25 Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

26 For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called:

27 But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty;

28 And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are:

29 That no flesh should glory in his presence.

30 But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption:

31 That, according as it is written, He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

show it is wrong because their own experience belies such a haughty spirit.

26. For introduces the negative side of Paul's argument. Ye see . . . not many wise . . . mighty . . . noble. Look around you, the apostle says, and tell me the kind of men God is calling. Are they the wise, mighty, or noble? Obviously not. The nature of Paul's argument here tells us that most of the Corinthian congregation was poor and of the lower element of society. They certainly had very little to offer in themselves.

27-29. God hath chosen . . . the foolish, . . . the weak, . . . and things which are not. The selection of God is designed to bring to silence the wisdom of man. He selects the foolish to shame the wise; the weak to shame the strong; and the "nobodies" to shame the "somebodies."

30. But introduces the positive side of Paul's argument. Paul concludes that all the riches of salvation are lodged in Jesus Christ. All that the Corinthian believers are, they owe to Him. Thus, it is not in oneself, or in party alignment, or in supposed human ability, that any believer ought to glory, but of him are ye in Christ Jesus. To answer the implied question, "What am I in Christ?," Paul tabulates those qualities which belong to the believer. Wisdom. This is positional. It does not contemplate the acquisition of cognitive skills, but the wisdom of God as demonstrated in the Cross. Righteousness is a legal concept, and has in mind that righteousness that is registered to the believer's account the moment he believes (Rom 5). Sanctification has in mind that which Paul has already introduced in 1:2 in the words: "sanctified in Christ Jesus." This contemplates the work of Christ "in" the believer. It has in mind both a positional and a progressive truth. In justification, there is the idea of righteousness applied to one's account. In sanctification, the idea is that of righteousness activated in the believer's life, equipping him for service to the Lord. Redemption. If the order of these terms is logical, this would have in mind more the eschatological prospect of the resurrected body. However, the apostle is more emotional than logical in this passage, and it is more likely that he has injected this as a factor which underlines all the above. As the twenty-four elders put it, "Thou art worthy . . . for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" (Rev 5:9). It was the atonement which opened the way for God to extend His grace to sinful man, and pour out upon him such benefits as wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, etc.

31. That indicates purpose. If there is to be boasting, it is to be properly directed. That is, to the Lord. If the gospel were shackled with human contingencies, this would not be possible. But because salvation is of Jehovah, to Him alone must be the praise.

B. Demonstration of Divine Wisdom. 2:1-16.

Having denounced the divisive spirit which characterized the Corinthian assembly, the Apostle Paul in chapter 1 has shown that the real genius of the Christian assembly is unity, not controversy. Chapter 2 is related to the preceding in that while the former deals with a worldly attitude, the latter deals with a worldly mentality. Paul's message was in demonstration of divine wisdom. He is about to show the Corinthians that divine wisdom is unlike any they had ever seen before. Paul characterizes it as: (1) wisdom of divine power (2:1-5); (2) wisdom of divine origin (2:6-9); and (3) wisdom of divine perception (2:10-16).

I CORINTHIANS 2:1

CHAPTER 2

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God.

2 For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.

4 And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power:

5 That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them that are perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, that come to nought:

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory:

8 Which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.

9 But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

1. Wisdom of divine power. 2:1-5.

2:1-2. In pursuing his argument, Paul reflects upon his initial ministry with the Corinthians. His message was not characterized by eloquence (although he certainly was capable of it). Rather, it was a declaration of the testimony of God. This was not Paul's testimony of God, but God's testimony of Himself (viz., "the cross").

I determined (lit., "I decided not"). The implication is that Paul gave careful thought to his approach, and resolved to lay aside the ornaments of speech and philosophical skill to announce Jesus Christ, and him crucified. Not only was Paul's message of divine wisdom, but his method also reflected the same.

3. Weakness . . . fear . . . trembling. To some of Paul's enemies, this approach was a stumbling block (cf. II Cor 10:10).

4. But Paul resolved to come not with enticing words . . . but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. With a deep sense of his own insufficiency, Paul carried on a ministry characterized by modesty and humility. Paul was determined, as John the Baptist, that "he must increase, but I must decrease." Instead, his ministry demonstrated the Spirit and power. Obviously, the power was not in respect to any human agency, but the power of divine wisdom. Paul's mention of the Spirit here is significant. The Corinthians thought they knew much about the Holy Spirit, for as no other church in apostolic times, they had experienced the gifts of the Spirit. But they still had a lot to learn, and Paul will have many things to say about this important subject.

5. That your faith should . . . stand . . . in the power of God. Paul has a motive. Paul knows that his clever speech and polished oratory can save no one. Furthermore, he knows that if they are merely drawn by the logic of his arguments, their faith will be at the mercy of the next man that comes with a more clever presentation. Paul's motive is that their faith should "stand," and that it should stand in the "power of God."

2. Wisdom of divine origin. 2:6-9.

6. Paul does not depreciate wisdom as some anti-intellectuals do today. On the contrary, what Paul proclaims is the only true wisdom. We speak (lit., "go on speaking"). Contrast the historical aorist in Greek in verses 1-3. Paul wants them to know that his message has not changed.

But this wisdom could only be fully appreciated by them that are perfect (mature, Gr teleios; cf. I Cor 14:20; Phil 3:15; and Heb 6:1). Paul cannot resist the use of irony here. That come to nought (Greek present passive participle, "who are being made ineffective").

7-9. This wisdom is also a hidden wisdom. This is the wisdom of God. In contrast to the groping speculation of fallen men, Paul's message is the unchanging truth of God. In a mystery. In has an instrumental force. Mystery (Gr mysterion) refers to some work or purpose of God hitherto unrevealed (Rom 16:25-26). In this case, the reference is to the hidden wisdom, which God ordained . . . unto our glory. The counsels of God concerning our salvation are from eternity, and directed toward the same everlasting glory (cf. Rom 8:28-32; Phil 1:10). That this wisdom was hidden from men has the horrible consequence that the Lord of glory was crucified (on the expression "Lord of glory," meaning perhaps "the Lord whose attribute was glory," see Ps 29:1; Acts 7:2; Eph 1:17; Jas 2:1). Eye hath not seen . . . Paul employs the language of Isaiah 64:4 in order to demonstrate that the wisdom of God is not of human origin, and also to contrast the thought of verse 10.

This wisdom which is of divine power, and of divine origin, is also shown by the apostle to be of divine perception (vss. 10-16).

3. Wisdom of divine perception. 2:10-16.

Paul develops his thought here by showing, first of all, that this perception is through the Spirit, then by contrasting the perception of natural man in verse 14 with the perception of the spiritual man in verse 15.

10-11. The truth of which the apostle is speaking is not truth that remains hidden to every human heart; on the contrary, it is revealed . . . unto us (unto us is in the emphatic position in the original). For the mature believer, all that God has revealed is open unto him. In verses 10-13 the apostle deals with three vital doctrines. In verse 10 he deals with the doctrine of revelation. For the believer today, the truth which Paul is talking about is contained in that record which God has given to us, the Bible. This is eternally and unchangingly the truth of God. Verse 11 deals with the doctrine of illumination, which has to do with human perception of divine truth. The Spirit (see Rom 8:4). The things of God can only be recognized by the highest element of human personality. They have not entered into the heart (vs. 9) but into the spirit, which is the principle point of contact with God. Since the truth of God is of divine origin, it requires divine enablement to properly understand it.

12-13. The subject of verses 12 and 13 is the doctrine of inspiration. In verse 12 Paul talks about the content of inspiration. That we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. In verse 13 his concern is with the communication of inspiration which things (the things freely given) also we speak. Paul's message was not of human contrivance. He was a channel, simply communicating God's truth. The faithful minister of the gospel today does the same thing. He takes of that truth, God's Word, and communicates it to man. Comparing spiritual things with spiritual. The term comparing (Gr synekrinō) occurs only here and in II Corinthians 10:12 where the meaning is clearly "compare." However, in classical Greek, the term was always used in a sense of "to compound" or "to interpret" (cf. LXX Gen 40:8). Probably the most satisfactory interpretation is "combining spiritual things with spiritual words," or "doing spiritual things by spiritual means." After speaking of spiritual things (11-13), Paul now speaks of the forms in which they are conveyed. In other words, spiritual truth is conveyed in language that is given by God's Spirit. This would not be the case if he uttered the revelations of the Spirit in the speech of human wisdom (cf. Vincent, Word Studies in the New Testament, Vol. II, p. 197). Having established the principle by which God's truth is made known, the apostle contrasts two kinds of men to whom the truth comes, i.e., the natural and the spiritual man.

14. Natural man (lit., "soulish man"). Paul contrasts the soulish man (the soul as the organ of human cognition) with the "spiritual" (the spirit as the organ of spiritual cognition). The former, when confronted with spiritual truth, receiveth not. He is unreceptive. He does not admit the truth into his heart (cf. Lk 8:13; Acts 8:14; 11:1; I Thess 1:6; Jas 1:21). They are foolishness. He passes it off with scorn. Neither can he know (lit., "he cannot know"). As spiritual discernment is generated only by the Holy Spirit, the capacity to know spiritual truth is beyond the innate powers of the natural man.

Because they are spiritually discerned shows that the natural man is incompetent. The fundamental idea of discerned (Gr anakrinomai) is that of examination or scrutiny. It is used only by Paul and Luke, and mostly of judicial examination (cf. Luke 23:14; Acts 4:9; I Cor 9:3; 10:25, 27). It speaks of the impatient human spirit which prejudices the truth and wants to anticipate the full judgment. On the spiritual plain, the natural man does not even have the ability to sift the facts.

15. But introduces the contrast with he that is spiritual (he who is dominated by the Spirit). Such a man judgeth (Gr

10 But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.

12 Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.

13 Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual.

14 But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

15 But he that is spiritual judgeth all things, yet he himself is judged of no man.

16 For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ.

anakrino, discerns) all things. The difference between the natural man and the spiritual man is primarily that the spiritual man has been exposed to God's revelation, has received it, and founded his faith upon it. He can judge now both earthly and heavenly things. He can discern what is and what is not of the gospel and salvation, and whether a man truly preaches the truth of God. It is important to observe that the spiritual man does not lose his power of reasoning. Nor does Paul renounce the concepts of reason and logic. Rather, he elevates revelation above reason, and subjects the imaginations of human reason to the objective truth of God. The natural man operates in reverse. Discerning all things, the spiritual man is judged of no man who is not spiritual.

16. But we have the mind of Christ. This answers the question that Paul puts in the same verse, "who has known the mind of the Lord?" The answer is, "we do!" The term we no doubt includes the Apostle Paul and all true believers.

C. Development of Mature Service. 3:1-23.

In chapter 1 Paul has denounced their divisive spirit. In chapter 2 he has shown that they have totally misunderstood the message of the gospel. The burden of chapter 3 is the development of mature service. Paul develops his thought by, first, citing the fleshliness in Corinth (vss. 1-3), then by showing that he, Apollos, and others who assisted with the ministry in Corinth were not party leaders, but rather, fellow workers in the gospel (vss. 4-17). Then, in verses 18-23, he shows the utter folly in human wisdom.

1. Fleshliness in Corinth. 3:1-3.

3:1-3. In the opening verses, Paul notes that the fleshliness in Corinth had hindered his ministry. And I, brethren, could not speak. The pronoun I is emphatic. Paul calls them brethren not simply to ingratiate himself with them. But, it is important to observe that they cannot be robbed of their relationship to Jesus Christ in spite of their immaturity and sin. The apostle observes that even on his first encounter with them, he was unable to speak as to spiritual men. Paul recalls this to mind briefly in order to compare the present state of the Corinthians with their beginnings in the faith, a comparison that must have filled them with shame. They still are acting like spiritual babes (cf. Lenski, The Interpretation of I and II Corinthians, p. 120). I have fed you with milk, and not with meat. As newborn babes, this would be natural and to be expected (I Pet 2:2). But, at this stage in their development, it is embarrassing. Their problem was that they were still carnal (lit., "fleshly"). The warfare between the flesh and the Spirit receives continual emphasis in Paul's writings (cf. Gal 5:17; Rom 7:14-8:13). The factions which have destroyed the unity in Corinth indicate that these believers were not walking by the Spirit, but were allowing the flesh to direct their behavior. They were acting just like fleshly men, with no uplifting power of the Holy Spirit. They were soldiers of the Lord's army trying to march to the beat of Lucifer's drums.

Such an attitude also hindered the spiritual maturity and development of these people. They are still babes ("non-speakers" or "infants"). This strongly contrasts with the "perfect" in 2:6. Milk, the drink suitable for babies, suggests their undeveloped spiritual state. Envy, and strife, and divisions, all works of the flesh, are symptomatic of their carnality. Walk as men. Paul does not say that they "are" men, but they are as men (the inference is "natural" men, cf. 2:14). Having finally labeled the wranglings at Corinth for what they were (carnality), Paul goes on to show the absurdity of such party alliances, since he and Apollos and the other apostles were actually fellow workers in the gospel (3:4-17).

CHAPTER 3

AND I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ.

2 I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.

3 For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?

4 For while one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?

5 Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man?

6 I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase.

7 So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.

8 Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.

9 For we are labourers together with God; ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.

10 According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;

13 Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and

2. Fellow workers in the gospel. 3:4-17.

4-5. In verses 4 and 5, the Apostle Paul shows that he and Apollos were united in service. Another (Gr heteros, another of a different kind). Carnal. The better texts read "men." In other words, Paul is saying, "Are you not mere men?" Who (Gr ti "what"). . . ? Function is emphasized in this expression. What then are Paul and Apollos? Ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave. Paul comes now to the crucial question, "What are these men around whom the Corinthians had built their little coteries?" They are simply ministers (Gr diakonos) serving the Lord. The apostle was not there to extend his own influence and popularity; rather, he was in Corinth in obedience to God (note especially Acts 18:9-10).

6. These ministers were also united in sowing (vss. 6-8). I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave (Greek imperfect tense, "was giving") the increase. Men are used to accomplish specific tasks in the economy of God, but in the process, God is giving the increase. While men can be used to plant and cultivate things, only God can make things grow.

7. Neither is he that planteth any thing. The point is that men are unimportant when compared to God who makes our efforts effectual.

8. Are one (of one purpose). Every man shall receive his own reward. Just as there are differences in quality of workmanship among craftsmen, even so among God's ministers. The quality of one's work and service will be directly related to the rewards he receives. We each have a responsibility to serve God faithfully, knowing that our best results are but the work of His grace.

Paul's servants are also united in structure. This is the essence of Paul's argument in verses 9-17.

9. Here is the key to this chapter. The principle is expressed in the words, we are laborers together with God (lit., "fellow workers of God"). This, in effect, restates the phrase in verse 8, he that planteth and he that watereth are one. Then Paul employs two illustrations to explicate this principle. The first looks back to verses 6-8, ye are God's husbandry. The second he introduces by saying ye are God's building. This is the imagery which dominates the remainder of the chapter. The use of the architectural metaphor is best understood if one remembers the magnificent temples and buildings common in Corinth. The important thrust of this metaphor applies to the believer's works.

10-11. First a reminder. I have laid the foundation. The foundation is always the least noticed and the most important part of any building. Paul had laid the foundation of the church among them in that he had "begotten (them) through the gospel" (cf. 4:15). Another buildeth thereon corresponds to the phrase Apollos watered, above. Let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. We are urged to examine how we build, not what we build. The warning is necessitated by the nature of the foundation which is Jesus Christ (cf. Acts 4:12; Lk 6:46-49). The second factor which is important to the apostle is that there is to be a time of reckoning. Verse 12 deals with the materials employed in the building. Verses 13-15 deal with manifestations of every man's work.

12. Gold, silver, precious stones. There are two kinds of material that can be employed in the superstructure of the building. The first are eternal. These are consistent with the quality of the foundation. A second kind of material is temporal. Wood, hay, stubble. In contrast to the above, these will not withstand the trial by fire.

13. Every man's work shall be made manifest. While it is possible to hide the true quality of one's service for Christ in this life, there is coming a time when it will be openly displayed for the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.

14 If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward.

15 If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.

16 Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

18 Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Therefore let no man glory in men. For all things are yours;

22 Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cēphas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours;

what it is. The time is given in the words the day. This is the day of the Judgment Seat of Christ (cf. 4:5; II Cor 5:10). Fire. This is figurative for judgment. More specifically, it speaks of the absolutely righteous judgment of God. Fire is used here, not for its enlightening power, but its consuming power. Of the six types of material mentioned, three are combustible and three are incombustible. (see also Deut 4:24; Mal 3:2; II Thess 1:8; Heb 12:29).

14-15. Abide . . . reward . . . burned . . . loss. The results of the judgment are broken into two categories. If a man's work remains undamaged by the fire, accordingly, it receives rewards (Gr misthos, "wages," cf. 3:8). Of course, it goes without saying that even the "wages" mentioned here are entirely a gift of grace (cf. Dan 12:3; I Cor 9:17; II Jn 8; Rev 4:4; 11-18). If a man's work does not endure, and is consumed in the fire, then he shall "suffer loss." Everything he has devoted himself to in this life shall be suddenly swept away. But he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire. It is important to notice that such a man does not suffer the loss of his salvation, but the loss of reward. The stress in this entire passage is not upon a man's relationship to Christ, but upon service to Christ. (On the believer's rewards see, W. Kroll, It Will Be Worth It All.)

Then Paul directs his attention to the fact that the building being erected is a residence of Almighty God (vss. 16-17).

16. Ye are the temple of God. Here the temple is the local church, not the individual believer (cf. Eph 2:21; II Cor 6:16). The Spirit of God dwelleth in you. This expression does not vitiate the doctrine of the omnipresence of the Holy Spirit. Indeed, the Holy Spirit is everywhere, but He does not "dwell" everywhere. He dwells in the local church because He has taken up residence in every believer (cf. Jn 14:16).

17. Defile . . . destroy (Gr phtheirō, has the idea of dishonoring or destroying). Him shall God destroy. This is a much stronger expression than "suffer loss" above. Paul seems to have in mind unsaved people who may or may not be in the assembly, but who, in fact, are false believers. The prospect for such a one is a fearful one. The temple of God is holy, which temple ye are. Paul has built a syllogism here. In verse 16 he has said, "you are a shrine of God." Now he says, "the shrine of God is holy." Therefore, the conclusion is, "you are holy."

3. Folly in worldly wisdom. 3:18-23.

18. Here the apostle gives the formula for godly wisdom. Let no man deceive himself. Do not be led away from the truth and simplicity of the gospel by having too high an opinion of human wisdom. If any . . . seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool. Do not have too high an opinion of yourself. Learn to resign your own understanding to follow the instruction of God. This is the way to truth and everlasting wisdom. In order that he may be wise. One must learn to prefer the infallible revelation of God to his own shallow reasonings.

19-20. There can be no comparison between God's wisdom and man's. He taketh the wise in their own craftiness (cf. Job 5:13; Ps 94:11).

The conclusion to chapter three is very much like the conclusion to chapter 2. If you must boast, then by all means, do not boast within yourself or man, but in Christ.

21. For all things are yours. The man who belongs to Christ is a child of God, and his Father will do anything for him. Nothing of the Father's resources shall be begrudged to the believer (cf. Rom 8:32).

22. Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas. The absurdity of their dividing over allegiances to any of these men is that God gave them "all" to the Corinthians. Or the world, a rebuke to the legalists of Paul's day. Or life, or death, the former denoting things present, the latter, things to come. The believer in Christ "shall want no good thing" (Ps 84:11).

23. But it must be remembered that Ye are Christ's. It is only because of our relationship to Christ who is Lord of all, that all of these benefits accrue. Christ is God's. Christ is not subordinate to God, as the believer is to Christ; rather, He is the Anointed One of God. He is God in the flesh, "reconciling the world unto himself" (II Cor 5:19).

D. Defense of a Faithful Steward. 4:1-21.

Since all who ministered at Corinth were servants of God (cf. 3:5), and since the church belongs to God and was His temple (cf. 3:16-17), then the Corinthians were not justified in qualifying these ministers by some arbitrary standard. It is God whom these men serve, and He must be their Judge. Paul, Apollos, and Peter were simply faithful ministers of Christ, and along with the other apostles, were simply obeying God in extending the gospel around the world. In this chapter, Paul shows that the wranglings in Corinth were inappropriate, unfair, and intolerable.

I. Execution of faithfulness. 4:1-5.

4:1-3. The character of a faithful steward of God is that his ministry is centered in Christ and he is committed to Him. Ministers (Gr hypēretēs, "under rower," "a subordinate," or "servant," J. H. Thayer, Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, p. 641). This term is used only here in Paul's epistles. It differs from the word translated "ministers" in 3:5 in that it has the idea of an attendant or helper that assists a master. The apostle and minister of Christ is simply an underling, or an attendant of Christ. He takes orders and executes them. Stewards, (Gr oikonomos). Generally, a slave in the master's household who is entrusted with property. Both of these terms emphasize subordination to the master. However, in the latter, there is particular stress on accountability. He must render account for the manner in which he carries out his master's orders. That a man be found faithful. In verse 2, Paul moves from the plural to the singular ("stewards"—"a man"). This is characteristic of Paul. He moves from principle to particular: i.e., it is sought for in all stewards, that each one be found reliable and trustworthy. The subject of verse three is the criticism of a faithful steward. A very small thing. It amounts to very little that the apostle finds himself subject to the judicial examination of the Corinthians. Man's judgment (lit., "man's day"). This is an implied contrast with the day of the Lord (cf. vs. 5). I judge not mine own self. If Paul were to resort to introspective critical examination of himself, then he too would be guilty of usurping a responsibility which belongs only to God.

4. Verses 4 and 5 deal with the manner by which this faithful steward is certified. I know nothing by myself ("I know nothing against myself"). It was this sort of total commitment that gave Paul the authority to make such a statement as "be ye followers of me" (cf. I Cor 4:16; 11:1). Yet am I not hereby justified. Paul recognized that even he himself was not competent to adequately examine himself. Arthur Custance observes, "Man is totally irrational in his attitude and assessment of his own nature. He is a fallen creature with a heart that is desperately wicked above all else (Jer 17:9), and a mind that has to be renewed (Rom 12:2)" (A. C. Custance, Man in Adam and in Christ, p. 17).

5. The Lord alone is the Judge. Therefore the examination must await His time, that is, "when He comes" (cf. 1:7). Then He will shed light on the hidden things, which Paul defines as the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God (lit., "praise from God"). God who knows the mind and the hearts will apportion to each his due praise.

CHAPTER 4

LET a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.

2 Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful.

3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self.

4 For I know nothing by myself; yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God.

2. Example of faithfulness. 4:6-13.

Paul goes on in verse 6-13 to use himself, Apollos, and the other apostles as examples of faithfulness. In an effort to shame the Corinthians into recognizing the nature of their behavior, Paul first contrasts the efforts of Apollos and himself to accommodate the Corinthians (vs. 6) with their continued arrogance (vss. 7-8). Then in verses 9-13, he attacks their haughty spirit by citing the continued abuse of all the apostles.

6. I have in a figure transferred (Gr metaschēmatizō, exchanged the outward fashion). Paul adapted himself for the purpose that no one of you be puffed up for one against another. The expression, not to think . . . above that which is written, is a proverbial expression. The Apostle Paul is enjoining the Corinthians not to go beyond Scripture. In other words, learn to live by the Book, and stop following men.

7-8. Three pointed questions puncture the bubble of the Corinthian pride. For who maketh thee to differ . . . ? There is no room for pride and self-conceit, when all the distinction made among them is owing to God. What hast thou . . . received? Everything they had, including their gifts in the ministry were given them by God. To take personal pride in them was tantamount to insulting God. Irony exudes from the apostle in verses 7 and 8 in the words, Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us. These are three blessings promised in the coming messianic kingdom. The Corinthians were boasting each with his own party as if he had already arrived in that kingdom. And so Paul says, I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you. The Corinthians had already arrived while the apostle was still waiting (vs. 5)!

9. For I think. The apostle is about to level the arrogance of the Corinthians. With the consideration of my own suffering and the abuse of the apostles, since you are already reigning, God must have placed the apostles last. We have not come into the kingdom yet! To the world, we are a spectacle (Gr theatron, a theater). The apostles were like exhibits in a sideshow. Notice the verb form of this term in Hebrews 10:33.

10-13. The series of growing distinctions between Paul and the Corinthians must have been nothing short of embarrassing to his readers. We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise. The apostles were considered fools because they knew and preached nothing but Christ. On the other hand, the Corinthians used their Christianity as another philosophy to extend their reputation as wise and enlightened people. We are made . . . the offscouring of all things unto this day. Some find an illusion to an ancient Athenian custom of throwing certain worthless persons into the sea in case of plague or famine, saying "be our offscouring" in the belief that they would wash away the nation's guilt (Vincent, Word Studies in the New Testament, vol. II, p. 208).

3. Exhortation to faithfulness. 4:14-21.

Here Paul's tone changes. He lays aside the irony which characterizes so much of this chapter, and he entreats them as a loving father his wayward children.

14. I write not . . . to shame you. Paul realized that if all he does is expose his readers to open shame, he will only provoke them to obstinacy. And so, while wishing to expose their sin, he does not wish to exasperate them. As my beloved sons I warn. With great love and affection, the apostle admonishes his children in the faith. He was not interested in making them cringe before him, but in correcting them, and offering them a chance to respond and be restored.

15. Though ye have ten thousand instructors (Gr paidagōgos, slave guardians). The guardians to which Paul refers are not strictly instructors, or even tutors, but they were guardians that

6 And these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes; that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another.

7 For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now ye are full, now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

9 For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honourable, but we are despised.

11 Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwellingplace;

12 And labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it:

13 Being defamed, we intreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day.

14 I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved sons I warn you.

15 For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

were common in wealthy families to oversee the children. Yet have ye not many fathers. No matter how many guardians a man may have had to assist him through his early life, there is only one person who brought him into this life, and that is his father. If Paul was just a stranger, he could not have spoken so freely. But he was their father. Hence, he was probably the only one who could speak to them in this way. Not only that, he was under obligation to do so. I have begotten you ("I" is emphatic). Paul alone was responsible for the beginning of the Corinthian assembly. The term "begot" does not have in mind so much the conversion of these people, but the fact that it was Paul who laid the foundation (3:10). Through the gospel. Not through the power of Paul's personality, or through the sagacity of his wisdom, but the gospel of Christ and Him crucified (cf. 2:1-5).

16 Wherefore I beseech you, be ye followers of me.

17 For this cause have I sent unto you Ti-mō the-us, who is my beloved son, and faithful in the Lord, who shall bring you into remembrance of my ways which be in Christ, as I teach every where in every church.

18 Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you.

19 But I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power.

20 For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power.

21 What will ye? shall I come unto you with a rod, or in love, and in the spirit of meekness?

16-17. Be ye followers of me (cf. 11:1, lit., "continue to imitate me"). No doubt Paul has in mind those characteristics which are common to him and the other apostles, listed in verses 11-13. But his thinking goes further to include his doctrine and his teaching, as shown in the expression: my ways. If they have any questions as to how to follow the apostle, Timothy was on his way, and would clarify any problems they had.

18-20. The Apostle Paul assures them that he is coming to see them. He warns that when he comes he will know not the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power. Paul was well known for confronting trouble head-on (cf. Gal 2:11). The kingdom of God is not in word, but in power. We will see if the Millennium has come to Corinth!

21. Finally an alternative is extended to them. Shall I come unto you with a rod or in love? It is all up to them. The rod introduces the note of discipline which is Paul's primary concern in the next section.

III. DISCIPLINE FOR THE FELLOWSHIP. 5:1-6:20

In coming to this, Paul's second major division of the epistle, it is well to remember the vile surroundings out of which the Corinthian converts had come. They had been truly won to Christ. They had broken from their idolatries, and formed a local church. They had indeed come out of the corruption of Corinth to form a community of saints. But the question was now, could they get Corinth out of the assembly? It is imperative that they learn that the gospel does not tolerate compromise. There must be a clean break. This is the thrust of I Corinthians 5-6. "The Holy Spirit is grieved and thwarted in the assembly where sin is allowed a footing" (J. S. Baxter, Explore the Book, Vol. 5, p. 109). Here Paul confronts successively: the problem of lust (5:1-33), the problem of lawsuits (6:1-11), and the problem of license (6:12-20).

A. Relating to Lust. 5:1-13.

1. A common report. 5:1.

5:1. It is reported commonly. "It is a fact" that the report had come to Paul's hearing of fornication existing in the Corinthian assembly. The word fornication (Gr porneia) is used in a comprehensive way ("sexual sins"). Perhaps implying that the offense in different forms more or less prevailed in the Corinthian assembly. But one case in particular is so gross that it is not so much as named among the Gentiles. Cicero (Oratio Pro Cluent, 5, 6) refers to this sin as "scelus incredibile, et praeter unum in omni vita inauditum" ("incredible wickedness, such I never heard of in all my life besides"). The crime was that one should have his father's wife. One of the members of the church had taken his stepmother (cf. Lev 18:8) and had married her (the expression "to have a woman" always means "to marry," cf. Mt 14:4; 22:28; I Cor 7:2, 29). Hence, this man's crime is worse

CHAPTER 5

IT is reported commonly that there is fornication among you, and such fornication as is not so much as named among the Gentiles, that one should have his father's wife.

2 And ye are puffed up, and have not rather mourned, that he that hath done this deed might be taken away from among you.

3 For I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have judged already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath so done this deed.

4 In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ,

5 To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

6 Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?

7 Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us:

than adultery. It is incest. Otherwise, the apostle would not have spoken of it in such terms.

2. A critical rebuke. 5:2

2. And ye are puffed up, and have not rather mourned. The problem with the assembly was that they were laden with pride and lacking in discipline. Such an outrageous and detestable sin should have provoked the strongest response from the congregation. But because of their pride and carnality, they were immobilized when it came to dealing with a real problem in their midst.

3. A corrective remedy. 5:3-8.

3-5. "In verses 3-5 we have an interesting indication of the manner in which discipline was administered in the early church. The congregation would be called together, with an apostle presiding if available, and the person accused would be arraigned before them. After the evidence had been heard, and the accused had said what he had to say in defense of himself, the judgment of the congregation would be pronounced by the president. Paul, though absent in person, yet pictures himself present and presiding in spirit, and he leaves them in no doubt concerning the verdict which ought to be pronounced: the offense should be condemned and the offender excommunicated" (P. E. Hughes, "I Corinthians," The Biblical Expositor, Vol. 3, p. 267).

To deliver . . . unto Satan. Concerning this difficult and obscure passage, several observations must be made. (1) It involved excommunication from the church (vs. 2). (2) It involved the chastisement of the man (it was the body which was to be handed over). Paul elsewhere conceives affliction, disease, or loss as Satan's work (I Thess 2:18; II Cor 12:7, cf. I Tim 1:20). Destruction nowhere means annihilation. The reference seems to be to the destruction of the physical appetites which prompted this gross immorality. (3) Paul has the restoration of this man ultimately in view. That the spirit may be saved. This last purpose shows that the phrase "destruction of the flesh" cannot mean that the person could be brought to death. This is asserted for several reasons: (a) because nowhere in Scripture is Satan asserted as God's executioner, (b) because restoration would be impossible if the man were put to death. God does not want him killed, He wants him restored (cf. Mt 18:15; Gal 6:1; II Cor 2:1-11). The implications of Paul's instruction are given in verses 6-8.

6. A little leaven leaveneth the whole. No sin can be considered an isolated event. Just as with the sin of Achan (Josh 7:11), the sin had to be purged out or else it would contaminate the whole "lump" (on this see Rom 12:21). The stress is on the church as a singular unity.

7. Cleansing is essential. Purge out therefore the old leaven. Here the leaven does not signify the sinful man, per se, but evil of any kind in accordance with the more general statement of the leavening power of evil in verse 6. The background for this metaphor is Exodus 12:19 and 13:7. The larger scope of the apostle's imagery here is that he sees Christ as the fulfillment of the Old Testament Passover Feast of Unleavened Bread. The Passover depicted, typically, Christ's vicarious death on behalf of His own. That is, "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world" (Jn 1:29). The Feast of Unleavened Bread accompanied the Passover. It involved a period of seven days during which no leaven was to be found in the homes of the Israelites. This was typical of the holy life that was to accompany partaking of the paschal lamb. The expression, ye are unleavened denotes a positional truth. Paul is interested that their practice match up to their position. Christ our passover is

8 Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9 I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators:

10 Yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world.

11 But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat.

12 For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? do not ye judge them that are within?

13 But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person.

sacrificed for us. Since sin required the sacrifice of the Lamb of God, it is inconceivable that it would ever be tolerated in the assembly of believers.

8. Therefore let us keep the feast (Greek present subjunctive; “go on keeping”). By purging out malice and wickedness let us go on to celebrate holiness of living. Sincerity and truth are those qualities on which the believer is to feed.

It is not surprising that the apostle uses the Passover as an illustration here. I Corinthians was written just before the Passover (cf. I Cor. 16:8) and the celebration of the feast is on Paul’s mind. This is a good example of how God used the experiences of the biblical authors in the writing of Scripture.

4. A commanding regulation. 5:9-13.

9. I wrote unto you in an epistle. This is the “previous epistle” discussed in the introduction. This letter is now lost but we know that at least one subject discussed in this letter was that they were not to company with fornicators. The intent of the apostle in this epistle was misunderstood, and so he finds it necessary to clarify himself in verses 10 and 11.

10. Yet not altogether. Of course Paul does not intend to say that they are not to have any association with vile and sinful men. In order to do this, one would have to go out of the world. As long as the believer is “in” the world, it will be necessary to rub shoulders with sinners. A parallel idea is contained in the words of our Lord in John 17:15-18.

11. Not to keep company. The key to Paul’s thought is here. The term translated “to keep company” (Gr synanameignymai) is found only here and in II Thessalonians 3:14. It is a compound of three Greek terms, and means “to mingle together with.” It has the idea of close, habitual intercourse. If any man that is called a brother. Paul’s instruction relates to those who are in the assembly calling themselves brethren in Christ. If such a person is a fornicator, or covetous, etc., then this person is not to be included in fellowship. With such a one, no, not to eat.

12. Them . . . that are without. Those outside of the church (cf. Col 4:5; I Thess 4:12). The command of the apostle had reference only to those who were in the church, but it was not his prerogative to judge those outside of the church. The Corinthians should have understood this.

13. Them that are without God judgeth. The Greek present tense of this verb fits well with Paul’s thought in Romans 1:18, “For the wrath of God is being revealed (presently) from heaven against all ungodliness.” There is a vitally important truth to be observed here. It is true, as the Apostle John said, that “the whole world lieth in wickedness” (I Jn 5:19). But it will not do to simply curse the darkness. It is the task of the believer to proclaim the positive truth of the gospel. The saints are obligated to be faithful stewards; as for the world, God will take care of it.

Paul summarizes: Therefore put away . . . that wicked person. As for this person who is committing open sin, remove him from the assembly, and have no further fellowship with him.

B. Relating to Lawsuits. 6:1-11.

Paul has already introduced the subject of judging in the previous chapter. Accordingly, he has shown that the responsibility for judging sin lies with the assembly. Now he goes on to show that even in matters of civil dispute, the responsibility for settling such matters lies with the leadership of the local church. Paul develops this matter by first introducing the problem (vs. 1). Then in verses 2 and 3 he shows the absurdity of stooping to a pagan judge to adjudicate some matter between two brethren in Christ. Finally, in verses 4-11, he traces the biblical principles underlying his instructions.

