point and that is idolatry. The word wherefore indicates that the retribution to follow finds its ground in the antecedent sins and is therefore justifiable. Because the heathen participated in idolatry, God gave them up to uncleanness. As seen by Paul's usage of this term elsewhere (cf. II Cor 12:21; Gal 5:19; Eph 5:3; Col 3:5; I Thess 4:7), uncleanness means sexual aberration by which they would dishonor their own bodies between themselves.

25. Who changed the truth of God into a lie. Suppression of a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.

26 For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature:

27 And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompence of their error which was meet.

28 And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient;

29 Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers,

30 Backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents,

31 Without understanding, covenant breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful:

32 Who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them.

the truth which God gave to the heathen became the basis for their idolatry and thus they worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator. They degraded themselves in that which they worshiped and exalted those things created to a higher position than the One who created them.

26-27. For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections. These vile affections (Gr pathē atimias) were passions of infamy. The apostle goes on to explain that their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature. Sexual perversion always accompanies idolatry. And likewise also the men . . . burned in their lust one toward another; men with men. Homosexuality is likewise the result of idolatry. Although today the world seeks to popularize and legitimize homosexuality, nevertheless it is despicable to God and condemned by Him. Increased homosexuality is a sign of the soon return of the Lord (II Tim 3:2). God never overlooks this blatant misuse of the body and consequently those who have engaged in this perversion receive in themselves that recompence of their error which was meet.

28. God gave them over to a reprobate mind. The word reprobate means “unapproving” or “undiscerning.” Since they had suppressed the truth of God revealed to them, the heathen did not retain God in their knowledge and consequently, for the third time in almost as many verses, the apostle records that God gave them up (or over) to what they wanted all along. When He did so, the results were disastrous. The effects of their abandonment result solely from the corruption of the human heart; this cannot be blamed on God.

29-31. Being filled expresses (by the Greek perfect tense) that the heathen were not simply tainted by the catalogue of sins that follow but were in fact saturated with them. Thus the ugly character traits listed as the result of abandonment by God include: unrighteousness, or injustice (Gr adika) fornication, wickedness (Gr poneria), covetousness (Gr pleonexia, grasping for more than is needed), maliciousness (Gr kakia, intending evil toward others), . . . whisperers, Backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, Without understanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection . . . unmerciful. This gallery of iniquity was not only true of the first-century heathen world but reads much like our newspapers today.

32. Who knowing the judgment of God . . . do the same, . . . have pleasure in them that do them. The heathen world is not unaware of God’s displeasure with these activities. Therefore, fully cognizant of the consequences of their sin, they continue to defy the Lord God of heaven and take great pleasure in keeping company with those who do the same.

Paul’s conclusion is that the heathen are never without a witness to the presence and personality of God. They have the witness of nature and the witness of their own conscience. However, the heathen have deliberately suppressed these witnesses to the truth and have consistently opted for a lie in place of the truth. They have chosen the course of idolatry, which is always accompanied by debauchery. Thus, God has revealed His wrath from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who suppress the truth of God. In addition, God has given them up to idolatry, to passions of infamy, and to an undiscerning and unapproving mind. Are the heathen lost? Yes, the entire heathen world is lost, deserving condemnation, desiring evil, and desperately wicked.

B. The Need of the Moralist. 2:1-16.

1. Condemned by his own judgment. 2:1.

2:1. Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest. In the last chapter Paul painted a picture

CHAPTER 2
THEREFORE thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest:

ROMANS 2:2

for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things.

of the deplorable condition of the heathen. The apostle knew, however, that there would be a whole class of men who would say "amen" to what he had said about the heathen. These were the self-righteous moralists. So Paul expands his argument to show that all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men (1:18) includes the moralist as well as the debauched heathen. The moralist is inexcusable when he judges the heathen for sin but is blind to his own sin. He only condemns himself when he condemns another. For thou that judgest doest the same things. It is obvious that the moral man was not involved in the sexual deviations of the heathen, else Paul could not call him a moral man. But he was inwardly living in an identical manner as the heathen was living outwardly. Perhaps the moral man did not commit adultery, but did he lust? Our Lord put them in the same category (Mt 5:27-28). Maybe the moral man did not steal, but did he covet? Stealing and covetousness are listed together in Mark 7:22. Perchance the moral man did not commit murder, but did he hate? The Bible says if you hate your brother you are guilty of murder (I Jn 3:15). No one dares judge another while he is doing the same thing because he is then condemned by his own judgment.

2. Condemned according to truth. 2:2-5.

2 But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things.

2. The judgment of God is according to truth. When God judges it is always according to truth or in accordance with the facts. The moralist may attempt to hide the facts, but God always exposes them. The searching eye of God always ferrets out the truth.

3 And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?

3-4. And thinkest thou this, O man . . . that thou shalt escape the judgment of God? Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long-suffering. Since the judgment of God is according to truth, it is foolhardy for the moralist to believe that God will judge the heathen and not him. Since he does in his heart what the heathen does in his life, the moralist must withstand the same judgment as the man he condemned. To put ourselves in the position of the moralist would mean to despise God's goodness (Gr chrēstotēs, lit., kindness), forbearance (Gr anochē, the willingness to tolerate the intolerance of others), and long-suffering (Gr makrothymia, patience which forgives until there is no more hope of repentance). The goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance. In judging others, the moralist has completely missed the truth that the purpose of God's goodness is to lead to repentance. It never occurs to the moralist that he personally needs the goodness of God just as the heathen does. He is unaware of his need for repentance.

4 Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and longsuffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?

5. But after thy hardness and impenitent heart. After years of glossing over his personal sin and guilt, the pride of the moralist will not allow him to have a change of mind (Gr metanoia) which is repentance. Thus his pride and sinful heart stockpile the wrath of God so that in the day of wrath, the day of God's righteous judgment, the Lord God will deal as justly with the moral man as he does with the heathen.

3. Condemned according to works. 2:6-10.

6 Who will render to every man according to his deeds:

6. Who will render to every man according to his deeds. When unsaved men appear before the final judgment bar of God, the Great White Throne Judgment, salvation will not be the issue there. This is a judgment to determine the degree of punishment. Thus God will mete out punishment in relation to the evil deeds of the individual. By the same token, at the judgment seat of Christ, where only believers appear, God will reward us according to our deeds.

7 To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life:

7. To them who by patient continuance in well doing. Patient continuance in well doing does not mean that we are saved by doing good. Paul is expressing an eternal truth. Obedience to God does well in every dispensation. When Cain brought his fruit as an offering and God rejected it, God said, "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted?" (Gen 4:7). Obedience to God in bringing the proper sacrifice would have been doing well. Today, in the age of grace, we do well by placing our faith in Christ Jesus as Saviour. Thus faith in Christ is patient continuance in well doing in this age. This is what will bring glory and honor and immortality, eternal life.

8-9. But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth. The moralist is likened to "those who are of contention." This formula is similar to other such expressions as "those who are of the circumcision" (4:12; Tit 1:10); "they which are of faith" (Gal 3:7); "they which are of the law" (4:14). Those who create a spirit of rivalry or factionalism have promised to them, indignation (Gr orgē), wrath (Gr thymos, a sudden outburst of anger), tribulation (Gr thlipsis, affliction), and anguish (Gr stenochōria, distress). As the gospel was promised to the Jew first and also to the Greek, so likewise these fruits of unrighteousness are of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile.

10. But glory, honor, and peace to every man that worketh good. Opposed to the reward of the unrighteous, Paul now indicates that the reward of the righteous is glory, honor, and, instead of immortality as in verse 7, peace. The formula of impartiality is then the same, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile.

4. Condemned without respect of persons. 2:11-16.

11. For there is no respect of persons with God. An eternal truth is that as God deals in condemnation without favoritism, likewise He deals in salvation without favoritism. Respect of persons (Gr prosōpolēmpsia, lit., "lifting the face") simply means partiality (cf. Deut 10:17; II Chr 19:7; Acts 10:34; Gal 2:6; Eph 6:9; Col 3:25; I Pet 1:17). God is impartial because He does not change His pattern "to the Jew first," whether righteousness or unrighteousness is involved.

12-13. Unchecked and unatoned sin leads to perdition whether we are in the law or without the law. If the moralist is to live by the law then not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified. The antithesis between merely hearing the law and doing it is elaborated in James 1:22-25. The doers of the law is an expression also found in the literature of the Dead Sea Scrolls. The moralist (now identified with the Jews, vs. 9) is no better off than the heathen if the moralist has the law but does not keep it. The reason follows in the next verses.

14-16. For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these . . . are a law unto themselves. Although the Gentiles do not possess the Old Testament law, nevertheless they do those things which are contained in the law. This is because of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness. The Gentiles manifested a moral principle at work in their hearts, because when they broke their own ethical code, their conscience (Gr syneidēsis) would prick them and cause them to feel guilt. The result of their guilt, however, was they would excuse themselves by making a defense for their actions. But Jew and Gentile alike must face a day of judgment with God when the secrets of men (Gr ta krypta) are judged by the Lord Jesus Christ according to the truth of the gospel preached by Paul.

C. The Need of the Jew. 2:17-3:8.

1. His law cannot make him righteous. 2:17-24.

17. Behold, thou art called a Jew, and restest in the law. Israelites who remained in Palestine, or who returned to it after the Babylonian captivity, were designated as "Jews," even

8 But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath,

9 Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile;

10 But glory, honour, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile:

11 For there is no respect of persons with God.

12 For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law;

13 (For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.)

14 For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves:

15 Which shew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another;)

16 In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel.

17 Behold, thou art called a Jew, and restest in the law, and makest thy boast of God, though tribes other than Judah were included. Paul calls himself a "Jew" in Acts 21:39 but "an Israelite" in Romans 11:1 and "a Hebrew" in Philippians 3:5. All three names refer to the same people; but in a technical sense "Hebrew" is the racial name, "Israel" is the national name, and "Jew" is the religious name of the sons of Jacob. The Jews rested in the law because it was described as "wisdom and . . . understanding in the sight of the nations" (Deut 4:6). The Jew did not have to travel around the world to study in a distant university. He did not have to rely on the philosophy of the Gentiles. The Jew trusted his law to be all that he needed and the best education he could get. Thus he boasted in the God who gave that law.

18 And knowest his will, and approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law;

18. And knowest his will, and approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law. Because he had received catechetical training in the law as a youth, and rabbinical teaching as a man, the Jew felt confident that he could prove (Gr dokimazō) or discern those things that are more excellent.

19 And art confident that thou thyself art a guide of the blind, a light of them which are in darkness,

20 An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, which hast the form of knowledge and of the truth in the law.

19-20. Confident that he would be saved by his law, the Jew was convinced that he had been made righteous and therefore was able to assume four roles: a guide of the blind (the blind being the Gentile in his unjewish darkness); a light of them which are in darkness (the Gentile needs to be enlightened by the Jew who was enlightened by the law); an instructor of the foolish (because he did not know the law, the Gentile was a fool); a teacher of babes (the Gentile was immature, an object of Jewish disgust).

21 Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?

21-23. There is a touch of sarcasm in Paul's question, Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? The Jews were prepared to teach the heathen Gentiles the commandments of the law, but were themselves breaking these commandments. Dost thou steal? (the eighth commandment), dost thou commit adultery? (the seventh commandment), dost thou commit sacrilege? (lit., "Do you rob temples"), (the second commandment). The Jews were ready to preach morality but their lives did not back up their message. They were stealing from one another, perhaps by collecting an extreme interest; they were committing adultery; they were profaning the house of God by commercialism; and thus Paul asked the biting question, Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law dishonorest thou God? Transgression of the law brings dishonor to God. The Jews claim to have known the law but were silent in claims to have kept it.

22 Thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?

23 Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law dishonorest thou God?

24. For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you. This quotation from Isaiah 52:5 confirms that the inadequacies in the life-styles of the Jews caused the Gentiles to speak lightly of the God of Israel. The Word of God was actually being blasphemed among the Gentiles because of the inconsistency of the Jews. Much the same thing could be said today about hearers of the Word but not doers. The Jews rested in his law, but since he did not keep it, his law could not make him righteous.

24 For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.

2. His circumcision cannot make him righteous. 2:25-27.

25 For circumcision verily profiteth, if thou keep the law: but if thou be a breaker of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision.

25. For circumcision verily profiteth, if thou keep the law. Notice that the apostle did not say "Circumcision verily justifieth." That has never been true. But circumcision is not a meaningless rite if it aids in keeping the law. However, when the Jew does not keep the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision. If the Jew trusts in his circumcision for salvation, and does not keep the law, his circumcision is made void.

26 Therefore if the uncircumcision keep the righteousness of the law, shall not his uncircumcision be counted for circumcision?

26-27. If the uncircumcision keep the righteousness of the law. Now the tables are turned completely. If an uncircumcised Gentile gives his heart to God, and lives in a righteous relationship to the law, he is more pleasing to God than the circumcised Jew who does not. And shall not uncircumcision . . . if it fulfill

27 And shall not uncircumcision which is by nature, if it fulfil the law, judge thee, who by the letter and circumcision dost transgress the law?

28 For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh:

29 But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God.

the law, judge thee . . . ? The sin of the circumcised but unworthy Jew will be graphically demonstrated by the example of the Gentile who, though uncircumcised, nevertheless pleases God. Lack of circumcision would not condemn a Gentile, just as the possession of circumcision would not save the Jew. The key is the law. If the law was broken then the Jew became as helpless as the Gentile. Therefore, the circumcised Jew is in the same pitiful state as the uncircumcised heathen if the Jew has broken the law. Since all the Jews have, Paul's conclusion is that his circumcision cannot save the Jew, for he has broken the law.

3. His birth cannot make him righteous. 2:28-29.

28-29. For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly . . . But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly. Here we see the double sense in which the term "Jew" is used. Frequently people speak of "Christians" as a term in opposition to heathen. In another sense, true believers in the Lord are called Christians. Paul is making the case that not all who are called Jews are truly Jewish. Possession of the law does not make one Jewish. Circumcision does not make one Jewish. Even birth in a Jewish family does not make one Jewish. Paul says that two things are necessary to be truly Jewish: (1) to be born of Abraham through Isaac (that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh); and (2) to be spiritually in tune with Abraham's God (circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit). No one can claim to be Jewish who is not born of Abraham through his son Isaac. But to the requirement of outward circumcision (ancestry from Abraham), Paul adds the requirement of the circumcision of the heart. This spiritual or ethical circumcision is seen throughout the Scriptures, e.g., "uncircumcised lips" (Ex 6:12); "uncircumcised ear" (Jer 6:10); "uncircumcised heart" (Lev 26:41). The Jew who is born after the seed of Abraham through Isaac, yet does not have his heart circumcised in the way that Abraham did, that is, "to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart" (Deut 30:6; see also Jer 4:4), is not truly a Jew. He is a Jew outwardly, but not inwardly. He is born of Abraham, but not born again by the Spirit of God. The only true Jew is one who is a Jew by race, and a believer by God's grace. Thus, birth alone cannot make a Jew righteous.

4. His arguments cannot make him righteous. 3:1-8.

At the beginning of chapter 3 Paul anticipates arguments in rebuttal to his conclusion that neither Israel's law, her circumcision, nor her birth could save her. These theoretical objections are stated in the even-numbered verses and Paul's answer to each objection is stated in the odd-numbered verses.

3:1. What advantage then hath the Jew? If the Jews are condemned along with the heathen, what advantage is there in being the chosen nation of God? Or what profit is there of circumcision? Since circumcision is the sign of Israel's covenant relationship with God, what advantage is that relationship if being Jewish will not save?

2. Much every way. Paul contends that there are many privileges which God has granted to Israel. A list of them is given in chapter 11; it is not necessary for Paul to enumerate them here. Rather, he simply points out one as example of the others. Unto them were committed the oracles of God. One of the chief ancestral privileges of Israel is that they were the custodians of the oracles of God. Acts 7:38 and Hebrews 5:12 mention these oracles, the Old Testament Scriptures. It was a great advantage to the Jew to be singled out by God and entrusted with the reception, inscription, and transmission of the Old Testament Scriptures.

3. Now a second argument is anticipated. Shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? As keepers of the Old Testament, the Jews had in fact failed to comprehend the

CHAPTER 3

WHAT advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision?

2 Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God.

3 For what if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?

4 God forbid: yea, let God be true, but every man a liar; as it is written, That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.

5 But if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? (I speak as a man)

6 God forbid: for then how shall God judge the world?

7 For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto his glory; why yet am I also judged as a sinner?

8 And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) Let us do evil, that good may come? whose damnation is just.

message of the Old Testament, especially the prophetic and messianic passages. The unbelief of the Jews is seen in their rejection of Jesus as Messiah, and consequently they did not believe the oracles of God which they so carefully guarded. The question is, "Shall the unfaithfulness of Israel in this respect alter God's faithfulness?" Paul's answer is a classic.

4. God forbid. This expression (Gr mē genoito) corresponds to the Hebrew chalah which is translated the same in the KJV of Genesis 44:17; Joshua 22:29; 24:16; I Kings 21:3; et al. It is an expression which indicates a recoiling abhorrence, utter shock, and disgust. It has been variously translated as "good heavens, no," "may it not prove to be so," "perish the thought," etc.

Let God be true, but every man a liar establishes a principle which is found throughout this epistle. God does not purpose or will according to extraneous influences but according to what He Himself is. If men prove unfaithful to God's oracles, He is nevertheless faithful in His promises to them. The quotation which follows is from Psalm 51:4 where King David had broken the covenant of God and had found in himself no righteousness or integrity of any kind. Paul quotes this verse in order that his readers may clearly see the difference between the faithfulness and integrity of God and the lack of the same in man.

5-6. A third objection is now theoretically advanced. But if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, what shall we say? This is a clever but illogical argument. It is twisting Scripture to make what is inherently evil appear to be ultimately good. Paul anticipates someone saying, "If my unfaithfulness causes God's faithfulness to be more apparent, is not my sin by contrast enhancing the world's concept of the absolute holiness and faithfulness of God?" And a second question is: Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? Would it not be unjust of God to punish me for contributing to a more pristine picture of His true character?

The expression I speak as a man should not be understood as an absence of divine inspiration in recording these questions, but rather that Paul is using the form of human reasoning to express this inspired truth about God. Since God's justice is not something that may be called into question, Paul indicates that only foolish human reasoning would attempt to do so.

The answer to these questions is an emphatic God forbid. The consequence of this line of reasoning would be to deny God the divine right to judge any man. If God cannot judge men, then who can?

7. For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie; . . . why yet am I also judged as a sinner? Paul had been slandered by the Jews for teaching salvation by grace apart from works. Therefore he uses that situation to theorize a final argument from the Jews. If the doctrine of salvation which Paul preaches is a lie, and the truth is seen in contrast to Paul's teaching, then why is Paul also judged as a sinner? Should not he be considered a saint if his alleged false doctrine more clearly indicated what was true? Paul has turned the tables on the Jews by using their own logic and putting them in an untenable situation. They could not admit that Paul's teachings were true. But if they claimed them to be false, by their own logic, they would have to say that divine good arose out of Paul's doctrine.

8. We be slanderously reported. It was the Jewish argument that Paul was teaching the lie, Let us do evil, that good may come. For those who regarded the practice of religion as merely a matter of keeping the law, Paul's emphasis on justification by faith indeed seemed to make the law and its keeping superfluous. But justification by faith never meant believers could blatantly disregard the precepts of the law. If they did, it is theirs whose damnation is just. Damnation, or better condemnation, is executed on all those who, in light of their unfaithfulness, turn God's faithfulness into lasciviousness and license. This Antinomian philosophy is further condemned in chapter 6:2ff.

God is just in condemning the Jews for they have sinned against Him and that their sin enhances His own righteousness is but a diversion from their own culpability as sinners. The justified man, whether heathen, moralist, or Jew, must never do evil. Arguments to the contrary can never save anyone.

D. The Need of the Whole World. 3:9-20.

Paul has shown that the heathen are lost because, even though they had the witness of both nature and conscience, they suppressed God's truth to them. He has shown also that the moral man is lost because even though he outwardly put on a facade to judge the heathen, inwardly he was guilty of the same sins. Likewise the Jew is lost because he has not kept the law, and neither his circumcision, ancestry, nor arguments can save him from the condemnation of disobedience. Now Paul wraps up his argument and the summation assumes the terminology of the courtroom.

1. The charge against the whole world. 3:9

9 What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin;

9. The Jews enjoyed certain privileges as the elect nation of God, but these privileges did not include special treatment at the judgment bar of God. So to the question, are we better than they?, Paul's answer is No, in no wise. His reason is simple. For we have before proved both Jews and Gentiles, that they are all under sin.

The first step in the judicial procedure is to make an accusation or charge against the offender. This Paul does when he says they are all under sin. The word prove (Gr proaitiaomai) is a combination of two Greek words, pro meaning "before" and aitiaomai meaning "to bring an accusation against" or "press formal charges." Paul has charged the entire world with being innately sinful. If the evidence is sufficient and the charge can be proved, the whole world will be judged guilty before God. Notice he does not say "all have sinned" but that all are under sin. This means they are all under the penalty as well as the power of sin. The apostle has in mind here a very definite contrast between being "under sin" and being "under grace." Romans 6:14-15 speaks of being "under grace" with our sins pardoned and ourselves justified.

2. The indictment against the whole world. 3:10-18.

10 As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one:

10. Next in the judicial procedure is an indictment. Webster defines indictment as "a charge; accusation; specifically, a formal written accusation charging one or more persons with the commission of a crime" (Webster's New World Dictionary). An indictment is then a formal, written charge and every indictment must have at least one count, one specific charge to it. The more serious the crime, the more counts to the indictment. Paul immediately follows this pattern by quoting from a series of Old Testament passages which demonstrate, in no less than fourteen counts, the perversity and depravity of the entire world. As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one. This same theme is seen throughout the Old Testament and is summarized in Psalm 14:1-3. Righteousness is not only the key word in this epistle, it is also the criterion by which sin is judged.

11 There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.

11. There is none that understandeth. Not a verbatim quote, this charge is derived from Psalm 14:2; 53:3. Here understanding is not mental but spiritual. The world is totally lacking in spiritual discernment (Eph 4:18). The natural man may not be mentally deranged, but he is certainly spiritually deranged and incapable of spiritual understanding (I Cor 2:14).

There is none that seeketh after God. In Psalm 53:2-3 David remarked that there is no man who innately seeks after God 12 They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

13 Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips:

14 Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness:

15 Their feet are swift to shed blood:

16 Destruction and misery are in their ways:

17 And the way of peace have they not known:

because man is sinful. When the sinner is drawn by God, he then seeks the Lord Jesus Christ in repentance and confession (Jn 6:44). Because he naturally does not seek the Lord, man gives evidence of being guilty of unrighteousness.

12. They are all gone out of the way. Man has not only “missed the mark,” he has also “perverted his path.” In this quote from the LXX of Psalms 14:3; 53:4, the picture is of a camel caravan crossing the desert which has strayed from the route and cannot return to the proper path. Likewise man has lost his way by deviating from God’s prescribed route of righteousness. They are together become unprofitable is the fifth count of the indictment. Man is unuseful, of no benefit. Like salt that has lost its savor or fruit that has become rotten, so all men are viewed as useless, rotten, corrupted when compared to the righteousness of Christ.

There is none that doeth good, no, not one. Again the written indictment comes from Psalm 14. This means that he can do nothing of spiritual or eternal value. No matter what he does, as far as righteousness is concerned, it is nothing but filthy rags (Isa 64:6).

13. Their throat is an open sepulcher. This seventh count of the indictment is the first one that is specific. Paul addresses himself to the chief outlets through which the sinner can display his sin. He will speak to the sinners’ throats, tongues, lips, and mouths. Paul shows his familiarity with the Old Testament by drawing on King David’s prayer for protection in Psalm 5.

Nothing is more abominable than the stench rising from an open sepulcher. The apostle graphically portrays the conversation of the wicked by likening the filth that arises from their mouths with the stench of the open sepulcher.

With their tongues they have used deceit. The sugared tongue, which is used to butter up the boss, is next listed by Paul as characteristic of sinful men. He indicts the world for the Madison Avenue approach to life which makes something out of nothing and promises what cannot be performed.

The poison of asps is under their lips. This ninth indictment is reminiscent of the final speech of Zophar, one of Job’s critical friends (Job 20:14-16). The poison of the asp was stored in a bag under the lips of the serpent. When he spoke of this deadly poison Paul probably had in mind the Egyptian cobra, naja haje, the reptile used by Pharaoh Tutankhamen as his imperial symbol. Of the evil and violent man David says, “They have sharpened their tongues like a serpent; adders’ poison is under their lips” (Ps 140:3). The natural man’s human speech is likened to this poison.

14. Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness. Psalm 10:7 indicates that man’s mouth, which was created to speak the truth of God and praise Him continually, has been perverted to speaking of Satan and praising him through cursing and bitterness. You do not have to teach a man to curse; it is the common expression of the bitterness within him that is rooted in personal sin.

15. Their feet are swift to shed blood. Paul now turns his attention, not to man’s words, but to his deeds. Quoting from Isaiah 59:7ff., the feet which were created to carry the gospel to the ends of the earth have in every era of history readily carried men violently to commit injustice and war with their fellowman (cf. Prov 1:7-19).

16. Destruction and misery are in their ways. This twelfth charge in the apostle’s indictment lists not only what man is seeking but what he shall certainly receive if he continues in his unrighteous path. Calamity and misery always follow the sinner’s futile search for happiness apart from Jesus Christ (cf. Jas 4:2).

17. And the way of peace have they not known. Unregenerated man can never find peace with his fellowman until peace has been made with his Creator. The United Nations and other peace-oriented agencies are doomed to failure because man is a ferocious animal. The most savage of animals does not destroy his own species to appease his hunger, but man destroys his fellowman for much less. The world is filled with animosity, hatred, terrorists, and murderers. Man will never be at peace with himself until he is at peace with God (Isa 59:8).

18. There is no fear of God before their eyes. Quoted from P'salm 36:1, this final charge is the fountain from which all the others spring. All the characteristics of man, his lack of understanding, his unprofitableness, his lack of peace, etc. stem from the fact that man does not fear God (Ps 36:2). Since man has no spiritual understanding, and the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, man is caught in a vicious circle. Only the external force of the Holy Spirit of God can break the circle of man's ignorance, arrogance, and guilt. Paul presents these fourteen specific, written counts in his indictment against the whole world.

3. The defense on behalf of the whole world. 3:19a.

19a. Having charged the whole world with being under sin, and having listed fourteen counts to his indictment, Paul now moves in the judicial procedure to the defense on behalf of the world. He quickly anticipates the line of argument the Jew will use in his defense. The Jew will say that Paul's description of mankind in the preceding verses does not describe him but the heathen. So Paul makes it clear, what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law. Using law as the entire Old Testament Scriptures, the apostle presses that he was in fact speaking of Jews as well as the heathen for they had received the oracles of God and were bound by them.

Ordinarily, in a civil court, the time of the defense is usually given to flowery speeches, insinuation, discrediting of witnesses, muddling of the issues, etc. But this will not be the case at the judgment bar of God. When the evidence against the universal sinfulness and guilt of man is presented and the opportunity for defense comes, there will be no defense. That every mouth may be stopped. The mouth of the heathen will be stopped. The mouth of the moral man and religious man will be stopped. Even the mouth of the cursing and bitter man will be stopped. A silent world will stand in judgment before the bar of God and neither clever lawyers, plea bargaining, bribing the judge, nor an impassioned appeal will get the sinner off. The famous French infidel, Jean Jacques Rousseau, who refused to marry and sent his illegitimate children to an orphanage, exclaimed: "I will stand before God and defend my conduct!" Bad news for Rousseau. No one will utter a word in his defense, for no one will have a defense before the righteous God.

4. The verdict against the whole world. 3:19b-20.

19b. All that remains in the judicial procedure is the verdict. The charge has been made. The indictment has been read. No defense can be made for there is no supporting case for mankind. The verdict is now ready to be heard. All the world may become guilty before God. The verdict is guilty, the only thing it can be. The word guilty (Gr hypodikos) means to come under judgment. It does not presuppose guilt, but denotes the state of a man who has been justly charged with a crime and is both legally responsible for it and worthy of blame.