I CORINTHIANS 6:1

CHAPTER 6

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know ye not that we shall judge angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?

4 If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.

7 Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?

8 Nay, ye do wrong, and defraud, and that your brethren.

9 Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, 10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

1. An inquiry. 6:1.

6:1. Dare any of you (this is very emphatic). "Is anyone so bold as to shock the Christian sense of propriety?" (Hodge, Commentary on the First Epistle to the Corinthians, p. 93). Go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints? The terms "unjust" and "saints" are generic, referring to all unbelievers as opposed to all believers. How incredible that the just should go before the unjust for justice!

2. An inference. 6:2-3.

2-3. Here the apostle argues a majori ad minus. That is, he cites a major premise in order to contrast and establish a minor premise. The first is that the saints shall judge the world. Certainly the Corinthians must have known this elementary truth (cf. Dan 7:22; Mt 19:28; Rev 2:26; 3:21; 20:4). Now, if this be the case, Paul goes on, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters? (lit., "on the lowest tribunals"). You who shall comprise the Supreme Court of the world, do you not feel qualified to sit on some tiny local court? But Paul goes on with another major premise. We shall judge angels (Isa 24:21; II Pet 2:4; Jude 6). The contrast now borders on the ridiculous. How much more things that pertain to this life (lit., "to say nothing of common life affairs"). Here is the minor premise.

3. An inconsistency. 6:4-11.

4. Things pertaining to this life (Gr biōtikos, common life affairs). Paul connects what is to follow with the above. Then is inferential. Judgments may mean "legal causes," or it may simply mean "trials." The former is more consistent with the normal usage of the term. Set them to judge who are least esteemed. In the original, this may either be taken as indicative or interrogative. If the latter, then Paul is being sarcastic. That is, if you are going to go to a civil court, you might just as well put your least qualified members as jurors. If it is a question, then it is emphatic, "Are you setting them to judge who are least esteemed in the church" (i.e., "the heathen")? This would render a statement of shock and surprise that they were doing such a thing. The latter seems more in keeping with the context.

5-6. I speak to your shame (i.e., "to move you to shame"). This suggests Paul's purpose in speaking as he does. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? This is a rather ironic question to be asking the Corinthians who boasted in their wisdom. Apparently this is the case, since in verse 6 Paul says brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers. The apostle is incensed for at least two reasons: (1) that they went to law; and (2) that they went to law before heathen judges. In verses 7-11, the apostle probes some of the underlying causes for this situation existing in Corinth.

7. They have a defect. There is utterly a fault among you. They were defective in that they would even consider taking a problem between each other before a heathen judge. Before doing this, the apostle says it would be better to take wrong (and) . . . be defrauded.

8. Instead of following the correct course when they were wronged, they were defrauding one another. The very opposite of what they should have done. It would be better to accept the wrong committed than to pursue it and inflict further injury on anyone else.

9-10. They are also deceived. Those who would accuse the Apostle Paul of bifurcating works and faith should take a closer look at these verses. The unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God. It would seem that there were some in the Corinthian assembly who have professed Christianity as a system of doctrine, but not as a rule of life. The apostle warns that this is a fatal mistake. Be not deceived. No one who can allow himself the indulgence of known sin in his life can be saved. This passage proves that "Paul and James are in basic agreement. Both affirm that genuine faith produces good works (cf. Eph 2:8-10), and that the absence of good works indicates the lack of faith (cf. James 2:14-26)." (S. L. Jackson, "I Corinthians," The Wycliffe Bible Commentary, p. 1238).

11. Then Paul concludes this section with a positive appeal. He assures them that they have been delivered. Such were some of you. Here Paul cites the fact that there were some in the assembly who were formerly characterized in the catalogue of sins listed in verse 10. But ye are washed . . . sanctified . . . justified. Logically, one would expect to find these words in inverse order. That is, they are first justified, then they are sanctified, then they experience daily cleansing. Paul placed them in this order for emphasis. Now you are washed, indeed you have been sanctified or set apart to do God's special service. Indeed, you stand before God declared righteous. In such an exalted position, it seems incredible that such people would find it necessary to go before an inferior human court to arbitrate their dispute.

C. Relating to License. 6:12-20.

Paul now goes on to distinguish between proper Christian liberty and the problem of unbridled license. Some were presuming that all physical passions and appetites were as lawful as eating and drinking, and were to be freely gratified. In the pagan society of Corinth, prostitution was accepted as a normal thing. It was not difficult for some of the Christians to justify themselves with the argument that such behavior only involved the body and not the soul (cf. Acts 15:20, where the prohibition of certain foods was also joined with the prohibition against fornication). The teaching regarding this important subject is given in verses 12-14, and the thrust of it is applied in verses 15-20.

1. The teaching. 6:12-14.

12 All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.

12. Paul's principles may be summarized in three words. Lawful . . . expedient . . . power. The first is the principle of liberty. When Paul says "all things," we cannot understand this in an absolute sense. Obviously, what God forbids can never be allowed. Rather, it seems to have in mind those things about which the Scriptures are non-explicit. These matters are left to the Christian's own judgment. The apostle is careful not to vitiate the important doctrine of Christian liberty by leading these people back under Judaistic legalism. Rather, his intent is to circumscribe its application through proper restrictions. These are expressed, first of all, in the principle of "expediency." Not everything is of benefit. Whether a law of prohibition exists or not, it is wrong to do something to ourselves or others simply because it is beneficial (cf. Rom 14:15-23; I Cor 8:7-13; 10:23-33). A second restriction is expressed in the words, I will not be brought under the power of any. This is the principle of control. Certain forms of indulgence become wrong when they bring the person into bondage. One of the character qualities of the believer is self-control (cf. Gal 5:22-23). The spiritual man of I Corinthians 2:15 is not in subjection to any appetite or habit.

13 Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats: but God shall destroy both it and them. Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord; and the Lord for the body.

14 And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power.

13-14. Meats for the belly. Nature demonstrates the law of mutual adaptation. This is illustrated by meat and the digestive system. God shall destroy both. The present bodily constitution is only temporary. Now, a mild adversative, better "but," the body is not for fornication. Contrary to the natural law of adaptation, the body is not designed for fornication, but for the Lord. The body is intended to be a member of Christ (vs. 15), and the dwelling place of His Holy Spirit (vs. 19).

Whereas God is to destroy the belly and meats, the ultimate purpose of the body is fulfilled in the resurrection. And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power. With this argument, Paul dismisses the notion that the sexual drives are the same as all of the other physical appetites. Where the latter are considered temporary, the former are permanent. The one touches matters of indifference, the other tampers with the very nature of the design for which we were created.

Paul's usage of the pronoun us, shows that his use of the term body goes beyond its normal usage to signify the whole man. Note also its connection with the second-person pronoun in verse 19, below. (On the destiny of the body, see also I Cor 15:15, 20 and 35-56; Phil 3:21; Rom 8:11; II Cor 4:14; and I Thess 4:14). Paul's argument runs something like this. It was an uncommon honor that God should raise up the body of Jesus Christ. It will be an undue honor that our bodies will also be raised by His own power. Therefore, let us not abuse those bodies through fleshly lusts.

2. The thrust. 6:15-20.

15-16. The real thrust of Paul's concern is now taken into account. In the first place, your bodies are the members of Christ. The body is not only for the Lord (vs. 13), but they belong to Him by virtue of His redemptive work, and because they are united with Him. This union pertains not only to the soul, but also to the body (cf. I Cor 12:12-27; Rom 8:6-11; Eph 2:6-7; 5:30). It is this fact, above all else, that makes fornication such a wicked and malicious sin. It takes what belongs to Christ and makes them the members of a harlot. To this Paul recoils with God forbid. He then goes on to enlarge on this point to say that he which is joined to a harlot is one body. The verb joined (Gr kollaō) is used in Genesis 2:24 (Gr proskallaō) of the relationship of husband and wife. It is also used of man's relationship to God (Deut 10:20; 11:22; Jer 13:11). When fornication is committed, the parties involved share a common life. In the same sense, one cannot serve God and mammon, or share in the life of Christ and in the life of Belial. It is inconceivable that one can be simultaneously joined to Christ and to the body of a harlot. On the phrase shall be one flesh, compare Ephesians 2:15.

17. But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit. As if Paul's mundane analogies were not enough, he lays them aside to express, in eleven short words, a concept that "suggests to us the highest possible unity between the believer and the Lord. Many other forms are used to express this identification, but none approach this in the conception of inseparable oneness. The sheep may wander from the shepherd, the branch may be cut off from the vine, the member may be severed from the body, the child alienated from the father, and even the wife from the husband, but when two spirits blend in one, what shall part them? No outward connection of unity, even of wedlock, is so emphatically expressive of the perfect merging of two lives in one" (A. T. Pierson, Knowing the Scriptures, p. 108). This imposes the highest conceivable obligation to refrain from fornication.

18. Flee ("Make it your habit to flee"). Compare Joseph's response (Gen 39:1-12). Without the body. The body is not the instrument, but the subject. But when man commits fornication, then he sinneth against his own body. Here the body becomes the instrument of the sin.

19. Your body is a temple of the Holy Ghost. Not only is the local church a temple of the Holy Spirit (cf. I Cor 3:16), but the individual believer's body itself also is a temple of the Holy Spirit, which ye have of God. Notice, the thought here is indicative, not imperative. Paul is not telling them that they can become more spiritual by receiving the Holy Spirit. The fact is, 15 Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.

16 What? know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for two, saith he, shall be one flesh.

17 But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit.

18 Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.

19 What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?

20 For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.

they already received the Holy Spirit. He dwells within them. This fact, instead, introduces the imperative of verse 20.

20. The blessed fact that our body is the temple of the Holy Spirit has two sides. One, that He is ours, the other, that we are His. For ye are bought with a price (lit., "were bought"). The believer was purchased on Golgotha's hill. The price paid was the blood of God's only Son (Acts 20:28). While it is true that this is applicable to all men, even those who deny the Lord (II Pet 2:1), it has a very unique and special significance for the believer (cf. I Pet 2:9; I Tim 4:10). Paul concludes with the imperative therefore, glorify God in your body. In other words, use your bodies in order that other men may see that you belong to God.

IV. DOCTRINE FOR THE FELLOWSHIP. 7:1-15-58.

A. Doctrine of Christian Marriage. 7:1-40.

Up until now, the main thrust of the epistle has been on reproof and correction. Paul now turns his attention to matters of instruction. The Corinthians had written to Paul concerning several matters that perplexed them. Paul deals with each of these in order. The first concerns Christian marriage. It is not surprising, in light of the preceding, that there were evident problems in this area. Paul's advice may be broken into four broad categories: (1) concerning the precept of marriage (vss. 1-7); (2) concerning the permanence of marriage (vss. 8-16); (3) concerning the place of marriage (vss. 17-24); (4) concerning the priorities of marriage (vss. 25-40).

1. Concerning the precept of marriage. 7:1-7.

a. A prevention of sin through the marriage relationship. 7:1-2.

7:1-2. Now concerning. (Gr peri de, see also 7:25; 8:1; 12:1; 16:1, 12). This recurring formula indicates that Paul is dealing in turn with the points the Corinthians had raised in their letter. It is good for a man not to touch a woman. The manner in which the apostle introduces this subject suggests that there was a reactionary element in the church to the libertines dealt with in chapter 6. It is likely that they were recommending celibacy as desirable if not obligatory on all believers. Paul says, such a practice is good ("expedient" or "profitable," cf. Mt 17:4; I Cor 9:15). That the apostle does not intend to teach that marriage is morally wrong as compared with celibacy is clear from verses 2, 7, 9, and 26 (see also Gen 2:18; II Cor 11:2; Rom 7:4; Eph 5:28-33; I Tim 4:3; Heb 13:4). Nevertheless. Here and throughout this passage, Paul demonstrates balance. On the one hand, there is a principle established to be applied in extenuating circumstances (such as those in which the apostle finds himself). But, on the other hand, there is the more general rule to be applied to the majority of cases. To avoid fornication. Paul overrides his principle of expedience (vs. 1) with the principle of necessity. Because of the prevalence of immorality in Corinth, Paul's advice to these believers is that every man is to have his own wife, and every wife her own husband.

b. A pledge of persons in the marriage relationship. 7:3-4.

3-4. Persons are to, first, render . . . due benevolence (lit., "fulfill (their) duty"). Paul clarifies what he means by this in the next verse when he says, The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband: and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife. Partners in a marriage no longer have the right to autonomous existence (cf. vss. 32-33). Thus, it is sin to sexually reject one's partner!

CHAPTER 7

NOW concerning the things whereof ye wrote unto me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman.

2 Nevertheless, to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.

3 Let the husband render unto the wife due benevolence: and likewise also the wife unto the husband.

4 The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband: and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife.

5 Defraud ye not one the other, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.

6 But I speak this by permission, and not of commandment.

7 For I would that all men were even as I myself. But every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.

8 I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, It is good for them if they abide even as I.

9 But if they cannot contain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn.

10 And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband:

11 But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife.

12 But to the rest speak I, not the Lord: If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away.

13 And the woman which hath an husband that believeth not, and if he be

c. A parenthesis in the marriage relationship. 7:5-7.

5. Defraud ye not one the other (“stop depriving one another”). The biblical precept of marriage implies that conjugal rights will be regularly exercised. The only exception to this rule will be for a time. And then only for fasting and prayer. Again the apostle’s advice is practical in nature. It is given in order that Satan tempt you not.

6-7. I speak this by permission . . . not of commandment. The apostle does not take sides with the extreme Jewish view that held that it was a sin if a man reached twenty years of age without being married. Instead, he regards the matter as optional. Even as I myself. Content, not necessarily single. As to Paul’s marital status, he was probably a widower (cf. Vincent, Word Studies in the New Testament, Vol. 2, p. 217). But that is not the point here. The point is that every man hath his proper gift of God (cf. vss. 17, 20, 24, and 27). Both marriage and celibacy are considered as gifts of the Holy Spirit.

2. Concerning the permanence of marriage. 7:8-16.

Here the apostle develops guidelines for three categories of individuals: the unmarried and widows (vss. 8-9), the married believers (vss. 10-11), and mixed marriages (vss. 12-16).

a. For the unmarried and widows. 7:8-9.

8-9. I say therefore to the unmarried and widows. The apostle is not being redundant when he singles out widows for special mention along with the unmarried. No doubt they would have special cause to consider their situation a sad one, and therefore desire to have it changed. Abide even as I. The personal reference here is not identical with that given in verse 7. The point of verse 7 has to do with being content with the gift God gives you. This verse merely points to the matter of remaining unmarried. It is better to marry than to burn. This expression is not to be taken to indicate that the apostle conceives of marriage in mere physical, brute terms. Rather, it is to be taken in light of the preceding. That is, if a person’s gift is to be married, then let him not try to exercise a gift he does not possess by remaining unmarried.

b. For the married believers. 7:10-11.

10-11. And unto the married I command. Notice Paul’s advice to the unmarried is given as optional; his advice to the married is given as a command. In case his readers miss this point, he reinforces it with the words, not I, but the Lord. No doubt, the apostle has in mind explicit instruction of our Lord recorded in Matthew 5:32; 19:3-9; Mark 10:2-12; Luke 16:18. Let not the wife depart. Paul’s command here is in opposition to Greek and Roman law which permitted a woman to divorce her husband. The command is unequivocal; let her not depart. And if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled. While Paul disapproves of separation on any grounds, he recognizes that there will be cases of unapproved separation. In these cases, they are to “remain unmarried.” The Greek present tense emphasizes a permanent state. The only other option is reconciliation. And let not the husband put away his wife. This is tantamount to saying, “and the same thing goes for husbands.”

c. For the mixed marriages. 7:12-16.

12-13. Now the apostle turns his attention to the special case of mixed marriages. But to the rest speak I, not the Lord. This is not to be taken as marking a contrast between inspired Scripture and what Paul is about to say. On the contrary, while on the earth, the Lord explicitly gave instructions about marriage and divorce. However, He did not make any special reference to the pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him.

14 For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy.

15 But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us to peace.

16 For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?

17 But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk. And so ordain I in all churches.

18 Is any man called being circumcised? let him not become uncircumcised. Is any called in uncircumcision? let him not be circumcised.

19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God.

case of a mixed marriage. Thus, it is incumbent on the Apostle Paul, under inspiration of the Holy Spirit, to give additional instructions regarding this kind of situation. The instruction is essentially the same. If a Christian person is married to an unbelieving spouse, and the unbeliever is pleased to dwell with the believer, then divorce or separation is prohibited. Paul's advice here is intended to answer any of his Jewish converts who might be inclined to make an unwarranted application of the situation recorded in Ezra 10:3.

14. In the event that his readers should have any misgivings, the apostle shows why his advice is sound. The unbelieving . . . is sanctified. And the children are holy. This is not to indicate that the children or the spouse of a believer are automatically born into the family of God. The words "holy" and "unclean" in this text are equivalent to "sacred" and "profane." Again, the apostle's thought has Old Testament antecedents (cf. Hag 2:11-13). The unbeliever and the children are considered holy in a positional sense. Hence, the principle of the communication of uncleanness given in the Old Testament does not apply here (cf. also Rom 11-16). Together with the believer, they share in God's blessing, and are more likely to become converted by the presence and influence of the saved partner.

15. But if the unbelieving depart (Gr chōrizō, in the middle voice, almost a technical term for divorce, Moulton & Milligan, The Vocabulary of the Greek New Testament, pp. 695-696). In the foregoing instruction, the apostle presumes that the unbeliever is content to remain with the believer. But what of the situation where the unbeliever takes the initiative in dissolving the marriage? In such a case, Paul's advice is that the believer is not under bondage. There is no conflict here between Paul's advice and that of our Lord in Matthew 5:32. The point is that the divine standard cannot be imposed upon the unregenerate. There is nothing the believer can do but submit to the divorce. The overriding principle is that God hath called us to peace. The mild adversative clues us as to Paul's meaning in the use of this principle. He does not herein justify the divorce, even though the believing partner is free. Rather, there should be every effort on the part of the believer to avoid the separation if possible. This understanding fits well with the previous context, and also helps us understand the intent of the next verse.

16. For what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? The reason why every means should be taken to induce the unbeliever to fulfill his marriage covenant is that the unbeliever might be saved. To give up too soon on an unsaved partner may mean that he will never come to Christ.

3. Concerning the place of marriage. 7:17-24.

Marriage, like everything else, is determined by the selection of God (vss. 17-20), and directed to the service of God (vss. 21-24).

a. The selection of God. 7:17-20).

17-20. But as God has distributed to every man . . . so let him walk. The apostle now builds on the principle stated in verse 7, that is, every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that. There is no special reason why a believer should change his occupation or position in life subsequent to being saved. When applied to marriage, this simply means that there is no reason why a believer should put away his unbelieving spouse. Paul illustrates his point with the rite of circumcision. There is no need for a Gentile convert to be circumcised. On the other hand, there is no obligation incumbent upon a Jewish convert to be uncircumcised. In the New Testament, this rite had no direct reference on the life of faith (cf. Rom 2:25, 29; Gal 5:6). Therefore, even though it means living with an unbeliever, Paul is able to say, Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called.

b. The service for God. 7:21-24.

21 Art thou called being a servant? care not for it: but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant.

23 Ye are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men.

24 Brethren, let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide with God.

21-24. Here, the apostle employs another illustration to show that, properly understood, marriage should be viewed as directed to the service of God. For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant. As to one's social status at salvation, it matters little whether he was a slave or free. In reality, he has been set free from the bond of sin to serve the living and true God. Thus, the horizontal relationships have little significance when compared to the vertical. Again, when applied to the question of marriage, there is no reason why the believer cannot remain faithful to his obligation to God, whether he be single, widowed, married in the Lord, or married to an unbeliever. The overriding principle is again repeated Let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide with God. The prescription for peace and holiness is to remain in communion with God.

4. Concerning the priorities of marriage. 7:25-40.

Here the problem centers around how to advise young people contemplating marriage, and how to instruct the parents of young people who are of marriageable age. Without being dogmatic, the apostle begins the subject by giving his personal judgment (vss. 25, 26). Then he reminds them of the prospect of tribulation (vss. 27, 28), the passing away of worldly fashions (vss. 29-31), and the problem of divided allegiance (vss. 32-35). Then he suggests to parents a pattern for advising virgin daughters (vss. 36-38). And finally (vss. 39, 40), Paul gives his personal preference.

25 Now concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one that hath obtained mercy of the Lord to be faithful.

26 I suppose therefore that this is good for the present distress, I say, that it is good for a man so to be.

25-26. Now concerning (Gr peri de). Paul is now about to deal with another subject about which the Corinthians had written him (cf. 7:1). I have no commandment of the Lord. In our Lord's instruction regarding marriage and divorce recorded in the Gospels, there is no record of His speaking directly to this issue. And so, the apostle says, yet I give my judgment. This again is not to say his advice is less inspired than something he may or may not quote from our Lord. Rather, Paul gives advice under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit in order to fulfill this obligation to the Lord to be faithful.

It is good for a man so to be. That is, it is good for a man to remain single. In Paul's judgment, celibacy is to be preferred. Why? His answer is for the present distress. This expression is probably best understood in light of I Corinthians 15:30-31; and II Corinthians 11:21-33. The Apostle Paul had already experienced intense persecution, and no doubt anticipated it would get worse. History records all too well that he was right.

b. The prospect of tribulation. 7:27-28.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you.

27-28. Because of this prospect of tribulation, Paul's advice is Art thou bound unto a wife? Seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? Seek not a wife. Although what Paul has said can never justify the dissolution of a marriage, hopefully it will discourage some from getting married. Notice that "bound" refers to marriage and "loosed" to divorce. This verse warns the divorced not to remarry, but also states that it is not a sin to do so. If married, Paul says, thou hast not sinned. There is nothing morally wrong with getting married. Nevertheless, such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you. The term trouble (Gr thlipsis) indicates that Paul understands this trouble will not come from within, as though marriage would necessarily be accompanied by turmoil and distress; rather, this trouble would come from without. This fits well with his emphasis on the persecution and trouble confronting the church at that time.

c. The passing away of worldly fashions. 7:29-31.

29 But this I say, brethren, the time is short: it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none;

30 And they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not;

31 And they that use this world, as not abusing it: for the fashion of this world passeth away.

29-31. The essence of all worldly relationships constitutes an additional reason why one should not marry. Brethren, the time is short: it remaineth (or, "brethren, the time henceforth is short"). Life, at best, is exceedingly brief. Furthermore, the relationships contracted during this life are only transient. Indeed, it will be all too soon for all of us that marrying and weeping and rejoicing and buying (and every other earthly activity) will be all over and it will be as though they never occurred. Paul is not asking his readers to give up anything of eternal value, only temporal things: the fashion of this world (which) passeth away.

d. The problem of divided allegiance. 7:32-35.

32 But I would have you without carefulness. He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord:

33 But he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.

34 There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is comely, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction.

32-35. In the light of the above, Paul notes that a person who is married has a problem with divided allegiance. As for the men, the unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, but the married man careth for the things that are of the world. It is only natural for the married man to be concerned about the welfare of his wife and family. But as noted above, these are only of passing value. The same problem also exists for the woman. If the woman is a virgin, she is unencumbered by worldly necessities, and her only concern is for the things of the Lord. On the other hand, she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband. One must take care not to misconstrue the force of Paul's argument here. It is not that he views the married life as less spiritual than the celibate life, but that the celibate life is less distracted by worldly cares. Hence, the single man or woman enjoying greater freedom, also enjoys greater potential in terms of service. And so Paul is able to say, and this I speak for your own profit. It is not that the apostle is trying to ensnare them, nor much less that he is trying to mislead them. Nor is he impugning a divine ordinance. Rather, he is concerned about the distress which will surely accompany them should they be married, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction. The focal point of Paul's advice is the promotion of faithful, undistracted devotion to the Lord.

36 But if any man think that he becometh himself uncomely toward his virgin, if she pass the flower of her age, and need so require, let him do what he will, he sinneth not: let them marry.

37 Nevertheless he that standeth stedfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath power over his own will, and hath so decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin, doeth well.

38 So then he that giveth her in marriage doeth well; but he that giveth her not in marriage doeth better.

36-38. If what Paul says is correct, then how does a parent advise his single daughter? It will help in understanding this passage to remember the control which the father had over the marriage of his daughter in ancient times. The apostle's advice is first to the man who thinks he becometh himself uncomely toward his virgin. In other words, the father who thinks that he is being unreasonable. In this case, his daughter is past the flower of her age. This is a euphemism for "full sexual maturity." And need so require. There seems to be some reason why marriage is necessary. Perhaps the daughter's happiness is involved. Paul does not elaborate. His advice is let him do what he will, he sinneth not: let them marry. In other words, in spite of Paul's foregoing advice, he does not intend to discourage marriage, especially in situations where it becomes necessary for the happiness of the individuals involved. Then he deals with the situation where there is no necessity, and the father hath so decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin. Again, there is no hard, fast rule. And so Paul is able to say to this man, he doeth well. But all things being equal, the one who giveth her not in marriage doeth better. While there is no sin in marriage and no superior virtue in celibacy, in light of the "present distress," Paul still maintains that the single life is better.

39 The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord.

40 But she is happier if she so abide, after my judgment: and I think also that I have the Spirit of God.

f. The preference of Paul. 7:39-40.

39-40. To summarize, marriage is for life, broken only by death. In that event, a woman is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord. But in Paul's personal judgment, she is happier if she so abide. The expression I think also that I have the Spirit of God, has been taken to suggest that Paul did not know for sure if he were writing under inspiration. This is not the case at all. The verb think (Gr dokeō) does not suggest doubt in any way (cf. Gal 2:6; I Cor 12:22). The phrase is better translated, "and I consider also that I have the Spirit of God."

B. Doctrine of Christian Liberty. 8:1-11:1.

The next matter concerning which the Corinthian believers had solicited Paul's advice had to do with the question of meats sacrificed to idols. The question was a serious one for these believers. There were many pagan temple rituals, state occasions, and festivals of various kinds which obligated them to participate. Generally, a part of an animal was burned at the sacrifice, and the rest was prepared for the feast that followed. Sometimes portions were taken home and eaten there. Meat unused at such feasts also found its way into the marketplace and the butcher shops. It had been determined earlier at the Council at Jerusalem that the Gentile converts should "abstain from meat offered to idols" (cf. Acts 15:29). Although the apostle does not allude to this decision in this text, it is very likely that this constituted a legal precedence for the Jewish converts in the assembly. Paul's approach is to state the principle of liberty (8:1-13), then to cite himself as a picture of Christian liberty (9:1-27), and finally, to demonstrate to the Corinthians how they should put into practice their Christian liberty (10:1-11:1).

1. The principle of liberty. 8:1-13.

8:1. We know that we all have knowledge. To paraphrase this: "We both know that you consider yourself to be thoroughly informed about this matter." Apparently in their question to Paul, they implied that they felt adequate to deal with the problem. Perhaps some in the assembly were disputing their approach. One should recall that it was this arrogance in regard to their knowledge that constituted one of their major problems. But knowledge alone will not suffice when dealing with Christian liberty. Paul is about to introduce a much higher principle. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth. Mere theoretical or speculative knowledge acquired in a vacuum has the effect of inflating a person and rendering him vain and conceited. On the other hand, love (Gr agapē) edifies. That is, it does not terminate upon itself as knowledge does, but goes beyond to seek the well-being and benevolence of others. And it is this incomparably higher principle which the apostle applies to this case.

2. If any man think that he knoweth any thing. If knowledge is simply a cognitive process, then Paul says, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. If, in a person's life, he simply acquires knowledge components, he is a seriously defective person.

3. In true knowledge, the intellect and the emotions go hand in hand. If any man love God, the same is known of him. The true knowledge of God does not come about through the acquisition of cognitive data concerning Him. It comes through loving Him.

4-8. As concerning therefore. Paul returns now to the main subject, which is eating of those things which are offered in sacrifice unto idols. The first thing Paul establishes is that an idol is nothing. Any thinking person knows that since there is none other God but one, if a person offers a sacrifice to an idol, he is, in fact, sacrificing to a nonentity. For, while we know that

NOW as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.

2 And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the same is known of him.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one.

5 For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many.)

6 But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.

7 Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge: for some with conscience of the idol unto this hour eat it as a thing offered unto an idol; and their conscience being weak is defiled.

8 But meat commendeth us not to God: for neither, if we eat, are we the better; neither, if we eat not, are we the worse.

9 But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumblingblock to them that are weak.

10 For if any man see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple, shall not the conscience of him which is weak be emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols:

11 And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?

12 But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ.

13 Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.

in the pagan world there are those that are called gods, who are Christians know there is but one God, the Father . . . and one Lord Jesus Christ. And, of course, all things owe their existence to Him. Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge. As irrational as it may seem, there are some who are still under the apprehension that heathen gods are real beings. For such a person to eat meat sacrificed to idols, their conscience being weak is defiled.

9-10. Since we know that our relationship with God is not necessarily affected by whether or not we eat meat, then, it ought not to be offensive to the stronger Christian to limit himself for the sake of the weaker. Here is where the principle of love is most conspicuously applied. Take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours becomes a stumbling block to them that are weak. The term liberty (Gr exousia) may be translated, "authority" or "lawful right." The availability of an option does not necessitate its exercise, especially when love and concern for someone else becomes a factor. The most serious danger to an unbridled latitudinarian approach to Christian liberty is the possibility of causing sin in the weaker brother. For if any man see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple. If the stronger brother publicly exercises his right to eat meat sacrificed to idols, he, in effect, encourages him which is weak . . . to eat those things which are offered. But the problem in the latter case is that he has violated his conscience, and has sinned. The expression be emboldened is literally, "be edified." The sense is ironic; edification should build up to righteousness. Here, one is edified or built up to sin.

11-12. And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish (lit., "for because of your knowledge, the weak one is destroyed"). Is Paul implying that this weak brother could lose his salvation? No. This is tantamount to what he says in Romans 14:23, "he that doubteth is damned if he eat." In other words, he is to be brought under the sure judgment of God for his sin. In the most extreme application of this principle, it would involve sinning unto death (cf. I Cor 5:5; 11:30; I Jn 5:16-17). For whom Christ died? The force of this expression here is practical, not soteriological. It is true that Christ died to secure this man's salvation, but speaking more to the point, He did so to put away his sin. Hence, if you, being a "stronger brother" should entice another brother to sin, then in effect, Ye sin against Christ. This truth is derived from two facts. First, and most immediate, the stronger brother has enticed a weaker brother to sin against the Saviour who died for him. Secondly, Jesus said in Matthew 25:40, "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

13. Wherefore directs us to the conclusion of the matter. It is not knowledge which forms the basis of the conclusion, but love. Hence, Paul says, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth. The latter half of this phrase is intended for emphasis. The apostle does not qualify this. He does not say he will refrain in public and exercise his liberty in private. In order to avoid offending a brother, he would permanently exclude the eating of meat from his diet. An additional comment that needs to be made on this subject has been very succinctly stated by S. L. Johnson. "In the first place the passage does not refer to legalists desirous of imposing their narrow-minded scruples on others. Such are not weak brethren, but willful brethren desirous of glorying in the subjection of others to their tenets (cf. Gal 6:11-13). This is tyranny, and Christianity must always be on guard against this. In the second place, it should be noted in this verse that the decision to follow the path of love rests with Paul, not with the weak. The strong are to yield to love's appeal voluntarily, not because the weak demand it, legalists always demand subjection to their laws." (Wycliffe Bible Commentary, p. 1242).

2. The picture of liberty. 9:1-27.

Having established the principle of Christian liberty, Paul is concerned that his readers understand that this principle does not just apply to meat sacrificed to idols. Rather, it cuts across every aspect of the Christian's life. The apostle appeals to his own experience to show how multifaceted the problem is. He does this by defending his right to exercise Christian liberty (vss. 1-14), then by citing his own department in the exercise of his ministry (vss. 15-22), and finally by expressing his desire to run the race well, to keep his eyes on target, and to win the prize (vss. 23-27).

9:1-2. The seal of Paul's authority is the very existence of the Corinthian church. Whenever he speaks, he can do so with authority because of his relationship to the Corinthian assembly. Am I not an apostle? Am I not free? (In the original, these questions appear in reverse order.) The first question has to do with his freedom and liberty in Christ. He says, in effect, "am I not just as free as any other believer to regulate my conduct according to my own convictions? Yet more, I am an apostle as well." Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? This follows to substantiate his claim to apostleship (cf. Acts 1:21-22; 9:3-9, 17). Are not ye my work in the Lord? Again if Paul is an apostle, then one would expect to see evidence of his ministry. The Corinthian assembly itself was that evidence. Hence, whether anyone else considered Paul an apostle, there was certainly no ground for doubt among the Corinthians. Conversion of men is a divine work performed through the agency of God's ministers. The fact that people were saved at Corinth and formed an assembly of believers, validates Paul's commission.

3-5. Mine answer to them that do examine me is this. As for those who are questioning Paul's authority, he answers, Have we not the power to eat and drink? Power here has the force of "right," or "authority" (and so throughout this context). To lead about a sister, that is, a sister in Christ; a wife, in other words. Paul had the authority to take a wife, and bring her on his journeys with him as other apostles. The inclusion of the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas shows the fallacy of those who promote celibacy among the clergy by citing the example of the apostles (cf. Mt 8:14).

6. Or I only and Barnabas, have we not power to forbear working? To paraphrase, "Are Barnabas and I the only exceptions to the rule that ministers should be supported by their respective churches?" At the beginning of his ministry in Corinth, the apostle supported himself. Then, when financial aid did come, it did not come from the Corinthian assembly. This issue was no doubt an embarrassment to the Corinthians, and appears to have been an annoyance to the apostle.

7. That Paul has the right to expect remuneration for his labors is supported by natural law. Whoever heard of a soldier who went to war at any time at his own charges? The same is true of the owner of a vineyard, or a flock of sheep. They have the right to expect to be supported by the vocation to which they devote themselves.

8-9. What Paul says is further supported by the Mosaic law. Say I these things as a man? Or saith not the law the same also? Is this simply a secular principle, or can we expect to find biblical precedence? For introduces Paul's quotation of Deuteronomy 25:4. Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Even the ox has the right to expect to be fed for his labors. Doth God take care for oxen? This question

AM I not an apostle? am I not free?
have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?
are not ye my work in the Lord?

2 If I be not an apostle unto others, yet doubtless I am to you: for the seal of mine apostleship are ye in the Lord.

3 Mine answer to them that do examine me is this,

4 Have we not power to eat and to drink?

5 Have we not power to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and C  phas?

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?

7 Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 Say I these things as a man? or saith not the law the same also?

9 For it is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen?

10 Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.

11 If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12 If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?

14 Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

15 But I have used none of these things: neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: for it were better for me to die, than that any man should make my glorying void.

16 For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? Verily that, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without is not to be understood as irony, nor as a contemptuous question. Rather, the implied answer to the question is "yes." God cares for His entire creation (cf. Job 38:41; Ps 147:9; Mt 6:26; Lk 12:24).

10. For our sakes, no doubt, this is written. Certainly if this principle should apply to the brute beast, much more should it apply to mankind in general. That he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope. That is, of being rewarded. It is only natural and right, but more than that, it is scriptural that one should expect profit from his labors.

11-12. Spiritual things . . . we shall reap your carnal things. The contrast here is not of a moral sense, but a qualitative sense. Paul, as their minister and teacher, imparted to them spiritual things. Was it any great thing if he should expect remuneration to sustain the body? The former connoted things of infinite value, the latter, only of temporal value. Paul is not through with this argument yet, but he pauses here to interject a reminder, Nevertheless we have not used this power. In order not to hinder the gospel of Christ, the Apostle Paul continues to suffer all things. Paul is not justifying something he did, but only something that he has the right to do—a right which he did not exercise. He continues.

13. Not only is Paul's position supported by natural law, and by Scripture, but it is also supported by the temple law. They which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar. The point here is that with every sacrifice made at the altar, the priest would receive a portion. This was an institution ordained by God Himself in the Old Testament.

14. Even so, Paul concludes, hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel. The ministers of the gospel in the New Testament have no less holy a vocation than the priests of the Old Testament. So Paul establishes beyond question that he has the authority to receive financial support from the Corinthian assembly. But the bottom line of this entire discussion is not given until the next verse.

15. But I have used none of these things. "I never exercised that right," And the apostle is quick to add that he is not mentioning these things now in order to receive a remuneration belatedly. He would rather die than that any man should make my glorying void, or "that any man should pay me now for my labors in Corinth." The reason for this is simply because this policy of self-denial enabled the apostle to face his enemies squarely. He could never be accused of self-interest, nor could his integrity ever be questioned.

16. For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of. Paul is ironically answering now the questions he asked to begin with. "Am I not free, am I not an apostle?" The implied answer to the first is "no"; as for the second, "yes, but that is no cause for glorying." For necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!

17. As proof of the fact that Paul had no grounds for boasting, he adds, For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward. If it was optional for him to preach the gospel, then he would deserve remuneration. But if against my will, a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me. By this, the apostle is not implying that he was an unwilling servant of the Lord (cf. Rom 1:5; 11:13; 15:15-16; I Cor 15:9; Gal 1:15-16; Eph 3:8). He is simply drawing a distinction between what was optional for him, and what was obligatory upon him. Paul was given a stewardship to preach. That was enough (cf. 4:1-2; Lk 17:10). A steward received no pay. He was merely a slave doing his assigned task faithfully.

18. What is my reward then? The answer to this question is twofold. That . . . I may make the gospel of Christ without charge. And secondly, that I abuse not my power in the charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel.

I CORINTHIANS 9:19

19 For though I be free from all men, yet have I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more.

20 And unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;

21 To them that are without law, as without law, (being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.

22 To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some.

23 And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.

gospel. The former discharges his obligation to God. The latter discharges his obligation to man. In the context, it is important to note that Paul is not laying this down as a general principle for all ministers of the gospel to follow. The point is that it was a voluntary necessity. He had the authority to do many things, yet, he did not abuse (Gr katachraomai, "use to the full") that authority. The historical, social, and cultural context were the criteria by which Paul made this determination, as it is shown by what follows.

19. I be free from all men. When understood in the context of his Christian liberty, Paul was indeed free. But when understood in the light of his Christian responsibility, yet have I made myself servant unto all. With all the freedom in the world open to him, why did the apostle restrict himself so severely? The answer is that I might gain the more. His foremost interest was to preach the gospel and win men to Jesus Christ. Whatever it took in terms of personal freedom, he was prepared to pay the price. It is only fair to point out here that the apostle is not teaching that the end justifies the means. Or that compromise is in order. Certainly if there was anyone who was prepared to stand rigidly upon matters of principle, it was the Apostle Paul (cf. Gal 2:5). But as for matters of indifference, they are luxuries, and therefore, dispensable.

20-22. Unto the Jews I became as a Jew. How far Paul was willing to go in this regard is recorded in Acts 21:18-27. Again, he did not accommodate himself to sin, or to error, but to social custom. Likewise, To them that are without law, as without law. He goes on to explain that he does not intend to say that he was antinomian. He was certainly under the law of Christ. What he has in mind are the Gentiles. And the extent to which he is willing to go to win the Gentiles is clearly reflected in this entire chapter. He summarizes his guiding principle in the words, I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. "I am willing to concede Christian liberties at all points if in the process, the gospel is preached, and the lost are won to Christ." This implies a willingness to do more, not less than the law required. It certainly does not condone sinful activity and compromise in order to "win" some.

Paul's paramount interest is expressed in the closing verses of this chapter.

23. And this I do (better manuscripts have "I do all things"), viz. all the things mentioned above, I do for the gospel's sake. His ultimate criterion is not the prejudices of men, but the gospel. Notice, this is so much more than simply preaching the gospel. It is living the gospel.

24. Paul draws upon a scene very familiar to his Corinthian readers in order to drive home his point. The Isthmian games were an athletic event known to all of his readers, held on alternate summers within the vicinity of Corinth. It was an event not to be missed by anyone of importance in all parts of Greece. As a national institution, it was as familiar to his readers as football is in Texas. And so he says, Know ye not. He takes for granted that his readers understand the rules of the game. The most important rule is that while all participants run, only one receiveth the prize. And this is Paul's desire for his readers. So run, that ye may obtain. There was no legal compulsion which demanded that the runners strive to attain the crown. Why then do they run? They run because they're athletes. And that is what they are there for. To achieve their final objective, it took great sacrifice on the part of all.

25. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. During the long days of preparation, the athlete is free to do as he pleases. He still has personal liberty. But if his intent is to win the crown, he restricts himself in all things: his diet, his activities, his associations, and probably even his friendships. He "laid aside every-weight." And all for

26 I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:

27 But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.

temporal glory. But, counters the apostle, the crown for which we strive is incorruptible. If temperance and self-discipline are so important in the temporal realm, much more in the spiritual.

26. I therefore so run. That is, like the athletes in verse 25. Not as uncertainly (this term, Gr adēlōs, appears only here in the New Testament). Paul does not run as one who has no specific objective. So fight I. Paul changes his metaphor to that of the boxer. Not as one that beateth the air. Paul does not swing wildly without hitting his target, but to reach his level of proficiency in the gospel ministry.

27. I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection. The expression, I keep under (Gr hypōpiazō), loses much of the original sense. It has the idea of "to give one a black eye," "buffet," or "bruise." Paul's Corinthian readers knew that in the Isthmian games, the boxers wore gloves consisting of ox-hide bands covered with knots and nails and loaded with lead and iron. To prepare for such an event, a man would have to steel himself against all forms of physical abuse. Lest . . . when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway. It is unlikely in these words that the apostle intends to associate himself with the herald at the Grecian games whose task was to proclaim the rules, and to summon the competitors to their places. It is more likely that he drops the metaphor now, and applies it to the main subject at hand. The reason he, in effect, restrains himself so, sacrificing even his essential Christian liberties, is that he might never reach the point where he is no longer qualified to run the race. Again, this expression must not be construed to suggest that Paul was afraid of losing his salvation. His subject is still Christian liberty, and his point is that sometimes the mature Christian will have to restrict himself in order to accomplish the ultimate task.

3. The practice of liberty. 10:1-11:1.

Paul concludes his discussion of Christian liberty with an admonition to beware of temptation and unbelief (vss. 1-13), to be conscious of the association of tables with demons and idolatry (vss. 14-22), and to be guided by the principles of thankfulness and expediency (vss. 23-11:1).

In his opening section, Paul begins by illustrating his point (vss. 1-5), and then by applying it (vss. 6-13).

10:1. Moreover (Gr gar, for). He concludes chapter 9 with a discussion of the need for self-discipline. A classic case of what happens when self-control is absent is seen in the experience of Israel in the wilderness. The immediate connection is with the word, "castaway." Israel refused to deny self, and demanded the fleshpots of Egypt, and so became a castaway in the desert. I would not that ye should be ignorant. Here is one of Paul's favorite expressions introducing a matter of great importance (cf. Rom 1:13; 11:25). How that all. The five "alls" in verses 1-4 emphasize the five downward moral steps of verses 5-10. The very same people who enjoyed great privilege from God, also fell into serious apostasy from God. This also ties with 9:24, "all the runners run." Historically, in the case of Israel, all ran, but only Caleb and Joshua received the prize. The five privileges are enumerated as follows. Under the cloud. This speaks of divine guidance and protection (cf. Num 9:15, 23; 14:15; Deut 1:33; Ps 78:14; Mt 28:20). Passed through the sea. This has reference to divine deliverance (cf. Ex 14:15-22; I Pet 1:18-20).

2. All baptized unto Moses. This has neither a sacerdotal nor a soteriological import. Rather, it is a nontechnical use of the term "baptism." The people were immersed in Moses' authority. Thus, the expression speaks of divine leadership (cf. Ex 14:31). Therefore, they came under the influence of his authority. The reference is not to water baptism.

3-4. Their fourth privilege was that they all ate of the same spiritual meat. The reference here is obviously to manna,

CHAPTER 10

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea;

2 And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;

3 And did all eat the same spiritual meat;

I CORINTHIANS 10:4

4 And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ.

5 But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness.

6 Now these things were our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted.

7 Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

8 Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

spoken of in Psalm 78:25 as “angels’ food.” This speaks of divine provision. By employing the term “spiritual,” Paul does not intend to imply that the manna was not literal food. It was clearly designed for ordinary nourishment (cf. Neh 9:15; Jn 6:49). It was spiritual in the sense that it was supernaturally provided by the Spirit of God. Likewise, And did all drink the same spiritual drink. The water that was received from the rock was real water. It was spiritual in the sense that it was given through the divine intervention of God. They drank of the spiritual rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ. Here, Paul does not intend to advance an old Jewish fable that the rock that Moses smote actually was not part of the mountain, but rolled after them during their journeys. The rock was not a theophany. Rather, it was a “type” of Christ. It refigured the character and provision that Christ would ultimately make for His people. But also, it is intended to mean that the ultimate supply was Christ and not the rock. This spiritual Rock, even Christ, remained with them and followed them.

This passage is an impressive affirmation of the pre-existence of Jesus Christ (cf. also vs. 9; Jn 8:58; 12:41; Heb 11:25; and Jude 5). In light of what follows, it is most probable that the expression, “spiritual meat” and “spiritual drink” are intended to be parallel with the elements employed in the Lord’s Supper.

5. But. In spite of their great privilege, God was not well pleased. Divine privilege does not guarantee divine success. The evidence of this is that they were overthrown in the wilderness (lit., “their bodies were strewn about the wilderness”). Paul draws a pathetic picture of people, sated with providential privilege, paving the wilderness trail with their dead bodies (cf. Num 14:29).

The five successive backward steps are now enumerated.

6. Now introduces Paul’s application of the preceding to the experience of his readers. Examples (Gr typos, type or example). The AV rendering here is no doubt correct. Unless we are careful, the history of Israel will be duplicated in our own experience. The first step was that they lusted after evil things. Not satisfied with the manna supplied by the Lord, the people lusted after the fleshpots of Egypt. Because of their inordinate desire, while the meat was yet in their mouths, God struck them with a plague (cf. Num 11:4-34). The specific application to the Corinthians’ situation is hard to miss. The pot roasts of Egypt were no more unclean than the prime ribs of Corinth. But what a terrible consequence that they should become an obstacle between God and His people.

7. Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them. The second step down is to substitute a graven image for the Holy God. The allusion is to Exodus 32. What is significant here is that the Israelites considered that their golden calf was made in honor of Jehovah. Likewise, for Paul’s readers, the inordinate exercise of Christian liberty was considered a celebration of their freedom in Christ. The evidence of idolatry was seen in that The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. Sensual amusement was always associated in the pagan world with their feasts and idolatrous practices.

8. The third step is to commit fornication. Spiritual defecation always leads to moral defecation. If this was symptomatic of the spiritual decay in Israel, how much more in Corinth (cf. 5:1-5). Allowing immorality to persist in their assembly, they were no different from their neighbors who worshiped at the temple of Venus. Again, the same truth holds today. When men, even Christians, substitute anything for the God of the Bible, the results are the same. In one day three and twenty thousand is not a mistake. In Numbers 25:9, the total people who died is given as twenty-four thousand. The discrepancy may be accounted for in at least two ways. The actual figure may be midway between twenty-three and twenty-four thousand, and hence, in each case the figure is rounded off. Furthermore, it will be noted that Paul refers to the number slain in one day. Numbers refers to the total number that died. In any case, the precise number is only given in approximate terms.

9. The fourth step is to tempt Christ (cf. Num 21:4-9; Ps 78:19). This, in effect, reflects skepticism over whether or not God will discipline them for their sins. The exhortation is that one should not provoke the forbearance of God. If it comes as especially obnoxious that some of the Corinthians had to give up some of their better cuts of meat for the cause of the gospel of Christ, let them remember from whence they were delivered. To become overly concerned about temporal desires is to forget the great spiritual privilege they enjoy. Anyone who doubts that God can and will exercise His option to punish sin should remember Israel and the fiery serpents.

10. The fifth step down is murmur. This implies a total rejection of divine leadership. The reference is to Numbers 16:41-50. But the spirit which prompted that situation is expressed in Numbers 14:4. The results are that they were destroyed. The parallel situation and obvious admonition is seen in the Corinthians' attitude toward their leadership (viz., Paul). Nothing provokes the anger of God more than to chafe under the yoke that we share with Christ (cf. Mt 11:29-30; I Cor 3:9).

11. Paul summarizes with both an admonition and an encouragement. Now all these things happened . . . for examples (lit., "now these things happened to them typically"). The expression emphasizes God's providential control over all the affairs of men (cf. Gen 50:20; Prov 21:1). Although the Israelites rebelled against God and received subsequent judgment because of it, God intended to use their experience for His own good. And they are written for our admonition. The reason God had Moses to record the experiences of the children of Israel was because He had Paul and his Corinthian believers in mind. He knew that the Corinthians were going to face a similar crisis situation. When that time came, the example of the children of Israel would provide the deterrent to guide them from sin, and to lead them to spiritual victory. Ends of the world. That is, "for us who are living in the end times." Paul considered the second coming of Christ to be imminent. Thus, as far as he knew, he and his generation constituted the end times.

12. Him that thinketh he standeth. The one who thinks himself to be the strong Christian, who can exercise his Christian liberty at the expense of the weaker brethren, take heed lest he fall. Not from salvation, nor yet from his position of strength to that of weakness, but that he should suffer the judgment of God, as the Israelites, and "fall in the wilderness."

13. Temptation. Paul is about to show that trials and temptations will be proportionate to our strength. Common to man (Gr anthrōpinos). This term occurs mostly in this epistle. The trials you face are only normal problems (cf. also Rom 4:19; Jas 3:7; I Pet 2:13; I Cor 2:4, 13; and I Cor 4:3). But. A mild adversative. In the context of those temptations God is faithful. What great comfort Paul provides for his readers. Though men and the world about be false, God is true, God is faithful, and our strength and security are in Him. Above that ye are able. God knows our frame, and He knows exactly what we can take. Sometimes when the exigencies of life seem to overwhelm us, we think we can take no more. But take heart. If God did not know that you could take it, He would not have allowed you to suffer it. Make a way to escape. In early Greek usage, this term (Gr ekbasis) had the sense of a landing place. It was a nautical term. The idea is not that He will enable us to escape temptation, but that He will enable us to land safely on the other side victoriously. To bear. Often the only escape is to endure (cf. Jas 1:12).

9 Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents.

10 Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured, and were destroyed of the destroyer.

11 Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

12 Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

13 There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.

14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from idolatry.

15 I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.

16 The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?

17 For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread.

18 Behold Israel after the flesh: are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?

19 What say I then? that the idol is any thing, or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?

20 But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.

21 Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils.

22 Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he?

erty, the apostle now goes on to inform his readers that there is a direct relationship between heathen feasts and demonic activity.

14. Wherefore (Gr dioper, a strengthened form of dio, lit., "for which very reason"). This term appears only here and I Corinthians 8:13 (14:13 in some MSS). In light of God's judgment upon Israel, flee idolatry. These words have a triple significance. They contain a concern because they are addressed to people whom Paul loved. They express a command, they are given in the imperative mode. And they express a consequence. Because of the expression of their Christian liberty, the Corinthians are edging dangerously close to idolatry.

15. Wise men. This is not irony. Not wishing to be authoritarian on this issue, he appeals to their sense of wisdom. Judge ye what I say. "Consider for a moment the logic of my argument."

16-17. The cup . . . communion of the blood of Christ? The bread . . . communion of the body of Christ? Consider the Lord's table. When a believer participates, he partakes of Christ's blood and His body. This means to share and to participate in the benefits of Christ's saving work on Calvary. This being the case, all those who come to the Lord's Supper enter into communion with one another. They form one body in virtue of their joint participation of Christ. For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread.

18. This argument is further substantiated by the example of the altar of Israel. Are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar? When a sacrifice was brought to the altar, it was not entirely consumed. Rather, the residue was divided between the priest and the offerer (cf. Lev 7:15; 8:31; Deut 12:18). Thus, it became an act of mutual sharing and worshiping of God. It is for this reason that non-Jews were forbidden to attend the sacrificial feasts of the Jews since it involved mutual sharing and joint worship of Jehovah. This passage must not be construed to indicate that the Lord's Supper is a sacrifice. The point of correspondence was not sacrifice, but communion.

19. What say I then? That the idol is any thing? The writer anticipates the obvious question. "But, Paul, you just said an idol was, in reality, nothing. Therefore, to worship an idol is to worship nothing. If one participate in fellowship with an idol, he would, in fact participate in nothing."

20. It is very true, the idol is nothing. But the ones behind the idol are very real. The things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils (lit., demons) and not to God. What is of grave concern to the apostle is that behind the idols are fallen angels; evil spirits. This is in keeping with Deuteronomy 32:17 and Psalm 106:37. Since Paul has already established that these religious feasts involved fellowship with the altar, should they attend a heathen feast, they will be having fellowship with devils ("demons"). And this was the last thing Paul hoped for his young converts at Corinth.

21. Ye cannot drink of the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils. It is not possible to be simultaneously related to the Lord and to demons. Paul does not merely indicate that this is an inconsistency, but an impossibility. We cannot expect that the Lord will allow this to continue. The consequences of such behavior have already been amply illustrated in the case of Israel. Thus, it is not necessary at this point for the apostle to do more than ask the simple question.

22. Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? Unless they intend to provoke the greatest displeasure from the Lord, the Corinthians must be careful not to attend the heathen feasts.

So Paul has answered two questions. Question one, what about exercising my right to eat meat sacrificed to idols? Question two, what about my attendance at heathen feasts? The 23 All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.

24 Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no question for conscience sake:

26 For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

27 If any of them that believe not bid you to a feast, and ye be disposed to go; whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no question for conscience sake.

28 But if any man say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice unto idols, eat not for his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake: for the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof:

29 Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other: for why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience?

30 For if I by grace be a partaker, why am I evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks?

31 Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

32 Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God:

33 Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.

CHAPTER 11

BE ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.

remaining question is, what about meat purchased in the market place. In answer, he returns to the original issue of Christian liberty, and the principles which govern it.

23. First, there is the principle of expedience. All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient. Two observations must be made on this point. When Paul says, all things, he is speaking in an obviously restricted sense (cf. 6:12). He intends to mean all matters of indifference. The second observation has to do with the significance of his advice. While on such matters all options are open to the believer, there is only one choice that is best. And there are some choices that will be of no help at all. Then, there is the principle of edification. All things are lawful . . . but all things edify not. Here he enlarges on his original statement of this principle in 6:12. If what I do subjects me rather than serves me, I must avoid it.

24. Wealth (better translated "welfare"). The principle of edification will please the concerns and needs of others first.

25-28. Then there is the principle of conscience. The shambles (Gr makellō, a Latin term used only here in the New Testament, refers to the market). In the sacrifices, usually only a part of the victim was consumed. The rest was given to the priest or sold again in the market. Anyone might therefore unknowingly purchase meat offered to idols. Concerning such purchases, Paul's advice is Whatsoever is sold . . . that eat, asking no question for conscience sake. Your conscience need not be activated on this issue. Going back to the original discussion, the idol is nothing; therefore, it can have no intrinsic effect upon the meat. While it is wrong to go to the heathen feast and to participate with demons in idolatrous worship, once the meat has been disassociated from that gathering, there is no reason why it cannot be eaten without scruple. Likewise, if you have been invited to a feast at the home of an unbeliever, and it is your desire to go, whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no questions for conscience sake. On the other hand, if another brother in Christ (apparently a weaker brother) should turn to you and say this is offered in sacrifice unto idols, then the stronger brother is to eat not for his sake that showed it. The principle here is to bow to the weaker conscience.

29-31. Then there is the principle of thanksgiving. The question naturally arises, why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience? This is a legitimate question. The answer is: I by grace be a partaker. The word grace (Gr charis) is used here in the sense of thanksgiving. We use it today when we speak of "saying grace" before a meal. It is illogical to give thanks to God for something that will cause me to be evil spoken of. Whence the admonition in verse 31. Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. I fail in the proper exercise of my Christian liberty, if in the process I do not bring glory to God (see also I Pet 4:11; and Col 3:17).

32-33. Then there is the principle of evangelism. Care must be taken to give none offense, whether to Jews . . . Gentiles (or) the church of God. Thus, whatever we do in our public ministries or our personal lives should not deliberately bring offense to the church. That they may be saved. "Why should I go about offending people in the name of Christian liberty, and unnecessarily causing them to repudiate the gospel?" (cf. also 9:22).

11:1. The bottom line on the discussion of Christian liberty is the example of Christ as He is reflected in the Apostle Paul. The ultimate standard is Christ, and insofar as Paul is following Him, he is able to say to the Corinthian believers, Be ye followers of me.

To summarize then, in this section on Christian liberty, Paul is anxious to lead his assembly to maturity under grace. The Christian life is not governed by legalism. Yet on the other hand, this does not justify license. The best example of how it works is Jesus Christ. In Him we see ultimate sacrifice and supernatural love. And by these standards, every act is to be judged.

C. Doctrine of Worship. 11:2-34.

In this chapter, Paul is concerned with two vital matters. First, the order of authority (vss. 2-16), then the ordinance of communion (vss. 17-34). Since Paul does not begin with his characteristic expression, “now concerning” (Gr peri de), it is possible that this chapter falls into the category of unsolicited advice. Perhaps in their letter to Paul there was allusion to some of their public worship practices. Or perhaps his discussion of worship practices in the previous chapter prompted him to speak directly to this issue.

1. The order of authority. 11:2-16.

Paul develops this subject in two ways. First, he states the principle of headship (vss. 2-6). Then he defends this principle from Scripture and nature (vss. 7-16).

2. Now indicates the transition to a new subject. I praise you, brethren. It is always a good practice to compliment someone before you rebuke him. That ye . . . keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you. There is a play on the two words ordinances and delivered. Both are derived from the Greek term paradidōmi, meaning “to give over.” It is best rendered “oral teaching,” or “tradition.” Paul will have more to say about this in verses 17-34.

3. But is adversative. I would have you know is probably not intended as ironic, but it is difficult not to miss the irony of the situation. The Corinthians prided themselves in their knowledge, yet it is their knowledge that the apostle repeatedly finds deficient. That indicates purport. The head of every man is Christ. This is established by the fact that Christ is the head of the body, which is the church (Col 1:18; Eph 1:22-23). Whether “man” is taken generically (mankind), or “man” as opposed to “woman,” the truth still stands. However, the latter sense seems to be dictated by the context. The head of the woman is the man. This constitutes the fundamental order in the race in the sense that the head of Christ is God. It is important here to note that the concept of headship does not connote qualitative or essential difference. It connotes a functional subordination. The prototype is seen in the persons of the Trinity. The Father and Christ are co-equal, yet the Son is answerable to the Father (cf. Jn 6:38-40 10:29-30; 14:9; I Cor 15:28; and Phil 2:6). It is unfortunate that Paul has been so misunderstood on this point. He is not a male chauvinist. On the contrary, he argues here for the equality of the sexes. Any other sense leads to Sabellianism, which is heresy.

4. Since this constitutes the order of authority, it is inappropriate for a man to participate in public worship of God with something on his head. The covering would seem to indicate another authority coming between the man and Christ.

5. On the other hand, when a woman prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered, this is equally wrong. It is wrong for the same reason the opposite is wrong for the man. The covering is symbolic, indicating the authority that exists above the woman, yet still under Christ. A further teaching of this verse is that women did prophesy and pray in public worship. This, no doubt, involved edifying, exhorting, and comforting. And apparently this did not constitute a point of contention, since the apostle does not feel obligated to speak directly to it. Yet this is not a contradiction with I Corinthians 14:34-37. Here the context has reference to orderly participation. Chapter 14 refers to disorderly participation.

6. For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn . . . let her be covered. In Corinth, it was not uncommon for prostitutes to

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you.

3 But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God.

4 Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.

5 But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven.

6 For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man.

9 Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.

10 For this cause ought the woman to have power on her head because of the angels.

11 Nevertheless neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; but all things of God.

13 Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a covering.

shave their heads and don blonde wigs, thus signifying their availability to the men in the streets. This is not a point of indifference to the apostle. It is a serious matter. An unsubmitive woman standing before the congregation is tantamount to going out in public improperly attired (e.g., with her head shaven). But the force of Paul's words here is poignant. Just as no respectable Christian woman would go out in public dressed as a prostitute, it is equally important that she not participate in public worship without proper dress.

Having established the principle of headship, Paul goes on to validate his position from Scripture (vss. 7-12) and from nature (vss. 13-16).

7. The image and glory of God. It must not be inferred from this that only the man is in the image of God. In Genesis 1:26-27 it is said that God created man in His own image, "male and female created he them." But, Paul uses the term "image" in a restrictive sense. The only sense in which the man is uniquely in the image of God is that to him was given dominion over the earth. This was done before the creation of the woman. Thus, in the same sense, the woman is the glory of the man. That is, whatever dominion and authority she has is delegated.

8-9. The order of creation also supports Paul's position. Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man. Chronologically, she came after. Constitutionally, she was made for the man (cf. Gen 2:21-25).

10. Power signifies here the symbol of authority on her head. A further reason is because of the angels. The reference is to the holy angels who elsewhere are spoken of as "worshipping spirits" (cf. Heb 1:4). The keynote of Paul's thought is submission to the divine order of things. Women should demonstrate the same sense of submission to God in recognizing their true position, and fulfilling its claims, as do the angels who know nothing of insubordination among their ranks. Since the angels have their very existence in the presence of God, they are also present whenever the congregation meets together to worship the Lord (cf. I Cor 4:9; Eph 3:10; I Tim 5:21).

11. Lest his readers understand this distinction in a qualitative sense, Paul hastens to add, neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord. Both are mutually dependent upon each other. The expression "in the Lord" has the sense of "according to the will and purpose of the Lord." Neither can exist without the other.

12. Even so is the man also by the woman. Just as the principle of submission is supported by the order of creation, the principle of mutual dependency is supported by the order of procreation. In Genesis 2, the woman came out of the man. In Genesis 4:1, the man came out of the woman. So have all men since. In the final analysis, all things (are) of God.

13-15. Nature itself ("the recognized constitution of things"). If a man have long hair, it is a shame. This is a difficult passage, especially in a culture where nature does not seem to be dictating it. It cannot mean that nature naturally grows short hair on men and long hair on women, since biologically we know this is not the case. Several factors must be considered. First, the context: Paul is talking about differentiating between the sexes. Have long hair (Gr komaō) means to wear long hair like that of a woman. It cannot be said that he has in mind a specific kind of haircut. He is simply saying that it is shameful for a man to wear his hair in an effeminate way. Another factor has to do with culture. In Paul's experience, he knew of no culture, whether Hebrew, Greek, or Roman, that did not consider long hair a disgrace to man. The only exception to this rule was the Nazarite (Num 6:5; and Ezek 44:20). Thus, to Paul it was significant that just naturally, worldwide cultures emerged with the same sense of propriety regarding long hair on men. The same principle holds true today. The vast majority of 16 But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, neither the churches of God.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there be divisions among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken.

22 What? have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the cultures regard effeminacy of hair and dress as distasteful and shameful to a man. But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her. The logic is obvious. In the natural order of things, it only seems appropriate to cover a woman's head and here her ultimate covering is her hair. The Scripture does not dictate "spirituality" by the length of one's hair. The real issue here is submission to divine authority. Therefore, every aspect of the believer's life should reflect his obedience and submission to the Lord Jesus Christ and divinely established authority. Some suggest the long hair constitutes the "covering" of verses 5-6. However, it may be argued that the shorn head in verse 5 is equated only hypothetically with the absence of the covering.

16. If any man seem to be contentious. If someone desires to dispute me, then, we have no such custom. In other words, there is no other precedent. To violate this principle is to go against a standard that is maintained in every church of which Paul is knowledgeable. Having appealed to their sense of wisdom, and their sense of propriety, here Paul ultimately appeals to his own authority as an apostle. But he does so only last, and inserts it almost as a footnote. In keeping with his approach to Christian liberty, he hopes there will be a voluntary submission to the principles he has laid out in this chapter.

2. The ordinance of communion. 11:17-34.

The Corinthians were to be commended for keeping the ordinances (vs. 2). But they deserved sharp criticism for the manner in which they did so. In the observance of the Lord's Supper, they have been guilty of carnality (vss. 17-22). They are desperately in need of correction (vss. 23-26), and they are in danger of chastisement from the Lord (vss. 27-34).

17. Now in this. The reference is to what follows. Declare, better rendered, "command." I praise you not. An obvious contrast with verse 2. Ye come together not for the better, but for the worse. Your congregational gatherings are more debilitating than edifying. Sometimes one may be worse for attending services if he goes out of the wrong motivation.

18. First . . . I hear that there be divisions among you (cf. 1:10). The expression is intended as irony to contrast with when ye come together. What is described is a party spirit in the assembly. It is evident in what follows that the factions were largely divided between the rich and the poor. I partly believe it. What Paul knew of the Corinthian assembly compelled him to accept part of what he had heard. What Paul aspired of the Corinthian assembly compelled him to reject the rest.

19. For there must be also heresies (Gr haireis, factions, the term is used in a nonecclesiastical sense. Note Acts 5:17 and 15:5, translated, "the sect"). Paul was certain that some divisions would occur in the assembly, if only to bring to light those who defend the truth. It is significant that God in His sovereign purpose might even use dissension and disorders in the assembly to put His people to the test.

20. When ye come together . . . this is not to eat the Lord's supper. It is a supper, but not the Lord's. It is a disorderly gathering of people going through the motions.

21. For in eating . . . one is hungry, and another is drunken. In the early church, the Lord's Supper was commonly preceded by a fellowship meal, later known as the Agape Feast. Eventually, so many problems accompanied these feasts that at the Council of Carthage (A.D. 397), they were strictly forbidden. And such was the case at Corinth. In their coming together, they were not eating together; hence it could not be called communion, and their behavior was so dishonoring to the Lord, it could hardly be called the Lord's Supper. Some were actually getting drunk.

22. Despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not? Paul's indictment is twofold. They disgraced the church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

23 For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you. That the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread:

24 And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.

27 Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

Lord's house, and they embarrassed the poor in their midst who were not invited to participate in the fellowship dinner. This being the case, they could just as well do this at home. The apostle is writing to correct these abuses in the church. His statement should not be taken as a prohibition against eating any food at all in the church.

23. Having given ample expression of his sentiments about how not to come to the Lord's Supper, Paul now goes on to give instruction as to how it ought to be done. I have received of the Lord. Paul traces his authority to the Lord Himself. He does not indicate how the Lord gave him the instruction. It is likely that he received it through the apostles. That which also I delivered unto you. Evidently, this was not the first time Paul had been through this with the Corinthians. Paul's method here is to take his readers back to the Upper Room to trace the events of the Last Supper. This says several things. In the first place, it bases what he has to say in history, not dogmatism. In the second place, it forces his readers to think back with him to Calvary, which, of course, is what the Lord's Supper is all about. Thirdly, he delineates precisely what the Lord said and did so that his readers cannot escape the significance of it.

24. Take, eat: . . . broken, are all omitted in the best manuscripts. This is my body. Certainly not literally, but figuratively. He was there in the midst participating with the disciples in the element of the bread which signifies His incarnation. Which is . . . for you. This signifies the sacrificial and vicarious character of the death of Christ. Christ is memorialized at this table, not as a great example, or teacher, or even prophet, but as the Lamb of God that takes away the sin of the world. This do in remembrance of me. In contrast to the often thoughtless and reckless gathering of Corinthian believers at their so-called love feast, Jesus asked of His disciples, "remember me."

25. This cup is the New Testament in my blood. Christ is the Mediator of the New Covenant who ". . . by his own blood . . . entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us" (Heb 9:12-15). Notice the emphasis on the blood. This signifies our Lord's death which in turn signifies the grounds on which an eternal salvation is applied to the heart of the believing sinner. This do ye, as oft as ye drink it. The observance is commanded. The frequency is not. In the apostolic church, it was generally a weekly occurrence.

26. Ye do show the Lord's death till he come. The service at the Lord's table looks both back and ahead. It recalls the accomplishments of Calvary, and anticipates our Lord's glorious return. Incidentally, the fact that this is observed "till he come" indicates that our Lord intended this ordinance to be observed throughout the present age. Certain hyper-dispensationalists are inclined to see this as no longer applicable to the present age. Such a view does serious injustice to our Lord's stated purpose in the ordinance. Nor should this memorial ordinance be viewed as a sacrament ("means of grace").

27-28. Paul concludes his discussion of the Lord's Supper with a warning to his readers that they may be facing the sure chastisement of the Lord unless they correct their abuse of the Lord's Supper. Wherefore whosoever shall eat . . . unworthily. This is defined in verse 29 as "not discerning the Lord's body." In other words, there is an irreverent and careless attitude displayed at the table of the Lord. Such a one shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. This expression is not to be taken to prove the doctrine of consubstantiation (cf., Lenski, pp. 477-479). Rather, the intent is to show that when one violates this sacred institution, he is, in effect, despising the body and blood of our Lord. In the same sense as it is expressed in Hebrews 9:26, they profane the institution and crucify the Saviour all over again. Instead of being cleansed by His blood, they are guilty of His blood. For this reason, it is imperative that 29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come.

a man examine himself. Before one partakes of the Lord's Supper, it is essential that he take stock of himself as he takes stock of our Lord. There is no room here for callousness of heart or carelessness of mind.

29. Coming to the table with the wrong attitude and the wrong approach may cause a man to eat and drink damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body. Damnation (Gr krima) is best rendered "judgment." The kinds of judgment the apostle has in mind are enumerated in the following verse.

30-31. For this cause, many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. Paul knows that the judgments of God many times take the form of physical illness and even death (cf. Acts 5:1-10). It is his conviction that such judgment has already occurred in their midst. The verb (Gr koimao) sleep when referring to death, always refers to the death of believers (cf., Jn 11:11-12; Acts 7:60; I Cor 15:6, 18, 20, 51; I Thess 4:13-15; II Pet 3:4). Judgment here is physical and temporal, not eternal. The exhortation of verse 31 goes back to verse 28. If we would judge ourselves corresponds to self-examination. The benefit of such examination is that we should not be judged. Paul gives his readers a choice. They may either exercise their own judgment upon themselves, or they may await God's judgment.

32. Lest his readers misunderstand what he means by judgment, Paul adds, But when we are judged, we are chastened of the Lord. Chastening itself is evidence of sonship (cf., Heb 12:6). The purpose is that we should not be condemned with the world. The sin of which the Corinthians were guilty was worthy of the certain judgment of God. But it was certainly not unpardonable. And true to his previous exhortation to the church, Paul's primary interest is not reprobation, but restoration.