20. Therefore. Anytime we see the word "therefore" we ought to ask ourselves what is "therefore" there for, better translated "because." Paul is now coming to the summation of his argument and is about to make an application and draw a conclusion. He began back in chapter 1, verse 18, by proposing that the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men. He has shown that the 18 There is no fear of God before their eyes.

19 Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God.

20 Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin.

righteousness of God is sadly needed in the world. It is needed by the heathen, the moralist, the Jew. The righteousness of God is needed by the whole world. Having given his proposition, and the facts assembled from the Old Testament and present experience, Paul is now ready to draw a conclusion. He begins with therefore or “because.”

By the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight. This free rendering of Psalm 143:2 (cf. Gal 2:16; 3:11) does not have the definite article “the” before law in the original language and thus Paul concludes that there is no law anywhere that can justify any man. The law of the heathen, the law of nature, the law of morality, the law of conscience, the law of Moses, none can justify a man and make him righteous in the sight of God. Even the law of Christ, laid down in the Sermon on the Mount, cannot justify a man. It is by the law that the knowledge of sin comes, a point expanded in 5:20; 7:7ff., but no law can save a man. The law can convict men of sin, it can define sin, but it cannot emancipate man from sin. Only the grace of God can do that. The whole world is sinful and desperately in need of the righteousness of God. But if that righteousness is to come to the individual, it must come through the agency of grace, sovereign grace, not human works.

III. THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD PROVIDED. 3:21-8:39.

Having clearly established that the righteousness of God is needed by man, Paul now proceeds to indicate that the righteousness of God is provided by God. Thus, the second major division of the Epistle to the Romans begins at 3:21 with reference to divine provision for human need.

A. The Provision for Justification. 3:21-5:21.

The apostle begins this section with the Greek phrase nyni de which is usually translated “but now.” This phrase is used in the Pauline Epistles eighteen times and twice in Hebrews. It does not occur anywhere else in the New Testament. Nyni de is an adverb of time. It is a favorite expression of Paul when he makes a transition from a dark, gloomy picture to something wonderful that God does for us. Man has gotten himself in so deep that only God can get him out. God must enter man’s world or else man will never enter God’s world. In establishing guidelines for writers of tragedies in his day, the Roman poet Horace said, “Do not bring a god onto the stage, unless the problem is one that deserves a god to solve it” (Horace, Ars Poetica, 191ff.). The predicament of man is not one that Horace’s gods can solve, but one that only Abraham’s God can solve.

There are two very important words which pervade this passage. They are righteousness and justify. Although quite different in English, these two words are practically identical in Greek (dikaïos, to be righteous; dikaioō, to justify). Justification is a legal declaration issued by God in which He pronounces the person free from any fault or guilt and acceptable in His sight. “To justify means ‘to pronounce and treat as righteous.’ It is vastly more than being pardoned; it is a thousand times more than forgiveness. You may wrong me and then come to me; and I may say, I forgive you. But I have not justified you. I cannot justify you. But when God justifies a man, He says, ‘I pronounce you a righteous man. Henceforth I am going to treat you as if you never committed any sin’” (Alva J. McClain, Romans the Gospel of God’s Grace, p. 107).

I. Justification is by faith alone. 3:21-31.

21. The righteousness of God. The righteousness of God is neither an attribute of God nor the changed character of the believer. As defined in Romans 1:17, the righteousness of God is Christ Himself, who met every demand of the law for us in our 21 But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets;

stead, and is "made unto us . . . righteousness" (I Cor 1:30). God's righteousness is demonstrated and communicated to us through the cross.

This righteousness is without the law. This expression, which is literally "apart from the law" (Gr chōris nomou) is a strong expression categorically stating that righteousness is given totally apart from any law. See the same use of this word in Hebrews 4:15 where the Lord Jesus was tempted in all points as we are "yet totally apart from sin." Just as sin and Jesus Christ have nothing in common, so too the righteousness was not manifested in keeping the law but it was manifested at the cross when "he (God the Father) hath made him (God the Son) to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor 5:21).

Being witnessed by the law and the prophets. Every time a man took his sacrifice to the Temple for a sin offering, confessed his sin, and killed the animal, he was testifying that he had faith in a righteousness that was not his own. Thus, the law bears witness to an external righteousness that God provides, but the law itself cannot provide. Likewise the prophets witness to this righteousness (cf. Isa 53:6; the same thought that is expressed in II Cor 5:21 and in I Pet 2:21-25).

22. The righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ. Since the genitive case is objective here, a more understandable rendering is that we are justified when the righteousness of God is applied to us "through faith in Jesus Christ." The righteousness of God then does not come to one who simply has faith in God but to those who by faith claim the name of Jesus Christ. Saving faith in Christ is a necessary part of the righteousness God provides (Acts 4:12). Unto all and upon all them that believe. Although the words upon all are not included in some manuscripts (S, A, B, D, and some other versions), nevertheless the meaning is still the same. God's righteousness is provided unto all men. We therefore go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature (Mk 16:15). However, even though this righteousness is provided unto all, it is nevertheless applied upon only those who believe in Jesus Christ as Saviour. This is the only conditional element of the gospel. This righteousness is placed upon us as a cloak when by faith we receive Jesus Christ as Saviour. Righteousness is from God, through Jesus Christ, to all who receive Him by faith.

For there is no difference. This phrase no difference occurs in only one other place in the Epistle to the Romans. In this verse there is no difference between the need of the Jew and the Gentile. That need is explained in the expression For all have sinned. But just as there is no difference in human need likewise there is no difference in divine provision (Rom 10:12-13), the other place the expression occurs.

23. And come short of the glory of God. The brief but all-encompassing statement that all have sinned is further enhanced by the fact that both Jew and Gentile have come short of God's glory. What is the glory of God? The Bible frequently speaks of the glory of God appearing in the pillar of the cloud leading Israel (Ex 16:7-10); the tabernacle of the congregation at Kadesh (Num 14:10); the temple of Solomon (I Kgs 8:11); the Mount of Olives at Jerusalem (Ezk 11:23); etc. The glory of God now, however, rests in the person of Jesus Christ (Jn 1:14). The glory of God is the person of Jesus Christ.

When Stephen was stoned he looked steadfastly to heaven and saw the glory of God and (or even) Jesus standing at the right hand of God (Acts 7:55). The knowledge of the glory of God is said to be in the face of Jesus Christ (II Cor 4:6). When Paul says that we have come short of the glory of God he means that we do not measure up to the sinlessness of Jesus Christ. The Mosaic law served as God's standard of righteousness until the coming of Christ. But when the Lord Jesus was made a curse for 22 Even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for there is no difference:

23 For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God;

24 Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus:

25 Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;

26 To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

27 Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay: but by the law of faith.

us, He redeemed us from the curse of the law (Gal 3:19; Rom 10:4). Thus, the standard of God's holiness today is not the Old Testament law but the person of Jesus Christ.

24. Paul makes three observations about the righteousness of God which brings justification. He says that the righteous man is justified freely and that this justification is by his grace and provided through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. Being justified freely means being justified without any prior conditions being met. Being justified by God's grace (in the Greek this expression is in the dative of means or instrumental case) indicates that not only is our justification without prior conditions being met but, on the other hand, it is graciously given. We do not merit justification, but we enjoy it. You cannot have both merit and grace. Our justification was by the grace of God. Beyond this, it was through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. Since the word redemption signifies a buying back, it must have been accomplished by the payment of a price. The price of our redemption was the blood of Jesus Christ (Mt 20:28; I Cor 6:20; I Pet 1:18-19). Therefore, we are justified in the sight of God when the righteousness of Christ is placed upon us by the grace of God, freely and without cause. Only then God views us as ransomed by the blood of Christ.

25-26. The main points of these two verses are: (1) God presented Jesus Christ as an atoning sacrifice, a propitiation. (2) This sacrifice was one of Christ's blood. (3) It is appropriated to the sinner by faith. (4) The sacrifice was necessary because in the past God had not fully punished sin. (5) It was also necessary to validate the justice of God. (6) This sacrifice demonstrated that it is God who justifies those who have faith in Jesus Christ.

God hath set forth to be a propitiation. The Bible is filled with types, which foreshadow future persons or events, and antitypes, which are the real person or events foreshadowed. The type is the arrow; the antitype is the target.

One of the most unique types in the Old Testament is the mercy seat. This was the lid on the ark of the covenant and was covered with gold. At each end was a golden cherub, whose wings stretched toward the center of the lid. The ark was the meeting place between God and man. It contained the tablets of the Mosaic law (Ex 25:16-22). Therefore, the mercy seat was that which covered the law of God.

When the translation of the Hebrew Old Testament was made into Greek, which is called the Septuagint, the Greek word chosen to translate "mercy seat" (Heb kaphorah) was hilastērion which means "the place of propitiation." To propitiate means to appease an offended party and the hilastērion (mercy seat) was the place where, by blood, the sins of Israel were atoned, the penalty paid, and wrath of God (the offended party) was appeased. It is certainly no coincidence that the word Paul uses here to describe Jesus Christ is the same word used for "mercy seat," the hilastērion. Jesus Christ is our mercy seat. He is the person by whom our sins were atoned, our penalty paid, and the offended party appeased. Jesus Christ is where God meets man.

Why did Jesus Christ become our propitiation? The answer is to declare . . . his righteousness. This is done by atoning for sins, which prior to Calvary were not permanently dealt with (Ps 50:16-23; Acts 17:30). God made His statement about sin at the cross. He not only said something about it, He did something about it. The righteousness of God is declared by atoning for present and future sins as well as past sins. Therefore God is the justifier of any man, past, present, or future, who places his faith in the blood of Jesus Christ.

27. These verses represent some final questions concerning justification and the conclusion Paul draws. Where is boasting then? In view of the fact that it is God who justifies us by providing Christ Jesus as our propitiation, what does this do to boasting? Paul's answer is It is excluded. Boasting is shut out, there is no room for man's boasting in the plan of God. By what law? of works? What is it that caused boasting to be inappropriate? Is it the law of works? Paul's answer, Nay: but by the law of faith. If man could work to be justified, then he would have reason to boast. But we are saved by God's grace through faith, not of works. And why? "Lest any man should boast (Eph 2:8-9).

28. Paul now comes to a conclusion which is central to Pauline theology. He concludes that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law. This is the same conclusion which came to the heart of Martin Luther and spawned the Protestant Reformation. When this concept grasps our hearts we too come to the conclusion that salvation is sola gratia, sola fide, soli Deo gloria (by grace alone, through faith alone; to God alone be the glory).

29-30. Is he the God of the Jews only? This question naturally arises in the Jewish mind, which still cannot conceive of the heathen being loved and justified by faith alone. Paul's answer to the question is Yes, of the Gentiles also. The reason is, it is one God. There is not a god of the Jews and another god of the Gentiles. There is but one God of Jews and Gentiles. Paul is not here simply teaching monotheism as opposed to heathen polytheism. As a Jew, a Hebrew of the Hebrews, but the called apostle to the Gentiles, Paul is the bridge between the Jew and the Gentile. But his message has made both one in Christ (Gal 3:28). The law of faith is the universal law of salvation by God.

31. Do we then make void the law through faith? Because God saves through faith and not the deeds of the law, does this make the law useless? Paul gives his characteristic answer, God forbid: yea, we establish the law. Faith in Christ is the proper response to the law, for what the law could not do, Christ alone can do. The teaching that justification is by faith alone does not destroy the law. It completes the law, fulfills it, makes it meaningful. Justification by faith alone honors the law, because prior to Jesus Christ no one ever honored the law by perfectly keeping it. Since the Lord Jesus did, faith in the finished work of Christ on Calvary brings the ultimate respect to the law.

2. Justification is illustrated in the Old Testament. 4:1-25.

Paul has just firmly established that the righteousness of God is apart from the law (3:21) and that man is justified by faith apart from the deeds of the law (3:28). He is aware, however, that the Jew will offer the case of Abraham as rebuttal to this teaching. Paul's own people were still engrossed with the idea that being Jewish ought to afford them certain judicial privileges in the eyes of God. Thus, in this chapter, Paul analyzes the principle by which God saved Abraham. The father of Israel is an illustration of God's message of salvation in the Old Testament.

4:1-2. Abraham our father, as pertaining to the flesh. Paul's use of the possessive pronoun "our" and the qualifying phrase "as pertaining to the flesh" indicates that he is identifying himself with his people, the Jews. The question is, was Abraham saved by his acts of good work and obedience or was he saved by the faith of which Paul spoke in the preceding chapter?

3. As a Hebrew, a rabbi, a Sanhedrist and a Pharisee, Paul knew exactly how to settle a Jewish argument. He could have debated the point, but instead he says, For what saith the scripture? This is a lesson we all should learn well. Whenever we are asked for a moral, ethical, or eternal answer, we should always ask ourselves, "What do the Scriptures say?" The apostle answers his own question by quoting what Moses records in Genesis 15:6. Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. What do we mean when we say that faith was counted unto Abraham for righteousness? The word translated "counted" (Gr logizomai) is a commercial term which is 28 Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.

29 Is he the God of the Jews only? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also:

30 Seeing it is one God, which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.

31 Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law.

CHAPTER 4

WHAT shall we say then that Abraham our father, as pertaining to the flesh, hath found?

2 For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; but not before God.

3 For what saith the scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness.

4 Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.

5 But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness.

6 Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works.

7 Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.

9 Cometh this blessedness then upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.

10 How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised: that he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also:

12 And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.

used with regard to credits or debits. It means to set to one's credit or lay to one's charge. If you authorize your lawyer to write checks on your bank account, and he does so, although the check is written by him and money received by him, nevertheless the amount of the check is charged to you. This one word logizomai, occurs eleven times in this chapter and is translated by various words such as "count," "reckon," and "impute." Abraham was not righteous. Justification never means to make a man righteous. It only means that God reckons and treats a man as if he were righteous.

4-5. This principle is now further explained. Paul reasons that justification by works rests on the principle that men may earn their salvation by doing good. If this principle were true, good men would be saved by their good works and salvation would not be a gift at all. But justification by faith rests on the principle that God imputes righteousness to the ungodly as a free gift. Salvation is not, therefore, earned by the sinner but is freely given to him when he puts his faith in the blood of Jesus Christ.

6-8. Paul has made a case for Abraham's justification apart from works; now he strengthens that case with another Old Testament illustration. The purpose of introducing David's testimony is twofold: (1) The Jews' law regarding two witnesses (Deut 19:15; referred to by Jesus in Mt 18:16 and by Paul in II Cor 13:1 and I Tim 5:19). David corroborated what is said about Abraham and further illustrates salvation apart from works; (2) David gives witness that the same principle of justification was operative even for those living under the Mosaic law.

David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works. Even King David, the type of the Messianic King, knew the truth of the words he penned in Psalm 32:1-2, which Paul quotes in verses 7 and 8. As believers, our iniquities are forgiven and our sins are covered. The reason the believer's sins are not reckoned to him is that they have been imputed to Christ Jesus (cf. Isa 53; I Pet 2:24-25).

9-12. Paul has well argued that justification is by faith alone. He has illustrated, by the lives of Abraham and David, that God has never worked on a principle of justification by works. Yet it is difficult for the Jews, the sons of Abraham, to accept that they may be justified in exactly the same way as the heathen Gentiles. Thus, these verses introduce another potential argument against justification by faith.

It is true that both pre-law Abraham and under-law David received righteousness. But, so the Jew would argue, both of them were also circumcised. Since circumcision is the sign of the covenant between God and His chosen people (Gen 17:9-14), is it not possible that this was the ground of their justification? Cometh this blessedness then upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also? Paul answers, faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness. This immediately prompts the question as to the timing of the reckoning of righteousness. How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? The answer is clear. Faith was reckoned to Abraham while he was yet uncircumcised.

The facts are these. (1) Genesis 15:6 records the event of Abraham receiving righteousness from God. (2) Sometime after that, Abraham had a son by Hagar when he was eighty-six years old (Gen 16:16). (3) At least one year had to elapse between the two events so that at the outside Abraham was eighty-five years old when righteousness was imputed to him. (4) Ishmael was thirteen years old when both he and Abraham were circumcised (Gen 17:25-26). (5) Abraham had righteousness imputed to him at least fourteen years before he was circumcised. Paul concludes that circumcision had nothing whatever to do with the imputation of righteousness to Abraham.

This does not mean circumcision was unimportant. Abraham received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith. Circumcision did not bring righteousness, but was the visible sign to Abraham's descendants of the righteousness that was imputed to him by faith. Also, circumcision was God's seal of righteousness. Once righteousness has been imputed to the individual, it is sealed there forever. This is true also of Christian baptism. It does not bring about salvation but is an outward sign declaring salvation and is God's seal of approval on the finished work of Christ in behalf of the believer. Abraham received righteousness before he was circumcised that he might be the father of all them that believe, whether circumcised or not, who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham. Abraham, therefore, not only bears a physical relationship with the nation Israel but also bears a spiritual relationship with all who believe by faith, whether Jew or Gentile.

13-16. Each of Abraham's descendants expected to receive the inheritance of Abraham. That inheritance was no less than the world. For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world. Although not directly stated, this promise is drawn from Genesis 12:3 and the correlative promises given in Genesis 18:18; 22:18, etc. Abraham's heritage was limited in geographical terms to the land between Egypt and the Euphrates (Gen 15:18; cf. 13:14ff.). But the promise was made to Abraham and to his seed. In Galatians 3:16 the "seed" is obviously Jesus Christ. The promise of inheriting the world must be understood then in relationship to the Messiah's future domination of this earth as "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev 19:16). This promise will come to reality when the seed of Abraham, Jesus Christ, sits on the throne of David during the Millennium and rules the entire world with a rod of iron. Because of this, it is impossible that Abraham's inheritance can be obtained by law. No heir of Abraham, save Jesus Christ, has ever been able to entirely keep the law. If fulfillment of this promise depended on law-keeping, man's inability to keep the law would insure that the promise would never be fulfilled and thus would be the promise made of none effect.

The law worketh wrath. Eventually failure to keep the law imposes penalties which bring to the law-breaker the wrath of God. For where no law is, there is no transgression. Paul appears to be drawing on a current legal maxim in the Roman Empire ("no penalty without law"), when here, as in 5:13, he claims that sin is not imputed where there is no law. The law simply declares what is right, and requires conformity to it. But the law does not give either power to obey it or atonement when it is not obeyed.

Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace. Since the promise of salvation is dependent upon faith, the blessings of salvation are afforded by the means of God's grace. Therefore they come not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham. Paul is insistent that only those who possess the faith of Abraham are the seed of Abraham and whether we be Jew or Gentile, if we have placed our faith in the salvation provided by Abraham's God, then Abraham is the father of us all.

17. As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations. Again Paul quotes from the Old Testament, this time from Genesis 17:5. Throughout this next series of verses it is noticed that in giving and confirming the covenant to Abraham, God interchangeably uses the words "I will" and "I have." The reason is that God is above time; He has no future nor past, only an eternal present. When in Genesis 17:5 God said, "A father of many nations have I made thee," Abraham was yet childless.

13 For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.

14 For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect:

15 Because the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all,

17 (As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were.

18 Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, So shall thy seed be.

19 And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb:

20 He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

21 And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform.

22 And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.

23 Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him;

24 But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead;

25 Who was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification.

But it didn't matter, the promises of God are better than money in the bank. They always come true. We can count God's "wills" as God's "haves." The same thing was true before the battle of Jericho when the Lord appeared unto Joshua and said, "See, I have given into thy hand Jericho, and its king thereof, and the mighty men of valor" (Josh 6:2). What was for Joshua yet to happen, was for God an accomplished fact.

God, who quickeneth the dead. Although this is a general designation for God in Judaism, it is used here with reference to Abraham's own body, now as good as dead, and to the deadness of Sarah's womb (vs. 19).

18. Who against hope believed in hope. Grammatically this is known as an oxymoron, a figure of speech in which contradictory ideas are combined (e.g., thunderous silence, sweet sorrow, etc.). Abraham against hope, or beyond hope, nevertheless believed in hope. When the promise was given that Abraham would become the father of many nations, there was no human ground for hope with regard to Abraham's wife Sarah bearing a child. Although beyond hope, Abraham believed God anyway and his faith generated hope.

19. And being not weak in faith. Abraham believed God in spite of the circumstances. He did not consider his lack of virility at one hundred years old. Neither did he consider the inability of his ninety-year-old wife to conceive and withstand the pain of childbirth. Adverse circumstances did not stand in the way of Abraham's faith.

20. He staggered not at the promise of God. The word translated staggered (Gr diakrinomai), means to separate, distinguish, and as a deponent means "dispute." In regard to faith in God, Abraham was not of a divided mind. How can we reconcile this with Abraham's laughter in Genesis 17:17? We need not understand Abraham's laughter as mocking. Jerome translated laughter as "marveled." Calvin and Augustine both translated it as "laughed for joy." Abraham's questioning how a child could be born of him at one hundred years of age was more an exclamation of holy wonder which was immediately overcome by holy faith. Therefore, he was strong in faith, as opposed to being weak in faith (vs. 19). Above all, Abraham gave God the glory, for great things He had done.

21. Abraham was not just wistfully hoping that God would make him the father of many nations, but was fully persuaded that, what he had promised, he was able also to perform. History teaches us that what God promises, He also performs.

22. This verse begins And therefore which means what is to be said is linked closely with what has just been said. Because Abraham had faith, because he believed God in the face of adverse circumstances, therefore, that faith was imputed to him for righteousness. All that Abraham had, his righteousness, his inheritance, and his posterity, he gained not by works, but by faith.

23-25. This illustration of the way in which Abraham received righteousness is not recorded for his sake alone, or applicable to him only. The expression, But for us also, indicates that all believers are justified by faith in the promises of God. If we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead. The reviving of Abraham's generative power, and his faith that God could do so, foreshadows the faith that we must have in the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Who was delivered for our offenses. God the Father delivered Jesus Christ to the cross of Calvary, not as an example, but to make atonement for our sins (II Cor 5:21). God the Father also raised Jesus Christ again for our justification. The meaning of the resurrection for us today is that Christ Jesus died on account of our sins, and was raised from the dead in order to render us righteous in the eyes of God. The righteousness that Abraham had, and David had, and which we enjoy, is the righteousness of the risen Lord.

What can we learn from this chapter? The noun faith occurs ten times in this chapter and the corresponding verb believe occurs six times. Together the idea of believing faith is found no less than sixteen times in Romans 4. The words count, reckon, or impute, all of which mean to charge to one's account, occur eleven times in Romans 4. The word righteousness occurs in one of its forms eight times in this chapter and the corresponding verb justified occurs in one of its forms three times. Together the idea of righteousness is found no less than eleven times in Romans 4. It is significant that, apart from the common words of our language, these three words occur so frequently. The application of Romans 4 is simple: faith imputes righteousness. There isn't a thing anyone can do to become clothed with God's righteousness except have faith in Jesus Christ as his Saviour from sin.

3. Justification brings blessings to its recipients. 5:1-11.

Having established God's method of justifying sinners, and having provided an Old Testament example of that method, Paul now demonstrates that not only are there benefits derived from justification at the moment of salvation, but there are blessings that accompany justification throughout the believer's life.

Therefore indicates that there is a close link between chapter 4 and chapter 5. It is unfortunate that there is a chapter break here for there is no break in Paul's logical pattern of thought. "Therefore" is a bridge between the two chapters and the ideas of past justification and present blessings.

5:1. Therefore being justified by faith. The word translated being justified (Gr dikaioō) is an aorist passive participle in Greek. The time of action is in the past. The voice is obviously passive which means that the subject received and did not initiate the action. So Paul says that at some point in the past, without our help, God justified us, that is, He declared us and began to treat us as if we were righteous. Thus, we should understand this verse today "having been justified by faith" we have . . . .

Paul will now list the benefits of having been justified by God. The first is we have peace with God. This is not the peace of God, but peace with (Gr pros) God. This is not a feeling of peace but a state of peace. Between the sinner and God exists a state of enmity, hostility, and antagonism. Sinners are the enemies of God (Isa 48:22; Jas 4:4; Col 1:21). The state of war that exists between the unbeliever and God continues until a state of peace is declared. Therefore, having been justified by faith, we have a peace treaty with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Mediator between the two parties at war (I Tim 2:5-6). As our Mediator, Jesus Christ has worked out our peace treaty with God. But since He made peace through His blood, He is our peace with God (Eph 2:13-18).

2. By whom also we have access. If you have ever attempted to call the President of the United States, you know how relatively inaccessible he is. To the unbeliever, God the Father is even more inaccessible than the President. He cannot be reached for there is no common ground, no mediator between the unbeliever and God. To the believer, there is access to God because He has justified us. Jesus Christ provides immediate and consistent access to God for all those whom God has declared and treats as righteous.

Wherein we stand. An age-old problem is this, "How can a sinner stand in the presence of a holy God?" The psalmist wrestled with this question (Ps 130:3). Men and women shall wrestle with this problem at the opening of the sixth seal in Revelation 6:16-17 (see also Ps 1:5). We do not have a leg to

CHAPTER 5
THEREFORE being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:

2 By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

stand on when it comes to a defense of our sinful actions. How is it possible for a sinner to stand before God? The Swiss reformer Robert Haldane said, "And it is by Him (Jesus Christ) they enter into the state of grace, so by Him they stand in it, accepted before God; secured, according to His everlasting covenant, that they shall not be cast down" (Robert Haldane, Romans, p. 186). The only possible way we can stand before God is by His grace.

And rejoice in hope of the glory of God. The word "hope" confuses many new Christians. Of the one hundred forty-one times this word occurs in the authorized version, in all of its forms, only twenty-one times does it occur as a verb (excluding the Psalms). Hope is not nebulous, it is concrete. We have joy in hope. The glory of God, of which we have fallen short, is the perfect standard of Christ's righteousness (Jn 1:14; 17:22-23; Heb 1:3). We can rejoice in the fact that whatever we are like today, one of the benefits of having been justified is the hope that one day we shall be like Him (Rom 8:29; I Jn 3:2-3).

3-4. We glory in tribulations also. He who has been justified rejoices, not in spite of his tribulations, but in or because of his tribulations. In delineating the progression from tribulation to hope, Paul shows that there is a natural, logical connection between the four: tribulations—patience—experience—hope. The tribulations of which Paul speaks (I Cor 5:9-13; II Cor 1:4-10; 11:23-30; Phil 4:12; II Tim 3:11-12; etc.), result in patience (Gr hypomonē). This is not a passive quality but the ability to remain strong while bearing the burden of tribulation. The test of endurance in turn results in experience (Gr dokimē) or proof of the presence of the Spirit of God which makes patience possible. The end result of this proof proceeds to hope, the certain knowledge that we will one day be glorified as the Son of God and be "heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ" (8:17). Here is a perfect circle: we began with hope of the glory of God, passed through tribulation which caused us to be steadfast; this endurance proved that we are indeed a child of God and this proof encourages us in the hope of the glory of God.

5. And hope maketh not ashamed. Having already been justified we have a hope that cannot be humiliated. The hope we have is in the glory of God and even though it is tested in the caldron of fiery tribulation, it will be proved genuine because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts. This passage began by speaking of faith, moved to hope, and now has come to the end of the trilogy with charity or love. Our hearts are flooded with God's love for us because we have been justified. But more than that, there is another benefit which accompanies justification and that is the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. It is the Holy Spirit who pours into the heart of the believer a sense of God's love for him. Not only did the Holy Spirit come to us at salvation communicating God's love for us, but the Scripture says He is given unto us. The verb is given (Gr didōmi) means to grant, impart, or put into the heart. The clear implication is that at the moment of salvation we received the gift of the Holy Spirit Himself. A justified man need not anxiously look to a future time when he will be baptized with the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is God's gift to us at the moment of justification. Then Christ's righteousness is ours, God's love is ours, and the Holy Spirit's presence is ours. They are inextricably bound together in a package we call salvation.

6-8. The distinctive quality of God's love is that it operates irrespective of merit. Human love is given to those who are lovable; but God's love embraces even the unlovely. When we were yet without strength. This expression is parallel to the expression in verse 8, while we were yet sinners. Paul uses it to show man's utter helplessness in the face of his all-encompassing sin. In due time Christ died for the ungodly. This means that circumstances did not bring Christ to the cross, the divine plan

3 And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also: knowing that tribulation worketh patience;

4 And patience, experience; and experience, hope:

5 And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.

6 For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly.

7 For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die.

8 But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

of God did (Gal 4:1-5). At the time of man's greatest need, nothing but the blood of Jesus would satisfy that need.

Verses 7 and 8 expand what is implicit in verse 6. When Paul said that Christ died for the ungodly, he was indicating that the Lord did not die for those who were simply void of morality but for those who were actively opposed to God. For scarcely for a righteous man will one die. Here the just or righteous man is distinguished from the good or benevolent man. The just man is approved by God, and hardly anyone would think of dying for him. The good man is loved by men, and most would not think of dying for him, although some may be tempted. Paul's argument is that while you will rarely find anyone who will lay down his life for a righteous or good man, God demonstrated His love by sending Christ Jesus to die for us while we were yet sinners, something no one else would even consider doing. The sacrifice of Christ on the cross of Calvary arose out of the heart of God filled with the love of God. All these blessings are ours because at some point in the past, without our help, we have been justified by God and are now being treated as if we were righteous.

9. In addition to the blessings we presently enjoy because we are justified, there is yet the promise that we shall be saved from wrath through him. All men are by nature the children of wrath (Jn 3:36). The prophet Nahum warns that the Lord has reserved wrath for His enemies (Nah 1:2). It is comforting for the believer to note, however, that "God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ" (I Thess 5:9). One of the future benefits of the fact that we have been justified is that we shall be preserved from the day of God's fierce wrath.

10. We shall be saved by his life. Paul makes reference to us who were once enemies of God, but now are reconciled to Him by the death of His Son. It is the death of Christ and His shed blood which provide our atonement and redemption (Eph 1:7; 2:13; Col 1:14; Heb 9:12-15). It is the death of Christ which effects our salvation; but it is the life of Christ which sustains it. Christ died for our sins and was raised for our justification to make continual intercession for us (Heb 7:25). The life of Jesus Christ did not take away the penalty of our sins, His death did. But Christ ever lives to take away the dominion of sin over us. This is how we are continually kept saved by His intercessory life.

11. Not only shall the justified man escape the wrath of God by the death of Christ, but also he shall obtain joy in God because of Christ's life. The word translated joy is the same as is translated rejoice in verse 2 and glory in verse 3. The blessings which justification brings to its recipients terminate in joy through our Lord Jesus Christ. This last expression is identical to that found in verse 1 of this chapter. All that we have we owe to Him, the Lord Jesus Christ.

4. Justification is imputed to us as was sin. 5:12-21.

Thus far in the Epistle to the Romans, Paul has dealt with two great doctrinal subjects: condemnation and justification. Before the apostle leaves the subjects he enhances our understanding of them by contrasting the two. The contrasts which he draws are: a contrast between Adam and Christ (vs. 14-15); between condemnation and justification (vs. 16); between disobedience and obedience (vs. 19); between law and grace (vs. 20); between sin and righteousness (vs. 21); and between death and life (vs. 21). Since these verses are so doctrinal in nature, it will be helpful to keep in mind three very important truths established in Romans 5:12-21. They are: (1) one offense, by one man, made all the world guilty of sin; (2) the resultant guilt of Adam's original sin is imputed to each of us; and (3) Adam acted as our official representative when he cast his vote against God.

9 Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.

10 For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life.

11 And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement.

ROMANS 5:12

12 Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned:

13 (For until the law sin was in the world: but sin is not imputed when there is no law.

14 Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.

16 And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification.

17 For if by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.)

18 Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.

19 For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

12. By one man sin entered into the world. Genesis 3 makes it abundantly clear that this one man, Adam, brought sin to the human race by disobedience. It was not the sins of Adam's lifetime, but the one original sin which allowed death, sin's close ally, to enter the world with it. On no less than five occasions in verses 15-19 the principle of one sin by one man is asserted. One act of disobedience to God was sufficient to allow sin to enter and permeate the entire realm of humanity, for that all have sinned.

13-14. Sin immediately inundated the whole world and had a mortal effect on its inhabitants. Sin is not imputed when there is no law, but even before the law of Moses was given, physical death attested to the presence of sin in Adam and his posterity. So universal was this sin that its deadly effects were seen over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression. Adam is here contrasted with Christ and said to be a "figure" (Gr typos) or "type" of Him that was to come. The only Old Testament character to be called explicitly a type of Christ is Adam. Here the contrast between the first Adam and the Last Adam begins.

15. But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. The continued contrast between Adam and Christ shows a correspondence both in similarity and dissimilarity. Through the offence of Adam the many (i.e., all of Adam's descendants) incurred the penalty of death. Similarly, the many (i.e., all the redeemed) have incurred the free gift of eternal life through the Last Adam, Jesus Christ. The dissimilarity is seen in the phrase, much more the grace of God. The grace of God, which is the ground of our justification, is contrasted with the sin of Adam, because it is greater in quality and greater in degree than Adam's sin. In Adam we got what we deserved, condemnation and guilt. In Christ we have received much more of what we do not deserve, mercy and grace.

16. Now the contrast turns to condemnation in Adam and justification in Christ. For the judgment was by one to condemnation. Not only is our guilt derived from one man's sin, but it is derived from only one sin of that man. Notice that Paul never refers to the "offenses" of one man, but to the offense (singular) of one man (vss. 14-15, 17-20). It is not the sins of Adam's lifetime that have been imputed to us, but only his original sin. That one sin brought condemnation. However, the righteousness which is imputed to us by Christ, through the free gift of God's grace, covers not just that one offense but many offenses.

17-18. As the representative head of the human race, Adam's offense dethroned him as the ruler of God's creation. Consequently, death became the ruler of nature. Adam became the representative of a death-destined society. As long as we are born into that society, death is our destiny as well. The Last Adam, Jesus Christ, is also the representative of a society. Through the gift of righteousness, He shall reign in life. Since all are born into the society of death, the only way to enter Christ's society, in which men are born unto justification of life, is to be born again. By the new birth experience we pass from our old relationship to Adam into a new and living relationship with Christ.

19. One man's disobedience . . . the obedience of one. Here the contrast drawn is between blatant disobedience and willful obedience. God's command to our representative Adam concerning the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil was, "thou shalt not eat of it" (Gen 2:17). Almost immediately the head of the human race disobeyed that divine command. However, Christ Jesus, the Last Adam and Head of the heavenly race, totally obeyed the will of God and testified to that when He said, "I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do" (Jn 17:4). The difference between 20 Moreover the law entered, that the offence might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound:

21 That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

obedience and disobedience is the difference between life and death.

20. Moreover the law entered, that the offense might abound. At this point the Jew might ask, "Well, what is the law for?" The law is "the necessary yardstick of God's holiness which served to bring out into sharp relief the guilt of man in revolt against God, showing him the hopelessness of attempting to earn salvation by good works" (Gleason L. Archer, Jr., The Epistle to the Romans, p. 32). The law came not to make a man a sinner, but to show him how great a sinner he is. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound. Grace did not set aside the law, but rather completely satisfied it. As deep as sin goes, God's grace goes deeper. As wide as sin is, God's grace is wider. When sin abounded, grace super-abounded. God's grace is greater than all our sin.

21. This verse contains the double contrast between sin and righteousness and between death and life. From the very moment sin entered the universe it has reigned, bringing about physical and spiritual death. Its principle of rulership has been to separate mankind from his Creator and to cause his end to be a mortal one. But through the blood of Jesus Christ, sin has been dethroned and righteousness now rules in its stead. Whereas death was the order of the day in Adam's society, now life eternal is the order of the day for those who have believed in Jesus Christ. The contrast is a great one. It is a contrast between man's sin and Christ's obedience, between the wages of sin and the gift of God.

Some have thought that universal salvation is taught in this passage, thinking that just because all were condemned, now all will be saved. Such is not the case. New birth is mandatory for eternal life and the qualifying expression, they which receive in verse 17, teaches that faith in Jesus Christ is absolutely essential for salvation.

B. The Provision for Sanctification. 6:1-7:25.

Having established in 3:21-5:21 that justification is provided by faith alone, Paul now turns his attention to the provision for sanctification. In the preceding chapter he has drawn some conclusions concerning the contrasts between Adam and Christ. In chapters 6 and 7, however, the contrast is between justification and sanctification. There is noticeable smoothness in the transition between the discussion of justification in chapter 5 and that of sanctification in chapter 6. Although there is a sharp contrast between the two, nevertheless the intimacy of the relationship between justification and sanctification is clearly seen in the way they are connected in these chapters.

Basically the contrast between the two is this: justification deals with the penalty for sin; sanctification deals with the power of sin. As was seen in 5:1, justification is a declarative act of God. As will be seen in chapter 6, sanctification is a progressive act of God. Both works of God deal with the sinner: justification with the unsaved sinner; sanctification with the saved sinner. The end result of justification is salvation; the end result of sanctification is obedience. Although distinctly different, justification and sanctification are two aspects of the one work of God in saving men.

1. Sanctification and the principle of sin. 6:1-4.

6:1-2. Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. In every age there have been those who have denounced the doctrine of justification by faith on the incorrect supposition that this doctrine logically leads to sin. "If the believer is treated as righteous by God, and if good works will not save him, then evil works will not condemn him either. Why then should he be concerned about his sin or attempt to live a godly life?" Paul anticipated this very attitude in 6:1-2. Theo-

CHAPTER 6

WHAT shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

2 God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

3 Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?

4 Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

5 For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection:

6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.

7 For he that is dead is freed from sin.

8 Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:

logically, this belief is known as antinomianism. Paul's answer is crystal clear. Just because where sin abounded grace superabounded, the believer is not automatically drawn to license in his life-style. On the contrary, a mature understanding of justification by faith leads the believer to appreciate God's grace, so that the end result is obedience to God out of a heart filled with gratitude. Paul's characteristic expression God forbid, shows how appalled he is at the mere suggestion of continuing in sin once we have experienced the grace of God. We cannot continue in sin because through our identification with Jesus Christ we are dead to sin. To die unto sin means that we are dead to the guilt of sin. Sin can no longer make any legal claim on the believer because we are viewed by God as if we ourselves had died that fateful day at Calvary.

3-5. At this point Paul begins to relate the secret of living a holy and sanctified life, a life which is characterized by being dead to sin. The secret of sanctification is not found in some sanctimonious formula or some deeper or mystical experience with the Lord. The secret is found in three words: (1) know (vs. 3); (2) reckon (vs. 11); and (3) yield (vs. 13). We must be vitally aware of these words as we seek to understand the relationship between justification and sanctification.

To show the immaturity of those who would continue in sin after justification so that grace may abound, Paul introduces the subject of baptism as evidence that life in sin cannot coexist with death to sin. So many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ. Baptism into Christ means to be incorporated into Him, to become a member of His body (I Cor 12:13), and to share with Him those experiences which, although were historically His, are vicariously ours (i.e., His crucifixion, death, burial, and resurrection). Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death. Burial with Christ Jesus signifies that sin no longer judicially has a hold upon us. The ordinance of Christian baptism beautifully portrays this burial into Christ in which the old order of a death-controlled life comes to an end and the new order of a Christ-controlled life begins. Therefore, having already been justified, a believer tells that fact to the world by submitting to the ordinance of water baptism. When he has been symbolically raised up from the dead, even as Christ was physically, the purpose of his resurrection is that he should walk in newness of life. This should entirely preclude the foolish idea of continued sin so that a display may be made of the grace of God. Just as we were buried into Him in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Hence we enter into His life and become a part of Him spiritually, yielding to Him our desires, our wishes, ourselves.

6-8. Paul is still expounding the first principle of true sanctification. Hence, as in verse 3, he repeats the word that is characteristic of this first principle. Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him. The old man referred to here is our old self, the man we once were before we were crucified with Christ. This crucifixion is not a present, daily experience but is rather a past event, expressed by the aorist tense in Greek. I Corinthians 15:31 was spoken by Paul in the context of physical not spiritual death. Our old man is not constantly being crucified, day by day, but has been crucified at the cross of Calvary. The reason is that the body of sin might be destroyed. A better rendering of might be destroyed (Gr katargeō), is "might be rendered inoperative." At the cross of Calvary a victory was won which provided the believer with the power not to live as he once did, serving his old master, i.e., sin, but to live eternally serving his new master, i.e., Christ.

For he that is dead is freed from sin. All who have died to sin are no longer debtor to it. Death wipes the slate clean. The death of our Lord has completely removed the guilt and penalty of our sin. Consequently, because we have died with Christ, we shall also live with Him. Living with Christ precludes the possibility of carnally continuing in sin so that grace may abound.

9-10. Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more. This is the third time Paul has used the word know or knowing. These three instances teach that we have been baptized into Jesus Christ, that our old man is crucified with Christ, and that because Jesus died unto sin once, He never shall die again. Death is a completed transaction by which we have once and for all passed into the resurrection life of our Lord. Jesus Christ can never die again. When we died with Him to sin, we never die to sin again. Death hath no more dominion over him. When He went to the cross and paid the debt in full for our sin, death could no longer claim Him or those who died with Him. Therefore, sanctification is knowing what Christ has already accomplished for us through His death. It is not primarily a matter of striving to live holy, but of knowing that we are holy in Him.

11-12. Knowing what has been accomplished on our behalf at Calvary is not in itself sanctification. It is but the first principle in the process of sanctification. Paul couples to that principle a second one. Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God. The word reckon (Gr logizomai) means that we know something is true and then, moment by moment, day by day, consider it to be true. We take as a solid reality that which God has promised. Therefore, not only do we know what has been accomplished in our justification, but we continue to live as though we had already entered into the resurrection presence of our Lord. We do not die daily, we live daily unto the glory of God.

“This ‘reckoning’ is no vain experience but one which is morally fruitful, because the Holy Spirit has come to make effective in believers what Christ has done for them, and to enable them to become in daily experience, as far as may be in the present conditions of mortality, what they already are ‘in Christ’ and what they will fully be in the resurrection life” (F. F. Bruce, The Epistle of Paul to the Romans, p. 139). When we daily count ourselves to be dead to the penalty of sin and alive unto God, there will be no temptation to continue in sin for we will refuse that temptation out of thankfulness to God for counting us and treating us as if we were righteous.

13. The third and final principle in living a sanctified life is the negative principle, Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin, and a corresponding positive principle, but yield yourselves unto God. As those who have been justified, we are not to allow our members (i.e., our hands, our feet, our tongues, etc.) to become the instruments or weapons of unrighteousness. In the original language, the words “neither yield” carry the idea of a continuous yielding. Knowing of our justification and reckoning ourselves dead to the penalty of sin, we are to continually keep ourselves from yielding to sin. But, on the other hand, we are to once for all, as the Greek implies, yield to God. Although we will yet sin, by yielding ourselves to God we will never again be caught in the trap of continuing in sin. Our life and all that we have will be given over to the One who has spiritually raised us from the dead.

14. Paul’s concept of sanctification, then, is not a daily dying to one’s self. It is rather being mature enough to rest wholly on the finished work of Calvary, knowing that we have been justified there, daily reckoning that work to be finished, and constantly yielding ourselves to be used of God. When one is obedient to these commands, the believer finds himself on a road climbing progressively toward the resurrection life of the Lord. For those who seek sanctification in this manner, the Lord has a definite promise: For sin shall not have dominion over you.

9 Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.

10 For in that he died, he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11 Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

12 Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof.

13 Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

14 For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace.

15 What then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.

16 Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?

17 But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you.

18 Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.

19 I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness.

20 For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness.

21 What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death.

22 But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.

23 For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

2. Sanctification and the practice of sin. 6:15-23.

15. What then? shall we sin? The antinomian argument of verse 1 is now repeated but with a significant difference. In verse 1 the question was, Shall we continue in sin? This dealt with the principle of continuation in sin after the believer recognizes he is dead to it. But now the question is, "Shall we sin?" Here he does not speak of a life-style of sin, but rather an occasional excursion into iniquity. "Because we are not under law but under grace, is it not permissible to fall into sin once in a while?" Paul's abhorrence is seen in his typical answer, God forbid.

16. To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are. Paul uses the analogy of the slave market to illustrate that the sanctified believer dare not even occasionally fall into sin. His point is that if you start to obey sin, you are thereby admitting the mastery of sin in your life. Paul develops our Lord's words, "No man can serve two masters" (Mt 6:24). Yielding to the mastery of sin brings death; yielding to obedience to Christ brings righteousness.

17-18. But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, . . . ye became the servants of righteousness. Paul was ever mindful that God is to be thanked that these Roman believers obeyed from their hearts the traditions or "patterns of teaching" which were embodied in Christ Jesus. Because of Him they have been made free from service to sin and, in turn, have become the servants of righteousness. Freedom from service to Satan is, by definition, bondage to the Lord, who loved us and gave Himself for us.

19-20. I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh. Paul uses the human analogy of a slave in order that the weakest flesh may understand. He now counsels them to yield themselves to holiness with the same gusto they once yielded themselves to uncleanness. When they were servants of sin, it was their master. Now that they are servants of Christ, righteousness must be their master. They cannot serve the master of righteousness and dabble in sin at the same time.

21-22. What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? Paul now addresses a biting question to those who would dare to practice sin. He asks what fruit has been yielded from that sin. Paul knows well that sin always promises more than it can deliver. None of sin's fruit is worth having, and the final result of being a slave to sin is the ghastly horror of death. But for those who are freed from the bondage of habitual sin and who are servants of God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. There is a drastic contrast between the outcome of the two bondages. Bondage to sin has shame as its by-product. Bondage to Christ has as its by-product the status of being positionally holy and in the process of becoming conformed to the image of Christ. This is biblical sanctification. Bondage to sin has as its end death. Bondage to Christ has as its end everlasting life.

23. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. The outcome of enslavement to sin is quite different from that of obedience to Christ. Remuneration is the principle by which we become heirs of death. Sin always pays a wage, and that wage is a drastic one. But just as remuneration is the principle by which we become heirs to death, unmerited favor is the principle by which we become heirs to eternal life. Death is earned, eternal life is purely gratuitous.

3. Sanctification and the law. 7:1-14.

Paul now continues his teaching on the sanctified life, but thoroughly changes his analogy. Although the slave market is an appropriate analogy for our former relationship to the Mosaic law, an even better analogy to depict the justified man's relationship to Christ is that of the bonds of marriage. This is because

CHAPTER 7

KNOW ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth?

2 For the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband.

3 So then if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.

4 Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God.

5 For when we were in the flesh, the motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death.

6 But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.

7 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet.

8 But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law sin was dead.

the marriage relationship involves a response of the heart and emotion. Paul draws upon it to show the proper correspondence between our sanctified lives as believers and that of a wife to her husband. The believer's life in Christ is likened to widowhood and a second marriage.

7:1. The law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth. Paul speaks of the law of God (Mosaic law) and the law of the state (Roman law). Both divine and civil law maintain a hold on mankind as long as he lives.

2-3. For the woman which hath a husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth. Both the Jewish and Roman law required that a woman remain with her husband until his death. Should a woman join herself to another man prior to the death of her husband, she was considered an adulteress (Mk 10:12). The Greek verb used here is chrēmatizō which means "to be publicly known as" (cf. Acts 11:26 where this verb was used in giving the name "Christians" to the followers of Jesus Christ). Only if her husband should die was a woman free to marry another without publicly being branded an adulteress.

4-6. Ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ. Having given the analogy of marriage, Paul now draws this conclusion. The law confirms and seals our bondage to sin. As long as we are governed by the law, there is no possibility of being released from that bondage. The only alternative is death. But when Christ died at Calvary, we died to the law. Sin has no more dominion over us, neither does the law. That we should bring forth fruit unto God. The purpose of our being free from the law and married to another, the risen Lord, is that we may produce fruit unto God. Although this may be an extension of the marriage analogy, and the fruit mentioned is the progeny which is the result of marriage (i.e., the winning of others to the Lord), it is most likely that the fruit unto God is a righteous life which is characterized by those "good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Eph 2:10).

Having been justified by faith, we are now set free from that which held us in bondage. Since we are now free, we are also expected to produce the fruit of freedom, i.e., the sanctified life. Hence, we serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter. The holy law of God is not an external code of "do's" and "don'ts." Rather it is a law of love written on our hearts. We do not obey that law because we fear the Lord, but because we love Him. In our former marriage to sin and the law we attempted to do only that which would meet the minimum standard of God. Now in our marriage to Christ, we seek to be all that we can be and to do for Him all that we can do to please Him and demonstrate our love for Him.

7. What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Still another series of pauline questions concerns the relationship of the law to sin. Characteristic abhorrence is shown to the question, Is the law sin? . . . Nay, I had not known sin, but by the law. Paul claims that the function of the law is to reveal what sin truly is. Man would not have known what covetousness was if the law had not commanded, Thou shalt not covet. A fifty-five-mile-per-hour speed sign is not sin, but teaches us the parameters of sin. This too is the function of the law.

8. But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. Not only does the law reveal sin, but it provokes it as well. Law does not cause sin, but sin takes occasion by the commandment. The word rendered occasion (Gr aphormē) has the meaning of a base for military operation. The moment Paul attempted to keep the law, (abstaining from covetousness, e.g.) the very commandments which he attempted to keep (and could not) provoked him to acts of sin. Thus he says, For without the law sin was dead. Sin has no existence apart from God's law, since by definition sin is the violation of God's law.

ROMANS 7:9

9 For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died.

10 And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.

11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me.

12 Wherefore the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good.

13 Was then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good; that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful.

14 For we know that the law is spiritual: but I am carnal, sold under sin.

9. For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died. This verse records the dawn of conscience in the life of Apostle Paul. He had lived a self-complacent, self-righteous life in which he was free from conviction of sin. It is difficult to say exactly when this period existed in Paul's life. Some have suggested that it was the first thirteen years of Paul's life, before his bar mitzvah ceremony (the ceremony in which a Jewish boy becomes a "son of the commandment" and assumes personal responsibility to keep the commandments of the law). But it may not be necessary to restrict Paul's complacency to those early, unreflecting years of childhood. When the commandment came to him, an apparent reference to thou shalt not covet in verse 7, for the first time, Paul became conscious of his lack of ability to keep the law. At that point sin sprang back to life and, says Paul, I died. This must be put in contrast with I was alive without the law and therefore should be understood as death to his complacent attitude toward sin.

10-11. And the commandment, which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death. This is a reference to the original purpose of the law. God had declared, "This do, and thou shalt live!" The law was intended to guard and promote life but man could not keep the law. Paul found that unheeded law produced death. The more law of which Paul became aware the more sin he found himself committing. The more sin Paul committed the more convinced he was that one day he would have to pay for that sin. Since "the wages of sin is death," we learn that the law not only reveals sin but also produces death.

For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me. The deception to which Paul referred was this. Since the commandment was intended unto life, Paul expected the commandment to yield life as a result. But instead it became the occasion for sin and consequent death. Since the commandment yielded the opposite of what Paul expected, he felt deceived. But the perpetrator of this deception was not the commandment itself, but sin. The commandment was merely the instrument by which sin deceived him.

12-14. Wherefore the law is holy. From what Paul has just said in verses 7 through 11, we might expect a totally different conclusion. But since the law intrinsically and originally was intended to guide men to life, it is therefore a holy law, just and good. Paul then expands on the principle that it is sin which is the deceiver and not the law. Was then that which is good made death unto me? His vigorous denial is again, God forbid. It is sin that works death using the instrument of the law and the purpose is that sin might be shown to be sin. Death is brought by sin, even though the instrumentality of the law is good.

Paul's conclusion concerning the law then is this: For we know that the law is spiritual. The apostle is convinced that the Mosaic law is holy and just and good because it is derived from the Holy Spirit. The word spiritual (Gr pneumatikos) is not used in contradistinction to corporeal, but is used to intimate that the law finds its roots in the Holy Spirit. (See this same use of spiritual words, I Cor 2:13; the spiritual man, I Cor 2:15; spiritual songs, Col 3:16; etc.).

4. Sanctification and the conflict within. 7:15-25.

Paul has exclaimed that the Mosaic law is spiritual. If it is holy and good, why cannot the law bring holiness? Paul immediately gives the answer, I am carnal, sold under sin. In this section the apostle continues to speak in the first person singular. He uses the present tense. Here, there is inward tension evident that was not evident in his discussion of the law (7:1-13). Autobiographically Paul points out that even the believer is constantly beset by the tugs and pulls of a self-seeking and self-centered ego. Paul designates this ego "the flesh." This is no straw man which he sets up, but in fact pictures the anguish of Paul's own soul. He knows to do right and to obey the law, but in himself he cannot do either.

This passage presents the tension between Paul's knowledge and his ability in three phrases: (1) We know that the law is spiritual (vs. 14); (2) I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing (vs. 18); (3) I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present. (vs. 21). Each of these phrases presents significant knowledge by Paul. Each of them is immediately followed by proof that, even though he knows what is right, he cannot do what is right. The conclusion of the whole matter, which he draws in verse 25, should be an encouragement to all believers.

15-17. For that which I do I allow not: for what I would, that do I not. While recognizing that the law is spiritual because it is God's law, Paul also must admit that he is carnal (Gr sarkinos). As a slave to the power of sin, Paul recognizes that those things he wishes he could do, he cannot do; and conversely, those things he knows he must not do, he finds himself doing. A historical parallel to this is Horace's statement, "I pursue the things that have done me harm; I shun the things I believe will do me good" (Epistle 1.8.11). Paul differs from Horace, however, in his conclusion. Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. Paul is not attempting to rid himself of responsibility for his sin. He is aware that in the Christian there are two wills, that of the fleshly, sinful nature which causes him to sin, and that which is born of God which does not commit sin (I Jn 3:9).

18-20. For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing. In the second phase of Paul's knowledge he recognizes that in himself there is not the ability to do good. He wills to do good, but how to accomplish his will is not known. He cannot do the will of God for sin holds dominion over him. Sin is his master, his lord, his king. By himself he cannot break it. He is a defeated Christian when he is controlled by sin. "It is not the new man in Christ who carries on this life of defeat, but it is the sin-principle in him, engendered by the unyielded flesh and occupying the Lord's temple as a trespassing squatter like the Tobiah whom Nehemiah expelled" (cf. Neh 13:7-9) (Gleason L. Archer, Jr., The Epistle to the Romans, p. 43).

21-23. I find then a law. The law which is referred to here has been variously interpreted as the law of God (vs. 22) and the law of sin (vs. 23). Either interpretation is plausible. It seems likely, however, that the law to which he refers prohibits him from doing good and therefore is the law of sin. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man. It is the desire of Paul, as it should be with every believer, to love and obey the law of God. However, opposed to the law of God is the law of sin, which brings his members (i.e., his body, his hands, his tongue, etc.) into captivity.

The law which he finds is the third phase of his knowledge. Paul has come to the conclusion that as long as the believer is alive there will be a constant warfare between the old sinful nature and his delight in the law of God. Unfortunately, when the believer attempts to win that battle in himself, he is always defeated. Self-attempts to rid our members of the tyranny of indwelling sin cause the frustration which underlies this passage.

24. O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death? Helplessly, Paul throws up his hands and exclaims what a wretched individual a believer is when he has not gained mastery over sin. O wretched man (Gr talaiporos) is an expression used in pagan Greek drama to express tragic misfortune and woe. Paul recognizes that he is in a helpless state of despair because he cannot rid himself of his bent toward sinning. The body of this death (lit., this body of death)

15 For that which I do I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.

16 If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good.

17 Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not.

19 For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.

20 Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

21 I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.

22 For I delight in the law of God after the inward man:

23 But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members.

24 O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?

probably does not refer to a physical body. Sin is much more deeply rooted than the body. Paul is speaking of human nature which has inherited guilt and sin from Adam. Paul knows there hangs over his life a cloud of guilt and death which is imputed with sin.

The main purpose of this statement, however, is in the question Who shall deliver me . . . ? Paul indicates that if he is to be delivered from the mastery of sin, that deliverance must come from without. He is unable to live the Christian life in himself. He is incapable of gaining mastery over sin. If Paul is to live a mature and godly life, and to delight in the law of God after the inward man, the strength to do so must come from outside himself.

25. I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Paul inescapably comes to the conclusion that only Jesus Christ can enable us to live a sanctified life. He would like to serve the law of God, but his flesh causes him to serve the law of sin. The Lord Jesus turns that around.