33-34. Tarry one for another. Paul concludes his discussion of the Lord's Supper with a practical exhortation that the Corinthian believers show proper concern for one another. He implies his disapprobation of the common love feast in the words eat at home. And he demonstrates again pastoral concern when he expresses the thought that ye come not together to condemnation. Paul takes no delight in the chastening hand of the Lord. Will I set in order (Gr diatassō) refers to outward practical arrangement, (cf. Mt 11:1; I Cor 9:14; 16:1; and Gal 3:19). Any other details pertaining to the Lord's Supper, Paul will clarify upon his visit to the city.

D. Doctrine of Spiritual Gifts. 12:1-14:40.

In the eleventh chapter, Paul introduced the general subject of Christian worship. There he dealt a much needed corrective regarding authority as it is now demonstrated in public worship and the practice of the ordinances. He now turns his attention to a related subject concerning which the Corinthians had solicited his advice. This is without a doubt the most difficult section of I Corinthians to interpret. The comment made by Robertson and Plummer more than fifty years ago is as pertinent today, "The difficulty of this passage lies in our ignorance of the condition of things to which it refers" (International Critical Commentary, p. 257). This will be noted as we progress through the text. In this section Paul strives to achieve four objectives: (1) to show that the partitioning of the gifts is under the control of the Holy Spirit (12:1-11); (2) to show that the proportion of the gifts in the church is as diverse as the members of the human body (12:12-31); (3) to establish the primacy of love (13:1-13); (4) to show the prominence of the gift of prophecy over all other manifestations of the Holy Spirit (14:1-40).

1. The partitioning of gifts.

Paul begins by dealing with the assignment of the gifts (vss. 1-6). He then treats the allotment of the gifts (vss. 7-10), and finally, the administration of the gifts (vs. 11).

CHAPTER 12

NOW concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2 Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

5 And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all.

7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.

8 For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;

9 To another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;

10 To another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues:

a. The assignment of the gifts. 12:1-6.

12:1. Spiritual gifts (Gr pneumatikos, spiritual). This term may be either masculine or neuter, referring to either "men" or "gifts." The context is determinative. Here it is best understood as neuter, denoting "spiritual gifts" (cf. vs. 4, 5, 31; 14:1 where the neuter is used). I would not have you to be ignorant. This is a common pauline expression to denote a subject of importance (cf. 10:1; 14:38; II Cor 1:8; 2:11; Rom 1:13; 11:25; I Thess 4:13).

2. Ye were Gentiles, carried away. Herein lie both a statement of fact and an insinuation. They need to face the fact that before they were saved they were led about into all forms of superstition and blind impulse. The pagan worship at Corinth not only involved the worship of dumb idols and temple prostitution, but it also involved a pagan exercise of "tongues." The practice of "ecstatic utterances" was very common in the cults and in the worship of various Greek gods and goddesses (Kittel, Theological Dictionary of the New Testament, I, p. 722). The insinuation is that they are still being carried away. This expression has the force of being controlled by an influence they could not resist (cf. Gal 2:13; II Pet 3:17).

3. While Paul is about to deal with the entire subject of spiritual gifts, it is clear from the start that emphasis will be on only one of them, tongues. Wherefore ties with verse 2 and indicates they are in need of instruction. In evaluating spiritual gifts there are two criteria to be employed. The first is negative. No man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed. The second is positive. No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. How a person speaks determines the nature of the spirit that is within him. His very recognition and reception of Christ is by the Holy Spirit.

4-6. In the first three verses Paul's burden is to show that the Spirit is in control. This says something of the quality of what is done in the exercise of them. In verses 4-6 he shows that the Spirit is central and this says something about the consistency of what is done in the exercise of them. Diversities of gifts . . . differences of administration . . . diversities of operations. Paul is not necessarily classifying the gifts into three categories, but their relationship to Spirit . . . Lord . . . God. They are the gifts given by the Spirit, used in ministry by the Son, and energized by the Father.

b. The allotment of the gifts. 12:7-10.

7. Manifestation of the Spirit. It is improper to equate this expression with "diversities of gifts" in verse 4. Neither is Paul about to tabulate the gifts per se, but the manner in which they are demonstrated. Given to every man, may refer to every man in the body of Christ or every man with a spiritual gift. If the stress is on given, the former is preferred. If the stress is on profit, the latter is preferred.

8-10. Given by the Spirit. This is the Holy Spirit not just the spirit of unity (cf. vs. 3, 11, 13). The word of wisdom. This has to do with the exposition of wisdom. It is speech that has wisdom as its content (Grosheide, Commentary on I Corinthians, p. 285). The word of knowledge. This relates to the previous gift in that both are gifts of the Spirit. They are distinguished in that the former has in mind the exposition of truths dealing with the being and nature of God and the latter, the experiential and personal knowledge of God. Where the one promotes sound theology, the other promotes sound living. Faith. This is not saving faith but the wonder-working faith to "move mountains." Gifts of healing. This has in mind gifts whereby the healing of the sick was effected (cf. Acts 4:30). Two important facts should be noted here. First, the use of the plural ("gifts," "healings"). This indicates that a special gift is necessary every time a healing occurs. Second, the stress is on the results, not on the process. The gift does not produce divine “healers” but divine “healing” (cf. Jas 5:14-15). The working of miracles. This gift is more comprehensive than the gift of healings. It has in mind such manifestations as are recorded in Acts 5:1-12; 9:32-43; and 13:8-12. Prophecy. This is the communication of special revelation from God. It could have been in the sense of “foretelling” (Acts 11:28) or simply “forthtelling.” Most of the New Testament epistles fall into this category. The gift was temporary, no longer needed after the canon of the New Testament was completed. Discerning of spirits. During the period of time when Scripture was still being formulated a class of individuals gifted with discerning true prophets from false prophets was necessary. This seems to be what John has in mind in I John 4:1 (cf. 14:29; I Thess 5:20-21). Tongues . . . interpretation. The gift of speaking in tongues in the book of Acts appears to have been limited to speaking in “known languages” (cf. Acts 2:4; 10:46; and 19:6). In the Acts 2 passage it does not appear that the gift of interpretation was necessary, since “every man heard in his own dialect” (Acts 10 and 19 are not as clear). However at Corinth it seems that the exercise of tongues involved more than just speaking with “known” languages. This being the case, the gift of interpretation was vital in every instance. For a fuller discussion of the nature and exercise of these gifts see the exposition of 13:1 and 14:1-40.

c. The administration of the gifts. 12:11.

11. But all these. All the above mentioned gifts. Worketh . . . one . . . Spirit. While the gifts are diverse, the source is a common one. Dividing to every man severally as he will. The Holy Spirit not only produces these gifts but distributes them, and that according to His own will, not according to the wishes or merits of men. Notice here that the Apostle Paul attributes to the Third Person of the Trinity one of the qualities of personality (viz., will). The Holy Spirit is not a force but a Person.

2. The proportion in the body. 12:12-31.

Paul uses the illustration of the human body in order to explain and illustrate the unity of Christ’s body (vss. 12-19); the interdependence of each of its members (vss. 20-26); and the importance of each integral part (vss. 27-31).

a. The indivisibility of the members in the body. 12:12-19.

12. The body is one, and hath many members. The church is viewed as an organism. Like the human body it reflects both unity and diversity. One body. While there are many members, there is only one body. This truth is further emphasized in Romans 12:4-5; Ephesians 1:23; and 4:4, 16. So also is Christ. That is, the body of Christ, which is the church. This expression is appropriate since Christ is the Head of that body.

13. One Spirit are we all baptized into one body. This is not the baptism of water but the baptism of the Spirit. This has the same force as the expression and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. This fulfills Matthew 3:11; John 1:33; and Acts 1:5. That this baptism is common to all believers at Corinth is implied by the fact that Paul does not further exhort them to be baptized by the Spirit. Rather he assumes that they have all been baptized. The believer does not tarry or pray for this baptism. It occurs at the moment of regeneration. While speaking in tongues occurred in conjunction with the baptism of the Spirit at Pentecost, this outward manifestation was not always repeated as the only proof of such baptism.

14-19. Here the illustration of the body is further developed with the emphasis on the diversity and placement of each member. One cannot escape the force of Paul’s argument: for a body to be a body it must have diverse members. It is absurd to expect everyone to have the same gift. God set the members every one

11 But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ.

13 For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body?

20 But now are they many members, yet but one body.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.

22 Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary:

23 And those members of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we bestow more abundant honour; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness.

24 For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked:

25 That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another.

26 And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it.

27 Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.

28 And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.

29 Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles?

30 Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret?

31 But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.

of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. Paul stresses the sovereignty of God in this process. It is not only foolish but disobedient to covet another man's gift. The place and gifts of each member are determined by the Lord.

b. The interdependence of the members in the body. 12:20-26.

20. And now are they many members, yet but one body. Based upon the theological fact of organic unity, Paul is now going to show that each member is interdependent upon the others.

21. I have no need of thee. There is no such thing as a freelance Christian. No part of the body can take leave of the other members as though they were not necessary.

22-23. Those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary. Like the human body some members are weaker than others. Likewise, there are some we think to be less honorable. Some parts of the body seemingly receive more attention and exposure than others, while there are other parts of the body that are never noticed at all.

24. But God hath tempered the body together. As God views the body He does not see it in part but in the whole. Tempered was used to speak of mingling two elements to form a compound.

25-26. That there should be no schism in the body. Divisions and alienation of feelings should find no place in the body of Christ. Rather, the members should have the same care one for another. The body is one and it has a common life and consciousness, therefore, whether one member suffer, all the members suffer. Likewise, if one be honored, all the members rejoice with it.

c. The induction of the members into the body. 12:27-31.

27. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. In one succinct statement the apostle expresses both the unity and the diversity of the body of Christ. In the original the definite article does not appear before body. The thought is not that this particular local assembly constituted the body of Christ. The stress is on quality. Since they are of the body of Christ their actions and their attitudes toward one another should reflect His character.

28. Paul gives a further listing of the gifts with some additions to those included in verses 4-11. Here the stress is twofold. First on the source, God hath set. And secondly on priority. The list is so arranged as to put the most important first and the least important last. In this arrangement apostles are first, tongues are last. It is doubtful that the apostle ever intended that this list be exhaustive.

29-30. Are all apostles? Just as a body possesses many different members, even so the members of the church possess a variety of gifts. It is both absurd and sinful to expect otherwise. Compare the assumption that all believers have the baptism of the Spirit (vs. 13) with the rhetorical question: Do all speak with tongues? The implied answer is no! If all these had the baptism of the Spirit and not all had spoken in tongues, then tongues cannot be the confirming factor of Spirit baptism!

31. But covet earnestly the best gifts. This expression explains why the apostle has arranged the list in verse 28 in order of priority. He wants his readers to be clear in their own minds as to which gifts are the best. Obviously, his intent is to steer them away from the more spectacular gifts, such as tongues. Covet here is not to be construed negatively but has the idea of “earnestly desire.” Yet I show unto you a more excellent way. The import of this statement is to be seen in chapter 13. Paul will show that a better way is not through striving but through loving.

3. The primacy of love. 13:1-13.

Johnson is correct when he notes, “The last clause of chapter 12 has been misunderstood. Many feel that Paul is here showing how the gifts are to be administered, i.e., in love. However, the use of ‘way’ (Gr hodos) in the sense of ‘a road’ instead of the ‘way’ (Gr tropos) in the sense of ‘manner,’ and the statement of 14:1 indicate that Paul was, rather, pointing out a path of life superior to a life spent seeking and displaying of spiritual gifts.” (S. L. Johnson, Wycliffe Bible Commentary, p. 1251). Paul’s interest here is not to instruct his readers how they may best use their gifts, but how to have their priorities straight. It is love for which they should strive, not spiritual gifts. The chapter breaks quite naturally into three sections: the contrast of love, verses 1-3; the character of love, verses 4-7; and the constancy of love, verses 8-13.

a. Contrast of love. 13:1-3.

13:1. Tongues of men and of angels. This expression is important in two ways. First, it shows that the content of chapter thirteen is directed foremost against the abuse of the gift of tongues (contrast 12:28 where tongues is listed last). Secondly, it shows that in the apostle’s mind the gift of tongues involved both known and unknown languages. The Corinthians considered these tongues to be languages of the angels. Such was the association of tongues—speaking in pagan worship at Corinth. When a priest or devotee spoke in tongues it was considered that he spoke in the language of the gods (see J. Dillow, Speaking in Tongues, pp. 12, 13). The apostle is not so lacking in tact as to accuse his readers of actually incorporating a pagan activity into their worship. His approach in the next two chapters is to so circumscribe the exercise of the gift that the inordinate exercise of it will be eliminated.

2. And have not charity. (Gr agapē, love). The AV translation derives from the Latin and unfortunately does a serious injustice to the force of the Greek term. This is ultimately that which acts in conformity to the character and nature of God. It is not benevolence, yet produces it. It is not motivated or moved by external circumstances, yet always acts appropriately in response to them. It is no wonder that the apostle considered that though a man possessed any or all of the gifts but be destitute of love he was nothing.

3. Love has been shown to be superior to the very best of the spiritual gifts. It is also superior to philanthropy, though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and personal dedication, though I give my body to be burned, without love this profiteth me nothing.

b. Character of love. 13:4-7.

4-7. What is the character of love? Paul now proceeds to show the reader the character qualities of love. Suffereth long. It is not easily roused to resentment (cf. Jas 5:7). Is kind (Gr chrēstēuomai). This term appears only here in the New Testament in the finite verb form. It has the idea of “useful,” i.e., inclined to be of good service to others. Vaunteth not itself. It does not sound its own praises. Not puffed up. It is not swelled with pride (cf. 4:6; 8:1). Not easily provoked (lit., “is not provoked or exasperated,” Acts 17:16). Thinketh no evil (“does not reckon evil”). This expression of love does not keep track of the offenses committed against it. Rejoiceth not in iniquity. It does not take delight in that which is offensive to God. But rejoiceth in the truth. This may be taken in an instrumental sense “re-

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

3 And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up,

5 Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil;

6 Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth;

7 Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

joiceth together with truth" (cf. Vincent, Word Studies, II, p. 265), or it may be taken in the locative sense as is reflected in the AV. The latter is probably more consistent with Paul's thought in the context (cf. also Rom 1:8; Jn 3:21; I Jn 1:6). Beareth all things (lit., "covers all things," cf. I Pet 4:8). Believeth all things. This does not suggest that it is gullible, but that it will believe well of others unless convinced otherwise. In any case, it always hopeth all things. Rather than having a negative and critical spirit, it is always positive and hopeful. Endureth all things. This is a military term; it means to sustain the assaults of an enemy (cf. also II Tim 2:10; Heb 10:32; 12:2).

c. Constancy of love. 13:8-13.

Unlike many of the spiritual gifts, love will never be outmoded, unnecessary, or eliminated.

8. Charity never faileth (Gr ekpiptō, falls off, cf. Lk 16:17). Unlike the leaf or the flower, love never fades and falls off (cf. Jas 1:11; I Pet 1:24). Prophecies, they shall fail (lit., "be abolished"). Tongues, they shall cease. The significance of the Greek word (pauō) indicates that tongues would soon be "cut off" as their necessity in the process of New Testament revelation ceased. It is important to note that tongues are never mentioned again in the New Testament after this warning. Knowledge, it shall vanish away ("be abolished"). This is the same word used in reference to prophecy above. This is not knowledge in general but the "gift" of knowledge by direct revelation (cf. 12:8; 13:2).

9-10. For suggests reason. We know in part, and we prophesy in part. Knowledge and prophecy as we now know it are suited only to an imperfect state of existence. That which is perfect. This is best understood in light of I Corinthians 2:6, in the sense of "mature" or "complete" (cf. also Col 3:14; Heb 6:1). Conservative biblical scholars have proposed two main interpretations of perfect. It may be a reference to the completion of the canon of Scripture, with which partial revelation (by knowledge, prophecy, or tongues) came to an end, culminating in a complete revelation of God's Scripture or it may refer to the maturation of the body of Christ (in the sense of Ephesians 4:11-16). Paul employs the neuter because he does not contemplate an individual. Thus, that which is perfect cannot refer to the coming of Christ Himself. Then that which is in part will be done away. Once the perfect has been achieved, there will be no need for that which is immature. It will not be needed or accepted and should not be desired.

11. The apostle illustrates his point by likening it to the maturation of a person from infancy to manhood. A child speaks, reasons, and assimilates knowledge at the level of his maturity. Paul's use of spake . . . understood . . . thought seem to correspond respectively to "tongues," "prophecy," and "knowledge" above. If this is the case, it is reasonable to expect changes to occur. The apostle goes on to say when I became a man, I put away childish things. A child's speech is undeveloped, his understanding crude, and knowledge incomplete. At that time his attention is focused upon developing the skill of speech, coming to terms with truth and assimilating knowledge. But when the child becomes a man his speech becomes subject to his mind, his understanding is tempered, and his knowledge complete. Paul is not implying that they had reached or attained that level of maturity but, akin to Philippians 3:7-15, that is the end toward which they should be striving.

12. Now we see through a glass, darkly (lit., "for yet we see through a mirror in a riddle"). Paul seems to be alluding to the incident in Num 12:8. On another occasion Paul says the writings were an enigma compared to the revelations contained in the gospel (cf. II Cor 3:12-13). But then face to face. The

8 Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

10 But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

13 And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

apostle understands that complete maturity will not be achieved until we see the Lord face to face. At that time we will not only achieve complete maturity but perfect knowledge. As Paul puts it, but then shall I know even as also I am known. The gifts are fragmentary and only a means to an end. Paul's advice is keep your eyes on the goal and not on the means towards achieving that goal.

13. And now abideth faith, hope, charity. Now is best understood in a temporal sense (cf. Rom 8:24; II Cor 5:7; Heb 11:1). If the present Christian experience were to be reduced to three essential qualities they would be faith, hope, and love. The greatest of these is charity. Faith and hope will one day vanish from sight. Love alone abides. Its clearest expression is to be seen on Golgotha's hill. Thus Paul's approach is not to decry the possible abuses at Corinth but to challenge them to something much better.

4. The prominence of prophecy 14:1-40.

While the acquisition and exercise of spiritual gifts in general constituted a problem at Corinth, it appears that the most serious difficulty was centered on the gift of tongues. Earlier (12:10) in Paul's tabulation, he listed tongues among the least of the spiritual gifts. In this chapter he is going to compare it with the greatest of the gifts, i.e., prophecy.

a. In the edification of the assembly. 14:1-17.

Comparing the gift of tongues with prophecy as they are used in the edification of the assembly, Paul, first of all, cites a contrast in usefulness (vss. 1-6); then he notes a contrast in understanding (vss. 7-17).

14:1. Follow after charity (lit., "pursue love"). This ties the preceding thought to what follows (cf. 12:31; 13:13). And desire spiritual gifts. Paul is anxious that his readers do not misunderstand him. He does not intend to mean by what he says in chapter 13 that spiritual gifts have no value at all; his concern there is only that they keep the gifts in the proper perspective. But rather that ye may prophesy (Gr prophētēuo, proclaim a divine revelation). Now, as for desiring spiritual gifts, it is only proper to seek after those gifts which will best fulfill the mandate of love. Since prophecy issues in the greatest benefit to the greatest number of people then it is only appropriate that one seeks that gift above all others.

2. Unknown tongue (lit., "tongue"). Omit unknown throughout this chapter whenever it occurs with tongues as it has no support in the Greek text. For no man understandeth him. That is, apart from an interpreter. Howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries. Even though he may be speaking spiritual mysteries, the benefit to the hearers is nil because they cannot understand. This, of course, is in contrast to the gift of prophecy.

3. But he that prophesieth. Continuing his contrast, Paul returns to prophecy. Speaketh unto men. Communication is taking place. The results are edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

4. On the other hand, He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself. When a person speaks in tongues only one person is benefited. By way of continuing contrast, he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

5. I would that ye all spake with tongues. It must not be misconstrued with Paul's argument that he undervalued the gift of tongues. He did admit its importance. But rather that ye prophesied. Admitting the value of tongues, it would still be better if you prophesied. The reason, of course, is that the church may receive edifying.

6. If I come to you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you? The question is, what benefit is it to you if I come

CHAPTER 14

FOLLOW after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

2 For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God; for no man understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries.

3 But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied: for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?

7 And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?

9 So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful.

15 What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also.

16 Else when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?

17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:

19 Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, than by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

20 Brethren, be not children in understanding; howbeit in malice be ye speaking in tongues. Paul really doesn't answer the question except by way of contrast. Except I shall speak to you. If you are benefited I must speak either by revelation (apostolic gift), or by knowledge (the gift of knowledge) or by prophesying (the gift of prophecy), or by doctrine (the gift of teaching). Any of the above gifts are far superior to the gift of tongues because they communicate and they edify and they profit.

7-8. Even things without life. Paul goes on to add additional examples to prove his point. An instrument giving sound must also be distinctive to be understood whether pipe or harp. This is clearly understood by the soldier who follows the sound of a trumpet. How could he prepare himself to the battle if the signal is uncertain?

9-10. So many kinds of voices in the world. That is, so many kinds of languages. And none of them is without signification. They are all intelligible to those who understand them.

11. On the other hand if I do not know a specific language I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian. Paul's use of "barbarian" here simply has the general sense of "foreigner" (cf. Rom 1:14; Acts 28:24; Col 3:11).

12. Seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church. If you must be zealous of spiritual gifts then seek after one that will benefit the church.

13. Pray that he may interpret (pray in order that he may interpret). Paul is not saying that speaking in a tongue and praying are coterminous, but that if one is seeking to speak in a tongue it would be well to ask God for the gift of interpretation also. Notice that the tongues-speaker was to provide his own interpretation.

14. For indicates the reason for Paul's advice in verse 13. My spirit prayeth. This is a difficult expression but probably means "the Holy Spirit in me" in the sense that my spiritual gift is being exercised. But my understanding is unfruitful. I do not understand what I am saying. This further evidences that "unknown languages" are in view here, else the apostle would have knowledge of what he was saying (cf. Acts 2).

15. What is it then? What is the conclusion to all this discussion? Pray with the spirit . . . sing with the spirit. These expressions must be defined by verse 14. Paul, no doubt, has in mind praying and singing in tongues. Pray with the understanding also . . . and . . . sing with the understanding. If I should pray or sing in tongues then it will also be accompanied with intelligible praying and singing (viz., the tongues interpreted).

16-17. How shall he . . . say Amen at the giving of thanks. Even if a person should bless the Lord in tongues it would be impossible for anyone else to join in because no one would know it. For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified. What has been said may be well and good but no one has been edified.

18-19. I speak with tongues more than ye all. Paul possessed the gift of tongues. It is interesting that this is the only place that he makes mention of it. Yet in the church (emphatic) I had rather speak five words with my understanding . . . than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue. Words have meaning only as they are understood and it is Paul's intent that he might teach others.

c. In the essential purpose. 14:20-25.

20. Continuing his contrast with prophecy Paul goes on to show that in the essential purpose of spiritual gifts, prophecy children, but in understanding be men.

21 In the law it is written, With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord.

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not; but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.

23 If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad?

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all:

25 And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth.

26 How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. Let all things be done unto edifying.

27 If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God.

29 Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge.

30 If any thing be revealed to another was to be preferred. Be not children. This is the second time the apostle has measured their spiritual maturity by this term (cf. 13:11). In understanding be men. Paul associates the gift of tongues with spiritual immaturity. He anticipates that as the church matures her concerns will be less in the arena of the spectacular and more in the stimulation of understanding.

21. In the law it is written. Law has in mind the entire Old Testament Scriptures. In this case he has in mind Isaiah 28:11-12 (cf. Jn 10:34; Rom 3:20).

22-23. Wherefore tongues are for a sign. This is best understood as a general reference to divine power evidenced in the exercise of the gift. It does not profit the believer but them that believe not. Its purpose was to demonstrate divine power to the unbeliever. But prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe. Insofar as the assembly is the gathering of saints and not of unbelievers, prophecy is, by far, the more appropriate gift. Yet Paul's concern goes even beyond this. He asserts that the main purpose of the gift was as a sign. However, if an unbeliever should visit the congregation where gifts are being exercised without regard for order or understanding, the results will be just the opposite. Paul asks, will they not say that ye are mad? In other words, the very purpose of the gift is mitigated by the unbridled exercise of it.

24-25. On the other hand, it is almost impossible to misuse the gift of prophecy. Should an unbeliever wander into the assembly and be exposed to the truth of God being taught through prophecy he is convinced of all, he is judged of all. Thus, instead of being repelled by the service, falling down on his face he will worship God. He will be convinced of his sin, of God's righteousness, and repentance and faith in God. And, so far as Paul is concerned, it is far more important that the unbeliever hear each message and testimony clearly in his own language.

d. In the exercise in the assembly. 14: 26-40.

In the concluding verses Paul circumscribes how these gifts are to be utilized in the assembly. He deals, first of all, with rules regulating the gift of tongues (vss. 26-29) and then rules regulating the gift of prophecy (vss. 30-35). He concludes the chapter with a challenge (vss. 36-40).

26. The key in the exercise of any gift is Let all things be done unto edifying. Throughout this chapter this has been the overriding principle and continues to dominate the apostle's thinking as he regulates the proper exercise of these gifts. Incidentally, this paragraph is also significant because it gives "us the most intimate glimpse we have of the early church at worship. Here we are able to see something of what the early Christians actually did when they assembled to worship God" (L. Morris, The First Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, pp. 198-199).

27. If any man speak. The worship services of the early church do not seem to have been dominated by one individual, rather there seems to be the open and free participation in the worship service by all who would choose to participate. Thus, in this situation if a man should speak in a tongue, Paul says, let it be by two, or at the most by three. It is permissible for as many as three to speak in tongues and that by course. That is, one at a time, not all together. And let one interpret.

28. But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence. To speak in tongues without an interpreter is forbidden in the church.

29-30. Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge. Likewise, those who would share a special truth revealed to them by God were to do so in order and no more than two or three. The only exception to this would be in the event that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace.

31 For ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted.

32 And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.

33 For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints.

34 Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law.

35 And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.

36 What? came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you only?

37 If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.

38 But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.

39 Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues.

40 Let all things be done decently and in order.

that a person felt unusually constrained, while someone was speaking, to inject a thought and in this situation let the first hold his peace. In other words, the new communication was entitled to be heard at once.

31. Ye may all prophesy one by one. Again this is to be understood in the light of verse 29. Paul is not now saying that any number of people may prophesy but that the two or three will prophesy one at a time. And in the case of possible interruption the two are not to prophesy simultaneously, but one at a time.

32-35. And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets. In contrast to tongues where it appears that the spirit of an individual is out of control, in the exercise of the prophetic gift, all is done decently and in order. God is not the author of confusion. The service that is disorderly, confusing, and disruptive is not of God, for God is the author of peace. Let your women keep silence in the churches. Obviously, this must be interpreted in light of 11:5 where it is clear that Paul understood that women were permitted to prophesy and to pray in public worship so long as they were properly dressed. The expression may have reference to speaking in tongues. That is, they were denied the privilege of exercising the gift of tongues in the assembly. Alternatively, it may have reference to what follows. And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home. They were not allowed to disrupt the service by asking questions and talking while the service was going on. Certainly, they were not to speak out in tongues either.

36-38. Paul asks a sarcastic question. What? Came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you only? Are you the only repository of God's truth? If there is anyone in the assembly that considers himself a prophet or spiritual he must acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord. Here Paul unequivocally asserts his apostolic authority. If any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant. If there was anyone who would refuse to acknowledge divine authority he was not going to waste his time trying to convince him.

39. Covet to prophesy . . . not to speak with tongues. Again, Paul compares the two gifts and in so doing asserts the legitimacy of the gift of tongues and the primacy of the gift of prophecy.

40. Let all things be done decently and in order. Public worship was to be reflective of the one to whom it was directed, thus it was to be beautiful and harmonious. While the revelational gift of tongues was still being given, they were to forbid not to speak with tongues. Today, however, this original apostolic gift has ceased and forbidding its misuse by modern day "Corinthian" churches is valid.

E. Doctrine of the Resurrection. 15:1-58.

The only doctrinal "error" to which the apostle addresses himself in this epistle is contained in this chapter. What were the historical factors behind this problem? One possibility is that the individuals to whom Paul addresses himself constituted one of the parties mentioned in 1:12. By process of elimination the party of Apollos is usually suggested. However, this does not agree with what we know of Apollos and of his ministry (cf. also Acts 18:27-28; I Cor 16:12). Another possibility is that they were the moral libertines mentioned in chapter 6 and against whom the apostle urges the resurrection in 6:14. The problem with this is if they doubted the resurrection, Paul could hardly have used this as an argument for moral purity. Another view is that the problem came from converted Sadducees (cf., also Acts 24:6-9; 26:6-8). However, there is no evidence of any such maverick breed at Corinth. Others suggest that the opponents of the doctrine were Epicureans (note the reference to material indulgence in 15:32). However, again there is no indication that such a party existed in the Corinthian assembly. Furthermore, the reference in 15:32 argues that the careless life-style is a consequence and not a cause of the denial of the resurrection. Probably the best view understands this problem in light of Acts 17:32. The tenets of Greek platonic philosophy had generally pervaded the Hellenistic world. Generally it was considered that the material universe was unsuited to a spiritual existence. The Gnostics, for example, even went so far as to suggest that the body was intrinsically evil. It is this kind of skepticism that formed the background for both I Corinthians 15 and Colossians 2:8-23. See also II Timothy 2:17-18.

Paul develops his thought first, by defending the doctrine of the resurrection (15:1-34) and second, by developing the doctrine of the Resurrection (15:35-58). In the opening section he shows that: (a) Resurrection is vital to the historical preaching of the gospel (vss. 1-19); (b) Resurrection is vital to the prophetic preaching of the gospel (vss. 20-28); and (c) Resurrection is vital in suffering persecution for the gospel (vss. 29-34).

1. A defense of the doctrine of the Resurrection (based on known truth). 15:1-34.

a. Resurrection is vital to the historical preaching of the gospel. 15:1-19.

15:1-2. Moreover, tells us that Paul has finished his answers to the Corinthians' questions and he now goes on to a new subject. I declare unto you, primarily looks ahead to verses 3 and 4. The gospel which I preached unto you. The good news which the Corinthians have received . . . stand . . . are saved. Paul is now at the very heart of the gospel message. Unless ye have believed in vain. In vain may mean "without cause," i.e., blind faith (cf. Gal 2:21). Or it may mean "without effect," i.e., to no purpose (cf. Gal 3:4; 4:11). The latter idea seems to be best. If, as some are saying in Corinth, there is no resurrection, then faith is vain and worthless (cf. vs. 14).

3-4. First of all, that is, in order of priority. I also received. Paul is not speaking of his personal salvation experience but the fact that the gospel which he preached was from direct revelation of God (cf. 11:23; Gal 1:12). Four vital truths are asserted here, identified by the word that. That Christ died for our sins. This is a substitutionary and propitiatory sacrifice (cf. Rom 3:23-26). That he was buried. This evidences the reality and totality of his death. That he rose again. The Greek perfect tense stresses the certainty of the fact. According to the scriptures. The facts of the gospel are not only important historically, but prophetically as well. They occurred as had been predicted (cf. Jn 20:9; Acts 26:23; Ps 16:10).

5-7. That he was seen of Cephas. The fourth vital truth of the gospel is that Christ appeared after the resurrection, not to a few but to Cephas, then of the twelve: After that . . . of above five hundred brethren at once. It is not certain when this last event occurred. The most likely possibility is Matthew 28:16-20. Since Jesus had previously announced this meeting (cf. Mt 26:32; 28:10, 16) it is unlikely that anyone would have intentionally missed it. Seen of James. Probably the Lord's brother (Mt 13:55). He was earlier mentioned as an unbeliever (cf. Jn 7:5) and later with the assembly of believers (cf. Acts 1:14; 12:17; 15:13; 21:18). One wonders if this was not the turning point of his life.

8-9. Last of all he was seen of me also. In Paul's characteristically self-effacing way, he cites the fact that he too had the honor of seeing the risen Lord (cf. Acts 9:1-6). For I am least of the apostles. Not simply because he was the last to see the risen Lord but because he was not meet (unworthy). Paul has not yet recovered from the "wonder of it all" that he should be elevated

MOREOVER, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand;

2 By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain.

3 For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures;

4 And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures:

5 And that he was seen of Cēphas, then of the twelve:

6 After that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once: of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen of James; then of all the apostles.

8 And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time.

9 For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

11 Therefore whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

12 Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen:

14 And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

16 For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised:

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins.

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

19 If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

20 But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept.

21 For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

to the honor and office of apostleship, because I persecuted the church of God.

10-11. But by the grace of God I am what I am. Paul does not magnify his personal credentials but only the sovereign grace of God. Yet this least of the apostles labored more abundantly than they all. Whether this is taken to mean any of the apostles individually or all of them collectively the intent of the apostle is not to boast but to magnify the grace of God which was with me . . . so we preach. Paul's message and that of the other apostles is the same. Furthermore, both included the message of the resurrection. And so ye believed. If some of the Corinthians are now questioning the resurrection they are departing from their initial starting point. If they believed the message of the gospel they believed in the resurrection.

12. This verse stands as a focal point around which the first nineteen verses revolve. Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead directs our attention to the first eleven verses. How say some among you that there is no resurrection? This question looks ahead to verses thirteen through nineteen. Paul has established first of all that resurrection is an essential fact of the gospel. He now tabulates the logical consequences of denying the resurrection.

13. Then is Christ not risen. The first consequence of denying the resurrection is that Christ is still in the grave. The nature of Paul's argument here does not suggest that his objectors admitted the resurrection of Christ, only that it led to an unthinkable conclusion for any genuine believer.

14-19. The logic is inescapable. If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain. The proclamation of the gospel as outlined in verses 1-11 is hollow. Not only that, but your faith is also vain, i.e., "groundless." Faith in a dead Saviour is both preposterous and pathetic. And not only so, but we are found false witnesses of God (lit., false witnesses against God). If Paul's preaching affirms something that God did not really accomplish, his message and ministry are opposed to God. They perpetrate a lie about Him. Paul summarizes his logic here and goes on to suggest yet another consequence. Ye are yet in your sins. Since the resurrection of Christ is essential to our justification (Rom 4:25), then the denial of it vitiates the forgiveness of sins. Not only that, but they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. "Fall asleep in Christ" is used to speak of those who die in Christ (cf. I Thess 4:14 and Rev 14:13). "Perish" is tantamount to "perdition." Only is to be taken with the entire opening clause. If our hope in Christ does not take us beyond this present life, then we are of all men most miserable. Indeed, we are both deceived and unwitting deceivers. What a sad lot among men the Christian becomes.

Having shown the relationship of the doctrine of resurrection to biblical soteriology, Paul now goes on to show its vital link to biblical eschatology.

b. Resurrection is vital to the prophetic preaching of the gospel.

20. The first important truth is that Christ has become the first fruits of them that slept (cf. Lev 23:9-14). The "first fruits" in Israel always anticipated a harvest.

21. For since by man came death is to be understood in the light of the parallel idea in verse 22. By man came also the resurrection of the dead. If the death which Adam brought is physical death then the life which Christ brings also includes physical life.