Romans 7 is not a hypothetical case. It is an actual picture of the internal strife caused by the law of sin against the law of the Spirit in the Apostle Paul. This need not be the normal Christian experience, for Paul has already instructed us how to avert this internal strife. The preceding chapter presents the proper way to sanctification; this chapter presents the improper way (cf. D. M. Lloyd-Jones, Romans, pp. 1-13). To live a sanctified life we must know well what Christ has accomplished for us in our justification, daily reckon that we have died with Him and are alive unto righteousness, and yield ourselves completely to Him.

C. The Provision for Assurance. 8:1-39.

1. The assurance of the righteousness of God. 8:1-4.

8:1. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus. The word condemnation (Gr katakrima) means more than just the opposite of justification; it indicates that we are not servants to the penalty for our sin, but that guilt and penalty have been removed at the cross. Therefore, for those who are in Christ Jesus, we do not live under the constant threat of judicial punishment by God. In many ways this chapter is the consummation of Paul's argument concerning the depravity of man and the righteousness God provided to meet man's need. The expression, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit is not in the original. There should be an exclamation point after the expression therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus!

2-4. The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. This expression is reminiscent of II Corinthians 3:17, "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." We should understand the law of the Spirit of Life here to be the principle upon which the Holy Spirit works. The reference to the Spirit of Life is the first time (with the exception of Romans 1:4 and 5:5), that the Spirit of God is mentioned in this epistle. However, during this chapter, the Spirit and His operation will be mentioned nineteen times. Even a casual reading of Romans 8 will leave us with the impression that the Spirit of God and the absence of an attitude of defeat go hand in hand. Life in the Spirit enables us to live free from the law or principle of sin and death. This does not mean that the believer is free from sin or free from the prospect of death, but that the principle of sin and death does not have dominion over him. It is possible for those for whom there is no condemnation to live a life that is not inundated with sin, a life which will not end in death.

For what the law could not do. The law of Moses could not justify us; it could not sanctify us because it was weak through the flesh. The Mosaic law is good and holy, but our flesh is 25 I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.

CHAPTER 8

THERE is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

2 For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death.

3 For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh:

4 That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

weak and we are unable to keep the law; therefore, the law does not have the power to justify. However, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh. What the law could not do, the Lord could. Paul chose his words carefully when he said that God sent His Son in the likeness of sinful flesh. Had he said that Jesus came "in sinful flesh" he would be guilty of the Docetic heresy. However, he says that Jesus Christ came in the flesh, in the likeness of a man, but was not Himself in sinful flesh for He "knew no sin" (II Cor 5:21). And for sin. The word sin (Gr hamartia) is the equivalent of the Old Testament "sin offering" (Heb chattath). This indicates that Jesus Christ came to be the sin offering for us and, since the law could not be that offering, God provided our atonement by offering the person of Jesus Christ. The reason, That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us. We do not fulfill the law by walking in the Spirit instead of the flesh, but God fulfills the law in us when we walk after the Spirit of God. Thus we are assured of the righteousness of God which the law could not provide but the atonement of Christ does provide.

2. The assurance of the indwelling Spirit of God. 8:5-13.

5-6. For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh. The verb mind (Gr phronēō) means to have something as the habit of your thought; something in which you place a total interest. Those who place their total interest in the things of the flesh cannot have their interest in the things of God. For to be carnally minded is death. If the mind is not Christ-centered and our interest is constantly on carnal things, the results are the symptoms of spiritual death. However, if the interests of the mind are placed on the things of the Spirit of God, there is a peace in life that passes all understanding.

7-8. The carnal mind is enmity against God. The basis of carnality is that which is placed in the mind. If our minds have an interest in carnal things, they cause us to be the enemy of God. This is why James counsels, "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God" (Jas 4:4). The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be, because it is natural. Paul is not speaking here of two types of Christians, one spiritual and one unspiritual. He is speaking of believers and unbelievers, as verse 9 plainly indicates. Therefore, they that are in the flesh cannot please God. Until faith is placed in Jesus Christ, a man in no spiritual way can be pleasing to God the Father (Heb 11:6).

9-10. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. The Holy Spirit of God is the decisive factor in salvation. If a man does not have the Spirit, he does not have Christ, and he is none of his. Paul clearly teaches that no one can receive Christ's atonement for salvation unless the Spirit of God dwells within him. It is therefore irrational to say that there are Christians who have not fully received the blessing of the Spirit of God. There is no scriptural basis for a second work of grace or a baptism of the Holy Spirit subsequent to salvation. At salvation either we have all of the Spirit of God or we have none of Him. There may be a time subsequent to salvation in which the Spirit of God gets more of us, but there is never a time when we get more of Him. And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin. This does not mean that we have already died physically, but that the energizing Spirit of God within us has given us new life, a life of righteousness. The body is yet mortal (i.e., subject to physical death).

11-13. He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. The resurrection of believers is always made dependent upon

5 For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit.

6 For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace.

7 Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be.

8 So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

10 And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness.

11 But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.

ROMANS 8:12

12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.

13 For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.

14 For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

15 For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.

16 The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God:

17 And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.

18 For I reckon that the sufferings of the resurrection of Christ (see II Cor 6:14; II Cor 4:14; I Thess 4:14; etc.). The same Spirit that raised Jesus Christ from the dead will energize our mortal bodies as well when we are "in Christ Jesus." Consequently, we are not debtors to the flesh for we have not received new life by the flesh. When the Spirit of God comes to us at salvation we are under new management and therefore we are debtors to that management. All things are new in Christ for there is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus. We must not give ourselves to lifestyles that are characterized by the flesh, for we no longer owe allegiance to it. If we continually serve the flesh our life is characterized by a state of death. However, if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. The deeds of the body are those fleshly activities which characterize one who is not alive in Christ Jesus. Paul exhorts us to mortify or reckon as dead (cf. 6:11) these deeds and no longer engage in them. When that is the case, and our thoughts and deeds are energized by the presence of the Spirit of God, we will truly have a born-again behavioral pattern. Because of the fruit borne by our life, men shall know that the Spirit of God resides in us.
374

3. The assurance of eternal heirship. 8:14-25.

14. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. There is one characteristic quality of all who are truly born again. That quality is that in their thoughts, behavioral patterns, and life-styles they are constantly and habitually led by the Spirit of God (Mt 7:20; Jn 13:35).

15. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear. There is a contrast to be drawn here between the life of a servant and the life of a son. When Paul says that we have not received the spirit of bondage he is saying that when the Spirit of God dwells in us we are not treated by God as servants but as sons (cf. I Cor 2:12; II Tim 1:7). We do not fear God as the slave fears his master. Rather we love Him as a son loves his father. The slave does his master's bidding because he knows he will be punished if he does not. But to him in whom the Spirit of God dwells, to him there is no element of fear that can intrude into his service for the Lord. He serves the Lord as a son lovingly serves his loving father. Ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The son is on entirely different footing than the servant. The spirit of adoption, (Gr huiiothesia) or sonship, enables us to enter into a relationship with God the Father that the unbeliever can never experience. In the first century A.D. the adopted son was one who was deliberately chosen to perpetuate the name of his father and inherit his estate. He was not at all inferior to a son born after the course of nature. Thus we are enabled to cry Abba, Father. The word abba is an Aramaic word which was never used by the Jews in addressing God. But when the Holy Spirit dwells within us, our relationship to God the Father is such that we may address Him as freely as we would our own father.

16. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God. How can we be sure that we are the children of God? Because we take God at His Word and we have the ever-present Spirit of God dwelling within us to give assurance that we are indeed the sons of God. As His children we look at the world a bit differently when our lives are responsive to His commands.

17. And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ. Because we are no longer servants but sons (Gal 4:7), we then are rightfully the heirs of God. But more than that, we share in the inheritance of Christ Jesus because we will inherit by grace the glory which is His by right (Jn 17:22-24). The status of sonship, however, involves not only the privileges of inheritance, but the responsibilities of suffering.

18-19. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

19 For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.

20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope.

21 Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

22 For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.

23 And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body.

24 For, we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?

25 But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.

27 And he that searcheth the hearts are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. If the suffering we presently endure brings great hardship, cruel and unusual punishment, severe persecution or even death itself, none of these evils can compare with the heavenly bliss that is awaiting those who are in Christ Jesus.

20-23. For the creature was made subject to vanity. As the preacher of Ecclesiastes observed, there is nothing in this life (apart from Jesus Christ) which provides lasting significance to life. If the hand of God were today removed from His creation, all that existed would be found pursuing a course of ultimate frustration. Creation is not subject to vanity by its own desire, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. This can only mean God, for only God can subject His creation in hope. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption. The word because could be instead translated "that." It tells of the connection between bondage and vanity. Apart from God, creation is meaningless; it is plunging headlong into decay and death. However, God promises that even creation will one day be delivered from bondage to liberty. The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. The pain with which the whole creation groans is not death pains but birth pains. Paul has in mind the Jewish expectation of a coming Messiah, but he knows that a time of distress will precede that messianic age. Both mankind and the rest of God's creation will share in these birth pains as they together anticipate the joy that follows the pain of birth. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the Spirit. As the creation groans for the coming of the Messiah, so too the believer groans. We are said to have the first fruits of the Spirit. That is, the indwelling Spirit is the first installment or down payment on the eternal glory that awaits both the believer and God's creation. This provides the assurance of our eternal heirship. As believers we await the adoption, that is, the redemption of our body. Though we may today be attacked by physical pain, surrounded by financial distress, discouraged by failing health, nevertheless we know that because we possess the Holy Spirit as our down payment, God will certainly redeem our bodies as He has already redeemed our souls. As the sons of God we will one day be clothed with immortal and incorruptible bodies (I Cor 15:5-55; II Cor 5:2-3; Phil 3:21).

24-25. For we are saved by hope. This expression does not imply that salvation comes through the instrumentality of hope. The uniform teaching of Paul, as well as Scripture in general, is that we are saved by faith (cf. 1:16-17; Eph 2:8). The words by hope refer to that ingredient which is inseparable from salvation and a natural accompaniment to it. Hope can never be divorced from salvation because salvation is the ground of our hope. But hope that is seen is not hope. Once we have realized the heirship that has been promised to us and the redemption of our bodies, we will no longer hope in them. Therefore, if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it. This expression of patience is a fitting conclusion to the chapter which deals with the provision of assurance. Looking to a future adoption of the body provides opportunity for our faith to grow and mature. Consequently the virtue of patience is developed in addition to hope and faith. Therefore, although we are assured of eternal heirship, nevertheless we develop patience in waiting for the coming of the Lord.

4. The assurance of present intercession. 8:26-27.

26-27. Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities. The great consolation we have during this period of waiting for the Lord's return is the presence of the Holy Spirit. He is the One who helps our infirmities (Gr astheneia) which is better translated in the singular. We have one great infirmity while waiting for the Lord to return to us, and that is we know not what we knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.

28 And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.

29 For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren.

30 Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

should pray for as we ought. The only thing our Lord's disciples asked Him to teach them was how to pray. Each believer encounters that same difficulty in knowing how to pray and for what to pray. Consequently, God has given His Holy Spirit to make intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. Even when we do not know what to say to God, the Holy Spirit interprets our innermost feelings and intercedes in our behalf. These inarticulate sounds are heard by God when intercession is made for us by the Holy Spirit. And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit. The Scriptures frequently speak of God as One who searches the heart (cf. I Chr 28:9; Ps 139:1, 23; Jer 17:10; I Cor 4:5; Heb 4:12-13). As the omniscient eye of God searches even the inarticulate groanings of our hearts, the Spirit of God makes intercession for the saint of God. Thus, intercession is made for us not only by God the Son, who sits at the right hand of God the Father, but also by God the Spirit who dwells within the believer.

5. The assurance of the eternal purpose of God. 8:28-34.

28. And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. In the midst of the distress of this world, Paul has presented the future adoption of our bodies at the coming of the Lord as a source of strength and hope. The Spirit of God within us is also given as a source of strength. Now the apostle lists a third source of encouragement for the believer. In the midst of the sufferings of this life, God has given us knowledge that He is working every detail of life to the end established in His eternal purpose. Grammatically, all things may be either subject or object of the verb. Therefore, it is God who works things out according to His will. To them who are the called according to his purpose. The called is not in the general sense of "many are called but few are chosen" but in the specific sense of those who comprise the family of God. Therefore, the promise of all things working together for good is given to a specific group, the called (i.e., those who are in Christ Jesus and justified by His blood). The world in general does not have this promise.

29-30. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son. The last word of the preceding verse is the purpose of God. Paul now expands on that purpose in verses 29 and 30 by means of a "sorites," a construction in which the predicate of one clause becomes the subject of the next clause. In the salvation provided by God, there is a link from eternity past, through the present, to eternity future. That link includes foreknowledge, predestination, calling, justification, and glorification. However, we must understand that the key word in this passage is the word purpose. All the others arise out of the purpose of God and our understanding of them must be in consort with God's eternal purpose.

Probably no doctrine has evoked a greater variety of interpretations than that of God's foreknowledge. Although it is true that foreknowledge means to know beforehand, in the context of God's purpose, to interpret the expression in this way would be an oversimplification. For God to preview history in order to discern our response to the gospel, and then act accordingly, would make the creature sovereign over the Creator. The word foreknow occurs infrequently in the New Testament, and therefore a clear understanding of its import must be seen from the way it is used in both Old and New Testament Scriptures. When God takes knowledge of His people it is more than just a basic understanding of them (cf. Amos 3:2; Hos 13:5; I Cor 8:3; Gal 4:3; etc.). It is the knowledge a father has of his child. God knows and loves the world, but His foreknowledge of His own is an intimate knowledge which results in an abiding love (5:8) for us that draws us to Him in salvation.

He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son. God's foreordination or predestination must not be equated with fatalism. Fatalism says that the world is plunging headlong toward an indeterminate end. Paul teaches that there is a very determinate end for those who are the called. Their end or goal is to be conformed to the image of God's Son, Jesus Christ. We are not plunging downward but are progressing upward in being sanctified toward the Son of Righteousness. As believers, we should become more and more like the Master every day. But God has planned for us a final and complete conformity to the resurrection glory of the Lord for He is the firstborn among many brethren (I Cor 15:49; II Cor 3:18; Phil 3:21; I Jn 3:2). Since the term firstborn always implies a position of supremacy, it is the eternal purpose of God that we become increasingly more conformed to the image of Him who is the Supreme Being in the universe. Them he also called. As believers, we were foreknown and foreordained prior to our birth. Yet God does not manipulate us like puppets. Rather He calls us, He beseeches us to receive His offer of salvation. When we are quickened by the Spirit of God (Eph 2:2), and respond to His call in faith, we are then justified in His sight by faith.

Them he also justified. Justification is a vital doctrine in Pauline thinking. When God justifies us, He reckons us as if we are righteous because of the atoning death of Jesus Christ. He imputes the righteousness of Christ to our account. Therefore, whom he justified, them he also glorified. The final step in the purpose of God is the glorification of His people. We will ultimately be completely conformed to "the image of His Son." "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory" (Col 3:4; cf. I Jn 3:2). This is God's view of salvation. Foreknowledge and foreordination belong to the eternal past, in the eternal counsel of the Godhead; calling and justification take place in the believer's present experience; the glory which begins now will not ultimately and completely be known until the future. Although salvation from our viewpoint is an instantaneous act, it has in fact stretched from eternity past to eternity future and finds its basis, not in our merit or in the works of the law, but in the purpose of God. In the depression and turmoil of these days, nothing can be of greater encouragement to believers than to know that God is working all things together for our good and His glory.

31 What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?

31. Paul now asks a series of four rhetorical questions in relation to the eternal purpose of God. What shall we then say to these things? In essence, this verse is the conclusion Paul draws to the first eight chapters of Romans. What will our response be to what has been said? If God be for us, who can be against us? This is not one of the four rhetorical questions but rather the answer to the first question. Paul's only response is he has complete assurance that the eternal purpose of God will come to fruition because God is God. Who can be against us? does not mean that we have no adversaries. Verses 35 and 36 list a great number of adversaries. By this Paul means that there is no adversary too great to thwart the eternal purpose of God.

32 He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?

32. As evidence of the fact that God will bring His eternal purpose to its proper conclusion, Paul argues that God spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all. These words are reminiscent of the classic example of the redemptive efficacy of martyrdom which is given in Genesis 22:12. There God says to Abraham, "Thou hast not withheld (Gr pheidomai, as here) thy son, thine only son from me." So much did God love us that He did not spare His own Son in providing atonement for us. Paul then argues from the greater to the lesser in the rhetorical question, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? If God did not spare His own Son, but delivered Him up to the cross of Calvary, it isn't logical that He would fail to bring to its completed end the purpose for which Christ was sacrificed.

33 Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth.

34 Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.

35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?

36 As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.

37 Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.

38 For I am persuaded, that neither shall

Hence, all the gifts and blessings which accompany salvation are promised to us even as salvation is ours.

33. Paul's third rhetorical question is, Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? This question is along the same line as that in verse 31, Who can be against us? Paul is issuing a challenge to the universe that if there is any man, any angel, any demon, anyone who can bring forth a charge and lay it at the doorstep of God's elect, let him do so now. In answer to this question Paul says, It is God that justifieth. Since the called are justified by God, therefore no one will be able to appeal God's verdict of justification. Every tongue that attempts to do so will be silenced (cf. Isa 50:8-9; 54:17).

34. Who is he that condemneth? This fourth rhetorical question belongs with the preceding statement, It is God that justifieth. Paul is saying that anyone can issue a charge, but only One has the authority to condemn and that authority is committed into the hands of God the Son (Jn 5:22). In answer to this question he says, It is Christ that died. Only the Lord God could devise a plan in which the only person in the universe who can condemn us, is the very person who died for us. But more than His death is that He is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. The death of the Lord Jesus on our behalf would avail little apart from His resurrection. It is the living Lord that insures the security of God's eternal purpose. Consequently, He is now sitting at the right hand of God where He is highly exalted in glory and sovereignty. By the authority which is innate to His deity, the Lord Jesus makes intercession for us to God the Father. By His victorious death, His victorious resurrection, His victorious ascension into heaven, and His victorious intercession for us, the Lord Jesus has sealed the eternal purpose of God. In the whole universe there is nothing which can provide greater assurance than the finished work of Christ.

6. The assurance of the eternal presence of God. 8:35-39.

35. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Our assurance in the eternal presence of God is based upon the unfailing love of God. Again Paul asks a rhetorical question. The love of God keeps us in the palm of His hand and has been demonstrated to us through the atoning sacrifice of His son, Jesus Christ (5:8). Paul then amplifies the question by asking if it is possible that tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, or the sword can enter our lives and undo what Christ has accomplished on our behalf at the cross.

36. As it is written. Before Paul answers his question, there is a verbatim quote from Psalm 44:22. This quote is introduced to indicate that God's people shall endure affliction even as the faithful did in the Old Testament. However, the persecution and tribulation that enters our lives, which has featured so prominently in this chapter, is not sufficient to separate us from God's love, demonstrated at the cross of Christ.

37. Now for Paul's answer. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. In the midst of illness, suffering, and myriad of life's afflictions, we have God's assurance of His eternal presence and therefore are said to be more than conquerors. The word used here in the original language is hypernikaō which literally means that we are "super-conquerors." We do not merely hold our own in the face of testing, but through suffering we are drawn closer to Christ and become more conformed to His image. Notice, however, the means by which we are super-conquerors, through him that loved us. Personal heroism and inner strength are not contributors to success in the Christian life. As we owe our justification to Him and our sanctification to Him, we also owe our assurance to Him. All we have we owe to Him.

38-39. For I am persuaded . . . shall be able to separate us death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come.

39 Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Paul searches the entire universe to see if there is anything that can possibly separate us from the eternal presence of God. He goes first to the realm of death and finds nothing there. Then he turns to the realm of life and again finds nothing. He looks to the angels and they have no power to separate us. He turns to principalities which, in this case, may refer to the angelic hosts representing Satan. There is nothing there. He proceeds to examine things present and finds nothing. He explores the future and in the things to come there is nothing which can separate us. Nothing can happen now nor in the future which can remove the love of God from us or us from His eternal security.

Paul does not stop here for next he searches the entire universe and nothing in the expanses of space, height, nor depth can be found to prohibit the presence of God from us. But just in case he has missed something, Paul then says that there is no other creature or creation of God that is able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus. Nowhere can the apostle find anything in the whole universe of God which can sever the relationship that the children of God have with their Father's love. This great assurance comes to those who are "the called" in Christ Jesus our Lord.

"Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine! Oh what a foretaste of glory divine! Heir of salvation, purchase of God, born of His Spirit, washed in His blood." Paul has completed this great chapter in the same way he began it. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus (8:1). Paul is persuaded that nothing shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. All these wonderful promises belong to us because we belong to Him.

IV. THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD EXEMPLIFIED.

9:1-11:36.

Although in many ways Romans 9-11 is parenthetical, nevertheless it is an integral part of Paul's argument for justification by faith alone. Paul may have been accused of being so dedicated as the apostle to the Gentiles that he had completely forgotten about his Jewish kith and kin. Therefore he addresses the problem of Israel before proceeding to the practical section of this epistle. Also, the original believers in Rome appear to have been Jews; but in Paul's day the church was predominantly Gentiles. Those Jewish believers at Rome needed Paul's reassurance of their place in the kingdom of God. But above all, the many messianic promises to the Jews of old necessitated an understanding that God would yet honor those promises. If Paul's message of salvation by faith is true, then why did not Paul's own people receive that message? Paul must deal with the problem of Jewish unbelief before he can proceed to a conclusion concerning the life we live in Christ Jesus.

Paul's treatment of the problem is daring. He readily admits that the Jewish nation has rejected the gospel, and yet he takes a firm stand in declaring that God is not finished with the Jew. Paul views everything that happens as part of the eternal purpose of God and therefore moving toward God's desired end.

A. Righteousness Exemplified in Divine Sovereignty.

9:1-33.

1. Sovereignty exhibited in Israel's identity. 9:1-8.

9:1-3. I say the truth in Christ, I lie not. Paul arrests the attention of his readers by certifying the truthfulness of what he is about to say. He adds the negative I lie not to emphasize the veracity of his statement (cf. II Cor 11:31; Gal 1:20; I Tim 2:7). To this he adds my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost. This indicates that to what his tongue will speak, his conscience will attest.

CHAPTER 9

I SAY the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost,

2 That I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart.

3 For I could wish that myself were accused from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh:

4 Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises:

5 Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.

6 Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel:

7 Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but, In Isaac shall thy seed be called.

8 That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: but the children of the promise are counted for the seed.

9 For this is the word of promise, At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son.

In the midst of Paul's expression of joy and great assurance, he also bears witness That I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. This unceasing pain and sorrow which Paul bears is for his kinsmen, the Jews. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren. This statement about being anathema from Christ is reminiscent of Moses' statement made upon returning from Mount Sinai. As the great leader viewed the children of Israel involved in the wicked worship of the golden calf, he desired to have his name blotted out of God's book in return for the salvation of Israel (Ex 32:30-33). The understanding of Paul, however, in relation to justification by faith, does not allow him to actually wish himself accursed from Christ (i.e., separate from Christ for everlasting destruction). Paul knows that his life is not his own. Therefore he is not the master of his own life and does not have the power to cast away the eternal life that was purchased for him by the blood of Christ. The verb is in the imperfect tense ("I could wish"), meaning that Paul would accept everlasting destruction in return for the salvation of Israel, but God will not allow him to do so.

4-5. Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth . . . Paul does not address his kinsmen according to the flesh by their racial name, but as "Israelites," their theocratic name. Unto them pertain the adoption (i.e., sonship; cf. Ex 4:22-23; Deut 14:1-2; Hos 11:1; Mal 1:6); the glory (which appeared on Mount Sinai, Ex 24:16-17 and filled the tabernacle, Ex 40:34-38); the covenants (made to Abraham, Moses, and David); the giving of the law (the Mosaic constitution); the service of God (the ordinance of worship and sacrifice in the sanctuary, Heb 9:1-6); and the promises (that of forgiveness of sins, the inheritance of the Promised Land, but most especially the promise of the Messiah, Gal 3:16).

Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came. All of these privileges pertain to the Patriarchs and their seed. Notice that Paul does not say that Christ belongs to them but that He came from their flesh. This is to indicate that the culmination of all the promises given to the Patriarchs is seen in the person of Jesus Christ. Each of these privileges finds its focus in Him, who is over all, God blessed for ever.

6-8. For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel. Paul now repeats the distinction he made in 2:28-29 between Israel of natural destiny and the true Jew. Often distinctions have been made between Israel and those who are truly of Israel (cf. Jn 8:30-32). The Lord Jesus spoke of Nathanael as "an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile" (Jn 1:47). Paul speaks of the Israelites as being true Israel when they are "born after the Spirit" (Gal 4:29). Being of the seed of Abraham does not make one an Israelite, for Abraham had two sons, Ishmael and Isaac. "In Isaac shall thy seed be called" (Gen 21:12). But the children of the promise are counted for the seed. In Paul's understanding, the children of promise are those who believe in the God of Abraham and their faith is imputed to them for righteousness, as was his. Since not all of Abraham's descendants through Isaac have experienced this type of faith, not all of Israel are truly of Israel.

2. Sovereignty exhibited in God's personal choices. 9:9-13.

9. For this is the word of promise, At this time will I come and Sarah shall have a son. This quotation from Genesis 18:10 is in accordance with the promise that Isaac would be born, a promise which seemed so unlikely that it provoked Sarah to laughter (Gen 18:12). Nevertheless, Isaac was born and, although not the firstborn of Abraham, he was God's choice as the son through whom the promises of God would be manifested. God chose Isaac. It was His purpose that in Isaac shall thy seed be called. Paul advances Isaac as an illustration that God deals on the principle of His sovereignty.

10-13. And not only this. Paul concedes that someone might say that the example of Isaac is inappropriate because Ishmael was the son of the bondwoman and therefore not truly legitimate. Consequently, Paul introduces a second example of God's election of grace. This time the example is Jacob. Had the principle of sovereign election been seen only in the life of Isaac, it would not have produced a biblical pattern. But this principle is seen as well in God's choice of Isaac's sons.

Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac. There is no question that the sons Jacob and Esau are both legitimately in the line of Isaac, the promised child. Yet Paul advances that God, in His sovereignty, supersedes the process of natural primogenitureship and chooses Jacob the younger to be served by Esau the elder. The reason for this choice is that the purpose of God according to election might stand. Every action of God arises out of His eternal purpose (8:28). The selection of Jacob to be the heir of the promise instead of his older brother Esau is a perfect example of the sovereignty of God exhibited in God's personal choices. Jacob was chosen being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil. Salvation is never upon the basis of human merit, not of works, but of him that calleth. Salvation is always upon the basis of divine grace which arises out of the eternal purpose of the sovereign God.

As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated. The expression Esau have I hated cannot simply mean to love less but must mean, in the context of Malachi 1:1-5, that God has actually directed his wrath toward Esau and his descendants. The judgments upon Edom are positive judgments and not merely the absence of blessing. God displays His wrath upon the sins of Edom not in unholy rancor but in righteous judgment. He does the same with individuals.

3. Sovereignty exhibited in God's powerful will. 9:14-24.

14. What shall we say then? When Paul asserted this teaching on the election of God's grace, he was well aware that many would object. Their objection was embodied in the question, Is there unrighteousness with God? Would not God be unrighteous if He chose one man and not another? To the human observer the choice of Jacob in preference to Esau, prior to their birth, must appear to be arbitrary and unjust. This is because the human observer is acting on the basis of his limited knowledge. Paul's response to the thought that God is unrighteous in choosing one over another is the strongest negative he can express, his characteristic, God forbid.

15-16. I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy. This statement is a quote from Exodus 33:19 and is God's response to Moses' request, "I beseech thee, show me thy glory" (Ex 33:18). Paul quotes this verse without commentary. He intends to show that even Moses had no particular claim to any favor before God. God operates on the just principle of His eternal purpose. So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy. Again it is emphasized that God's mercy finds its cause in Himself and not in any activity of man. As in Galatians 2:2 and Philippians 2:16, "running" is symbolic of human activity and has no effect whatsoever on the mercy or purpose of God.

17. For the scripture saith unto Pharaoh. The case of the Pharaoh of the Exodus strikingly illustrates this principle of divine mercy. Pharaoh is said to have been raised up by God. That I might show my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth. Not even the power of the great Egyptian Pharaoh was sufficient to thwart the eternal purpose of God or to prohibit Him from blessing and delivering

10 And not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac;

11 (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;)

12 It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger.

13 As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.

14 What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid.

15 For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.

16 So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy.

17 For the scripture saith unto Pharaoh, Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might shew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.

18 Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth.

19 Thou wilt say then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? For who hath resisted his will?

20 Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?

21 Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?

22 What if God, willing to shew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction:

23 And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the vessels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory,

24 Even us, whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles?

His people. The Scripture which Paul quotes is Exodus 9:16 where the Hebrew verb amadth meaning "stand" is used for the expression "have I raised thee up." God put Pharaoh in a position of being the Egyptian king. He also preserved him there in spite of his disobedience, so that the purpose of God may be fulfilled. The purpose was that His name might be declared throughout the earth (cf. Ex 15:14; Josh 2:10; 9:9; I Sam 4:7-9).

18. Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth. The initial phrase of this verse echoes Exodus 33:19 but the later phrase refers to the occasions on which the heart of Pharaoh was hardened. It must be recognized that Pharaoh hardened his own heart (cf. Ex 5:2; 7:3, 13) by his deliberate opposition to the will of the God of Israel. However, a time came when he was judicially bound over in hardness by God, and the initial indifference of Pharaoh's heart was cemented by God into a permanent hardness (cf. Ex 5:21; 7:23; 9:12; 10:1, 20, 27; 11:10; 14:4, 8).

19-20. Why doth he yet find fault? For who hath resisted his will? Paul knows that the unbeliever will object to his teaching, saying that God cannot find fault with him because it is the way God made him. If God is sovereign, it is impossible to resist His will and therefore man is not accountable for his lost condition. Although there is a fallacy in this type of reasoning (God did not make man the way he is; He created him in His own image and man is what he is today because of his own sin), Paul does not argue that point. Rather his reply is, Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Paul maintains that the creature is not competent to sit in judgment on his Creator. To judge the validity of God's actions is to imply that man is more righteous than God; to judge the wisdom of God's movements is to imply that man is wiser than God. Thus Paul sternly rebukes any type of reasoning which inverts the divine order of creature to Creator. Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? God is not answerable to man for what He does, but He must act consistent with His character. Divine sovereignty does not permit God to do what divine character will not allow. If we can trust the character of God, we can trust the wisdom of His sovereignty as well.

21-24. The apostle now engages in a bit of philosophical argumentation. Hath not the potter power over the clay? . . . What if God, willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-suffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction. Here Paul argues that man displays the justice and grace of God, both through the persistent unbeliever (whom he calls a vessel fitted for wrath), and through the believer, (a vessel of mercy). We must remember Paul does not say that God created one vessel to wrath and another to mercy. He endured the vessels of wrath which were fitted to destruction and made known the riches to His glory on the vessels of mercy which he had afore prepared unto glory. As the potter does not take one lump of clay and make it a good lump, and another lump and make it bad, so too God does not make one person evil and another one good. We must notice that the expression fitted to destruction is in the Greek middle voice, and should be interpreted that man fits himself for destruction. God never does that. On the other hand, are those who were prepared by the grace of God through faith in His Son and are fitted by God for eternal life. With a thankful heart Paul notes that God has sovereignly called to glory both those of the Jews and also those of the Gentiles. As believers, whether Jew or Gentile, we have been the recipients of God's mercy and have been prepared for the glory of His presence. For this we should be intensely thankful.

25 As he saith also in Ō'see, I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved.

26 And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God.

27 E-šā'ias also crieth concerning Israel, Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved:

28 For he will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth.

29 And as E-šā'ias said before, Except the Lord of Sāb'a-ōth had left us a seed, we had been as Sōd'o-ma, and been made like unto Go-mōr'rha.

30 What shall we say then? That the Gentiles, which followed not after righteousness, have attained to righteousness, even the righteousness which is of faith.

31 But Israel, which followed after the law of righteousness, hath not attained to the law of righteousness.

32 Wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumblingstone;

33 As it is written, Behold, I lay in 25-26. As he saith also in Osee. Paul now appeals to a number of Old Testament prophecies concerning God's people and the principle of election. He paraphrases Hosea 2:23, I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved. In the tragedy of his domestic life, this Old Testament man of God saw a parable of the relationship between God and Israel. Hosea took Gomer to be his wife and a child was born which he named Jezreel. But when Gomer's second and third children were born, of whom Hosea was not convinced he was the father, names were given which expressed his dismay, They were named in Hebrew, Lo-ammi (no kin of mine) and Loruhamah (one for whom no natural affection is felt). These names strikingly indicate God's attitude toward His people Israel when they broke their covenant with Him and forsook His commands. And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God. Paul does not make an application here to the prophecy of Hosea but it is evident that he is extracting from this prophecy the principle of divine election. He shows that great numbers of Gentiles, who had never been "the people of God," could now lay claim to the same relationship with God which Israel had.

27-28. Next Paul appeals to the prophecy of Isaiah 10:22-23. The meaning of Isaiah's prophecy is that although Israel is numerous as a people, nevertheless only a small minority will survive the judgment of God by the Assyrian Empire. A remnant shall be saved. If only a remnant of Israel will survive, there will be at least a remnant. God has always had a people. Paul applies Isaiah's teaching of the remnant to his own day. Although Israel has rejected God, nevertheless there are some who, through the grace of God, have received the salvation of God. The teaching of verse 28 is that the punitive judgment of God will exhibit both thoroughness and great dispatch. God will cut short His working upon the earth to prevent Israel from spiritually destroying herself. In His eternal purpose a remnant, at least, will be saved.

29. Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodom, and been made like unto Gomorrah. This quote from Isaiah 1:9 reveals that Isaiah placed squarely on the grace of God the fact that a seed (i.e., a remnant, the very germ of the nation) had been saved and they had not been obliterated like Sodom and Gomorrah. To the Lord of Hosts alone belongs the praise for the salvation of any of the wicked Israelites.

30-31. What shall we say then? Paul's summary question in this chapter follows the same form as we have seen elsewhere in this epistle (cf. 3:5; 4:1; 6:1; 7:7; 8:31; 9:14). The Gentiles . . . have attained to righteousness . . . But Israel . . . hath not attained to the law of righteousness. God has always saved on the basis of faith and never on the basis of good works. Therefore Gentiles can come to the Saviour and follow after the righteousness which is of faith, even without the privileges of the Jew, and with no prior knowledge of the Scriptures. The Jews, on the other hand, who had great privileges and knew well the Old Testament Scriptures, tragically attempted to establish their own righteousness by adherence to the works of the Mosaic law. Consequently Paul concludes that the partial blindness of Israel exhibits God's sovereignty in allowing those who were most distant from Himself (the Gentiles) to come unto Him by faith.

32-33. How can such as has just been described possibly happen to Paul's kinsmen according to the flesh? Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For they stumbled at that stumbling stone; As it is written, Behold, I lay in Zion a stumbling stone and rock of offense.

ROMANS 10:1

Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offence: and whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.

The great tragedy of the Jewish nation was that the Messiah they so long awaited became to them a stumbling stone rather than a shelter in which to hide. The quotation here is from Isaiah 28:16, which is set in the context of Israel trusting Egypt for deliverance from the Assyrians instead of trusting in the power of God. Those who trust in God need never fear that their trust has been ill-placed or is ill-founded. Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. Had Israel trusted in her God rather than her law and her neighbors, she would not have been confounded and dispersed throughout the world. But the partial blindness of Israel, in the eternal purpose of God, has wrought good to the Gentiles and to the world in general. God is now calling out a people unto His name from both Jews and the Gentiles.

B. Righteousness Exemplified in Human Responsibility. 10:1-21.

The groundwork for chapter 10 has already been laid in 9:30-33. The emphasis here is on righteousness and why Israel lacks it. Paul will lay the responsibility for the lack of righteousness squarely on the shoulders of the individual. He knows that when sinners are brought into the presence of divine sovereignty their frequent response is to justify themselves by placing the responsibility for their sin on God. Paul does not apologize in any way for what he has said about God's sovereignty in chapter 9. He does not retreat at all from his strong belief that God has always worked by the principle of election. However he does demonstrate that God is not responsible for the unbeliever's lost condition. Man alone is responsible and it is futile to try to hide behind divine sovereignty and the doctrine of election as an excuse for personal sin.

1. Nearness of the gospel: opportunity for responsibility. 10:1-10.

CHAPTER 10

BRETHREN, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

2 For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.

4 For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

10:1-3. Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. In the first three verses of chapter 10, Paul reiterates his feeling for his kinsmen the Jews. He has already expressed this in the first three verses of chapter 9. Even though he is the apostle to the Gentiles, Paul takes no satisfaction in Israel's rejection of God. He bears witness to the fact that the Jews have a definite zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. The problem with Israel is that her improper motives have caused her to have a zeal for keeping the Law, but not for being the nation God would have her be. They have read the Law and memorized the Law, but have never internalized the truth of the Law about God's righteousness and consequently they are going about to establish their own righteousness, and in so doing they have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. To earn righteousness is to gain spurious righteousness. Any attempt to establish one's own righteousness is open rebellion against God and His method of establishing righteousness in us.

4. For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone that believeth. In what respect is Christ the end (Gr telos) of the law? The word may mean, on the one hand, that Christ is the goal or purpose for which the law was given. In this respect it would mean that the law was aimed at bringing us to Christ and that He came to fulfill the law and thus give it validity (cf. Isa 42:21; Mt 5:17). But on the other hand, this word may properly mean that Christ is the terminal point of the law. With the advent of the Lord Jesus, the old order, of which the law was a significant part, has been done away and the new order of the Holy Spirit of God has been instituted.

There is one qualification to Christ being the end of the law for righteousness. He is only the end, to everyone that believeth. Those who yet attempt to establish their own righteousness do not find Christ as the end of the law and consequently do not discover true righteousness.

5 For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, That the man which doeth those things shall live by them.

6 But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above:)

7 Or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.)

8 But what saith it? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach;

9 That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

The antithesis seen in verses 3 and 4 between self-established righteousness and God-established righteousness is now alluded to as recorded by Moses. Moses speaks both of the righteousness which is of the law and of the righteousness which is of faith. For the righteousness of the law he quotes Leviticus 18:5.

5-8. That the man which doeth those things shall live by them. In reference to Moses' teaching concerning the righteousness which is of faith, the apostle quotes Deuteronomy 30:12, 14, Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? The righteousness which is of the law taught men to do and live. But the righteousness which is by faith teaches men to believe and live (10:6). The Pentateuch clearly shows that the law is to be written upon the hearts of men. It was not to be an external means of external justification. Unfortunately, the Jews mistakenly perverted the law and were attempting to keep the law outwardly without the right inward heart attitude.

Throughout this passage Paul is interested in establishing the accessibility of the message of God's righteousness. To that end he counseled the Jew, Say not in thine heart, who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above). This appears to be a taunt. The Jew feels the righteousness of God is inaccessible because no one can ascend into heaven to inquire about it. Paul teaches, however, that we do not have to ascend into heaven for God came and tabernacled among us in the person of Jesus Christ, to show us the righteousness of God. Similarly he asks, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead). Again, a taunt of unbelief. This smacks of a denial of the resurrection of Christ. We do not need to descend into the abyss to learn of God's righteousness for Christ is alive and is living proof of that righteousness.

In putting an end to these foolish questions the apostle quotes Deuteronomy 30:12-14, "The word is nigh unto thee, even in thy mouth, and thy heart; that is, the word of faith which we preach." Paul maintains that the true word concerning the righteousness of God is near the Jews. He even goes so far as to say that it is in their mouths and in their hearts. How can this be? The answer is that when entering a town to preach, Paul immediately proceeded to the synagogue. Whether the Jews believed his message or not, when he left, they remained behind to discuss what Paul had taught. The very message of the gospel of Christ had been in their mouths and in their hearts, but they did not believe. The truth of righteousness was as close to them as it could possibly be, but they failed in their responsibility to receive that truth.

9-10. That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus. Paul has just made reference that the gospel has been in the mouths of the Jews. Now he builds on that thought. He explains that the confession "Jesus is Lord" refers to the lordship which Jesus exercises as the exalted Christ. Salvation must entail faith in One who is Lord. Confession of the lordship of Christ presupposes the incarnation, death, and resurrection of the Lord. The apostle goes on to say that in order to be saved one must believe in thine heart that God has raised him from the dead. Necessary belief in the resurrection is mentioned because new life to the believer is contingent upon a living Lord.

Token assent that Jesus is Lord and the fact of His resurrection is not sufficient for salvation. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness. Belief in the saving power of the risen Christ must come from the innermost part of man's being. This is described as man's heart. But more than that, with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. Confession with the mouth is evidence of genuine faith in the heart. Frequently both our Lord and the Apostle Paul indicate the coordination of faith and a confession (cf. Mt 10:22; Lk 12:8; I Tim 6:12). The natural response of the lordship and resurrection of Jesus Christ 11 For the scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.

12 For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him.

13 For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

14 How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?

15 And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!

believed is the lordship and resurrection of Jesus Christ confessed. Confession with the mouth does not bring about genuineness of belief in the heart, but it gives evidence to it.

2. Offer of the gospel: ground for responsibility. 10:11-15.

11-13. For the scripture saith. As is Paul's customary habit, he always appeals to Scripture to validate his teaching. Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. The key element in salvation is again seen to be faith. Salvation is not appropriated to the sinner's life until there is a heartfelt belief in the Lord Jesus. But just as the gospel is near all, likewise it is offered to all. The word whosoever is used to indicate the universality of God's offer of salvation. For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek. The immediate purpose of the universal offer of salvation is to show the Jew that it is possible for the heathen Gentile to be saved. God's prerequisite to salvation is faith, not racial distinction. Therefore the call to salvation is to whoever will believe, whether Jew or Gentile. The reason is that the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. The Lord God is rich in His attitude toward all sinners and ready to receive anyone who calls on Him for salvation.

For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. Paul restates his belief that the gospel is offered to all by quoting the prophet Joel (Joel 2:32). The expression call upon the name of the Lord is a common Old Testament expression of worship to God (cf. Gen 4:26; 12:8; I Kgs 18:24; Ps 79:6; Isa 6:47). Paul's application of this formula to Christ is another example of his practice of taking Old Testament passages which refer to God the Father and, without any qualification whatsoever, applying them to Christ. Thus, in the New Testament, sinners are advised to call upon the name of the Lord Jesus Christ (cf. Acts 9:14, 21; 22:16; I Cor 1:2; II Tim 2:22). The ground for human responsibility in salvation arises out of the fact that the gospel is offered to all, irrespective of national heritage. Both Jew and Gentile may be saved by the grace of God.

14-15. Paul now gives a rationale for his responsibility to present the gospel worldwide. Men are told that they must call upon the name of the Lord to be saved. However, they will not call unless they have been moved to believe in Him, and they cannot believe in Him unless they hear about Him. Furthermore, they cannot hear about Him unless the good news of the gospel is brought to them. The gospel message will not be taken to the unbeliever until someone is sent to him. Consequently salvation begins with God's sending process. Isaiah was asked the double question, "Whom shall I send?" and "Who will go for us?" Isaiah's answer was, "Here am I; send me" (Isa 6:8). Isaiah was willing to go with the message, but he could not go until he was sent by God. Consequently, Paul indicates that each of us has been sent by the Lord Jesus (Jn 20:21) and the success of getting the gospel message to those who need it is now dependent upon our obedience as servants of the Lord. We must proclaim the gospel message in every nook and cranny of the globe, because we are commissioned to do so; for unless they hear they cannot be saved.

How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace. Probably these words were originally intended to describe those who carried the good news home to Jerusalem at the days of Babylonian exile were passed. But in the context of the New Testament, these words indicate that the feet of a gospel messenger are beautiful things to those who believe the message and place their faith in the Lord Jesus. They become new creations in Christ Jesus. This may happen to any man who hears the gospel and believes.

16 But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For E-šā'ias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report?

17 So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

18 But I say, Have they not heard? Yes verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world.

19 But I say, Did not Israel know? First Moses saith, I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation I will anger you.

20 But E-šā'ias is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me.

21 But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people.

CHAPTER 11

I SAY then, Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.

2 God hath not cast away his people which he foreknew. Wot ye not what

3. Disobedience to the gospel: failure of responsibility. 10:16-21.

16-17. Paul now comes to the crux of his argument concerning human responsibility and the righteousness of God. He claims that God takes the responsibility for Jewish unbelief and places it squarely upon the shoulders of the Jews. The gospel has been near unto them, it's been offered unto them, but it has not been believed by them. As proof of this he again quotes from the Jews' own Scripture as recorded in Isaiah 53:1, Lord, who hath believed our report? The report was Isaiah's message of the gospel concerning the Messiah. It was brought to the mouths of the Jews and offered to them, but that message was not obeyed. So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. The word translated report (Gr akoē) in verse 16 is the same word in the original language as that translated hearing in verse 17. We must understand that hearing alone does not bring salvation, but faith in the message heard does. The heathen is not saved by looking at a tree and conceptualizing a god-form represented in that tree. The moralist is not saved by leading a moral life-style. Salvation comes when the message of the gospel is preached, believed, and then confessed by men. That message must come from the Word of God.

18-19. But I say, Have they not heard? In typical pauline style the apostle anticipates an objection from his Jewish readers. Is it not possible that some of his Jewish brethren have not heard the message of the gospel? Paul uses the language of Psalm 19 to remind them of the testimony of the stars and the heavens. The gospel had gone out through the entire Jewish world and therefore there was no excuse for ignorance of its claims.

20. But Isaiah is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not. Now Paul very convincingly turns to the greatest of the Jewish prophets and quotes Isaiah 65:1. The prophet's statement is very bold because he utterly ruled out any merit or privilege on the part of the Jews, and said that the Gentiles, who had been indifferent to God, would someday have the gospel preached to them and would come to a knowledge of God. Paul proclaims that this is that day and that the gospel is open to anyone who believes on Jesus Christ.

21. Paul now brings to a conclusion the exemplification of righteousness and human responsibility. He places the blame on men and not on God. All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people. The Lord God has patiently dealt with Israel throughout history (all day long) but she has been disobedient to His love. She is therefore guilty of spurning the love of God, and the responsibility for her future is clearly her own.

C. Righteousness Exemplified in Israel's Future. 11:1-36.

1. Israel's rejection leaves a remnant. 11:1-10.

11:1. I say then, Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. The problem of the unbelief of Israel as a disobedient and gainsaying people was prevalent in chapters 9 and 10. Paul now anticipates this theme will cause the Jews to wonder if God is finished with Israel as a nation. Thus he frames his question in Greek in such a way as to require the answer "no." The answer to the question is God forbid. He will give several lines of proof.

As exhibit A, Paul offers himself. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin. There are two views why he offers this biographical material but the most probable one (which may boast exponents in Luther, Calvin, Hodge, Godet, etc.) is that Paul is appealing to his own salvation as proof that God has not completely abandoned Israel. Paul was enjoying the promises of God and as long as he did, he offered a living example of God's continuing relationship to Israel.

2. God hath not cast away his people which he foreknew. As exhibit B, Paul now offers the faithfulness of God. God's

ROMANS 11:3

the scripture saith of E-lī'as? how he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying,

3 Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life.

4 But what saith the answer of God unto him? I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Bā'al.

5 Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace.

6 And if by grace, then is it no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise work is no more work.

7 What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded

8 (According as it is written, God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear;) unto this day.

9 And David saith, Let their table be foreknowledge is the guarantee that He has not cast off His people. Had He done so, it would mean a revocation of God's promises to Abraham, Moses, David, and others which guaranteed to them an ultimate restoration of the seed of Abraham.
388

As exhibit C, Paul offers an Old Testament quotation. The reference is to I Kings 19:10, 14 where Elijah is the speaker. Wot ye not what the scripture saith of Elijah? How he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying.

3-4. Although apostasy has been present many times in the life of Israel, yet God has always preserved a remnant of true believers out of that apostasy. The Northern Kingdom in Elijah's day had grossly violated her covenant relationship with God and had slain His prophets. So bleak was the situation that Elijah felt he was the only believer left. But what saith the answer of God unto him? The Greek expression for the answer is chrēmatismos which is used of a divine response. To his question, Elijah received a divine and therefore certain reply, I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal. The presence of a remnant of believers in the Northern Kingdom meant that God would preserve that kingdom. He did so for another one hundred thirty years. Even after the Assyrian captivity, there were a few of believing Israel from the ten tribes who returned to form the nucleus of the Hebrew population in Galilee during the days of Paul.

5-6. Having presented three lines of evidence to support his answer to the question Hath God cast away His people?, Paul now draws a conclusion. It is utterly ridiculous to think that the nation Israel has been entirely rejected of God, for even at the present time, there is a remnant according to the election of grace. This remnant of Israel is not saved by her line of descent, nor by personal righteousness, but upon the same ground that Gentiles are saved—the grace of God. No claim to special merit can be made even by this remnant. And if by grace, then is it no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. A priori grace cannot include works. They are mutually exclusive. If works are to be added to grace, as the Jews thought, then grace is completely cancelled out. Salvation is a free gift and no payment at all can be made, else it would cease to be free.

7. What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for. What was Israel seeking for? Righteousness. Chapter 10 indicates that while seeking to establish their own righteousness, the Jews did not recognize the divine method of imputed righteousness. It was their own fault that they did not receive what they sought, for they sought it by works and not by faith. However the remnant did obtain the righteousness of God through the grace of God. The rest of national Israel has been blinded. The Greek verb pōroō which is used for blinded, means to render insensitive. Because they sought not the righteousness of God, the rest of Israel became insensitive to God. Such moral insensitivity was the judicial penalty inflicted on them for their refusal to heed the Word of God.

8. God hath given them the spirit of slumber. This quote from Deuteronomy 29:4 and Isaiah 29:10 gives reference to the unseeing eyes and unhearing ears of those who refuse to recognize the truth of God. Each of the gospel writers used this expression to indicate the Jews' failure to recognize Jesus as the Messiah (cf. Mt 13:14; Mk 4:12; Lk 8:10; Jn 12:40). The spirit of slumber (stupor or torpor) literally means "the spirit of stinging." The word (Gr katanyxis) is used for the numbness which is the result of a bite or poisonous sting. Israel had refused to seek righteousness after the manner of God and had attempted to establish her own righteousness. Thus God gave them to a blinding stupor and poisoning insensitivity toward the truth of God.

9-10. And David saith, Let their table be made a snare. The made a snare, and a trap, and a stumblingblock, and a recompence unto them:

10 Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see, and bow down their back alway.

11 I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy.

12 Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fullness?

13 For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office:

14 If by any means I may provoke to emulation them which are my flesh, and might save some of them.

15 For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?

16 For if the firstfruit be holy, the lump is also holy: and if the root be holy, so are the branches.

17 And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree; words snare, trap, and stumblingblock are closely related. Their combination serves to enforce the turning of the table to its opposite intent. The table is indicative of the bountiful mercy and blessing of God to Israel. Israel has not partaken of the good things of God's table. The recurring motif of the unseeing eyes indicates the principle that the temporary blindness has overtaken all of Israel, with the exception of the believing remnant. Thus the application is clear. Those who seek their own righteousness must bow down their back always to the bondage of sin. But those who seek the righteousness of Christ receive it by grace and are the believing remnant of God.

2. Israel's rejection is not permanent. 11:11-24.

11-12. I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid. Again Paul introduces his thought with a question and his reply of abhorrence. But rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy . . . One of the purposes of the fall of the Jewish nations, in the eyes of God, is that the Gentile nations may come to Him in salvation. In return this will provoke the Jews to jealousy, as was suggested in Romans 10:19 where Deuteronomy 32:21 was quoted. When the Jews see the Gentiles feasting on bread from the banquet table of God and enjoying the salvation which could have been theirs, they will be convinced of their apostasy and foolish rejection of Jesus as their Messiah. However, if the fall of the Jews brings the riches of salvation to the world, how much more their fullness, or large-scale conversion, will bring riches to the Gentile nations and glory to God. Thus Paul begins to lay the groundwork for the proof that Israel's rejection is not permanent. She will be restored to God.

13-14. For I speak to you Gentiles . . . I magnify mine office. The apostle now addresses the Gentiles directly in response to their anticipated question, "Paul, as the apostle to the Gentiles why are you concerned about the salvation of Jews?" Paul's answer reflects both his conviction concerning his divine calling and the compassion he has for his own people. He magnifies his office in that the salvation of the Gentiles will provoke to jealousy the Jews and bring them to salvation as well. The swelling of the ranks of true believers among Paul's own countrymen will also cause the swelling of the ranks among the Gentiles and the ministry of the apostle will then be a greater ministry.

15. For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead? Here we have an a fortiori argument. The receiving is being contrasted with the casting away. The rejected Messiah of Israel was taken by her to the cross and there He reconciled the world to Himself. But if Israel's blindness brought salvation to the Gentile world, what will her reception by God bring? The ultimate reception of a repentant Israel will bring revival on an unprecedented scale. We may expect to see a mighty evangelistic movement in the last days which will be characterized by large numbers of Jews coming to receive Jesus Christ as their Messiah and Saviour.

16-17. If some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert grafted in among them. In preparation to warn the Gentiles, Paul introduces the principle of dedication of firstfruits to God (cf. Num 15:20-21) and the organic relationship between the root of a tree and its branches. These two metaphors illustrate one central truth: Israel is not only the firstfruits in God's program of salvation, but also the nation in which that salvation is rooted. However, some of the branches of Israel have been broken off through unbelief. The Gentiles, being wild olive trees, have been grafted into the life of the Abrahamic root in place of those dead Jewish branches which have been discarded. Gentiles must remember, however, that 18 Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in.

20 Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not highminded, but fear:

21 For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

22 Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graff them in again.

24 For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive tree: how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree?

25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.

26 And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:

not all branches of Israel have been discarded. Just unrepentant Israel is broken off. The life of the tree of Abraham has not been removed. The wild branches gain sustenance from the root which still bears a remnant of Jewish believers.

18-24. The apostle issues a strong warning to the Gentiles about their understanding of what has happened to unbelieving Jews. Boast not against the branches . . . because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith . . . For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee . . . And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in again. The great lesson of this passage is certainly that just as the Jews of the Old Testament became proud, assuming that they alone knew God, the same thing may happen to Gentiles in the New Testament era. Gentile believers must not yield to the temptation to disrespect the Jews. If it had not been for the grace of God, Gentiles would never have been grafted into the life of God which the Jews enjoyed. The new life which enables them to produce fruit grows from the same root that the old stock of Israel grows. New Testament believers must not assume that they are better than the Jews because they were cut off for their unbelief. The Gentile church must never forget its reliance upon the divine grace of God, else her end will be the same as that of the old branches. The process of being grafted into the life of God finds its basis in the grace of God. We must never lord the grace of God over those who have been cut from the tree, for it is much easier to put the natural branches back, than to graft different branches in their place. We therefore must rest totally on the grace of God for our salvation, as the remnant does.

3. Israel's restoration is prophesied. 11:25-32.

25. The expression For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant (cf. 1:13; I Cor 10:1; 12:1; II Cor 1:8; I Thess 4:13) indicates that what Paul is about to say is of extreme importance. He is in the process of revealing a mystery lest ye should be wise in your own conceits. The Gentiles dare not fall into the trap, as those in Rome apparently had done, of disparaging the Jews as a nation lest they become self-complacent in their newfound position. Paul reveals to them a mystery, not in the sense of a secret, but in the sense of a divine truth previously unknown. The mystery is that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. The spiritual blindness of Israel is not only to be understood as partial and not total, but also as temporal and not eternal. This blindness holds sway over the nation Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles is come. According to Acts 15:14, God is visiting the Gentiles today to call out a people for His name. Luke 21:24 says, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." This means that when the complete number of Gentiles has entered the kingdom of God, the spiritual blindness on the nation Israel shall be removed.