22. As in Adam all die. The plight of all the descendants of Adam is that they must pay the consequences of his sin. Even so in Christ shall all be made alive. The two occurrences of all are to be understood in a restricted sense. In the first instance it is qualified in Adam. In the second instance it is qualified "in 23 But every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power.

25 For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

27 For he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him.

28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.

29 Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?

30 And why stand we in jeopardy every hour?

31 I protest by your rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily.

Christ." Paul does not subscribe to universalism, i.e., that all are saved, as some liberal theologians aver: it is only in Christ that the sinner receives life.

23-26. Order (lit., rank). Christ the first fruits. He was the first to experience the resurrection of the body from the dead. Afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. When Christ comes for the church at the Rapture, then the believers will also experience the resurrection (cf. I Thess 3:13; 4:14-19). Then suggests an interval in the same way afterward (cf. vs. 23) suggests an interval of an indeterminate length of time. The end refers to the end of the kingdom of God. At that time he will have put down all rule.

27-28. Then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him. This is a difficult expression and has often been misunderstood to suggest that the apostle subordinated the Son to the Father. However, two facts must be accounted for here. First, when Paul says that the Son is subject to the Father he is not speaking of the Son in terms of his essence, but in terms of his function, or ministry, as the incarnate Son. Second, the force of Paul's statement is best understood dispensationally. At this present time the administration of the messianic kingdom is given to the Son (cf. Mt 28:18). However, at the conclusion of the messianic kingdom this function will be returned to the triune God that God may be all in all.

Not only is the resurrection vital to both the content and the implications of the gospel but such a hope is also vital to the enduring of suffering for the gospel.

29. The expression they . . . which are baptized for the dead is obscure. The practice of vicarious baptism such as that which is practiced by Mormons today, appeared as early as the second century (Leon Morris, The First Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, p. 219). Some suppose that this custom had already been introduced into Corinth (Hodge, Commentary on the First Epistle to the Corinthians, p. 337). It is extremely doubtful that the apostle would have made reference to this heretical practice without, in the same breath, condemning it. The context clearly indicates a different concept. Two more satisfactory views are as follows. First, the expression may refer to young converts who took the place of the older brethren in the church who had died so that it would be properly rendered "baptized in the place of" (Gr hyper) which has this sense (cf. II Cor 5:15; Phm 13).

Since the context centers on the reality of the resurrection, it seems that Paul would be questioning why they are continuing to baptize new converts "over" or "in place of" the dead ones, if there is no resurrection, since baptism symbolizes our death and resurrection. To continue to baptize new converts, then, in place of the dead ones, would be meaningless if there were to be no real resurrection of the dead.

A second alternative is that the expression is to be taken synonymously with verse 30, thus being rendered "baptized with reference to the dead." This would be a nonsacerdotal use of the term "baptism." That is, the people of whom Paul was speaking were being literally immersed in such severe persecution that they were dying for their faith.

30. Why stand we in jeopardy every hour? Certainly if there is no resurrection, there is no sense in suffering persecution for Christ. On the contrary, it is only logical that one would do whatever is necessary to prolong life on earth.

31. I die daily. This does not teach that Paul mortified the flesh every day. The context tells us that he, in effect, faced the wild beasts every day. Paul's life was in such constant jeopardy

32 If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Eph'e-sus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to morrow we die.

33 Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners.

34 Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame.

35 But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?

36 Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die:

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain:

38 But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds.

40 There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

41 There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.

42 So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption:

43 It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power:

44 It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.

45 And so it is written, The first man that he never knew when he might be called upon to give his life for the gospel.

32-33. What advantageth it me? If one's existence is terminated in the arena for the sake of a gospel which can only provide empty hopes we may as well eat and drink; for tomorrow we die. Borrowing a proverb from the Greek poet Menander, Paul warns evil communications corrupt good manners. Evil is contagious. By this the apostle implies that those who are denying the resurrection are in fact false teachers.

34. Awake to righteousness and sin not. Wake up to righteousness, open your eyes to the delusion of your spiritual superiority. For some have not the knowledge of God. The denial of the resurrection suggests that those who hold to such a view are literally "ignorant of God" (cf. Mt 28:22). I speak this to your shame. It is both incredible and shameful that such a church so gifted to God could have allowed persons in their assembly to have called such a cardinal truth into question.

2. A development of the doctrine of the Resurrection (based on revelation). 15:35-38.

In the first half of this chapter Paul argues on the basis of known truth and thereby commends the preaching of the resurrection. In the remaining part of the chapter he develops the doctrine, based on new revelation, to provide his readers with insights into the blessed hope of the believer.

a. The nature of resurrection for the dead. 15:35-49.

35-36. The first question Paul answers is How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? While both questions are distinct they must be taken together. The first deals with how life can come from death and the second deals with the nature of the resurrection body. The first question is answered with an analogy from common life. That which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die. Whenever a seed is sown in the ground it must first die before it can germinate (cf. Jn 12:24). As to the second question the apostle requires more explanation.

37-38. Thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain. That which is produced is very different from that which is planted. A grain is sown, a plant is the result. God giveth it a body. All of nature illustrates the providential control of God. The precise nature of the body of every living thing is determined by the good pleasure of God.

39-41. All flesh is not the same flesh. Furthermore, it is clear in nature that diversity exists among all living beings. Such diversity is not only reflected in the earthly sphere but also in the heavenly.

42. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is to be understood in the context of reaping and sowing. It thus reflects the same principle of unity and diversity. The resurrection body is related to the earthly body in the same sense that the plant is related to the seed. Yet, it will be different. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption.

43-44. Paul enlarges upon the contrast between the two. The one is sown in dishonor . . . weakness . . . a natural body. It is raised in glory . . . power . . . spiritual.

45. So it is written. Tantamount to saying, "and this agrees with Scripture." Adam was made a living soul seems to have in

I CORINTHIANS 15:46

Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit.

46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven.

48 As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed.

52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

55 O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

56 The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law.

57 But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

58 Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for-mind the earthly animal nature given to Adam in the original creation. This seems to suit the parallel ideas in verses 46 through 49. The last Adam was made a quickening spirit (lit., “the last Adam became a quickening spirit”). The expression last Adam was coined by the Apostle Paul as a reference to Christ (cf. also Rom. 5:14). The contrast here is not so much between the soul and the spirit as it is between “living” (Gr zao) and “life-giving” (Gr zoopoieō). The principle of life is common with all men. The last Adam is infinitely more than that (Jn 5:26). The one partakes of temporality, the other of eternity.

46-48. However, it was the natural which came first; it was the spiritual which came afterward. Adam is of the earth, Christ is the Lord from heaven. The former is thus earthly, the latter is heavenly.

49. The certainty of the resurrection is verified by the reality of human, earthly existence. As we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. Thus the human body, instead of becoming an argument against the resurrection becomes an argument in its favor.

b. The nature of resurrection for the living. 15:50-58.

But what of those who are alive at the coming of Christ? How shall they be distinguished from those who have died? Paul's final statement in the chapter is to turn his attention upon the nature of the Resurrection for those who are still living at the time of the second coming of Christ.

50. First the statement of a principle, flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. A change is mandatory if the believer is ever to realize his promised blessings.

51. I show you a mystery (cf. 2:7). Not all believers will sleep (“die”) but we can all be assured of one thing. We shall all be changed. How will that occur?

52. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, expresses the suddenness with which it will occur. The time is indicated at the last trump. This is not the last trump of Revelation 11:15 but the last trump of I Thessalonians 4:16. It is so designated because it signals the end of the present age. Two groups are distinguished. The dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. The term dead refers to those who have died in Christ. The term we refers to those who are still living at the time of the Rapture.

53-54. Both groups are alike in that they are corruptible and mortal. That to which both groups are changed is likewise the same, designated as incorruption and immortality. Death is swallowed up in victory is taken from Isaiah 25:8.

55. Such hope and assurance issues in a great song of triumph. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

56. The sting of death is sin and Paul would answer “and yet am I forgiven.” The strength of sin is the law, and Paul would exclaim “and yet I am pardoned.”

57-58. No man can take credit for this victory. It comes through our Lord Jesus Christ. And this blessed hope, this blessed assurance, issued forth in a challenge in verse 58. Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding. How does this relate to the doctrine of resurrection? Paul answers ye know that your labor is not in vain. For Paul it was more than faith. It was asmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

knowledge. It was the sure conviction that one day he would share in the glory of the resurrection.

V. CONCLUSION. 16:1-24.

The concluding chapter is taken up with practical and personal matters concerning: (a) The contribution for the support of the Jerusalem church (vss. 1-9); (b) Paul's personal efforts on behalf of the Corinthian assembly (vss. 10-12). And then a concluding challenge (vss. 13-24). It is here that the apostle reiterates the theme of the epistle, i.e., called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord (1:9) in the most practical of terms.

A. The Contribution. 16:1-9.

1. Its instruction. 16:1-4.

16:1. Now concerning. The common formula used in this epistle to introduce matters about which the Corinthians had queried the apostle. In this case it had to do with the collection for the saints. The believers at Corinth were aware that the apostle was gathering funds for the Jerusalem church, and apparently they had written to inquire to what extent they could participate in this collection. I have given order suggests that this was not an optional matter for the Corinthian believers any more than it was for the churches of Galatia.

2. The procedure by which they were to gather these funds was Upon the first day of the week. Their giving was to be systematic and planned. Let every one of you lay by him in store. This obligation extended to everyone. As God hath prospered him. The amount of each gift was proportionate to the giver's income. That there be no gatherings when I come. The apostle was desirous that the collection be taken before he came. This was for two reasons. First, through systematic and planned giving he knew that the amount would be more. Second, he did not want to apply pressure when he came.

3-4. And when I come. While his arrival in Corinth was yet indefinite, Paul is stressing here that they be prepared with the collection at any time. Whomsoever you shall approve by your letters. Placing himself above suspicion, the apostle shows that he is not so much interested in handling their money as in assuring that it got to Jerusalem. He suggests that they appoint stewards to carry their money. And if it be meet. If it be substantial enough that I go also, then they would all go together. Paul was willing, if their contribution was especially large, to rearrange his schedule and go with the group to Jerusalem.

2. Its collection. 16:5-9.

5. Now I will come unto you, when I shall pass through Macedonia. Paul here changes his original itinerary and subsequently came under the charge of being fickle (cf. II Cor 1:15-17).

6-7. Paul's plans at this time are to spend the winter at Corinth. If the Lord permit. The apostle was always subject to the will of God above his own.

8. I will tarry at Ephesus till Pentecost. The time is near the close of Paul's three-year stay at Ephesus and the season is early spring.

9. A great door. Door is used here metaphorically for "opportunity." Many adversaries. This is best taken with the previous expression. The apostle seems to have in mind his

CHAPTER 16

NOW concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Ga-lā'tia, even so do ye.

2 Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.

3 And when I come, whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your liberality unto Jerusalem.

4 And if it be meet that I go also, they shall go with me.

5 Now I will come unto you, when I shall pass through Macedonia: for I do pass through Macedonia.

6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may bring me on my journey whithersoever I go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way; but I trust to tarry a while with you, if the Lord permit.

8 But I will tarry at Eph'e-sus until Pentecost.

9 For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries.

10 Now if Ti-mō'the-us come, see that he may be with you without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.

11 Let no man therefore despise him: but conduct him forth in peace, that he may come unto me: for I look for him with the brethren.

12 As touching our brother Apollos, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his will was not at all to come at this time; but he will come when he shall have convenient time.

13 Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.

14 Let all your things be done with charity.

15 I beseech you, brethren, (ye know the house of Stēph'a-nas, that it is the firstfruits of A-chā'ia, and that they have addicted themselves to the ministry of the saints,)

16 That ye submit yourselves unto such, and to every one that helpeth with us, and laboureth.

17 I am glad of the coming of Stēph'a-nas and Fōr-tu-nā'tus and A-chā'i-cus: for that which was lacking on your part they have supplied.

18 For they have refreshed my spirit and yours: therefore acknowledge ye them that are such.

19 The churches of Asia salute you. Ā'q'ui-la and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the church that is in their house.

20 All the brethren greet you. Greet ye one another with an holy kiss.

21 The salutation of me Paul with mine own hand.

22 If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be A-nāth'e-ma Mār'an-ā'tha.

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

pending trip through Macedonia and is accounting for why he is staying a little longer in Ephesus (cf. 15:32; Acts 19:1-4).

B. The Collector. 16:10-12.

10. Now if Timothy come (cf. Acts 19:22). At this time Timothy was traveling through Macedonia and the apostle anticipated that he would be reaching Corinth eventually (cf. 4:17). See that he may be with you without fear. The apostle hoped that the Corinthians would not intimidate Timothy, being a somewhat young and timid individual (cf. I Tim 4:12; 5:21-23; II Tim 1:6-8; 2:1, 3, 15; 4:1-2). Paul commends his ministry to them for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.

11. Let no man therefore despise him. This advice is reminiscent of the advice given to Timothy in I Timothy 4:12.

12. As touching our brother Apollos. Paul had asked Apollos if he would be willing to go to Corinth in order to adjudicate some of their problems. Apparently, at that time he was not able but he will come when he shall have convenient time. Now, Paul begins a series of closing remarks, exhortations, challenges, and greetings.

C. The Close. 16:13-23.

13. As a military leader he exhorts the brethren to Watch ye, i.e., be wakeful and alert to your spiritual enemies. Stand fast in the faith. Don't be unsettled in your mind. Don't be afraid to be firm in your convictions. Don't be as the Sophists who called everything into question. Quit you like men. Be courageous. Be strong. Characteristic of Paul, he sees the Christian life as though he were in the arena. Faith, conviction, and courage are the essential ingredients for success and victory.

14. So that his readers do not understand his words to legitimize a careless and uncaring attitude, Paul moderates his advice with Let all your things be done with charity. This, of course, calls to mind all that he said in chapter thirteen.

15-16. The house of Stephanas (cf. 1:16) Addicted themselves, i.e., they devoted themselves in a self-imposed duty to the believers. This was the very first family to receive Christ in Paul's ministry in Achaia. This does not conflict with Romans 16:5, which in the better texts do not read "Achaia" but "Asia."

17. Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus were three members of the Corinthian assembly who ministered to Paul's needs in Ephesus. Note the Latin names. This is not surprising since the new city of Corinth was largely composed of Romans.

18. They . . . refreshed my spirit and yours. Here Paul has in mind both their ministry to him, in terms of reporting the progress of the Corinthian assembly, and their ministry to the Corinthians in terms of sharing the ministry Paul had with them in Ephesus.

19. Aquila and Priscilla. This couple, having been exiled from Rome (Acts 18:2), first met Paul in Corinth. They have since moved on to Ephesus (cf. also Rom 16:3-5). The church that is in their house. Apparently, wherever this couple went, they made their home a sanctuary where Christ was honored and believers gathered to share the Word together and worship.

20-24. Greet ye one another with a holy kiss (cf. Rom 16:16; II Cor 13:12; I Thess 5:26; I Pet 5:14). In the custom of the day, this was an expression of mutual affection and friendship. In other words, they were to put away their divisive spirit and unite in the bonds of love. With mine own hand has reference to the salutation, not the entire epistle. In Galatians 6:11, Paul remarks that his writing of that epistle with his own hand was something unusual due to his poor sight. Ordinarily, he used a secretary to whom he would dictate his letters and then he would write the salutation with his own hand to authenticate it (Col 4:18; II Thess 3:17). Anathema, "devoted to destruction" (cf. Rom 9:3; I Cor 12:3; Gal 1:18-19). Maranatha. Properly, two words in the Aramaic. It expresses one of two possible ideas. It may be taken in the sense of "our Lord is come," signifying the incarnation. Or it may mean "our Lord cometh," signifying the Second Coming. The latter seems to be in view here. It is much like John's concluding remarks in Revelation: "Even so, come, Lord Jesus" (Rev 22:20). My love be with you all. Only their spiritual father could speak to them in this way. His love is extended not only to those who agree with him, but to all in the assembly, even his enemies. The greatest example these Christians have of how to live the Christian life is the great apostle himself.

24 My love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

The Second Epistle To The CORINTHIANS

INTRODUCTION

II Corinthians is actually the fourth letter that Paul wrote to Corinth (see Introduction to I Cor). A "previous epistle" was written prior to I Corinthians, and then another "sorrowful letter" was written between I Corinthians and II Corinthians. The second canonical epistle has several features which distinguish it. His first epistle is both practical and instructional but this epistle is intensely personal and autobiographical. In fact, its style appears so spontaneous and emotional that some have questioned its internal unity. For this reason a word needs to be said about the integrity of the epistle.

Authorship. Although the historical evidence is not as early as that of I Corinthians, it is almost equally as strong. External evidence suggests that the second epistle to the Corinthians had not yet reached Rome by the end of the first century (A.D. 96) since it is not quoted by Clement of Rome. However, it was known to Polycarp who quotes 4:14. II Corinthians is further attested in the letter to Diognetus, Athanagoras, Theophilus of Antioch, Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Irenaeus, the Muratorian Canon, and Marcion's Apostolicon. It is also found in the Old Syriac and the Old Latin, along with the first epistle. By the end of the second century the attestation is replete.

The internal evidence is also very strong. The writer calls himself Paul (1:1; 10:1). Likewise, conservative scholarship is unanimous in its agreement that the pauline authorship of this epistle is unmistakable, not only in content but in style and vocabulary.

Background. II Corinthians is written to the assembly which was founded on Paul's first visit to that city. Since his departure and subsequent ministry in Ephesus, the apostle has learned a great deal about the problems fomenting in this little assembly. Problems with worldliness, internal wranglings, and doctrinal defections continue to fester in spite of Paul's efforts in the first epistle.

Opposition to Paul's ministry continues to mount, especially coming from the party which associated itself with "Christ" (cf. 10:7; 11:13). The leader of this group seems to have been especially obnoxious to the apostle (10:7-11). When the news of these conditions reached Paul at Ephesus he made a brief visit to Corinth in order to deal with them (cf. 2:1; 12:14, 21; 13:1-2). At this time the personal vendetta against the Apostle Paul himself was shown. Upon his return to Ephesus the apostle was so distressed he penned a letter to the church of such a severe nature that he later regretted having written it. This he sent to them by Titus (2:3-4, 9; 7:8-12). It is probable that this letter was lost in its entirety. While some have suggested that this letter is preserved in II Corinthians 10-13 (Plummer, Commentary on Second Corinthians, p. xviii), this theory is quite unlikely (Bernard, Expositor's Greek Testament, vs. 3, pp. 21-27). The charges leveled against the apostle by this group are indicated in a number of passages in the epistle. For example, he was accused of being fickle (1:17), authoritarian (1:24), ministering without proper credentials (3:1), cowardice (10:1, 10), failure to maintain proper clerical dignity (11:7), presumption (10:13-17), and fleshliness (10:2). Likewise, the apostle has a few things to say about his accusers. For example, they corrupted the Word (2:17), they were deceptive (3:1), they were Jews masquerading as ministers of Christ (11:23-27), they were domineering (11:20), and bold (11:21), they lacked the spiritual courage to step out on their own and start their own ministry (11:23-27). Thus it was no small wonder that the apostle was seriously concerned about the spiritual well-being of the church at Corinth.

Titus was to deliver the "sorrowful letter," then return to Paul with a report of the response of the Corinthians and subsequent development. However, Paul had to leave Ephesus earlier than scheduled because of the uprising of the silversmiths (cf. Acts 20:1). He stopped at Troas and apparently was engaging in a very fruitful evangelistic effort in that city. However, Titus tarried much longer than the overstrained and impetuous apostle could stand. He discontinued his ministry in Troas and crossed over to Macedonia, expecting to meet him somewhere along the Via Egnatia, the great highway which connected the chief Macedonian towns along the coast. It was therefore with great relief that the apostle received Titus' report that they had been genuinely grieved by the painful letter (7:9), the offending person had been dealt with (2:6-8), the great majority of the Corinthians were really loyal to the apostle as he had suspected all along (7:14), and Titus himself had developed a new appreciation for this assembly (7:15). Thus it is not surprising in the first seven chapters of II Corinthians to see the apostle pour out his thanksgiving to God in encouragement at the progress this assembly was making. Thus, he sat down immediately and penned II Corinthians from Macedonia (2:3; 7:5-7; 8:1; 9:2-4), probably from the city of Philippi.

Purpose. Thiessen has ably summarized Paul's reasons for writing II Corinthians. He did so in order: (1) to explain his sufferings in Asia (1:3-11); (2) to justify himself in his change of plans about returning to Corinth (1:12-2:4); (3) to instruct them as to the treatment of the offender (2:5-11); (4) to express his joy at the good news of their progress (2:12-13); (5) to attain full reconciliation with himself (6:11-7:16); (6) to urge the Corinthians to participate in the collection for the church at Jerusalem (chs. 8-9); and (7) to establish his authority as an apostle (10:1-13:10).

The unity of II Corinthians has frequently been called into question (cf. Alford, Zahn, Lake, Moffatt, Kummel, and Plummer). However, there is absolutely no external evidence to support the contention that II Corinthians was ever more than one unit. The arguments rest entirely upon internal evidence such as the change of tone in chapters 10-13, certain supposed inconsistencies in 1-9 compared with 10-13, and the reconciling of some statements with Paul's geographical location at the time of writing (10:16). None of these objections bears a great deal of weight. The basic tenor of the epistle is less formal than others of Paul's epistles. It is much more emotional, and therefore, there are more abrupt changes in his thought. Yet the main divisions are clearly visible. Thiessen is probably correct to suggest that the changes in tone between chapters 1-9 and 10-13 are likely due to the particular group Paul is addressing in each of these sections (Thiessen, Introduction to the New Testament, p. 210). This peculiarity in style can be demonstrated, not only in other biblical literature, but in secular literature as well.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-11.

A. Salutation. 1:1-2.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timothy our brother, unto the church of God which is at Corinth, with all the saints which are in all A-chā'ia:

1:1. Paul, an apostle. Paul characteristically begins, as in his other epistles, by establishing his authority and his commission (cf. Eph 1:1; Col 1:1; I Tim 1:1; II Tim 1:1; Gal 1:1). This ministry was commissioned him of Jesus Christ by the will of

2 Grace be to you and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort;

4 Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.

5 For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.

God. Paul takes for granted that he fulfills any requisites for the office of apostleship. His is no usurpation of power, but obedience to the call of God. And Timothy. This companion of Paul is not mentioned in the introduction to I Corinthians, presumably because Timothy had already been sent to Corinth (I Cor 4:17; 16:10). That he appears here indicates that he has since rejoined the apostle, given his report concerning the affairs at Corinth, and traveled with him to Macedonia. The epistle is primarily addressed to the church of God which is at Corinth. That is, the local assembly. But, that it was intended also as a circular letter to be read by other churches is implied by the fact that he also addresses all the saints that are in all Achaia. This would embrace at least the Christians that were in Athens (cf. Acts 17:34) and in Cenchreae, the eastern port of Corinth (cf. Rom 16:1). Saints calls to mind all who have been set apart by God and walk in newness of life (cf. Rom 1:7; I Cor 1:2; 6:11; II Cor 5:17).

2. Grace be to you and peace. For Paul, grace always precedes peace. Until one has received the grace of God he can know nothing of His peace. Grace (Gr charis) is the infinite love of God that enables Him to pour out infinite favor on the object loved without receiving anything in return. It demands no merit and incurs no obligation. It has been extended to all of humanity by the cross work of Jesus Christ which alone makes God's love available to mankind (I Jn 2:2). Anything that we might place between the provision of God's grace and the power of God's grace has been received by faith. There is nothing that brings this peace so much as the undiluted gospel of God's grace (cf. Eph 2:14; Phil 4:7; Col 1:20; 3:15). From God our Father and from the Lord Jesus Christ. The single preposition (Gr apo) links the Father and the Son, thus affirming unequivocally the deity of Christ. The reference is to the eternal Father and the incarnate Son (cf. also 13:14).

B. Thanksgiving, 1:3-11.

3-4. Blessed (Gr eulogētos, "well spoken of"). This term is used in the New Testament of God and so here. It is a term of adoration and praise. In consideration of God's grace and peace (vs. 2) and in anticipation of His mercies and comforts (vs. 3b) such a pronouncement from the apostle is understood. For he contemplates both who God is and what God does. Even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort. The mercies in view here, no doubt, include such great verities as deliverance from the world, sin, and Satan to participation in sonship, light, and life. But the force is even more than this. The stress is that the Father is "characterized" by mercy (cf. Ps 86:5; Dan 9:9; Mic 7:18). Comfort (Gr paraklēsis) is cognate to "the Comforter" of John 16:7. This term does not connote "sympathy" as much as "empathy" or "encouragement." It has the idea of someone coming alongside to provide support. Since the Comforter abides within (cf. Jn 14:16-17) a twofold process is implied: strength for the inner man and encouragement for the outer man. Paul now turns his thoughts to the everyday problems of life and he does so in the context of the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation. In the general scope of life, God's comfort extends to every area. But the purpose emphasized here is not just for our own good, but that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble. God's comfort is transferable and intended to be shared.

5. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ. As the problems increase so does the consolation. Both, in this case, are measured by the experience of Christ (cf. Lk 24:26, 46; Phil 3:10; Col 1:24; I Pet 1:11). Paul's use of the term "abound" is significant throughout this epistle (cf. II Cor 4:15; 8:2, 7-8, 12).

6 And whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and salvation, which is effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.

7 And our hope of you is stedfast, knowing, that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, inasmuch that we despaired even of life:

9 But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead:

10 Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us;

11 Ye also helping together by prayer for us, that for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons thanks may be given by many on our behalf.

6-7. Many ancient manuscripts differ in the order of the clauses in these verses. But the sense in every case is basically the same: "if we are afflicted, it is for your good, or if we are comforted, it is for your good." Everything else, in these verses, is subordinated to these two main ideas. Paul does not glory in suffering, per se. But, he knows that the fact of suffering identifies us with Christ and with His church (cf. also Rom 8:17). He also knows that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation. If we should suffer together, then we know that we shall also rejoice together. Those who share mutual suffering and affliction share also in the joy of consolation. This relationship of intimacy implied by the apostle's terminology stands in stark contrast to the divisive spirit that persisted in Corinth. His readers could not help but compare their own situation against the feelings and experiences expressed by Paul.

8-10. Paul draws upon his recent experience to do two things: to share with his readers his needs and concerns, and also, to explain his change in plans. We despaired even of life and the expression, we had the sentence of death in ourselves are parallel concepts. Paul's condition, due to external pressures and physical limitations, reached the point where the only way out, visible to him, was death (cf. Acts 14:19). Yet God's purpose, even in this, was being fulfilled so that Paul would come to the end of himself and trust in God which raiseth the dead. For Paul has initiated a process of faith that is viewed in a threefold sense, Who delivered us (past) . . . and doth deliver (present) . . . he will yet deliver (future). Faith liberated Paul from bondage to his circumstances and the fear of death (cf. Heb 2:14-15).

11. Helping together probably has reference to their cooperation in interceding on his behalf with the other churches. Paul's thinking in this verse is very much like that in verses 6-7. Since there were many who were sharing together in prayer for us, then the fact of Paul's deliverance may also elicit thanks . . . by many on our behalf. The preposition by (Gr dia) is best rendered "by means of." Thus the sense of the verse is: as health was rendered by means of prayer so also thanksgiving to God is rendered by means of many who shared in that prayer.

II. APOLOGY FOR PAUL'S MINISTRY. 1:12-7:16.

A. The Conduct of Paul. 1:12-2:17.

In this opening section the Apostle Paul has three concerns: (1) his change of plans (1:22-2:4); (2) his charge concerning the offender (2:5-11); and (3) his confidence in the Corinthians to do what is right (2:12-17). In the opening section he alludes to his desire to come again to Corinth. It was on this score that he had been criticized by his enemies in the church. They accused him of promising them a visit with no intention of ever coming. It is this allegation that the apostle answers here.

I. Paul's change of plans. 1:12-2:4.

a. His concern. 1:12-14.

12. The testimony of our conscience may suggest the "ground" of Paul's rejoicing, or the "substance" of his rejoicing. The latter idea seems to fit best with what follows. Paul was able to rejoice in a ministry of simplicity and godly sincerity.

12 For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to you-ward.

13 For we write none other things unto you, than what ye read or acknowledge; and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end;

13-14. For we write none other things unto you, than what ye read or acknowledge. Paul's epistles are characterized by the same degree of honesty and integrity that characterize his life. Ye have acknowledged us in part. Most in Corinth stood with the apostles in affirming his integrity. On the other hand, there

14 As also ye have acknowledged us in part, that we are your rejoicing, even as ye also are ours in the day of the Lord Jesus.

II CORINTHIANS 1:15

15 And in this confidence I was minded to come unto you before, that ye might have a second benefit;

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on my way toward Judæa.

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according to the flesh, that with me there should be yea yea, and nay nay?

18 But as God is true, our word toward you was not yea and nay.

19 For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and Sil-vānus and Timōthe-us, was not yea and nay, but in him was yea.

20 For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us.

21 Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God:

22 Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts.

23 Moreover I call God for a record upon my soul, that to spare you I came not as yet unto Corinth.

was a small contingency of individuals who did not. We. This is an editorial use of the pronoun to refer to the apostle himself. Your rejoicing. Those who appreciated the apostle's ministry. Ye are also ours. Likewise, the apostle rejoiced in those who received his ministry. In the day of the Lord Jesus. In the day when all the secrets of men are revealed, Paul was confident that these believers would have the assurance that their faith in him was not misplaced.

15-16. In this confidence refers to the confidence which elicited their rejoicing in the previous verse. I was minded to come unto you. In Paul's initial itinerary he intended to go immediately from Ephesus to Corinth. Second benefit must not be misconstrued as Paul's second visit to them, since he had already visited them twice (cf. 12:14). But, that in his trip he would be seeing them twice: as he explains, to pass by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia unto you. Thus he would be visiting with them twice before he went on his way to Judæa. And of you to be brought on my way (Gr propempō, "to be aided in my journey"). Following the custom of ancient times, since Paul would be traveling immediately to Judæa from Corinth, it would be appropriate for the assembly to assist him financially.

17-18. When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? Here Paul avers the sincerity of his purpose. Nor did he intend any secular advantages to himself according to the flesh . . . there should be yea, yea, and nay, nay? The apostle cannot be charged with inconsistency. That which he affirmed he affirms still. That which he denies, he denies still. Hence, as God is true, our word toward you was not yea and nay. As the truth of God stands so does the word of the apostle (cf. also Gal 1:8; I Jn 5:10). The trustworthiness of Paul's words are seen in the nature of his gospel.

19. Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us . . . was not yea and nay. Those who truly knew the Lord as Saviour in the Corinthian assembly could hardly doubt the veracity of this statement. They had received and experienced the reality of saving faith and knew that Paul's words were true.

20-22. For all the promises of God in him are yea (lit., "as many promises of God"). The thrust of this expression is that the promises of God find their affirmation and fulfillment in Christ. Amen is equivalent to "yea." Whether one is a Gentile (yea) or a Hebrew (amen) the promises of God are sure. But the force of Paul's analogy is that his word is as good as the gospel because he which stablisheth us with you in Christ . . . is God. The same God who conceived and consummated the redemption of lost humanity energized the apostolic ministry. Who hath also sealed us. The sealing of the Holy Spirit has a threefold significance in the New Testament: (1) to indicate ownership, (2) to indicate genuineness; and (3) to preserve and keep safe (cf. Eph 1:3; 4:30; II Tim 2:19; Rev 7:2). This last idea is amplified with the earnest of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit Himself is the down payment, or pledge, or redemption. The indwelling Spirit is the surety and the "security" of all that is to follow in the final salvation of the believer (cf. Rom 8:9-11, 23; Eph 1:14; II Cor 5:5).

In 1:23-2:4 Paul explains the reason he has waited before coming to Corinth. He said he was not desirous of causing any more sorrow among them. His desire was that he would come with joy instead of anguish.

23. To spare you I came not as yet. The apostle was eagerly desirous of seeing the Corinthian assembly again, but even more 24 Not for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy: for by faith ye stand.

CHAPTER 2

BUT I determined this with myself, that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.

5 But if any have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all.

than that he was concerned that when he got there he would have a positive ministry among them.

24. Not that we have dominion over your faith. Paul does not want to "pull rank." He does not wish to dictate to them in an authoritarian way, as he goes on to express, we . . . are helpers of your joy. In light of the present state of affairs this could hardly be enhanced if Paul came immediately. By faith ye stand. Our strength and stability are grounded in our faith, not our acquiescence to some human authority, whence also must flow our comfort and joy.

2:1. But I determined this with myself. Over and above Paul's commitment to visit the Corinthian assembly according to his original itinerary was a commitment to himself that I would not come again to you in heaviness. While there is no mention of it in the book of Acts it is clear from 12:14 21 and 13:1 of this epistle that Paul had already visited the Corinthian church after writing I Corinthians for the purpose of correcting abuses and dealing directly with those who were challenging his ministry and authority. Paul had vowed within himself that he would not allow this to happen again.

2. If there are those in the assembly who think Paul derived any degree of satisfaction from his previous visit Paul assures them that it inflicted no small amount of hurt to his own heart. If I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad? The greatest joy the minister of the gospel can experience is to see that his spiritual children are walking in the truth (cf. III Jn 4). Conversely, nothing is more painful than to have to employ the rod of correction. Paul derived no joy from that last encounter and the anxiety is still with him, as reflected in these verses.

3. And I wrote this same unto you. That is, I gave instructions regarding disciplinary measures that were necessary in the assembly (cf. I Cor 5-6). Lest, when I came, I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice. His desire is that they would take care of these measures themselves so that when he came he would be able to rejoice in a congregation that acted obediently and he would see that it had elicited repentant hearts and the restoration of those who had been disciplined.

4. For. Connects with the preceding verse to show why he wrote. Affliction . . . anguish . . . tears. All characterize Paul's emotional condition as he penned the letter to the Corinthians. I wrote unto you. Doubtless, this refers to a letter now lost. It could not refer to I Corinthians because, while he did have to deal with some difficulties in that epistle, it could have hardly been characterized as he describes here. That ye might know the love which I have. It is not frustration which motivates the apostle but deep concern and love for a group of people whom he considers to be his spiritual children.

2. Paul's charge concerning the offender. 2:5-11.

Since by this time the apostle has heard the report from Titus (cf. vs. 12-14) he now knows that they have, indeed, followed his advice. They have disciplined one offender at least in the assembly and it has produced such radical results the apostle now finds it necessary to give some additional counsel regarding this particular matter (vs. 5-11).

5. If any have caused grief (lit., if there is anyone in the assembly who has caused sorrow). Paul is generalizing in order to state a principle. At the same time he is speaking specifically to the situation recorded in I Corinthians 5:1-13. He hath not grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all. The sentence structure is awkward here and the sense is difficult to derive from the AV. Here Paul is saying, to paraphrase, "if someone has caused grief in the assembly, his offense is not so much against the apostle as it is against the local assembly, to put it mildly." For this reason the obligation of discipline lies not on the shoulders of the apostle but on the leadership of the local church, and Paul is prepared to go along with their decision (cf. vs. 10). Tasker follows Menzies in suggesting that the offender in view is not the one mentioned in I Corinthians 5:1. On the contrary, he suggests that the person is not guilty of immoral conduct but rude and disagreeable conduct. It is asserted that it is quite contrary to the moral position of Paul to say that he could have ever tolerated the presence of the incestuous person in the church (R. V. G. Tasker, The Second Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, p. 52). To this two things need to be said. First, while this view commends itself, Tasker fails to show how it is concluded without question that the person involved had been guilty of rude and disagreeable conduct. Secondly, Paul has already cited the fact that his forgiveness, and certainly that of the Lord, has been extended to persons guilty of grossly immoral conduct (cf. I Cor 6:9-11). Therefore, the view favored by the majority of the older commentators is to be preferred here; that is, that the offender involved is the incestuous person mentioned in chapter 5 of I Corinthians.