26. And so all Israel shall be saved. The Greek houtos (and so) is important and must not be missed. It shows the relationship of what has preceded to what follows and can be translated "and accordingly." Throughout this passage Israel has been taken to mean a nation in contradistinction to the Gentiles. It must mean the same here. However, this may not be interpreted as implying that, in the time of fulfillment, every Israelite will be converted simply on the basis of his inheritance. The German theologian Adolph Harnach (The Date of the Acts and of the Synoptic Gospels, pp. 40-66) attacked Paul for this statement saying that he allowed his patriotism to override his logic. But when Paul says all Israel shall be saved he is not repudiating the doctrines he expounded in chapter 2 (that the Jews' law, circumcision, birth, or arguments could not make him righteous). We must understand the all (Gr pas) to be taken in the proper meaning of the word, i.e., Israel as a whole or Israel as a nation and not necessarily including every individual Israelite. This clearly is the way the Jews used the phrase "all Israel." The Mishnah tractate Sanhedrin X.1. says, "All Israel has a portion in the age to come" and then proceeds immediately to name the Israelites who have no portion in that age. Thus we must understand this expression to mean Israel as a company, rather than every Jew without single exception. No one is ever saved without a personal relationship with the Saviour.

Paul seals the restoration of Israel with a prophecy from Isaiah 59:20, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. This reference is to a manifestation to Israel of her Redeemer and Messiah. When He comes, Israel shall be restored to the root of God.

27. For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins. Paul continues the quotation of Isaiah 59:21, but then passes into the promise of Jeremiah 31:33 to indicate that God will not fail to keep His covenant with Israel.

28-29. They are enemies for your sakes . . . they are beloved for the fathers' sakes. The Jews have been alienated from God's favor and blessing, and thus are said to be enemies concerning the gospel. At the same time they are beloved as the election of God. Israel is still God's chosen people, regardless of her present condition. This proves that the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. Those privileges and prerogatives in 9:4-5 have never been abrogated. What God promises, He also performs. Israel will one day be restored to the favor and blessing of God. Her restoration is prophesied; it will happen.

30-32. For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all. The apostle is still addressing the Gentiles. Verse 30 is a repetition of what he has stated in verses 11, 12, 15, 28, that the Gentiles have received God's mercy by way of the unbelief of Israel. Verse 31 indicates the relationship which the salvation of the Gentiles has to the restoration of Israel. Verse 32 shows the relationship of God's mercy to all. Jew and Gentile alike must realize that both are undeserving sinners and the expression of the love of God on their behalf is an act both of mercy and grace.

4. Israel's restoration evokes praise, 11:33-36.

33. In the first eleven chapters of this epistle Paul shows that the human race is split into two segments: Jew and Gentile. The promises of God came to the Jews but they failed to receive those promises and crucified the Lord of Glory. This resulted in the expansion of those promises to the Gentiles. The day is prophesied, however, when Israel will once again be restored to the Father and God will have mercy upon all, both Jew and Gentile. This plan of God calls forth transcendent praise.

O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! Paul exclaims in this final doxology that the wisdom and knowledge of God are much greater than that of humanity, for the human mind could never conceive of a solution to the problem of how God could punish sin and still justly save the sinner. God's wisdom provided that solution. The depths of that wisdom are far beyond man's power to comprehend them.

How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! Paul employs two emphatic words in describing God's wisdom. They are unsearchable and untrackable (cf. Eph 3:8). So unfathomable are the wisdom and knowledge of God that man can never descend to the bottom of that wisdom to search it out nor can he trace it through history, because it is beyond possibility to follow it completely.

34. For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counselor? The expression Who hath known the 27 For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.

28 As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes; but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes.

29 For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

30 For as ye in times past have not believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief:

31 Even so have these also now not believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy.

32 For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all.

33 O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!

34 For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counselor?

35 Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?

36 For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen.

mind of the Lord? tells of the unsearchable depth of God's knowledge. No one can completely know it. The expression Who hath been his counselor? implies that God, without dependence on any creature for counsel, devised the plan of our salvation (Eph 1:9-11).

35-36. Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? In echoing Job 41:11, Paul cannot resist going back to the principle of grace. The salvation that both Jew and the Gentile enjoy is based, not on what God must give back to them for what they have first given to Him, but on the basis of the grace of God alone. For of him, and through him . . . are all things. God is the very reason for our existence. Out of God all things have come: He is their origin. Through God all things exist: He is their sustainer. Unto God all things repair: He is their goal. In the circle of eternity, past, present, and future, God is all and to Him all the praise for salvation must go. To whom be glory for ever. Amen.

V. THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD ENACTED.

12:1-15:13.

A. Righteousness Produces a Life of Transformation.

12:1-21.

1. Transformation exhibited in humility. 12:1-8.

In the last eleven chapters Paul has taken his readers through quite heavy doctrine. But doctrine is never taught in the Bible as an end in itself. It is always taught in order that doctrine may be translated into practice. John 13:17 declares, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Consequently, it is the Pauline practice to follow a doctrinal section of Scripture with a practical section, and usually these two are linked together with the word therefore (cf. Eph 4:1; Col 3:5).

This section begins with the third and final therefore in the Epistle to the Romans. Each of these "therefore's" marks a great division in the book. Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ (5:1). There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus (8:1). I beseech you therefore (12:1). It is now Paul's purpose to tie together all the doctrinal material he has presented. Hence, the rest of this epistle will be as intensely practical as what has preceded was intensely doctrinal.

12:1-2. I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God. The word brethren identifies the group to whom these words are addressed. Paul is speaking to Christians, whether Jews or Gentiles. The mercies of God are all those good things we have because we are in Christ Jesus. Most especially he is referring to those mercies enumerated in 8:35-39. The progression of Pauline thought moves very easily from the end of chapter 8 to the beginning of chapter 12. He is now dealing again with what our responsibility is to those who have received the righteousness of God.

That ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. This request is eminently linked to his discussion of sanctification in chapters 6 and 7. In fact, the word rendered present here (Gr parisēmi) is the same as translated yield in 6:13, 19. Paul now deals in greater detail with what it means to present ourselves to God.

The Lord God wants the sacrifice of our life, not our death. Consequently the sacrifice we are to make of our bodies (representing our whole person) is a living sacrifice. This is in contrast with the Old Testament sacrifices which were put to death on the altar. Since we know that we have died with Christ Jesus, we are in a position to present Him with our lives that are hidden with Him. Not only is the presentation of our bodies a living sacrifice but it is also a holy and acceptable sacrifice.

CHAPTER 12

I BESEECH you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

2 And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God.

Holiness is contrasted with the defilement which is the usual characteristic of the sinful man. When the sacrifice of ourselves to God is holy it is inherently acceptable to God and well-pleasing to Him. More than this, says the apostle, the sacrifice of ourselves to God is our reasonable service. The word service (Gr latreia) is a term used for the function of priests in the tabernacle. The adjective (Gr logikos) which precedes it may be translated either reasonable (i.e., rational) or spiritual. But our worshipful service can only be spiritual in the biblical sense when it is characterized by our conscious, intelligent, rational service to the Lord God. In Paul's theology, spirituality is not some mindless fluttering of the heart but is the presentation of an entire life to the Lord.

Not only is the presentation of our bodies the subject of Paul's request, it is the pattern of our behavior as well. And be not conformed to this world. Paul cautions the believer not to be fashioned after this world or age (Gr aiōn). The world system of this age is an evil one (Gal 1:4), and is dominated by "the god of this world" (II Cor 4:4). The new creation in Christ is to live with the understanding that "old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new" (II Cor 5:17). We are therefore not to have our lives governed by the thought patterns and dictates of this evil world system.

But how can we prevent that? Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind. The only possible way for the believer not to be fashioned (Gr syschēmatizō) after this world is to be transformed in mind. The word transformed (Gr metamorphoō) reaches far deeper than conformity to the world. This implies a fundamental change in the Christian's inward nature and a following pattern of character which corresponds to that new nature. Thus the mind (Gr nous, the center of logical reasoning, ethical judgment, and moral awareness) must be completely changed if we are to live a life that is holy and acceptable unto God. The reason this change must be undertaken is that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God. To prove (Gr dokimazein) something is to test, scrutinize, or examine it. When we put the will of God to the test of actual experience we will find that it is good, acceptable (Gr euairestos) and perfect (Gr teleios). God's will is good in that, even when we cannot conceive it to be so, it is never mistaken. It is acceptable in that when you recognize it as good, it will be heartily endorsed by the believer. It is perfect in that it achieves the desired end that God has in mind. When the righteousness of Christ is placed upon us like a cloak, a life of transformation is produced that conveys of God's will in these ways.

3. For I say, through the grace given unto me. Paul now expands the biblical idea of the transformed life. His authority to speak in the way he does comes from the grace which is given unto him. That grace is the spiritual gift of apostleship (cf. 1:5; 15:15). From his position as an apostle Paul counsels, every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly. The transformation which comes through imputed righteousness is first exhibited in humility. The believer must be careful of being above-minded (Gr hyperphroneo), having an attitude of superiority. Rather we are to have a sober assessment of ourselves. This assessment is properly based in Galatians 2:20 where we recognize that we have been crucified with Christ and He lives through us.

4-5. Paul uses the metaphor of the body to indicate that the life of humility must be lived in relationship to other believers. Each of us must recognize that we possess a special gift (Gr charisma) as an outgrowth of our salvation and the indwelling gift of the Holy Spirit. There are many members in the body of Christ, and each of us, regardless of how humble our station in life or how deficient in education or how expert we may be, has a

3 For I say, through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith.

4 For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office:

5 So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.

6 Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith;

7 Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching;

8 Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness.

9 Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.

10 Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another;

11 Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord; gift from God to contribute to the whole body. In His sovereignty, God has just the proper place for each of us.

6-8. What is the believer to do with his gift? Since the members of the body of Christ have gifts which differ, each of us is to use his gift in the way that God intends. Whether prophecy, let us prophesy. Prophecy is the gift of inspired utterance (I Cor 14:1). This activity is to be done according to the proportion of faith or in harmony with that which has already been spoken by God. Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering. Ministry (Gr diakonia) is the general work of deaconing. This denotes a very broad office that may cover almost any kind of service in the local church. Or he that teacheth, on teaching. Teaching is the art of making the unchanging message of God understandable to the unlearned. Teaching is a gift of God; those who have that gift must not neglect to give attention to teaching. Or he that exhorteth, on exhortation. Unlike the teacher who appeals to the mind, the exhorter takes his brother aside and appeals to his heart in order to console or encourage him. Exhortation (Gr paraklēsis) is a specific and highly necessary ministry in the local church, especially in times like these. He that giveth, let him do it with simplicity. Each member of the church has the opportunity to give. The term simplicity (Gr haplotēs) sometimes means liberally (cf. II Cor 8:2; 9:11-13), and sometimes it means in singleness of heart or motive (cf. II Cor 11:3; Eph 6:5; Col 3:22). Essentially when we give, whatever we give, we are to do it with all our heart. He that ruleth, with diligence. The exercise of leadership in the church is as much a spiritual gift as any of the others. He who presides (Gr proistēmi) is not to do so sluggishly but responsibly and diligently. He that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness. This is the Christian gift of engaging in practical deeds of kindness. There is a place in the local church for those who cannot teach or cannot minister. Many there are within the church who go about their business in an unspectacular way doing a much-needed work in showing kindness and helpfulness to their fellow believers. Each of these gifts is necessary for the proper functioning of the body of Christ. Since that is the case, one gift cannot be exalted over another and therefore the transformed life exhibits humility in its relationship to others in the local church.

2. Transformation exhibited in love of the brethren. 12:9-16.

9. The injunctions in this section are a practical outworking of the Sermon on the Mount. The brotherhood of believers is expected to have a mutual love toward one another. Thus the apostle says, Let love be without dissimulation. Dissimulation (Gr anypokritos) literally means without hypocrisy or insincerity. We must genuinely love one another. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. We should not expect God to remove sin from us until we actually hate it and have rooted out of our transformed lives any secret love that we still hold for that which is evil.

10. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love. We must have a tender regard for those who are our brothers in the Lord. Brotherly love (Gr philadelphia) is a love for all members of the local assembly, regardless of their heritage or financial status. In honor preferring one another. Since the root of all "above-mindedness" is taken away by the basis of our salvation, which is grace, therefore we must not count ourselves better than our brother (Phil 2:3). We need a devalued opinion of our own worth before the Lord, but a greatly inflated opinion of what He can do through a devalued person who is yielded to Him.

11. Not slothful in business. The local church must be run in just as businesslike fashion as any secular corporation. We dare not be sluggish or unenthusiastic about the business of the church. Fervent in spirit; serving the Lord. This expression, which was used of Apollos in Acts 18:25, means to be boiling or bubbling up (Gr zēō) or aflame with the Spirit of God. Not only must we serve the Lord as a slave would serve his master, but we must do so in an energetic and enthusiastic manner (cf. Eccl 9:10; Col 3:23).

12 Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer;

12. Rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer. The life of love among the brethren never allows adverse circumstances to restrain the joy of the local congregation. The believer must bear up steadfastly under the great weight of tribulation which the church will sustain and the only possible way to do that is to be steadfastly given to prayer, seeking the comfort and aid of the Lord.

13 Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality.

13. Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality. The transformed life exhibits love among other believers in such a way as to be tangibly moved by those of the brethren who have a financial lack. We need a genuine concern for those who are poor and needy and our hospitality must extend to them as automatically as did Abraham's extend to the three strangers (Gen 18:2-3).

14 Bless them which persecute you: bless, and curse not.

14-15. Bless them which persecute you. Paul is a good example of one who lived up to this admonition (cf. I Cor 4:12-13; Acts 28:19). Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep. That this practice can be found in the life of Christ proves that this is not just a Stoic philosophy. Jesus Christ rejoiced at the marriage feast with those who rejoiced (Jn 2:1-12) and wept at the graveside of Lazarus with those who wept (Jn 11:1-44). We need to be so intimately involved with the lives of other believers that we know of their joys and their sorrows, and can identify with each.

15 Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.

16 Be of the same mind one toward another. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits.

16. Be of the same mind one toward another. Although we may not always see eye to eye with other believers, nevertheless we must preserve the unity of belief and practice which characterized the early church. When we are told to Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate, the apostle brings us right back to the base of humility. The believer who is concerned about exhibiting his transformation in an attitude of love for the brethren will not attempt to cultivate friendships only among the attractive or wealthy of the church, but will especially befriend those who are not befriended by others. Be not wise in your own conceits is a quotation from Proverbs 3:7 and summarizes the teaching of this section.

17 Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men.

3. Transformation exhibited in honor before the world. 12:17-21.

17. Not only is the life transformed by the righteousness of Christ to be lived in love toward the brethren, but it is to be lived in honor toward those who are outside the church as well. Recompense to no man evil for evil. When we are wronged our natural instinct is to fight to assert ourselves and right the wrong. But in the believer's life there is no place for retaliation. Provide things honest in the sight of all men. Because retaliation can mean a complete loss of our Christian testimony, we are advised to let our aims be such as men consider honorable. The quotation from Proverbs 3:4 (LXX) means that we have to live honorably and righteously before the world just as we must live godly before the Lord.

18 If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men.

18. If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Insofar as it is consistent with our obedience to God, the Christian is to labor in the utmost harmony with men of the world. We must live in good will toward men and attempt not to be offensive or obnoxious toward them, unless our offense comes through loyalty to God and our refusal to participate in those activities which are prohibited by God.

19 Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.

19-21. Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath. Self-vengeance has no place in the Christian life. We are told to make room for divine retribution to operate and therefore to give place unto wrath means to allow 20 Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

21 Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

God to bring His vengeance to bear on those of the world, rather than taking revenge ourselves. We are not to give a place for wrath in our dealings with men, but rather to give that place to God's wrath. Thus the apostle introduces the quotation from Deuteronomy 32:35 that Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. In light of this, and quoting from Proverbs 25:21, we are to treat our enemy kindly and not vengefully. If he is hungry, we are to give him food; if he is thirsty, we are to give him drink. For in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. There are two main lines of interpretation to this phrase. One is that this quotation from Proverbs 25:22 reflects an Egyptian ritual in which a man showed his repentance by carrying a pan of burning charcoal on his head. This was a dynamic symbol of the change of mind which had taken place in his life. The meaning would then be that our act of love in giving him food or drink would bring about a change of attitude toward us. The prevailing view, however, is that heaping coals of fire on the head refers to the sense of shame, punishment, or remorse which is engendered in the mind of our enemy when we show kindness to him. Whichever meaning is to be held, it is obvious that verse 21 is closely linked with it. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. As believers we must resist the impulse to retaliate but rather we promote our sanctification by doing good to those who do evil to us. Therefore we exhibit our life of transformation before a watching world.

B. Righteousness Produces a Life of Subjection. 13:1-14.

1. Subjection to the state. 13:1-7.

When one receives the righteousness of Christ and begins to live out that righteousness, it not only produces a life of transformation but also a life of subjection. It was inevitable that Paul would have to say something with regard to the believer's relationship to the state. The men and women of the first century were vitally interested in their position before the Roman Empire. Jesus was questioned in Mark 12 by the Jewish leaders concerning His attitude toward the Roman government. The Corinthian Jews dragged Paul before Gallio, the proconsul of Achaia, and charged him with propagating a religion that was illegal in the empire (Acts 18:12-13). Paul's opponents at Thessalonica went to the civil magistrates and accused the Christians of subversion to the state (Acts 17:6-7). The question of religion versus state was very much on the minds of those of the first century.

13:1. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. Even though governments are generally carried on by nonbelievers, the teaching of the Lord Jesus (Mk 12:17), the teaching here of the Apostle Paul, and historic position of the church (cf. the Westminster Confession of Faith, Chapter XXIII, Section IV) has always been that the believer must live under the law, governed by a magistrate. The reason, For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. There is no governmental authority except that which is ordained of God. It is God who establishes kings and dethrones kings (cf. Dan 4; see also Prov 21:1). This truth was strikingly illustrated of Pilate by the Lord Jesus. In his anger Pilate said, "Speakest thou not unto me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?" Jesus put this magistrate in his place when He answered, "Thou couldst have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above" (Jn 19:10-11). Since all power comes from God, the believer is to be subject to that power.

2. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God. As a general rule, God condemns civil disobedience toward the lawfully-existent government. Those who would riot and rebel must know that opposition to govern-

CHAPTER 13

LET every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God.

2 Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.

3 For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

4 For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

5 Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

6 For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

7 Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.

ment is opposition to God. However, the obedience which the Christian owes to the government is never absolute and must be carefully weighed in light of his subjection to God. To unlawfully and unethically resist government brings the judgment (not damnation) of God upon the believer.

3. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Since God's purpose in ordaining government in the days of Noah was to restrain wickedness and promote virtue, we are to be in subjection to any government which fulfills this purpose. However, the Declaration of Independence was composed to rebuke George III's government for punishing virtue while at the same time rewarding wickedness. Christians are never under subjection to injustice or a government of wickedness. Rulers are to be established to be a terror to evil and to promote the good. That is the basic principle of good government. Consequently, we are to respect any government which does so and reject any government which does not.

4. For he is the minister of God to thee for good. The officer of the state is ordained of God to minister that which is good. Therefore the town mayor is as much a minister of God as the local pastor, but in a very different way. We ought to have as much respect for a good mayor as we do for a good minister. For he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God. God has granted human government the power of enforcing itself and therefore this verse unquestionably provides New Testament justification for capital punishment. The divine directive was established in Genesis 9:6, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." The hands of good government should never be so tied that they cannot execute good judgment and the wrath of God upon those who do evil.

5. Wherefore ye must needs be subject . . . but also for conscience sake. At this point Paul reiterates God's general rule that we need to be subject to the higher powers, but he introduces the question of the conscience as well. The Christian always lives in a tension between the two competing claims of obedience to the state and obedience to God. The state has a right to demand our respect and conformity. Thus, we are to be in subjection to those in authority over us, not only out of fear and respect, but also out of a good conscience before God. However, the believer dare not blindly bow to the state if his conscience is offended by the wickedness of the state. There may be times when "we ought to obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:29; cf. 4:19). Since the state and its magistrate are not infallible, the believer may at times have to conscientiously object to what the state requires that is in direct contradiction to the law of God.

6-7. For this cause pay ye tribute also . . . Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor. To be a good citizen of the state we must render . . . to all their dues, that is, to discharge our obligation to all men. Tribute is today called tax, that which is levied on persons and property (cf. Lk 20:22; 23:2). Custom refers to the tax levied on goods and corresponds to the tax paid on those things we import or export. Fear (Gr phobos) is the same word that is rendered terror in verse 3. This word means both concern and reverence. If we disobey the state, we are to fear those who have been charged with the responsibility of punishing disobedience. At the same time we are to respect the laws of the state and those who make the laws. Honor means that it is not right for a Christian to speak in a disrespectful way of the state or officers of the state. For the sake of the Lord Jesus we are to give honor to those who are His ministers as evidence that we give honor to Him.

Frequently twentieth-century Christians try to rationalize their infidelity to the state by saying that Paul simply could not understand what it meant to live in such a corrupt society as we 8 Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

9 For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

10 Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

12 The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light.

13 Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in

do. We must remember, however, that as Paul wrote these words he was living under the reign of the wicked Emperor Nero. Nero's mother, Agrippina (sister of Emperor Caligula, who killed and tortured thousands for pleasure), had Nero's stepfather assassinated with a dish of poisoned mushrooms. Nero himself killed his stepbrother, Britannicus, when the boy was just fourteen years old. Later when he feared that his mother would attempt to exercise the power of the throne, Nero killed her as well. He banished his first wife, Octavia, to an island and had her killed. Still later he slew his second wife, Poppaea. In light of these facts, if Paul can so tenaciously hold that the believer should be subject to the higher powers, the twentieth-century believer must be very careful not to jump to the conclusion that he should not be subject to the present-day powers.

2. Subjection to the citizens of the state. 13:8-10.

8-10. Owe no man any thing, but to love one another. The key word in determining that the believer's relationship should be to other citizens of the state is love. Love enables us to perfectly fulfill all our obligations, whether to the state, to the citizens, or to God. More than anyone, Christians ought to pay their debts and honor their obligations. To be ever-increasingly in debt is to show a lack of regard and love for the one to whom you are indebted. We should not buy what we cannot reasonably afford.

Good citizenship in financial matters brings Paul to quote the seventh, sixth, eighth, ninth, and tenth commandments of the Mosaic law (cf. Ex 20:13-17; Deut 5:17-21). To these he adds the chief commandment in which the law is fulfilled in one word, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself (Gal 5:14). Love adds to the complete performance of the law, because it shows that we do not conform to the law out of duty but out of a right heart attitude. No man will commit adultery, murder, or theft if the love of Christ motivates his heart. No man will cause ill to his neighbor if the seat of his action is love. Therefore love is the fulfilling of the law (lit., "the fulfillment of the law"). If the law is filled to the brim with love, it is a law which can easily be obeyed. The believer will have no difficulty in subjection to the citizens of the state if his heart is filled with love toward them.

3. Subjection to the timetable of God. 13:11-14.

11. It is high time to awake out of sleep. The duty of spiritual vigilance with relation to the timetable of God was constantly enjoined by the Apostle Paul (cf. I Thess 5:4). The urgent nature of these days in the end time necessitates that the Christian awake out of his lethargy and fervently pursue his calling as an evangelist. It is time for believers to stand up and be counted and to make a mark for God. For now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The salvation of which the apostle speaks is the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body for which believers wait (8:23). We are now much closer to that day than the day we first believed. This behooves us to be the transformed believers we ought to be and to be more actively engaged in the process of transforming others.

12. Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light. The Christian must recognize that he is engaged in a warfare with the powers of darkness. It is therefore absolutely necessary that we discard the works and values of that darkness and replace them with the armor of light. A detailed description of this armor is given in Ephesians 6:14-17. We constantly live in subjection to the timetable of God and time is running out.

13. Let us walk honestly as in the day. Those who have received the light, must walk in the light. The manner of life which spawns riotous living, drunken bouts, sexual orgies, and chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.

14 But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.

CHAPTER 14

HIM that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations.

2 For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.

3 Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.

4 Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.

all forms of wanton revelry cannot be that of those who walk honestly or honorably. When a person claims to be a Christian, if he cannot change his life-style, he had better change his name.

14. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul urges his Christian converts to put on Christian virtues in the same manner that they would put on their clothes (Col 3:12). When they had "put on the new man" (Eph 4:24) they had in fact been baptized into Christ and had "put on Christ" (Gal 3:27). Putting on Christ means to allow Him to envelop us so that when others view us they see His righteousness. He therefore not only lives in us and through us, but on us as well. When that is the case, we need not take thought of satisfying our bodily lusts or carnal desires, but our prime concern will be to live in honor to the Lord. When Christ is on us and in us, we will not feed our fleshly desires but will feed a soul striving to be more like Him, and much more so realizing our subjection to the timetable of God.

C. Righteousness Produces a Life of Consideration. 14:1-15:13.

1. Consideration for a brother weak in the faith. 14:1-13.

14:1. Him that is weak in the faith receive ye. What was the nature of the weakness? Scholars differ dramatically on the root of the weakness in the lives of the Roman believers. But whatever were the particular religious scruples which caused differences between them, the basic problem was that some of the believers had not grasped the great truths Paul has just expounded in his epistle. Those who are weak in the faith were Christians who did not have full understanding that salvation is the free gift of God and that the believer faces no condemnation whatever because of the atonement of Christ. Paul enjoyed his Christian liberty to the fullest and was totally emancipated from foolish superstitions and unbiblical taboos. Some of the Romans, however, were yet clinging to these taboos for they did not fully accept the doctrine of justification by faith alone. In relation to this, Paul addresses both those living freely in Christ and those in Christ who are still bound by fleshly legalism. The strong who had internalized Bible doctrine, were to receive the weak, those who did not fully rest in the grace of God. But they were not to argue with them over secondary points of difference.

2-3. For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs. Let not him that eateth despise him . . . and let not him which eateth not judge him. So that he may be easily understood, Paul immediately advances two concrete examples of the weak in the faith versus the strong in the faith. What is the proper diet for the separated Christian? Some believers (whom Paul characterizes as the weak in faith), in order to avoid eating the flesh of animals that had been consecrated to pagan gods (cf. Dan 1:8), refused to eat anything but vegetables. Converts from heathenism would be especially sensitive to the eating of such meat. Paul's contention is that the meat itself is not destroyed of nutritional value because it was offered to idols. Since these idols have no validity before God, there is no reason not to partake of this meat. However, he counsels those who do eat, not to despise those who do not. Those who feel no compelling reason not to eat are to refrain from ridiculing those who have definite scruples against meat. The reason is God has received this brother who is weak in the faith and we must as well.

4. Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? Essentially addressing the weak in faith, Paul draws a principle which is found many times in Scripture (cf. Mt 7:1; Lk 6:37; I Cor 4:3ff). Each Christian is the property of God and we are not in a position to see the inner motives of others. God's jurisdiction over all believers is not to be infringed upon by 5 One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.

6 He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

7 For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

9 For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living.

10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

11 For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.

12 So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

13 Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.

14 I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably. Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died.

either those who are weak or those who are strong. God is judge and not we ourselves.

5-6. A second concrete example is now given of the differences between those who have laid hold on the truths of God's Word and those who tenaciously cling to some legalistic practice. It is the keeping or honoring of certain days. One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day. Some of the brethren, those who are weak, pick out a certain day and proclaim it holy, more holy than other days. Those who, like Paul, understand the liberty we have in Christ Jesus, do not observe days but rather serve and worship Him consistently seven days a week. Paul clearly aligns himself with those who are seven-day-a-week Christians, those who view one hundred percent of their income as holy to the Lord, not just one-tenth. But he says that even though believers disagree with regard to this issue, they must respect the opinion of others for the motive of both the weak and the strong is to honor God with thanksgiving.

7-9. For none of us liveth to himself . . . whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's. For to this end Christ both died, and rose. The adage "no man is an island unto himself" is the modern outgrowth of these verses, but that is not the central truth taught here. The basic teaching is that each Christian must live his life in the full view of the Lord Jesus Christ. We do so as servant to Master and therefore our relationship to Him will affect our relationship to the brethren. We must interact with others in a method pleasing to the Lord and not in judging the strong or demeaning the weak. The ground of our actions toward one another is the absolute lordship of Christ Jesus as established in His death, burial, and resurrection. From His authority as resurrected Lord He bids us live in harmony with one another.