6-8. Sufficient to such a man is this punishment. Your discipline of this individual is enough. Paul sensed that they had gone far enough in bringing this person to repentance. His advice now is to, forgive . . . and comfort . . . lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow. The purpose of discipline is not to destroy but to edify and restore. Therefore, when true repentance is evidenced the proper response is to Confirm your love toward him. Paul goes on to express why he instructed the church to administer discipline.

9. That I might know the proof of you. Paul needed to know that the Corinthian assembly possessed the maturity and character to deal with sin in their midst. It is now clear to him that they did. In 1:3-4 Paul indicated that God's comfort was designed to be shared. Here is Paul's application of this principle in the context of church discipline. As they had received God's forgiveness they are to forgive.

10. To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also. Paul awaits the church's decision. He was prepared to sanction their ruling on the matter. Notice here that there is no hierarchical structure dictating to the local church. The ruling authority was the local church.

11. Lest Satan should get an advantage of us. Such an advantage could be gained by Satan either by the despair of an individual Christian, or the disunity of the local assembly through the incident in view. For we are not ignorant of his devices. Paul knows that Satan can and will use this incident to distract and diminish the work of God in the Corinthian assembly unless it is properly handled. Satan's first attack is against the gospel (cf. II Cor 4:4). If he can bring disunity to the church, which is the agent of propagating the gospel, then he will also bring dishonor upon the gospel. The church which God can best use is the church which exudes God's forgiveness and consolation (on Satan's devices see also 10:3-4; 11:3, 12-14).

3. Paul's confidence in the Corinthians. 2:12-17.

12-13. When I came to Troas . . . a door was opened unto me of the Lord. The connection of this verse is with verse 4: "that ye might know the love which I have." Further evidence of this love is Paul's behavior while engaged in a very fruitful ministry in Troas: I had no rest in my spirit. Paul's concern for the evangelization of the lost was overridden by his concern for the Corinthian assembly, and that was saying something (cf. I Cor 9:16)! It is not love for the lost nor love for the world which distinguishes the believer. It is love for one another (Jn 13:35). But taking leave of them I went . . . into Macedonia. This was in hopes of meeting Titus on the way. On Titus' report to Paul about the condition of things in Corinth, see 7:5-6.

14-17. Triumph (cf. Col 2:9-15). The imagery conveyed in

6 Sufficient to such a man is this punishment, which was inflicted of many.

7 So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things.

10 To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it in the person of Christ;

11 Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and a door was opened unto me of the Lord,

13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother: but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish:

16 To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?

17 For we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ.

the use of this term is of the Roman general who marched in victory with his entourage, consisting of two groups: Them that are saved, and . . . them that perish. The former group consisted of those allowed to live as slaves of the Empire. They were being led into a new life. The latter group were the condemned. They were being led to their death. Each group carried a burning incense. The one was a savor of death unto death, the other was a fragrance of life unto life. Calvary was the mighty display of the infinite power of a sovereign God. The human race was divided into two categories: those of life unto life and those of death unto death. The practical lesson here is that the believer is a "savor" of God's infinite power and unspeakable love wherever he goes. Also, as the believer proclaims this truth, he divides men. This is not a "method" of evangelism, but a proclamation of the triumph of Christ at Calvary. Who is sufficient for these things? The implied answer to Paul's question is "I am." Paul's credentials are given in the words as . . . in the sight of God speak we in Christ (lit., "but as from sincerity, but as from God, we speak in Christ in the sight of God"). The apostle's adequacy is not within himself, but God (cf. 3:5). This is in contrast to those who merely corrupt the word of God (Gr kapēleuō, should read, "are peddling the Word of God").

B. The Calling of Paul. 3:1-6:10.

1. The superiority of his ministry. 3:1-4:6

a. The credentials of his ministry. 3:1-5.

3:1. Do we begin again to commend ourselves? The apostle is incredulous that a formal introduction to a church he founded should be necessary. Epistles of commendation to you. Such letters of introduction constituted a common practice in New Testament times (cf. Acts 9:1-2; 18:27). Due to the prevailing social, political, and religious climate, such letters were both advisable and necessary. Paul here does not disparage their use. He can only be amazed that the Corinthian believers require it of him.

2-3. Ye are our epistle. Paul's converts at Corinth were living testimonials to the genuineness of his ministry. Our hearts. Paul employs the plural in agreement with the use of the editorial "we" throughout this passage. Known and read of all men. To any who would "take up and read" Paul's ministry was authenticated (cf. I Cor 9:2). The epistle of Christ ministered by us. The apostle is always careful to show that the enabling power of his ministry did not reside in himself but in Christ (cf. I Cor 15:9-10). This epistle is distinguished in two ways. First, it is not written with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God. It was supernaturally composed. Second, it was written not in tables of stone, but in the fleshy tables of the heart. The contrast is with the law of Moses. The force of the comparison is that Moses' law is external. The law of the Spirit is internal.

4-5. Such trust (lit., "such confidence"). Not only in the genuineness of the Corinthians' conversion experience but also, in a general sense, to God-ward. Paul was not "self-confident" but "God-confident." Not that we are sufficient of ourselves ("not that we are competent from ourselves"). "Sufficient" occurs three times in verses 5 and 6. To think anything (Gr logizomai, "to think out," "to judge," "to reckon"). Paul's competency to give account of what God did at Corinth in the hearts of his converts does not reside in himself, but his sufficiency is of God.

b. The quality of his ministry. 3:6-4:6.

(1) The glory of the New Covenant. 3:6-11.

6. Who also. The relative pronoun here does two things.

CHAPTER 3

DO we begin again to commend ourselves? or need we, as some others, epistles of commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you?

2 Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men:

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.

4 And such trust have we through Christ to God-ward:

5 Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God;

6 Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.

II CORINTHIANS 3:7

7 But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away:

8 How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious?

9 For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory.

10 For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

12 Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech:

13 And not as Moses, which put a veil over his face, that the children of Israel could not stedfastly look to the end of that which is abolished:

14 But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which veil is done away in Christ.

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart.

First, it points us back to God and, second, it suggests cause or reason (see its use in Lk 8:13). Hath made us able ministers (lit., “made us competent ministers”). Here is the third instance of the term translated “sufficient” and “sufficiency” in verse 5. Having established his credentials for the ministry Paul is now elaborating on the distinctive qualities of his ministry. The first is that it was energized by God and not himself or any human agency. The second is that it was of the new testament (“new covenant”). New because it was not inaugurated until Christ (cf. Mt 26:28; Lk 22:7-23; I Cor 11:25; Heb 8:8;9:15). Not of the letter, but of the spirit. This expression corresponds with the thought of verse 3 contrasting “ink” with the “Spirit.” The contrast is with the externalism inherent in the old covenant and the internalism inherent in the New Covenant. The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life. Paul explains his thought here more fully in Romans 7:6-11. Since there were certain Judaists in the assembly at Corinth who were concerned with Paul’s defection from Moses’ law, Paul here explains. The best the law could do was condemn the sinner but the spirit giveth life. It is not here implied that the law of Moses was evil. On the contrary, it is holy, just, and good (cf. Rom 7:21). This can be asserted because it brought men to the end of themselves, to Christ (cf. Gal 3:24).

7-8. Yet this contrast has even further implications. The old covenant was glorious. Paul alludes to the incident in Exodus 34:29-35. The old covenant, limited as it was, nevertheless, was so glorious that it caused the face of Moses to radiate. Now if this ministration of death, which was only a transient and temporary measure, so manifested the glory of God How shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? Not only is Paul’s message “new,” it is also “better” (cf. Heb 9:11-28; 10:11-22).

9-11. The ministry of the gospel of grace in Christ surpasses the old covenant so much that that which is made glorious had no glory. The import of this is again reiterated in the word if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

The Apostle Paul’s ministration of the new covenant is justified not only by its surpassing glory (vss. 1-11), but also, its surpassing permanence (vss. 12-18).

12. Seeing then that we have such hope. The “confidence” of verse 4 has now issued in “hope.” This hope originates in the expectation that if the old covenant was accompanied by the unsurpassed glory of God how much more can we anticipate the new covenant to be accompanied by glory. We use great plainness of speech. Paul now becomes very explicit.

13. And not as Moses. What follows is an allegorization of the account given in Exodus 34:29-35. Put a veil over his face. The veil was not to hide the glory but to obscure it. The people saw his brightness but not directly. Not only did this veil actually conceal the brightness of the glory but it also concealed the end of that which was abolished. The transience of the glory which accompanied the old covenant was not manifestly evident to the children of Israel. And for Paul this has typical significance.

14. Their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil. For Israel the same obscurity obtains. Their minds are still blinded to the truth as though the veil upon Moses’ face were thrown upon their hearts. Which veil is done away in Christ. Only the gospel of God’s grace exposes the truth to full view.

15. But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart. Unfortunately, as far as the Jews are concerned, Christ is still a stumbling block they cannot see (cf.

I Cor 1:23). For the apostle this is no light matter but a concern which caused him great anxiety (cf. Rom 9:1-4). But now the veil is not so much upon the revelation of the glory but upon their own hearts (cf. Lk 24:25; Acts 13:27-29).

16. Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away. The practice of Moses of removing the veil when he turned to the Lord to speak with Him directly is in view here (Ex 34:29-35). In the same sense, when Israel turns once again to the Lord, she will see and understand—the veil will be removed.

17. Now connects the reference to “the Lord” in the previous verse with the reference to the Lord in the present verse. This Lord is Christ (cf. vs. 14). Is that Spirit. While the article does not appear in the original text the AV has properly rendered the sense when it includes “that” before Spirit. Paul is not saying “the Lord is Spirit” (in the same sense that is indicated in Jn 4:24) but “the Lord is the Holy Spirit, the Third Person of the Godhead.” It is also important to note here that Paul is not confusing the two Persons. Jesus said earlier, “I and my Father are one” (Jn 10:30). He bears the same relationship to the Holy Spirit. Here is the ineffable mystery of the Trinity, one in essence yet three distinct personalities. And where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. Indeed, when Israel turns once again to the Lord and the veil is removed, there is glorious liberty that comes with the confrontation with the truth (cf. Jn 8:32; 14:6, 17; 15:26). For further insight into the relationship of the Holy Spirit to the ministry of Christ see Jn 14:16-17,26; 15:26-27; and 16:7.

18. But we all. Reaching a climax, based upon the experience of Moses and Israel. Paul now applies the truth to all his readers. With open face beholding as in a glass. As though looking at a clear reflection in a mirror. The glory of the Lord. As Moses’ face reflected God’s glory at Sinai the face of every believer radiates the glory of Christ. That which was reserved for only the highest under the old covenant is made available to all in the new. Some commentaries have attempted to identify the mirror in this text with Christ, the Word, or the believer’s heart. This, however, is difficult to justify from the context. What the apostle has in mind, specifically, is difficult to say. The term “beholding” can have the sense of “reflecting.” Thus, in agreement with Lenski (The Interpretation of I and II Corinthians, pp. 947-948), the believer himself “reflects” the glory of the Lord just as the face of Moses reflected the glory of the Lord. This view fits most favorably with Paul’s imagery.

Yet there is more. For Moses the glory eventually faded away, but under the New Covenant the believer is changed into the same image. Paul has already established that, “. . . as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly” (I Cor 15:49). The Apostle John says that ultimately we will be just like Christ because “. . . we shall see him as he is” (I Jn 3:2). (see also I Pet 1:4; Gal 4:19; and Jn 17:17). Even as by the Spirit of the Lord (lit., “as from the Lord the Spirit”). This transformation takes place by the abiding presence of the Spirit of God.

4:1. Therefore, seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not. In light of the superiority and character of the gospel of Jesus Christ under the new covenant, the Apostle Paul vigorously and enthusiastically assumes the task of proclaiming its message everywhere. The expression we faint not has the sense that Paul was not derelict in discharging his responsibilities to this ministry.

2. But (the strong adversative). What follows stands in sharp contrast to the last statement of verse 1. What Paul denies of himself he affirms of the false teachers at Corinth (C. Hodge,

16 Nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away.

17 Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER 4

THEREFORE seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not;

2 But have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of

II CORINTHIANS 4:3

God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3 But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost:

4 In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.

5 For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake.

6 For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

Commentary on the Second Epistle to the Corinthians, p. 82). In that regard, Paul demonstrates that he has renounced the hidden things of dishonesty. This may have reference to either disgraceful conduct or secret motives. The latter idea is best since the emphasis is upon "hidden things." The apostle's ministry was one of openness and honesty. He was not walking in craftiness. The apostle was not an opportunist nor shrewdly and unscrupulously seeking to achieve his desired aims. Nor handling the word of God deceitfully (cf. 2:17). Paul was not "peddling the Word of God" or adulterating it with false doctrine. Paul could say "I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you" (I Cor 11:23). That which Paul preached was exactly as God revealed it to him. It was the manifestation of the truth. In contrast to those in the Corinthian assembly who were giving undue stress to human credentials Paul's message commended itself to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3. But if our gospel be hid. Carrying over the analogy of the veil in the preceding chapter, such a veil conceals the truth only from them that are lost.

4. In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not. On Satan's control of the world system see Matthew 4:8-9; John 12:31; 14:30; I Corinthians 10:20; Ephesians 2:2; 6:12; II Timothy 2:26. The "lost" of verse 3 are the "unbelievers" of this verse. Such ones are so controlled by Satan that he effectively shields them from the light of the glorious gospel of Christ. There are two vital inferences that must be drawn from this passage. The first is contextual. The apostle effectively categorizes those who find his message difficult to accept. In effect, he is saying that the person who is criticizing his ministry at Corinth is not even saved. He is lost, unbelieving, and has been blinded by Satan. The second inference is theological. For those who inordinately stress human freedom it must be observed here and elsewhere that the unregenerate man is in bondage. He is under satanic control and is, therefore, incompetent to evaluate the truth of God.

5. For connects with the preceding verse. We preach not ourselves but Christ Jesus the Lord. Paul's message was clear and simple and could be summed up in a word, or even better, in a name, i.e., Christ Jesus. The singular object of Paul's preaching was to confront men with the person of Christ. And ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake. As a minister of the gospel, Paul is not his own man. He is a slave of his constituents and compelled by his Master.

6. For. The particle connects with the preceding verse and forms the basis for it. God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness. This contemplates the old creation. Genesis 1:3. Hath shined in our hearts. This contemplates the new creation. Some suggest that "our" is used editorially to speak of the apostle himself. The reference would thus connect primarily with such passages as Acts 9:3-6; 26:15-16; Galatians 1:15-16. However, the plural "hearts" seems to lend more support to the notion that Paul here has in mind all believers, not just himself. Thus, the miracle of the new birth while not always accompanied by an outward manifestation of lights such as the experience of Paul, nevertheless involves a spiritual illumination concomitant with Paul's experience on the road to Damascus. To give the light (lit., "for illumination"). Just as the comfort of God is to be shared (cf. 1:3-4) even so the light which penetrates the darkness and regenerates the soul is to be reflected to others, and for Paul that constituted the essence of the gospel ministry. Specifically, for Paul this light was the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. This calls to mind Acts 9:3-6. Yet the experience is nonetheless glorious for all who have seen the light (cf. Jn 1:1-14; 9:24-25, 35-41; I Cor 2:10-14).

2. The suffering in his ministry. 4:7-12.

Having discussed his credentials for the ministry (3:1-5), and then in much more detail the specific quality of his ministry (3:6-4:6), Paul now gives attention to his personal suffering in the ministry (4:7-12).

7. We have this treasure in earthen vessels. In the wilderness under the old covenant God dwelt in a tent; today He dwells in the believer's heart. This is unspeakable truth and forms the theological rationale for holy living (cf. I Cor 6:19-20). But the stress here is upon "earthen." An earthenware jar is a brittle one. It depicts humanity in its weakness. The gospel is not a product of human genius or clever intellect (humanity in its strength). Yet it resides in men of clay, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us. The quality of the gospel ministry is calibrated by the degree to which it points attention to the God of glory.

8-9. We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed. The believer may be hard pressed but never crushed. He may be perplexed but he need never despair. Though he be persecuted he will never be abandoned. He may be cast down but he'll never be cast out.

10-12. Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus. The persecution and suffering and the trial which confronts the believer are to be understood as the "fellowship of his suffering" (cf. Phil 3:10; I Cor 15:31; 4:9; II Cor 11:23; Rom 8:36; Gal 6:17). That the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. This same thought occurs in Romans 8:17. If we share in His suffering we will also share in His glory (cf. II Tim 2:11; I Pet 4:13-14; Rom 6:8-9; Jn 14:19).

We which live (lit., "the living"). That the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh. A diamond is best seen against a black background. The brilliance of the life that is in Christ Jesus is best seen against the background of death. So then death worketh in us. Paul relates this to his own personal ministry. Us is used editorially to refer to the apostle himself. But life in you. Through a ministry of weakness and suffering Paul was able to accomplish a very positive ministry in Corinth (cf. I Cor 2:1-4). The tone is not ironic such as that in I Corinthians 4:8-10.

The Apostle Paul was able to endure suffering in his ministry not only because he knew that his message was vastly superior to anything offered in the old covenant but also because the gospel of Christ assured him of the glorious prospect of going far beyond the present exigencies of life. This subject he deals with in 4:13-5:10.

3. *The goal of his ministry. 4:13-5:10.*a. Hope of the Resurrection. 4:13-15.

13. We having the same spirit of faith. That is, the same Spirit of 3:17, who is the Holy Spirit, often designated by the effects which He produces (e.g., He is called the Spirit of adoption, Rom 8:15; the Spirit of wisdom, Eph 1:17; the Spirit of grace, Heb 10:29; the Spirit of glory, I Pet 4:14). Here He is so called because He is the Spirit who produces faith. Thus, in much the same way that David expressed himself in Psalm 116:10, Paul extolls the goodness of God. We also believe, and therefore speak. The assurance in Paul's heart because of faith caused him to proclaim the gospel with utter confidence in its truth.

14. Knowing. This indicates the basis for the confidence expressed in the preceding verse. He which raised up the Lord Jesus refers to the literal, bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ. Shall raise up us also by Jesus. Personal affliction and death become of little consequence when measured against the pro-

7 But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.

8 We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair;

9 Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed;

10 Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.

11 For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

12 So then death worketh in us, but life in you.

13 We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak;

14 Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you.

15 For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God.

16 For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day.

17 For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory;

18 While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.

CHAPTER 5

FOR we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

pect of resurrection. And shall present us with you. This prospect was expressed by Jude, who said, Thanks be “. . . unto him that is able to . . . present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy” (Jude 24; cf. II Cor 11:2 and Col 1:22). The thought is similar to that of I Corinthians 15:19-22 in the idea of “the first fruits.” Throughout pauline literature the resurrection of Christ is seen as evidence of the resurrection of the believer (Rom 8:11; I Cor 6:14; Eph 2:6; Col 2:12; I Thess 4:14).

15. For all things are for your sakes. Everything the apostle endured to carry the gospel to Corinth was for their benefit. That (“in order that”). The ultimate purpose was the glory of God and this Paul envisions as being directly proportional to the sum of gratitude offered in thanksgiving to God for His grace.

b. Confidence in ministry. 4:16-18.

16. For which cause. The certainty of the glorious resurrection. We faint not. In 4:1 the Apostle Paul uses this expression in response to the superiority of the New Covenant. Now he does so in anticipation of the glory of the New Covenant in the resurrection. Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. The physical body is temporal and passing away. It is subject to decay and, through affliction and suffering, is utterly worn out. Yet, the believer can rejoice that he has a life within that is increasing in vitality with every passing day. “The inward man” does not have reference to man’s soul or immaterial nature but to a new life imparted to the believer (cf. Rom 7:22).

17-18. For our light affliction. Paul is being modest (see 11:16-33). The reader would hardly suspect how intense the affliction was for him. Yet Paul does not patronize his readers here, nor does he use irony. For the afflictions of life are but for a moment. And they work a far more exceeding . . . weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. In the sufferings of life the power of God transforms the experience of the faithful Christian into glorious expectation.

Paul’s confidence in the ministry expressed in the preceding verse is justified in 5:1-10. In 4:18 Paul says his eyes are not upon temporal things but heavenly. In the next section he explains what he means by that.

c. Contemplation of new life. 5:1-10.

5:1. For we know. This knowledge is based on 4:13-14. It is the knowledge of faith which has already been ratified in the experience of Jesus Christ. If our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved. Earthly here has the sense of “terrestrial,” i.e., that which is upon the earth (cf. I Cor 15:40). Tabernacle (Gr skēnos) is best rendered as “tent.” The figure has reference to the physical body and the transient character of it. Were dissolved (Gr katalyo, “take down”). Appropriately used to signify “taking down a tent.” Here it signifies physical death. We have a building of God. The tense shows that Paul reckons himself to be already in possession of this new building. This expresses certainty (Rom 8:30). In contrast to the old body the new body is pictured as a permanent dwelling: A building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. There are, generally, three views taken on this passage: (a) that the “house” is heaven itself; (b) that it has reference to an intermediate body provided at death; and (c) that it has reference to the resurrection body.

The first view fits well with John 14:2, but does not adequately account for the language of verses 1 and 2. The second view would seem to fit best with verses 6-9 and Philippians 1:23. However, it fails to account for Paul’s clear teaching in I Corinthians 15 and I Thessalonians 4. The third view, that Paul contemplates the resurrection body, is supported by the following arguments. (1) To say that this transformation occurs at the time of death contradicts I Corinthians 15:51-52, that this occurs at the time of the Rapture of the church, not at death. (2) None of the churches established by Paul, or the early church fathers held to an intermediate body, as far as we know. (3) Paul, ordinarily, passes over the intermediate state in discussing the glorified body. (see Rom 8:23, 30; Col 3:4; Phil 3:20-21.) (4) Other New Testament writers also support this view (I Pet 1:7, 13; 4:13; I Jn 3:2; Mt 25:31-34; 16:27). (For further arguments see G. Peters, The Theocratic Kingdom, II, pp. 240, 41; 394-403).

Thus, the third view is to be preferred primarily for two reasons: the sheer weight of the evidence and its faithfulness to all the biblical data. It is incumbent on any student of the Word to speak where Scripture speaks and to remain silent where Scripture is silent. While it would be a worthy goal to be able to explain the intermediate state, such a noble objective does not justify the fabrication of a doctrine to do so. Thus the contrast in verse 1 is between the physical body and the resurrection body. The one is earthly and destined to be dismantled. The other is heavenly, designed and made by God, not human hands, and is eternal.

2. For in this we groan. In this earthly body. Earnestly desiring to be clothed upon. Not uncharacteristically Paul changes the metaphor. It is a house in verse 1, it is a garment in verse 2. With our house which is from heaven. The resurrection body.

3. If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. After the resurrection we will not be found without a body. Paul argues as he does in I Corinthians, for a "bodily resurrection" not merely a "spiritual resurrection."

4. For we . . . do groan. Here again, due to the burdens of life (cf. Rom 8:23). That mortality might be swallowed up of life. The pressures and trials of life notwithstanding, Paul is further motivated by a much more positive motive. He anxiously awaits the day when he participates fully in the abundant life promised in heaven.

5. The assurance of all this is the earnest of the Spirit (Gr arrabōn), meaning "the guarantee" or "pledge which is the Spirit." Paul views this in a twofold sense. First, the abiding presence of the Spirit Himself is a continual reminder of the certainty of Jesus' promises. Second, the Spirit Himself generates those inner longings, within the breast of the believer, that will only be satisfied when he sees Him face to face (cf. Rom 8:23).

6. Therefore we are always confident. Paul's confidence is not a temporary feeling but a permanent state of mind. Knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord. So long as this earthly tent is our home our realization of heaven is detained.

7-8. (For we walk by faith, not by sight:) The AV correctly renders this as a parenthesis in Paul's thought for it answers to his confidence in verse 6 and again in verse 8. We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. All things being equal, Paul would just as soon take leave of this tabernacle and take up his residence with the Lord in glory.

9. Wherefore we labor, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him. Paul lived every day with eternity's values in view.

10. For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ. The judgment seat (Gr bema) was an elevated seat in the square at Corinth where Roman magistrates sat to administer justice and where the athletes who distinguished themselves in the arena received their reward. The judgment in view here is not of the unbeliever but of the believer (cf. I Cor 4:5; Col 3:4).

2 For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:

3 If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked.

4 For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

5 Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.

6 Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord:

7 (For we walk by faith, not by sight:)
8 We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

9 Wherefore we labour, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.

10 For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.

That every one may receive the things done in his body. That is, be rewarded for the deeds done in this life whether it be good or bad. While it is true that for the Christian there is “no condemnation” (Rom 8:1), it is not correct to assume that God will not hold him responsible for the deeds done in the body. Paul has already explicated this truth in I Corinthians 3:10-15.

4. The service in his ministry. 5:11-6:10.

Now Paul turns his attention to the import of all this in terms of his personal ministry. He discusses his motives (vss. 11-15), his message (vss. 16-21), and his methods (6:1-10).

a. Paul's motives. 5:11-15.

11 Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; but we are made manifest unto God; and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences.

11. Knowing therefore indicates that what follows is inferred from that which precedes it. The terror of the Lord. This is best understood in the general sense of “the fear of the Lord” as it is found throughout the Scriptures (cf. Acts 7:1; 9:31; Rom 3:18; Eph 5:21). It denotes a deep reverence for God. Here it is particularly in view of the judgment seat, before which we all must stand. We persuade men. That is, of his own personal integrity as is also verified by the fact that we are made manifest unto God; and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences. “My character is known to God and I trust it is known to you as well.”

12 For we commend not ourselves again unto you, but give you occasion to glory on our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to answer them which glory in appearance, and not in heart.

12. We commend not ourselves again to you. Paul's object was not to glory in his credentials nor to prove his character to the Corinthians, but simply to authenticate his personal integrity. For the most part the Corinthian assembly by this time was convinced of Paul's genuineness but Paul was also aware that he still had enemies in the assembly and the purpose here is to give his followers somewhat to answer them.

13 For whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.

13. Paul's ministry was never motivated by or directed to self-interest. Whether we be beside ourselves, (to paraphrase, “if I appear out of my senses”) it is to God. Paul may be introducing irony here. Some may well have thought he was insane to waste his time with an assembly that demonstrated so little appreciation for his ministry. Nevertheless, if his actions seemed to betray sound logic, he was only acting in obedience to God. Or whether we be sober, it is for your cause. The suggestion is that Paul's enthusiasm and spontaneity is held in check in order not to offend the Corinthian believers.

14 For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead:

14. For the love of Christ constraineth us. Whether Paul appeared to be out of control or under control, Christ's love for Paul held him in such a grip, that it constituted the compelling force in everything he did. Because we thus judge. We have thus concluded. That if one died for all, then were all dead: the first conviction to which Paul comes has to do with the total depravity of man. If the atoning death of Christ was for all, then it must follow that all are dead.

15 And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

15. They which live should not henceforth live unto themselves. The second conviction to which Paul comes has to do with God's purpose in the redemption of man. He does not thereby release the shackled sinner to live henceforth unto himself but unto the One who died for them (cf. Rom 5:12-21; 6:1-8; I Cor 15:21-22; Gal 2:20; Eph 2:5-6). And rose again. The resurrection of Christ is as essential to the salvation of the sinner as the death of Christ (Rom 4:24-25). It also provides incentive to holy living.

b. Paul's message. 5:16-21.

16 Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh; yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more.

16. Now Paul turns his attention to his message (vss. 16-21). Wherefore (Gr hoste, “so that”) is inferential. Henceforth know we no man after the flesh: For the Apostle Paul the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ has forever destroyed all human distinctions. Yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh. We is used editorially for Paul himself. He admits that 17 Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

18 And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;

19 To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

20 Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.

21 For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER 6

WE then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.

there was a time when all he knew of Christ was what other men said about Him. Yet now henceforth know we him no more. Since the day he was saved, Paul could no longer think of Christ as just another man.

17. Therefore, Paul infers, if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature. What Paul particularizes in verse 16 he generalizes in verse 17. The reason Paul could no longer think of Christ in carnal terms is because of the universal truth that has been applied to Him personally. When a man comes into vital union with the risen Lord he is a "new creation" (cf. Jn 3:3; 15:5; 8:1-9; Gal 6:14-15). Old things are passed away. The aorist tense indicates a decisive break with the old life at the moment of salvation. Behold, all things are become new (literally, "new things have come to be"). Paul changes to the perfect tense to stress the abiding results of the Christian's union with Christ (cf. Isa 43:18-19; 65:17; Rev 21:4-5; Eph 4:24).

18-19. And all things are of God. All the "new things" introduced to the experience of those who are in Christ Jesus. Who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ. To "reconcile" (Gr katallassō) is to remove enmity between two enemy parties. In the strictest sense it involves "a change of mind." Since the sinner cannot do this for himself God does it through Jesus Christ in His sacrificial death (cf. Rom 5:9-10). And hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation. This is identical to the "word of reconciliation" in the next verse. This is announcing the good news that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself. The great message of the apostle was that here was not just another man ("now we know no man after the flesh"). But here at the "end of the age" Christ, on Calvary's tree, put away sin forever (cf. Heb 10:5-12). Not imputing their trespasses unto them. Not to impute is to forgive (cf. Rom 4:5; Col 2:13; II Tim 4:16). The Greek present tense here emphasizes a continuous action (cf. I Jn 1:9).

20. This ministry of reconciliation involves calling upon men to demonstrate a changed life and so Paul considered himself, and all who are truly born again, to be ambassadors for Christ. Paul did not usurp authority to himself. His ministry at Corinth was representative. His appeal to them is as though God did beseech you by us and his desire is, for the sake of Christ, for them to be reconciled to God. The verb is not active but passive. He does not call upon them to change themselves for he has already established that it is God who does the reconciling (vs. 18). Rather he is asking them to submit to the reconciling work of God.

21. For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin. Three aspects of Paul's concept of imputation are seen in this passage. In verse 19 God imputes not iniquity (cf. Ps 32:2). Here he imputes sin to Christ, the spotless Lamb of God (cf. Jn 1:29; I Pet 1:19). This imputation helps us understand Christ's struggle in the garden of Gethsemane with the cup of sin which would be poured upon Him on the cross. That we might be made the righteousness of God in him. Then the righteousness of Christ is imputed to the sinner's account. This truth may be viewed from the side of justification, whereby the sinner is declared righteous upon the merits of Jesus Christ (cf. Rom 3:24-25), or it may be viewed from the side of sanctification, wherein the righteousness of Christ is daily applied. This is the sense enjoined here and is best understood in conjunction with 3:18.

c. Paul's methods. 6:1-10.

6:1. What follows is based upon Paul's teaching in 5:17-21. As workers together with him (lit., "working together"). The AV adds "with him." The addition is appropriate since Paul seems to be enlarging on the thought of 5:19. Beseech you also. In 5:20 the exhortation was "to be reconciled." Now Paul has an

2 (For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation.)

3 Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed:

4 But in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses,

5 In stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labours, in watchings, in fastings:

6 By pureness, by knowledge, by longsuffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned,

7 By the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, additional exhortation. That ye receive not the grace of God in vain (“not receive the grace of God to no purpose”). There is no hint here that the salvation of the Corinthian believers is in jeopardy. The grace of which he speaks has reference to 5:21. That they have received this grace denotes clearly that the people to which he is speaking are genuinely born again. But a judicial pardon does not guarantee practical Christian living and it is the application of the “righteousness of God in him” on a practical level, that Paul has in mind (cf. I Pet 1:22; 2:9).

2. For he saith. Prompted by receive (Gr dechomai), the apostle recalls to mind the accepted (Gr dektos) of the LXX translation of Isaiah 49:8. I have heard thee in a time accepted (in the Hebrew, “in the time of grace I answer thee”). In the day of salvation have I succored thee. Consistent with Hebrew parallelism, in poetic writings, this is intended as parallel to the previous expression. In Isaiah both expressions constituted a promise to the Servant of Jehovah to sustain him in the time of his ministry. However, the passage not only has messianic implications but is addressed also to Messiah’s people, who represent Him. Since his readers have put their faith in the Messiah of whom Isaiah wrote, Paul is justified in making the specific application here. So they do not miss it, he underscores it with the words behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation. Using an intensified form (Gr euprosdektos, “well received”), Paul emphasizes that the time is now. The force of his statement is that God conveys His grace and salvation to men in the day and time suited to Him and it is incumbent upon men to appropriate that grace in the time appointed by God. This is a good example of an analogical use of Scripture not uncommon to Paul (cf. Rom 10:18).

3. That which Paul asked of others he demanded of himself. Thus at this time, his thoughts were upon his own ministry and the demands he made upon it based on the principle he had just stated. Giving no offense in any thing. The apostle scrupulously avoided doing anything that would cause someone to reject the gospel on his account. That the ministry be not blamed (lit., “that the ministry be not discredited”).

4-5. But in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience. A careless reading of verses 4-10 might lead one to think that the apostle is spontaneously tabulating disjointed thoughts as they come to his mind. A closer look, however, will reveal a very careful and logical arrangement. There are twenty-seven categories divided into three groups of nine each. In verses 4-5 his thoughts are upon his trials, verses 6-7 upon divine provision, and verses 8-10 upon his resultant victory over circumstances. In afflictions, in necessities, in distresses (lit., “in troubles, in hardships, in difficulties”) intends to convey the idea of pressures in general from every side. In stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults. These are the kinds of external pressures he endured. In labors, in watchings, in fastings denote the internal pressures faced by the apostle in his ministry (by this time quite evident in his ministry to the Corinthians, cf. 2:1-13).

6-7. Appropriately placed between a tabulation of the trials encountered by Paul and the varied circumstances in which he found himself, Paul tabulates those spiritual graces with which God enabled him to carry on victoriously. The connection is with heard thee and succored thee of verse 2 and the entire section together demonstrates, from the experience of Paul, that he did not receive the grace of God in vain (vs. 1). By pureness may have a moral sense or a constitutional sense. That is, it may refer to freedom from immorality or singleness of motive and purpose. It is not unlikely that Paul has both in view. By knowledge. The context here implies insight to cope with difficult situations. By longsuffering, by kindness. The former is a passive idea the latter is active. In the one there is patient submission to injustice, in the other there is the kind disposition to do good to others, providing enabling gifts, comfort, and assurance (cf. I Cor 12:7-11; Jn 14:16-17; II Cor 1:3-4, 22). By love unfeigned (cf. I Cor 13), By the word of truth refers to the "preaching" of the truth (cf. 4:2). By the power of God has relation to his apostolic ministry (cf. Rom 15:14-21; I Cor 15:10). By the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left. This has in mind, primarily, the righteousness of God in justification (cf. Rom 5:1-2). Hence the expression is equivalent to "armor of God" (Eph 6:11) and does not denote one piece of armor, but all of it. By this means Paul was protected on every side.

8-10. Prompted by the expression on the right hand and on the left in the previous verse, the apostle now analyzes the extremes of life and here shows that regardless of the situation, whether ridding the wave of popularity or digging in against the onslaughts of opposition he was always approved a faithful minister of God. As he does in verses 4-5, here too he arranges his thoughts in three groups of triplets. By honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true. Regardless of the reputation or report that precedes him, Paul never compromised on the integrity of his message. As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed. In the front lines of the spiritual warfare Paul can be seen weary but undaunted, beaten but not broken, bruised but unbowed. As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things. Paul had learned to abound and be abased, he had learned to have much, and nothing. For he had learned, on a practical level, the lesson of our Lord in Luke 12:15. "... a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

C. The Challenge of Paul. 6:11-7:16.

1. The entreaty for reconciliation. 6:11-7:4.

This section turns on three imperatives. Be ye also enlarged (vs. 13), be ye not unequally yoked together (vs. 14), and receive us (7:2). Thus Paul deals successively with: (a) sympathy toward himself (6:11-13); (b) separation from the world (6:14-7:1); and (c) surety of reconciliation (7:2-4).

a. Sympathy towards Paul. 6:11-13.

11. O ye Corinthians. Paul addresses his readers by name in only two other places (Gal 3:1; Phil 4:15). In each case it reflects deep emotion. Our mouth is opened unto you (lit., "our mouth has spoken freely"). On the use of this expression see also Matthew 5:2; Acts 8:32, 35; and Ephesians 6:19. On its significance in this context compare 3:12. Our heart is enlarged (Gr platynō, "widen"). This is a common expression from the LXX (cf. Gen 9:27; Ps 4:1; 119:32). To enlarge the heart gives the idea of increasing its capacity for sympathy and understanding.

12. Ye are not straitened in us. This is the antithesis of enlarged. Paul is saying that there is no want of room in his heart for the Corinthians. But ye are straitened in your own bowels. That is, the problem lies with Paul's readers and their ability to receive him.

13. Be ye also enlarged. If the Corinthians would but open themselves to the apostle the problem could be resolved. In the "ministry of reconciliation" there is no room for bickering between the brethren.

On the other hand, Paul's principle of openness does not justify compromise.

b. Separation from the world. 6:14-7:4.

14. Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers. In 8 By honour and dishonour, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true;

9 As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed;

10 As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things.

11 O ye Co-rinthi-ans, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged.

12 Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels.

13 Now for a recompence in the same, (I speak as unto my children,) be ye also enlarged.

14 Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?

15 And what concord hath Christ with Bē'li-al? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

17 Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you,

18 And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

CHAPTER 7

HAVING therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

2 Receive us; we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, we have defrauded no man.

3 I speak not this to condemn you: for I have said before, that ye are in our hearts to die and live with you.

enlarging one's capacity to receive others the apostle is careful to insist that he has only believers in mind. There is no doubt that he makes special reference to the situation in Corinth with all of its vice and pagan associations (cf. I Cor 6:6-20; 8:1-13; 10:14-33).

15. Belial ("worthlessness" or "wickedness"). The expression may also be used in the sense of "wicked one" (cf. II Sam 23:6; Job 34:18). Here it is used as a reference to Satan, ("the wicked one" in I Jn 5:19). Infidel is the same term used in the previous verse rendered "unbeliever."

16. Temple of God. In Scripture this expression has a variety of meanings: (a) It may have reference to heaven as God's dwelling place (cf. Ps 11:2; Hab 2:20); (b) It may refer to the church as God's temple (Eph 2:20; I Cor 3:16); or (c) It may have reference to the individual believer as a temple of God (I Cor 6:19). The plural pronouns in the Old Testament quotation suggest that Paul had the second idea in mind in this passage. That is, collectively, they constitute the temple of God. Accordingly, the promise of God in Exodus 29:45 and Leviticus 26:11, 12 applies to their situation as well. I will dwell in them, and walk in them ("in" is best rendered "among"). Paul does not quote directly from the Old Testament here, but seems to be employing the language of the Old Testament. I will be their God, and they shall be my people. This great promise to Abraham and to his natural seed, is now applicable to all who are sons of Abraham by faith (Gal 3:6-16).

17-18. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate (cf. Isa 52:11-12). And I will receive you (Ezk 20:34). And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters (cf. Isa 43:6; Hos 1:10). Separation from the ungodly and those who compromise their Christian standards is a basic biblical doctrine related to church discipline. This ultimate connection of Paul's thought here is with the ministry of reconciliation (5:18). He has shown that it was motivated by the terror of the Lord (5:11), energized by the love of Christ (5:14), exemplified by the experience of Paul (6:1-10), and qualified by the promise of God (6:16-18). In what follows, he shows that it provides incentive to holy living. The Apostle Paul always roots practical Christianity in sound Bible doctrine. The exhortation is to holiness before God and ultimately, to reconciliation with the apostle.

7:1. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. The promises of God demand a purity of heart and life on the part of those who receive them.

2. The apostle now turns back upon his previous concern, that is, their relationship to him. Here is the third imperative, Receive us. Since they are the temple of God and since their relationship ought to be with God and His people rather than with unbelievers and wickedness, their hearts should be open to Paul. For he has wronged no man . . . corrupted no man . . . defrauded no man. The biblical definition of separation has both a negative and a positive side. The negative, expressed in 6:14-17, is that the believer abstains from fellowship with all who are opposed to God. But the positive side is that the believer is open to all that are truly the children of God and such individuals will be evidenced by the quality of their lives. In this category Paul places himself.

3. I speak not this to condemn you: The apostle does not insinuate that the Corinthian church was reprobate, or that they were not genuine believers. For, Paul practiced what he preached. He says, ye are in our heart. This could not be true if they were not believers. Thus, he conveys his unfeigned love to this wayward assembly. To die and live with you. Neither death

4 Great is my boldness of speech toward you, great is my glorying of you: I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation.

5 For, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears.

6 Nevertheless God, that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of Titus;

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us your earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, though I did repent: for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

10 For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death.

11 For behold this selfsame thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement desire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge! In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that suffered wrong, but that our care for you in the sight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore we were comforted in your comfort: yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all.

14 For if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I am not ashamed; but as we spake all things to you in truth, even so our boasting, which I made before Titus, is found a truth.

15 And his inward affection is more abundant toward you, whilst he nor any other circumstance of life could destroy Paul's deep affection for the Corinthian believers.

4. Great is my boldness of speech toward you, great is my glorying of you. This expresses joyful confidence. I am filled with comfort, I am exceedingly joyful in all our tribulation. And rightly so. He has just received word from Titus that the Corinthians were actively seeking to rectify the evils and abuse in the assembly.

2. The encouragement from their response. 7:5-16.

In this passage Paul discusses: (a) the comfort of his friend Titus (vss. 5-7); (b) the correction of his letter (vss. 8-12); and (c) the consolation of his spirit (vss. 13-16).

a. Comfort of Titus. 7:5-7.

5-6. Upon leaving Troas and coming into Macedonia Paul's anxiety over the Corinthian believers was evident (2:12). Without were fightings. There were external wranglings all about. Within were fears. Not the least bit assuaged by the situation at Corinth. God, that comforteth (cf. 1:3-4). Comforted us by the coming of Titus, (i.e., his arrival from Corinth) with the news that the church had accepted Paul's letter (the "severe letter," 2:3-4).

7. Your earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me. The Corinthians had evidenced toward Titus a repentant spirit and a desire to be reconciled to Paul.

b. Correction of the letter. 7:8-12.

8-10. For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent. Although for a while Paul was sorry that he had written as he did, he is now thankful. Not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance (on "repentance" cf. Mt 3:8; Lk 5:32; Acts 5:31; Heb 12:17). The criminal may feel sorry that he is caught, but that is not sorrow after a godly manner. What happened at Corinth agitated the believers to realignment with the will and purpose of God. This made all of Paul's efforts worthwhile.

11-12. Revenge. The apostle is not gloating that circumstances have turned out in his favor, but rejoicing that a sense of justice (Gr ekdikēsis) had been aroused in them to the extent that they felt a moral obligation to discipline sin in the assembly. Not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that suffered wrong refers to the individuals involved in I Corinthians 5. This indicates that the offender's father is still alive, thus making his sin all the more heinous.

c. Consolation. 7:13-16.

13. Therefore we were comforted in your comfort. The comfort Paul could not find (vs. 5), is supplied by the report of the spiritual progress at Corinth.

14. I have boasted. In Paul's discussions with Titus, previously, he was convinced that the opposition in Corinth was coming from only a small group of dissenters. But the vast majority of the congregation wanted to do what was right. This conviction is confirmed by Titus' report so that Paul is able to say, even so our boasting, which I made before Titus, is found a truth.

15-16. With fear and trembling ye received him. Not that they cower before him but they treat him with respect and honor remembereth the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling ye received him.

II CORINTHIANS 7:16

16 I rejoice therefore that I have confidence in you in all things.

(Eph 6:5). I have confidence in you in all things. Paul concludes this section fully assured that the Corinthian believers will take whatever steps are necessary to restore unity in the church, to enforce discipline, and to be restored to fellowship with himself.

III. APPEAL OF PAUL'S MINISTRY. 8:1-9:15.

Paul is commonly credited with being a great theologian and missionary. But what is often not known of him is that he was also a great financial genius of the early church. Chapters 8 and 9 of this epistle concern the offering for the poor saints at Jerusalem. Concerning this offering several factors may be noted.

It took eight years to accomplish (from the Council of Jerusalem in ca. A.D. 49, to Paul's arrest in A.D. 57). It involved thousands of miles of travel, covering four Roman provinces and including most of the Gentile churches. There were at least ten collectors involved. Since it is here that Titus is first introduced to the New Testament narrative, it is likely that this constituted one of his first responsibilities. The full amount collected was apparently significant since it excited the attention of the Roman governor, Porcius Festus, who hoped to get his hands on some of it (Acts 24:17-26). It nearly cost Paul his life and it did cost him much of his freedom.

Pentecost and poverty have long distinguished the Christian church (Acts 2:45). But the problem facing the church at this time was especially acute. On March 23, A.D. 37, in the reign of Caligula, there occurred a great earthquake. It was followed by another in the reign of Claudius, accompanied by widespread crop failures. The Christians, the poorest of all, had their source of help in the church of Antioch. Agabus, the prophet, had announced a famine at hand (Acts 11:28), and the fellowship determined to send relief. Saul and Barnabas were chosen to take the contribution to the elders at Jerusalem (Acts 11:30). They, most likely, were the initiators of its collection. So Paul was quite well trained in famine relief and in the art of taking collections. God is preparing him for something greater. A few years later, at the Council of Jerusalem (A.D. 49), when Paul and Barnabas, again in Jerusalem, were defending themselves and the liberty of the Gentile converts, a special plea was added to the decree. The Diaspora and the Christians were to remember the suffering and poverty of the Judaean Christians (Acts 15:23-29). And this, Paul later says, he was very anxious to do (Gal 2:10). From here on a definite plan of missionary giving becomes a primary part of every church Paul establishes (I Cor 16:1 ff.), and he urges it upon all those to whom he writes (Rom 15:26-27).

The peculiar difficulties at Corinth opened up the whole picture of the offering. They demonstrated a special willingness to pledge (II Cor 8:10), and their pledging inspired the Galatians, the Macedonians, and the Romans. Verbal instructions were followed by questions and written instructions regarding how they were to give and how it was to be handled (I Cor 16:1ff.; II Cor 9:1). There was careful, businesslike handling of all the finances. Each was to vote their own financial representative (II Cor 8:23). We know who some of these were. From Berea there was Sopater, from Thessalonica there were Aristarchus and Secundus, from Asia there were Tychicus and Trophimus, from Galatia there were Gaius of Derbe and possibly Timothy (Acts 20:4). Since no one is specifically mentioned as coming from Achaia, it is likely that Luke or Titus or perhaps even the apostle himself represented them.

The spiritual nature of this offering is evident in the terms Paul uses. He never calls it "money" because he never seems to think of it as such. Instead, he calls it "grace" or "generosity" or "blessing" or "partnership." Thus, Paul speaks of the "grace of giving" as one of the highest Christian virtues. It would seem that such explicit directions for the offering would be adequate and apparently this was the case in Galatia and Macedonia. But Corinth had failed, though she had been first to pledge. Now special action and instructions are necessary. Hence, there is the special attention devoted to the subject in these chapters.

The section turns on the concept of "faithfulness." As this is exemplified in the apostle, in the previous section, it is now exhorted upon the Corinthian believers. His argument is structured as follows: faithfulness illustrated (8:1-5), faithfulness exhorted (8:6-15); faithfulness delegated (8:16-9:5); and faithfulness directed (9:6-15).

CHAPTER 8

MOREOVER, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia;

2 How that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality.

3 For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves;

4 Praying us with much intreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us the fellowship of the ministering to the saints.

5 And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God.

6 Inasmuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same grace also.

7 Therefore, as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also.

8 I speak not by commandment, but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love.

9 For ye know the grace of our Lord

A. Faithfulness Illustrated. 8:1-5.

8:1. Moreover indicates a new subject. We do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia (lit., "we want to make known to you the grace of God given in the churches of Macedonia"). The Macedonian churches of Philippi, Thessalonica, and Berea had demonstrated extreme liberality in their giving (cf. 11:9; Phil 2:25; 4:15, 18).

2. Trial of affliction . . . deep poverty. Both expressions stand in sharp relief against the abundance of their joy . . . the riches of their liberality. Instead of allowing circumstances to inhibit their giving, the churches of Macedonia turned personal and financial distress into a unique opportunity to demonstrate the riches of God's grace.

3. For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power (lit., "according to their ability and beyond their ability"). Their giving was not measured inversely according to their own needs, but proportionately to the need of others. They were willing of themselves. They did not need to be coerced; their giving was strictly voluntary.

4-5. Praying . . . with much entreaty that we would receive the gift. More is to be seen here by what is omitted than what is expressed. That they found it necessary to beg the apostle to participate in the collection for Jerusalem suggests that the apostle must have considered their own needs to be sufficiently extreme to exempt them from participation. The fellowship of the ministering to the saints. Giving is a form of fellowship (note, theme of the previous epistle, 1 Cor 1:9). And this they did, not as we hoped (lit., "not as we had expected"). Such giving on the part of these believers was totally unexpected by the apostle in light of their own needs. But first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God. The proper order of New Testament giving is expressed here. "First" is understood in order of priority, not chronology. The gift is first to God and then to the saints.

B. Faithfulness Exhorted. 8:6-15.

6. We desired Titus, that as he had begun. In Titus' previous visit he, no doubt, had already begun discussing the collection (cf. 1 Cor 16:1). So he would also finish in you the same grace also. At Paul's suggestion Titus is delegated the responsibility of overseeing the offering at Corinth.

7. See that ye abound in this grace also. As the previous verse explained Titus' commission, here Paul expresses his expectations on the part of the Corinthian church. As ye abound in every thing (cf. 1 Cor 1:5, 7). This expression does two things. First, it stands in contrast to the poverty of the Macedonian church with obvious implications. Second, at the outset, it expresses to the Corinthians exactly what Paul expects of them.

8. I speak not by commandment. No legal stipulation regulates the believer's giving, but on account of the forwardness of others. By calling to mind the zeal demonstrated by others. Paul intends to prove the sincerity of your love (this is best understood in light of 9:2).

9. For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that,

II CORINTHIANS 8:10

Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.

10 And herein I give my advice: for this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be forward a year ago.

11 Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have.

12 For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened:

14 But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want: that there may be equality:

15 As it is written, He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack.

16 But thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you.

17 For indeed he accepted the exhortation; but being more forward, of his own accord he went unto you.

18 And we have sent with him the brother, whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the churches;

19 And not that only, but who was also chosen of the churches to travel with us with this grace, which is administered by us to the glory of the same Lord, and declaration of your ready mind:

20 Avoiding this, that no man should blame us in this abundance which is administered by us:

21 Providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men.

22 And we have sent with them our brother, whom we have oftentimes proved diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, upon the great confidence which I have in you.

23 Whether any do enquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellowhelper concerning you: or our brethren be enquired of, they are the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ.

24 Wherefore shew ye to them, and before the churches, the proof of your love, and of our boasting on your behalf.

though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor. There is no need to read into this verse any more than is warranted by the context. On the self-emptying of Christ, see Philippians 2:7 and Hebrews 1:2. The intent of Paul's argument is not unlike that of verse 8. Sacrificial love was exemplified by the Macedonian churches. But the supreme example of such love is our Lord.

10-11. And herein I give my advice ("here is my opinion on the matter"). For this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be forward a year ago (see 9:2). It is only right for Paul to expect the Corinthian church to participate. This was their expressed desire more than a year ago. Now therefore perform the doing of it. Paul asks only that they follow through with their original commitment.

12. For if there be first a willing mind. In the ministry of giving, God is concerned first with the attitude of the individual, not the precise amount that he gives. That, of course, varies according to that a man hath.

13-14. Paul does not intend to merely transfer the burden from one group to another. But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want. He wants to equalize matters.

15. As the Scripture has it, He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack (cf. Ex 16:18). Hodge (p. 206) observes "property is like manna, it will not bear hoarding."

C. Faithfulness Delegated. 8:16-9:5.

16-17. Titus illustrates the reciprocity implied in verse 14. But thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you. What Paul is asking of the Corinthians in terms of spontaneous loving concern for brethren in need, is reflected in the attitude of Titus toward them. Notice here that Paul understands the character qualities distinctive of a spiritual life are not intrinsic to human nature, but given by God.

18. We have sent with him the brother. All that is known of this individual is what is indicated here. Since his name is not given, it is useless to conjecture who he was. At any rate, he was known throughout all the churches.

19. Like Titus, he was chosen of the churches to travel with us with this grace. He was selected by the churches to assist the apostles in overseeing the collection for Jerusalem. Most likely, he was one of the men cited in Acts 20:4.

20-21. Such men were selected so that no one would question how the funds were acquired or what was done with them subsequently. Providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men. Especially in financial matters, the apostle is scrupulously aware of his vulnerability to criticism.

22-24. And we have sent with them our brother. Along with the previously unnamed individual (vs. 18), there will be one other who will be accompanying Titus when he arrives.

CHAPTER 9

FOR as touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you:

2 For I know the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, that A-chā'ia was ready a year ago; and your zeal hath provoked very many.

3 Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf; that, as I said, ye may be ready:

4 Lest haply if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, ye) should be ashamed in this same confident boasting.

5 Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your bounty, whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness.

6 But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.

7 Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:

9 (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth for ever.

9:1-2. It is superfluous for me to write. Paul rendered this exhortation, and his earlier one, unnecessary. In fact, it was Paul's understanding that the offering in Achaia was ready a year ago and he had cited their zeal as an example of sacrificial giving and willingness to give.

3-4. Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf. Of course, Paul knows that the Corinthian church has been derelict in discharging its original commitment in this regard. Thus, while he applies pressure he tactfully suggests that he is only concerned that they be on schedule. That, as I said, ye may be ready. In the event they were unprepared, it would not only be an embarrassment to the apostle but a disgrace to themselves.

5. Lest those of the assembly at Corinth should interpret the ministry of Paul's three companions in the wrong way, he assures them that they are there only to oversee and to expedite the offering. His desire is only that those who wish to give and who are able to give have the opportunity to do so.

D. Faithfulness Directed. 9:6-15.

6. But this (lit., "as to this, however"). Paul now turns his attention to some positive instruction and encouragement regarding giving. In so doing he provides the church with the clearest and most comprehensive treatment of the subject to be found in the New Testament. His approach is to extract principles from both the Old Testament and experience to demonstrate why and how they are to give. He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully (cf. Prov 11:24; Lk 6:38; Gal 6:7). One's return is determined by his investment. The Greek expression ep eulogiais ordinarily translated "with blessings," here has the sense of "freely." While it does not suggest "undiscriminating" giving, it does denote "unrestrained" giving.

7. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. The apostle does not have a minimum quota, nor yet a minimum percentage figure in mind. For each individual it is an amount to be determined before the Lord. Not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver. There is to be a willing heart and a sincere desire on the part of the one giving in order to participate. Paul is not so much interested in their money, nor is God, for that matter, as the passage from Proverbs 22:9 indicates. The Greek term hilaron from which the English term "hilarious" derives, is best rendered as the AV suggests, "cheerful." Giving is not a joke; it is serious business, but it is also a delightful experience.

8. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you. Paul's logic is identical to that of our Lord in Matthew 6:33. When the temporal concerns of life are placed first, God is usually excluded. But when the kingdom of God is placed first, God sees to it that the temporal needs are included. That ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work. Giving is a grace that has reciprocal benefits.

9. As it is written (cf. Ps 112:9), He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth for ever. Of course, neither Paul nor the psalmist intended to mean that every believer will always be wealthy, nor yet that the believer who gives regularly and faithfully will always be wealthy. Both experience and the context (cf. 8:2) deny this. He only intends to say that the abundance of God's riches are available to those who are rightly related to Him. His righteousness remaineth for ever. The righteous acts of the man who readily gives and supplies the needs of others have eternal value.

10. This should best be rendered "now he that ministereth

10 Now he that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness;)

II CORINTHIANS 9:11

11 Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.

12 For the administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God;

13 Whiles by the experiment of this ministration they glorify God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men;

14 And by their prayer for you, which long after you for the exceeding grace of God in you.

15 Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift.

seed to the sower and bread for your food will supply you seed sown and increase fruits of your righteousness.” The AV renders it as a prayer to God. Actually it is an affirmation of the surety of God’s supply.

11. Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God (lit., “you shall be enriched”). This unusual use of the participle is not foreign to the New Testament, nor yet to the Apostle Paul (cf. Acts 15:22; Eph 3:17; 4:2; Col 2:2; 3:16).

12-13. Giving consummates in a twofold grace. It supplieth the want of the saints, and it is abundant (“overflowing”) by means of many thanksgivings unto God. The final result is that God is glorified. It will be noted that this process is cyclical. Out of the riches of God’s grace He supplies the needs of the believer. The believer, in an expression of gratitude and liberality, shares of his abundance with others. They, in turn, direct their expressions of thanksgiving (“grace”) to God from whom the supply originated. Thus, the cycle is complete. And so Paul says they glorify God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them. The act of giving is evidence of obedience to the gospel.

14. And by their prayer for you. The connection is with “abundant” in verse 12. Another positive result of faithful giving is that the recipients are induced to extend the giver before the Throne of Grace. It is in this way that the giver is compensated by the recipient of the gift. This further explains the thought of 8:14.

15. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift. The reference is to the gift of God’s Son, but the verse is more than a spontaneous outburst of the writer. It is the supreme illustration of the principles Paul has just enumerated. As the example of Christ is applied to the experience of suffering in I Peter 2:21, so Paul applies the example of Christ to the grace of giving.

IV. AUTHORITY OF PAUL’S MINISTRY. 10:1-13:10.

In the next three chapters Paul’s tone changes drastically. It is for this reason that some suggest that this section constitutes the text of the “severe letter” of 7:8. However, as has been noted earlier, it is more likely that the change in approach may be more readily accounted for by a change in the direction of Paul’s words. In the first nine chapters he is writing to the majority of the congregation who love and appreciate him. In the remaining chapters he turns his attention to that small pocket of resistance which continues to voice opposition to his ministry. Apparently these are former Jews professing faith in Christ (11:22), but who are actually “false apostles” (11:13). Since the apostle is now certain that the majority of the believers are with him, he is emboldened to deal more forcefully and directly with this group. And so he will defend his apostleship (10:1-18), he will boast of his experiences (11:1-12:10), he will demonstrate his credentials (12:11-18), and he will charge them to repentance (12:19-13:10).

A. The Defense of the Apostle. 10:1-18.

Paul defends his apostleship here in terms of his attitude (vss. 1-6), his authority (vss. 7-11), and his divine commendation (vss. 12-18).

1. By his attitudes. 10:1-6.

10:1. Now indicates the change of subject. Myself is emphatic. I Paul. The change in Paul’s tone is immediately evident. Like the boxer squaring off in the ring, his stance is clearly visible. By the meekness and gentleness of Christ (cf. the parallel “mercies of God” in Rom 12:1). The apostle not only understands that his authority comes from Christ, but even the accompanying grace with which that authority is exercised. In

CHAPTER 10

NOW I Paul myself beseech you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who in presence am base among you, but being absent am bold toward you:

this case, it has a particularly ironic tone in the words: who in presence am base among you, but being absent am bold toward you. Paul had been charged with demonstrating undue boldness in his letters without the strength of character to back what he had to say in person (10:10).

2. But I beseech you, that I may not be bold ("please do not force me to prove this allegation to be false"). Some, which think of us as if we walked according to the flesh. The charge is not that he is carnal, but that he is lacking divine unction in his ministry and has usurped the apostolic office to himself.

3. To this Paul replies: we walk in the flesh, that is, we are just human beings, but we do not war after the flesh. To paraphrase: "you see me as a person and perhaps that is not convincing. But if you walk with me awhile and see what my work requires me to do, then you will be convinced."

4. For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal. If Paul did not possess divine authority, he could not possess divine power. But Paul's strength was mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.

5. Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God. The AV properly renders the previous verse as a parenthesis. This is correct since the Greek participle kathairountes ("pulling down") connects with "war" at the end of verse 3. Paul continues with the military metaphor in the use of "strongholds." These were high military battlements thrown up in battle. Here, they denote opposition to Paul's work in the gospel. They are literally, "pulled down" and every thought is brought into captivity . . . to the obedience of Christ. One cannot help but reflect on I Corinthians 1. The apostle subsumes all human wisdom, philosophy, and authority under the divine. Paul acted on the assumption that any of the devices brought against him at the contrivance of men would fall before the power of God and the wisdom of God.

6. And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience. Continuing the metaphor, Paul is still at war. He is casting down strongholds. He is leading captives. Now he is prepared to punish all disobedience. When your obedience is fulfilled. Paul does not intend to deal with them quite so severely until he has given them ample time to repent and fall into submission both to the Lord and to himself.

2. By his authority. 10:7-11.

7. Paul's attitude is fully justified by his delegated authority, as will be shown in what follows. Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? This connects with those which think of us as if we walked according to the flesh (vs. 2). If such an individual should trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him know that even so are we. The opposition indicated here may have derived from the faction within the assembly that identified itself with the name of Christ (I Cor 1:12). At any rate they were giving out that they were from Christ and Paul was not. The apostle was quick to assert that they had no authority or advantage which did not apply equally to him.

8-10. For though ("even if") I should boast somewhat more of our authority implies that Paul is showing restraint. Which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction. His restraint is due to an overriding desire to help them, not hinder them. I should not be ashamed (lit., "I shall not be ashamed"). He contains himself so as to provide no opportunity for criticism. It has been on this account that they have brought charge against him, For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible. Paul does not wish to give any cause for them to point the finger again.

11. On the contrary, he intends to demonstrate that his ac-

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present with that confidence, wherewith I think to be bold against some, which think of us as if we walked according to the flesh.

3 For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh:

4 (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds:)

5 Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ;

6 And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.

7 Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again, that, as he is Christ's, even so are we Christ's.

8 For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, I should not be ashamed:

9 That I may not seem as if I would terrify you by letters.

10 For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible.

11 Let such an one think this, that, such as we are in word by letters when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present.

II CORINTHIANS 10:12

12 For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise.

13 But we will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.

14 For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you: for we are come as far as to you also in preaching the gospel of Christ:

15 Not boasting of things without our measure, that is, of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be enlarged by you according to our rule abundantly, 16 To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's line of things made ready to our hand.

17 But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

18 For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth.

tions will correspond to his words. Such will we be also in deed when we are present. He does not give empty threats.

3. By divine commendation. 10:12-18.

12-15. Paul does not measure his credentials as his enemies do, measuring themselves by themselves. Such an approach Paul says is not wise. Rather he will measure his credentials by an objective standard, a measure to reach even unto you. What he has in mind is his "track record." Where Paul's enemies cited their authority, he cites his accomplishments. For we are come as far as to you also in preaching the gospel of Christ. Paul's critics were not responsible for founding the church at Corinth; he was. Paul is not riding on another's coattails. He is not boasting of things without our measure, i.e., another man's labors. He is an original. Accordingly, he is prepared to take credit even for their spiritual growth; as he puts it: when your faith is increased, that we shall be enlarged by you. The principle of 9:10 not only applies to one's material possessions, but also to the investments of one's energies.

16-18. Paul does not intend to allow this situation or any other to inhibit him from going even further. To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you. He had no intention of lowering himself to boast in another man's line of things. Lest they interpret what he has to say as expressions of self-conceit, Paul shows that in the final analysis, his commendation comes from Christ. Paul was always careful to show that any success he enjoyed in the ministry was not due to his own innate ability but Christ working in him (cf. Rom 15:17-18). Thus, his boast is not in himself, but in the Lord.

B. The Boast of the Apostle. 11:1-12:10.

The boasting that Paul is about to engage in stands as an apparent contradiction to what he has said in 10:17-18. Thus, at the outset, he must present the basis for his boast (11:1-15). This he follows with the proof of his boast (vss. 16-33). Then he relates the consequences of his boast (12:1-10).

1. The basis for his boast. 11:1-15.

11:1. Bear with me a little in my folly. Already the apostle is uneasy about what he has to do. For him it is "foolishness." And yet, as repugnant as it is to him, it is necessary.

2. For indicates "reason." What follows answers why they must bear with him. Paul has their own well-being in mind. I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ. They were in danger of being turned from Christ by being turned away from the ministry of the apostle. As an "ambassador for Christ," he realizes he must win them back to himself in order to win them back to Christ.

3. What is implied in the previous verse is expressed here. I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtily, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. His deepest concern is that the Corinthians are being seduced from their faithfulness to Christ.

4. Paul could understand if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached. Or another spirit or another gospel. If such were the case, ye might well bear with him. Paul is being ironic here. The Corinthians would be justified in listening to the false teachers if what they had to say introduced them to a genuine gospel which they had not yet received. The irony of the passage cannot be escaped. That which Paul finds necessary to beg of them in verse 1 they had willingly offered to false teachers.

CHAPTER 11

WOULD to God ye could bear with me a little in my folly: and indeed bear with me.

2 For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy: for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtily, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him.

5 For I suppose I was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles.

6 But though I be rude in speech, yet not in knowledge; but we have been thoroughly made manifest among you in all things.

7 Have I committed an offence in abasing myself that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?

8 I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service.

9 And when I was present with you, and wanted, I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me the brethren which came from Macedonia supplied: and in all things I have kept myself from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep myself.

10 As the truth of Christ is in me, no man shall stop me of this boasting in the regions of A-chā'ia.

11 Wherefore? because I love you not? God knoweth.

12 But what I do, that I will do, that I may cut off occasion from them which desire occasion; that wherein they glory, they may be found even as we.

13 For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

14 And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works.

16 I say again, Let no man think me a fool; if otherwise, yet as a fool receive me, that I may boast myself a little.

17 That which I speak, I speak it not after the Lord, but as it were foolishly, in this confidence of boasting.

18 Seeing that many glory after the flesh, I will glory also.

5-6. Although Paul was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles it was not immediately evident in his personal ministry. He was rude in speech and this was apparently offensive to some. Yet he could not have been criticized in knowledge. And, as for the message that he preached, the Corinthians had been thoroughly made manifest . . . in all things. The AV is misleading here. He has in mind making manifest the things of the gospel. The tone is clearly ironic and the contrast is with verse 4. They may have criticized his style, but they could add nothing to his sermon.

7. Have I committed an offense in abasing myself? (I Cor 9:1-18). Irony fairly drips from his pen. Their only legitimate criticism was his self-effacing manner. I have preached to you the gospel of God freely. In eighteen months of ministry he never once extracted from them a living wage.

8. I robbed other churches is hyperbolic, and intended to shame them. Taking wages of them, to do you service. Paul, no doubt, has the Philippian church primarily in mind (Phil 4:15-16). He could have mentioned the fact that he worked with his own hands to sustain a living on his first arrival in Corinth. It is suggestive of his restraint that he does not.

9. And so will I keep myself. Paul's behavior at Corinth was unimpeachable. And he was not going to start now allowing his readers to force him to compromise his principles (cf. Acts 18:3; 20:34-35; I Thess 2:9; II Thess 3:8; I Cor 9:15-18).

10. This is an oath. No man shall stop me of this boasting in the regions of Achaia. It is significant that Paul readily receives aid from the Macedonian churches and refuses it from those at Corinth.

11-12. Why? Because he has no interest in them and no desire for their help? No, but that I may cut off occasion from them which desire occasion. Those who are looking for things to criticize will find no help from Paul. That wherein they glory, they may be found even as we. There is method in Paul's madness. He knows that if they are to bring accusation against his character, theirs had better, at least, match his; i.e., they will be forced to stop merchandising the gospel.

13. For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. Until now Paul has been dealing gratuitously with his enemies. He now lays his cards on the table and says what he really thinks of them (cf. Phil 3:2).

14. And no marvel. It is no surprise that they have been able to deceive the Corinthian believers for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. The passage calls to mind the culmination of our Lord's discussion with the Pharisees in John 8. The specific allusion Paul makes is not altogether clear. Perhaps it is to Job 1:6.

15. Therefore it is no great thing. They were acting only according to their nature. Whose end shall be according to their works. Their judgment will not be according to the role they have assumed. One day their true character will be revealed for "that day shall declare it."

2. The proof of his boast. 11:16-33.

16. What Paul is about to do he considers foolishness. It runs crossgrain to every fiber of his being. But the spiritual welfare of a congregation in danger of being led astray is at stake, and it becomes necessary to boast myself a little.

17. I speak it not after the Lord. Paul is not here disclaiming inspiration. But, what he is about to do, is out of character with his mission from the Lord.

18. Seeing that many glory after the flesh (lit., "since many glory after fleshly standards"), I will glory also. If the Corin-

19 For ye suffer fools gladly, seeing ye yourselves are wise.

20 For ye suffer, if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take of you, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face.

21 I speak as concerning reproach, as though we had been weak. Howbeit whereinsoever any is bold, (I speak foolishly,) I am bold also.

22 Are they Hebrews? so am I. Are they Israelites? so am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? so am I.

23 Are they ministers of Christ? (I speak as a fool) I am more; in labours more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft.

24 Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one.

25 Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep;

26 In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren;

27 In weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.

thians wish to qualify Paul on strictly human standards he will give them a curriculum vitae.

19-20. Paul seems to have a hard time getting into his task, i.e., to boast about himself. However the irony continues to drip from his pen. Ye suffer fools gladly. Since you so readily receive fools I shall attempt to qualify myself as one. Seeing ye yourselves are wise (cf. I Cor 4:8). This trait seems to be characteristic of their brand of wisdom. Their faulty sense of values also ties in with their warped sense of discrimination. Ye suffer. As in verse 19, “ye tolerate.” If a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take of you, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face (cf. Gal 1:7; I Pet 5:3). In this strange turn of events these believers had forsaken their own loving father in the faith and had subjected themselves to spiritual tyrants who were self-seeking and destructive of true spirituality.

21-22. I speak as concerning reproach (lit., “by way of disparagement”), as though we had been weak. Such tolerance had hardly been extended to the apostle. Howbeit whereinsoever any is bold (I speak foolishly,) I am bold also. While in reality it amounts to nothing, if one wishes to discuss personal qualifications, Paul will advance his own. Here Paul boasts about his nationality. Hebrews . . . Israelites . . . seed of Abraham indicate that Paul’s enemies were primarily Jewish. On Paul’s claim see also Philippians 3:5.