10-13. But why dost thou judge thy brother? Paul addresses this question to the weak in faith. Or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? This question is addressed to the strong. For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. As Paul, each believer must live with the Judgment Seat of Christ in view. All that we do will be judged at that heavenly bēma or judgment seat (cf. II Cor 5:10). On that day all meaningless differences between Christians will fade away and we will not be concerned about the validity of what others have done for every one of us shall give account of himself to God (see Woodrow Michael Kroll, It Will Be Worth It All). The weaker brother does not have to defend the actions of the strong. The stronger brother will not have to answer for the actions of those weak in the faith. We must give an account of our life and activities for the Lord, individually, one-on-one, with the Lord of Glory. To indicate the certainty of this event, Paul quotes from Isaiah 49:18 and Isaiah 45:23, a passage he also applies to Christ in Philippians 2:10ff. Under the lordship of Christ we must live with the convictions we have and not those of others. This responsibility naturally drives us to constantly take inventory of our religious scruples and convictions to make sure that they are based in the infallible Word and not in the traditions or whims of men.

2. Consideration for our neighbor. 14:14-23.

14-15. Martin Luther, in his treatise On the Freedom of a Christian Man, wrote, "A Christian man is a most free lord of all, subject to none. A Christian man is a most dutiful servant of all, subject to all." By this he meant that even though our liberty in Christ may permit us to engage in a certain activity, we nevertheless may not be wise in doing so. I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself. Paul casts his lot with the strong in faith who are not given to the legalism of the weak. However he is well aware that he may become a stumbling block (Gr proskomma) to the weaker brother for the conscience of the weak will not allow him to engage in the activities of Paul. There is no virtue in flaunting Christian liberty. But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably. Believers must not insist on their liberty in the presence of those whose consciences would be offended. To do so is not to walk in love under the lordship of Christ. To the strong in faith Paul admonishes, Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died. If we are to live a life of consideration for our neighbor then we must learn that even though there are things we feel we biblically may do, many of those same things, for the sake of others, we should not do.

16 Let not then your good be evil spoken of:

17 For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

18 For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men.

19 Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.

20 For meat destroy not the work of God. All things indeed are pure; but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.

21 It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.

22 Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.

23 And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

16-19. Let not then your good be evil spoken of. Paul reaffirms that the position of the strong is right and good, but advises them not to let what is good become the object of misunderstanding. For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy. The kingdom of God does not consist in observing or not observing days, eating or not eating meats, or any other secondary issues of religious scruples, but in righteousness (perfect uprightness in our daily walk), peace (perfect peace with God and a consistent attempt to be a peacemaker of the brethren), and joy (perfect union and intimate love through the Holy Spirit, cf. Mt 6:31; 5:6, 9, 10, 12). Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another. Paul cautions the Romans not to ride moral or theological hobby-horses but to pursue those issues which will tend toward building the common bond of faith between the weak and the strong. The basis of fellowship is not peripheral matters of eating or drinking but the salvation which both enjoy in Christ.

20-21. For meat destroy not the work of God. Convictions are fine, says the apostle, but not at the expense of the work of God. The reason is simple. All foods are clean in themselves but they become unclean to the one who eats them when his conscience tells him otherwise. For conscience' sake that man should avoid them. To the strong Paul advises, It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak. What a beautiful picture: a Christian that knows he is at liberty to do something but does not for the sake of another. That is living under the lordship of Christ. The best thing one who is strong in the faith can do is to assist one who is weak in the faith to become strong. This will never be accomplished if we parade our liberty in the face of the weak and offend him.

22-23. Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. Faith here means a firm conviction before God that what you believe is right. Paul remarks that it is proper to have and cherish a conviction, but we must not force our convictions upon others. We do not have the prerogative to do so. We must hold that conviction before God. And he that doubteth is damned if he eat. For the translators of the AV the word damned did not have the force it does today. It did not mean that if someone violates his conscience by eating that which he feels is wrong he will be damned to irrevocable perdition. Rather the meaning is that he is condemned in his conscience for doing that which it will not allow. If he does not eat in faith believing that it is acceptable to God, he eats in sin for whatsoever is not of faith is sin. If our actions do not arise from our convictions then they are sinful actions and unacceptable to God.

3. Consideration as we have Christ as example. 15:1-13.

15:1-3. We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak. Again, Paul casts himself as one of the strong, one who has grasped the principle of Christian liberty and freedom from man-made taboos. But note that he does not merely relish his strength of understanding doctrine but rather uses his

CHAPTER 15

WE then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

2 Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good to edification.

ROMANS 15:3

3 For even Christ pleased not himself: but, as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.

4 For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope.

5 Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another according to Christ Jesus:

6 That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore receive ye one another, as Christ also received us to the glory of God.

8 Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers:

9 And that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.

10 And again he saith, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people.

12 And again, E-sā'ias saith, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust.

13 Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

strength to assist the weak in doctrine. His desire is that the strong bear with those whom he regards as weaknesses or sicknesses (Gr asthenēma). For even Christ pleased not himself. As the prime example of one strong in the faith, living in light of those weak in the faith, the apostle proposes the Lord Himself. The Lord Jesus had every right to please Himself for what He would do of necessity would be right. Yet He was willing to set aside His own desires and follow the Father's directives. The quote from Psalm 69:9, The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me, is applied to the life of the Lord in that He obeyed the will of the Father even when He Himself might have chosen an easier path. He did not exercise His perfect freedom, in order that the ultimate task of salvation could be accomplished.

4. For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning. This is akin to the apostle's statement in II Timothy 3:16 about the profitableness of Scripture. An earnest study of the Word of God will not only make the weak strong but will enable us to bear the burdens and weaknesses of others. The instruction which the Scriptures impart is directed to patience and comfort. Patience is steadfastness or endurance, and comfort (Gr paraklēsis) is more properly understood as encouragement or consolation. These culminate in hope, not some wishful desire that everything will turn out all right, but in the confidence that all things work together for good (8:28).

5-7. Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another. The reference to the God of patience and consolation indicates that behind the patience and comfort that the Scriptures bring is a God who energizes them through the Scriptures. Paul appeals to this God to bring the strong and weak together and advises, Receive ye one another, as Christ also received us to the glory of God. In the same manner in which we were received of Christ the Lord, we are encouraged to receive each other as believers. Paul's point is that if the Lord can receive us with the great chasm that existed between Him and us, should we not also be able to accept one another even if there are minor differences between us? The result of such acceptance of one another will be the harmonious praise That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God. Since the Lord Jesus found it possible to embrace us and reconcile sinners to Himself, it should be an easy task to receive ye another, as Christ also received us to the glory of God.

8-13. Paul turns his apostolic guns squarely on Jew/Gentile acceptance of each other. As we have Christ our example, the Jew must receive the Gentile and the Gentile the Jew. Jesus Christ came to be a minister of the circumcision. This word minister is the word diakonos in Greek. Paul's assessment of the Lord's ministry squares with the Lord's own assessment. "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister" (Gr diakoneō Mk 10:45). The truthfulness of God's Word is seen in the fulfillment of His promises to the Patriarchs. And that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy. The fulfillment of promises to the Jews evokes praise to God from the Gentiles. Paul also appeals to Psalm 18:49 where David included Gentile nations in the heritage of God to Israel, as it is written, For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.

Not content with that, the apostle begins a series of quotations from the Old Testament. From the Song of Moses, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people (Deut 32:43). Then, from Psalm 117:1, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him, all ye people. Next a quote from Isaiah 11:10, There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust. Paul's purpose is to indicate that Gentiles as well as Jews will be included in the family of God. The goyim (Heb for Gentiles) will put their trust in the Root of Jesse (the Lord Jesus) the same as believing Jews will. Although there are many differences between these two groups of believers, nevertheless their common bond is faith in Christ. As a result, Paul's prayer is, Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

VI. CONCLUSION. 15:14-16:27.

The Apostle Paul begins to conclude this letter long before he actually does so. The change from doctrine to practice has made it difficult for him to say goodby to these Roman saints for they were apparently weak in both. He has intense personal feelings for them even though he has never been to Rome. Since he has met many of them in other areas of the Mediterranean world, he must express personal greetings. A lengthy list of final greetings is capped by a final note of praise to the Lord.

A. The Presentation of Personal Feelings. 15:14-33.

1. Explanation for writing. 15:14-26.

14-16. And I myself also am persuaded of you . . . Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you . . . That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles. Paul did not want the Roman believers to think that he considered them spiritually immature. Thus the admonitions which he gives in this epistle are not to be received by them alone but by every reader of the Epistle to the Romans, in every country, in every age. Paul knew that the Roman believers were full of goodness and kindness and that they were adept enough in doctrine to be able to admonish one another. Nevertheless the apostle has spoken boldly in some sort (Gr idiom; "in part," or "on some points," e.g., 6:12; 8:9; 11:17; 12:3; 13:3; 14:3, 10, 15). Clothed in the vocabulary of worship, Paul asserts that the reason for his writing the way he has is the grace of God has made him an officiating-priest (Gr leitourgos) to preach the gospel as a priestly service (Gr hierourgeo). This is done to present the Gentiles as an acceptable thank offering (Gr prosphora) to the Lord God. They are sanctified, not by circumcision, but by something much better, the Holy Spirit. He wants to include the Gentiles of the church at Rome in that offering.

2. Vindication for writing. 15:17-21.

17-19. I have therefore whereof I may glory through Jesus Christ . . . so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ. Though there were many triumphs already in the life of the apostle about which he may boast, Paul is careful to give the praise to the Lord Jesus. His only glory is through Jesus Christ. Through the grace of God Paul has preached the gospel of God with mighty signs and wonders in a wide radius from Jerusalem through Macedonia to the area round about Illyricum, the Roman province bordering the eastern shore of the Adriatic Sea. What God has chosen to do through Paul gives him vindication for writing to a church he has never visited.

20-21. Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation. Paul made it his ministerial ambition to break up fallow ground with the gospel. He wanted to be missionary as well as theologian, scholar, and soul-winner. His intent was to lay a foundation where other men had not labored and for this the Lord drew him to various metropolitan centers such as Ephesus, Philippi, and Corinth. Each time Paul encountered first-time hearers of the message he bore.

3. Paul's plans following the writing. 15:22-29.

22-24. For which cause also I have been much hindered from coming to you. The pioneering spirit of Paul to spread the

14 And I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another.

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, because of the grace that is given to me of God.

16 That I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

17 I have therefore whereof I may glory through Jesus Christ in those things which pertain to God.

18 For I will not dare to speak of any of those things which Christ hath not wrought by me, to make the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed.

19 Through mighty signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God; so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyri-cum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ.

20 Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation:

21 But as it is written, To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.

22 For which cause also I have been much hindered from coming to you.

ROMANS 15:23

23 But now having no more place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come unto you;

24 Whensoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled with your company.

25 But now I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.

26 For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem.

27 It hath pleased them verily; and their debtors they are. For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things.

28 When therefore I have performed this, and have sealed to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.

29 And I am sure that, when I come unto you, I shall come in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

30 Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me;

31 That I may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judæa; and that my service which I have for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints;

32 That I may come unto you with joy by the will of God, and may with you be refreshed.

33 Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

CHAPTER 16

I COMMEND unto you Phebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at Cēn'chre-a:

2 That ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.

gospel where no man had done so has thus far prohibited the apostle from coming to Rome. However, years of desire are about to give way to an actual journey to Spain which will necessitate a stopover in the capital city of the Empire. The activity in Spain will likewise be cultivating virgin soil but before he arrives there he wants his visit to Rome to be one of mutual benefit for both the Romans and himself. He has spiritual benefit to impart to them as a teacher of the Word and they have comfort, fellowship, and lodging to give to him. He desires to be filled with their company.

25-29. But now I go unto Jerusalem . . . to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem. Paul cannot immediately embark on his way to Rome for he must travel first to Jerusalem. He must deliver to the poor saints there an offering which the apostle had collected from the Christians of Macedonia and Achaia. This was not only an act of Christian love but a way of cementing the relationship between the Jewish and Gentile factions of the early church, since the Christians of Macedonia and Achaia were predominantly Gentile. The contribution (Gr koinōnia or sharing of their wealth) was a voluntary gesture on the part of the Gentile churches, yet it also recognized the moral debt they owed to the mother church which had first disseminated the gospel.

When therefore I have performed this . . . I will come by you into Spain . . . in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ. Paul again returns to the thought of his arrival in Rome en route to Spain. He is convinced that his coming to them will be more than a blessing. It will be the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ (cf. Eph 3:8, 19). At the time he was unaware that when he finally arrived in Rome, he would be in chains. Even so it was in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel. This is exhibited in the fact that Colossians, Philemon, Ephesians, and Philippians were all written from Rome during his first imprisonment there.

4. Paul's plea for prayers on his behalf. 15:30-33.

30-33. Paul appeals for the support of Roman prayers in the face of the imminent dangers he must face before he comes to them. His requests are: that ye strive together with me in your prayers . . . That I may be delivered . . . that my service which I have for Jerusalem may be accepted . . . That I may come unto you with joy . . . and may . . . be refreshed. Paul knows that dangers threaten him in Judæa, for there are many that mark him as a traitor to the Jewish cause. Coupled with the hatred of unbelieving Jews is the danger that the church at Jerusalem might misread his intentions in bringing a monetary gift. Perhaps they might not receive it because it was given by the Gentiles. Also, he desires to come to Rome with joy by the will of God, that is, only if it be the will of God. He desires to be refreshed both physically and spiritually there. Since these requests are couched in the language of prayer, it is appropriate for him to close with a doxology. The beautiful benediction, addressed to the weak as well as the strong, to the Jew as well as to the Gentile, is, Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

B. The Presentation of Personal Greetings. 16:1-23.

1. Commendation of Phoebe. 16:1-2.

16:1-2. I commend unto you Phoebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea. Phoebe, whose name means radiant, was apparently a businesswoman from the city of Cenchrea, the seaport city of Corinth on the Saronic Gulf (cf. Acts 18:18). She was a servant (Gr diakonos) of the church in that location. Paul designates her our sister, as a term of Christian endearment. Likewise she is said to be a succorer (Gr prostatis) or befriender of many including Paul. Apparently Phoebe was a widow, else she would not have been able to travel so freely in the Roman Empire. This woman was preparing for a business trip to Rome and Paul seizes that opportunity, since as a private citizen he was not permitted to use the official Roman postal system, to send his epistle to Rome. Thus he advises the Romans That ye receive her in the Lord . . . and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you.

2. Greetings for friends in Rome. 16:3-16.

3 Greet Priscilla and Āq'ui-la my helpers in Christ Jesus:

4 Who have for my life laid down their own necks: unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles.

5 Likewise greet the church that is in their house. Salute my well beloved E-pæn'e-tus, who is the first fruits of A-chā'ia unto Christ.

6 Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on us.

7 Salute Ān-drō-ni'cus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellowprisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me.

8 Greet Ām'plī-as my beloved in the Lord.

9 Salute Ūr'bāne, our helper in Christ, and Stā'chŷs my beloved.

10 Salute A-pěl'lēs approved in Christ. Salute them which are of Ār-ĭs-tō-bū'lus' household.

3-4. Greet Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus. This Jewish couple moved, under the dint of persecution and in their quest for souls, from Rome to Corinth, to Ephesus and back to Rome again. They supplied lay leadership in various evangelistic endeavors. Who have for my life laid down their own necks. Just when these two risked their lives for Paul is not known, but their friendship with the apostle was so intense that he mentions them in the salutations of two other epistles (cf. I Cor. 16:19; II Tim 4:19).

5. Salute my well-beloved Epænetus, who is the first fruits of Achaia unto Christ. The translation here should undoubtedly be "Asia" not Achaia and such rendering is supported by manuscripts P<sup>46</sup>, A, B, D*, G and others. According to I Corinthians 16:15, "the household of Stephanas" was the first fruits of Achaia. As a convert, and especially among the first in Asia Minor, Paul had a special love for Epænetus.

6. Greet Mary, who bestowed much labor on us. The labor which this woman bestowed probably refers to her association with Priscilla and Aquila from the inception of the Roman church. We know nothing of her but that she bore the name Mary, one of the six persons so named in the New Testament.

7. Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellow prisoners. It is impossible to know for sure if the second of the names is the feminine, Junia, or masculine, Junias. When Paul says they are his kinsmen, he need not be referring to a close family relationship for all Jews were his kinsmen (cf. 9:3). Since the apostle's imprisonments were many (cf. II Cor 6:5; 11:23), it is difficult to say in which of these they shared. They were of note among the apostles (using this term in the general sense of messenger, cf. II Cor 8:23; Phil 2:25) and came to know the Lord as Saviour even before the Apostle Paul.

8. Greet Amplias my beloved in the Lord. Amplias is an abbreviated form of Ampliatus, a common name in the Empire. "A branch of the gens Aurelia bore this cognomen. Christian members of this branch of the family are buried in one of the oldest Christian burying-places in Rome, the Cemetery of Domitilla, the beginnings of which go back to the end of the first century. One tomb in that cemetery, decorated with paintings in a very early style, bears the inscription AMPLIAT in uncials of the first or early second century" (F. F. Bruce, The Epistle of Paul to the Romans, p. 272).

9. Salute Urbane, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved. Urbane, or Urbanus, by his very name, must have been a native of Rome. He is said to be a helper in Christ but not a fellow worker as Priscilla and Aquila. Stachys, a name meaning ear (of grain), is not a common name and occurs with no further amplification other than my beloved.

10. Salute Apelles approved in Christ. Apelles is distinguished as approved in Christ but we are not left with a clue as to why. His is a common name, found in Roman inscriptions, sometimes related to the imperial household. Salute them which are of Aristobulus' household. Although it cannot be said with certainty, J. B. Lightfoot suggests that this Aristobulus was the grandson of Herod the Great and the brother of Herod Agrippa I. If so, he lived in Rome as a private citizen and 11 Salute He-rō'dī-on my kinsman. Greet them that be of the household of Nār-čīs'sus, which are in the Lord.

12 Salute Trȳ-phē'na and Trȳ-phō'sa, who labour in the Lord. Salute the beloved Persis, which laboured much in the Lord.

13 Salute Rufus chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 Salute A-sȳn'crī-tus, Phlē'gōn, Her'mas, Pāt'ro-bas, Her'mēs, and the brethren which are with them.

15 Salute Phī-lōl'o-gus, and Julia, Ne're-us, and his sister, and Ō-lȳm'pas, and all the saints which are with them.

16 Salute one another with an holy kiss. The churches of Christ salute you.

enjoyed a close friendship with the Emperor Claudius. He is not saluted himself, but the slaves of his household are being greeted as Christians.

11. Salute Herodion my kinsman. This name, and the context of the preceding verse, would suggest that this man was one of Herod's household. He was a kinsman of Paul and therefore Jewish. Greet them that be of the household of Narcissus, which are in the Lord. It may be possible to identify this man with Tiberius Claudius Narcissus, a wealthy freedman of the Emperor Tiberius. Narcissus was executed by order of Agrippina, Nero's mother, shortly after her son's accession to the throne in A.D. 54. If his possessions were at this time confiscated, his slaves would become imperial property and would be known as the Narcissiani or household of Narcissus.

12. Salute Tryphaena and Tryphosa, who labor in the Lord. Tryphaena and Tryphosa were probably sisters and possibly even twins. It was a common practice to name twins of the same root word. The name means those who live voluptuously. Although these names stem from a pagan, Anatolian root, Paul nevertheless associates them with labor in the Lord. Salute the beloved Persis, which labored much in the Lord. Persis (the name means Persian woman) is said to be beloved but with a woman Paul delicately avoids using the phrase "my beloved." Her name appears on Greek and Latin inscriptions as that of a slave or freedwoman.

13. Salute Rufus chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine. It may be possible to make an identification between this Rufus and the man of the same name who Mark records was the son of Simon of Cyrene (cf. Mk 15:21). Mark says, "And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross." That Simon would be identifiable by the name of his son Rufus must mean that the son was a man of some reknown. F. F. Bruce, in addressing how Rufus' mother could act as mother to Paul, hazards the guess that when Barnabas brought Paul from Tarsus to become his missionary colleague, one of the teachers of the church at Antioch permitted Paul to lodge with him, a certain Simon surnamed Niger, (cf. Acts 13:1) whom Bruce identifies with Simon of Cyrene. In the course of Paul's lodging there, Simon's mother cared for or mothered the apostle. Although interesting, this must be considered speculation.

14. Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes. Little is known of these believers other than that they were apparently of one community and were all men. Hermas is an abbreviation of some names such as Hermogenes or Hermodorus and very common (cf. The Shepherd of Hermas is apocryphal literature). Patrobas was abbreviated from Patrobius. Hermes was the name of the god of good luck and became a common slave name.

15. Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas. Philologus and Julia were perhaps husband and wife. Both names occur several times in connection with the imperial household of Rome. Nereus, according to a tradition which goes back to the fourth century, is associated with Flavia Domitilla, a Christian woman who was banished to the Island of Pandateria by her uncle Emperor Domitian in A.D. 95. She was released after his death the following year. Olympas is an abbreviated form of Olympiodorus. These all appear to have been a community of faith.

16. Salute one another with a holy kiss. The holy kiss was a common feature of Christian greeting (cf. I Cor 16:20; II Cor 13:12; I Thess 5:26; I Pet 5:14). Justin Martyr mentions that it was a common feature in early Christian worship (First Apology, 66). It was "holy" as opposed to that in the question, "betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?" (Lk' 22:48). Although a feature in the liturgy of the Eastern Church to this day, the holy kiss is noticeably absent in the Western Church.

3. Warnings to friends in Rome. 16:17-20.

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them.

17. Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions . . . and avoid them. Paul's admonition and warning to his friends at Rome concerns those who would cause divisions among the brethren. He commands two things; mark (Gr skopeō) them as to who they are, and then avoid them (Gr ekklinō). Those who cause divisions may have been antinomians who pushed their liberty in Christ to the "nth" degree. They may have been the ubiquitous Judaizers who seemed to incessantly plague Paul. But Paul characterizes them as those which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned. This may mean any group which denied the teachings of the apostle.

18 For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.

18. They . . . serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly. In further description of these divisive teachers, Paul describes them, not as servants of the Lord, but in service to their own carnal desires and self-interests. This is characterized by the symbol of their belly. In Philippians 3:19 the apostle warns the Philippian Christians against people "whose God is their belly." And by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple. These smooth-talking teachers have ensnared innocent (simple) believers in their doctrinal trap.

19 For your obedience is come abroad unto all men. I am glad therefore on your behalf: but yet I would have you wise unto that which is good, and simple concerning evil.

19. I would have you wise unto that which is good, and simple concerning evil. In Matthew 10:16 we are counseled to "be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." The Greek adjectives, sophos and akeraios, are used both in Matthew and here. Paul cautions the Roman Christians to be alert and discerning in relation to false doctrine (cf. I Cor 14:20).

20 And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

20. And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly. In echoing Genesis 3:15, Paul reminds the believers at Rome that God has promised ultimate victory to His church and shortly, despite Satan's crafty attacks, the enemy will be defeated as promised. God will crush Satan, under the feet of the faithful, and that right speedily.

4. Greetings from friends with Paul. 16:21-23.

21 Τι-μό-θε-ος my workfellow, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsmen, salute you.

21. Timothy my workfellow, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsmen, salute you. Timothy, Paul's convert from Lystra and subsequent colleague, was of particular affection to Paul. Of him Paul said to the church at Philippi, "For I have no man like-minded, who will naturally care for your state . . . But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel." (Phil 2:20, 22). Lucius, Jason, and Sosipater are mentioned as Paul's kinsmen and therefore as Jewish Christians. Jason may have been Paul's host on his first visit to Thessalonica (Acts 17:6-7, 9). Sosipater is probably Sopater of Beroea, the son of Pyrrhus, according to Acts 20:4.

22 I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.

22. I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord. Tertius, probably a native Italian, was the stenographer or amanuensis of the apostle. Paul's practice of using an amanuensis is attested in other epistles (cf. I Cor 16:21; Gal 6:11; Col 4:18; II Thess 3:17). Apparently Tertius interjects his own greeting into Paul's narration because he too knows and loves the believers at Rome.

23 Gaius mine host, and of the whole church, saluteth you. Erastus the chamberlain of the city saluteth you, and Quartus a brother.

23. Gaius mine host . . . Erastus the chamberlain of the city saluteth you, and Quartus a brother. Gaius is to be identified with the man whom Paul baptized at Corinth (I Cor 1:14) and may be identified as well with Titus Justus of Acts 18:7 who extended the hospitality of his house to Paul when the fledgling church of Corinth was expelled from the synagogue next door. The Roman system of naming a citizen was by the use of three names (praenomen, nomen, and cognomen) and Gaius was a common praenomen. His full name would then have been Gaius Titus Justus. Erastus the chamberlain of the city was in fact the city treasurer of Corinth. Quartus, of whom we know nothing, is simply mentioned as a brother.

C. The Concluding Doxology. 16:24-27.

1. The worthy recipient of praise. 16:24.

24 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

24. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen. Some older manuscripts do not include this phrase in the doxology. Its truth is evident from similar language in II Thessalonians 3:18.

2. The ascription of praise. 16:25-26.

25 Now to him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began,

25. To him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel. Paul's readers are commended to the only God who has the power to establish them and keep them from falling. When Paul says my gospel (cf. 2:16) he is referring to the gospel of Christ which he preaches. Equivalent to that is the preaching of Jesus Christ for that was the apostle's calling. According to the revelation of the mystery. The preaching of Christ was not an innovation in the plan of God, but the fulfillment of the Old Testament prophecies. This, Paul explains, is a mystery, for the Old Testament prophets did not fully appreciate the new life which we have in Christ.

26 But now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith:

26. But now is made manifest. That which was not clearly known in the Old Testament is now clearly known by the scriptures of the prophets, i.e., the fulfillment of the Old Testament prophecies concerning the Messiahship of Christ (cf. Isa 9:6; 53:1-2; Jer 23; Mic 5; Zech 9; etc.). The purpose of manifesting God's plan in Christ Jesus is that He may be made known to all nations for the obedience of faith. The preaching of the gospel is not just for intellectual acceptance but that nations may come to place their faith in the Christ of the gospel.

3. The benediction. 16:27.

27 To God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.

27. To God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen. This great hymn of praise ends with the glory for man's salvation being directed toward God, exactly where it belongs. But inherent to Paul's theme throughout the epistle is that it is through Jesus Christ that praise and glory are channelled toward God. Thus, To God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- Barnhouse, Donald Grey. Exposition of Bible Doctrine Taking the Epistle to the Romans as the Point of Departure. 10 vols. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1952-1963.
- Barth, Karl. The Epistle to the Romans. Trans. by E. C. Hoskyns. London: Oxford University Press, 1933.
- *Bruce, F. F. The Epistle of Paul to the Romans. In the Tyndale New Testament Commentaries. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1963.
- Calvin, John. Commentaries on the Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Romans. (Published 1539). Trans. and ed. by John Owen. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1947.
- Denny, James. St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. In the Expositor's Greek New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, reprinted, n.d.
- Erdman, Charles. The Epistle to the Romans. Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1925.
- Godet, Frederic. Commentary on St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, n.d.
- *Haldane, Robert. Exposition of the Epistle of the Romans. London: Banner of Truth Trust, reprinted, n.d.
- *Hodge, Charles. Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, reprinted, 1950.
- Ironside, Harry. Lectures on the Epistle to the Romans. New York: Loizeaux Brothers, 1951.
- Liddon, H. P. Explanatory Analysis of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. London: Longmans, Green & Co., 1899.
- *Lloyd-Jones, D. Martyn. Romans. 6 vols. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1970.
- Luther, Martin. Lectures on Romans. Trans. by Wilhelm Pauck. Philadelphia: Westminster, 1961.
- *McClain, A. J. Romans: Gospel of God's Grace. Chicago: Moody Press, 1973.
- Moule, H. G. G. Romans. In The Expositor's Bible. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, n.d.
- *Murray, John. The Epistle to the Romans. 2 vols. In the New International Commentary on the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1959-1965.
- Newell, William R. Romans Verse by Verse. Chicago: Moody Press, 1938.
- Plumer, W. S. Commentary on St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. New York: Randolph & Co., 1870.
- *Shedd, W. G. T. A Critical and Doctrinal Commentary on the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1967.
- Steele, David N. and Curtis C. Thomas. Romans: An Interpretive Outline. Philadelphia: Presbyterian and Reformed, 1963.
- Stifler, James M. The Epistle to the Romans. Chicago: Moody Press, 1960.
- Thomas, W. H. Griffith. St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1946.
- Vine, W. E. The Epistle to the Romans: Doctrine, Precept, Practice. London: Oliphants Ltd., 1948.
- Wuest, Kenneth. Romans, In The Greek New Testament. Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1956.

The First Epistle To The CORINTHIANS

INTRODUCTION

Falling second in the corpus of pauline literature, I Corinthians both complements and contrasts the great doctrinal epistle which precedes it. Where Romans emphasizes matters of biblical theology, I Corinthians is concerned with practical theology and its application to a particular local assembly.

Yet, this is not to say that Romans is not a practical epistle (as chs. 12-15 demonstrate). Nor is this to suggest that Paul does not give attention to doctrine in I Corinthians (note especially chs. 7-15). But, the predominant thrust here is that of a pastor concerned with the spiritual welfare of a wayward assembly. And that concern does not appear to be misplaced, as a closer look at the city of Corinth will show.

The city of Corinth. Corinth was a wealthy commercial center located on a narrow neck of land (four miles wide) that connected the Peloponnesus and northern Greece. Situated as it was, it became a crossroads for travel and commerce both north and south, east and west. It had two harbors, one (Lechaëum) facing toward Italy, and the other (Cenchrea) facing toward Asia. The wealth of Corinth was acquired by hauling freight and smaller vessels across the isthmus, and by politicians who would levy tolls on the commerce.

The history of the city may be divided into two periods—the old and the new. The old city (which gave to the world the classic Corinthian pillar) was founded ca. 1500 B.C. and was destroyed in 146 B.C. by the Roman general, Lucius Mummius. A century later, the new city was built on the same location. The old city of Corinth rose to wealth and fame during the period of the Greek city-states. It was known for its cosmopolitan culture and luxurious temples. On the gray, rocky hill to the south of the city (called Acrocorinth), the shining sanctuary to Aphrodite was located. Visible far out to sea, this temple was serviced by a thousand slave girls who doubled both as temple prostitutes and as entertainers for the city's night life (E. F. Harrison, Introduction to the New Testament, p. 267). The destruction of the old city (together with the sacking of Carthage) largely became the means by which Rome rose to wealth and power.

The new city was built by Julius Caesar in 46 B.C. and elevated to the status of a Roman colony with the title Colonia Laus Julia Corinthiensis. When Paul came to Corinth in A.D. 51, it was again a thriving metropolis, the capital of Achaia, and ruled by a Roman proconsul. Its population, vastly different from the old city (a mixture of Roman, Greek, and Oriental), was nearly half slaves. This rich cosmopolitan city boasted that it was heir to the glories of ancient Greece.

The city knew every type of religion its pluralistic society could bring to it. There was also a synagogue and a sizable contingency of Jews.

Corinth was known for the Isthmian Games held in the stadium on alternate years. These were second in popularity only to the Olympics. An outdoor theater, accommodating twenty thousand people, was the arena for the gladiatorial games and contests with wild beasts. There was also a smaller indoor theater (capacity of three thousand) for those interested in plays and music.

From such a cultural hub, a strong gospel witness might well be heard all over the world. It was no wonder that Paul felt constrained to bear a testimony to such a city.

But the moral depravity most vividly reflects the spiritual need of Corinth. The vile character of the old city carried over into the city of New Testament times. The Greek word korinthiazomai (lit., "to act the Corinthian"), came to mean, "to commit fornication." Corinth was a seaman's paradise and a moral cesspool. Divorce was rampant. Prostitution plagued the streets, and the moral air was polluted with the luring aroma of sin. It was famous for all that is debauched. It was, no doubt, the inspiration for the catalogue of man's sins in Romans 1:18-32 (written by Paul while a guest of Gaius in this wicked city)!

Inebriated by the swaggering pride of supposed Greek wisdom, they had even reduced their religion to a quagmire of gross sensualism. And it was from this filthy slough of sin that Paul's converts were extracted (cf. 6:9-11).

The founding of the church. Luke records the origin of the Corinthian church in Acts 18:1-17. Paul came to Corinth in A.D. 51 after a very unfruitful evangelistic effort at Athens (Acts 17:16-34). His experience at Athens, no doubt, influenced Paul's methodology when he moved on to Corinth. When he came to Corinth, Paul determined (the Greek suggests the idea of "predetermined") to preach nothing but "Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (I Cor 2:2). It was not with human wisdom but the gospel with which God built a thriving assembly in this heathen city.

Upon arrival in the city Paul accepted the hospitality of Aquila and his wife Priscilla, exiled Jews from Rome. During the week, he worked with them making tents (Acts 18:1-4). On the Sabbath he would go to the synagogue where he reasoned with the Jews concerning Christ.

After the arrival of Silas and Timothy, Paul no longer required secular employment, and thus devoted himself entirely to an aggressive evangelistic effort. One of his earliest converts was Crispus, the leader of the synagogue. Subsequently, the man's entire household believed, along with many Corinthians (Acts 18:8). Incurring opposition from the Jews, he was forced to find another meeting place. Providentially, he was led to the home of Titus Justus (probably the "Gaius" of I Cor 1:14) next door to the synagogue!

Later, the Jews had Paul arraigned before Gallio, where the proconsul dismissed their charges and demonstrated his contempt for the Jews by looking the other way as their new leader, Sosthenes, was flogged in the street.

Paul ministered in Corinth eighteen months (Acts 18:11), during which time he also wrote I and II Thessalonians. It is noteworthy that another church was started in the eastern port of Corinth in Cenchræa (cf. Rom 16:1). Whether Paul initiated this during his first visit or at a later time is not known for certain. The leadership of the assembly was assumed by Apollos, an eloquent preacher from Alexandria, at the conclusion of Paul's first visit (Acts 18:24-19:1). Paul then moved on to Ephesus where he enjoyed the longest ministry that he was ever to have in any one place.

Paul's relations with the church. In order to understand the occasion for the writing of I Corinthians, it is necessary to outline Paul's involvements with the church subsequent to going to Ephesus. While it is true that much of this is open to debate, the best that can be done here is to outline the most conspicuous details.

1. Those of Chloe's household reported a lack of harmony (I Cor 1:11).

2. Although Paul promised a second visit (I Cor 4:19), he did not have occasion to see them again before writing I Corinthians.

3. After his initial visit described above, Paul wrote the church a letter, known as the "previous letter," in which he warned the Corinthians not to associate with immoral persons (I Cor 5:9). This letter was misconstrued by the people and required further explanation in I Corinthians 5:10-11. It is doubtful that this "previous letter" is incorporated in any way into the text of the canonical book of I Corinthians, as suggested by some (Moffatt, Introduction to the Literature of the New Testament, p. 109).

4. A letter was sent to Paul containing several questions (note the recurring phrase "now concerning" or the similar "as concerning" or "as touching." I Cor 7:1; 25; 8:1; 12:1; 16:1, 12). This letter may well have been delivered to Paul by the three men mentioned in I Corinthians 16:17.

5. After writing I Corinthians, Paul sent Timothy to check into conditions in the church, with the promise that he would come in person to deal with their carnality (I Cor 4:17-19; 16:10, 11; Acts 19:22). It is not known whether Timothy ever made it. He may have also requested Apollos to take time out to help with the situation (I Cor 1:12).

6. With the problems apparently unresolved, Paul was forced to pay a brief but "painful" visit (II Cor 2:1-4; 12:14; 13:1-2).

7. Upon his return, Paul sent a third letter to Corinth which was of such a severe nature that he later regretted having sent it (II Cor 2:4). This letter was carried by Titus, who was to meet Paul at Troas to give him a status report. This letter (along with the "previous letter") has been lost, and may well have been destroyed after Paul's final visit with them.

8. When Paul failed to meet Titus at Troas, his anxiety was so great that he was unable to even preach, though he had the opportunity (II Cor 2:12-13). He hurried on to Macedonia where he met Titus en route. Titus' report was very encouraging. Paul immediately sat down and penned II Corinthians to express his great relief at improved conditions (II Cor 2:13-14; 7:5-16), and to deal with some of the remaining problems in anticipation of another visit.

9. He followed this letter with his last recorded visit when he spent the winter in Corinth on his way to Jerusalem with the collection for the poor (Acts 20:1-4).

Purpose. From the foregoing data, it is discerned that Paul's letter was occasioned by at least two factors. First, he had received word from two sources of divisions in the church (I Cor 1:11; 16:17). This sectarianism probably rose more out of the sophist spirit in Corinth than from Judaistic tendencies (as at Galatia). The tendency to faction had long characterized the Greek race (D. Stanley, Epistles of St. Paul to the Corinthians, p. 8). They split on politics, sports, and philosophy. Thus it is not surprising to see them carry this habit over into the church. Paul was to show them that this was totally incompatible with the gospel of Christ (I Cor 1:18-25).

Secondly, Paul had received a letter from the assembly requesting answers to a series of questions. Paul felt obliged to respond.

In addition to these factors, there were apparently other reports not recorded (such as that mentioned in 5:1) that concerned the apostle. Thus, with pen in hand, Paul purposes to: (1) rebuke the party spirit in the assembly; (2) encourage them to moral purity; (3) instruct them regarding specific doctrinal problems; (4) urge their participation in the collection for Jerusalem; and (5) inform them of his immediate plans.

Authorship. The authorship of I Corinthians is so well attested that only a brief sketch is necessary here. External evidence derives from references to the epistle from the first century onward. Clement of Rome, the Epistle of Barnabas (3:1, 16), the Didache (ch. 10), Polycarp, Hermas, Justin Martyr, Athanagoras, Irenæus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, the Muratorian Canon, Marcion, the Old Syriac and Old Latin texts all attest to the authority and Pauline authorship of I Corinthians.

Internal evidence is equally strong. The writer calls himself Paul (1:1; 3:4, 6, 22; 16:21). The epistle harmonizes well with Acts and other Pauline letters. Frequent mention is made of contemporaries of the mid-first century (thus eliminating a second-century forgery). This, without doubt, is a genuine product of the apostle.

Date and place of writing. Paul himself tells us that I Corinthians was written from Ephesus (I Cor 16:8-9, 19). The subscription in the TR and the AV is probably due to a misunderstanding of I Corinthians 16:5. If it were written toward the end of Paul's stay at Ephesus, the time would be spring of A.D. 55. This is suggested since he says he planned to stay in Ephesus till Pentecost (I Cor 16:8) and he was in Jerusalem on or about Pentecost in A.D. 56 (Acts 20:16). In the interim, he visited Corinth briefly (II Cor 2:1-4), spent some time in Macedonia (Acts 20:1-6), wrote II Corinthians (fall, A.D. 55), came to Corinth a few weeks later and stayed about three months. He spent the Passover season of A.D. 56 in Philippi on his way to Jerusalem (Acts 20:6).

I CORINTHIANS

Argument. Particular problems as they are brought under the gaze of the apostle actually form the outline of the book. However, his discussion falls basically into two categories; unsolicited advice (chs. 1-6; 15), and solicited advice (chs. 7-14). They have requested his counsel on some problems they knew about. Paul responds to these, but not until he directs their attention to a few problems they didn't know about. Hence, he opens the epistle with a rebuke: (1) The disorders in the assembly, viz., misconceptions regarding the nature of the body of Christ, the message of the gospel, and the nature of the ministry (chs. 1-4). (2) Then he deals with the matter of discipline as it was necessary in the cases of lust, lawsuits, and license (chs. 5-6). Having taken care of these matters, Paul (3) answers the specific questions addressed to him on matters of doctrine and church polity. Here he focuses his attention on Christian marriage, Christian liberty, worship, and spiritual gifts (chs. 7-14). (4) His chapter on the resurrection is directed to an additional problem of certain Greeks in the assembly who had problems with the concept of the bodily resurrection (ch. 15). This is the only doctrinal "error," as such, that Paul has to deal with in the epistle, and it does not appear to have been one of the questions asked of him.

---

OUTLINE

- I. Introduction. 1:1-9.
  - A. The Salutation of the Apostle. 1:1-3.
    1. Addresser: Paul and Sosthenes. 1:1.
    2. Addressees: Church in Corinth. 1:2.
    3. Address. 1:3.
  - B. The Setting of the Epistle. 1:4-9.
    1. The regularity of Paul's thanks—always. 1:4.
    2. The cause of Paul's thanks—enrichment. 1:5-8.
    3. The ground of Paul's thanks—God. 1:9.
- II. Disorder in the Fellowship. 1:10-4:21.
  - A. Denunciation of Division. 1:10-31.
    1. Paul's exhortation. 1:10-17.
    2. Paul's proclamation. 1:18-25.
    3. Paul's evaluation. 1:26-31.
  - B. Demonstration of Divine Wisdom. 2:1-16.
    1. Wisdom of divine power. 2:1-5.
    2. Wisdom of divine origin. 2:6-9.
    3. Wisdom of divine perception. 2:10-16.
  - C. Development of Mature Service. 3:1-23.
    1. Fleshliness in Corinth. 3:1-3.
    2. Fellow workers in the gospel. 3:4-17.
    3. Folly in worldly wisdom. 3:18-23.
  - D. Defense of a Faithful Steward. 4:1-21.
    1. Execution of faithfulness. 4:1-5.
    2. Example of faithfulness. 4:6-13.
    3. Exhortation to faithfulness. 4:14-21.
- III. Discipline for the Fellowship. 5:1-6:20.
  - A. Relating to Lust. 5:1-13.
    1. A common report. 5:1.
    2. A critical rebuke. 5:2.
    3. A corrective remedy. 5:3-8.
    4. A commanding regulation. 5:9-13.
  - B. Relating to Lawsuits. 6:1-11.
    1. An inquiry. 6:1.
    2. An inference. 6:2-3.
    3. An inconsistency. 6:4-11.
  - C. Relating to License. 6:12-20.
    1. The teaching. 6:12-14.
    2. The thrust. 6:15-20.
- IV. Doctrine for the Fellowship. 7:1-15:58.
  - A. Doctrine of Christian Marriage. 7:1-40.
    1. Concerning the precept of marriage. 7:1-7.
      - a. A prevention of sin through the marriage relationship. 7:1-2.
      - b. A pledge of persons in the marriage relationship. 7:3-4.
      - c. A parenthesis in the marriage relationship. 7:5-7.
    2. Concerning the permanence of marriage. 7:8-16.
      - a. For the unmarried and widows. 7:8-9.
      - b. For the married believers. 7:10-11.
      - c. For the mixed marriages. 7:12-16.
    3. Concerning the place of marriage. 7:17-24.
      - a. The selection of God. 7:17-20.
      - b. The service for God. 7:21-24.
    4. Concerning the priorities of marriage. 7:25-40.
      - a. The personal judgment of Paul. 7:25-26.
      - b. The prospect of tribulation. 7:27-28.
      - c. The passing away of worldly fashions. 7:29-31.
      - d. The problem of divided allegiance. 7:32-35.
      - e. The pattern for advising virgin daughters. 7:36-38.
      - f. The preference of Paul. 7:39-40.
  - B. Doctrine of Christian Liberty. 8:1-11:1.
    1. The principle of liberty. 8:1-13.
    2. The picture of liberty. 9:1-27.
    3. The practice of liberty. 10:1-11:1.
  - C. Doctrine of Worship. 11:2-34.
    1. The order of authority. 11:2-16.
    2. The ordinance of communion. 11:17-34.
  - D. Doctrine of Spiritual Gifts. 12:1-14:40.
    1. The partitioning of gifts. 12:1-11.
      - a. The assignment of the gifts. 12:1-6.
      - b. The allotment of the gifts. 12:7-10.
      - c. The administration of the gifts. 12:11.
    2. The proportion in the body. 12:12-31.

- a. The indivisibility of the members in the body. 12:12-19.
  - b. The interdependence of the members in the body. 12:20-26.
  - c. The induction of the members into the body. 12:27-31.
3. The primacy of love. 13:1-13.
- a. Contrast of love. 13:1-3.
  - b. Character of love. 13:4-7.
  - c. Constancy of love. 13:8-13.
4. The prominence of prophecy. 14:1-40.
- a. In the edification of the assembly. 14:1-17.
  - b. In the example of Paul. 14:18-19.
  - c. In the essential purpose. 14:20-25.
  - d. In the exercise in the assembly. 14:26-40.
- E. Doctrine of the Resurrection. 15:1-58.
- 1. A defense of the doctrine of the Resurrection (based on known truth). 15:1-34.
  - a. Resurrection is vital to the historical preaching of the gospel. 15:1-19.
  - b. Resurrection is vital to the prophetic preaching of the gospel. 15:20-28.
  - c. Resurrection is vital in suffering persecution for the gospel. 15:29-34.
2. A development of the doctrine of the Resurrection (based on revelation). 15:35-58.
- a. The nature of resurrection for the dead. 15:35-49.
  - b. The nature of resurrection for the living. 15:50-58.
- V. Conclusion. 16:1-24.
- A. The Contribution. 16:1-9.
    - 1. Its instruction. 16:1-4.
    - 2. Its collection. 16:5-9.
  - B. The Collector. 16:10-12.
  - C. The Close. 16:13-24.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-9

Paul's introduction to I Corinthians consists of (a) the salutation, where he introduces himself and the recipients of his letter; and (b) the setting of the epistle, where he introduces the direction he intends to take in his writing.

A. The Salutation of the Apostle. 1:1-3.

1. Addresser: Paul and Sosthenes. 1:1.

1:1 Paul. The addresser of this letter is Paul, the great apostle, the one whom God used to establish this young assembly. Called to be an apostle. There is particular stress on Paul's authority as an apostle through divine call. This, together with the expression through the will of God, answers at the outset those who had questioned Paul's right to speak (cf. 9:1-2; II Cor 10:10). Sosthenes our brother. Rather than exalt himself unduly, Paul joins with him in writing the well-known brother Sosthenes. This man was not a fellow apostle, but certainly a fellow minister of the gospel. He was probably the ruler of the Jewish synagogue mentioned in Acts 18:17, although this cannot be established beyond question. However, if this is the case, it is noteworthy that the Jewish synagogue in Corinth had no little trouble retaining their leaders! Acts 18 also mentions Crispus, the synagogue ruler when Paul first arrived, as one of the first converts (Acts 18:8). Sosthenes is the man who had been elected to take his place, and subsequently, in a display of anti-Semitism in Corinth, had been beaten. Now he appears as a fellow Christian and minister of the gospel. In light of the opposition facing Paul at the Corinthian church, it is no doubt possible that he uses Sosthenes, probably a native Corinthian, to help ingratiate himself with his readers.

2. Addressees: Church in Corinth. 1:2.

2. Unto the church of God which is at Corinth. Humanly speaking, Paul could have taken some credit here. But, for purposes of the epistle, he identifies the church as of God. And to add additional force to this, he adds the phrase to them that are sanctified (lit., "having been sanctified") in Christ Jesus. Here Paul has special reference to the Corinthians' correct

PAUL, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, and Sôs'the-nês our brother,

2 Unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours:

3 Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ;

5 That in every thing ye are enriched by him, in all utterance, and in all knowledge;

6 Even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you:

7 So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:

8 Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

standing before God. That is, they were set apart for God's special use. His aim in the epistle is to bring the Corinthians' "state" into closer alignment with their positional "standing." Called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours. Since the Corinthians are claiming the family name, Paul expects that they will live in conformity to the family way. The emphasis, of course, is upon the unity of all who call upon the name of the Lord.

3. Address. 1:3.

3. Grace . . . and peace. In the former, Paul contemplates all that is understood in God's love as it is exercised toward sinners. The latter has in mind those benefits which fall from the exercise of God's love. Note that this grace and peace come from God, who is identified as our Father and . . . the Lord Jesus Christ. Here the Father and the Son are shown to be of equal status, yet clearly distinguished (cf. Phil 2:6).

B. The Setting of the Epistle. 1:4-9.

This takes the form of genuine thanksgiving to God for specific benefits enjoyed by the Corinthian assembly.

1. The regularity of Paul's thanks—always. 1:4.

4. I thank my God. The direction of Paul's thanks is to God. The very fact that a church should have been brought into existence at all in so wicked a place as Corinth was evidence of God's grace and power. The regularity of Paul's prayer is expressed in the term always. The concern of Paul's prayer was on your behalf. This is a good illustration of what the theologians like to call the "communion of the saints"; that is, to give thanks to God for the mutual benefits that he extends to all believers. In this case, it is for the grace of God which is given you. Here Paul hints on that important subject which he mentions in the next verse and will enlarge upon later in chapters 12-14.

2. The cause of Paul's thanks—enrichment. 1:5-8.

5. That in every thing ye are enriched by him, in all utterance, and in all knowledge. The cause of Paul's thanks was that the Corinthians had been enriched, and that this enrichment was "in all utterance and knowledge." The extent of this enrichment is expressed in verse 7 that they come behind in no gift. While the term gift (Gr charisma) has a wide variety of meanings, here it probably has reference to spiritual gifts later developed in the epistle.

6. Testimony of Christ was confirmed in you. Here is the most significant result of their enrichment. This is that message of the gospel concerning Jesus Christ that Paul faithfully preached at Corinth (cf. I Cor 2:2).

7-8. Waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Since the gospel had been faithfully preached and responded to by the Corinthian believers, they are now privileged to wait upon the Second Coming of Jesus Christ, who in turn shall also confirm you. Historically, the gospel had been confirmed in them. Now they anticipate the prospect of that blessed event when Jesus Christ shall also confirm them blameless before the throne of God.

4. The ground of Paul's thanks—God. 1:9.

9. God is faithful. Just as Paul directed his thanksgiving toward God, so the ground of his thanksgiving is that same God. For it is God who is faithful. And it is also that same God by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son. The term fellowship (Gr koinonia) includes both union and communion. The Corinthian believers had been brought into union with the Lord Jesus Christ. Accordingly, this great truth implies that they had been brought into communion with one another. It will be upon this basis that Paul attacks their sectarianism.

II. DISORDER IN THE FELLOWSHIP. 1:10-4:21.

A. Denunciation of Division. 1:10-31.

The first major concern of the Apostle Paul has to do with the divisive spirit in Corinth. He approaches the problem by first denouncing their factional spirit (1:10-31), then by demonstrating the quality of divine wisdom as contrasted with human wisdom (ch. 2). In chapter 3, he develops those qualities that make for mature Christian service. And finally, in chapter 4, he defends his own ministry, and that of Apollos and the apostles, contrasting personal discomfort which he himself endured, with the arrogance of the Corinthians who are now criticizing him.

1. Paul's exhortation. 1:10-17.

10. Now is adversative. With this, Paul introduces his appeal for unity. I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Paul does two things here. First of all, notice the significant way in which he addresses them as brethren. He is about to exhort them to unity, which is characteristic of brethren in Christ. Paul establishes his authority when he says, I beseech you . . . by the name of our Lord (cf. Rom 12:1; II Thess 3:12). Their reverence and love for Christ should induce them to yield obedience to the apostle. Since Paul's own integrity has been called into question, he appeals to the authority of Christ. That ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you. Quarrels had split the congregation into factions. The appeal is to unity in speech, and fellowship. But that ye be perfectly joined together (this is translated "mending" in Mark 1:19). The force of this term (Gr katakrizō) is that they be adjusted to one another in mind and . . . judgment (lit., "thought" or "opinion").

11. Word had come to the apostle concerning the condition of the assembly at Corinth by them . . . of Chloe (probably slaves of Chloe's household who were in Ephesus on business). The report was that there were contentions among you.

12. There appear to have been four rival parties. Those who professed to follow Paul; perhaps as the most sublime teacher. Then there were those who professed to follow Apollos, the gifted orator from Alexandria. Others claimed to follow Peter, or Cephas as it is given in the text. These may have been Judaists or, more likely, they were those who preferred Peter as representing more authority, as he was with Christ in His earthly ministry. Then there were those who renounced all the others, and claimed only Christ. What special advantage this last party claimed is not certain. But they were as much sectarian as the others since they degraded the Lord to the level of a party leader (also notice II Cor 5:15; 10:7; and 11:23).

13. Is Christ divided? The implied answer is "no." There is but one Christ. Was Paul crucified for you? Paul asks, "was I ever your saviour, or did I ever pretend to be?" Were ye baptized in the name of Paul? "You never swore loyalty to me."

14-16. In view of the divisions in the assembly, Paul is thankful that very few in Corinth were even baptized by him. No one could ever accuse him of trying to gather a following in this way. The implication of this is rather significant. Baptism is not necessary to salvation, else the apostle would have been giving thanks to God that he saved so few.

17. The point is that baptism was not part of the apostle's commission; rather, he asserts Christ sent me . . . to preach the gospel. Paul concludes his exhortation regarding the divisions in the assembly with a call to evangelize. Not with wisdom of words. This looks ahead to the next segment of the apostle's argument when he deals with the problems of human

10 Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment.

11 For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Chloë, that there are contentions among you.

12 Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cēphas; and I of Christ.

13 Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius;

15 Lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name.

16 And I baptized also the household of Stēph'a-nas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.

wisdom as opposed to divine. Lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect (Gr kenōō means “to empty or deprive of substance”). The success of the gospel lies in the plain doctrine of a crucified Lord. Paul was not about to ascribe its power to the flourish of oratory, or the intricacies of Greek philosophy. In spite of his learning at the feet of Gamaliel, the Apostle Paul lays his learning aside when he preaches the simple gospel of Christ. This truth needs no artificial dress. It alone carries with it the “power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16). Having exhorted the people to unity, the apostle now goes on to correct a misconception that they have regarding the nature of the gospel.

2. Paul's proclamation. 1:18-25.

18. Paul directs his attention first to the word of the Cross (vss. 18-20). For introduces the reason he did not come in wisdom of words. The preaching (Gr logos) of the cross. The content of Paul's message was the Cross, not wisdom. To them that perish foolishness. In its effect on man, Paul singles out two groups. Those that perish deem the word of the Cross foolishness. For men of wit and learning, and of the cultivated arts and sciences, the word of the Cross was met with scorn and contempt. As those who cried out on Golgotha's hill, “He saved others, himself he cannot save.” Another group Paul identifies with the words unto us which are saved. The language here is strongly reminiscent of our Lord's instructions regarding the broad way that leads to destruction, and the many that enter by it, and the narrow way that leads to life, while there are few who find it (Mt 7:13-14). To the saved, the pure, simple message of the Cross is the power of God.

19-20. Paul further buttresses his argument by the appeal from inspired Scripture (Isa 29:14; 19:12; 33:18). The “wise” of Corinth are no more effectual to the saving of souls than the “wise” of Judah in staving the threat against Sennacherib. The great stress in these verses is upon the activity of God. God will destroy human wisdom, and make the wisdom of the world foolish. But where is the wisdom of God, and how is it demonstrated? Paul's answer to this question is given in verses 21-25. It is the wisdom of the Cross.

21. The world by wisdom knew not God. By leaving man to his own wisdom, God demonstrates man's folly. For he is not only incapable of knowing God, but in fact, has degraded Him to the level of the creature (cf. Rom 1). Why are these Corinthian believers taken up with sophistry when history affirms that through wisdom, the knowledge of God is impossible? By way of contrast, Paul says that the knowledge of God is possible to them that believe. Here is the wisdom of God. Salvation comes through the foolishness of preaching (Gr kerygma). The emphasis of the apostle here is not upon the act of preaching, but upon the content of preaching (viz., the message of the Cross, cf. vs. 18 above).

22-25. Verse 22 deals with the matter of man's curiosity. Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom. For the Jew, it was necessary that the message be accredited by physical wonders. For the Greeks, they required intellectual splendor. Both found it equally difficult to accept a dead man on a cross as an eternal Saviour. But unto . . . (the) called . . . Christ (is) the power . . . and the wisdom of God. The superiority of the Cross is seen in that it is both a sign and wisdom. But only to the called (these are to be identified with those above who believed, vs. 21).

3. Paul's evaluation. 1:26-31.

The factional spirit at Corinth was wrong because it represented an attitude that was incompatible with the gospel of Christ. It was also wrong because it represented a misunderstanding of the nature of the gospel. Paul goes on, now, to 18 For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God.

19 For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.

20 Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?

21 For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness;

24 But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.