23-27. Then Paul boasts of the cost of his commitment to Christ. Are they ministers of Christ? (I speak as a fool). The expression is hypothetical. If they are ministers of Christ as they claim to be, then I am more. Discipleship cannot be purchased at bargain prices (Lk 9:23). The cost exacted of the Apostle Paul is measured by the tabulation which follows.

What Paul does here is demonstrate the depth of his commitment by delineating the sufferings and trials he endured because of it. In deaths oft (lit., “in many deaths”). This is tantamount to saying “I die daily” (I Cor 15:31). Forty stripes save one. Deuteronomy 25:3 forbids the Jews to inflict more than forty stripes upon an offender. Scrupulous in their observance of Moses’ law, they were in the habit of giving no more than 39 (so as not to go over the limit of the law). Once was I stoned (Acts 14:19). Thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep. Since Paul penned this letter long before the shipwreck recorded in Acts 27, it must be reckoned that the incidents of which he speaks find their mention in Scripture only here. There are numerous occasions recorded in Acts 13:1-20:5 when Paul traveled by sea. Since Luke, the author of the book of Acts, did not accompany Paul much of that time (apparently only in Acts 16:10-17), it is not surprising that some of the incidentals have been omitted from his account. Perils of waters (“perils of rivers”). Along the roads traversed by Paul there were numerous rivers which seasonally swell with flood waters, and which to this day, are legendary for the perils they pose for the traveler. This, especially along the Appian Way the road extending through Lebanon from Jerusalem to Antioch. Perils of robbers. The area from Perga to Antioch in Pisidia was especially known for this (Acts 13:14). Perils among false brethren. Halfway through the list of Paul’s perils from “outside” he includes his enemies at Corinth. What is implied by this is explicitly stated in 11:13. In fastings often. The context does not view this as a ritualistic observance practiced by the Pharisees. Rather it is an “involuntary abstinence.” While it is admitted that nesteia is ordinarily used of ritualistic fastings (cf. Lk 2:37; Acts 14:23), it is unlikely that such is the sense here. From its connection with hunger and thirst it is not unlikely that there is a touch of irony here. No doubt Paul’s Jewish adversaries at Corinth made a practice of ritualistic fasting and 28 Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches.

29 Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not?

30 If I must needs glory, I will glory of the things which concern mine infirmities.

31 The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is blessed for evermore, knoweth that I lie not.

32 In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king kept the city of the Dām'as-cēnes with a garrison, desirous to apprehend me:

33 And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands.

took pride in it. On the other hand, Paul fasted because the pressures of a faithful ministry required it of him.

28. Besides those things that are without (lit., "not to mention those things which are besides"). To enumerate the things that came upon him daily in the care of all the churches, Paul could go on. But he chooses not to.

29-30. Instead he chooses to boast, not in his ability to endure hardness, but in his weakness. Who is weak, and I am not weak? (cf. I Cor 9:22). Who is offended, and I burn not? ("Who is caused to stumble, and I am not indignant?") The apostle is deeply concerned about the weaker brethren and he "burned" with indignation when he thought of those who would lead them astray. On the relation of his weakness to the evidences of God's strength see also 12:10; 13:9; I Corinthians 4:10.

31-33. Paul's thought here is difficult to connect with either what precedes or what follows. It sounds as though he is about to introduce a discussion of his experiences shortly after his conversion. In this regard he asserts I lie not. What he says is in essential agreement with Acts 9:24-25. The only addition is Aretas the king. When one correlates this with Acts it must be inferred that Aretas was acting at the behest of the Jews. Why Paul does not continue at this point to pursue this discussion can only be speculated. Perhaps he was interrupted or distracted. At any rate, this is all he says and when he begins chapter twelve, his mind is on a matter of much greater moment.

3. The consequences of his boast. 12:1-10.

This section turns on the concept of glory (Kauchaomai, "boast"). Paul's adversaries were boasting after the flesh (11:18). Paul's boasting is of another sort.

In coming to this passage, one almost senses an attitude of frustration in the apostle. He has entered into something that is especially obnoxious to him, i.e., boasting of himself. In the previous chapter his focus of attention has been on earthly, physical experiences in the gospel. Yet, there is something even more significant on his mind and one senses that it is a matter he had hoped he could avoid. But, two factors converge to force him to say what he does here. The first is the contempt of Paul's adversaries for his personal appearance and delivery (10:10; I Cor 2:1-4). The second is that the nature of Paul's boasting in chapter 11 requires explanation. Left as it is, one might suspect that Paul derived some sort of warped pleasure from physical suffering. As to the first he will stop their mouths forever. As to the second he will demonstrate that his attitude was fully justified in consequence of his unparalleled spiritual privilege.

a. The revelation. 12:1-6.

12:1. It is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. What Paul does he is forced to do, but from his perspective, it hardly seems appropriate. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. The connection is with "infirmities" of 11:30. How is it that Paul takes pleasure in his infirmities? The answer is that they constitute a reminder of something that, no doubt, stands out as the most incredible experience of his life. Of the Lord. Visions of which the Lord is the Author, not the object. He may very well have seen the Lord at this time, although if he did, he does not say. But that is not the point. What follows is not intended to point attention to the one who received the vision, but to God who gave it.

2. I knew (Gr oida, "know") a man in Christ, i.e., "a Christian" (Rom 16:7). Although this person is not mentioned by name, it is clear that Paul is speaking of himself. This is said because the context demands it. The personal pronouns (below) demand it. His application to himself demands it (cf. vss. 6-10). Above fourteen years ago connects with "know" not "in

CHAPTER 12

IT is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven.

Christ.” The date is not precise enough to pinpoint the exact time or event to which the apostle alludes. Some suggest that this occurred when he was stoned in Acts 14:19. Others date it to the time when he was at Tarsus, waiting for the Lord to point out his work, somewhere between Acts 9:30 and 11:25. (Alford, The Greek Testament, v. II, p. 710). (Whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;). This does not connect with “vision” but “man.” It is not that he is unsure as to whether it was a dream or a vision (internal or external) but uncertainty as to whether he was in a bodily or disembodied state. At any rate such a one was caught up (Gr harpazo, “to snatch away”). The term is used in regard to Philip in Acts 8:39 and the Rapture, in I Thessalonians 4:17. To the third heaven. The exact sense of this expression is not clear. Later rabbis were accustomed to dividing the heavens into seven strata. However, it is not certain if this notion dates back to the Apostolic Age. In any case, if this were the sense, it would indicate an assumption only to the area of the clouds. Some who take this view see the reference to “paradise” in the next verse to be a yet further assumption. Other commentaries suggest that a threefold division was often employed among the Jews: the air (nubiferum), the sky (astriferum), and heaven (angeliferum). However, there is absolutely no evidence in rabbinical sources to substantiate the existence of this idea among the Jews. Thus, the best that can be offered is that Paul’s precise intent here cannot be established with absolute certainty. At any rate what follows makes the question merely academic.

3 And I knew such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth:)

4 How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.

5 Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.

6 For though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.

3-4. He was caught up into paradise. This term is used in the LXX in Genesis 2:8 in describing the Garden of Eden. In Paul’s day it was used commonly by Jewish writers to speak of heaven (Lk 23:43; Rev 2:7). Thus, whether the third heaven is viewed on the way to heaven or synonymous with it, Paul’s celestial journey eventually took him to heaven. And heard unspeakable words. Not words which “could” not be uttered, but which “may” not be uttered. As Paul renders it Not lawful for a man to utter. What Paul saw and heard were forbidden to be communicated to anyone.

5. Of such a one (Gr hyper tou toioutou, “regarding such a one”). Again, the direction of Paul’s boast is not toward himself but in regard to the experience the Lord afforded him. Will I glory. Such a divine favor and privilege justifies his response. Yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities. Paul is careful to keep the attention of his readers upon the true object of his boast.

6. For though I would desire to glory. The connection is more with what is implied in the preceding verse than in what is stated. The inference is that, in the flesh, Paul had a natural inclination to want to exalt himself because of this privilege, as though he warranted God’s favor in some way. I shall not be a fool. Paul will boast, but not in an empty claim. For I will say the truth: but now I forbear. What Paul says is absolutely true, yet even now he is reluctant to share it with his readers with the fear that they might think of me above that which he seeth me to be. Paul does not even wish to share his glory vicariously. His only interest is to exalt the Lord.

b. The thorn in the flesh. 12:7-10.

7. What follows explains Paul’s attitude, lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations (lit., “in order that I might not, by the abundant excess of the revelation, be uplifted”). There was given me a thorn in the flesh (cf. Gal 4:14). The next expression the messenger of Satan is appositional. Just what Paul means by this has excited no small amount of conjecture. Among the views suggested are: (a) temptations from the devil; (b) Paul’s opposition from his adversaries; (c) some intense bodily pain; and (d) some recurring physical affliction such as eye trouble, epilepsy, or malaria. What is known of it is that it was a tool of Satan, it was painful ("thorn"), and it was accompanied by shame and/or embarrassment to the apostle. A fairly strong argument can be sustained in favor of the view that it was eye trouble (ophthalmia). See also Acts 13:9; 23:1; Gal 4:14-15; 6:11. However, as Alford has observed, "it may also have been something else besides this, and to such an inference, probability would lead us; disorders in the eyes, however sad in their consequences, not being usually of a very painful or distressing nature in themselves" (Ibid., p. 713). W. Ramsey makes a strong case for epilepsy (St Paul the Traveller) as does S. Asch (The Apostle).

8-9. So troublesome was this affliction that Paul besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from him. Subsequently to his third request, God gives him an answer: My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. The trial will remain but accompanied always by the enduring grace of God. And thus for Paul, this and every affliction reminded him that the power of Christ may rest upon him.

10. Paul concludes, this is the reason I have such an attitude, i.e., I take pleasure in infirmities. Not that I should suffer, but for Christ's sake. The thrill of suffering for the sake of Christ is that when I am weak, then am I strong. And so Paul concludes his "foolishness," stopping the mouths of his adversaries and establishing once and for all his right to speak as he does.

C. The Credentials of the Apostle. 12:11-18.

Paul has at length concluded a task which has been manifestly repugnant to him. He now goes on to review his credentials as an apostle and to demonstrate why 11:1-12:10 need never to have been written, especially to his own children in the faith. This he discusses in terms of his position (vs. 11), his performance (vss. 12-14) and his integrity (vss. 15-18).

1. His position among the other apostles. 12:11.

11. I am become a fool in glorifying. One can almost visualize the flush of embarrassment. Ye have compelled me ("Ye" is emphatic). The sincerity of Paul's affection for these people is measured by the pain he is willing to endure to secure theirs. For I (also emphatic) ought to have been commended of you. That these people whom Paul loved so much failed to take the initiative in defending him against his critics inflicted a crushing blow to the apostle. For in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles. His personal and official credentials were as clear as if Peter, James and John visited them. Though I be nothing. Not that Paul considered himself, personally, to be on a par with any of the other apostles; only that his credentials were equally as good (cf. also I Cor 4:7; 15:5-8).

2. His performance as a true apostle. 12:12-13.

12. Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you. The expression here is elliptical, suppressing a negative reaction, i.e., signs, indeed, were truly demonstrated, but never recognized.

13. For what is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches. In what respect do you find your church handicapped, for not having been founded by one of the other apostles (see I Cor 1:6-7)? Except it be that I myself was not burdensome to you? The only fault of his ministry was that he showed them preferential treatment. Against such ingratitude Paul's irony deals a mortal blow. Then, as though the blade did not penetrate enough, he gives it an additional twist with the words forgive me this wrong.

3. His behavior as an apostle. 12:14-18.

14-15. Finally, Paul cites his own behavior as reflective of his

8 For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.

9 And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

10 Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I am become a fool in glorifying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though I be nothing.

12 Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 For what is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches, except it be that I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me this wrong.

14 Behold, the third time I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you: for I seek not yours, but you: for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

II CORINTHIANS 12:15

15 And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you; though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.

16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

17 Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 I desired Titus, and with him I sent a brother. Did Titus make a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?

19 Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? we speak before God in Christ: but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 For I fear, lest when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not: lest there be debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults:

21 And lest, when I come again, my God will humble me among you, and that I shall bewail many which have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed.

CHAPTER 13

THIS is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

2 I told you before, and foretell you, as if I were present, the second time; and being absent now I write to them which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, I will not spare:

integrity. Behold, the third time I am ready to come to you. Paul anticipates his third visit (on the chronology see 13:1 and the Introductions to both I and II Cor). And I will not be burdensome to you. Again he still expects nothing in terms of personal remuneration from them. For I see not yours, but you. His intentions were benevolent, not selfish. Children . . . parents. Paul was the spiritual father of the Corinthian assembly. Thus, he maintained a parental concern for them. And I will very gladly spend and be spent. The apostle considered himself expendable in the interests of the Corinthian assembly. For you (lit., “in the service of your souls”). Though the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved. This is not a statement of fact, but a condition he was prepared to accept, i. e., to spend himself totally, even if it meant without a return of his affection.

16. But be it so (“but be that as it may”) I did not burden you, i. e., it must be admitted that I posed no financial burden upon your church. Nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile. This is ironic, intended as an additional objection Paul’s enemies might propose.

17-18. Not only in terms of Paul’s personal ministry there, but also in terms of the ministry of Titus and the other brother, the same spirit was evidenced, and it was clear that they walked in the same steps. No devious tactics could be seen in Paul or any of his companions.

D. The Charge of the Apostle. 12:19-13:10.

1. The charge to repent. 12:19-13:10.

19. Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves upon you? (lit., “you have been some time imagining that it is to you that I am defending myself”). If they are under the delusion that Paul has gone through all of this only on their behalf, Paul’s answer is: we speak before God in Christ. The apostle was not accountable to the Corinthians, only to God. As for them his only concern was their edifying. It was not necessary for Paul to defend himself before anyone, much less qualify his apostolic authority. On the other hand it was imperative that the Corinthian believers be brought back into line and into submission to their father in the faith.

20. For I fear, lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I would. His only fear is that when he arrives in Corinth he will discover, still neglected, all the same problems that he has been dealing with in these two epistles. And that I shall be found unto you such as ye would not. Indeed that his dark side should be exposed. And such would be the case if he should arrive to find the abuses and sins reputed of them still persisting.

21. My God will humble me among you, i. e., “that I should be humiliated in your midst.” And such would be the case if he arrived and discovered the uncleanness and fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed.

13:1-2. This is the third time I am coming to you (cf. 12:14). On the “third visit” see Acts 18:1; 20:2-3; II Corinthians 2:1; and the Introduction. In the mouth of two or three witnesses (cf. Num 35:30; Deut 17:6; 19:15; Mt 18:16; Jn 8:17; and I Tim 5:19). Paul would leave no stone unturned upon his arrival. As he promised the last time he visited them, if he should be required to come again he will not spare. Should there be evidence of disobedience and sin in the assembly Paul’s authority as an apostle would be witnessed, not by “signs” but in the exercise of discipline.

3 Since ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you.

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak in him, but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.

5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?

6 But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now I pray to God that ye do no evil; not that we should appear approved, but that ye should do that which is honest, though we be as reprobates.

8 For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

9 For we are glad, when we are weak, and ye are strong: and this also we wish, even your perfection.

10 Therefore I write these things being absent, lest being present I should use sharpness, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction.

11 Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you.

12 Greet one another with an holy kiss.

13 All the saints salute you.

3. Since ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, i.e., they seek a proof that the apostle spoke with divine authority.

4. For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. Paul's experience was much like that of our Lord, not only in that "He came unto his own and his own received him not." But especially here, that as Christ endured suffering and weakness, He thereby demonstrated the power of God and the wisdom of God. Even so, the weakness of the apostle would serve as a catalyst to demonstrate the power of God toward you.

2. The charge to self-examination. 13:5-10.

5. Thus Paul charges his readers, Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith. Paul's critics were prepared to examine him, to see if he was rightly related to Christ. He asks them to subject themselves to the same scrutiny. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, ("Do you know yourselves if Christ is in you?") except ye be reprobates? ("unless you are counterfeits"). The challenge is to ascertain if they be genuine believers or fakes.

6. But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobates. Regardless of how the Corinthians came out in the test, they are to be assured that the apostle was genuine (notice the play on the term dokimen, "evidence" in vs. 3 and here, and adokimen, "counterfeit").

7-8. Now I pray to God that ye do no evil. He is not encouraging them to give occasion to show evidence of his authority through continued disobedience. Though we be as reprobates, i.e., "even though it means you will still look on us as reprobates." It was more important that the Corinthian believers do that which was right in the eyes of God than that they should be provided with an opportunity to see the "evidence" of Paul's apostolic authority in terms of discipline. Indeed such evidence would not be forthcoming because we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

9-10. For we are glad. The confirmation of Paul's joy is that when we are weak (afforded no opportunity to display apostolic authority through punishment) ye are strong (by virtue of their spiritual maturity they do not need such a demonstration); and this also we wish, even your perfection. Their spiritual well-being was, of course, Paul's paramount interest. That is why being absent he should use sharpness. His intent under the Lord was to edification, and not to destruction. If in his absence they can be induced to obedience, so much the better.

V. CONCLUSION. 13:11-14.

11. Finally, brethren, farewell. In the first nine chapters Paul addressed the majority of the faithful brethren in the Corinthian assembly. In 10:1-13:10 his words have been directed primarily to those who questioned his integrity. Paul is not even certain if these are true believers. But in his farewell address the apostle turns his attention once again to those who really love and appreciate him. Thus he calls them "brethren." To these he exhorts Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you. Maturity, contentment, unity, and harmony, reflected in these terms, answer to the immaturity, unrest, division, and quarreling so evident in the Corinthian assembly.

12. Greet one another with a holy kiss. This denoted affection and kinship. It was and continues to be common, especially in the East. It was practiced even in the West till the thirteenth century.

13. All the saints salute you. This should be properly restricted to Paul's companions at the time. However, the more general truth also finds appropriate emphasis in the apostle. That is, that all the saints everywhere enjoy a common fellowship and, therefore, a mutual interest in the spiritual welfare of one another.

14 The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

14. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen. In his concluding benediction, Paul not only invokes the fullness of God's provision on behalf of the Corinthian believers, but also in passing, provides one of the clearest expressions in the New Testament on the doctrine of the Trinity. The deity of the Son, of the Father, and of the Holy Spirit are affirmed by virtue of their relation to one another. The distinctive personality of each is implied by the independent activity denoted in the threefold operation of grace, love, and communion.

The Epistle To The GALATIANS

INTRODUCTION

Authorship. The authorship of Galatians never has been seriously doubted and it has been well said that "whoever is prepared to deny the genuineness of the epistle, would pronounce on himself the sentence of incapacity to distinguish true from false." Findlay says, "No breath of suspicion as to the authorship, integrity, or apostolic authority of the Epistle to the Galatians has reached us from ancient times" (International Standard Bible Encyclopaedia, Vol. 2, p. 1156). Lightfoot adds, "Its every sentence so completely reflects the life and character of the apostle to the Gentiles that its genuineness has not been seriously questioned" (St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, p. 57). Even Baur, father of the radical school of critics in Germany, and the radical Dutch scholars concede that Paul wrote Galatians. Both the internal and the external evidences of Galatians are strong, and it is not necessary to produce extensive proof of its early existence or of its pauline authorship.

Destination. The letter is addressed to the churches of Galatia. Galatia is the name that was given originally to the territory in North Central Asia Minor, where the invading Gauls settled in the third century before Christ. Gradually the Gallic population was absorbed into other peoples living there, and after a number of political changes, the territory became the property of Rome in 25 B.C. The Romans incorporated this northern section into a larger division of the land which they made a province and called it Galatia. Politically, Galatia was the Roman province which included Isauria, Lycaonia, and parts of Phrygia and Pisidia. Geographically, it was the center of Celtic tribes and included Derbe, Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch of Pisidia. The question is did Paul write to the ethnic Galatia of the north or the geographical Galatia of the south? Paul and Barnabas evangelized the southern section of the Roman Galatia during their first missionary journey (Acts 13:14-14:26). The Epistle to the Galatians agrees with everything that we know about the churches Paul founded on this journey in southern Galatia. Whereas, the existence of churches in northern Galatia is hypothetical. No churches are mentioned in the North Galatia territory, only disciples. "While the evidence for either view is not conclusive, it seems to us that the balance of probability is in favor of the South Galatian theory. While this position is steadily growing in popularity it must be admitted that the North Galatian theory is arguable and has its able defenders. Fortunately, neither the value of the epistle or its interpretation is seriously af-fectured by the question" (D. Edmond Hiebert, An Introduction to the Pauline Epistles, p. 83).

Date. The date depends on whether Paul wrote to churches in the North or the South Galatian territory. The North Galatian theory would require A.D. 57, but the South Galatian theory would place it about A.D. 49. Most of the older commentators follow Lightfoot in favor of the North Galatian theory and the later date. Most contemporary commentators follow Ramsay in favor of the South Galatian theory and an early date, A.D. 49 from Antioch just before the Council of Jerusalem.

Occasion of the epistle. This epistle was called forth by the activities of the unscrupulous Judaizers. These legalists had vigorously discredited and denounced Paul and his gospel and had persuaded many to turn away from Christianity to Judaism. They claimed that the Jewish law was binding upon Christians and that salvation must be attained by the works of the law. They especially urged the Galatians to submit to circumcision. The purpose of Galatians was to root out the errors of the legalists, to win back the converts to allegiance to Christ, and to expound the doctrine of justification by faith. Paul sets forth grace as opposed to law, faith as opposed to works, and spirit as opposed to flesh.

Permanent value of Galatians. Some look upon this epistle as having little value for our times. But the perverted gospel, which is so severely condemned in this epistle, is the very message so prevalent in our days. Christendom is so thoroughly permeated by the leaven of legalism, Judaism, ritualism, Romanism, materialism, and every form of externalism. "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump" (5:9). The Epistle to the Galatians has a contemporary relevance in its message of justification by faith for modern man, with all his cults and religious systems that seek to gain heaven by human merit, rather than by divine mercy. Erdman says, "Wherever religion has lost its reality, wherever ritual is more regarded than right living, wherever subscription to a creed is substituted for submission to Christ, wherever loud claims of orthodoxy are accompanied by conduct devoid of charity, wherever deeds of self-righteousness are obscuring the glory of the cross, there this epistle should be made to sound out its clarion call to a new dependence upon justifying grace, to a faith that is shown by works, to a walk that is by the Spirit, to a life inspired by love" (Charles R. Erdman, The Epistle of Paul to the Galatians, p. 5).

COMMENTARY

I. PERSONAL: THE APOSTLE OF LIBERTY. 1:1-2:21.

A. Introduction. 1:1-9.

PAUL, an apostle, (not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead.)

1:1. Paul. Paul was his Latin name; Saul was his Hebrew name. He was born in Tarsus in Cilicia (Acts 9:11; 22:3) of Jewish parents (Phil 3:5). His father was a Pharisee and a Roman citizen (Acts 23:6), so Paul was a Roman citizen by birth (Acts 22:27-28). He studied under the renowned Gamaliel (Acts 5:34; 22:3). An apostle. An apostle is one who is sent with authority to represent and speak for another. He is accredited with special delegated authority and entrusted with a special divine message. Paul claims to be a messenger, an envoy, an ambassador for Christ. He was endowed with all the credentials of his office. He was owned by Christ, commissioned by Christ, and empowered by Christ. Not of men. Not from men. The bluntness of Paul's denial is due to the charge of the legalists that he was not one of the Twelve and not a genuine apostle. The preposition (Gr apo) signifies origin and separation. Paul already states that the source of his apostleship is not from men, not emanating from men. Neither by man. The preposition here (Gr dia) implies means, medium, instrument. Paul declares decisively that the means of receiving his apostleship was not a man. "The first preposition denotes the fountain-head whence the apostle's authority springs, the second the channel through which it is conveyed" (J. B. Lightfoot, The Epistle of St. Paul to the Galatians, p. 71). Paul was not an ambassador of men, and his gospel was not the word and wisdom of man. Paul's "mission to the Gentiles had apparently been disparaged on the plea that it had been emanated from men, i.e., from the church of Antioch only. Again, the validity of his commission was impugned on the ground that he originally had received the Spirit through a man, i.e., through the agency of Ananias, who had been deputed to lay his hands upon him at Damascus" (Frederic Rendall, The Epistle to the Galatians, p. 149). Paul knew nothing about apostolic succession, but he experienced an abundant measure of apostolic success. But by Jesus Christ, and God the Father. When the preposition (Gr dia) is used of a personal agent sometimes it expresses the author of the action as well as its instrument. Here Jesus Christ is both the ultimate source and the mediate agency. Both Christ and God are governed by one preposition and joined by one conjunction, indicating that they are coequal and coeternal. There was no one higher to commission Paul and no lower through whom he was commissioned. He had a divine commission to expose false teaching, to exclaim the gospel, to establish churches, to exhort Christians, and to exalt

2 And all the brethren which are with me, unto the churches of Ga-lā'tia:

3 Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father:

Christ. Who raised him from the dead. Paul had seen the risen Christ (I Cor 9:1; 15:8) and was qualified to be an apostle. The resurrection was God's "Amen" to Christ's "It is finished." Paul emphasized the resurrection because some were saying that he had not seen the Lord Jesus Christ and could not be an apostle. It was the risen, glorified Son of God whom Paul had seen on the road to Damascus (Acts 9:3-9). Paul's mission and message were divine, not human.

2. And all the brethren which are with me. Paul implies that there were with him a goodly number of Christian believers, members of the household of faith. Paul associates these unnamed fellow workers with him in sending greetings. Unto the churches of Galatia. Not to the church of Galatia. To Paul there was no state or national church. The word church (Gr ekklēsia) occurs over one hundred times in the New Testament. Once it refers to the assembly of saints in heaven (Heb 12:23), several times it is used in a wide sense (mostly in Ephesians and Colossians), but the vast majority of times it refers to a local assembly of called-out, born-again Christians bonded together for worship and work. Paul addresses this epistle to a group of churches that were relinquishing the essential truths of the gospel of grace and were going back to the works of the law as a means of justification. "The omission of any expression of praise in addressing the Galatians shows the extent of their apostasy" (J. B. Lightfoot, The Epistle of St. Paul to the Galatians, p. 73).

3. Grace be to you and peace. Grace was the usual Greek greeting, and peace was the usual Hebrew greeting. By these two words, Paul sums up all the blessing his heart would desire for them. In Christ, God revealed His grace, and through Christ He bestowed His peace. Grace is the sum of all the blessings extended by God; peace is the sum of all the blessings experienced by man. This customary salutation is not a perfunctory thing with Paul. He uses it here even when he has so much fault to find. He does not withhold the wish for divine grace and peace even for those whom he is about to upbraid. From God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ. The Father and the Son cooperate fully in the salvation of sinful man.

4. Who gave himself for our sins. Christ voluntarily and vicariously offered Himself on account of our sins. The preposition (Gr hyper) speaks of substitution, instead of, in behalf of. Christ who knew no sin, made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him (II Cor 5:21). He exchanged places with us; He took all of our sins and gave us all of His righteousness. He was both the purchaser and the price of our redemption. There was no other good enough to pay the price of sin. At Calvary Jesus Christ once for all settled the sin question. Just before He bowed His head and gave up the ghost, He said, "It is finished" (Jn 19:30). Our sins made His sacrifice necessary, and His sacrifice is the only ground of our acceptance with God. That he might deliver us from this present evil world. The purpose of His sacrifice was to deliver us, rescue us, and set us free from this present evil age. It is "out of" (Gr ek) rather than from this pernicious age; those delivered had been within the grasp of an enemy. Christ not only delivers the believer from the penalty of sin, but also from the power of sin. Salvation is an emancipation out from a state of bondage. This is the keynote of the epistle. The word "rescued" (Gr exaireō) is used in Acts 23:27 to speak of Paul's rescue from the mob, and in Acts 7:34 to speak of Israel being taken out of Egypt. Here it has the connotation of rescue from danger and deliverance from bondage. Sin had endangered and enslaved us; Christ delivered us and set us free. All is due to His atoning death. This age is evil, corrupt and corrupting, deceived and deceiving. The word evil (Gr ponēros) means not only evil in its nature but actively and viciously evil in its influence. It is used to describe Satan, the god of this age, who is corrupting man and dragging him to 5 To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel:

7 Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

destruction. The substitutional sacrifice of Christ alone can liberate man from Satan. According to the will of God. This was all in accordance with God's determinate counsel and foreknowledge (Acts 2:23).

5. To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen. Paul ascribes praise unto God unto the ages of the ages, in contrast to the present transitory age. This doxology in the salutation takes the place of Paul's usual thanksgiving for his readers.

6. I marvel. This word (Gr thaumazō) was used often by Greek orators of surprise at something reprehensible and can be translated "amazed," "astonished," "bewildered." Norley translates it "dumbfounded." Paul is painfully surprised and alarmed at the instability of the Galatians. That ye are so soon removed. Not referring to the brevity of time since Paul's visit, but "so quickly" referring to the rapidity of their apostasy. Instead of ushering the legalists out the door (II Jn 10), these churches gullibly listened to their false teaching. The Galatians were very fickle and easily induced to change. False teaching issued in spiritual delinquency. Corrupt teaching always leads to corrupt living. In classical Greek, this word removed (Gr metathēmi) was used of a turncoat. The Galatians were deserting Christ and turning renegade. The present tense indicates: (1) that the transfer had begun; (2) that it was in progress; and (3) that it was not yet complete. Paul does not despair because there is some hope of spiritual recovery and restoration. All is not lost, but time is of a premium. The middle voice of the verb implies that the Galatians were transferring themselves from grace to law and from liberty to bondage. They were responsible and accountable for their own defection. From him that called you. Their defection was not only from the gospel of God, but from God Himself. This assertion should have startled the Galatians who probably thought they were honoring God by trying to keep His law. Their departure from God was dangerous and dreadful. They were abandoning God and His grace by putting themselves under the law and its curse. Into the grace of Christ. God calls in and by Christ's grace. This suggests the permanency of the divine favor in which God calls and through which the blessings of Christ are given. God called the Galatians to salvation which was: (1) purchased at Calvary; (2) offered in and by grace; and (3) to be accepted by faith. All that God requires of man, He has already provided by grace in Christ. Unto another gospel. There are two Greek words which mean another. One (Gr allos) means another of the same kind, a numerical difference; and the other (Gr heteros) means another of a different kind, a qualitative difference. Here the meaning is that there is no other gospel, although the legalists had brought them a different kind of teaching, which they claimed to be the gospel. There is an essential difference between the true gospel and a man-made, spurious gospel (cf. II Cor 11:4). There is but one, and only one gospel concerning the eternal Son of God who became incarnate in order to become the propitiation for the sins of the whole world (I Jn 2:2). Christ's finished work at Calvary enables God to be just and the justifier of him who believes in Christ (Rom 3:26). God has no other gospel, and He cannot and will not tolerate the perversion of His gospel.

7. Which is not another. It was different and therefore no gospel at all. A message of salvation by works is not good news to lost sinners. The message of the legalists was diametrically opposed to the gospel of God's grace. When the works of the law are added to grace, you no longer have grace. "If the clause be rendered, whereas there is no other gospel (i.e., than the true), the sense becomes perfectly clear, and it forms an appropriate introduction to the succeeding anathemas by its emphatic testimony to the one true gospel" (Frederic Rendall, The Epistle to the Galatians, p. 152). There is no other gospel, only a spurious semblance. Some that trouble you. This word (Gr tarassō) means to agitate, to trouble, to cause inward commotion, to disturb mentally with fear, excitement, and perplexity. The present tense means that the legalists were in Galatia at the time Paul wrote, and they were confusing the Galatians and shaking their allegiance to Christ. And would. The legalists are determined to pervert the gospel, and Paul writes to hinder their success. Pervert the gospel of Christ. This word pervert (Gr metastrophō) is used only three times in the New Testament, and it means to completely change into something of the opposite nature as in Acts 2:20 where the sun is turned into darkness and in James 4:9 where laughter is turned into mourning. The legalists were determined to pervert the gospel by substituting law for grace, circumcision for the cross, works for faith, bondage for liberty, and self for Christ. Any change in the gospel of Christ is a corruption, interfering with its simplicity, its purity, and its effectiveness. Even the thought of this stirs Paul to the very depths of his being. Note how vehement is his language now, and how he repeated it for greater emphasis.

8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

8. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel. Paul does not say that he or a messenger from heaven was likely to preach any other gospel. He merely uses a future hypothetical possibility to illustrate the case. This passage directly speaks against such claims as that of the Mormons, whose Book of Mormon claims angelic authority as delivered by the Angel Moroni and “translated” by their founder Joseph Smith. Let him be accursed. An “anathema” on anyone who would proclaim a gospel contrary to that which Paul delivered and had received from God (I Cor 15:3-4). God does not want His Word twisted by unlearned and unstable men unto the destruction of souls (II Pet 3:17). God said what He meant, and He meant what He said. God can do nothing less than put an awful curse on all who reject, pervert and falsify the gospel of His Son. It was the Holy Spirit who moved Paul to pen these serious words. We must never forget that the awful day of doom and destruction is coming when the divine “anathema” pronounced here will be executed (II Thess 1:7-9). May God’s people everywhere stand with Paul in opposition to false teaching. May God help us to believe the gospel, to behave the gospel, and to become living epistles of the gospel.

9 As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

9. As we said before. The language is too emphatic to refer to the verse lightly. Paul no doubt had warned them of the dangers of false teachers as he did the Ephesian elders (Acts 20:29-32). The perfect tense of said (Gr prolegō) means that it was a certain and clear pronouncement. The Galatians still remember Paul’s warning, and therefore their defection is inexcusable. The plural number (we) shows that the previous warning was given by others in addition to Paul. If any man. The particle (Gr ei) speaks of a fulfilled condition. Paul is not speaking of a future probability (vs. 8), but of an actual, current fact, and he hurls the anathema directly at the legalists. Note the omission in verse 9 of “we or an angel.”

B. Paul’s Apostleship. 1:10-2:21.

1. Paul’s revelation from Christ. 1:10-17.

10 For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

10. For. This introduces a justification of the severe language just used. Do I now persuade men. . . ? This means to win over, to conciliate, to render friendly to one’s self. These rhetorical questions indicate that an attack has been made on Paul for the purpose of discrediting both him and his ministry. He denies the charges. Paul was not softening down unwelcome truths to men, that he might by some means win them over to his way of thinking. Neither was he trying to persuade God to tone down His message. Paul’s loyalty to Christ and his sufferings for Christ were evidences that he was not seeking man’s approval, 11 But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12 For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it:

14 And profited in the Jews' religion above many my equals in mine own na-but his Lord's "well done." He has no desire to please anyone but Christ, whose he is and whom he serves (Acts 27:23).

11. But I certify you. I make known, inform, tell you plainly, assure you. This word (Gr gnorizō) is used to introduce matters of great importance (I Cor 12:3; 15:1; II Cor 8:1). Paul uses a strong word to leave no doubt as to the truth of the statement he is about to make. Brethren. Paul addresses them as brethren in Christ, sons of the same heavenly Father. They are deceived, disturbed, and defecting in their devotion and duty to Christ. But they are still regarded as brethren, brethren needing Paul's Spirit-inspired counsel. That the gospel which was preached of me. Literally, the gospel gossiped by me. Is not after man. Not according to man. Paul sets the record straight. He affirms the divine origin of his message in terms similar to those used to declare the divine origin of his apostleship. Both his mission and his message are independent of man, both received by direct divine revelation.

12. For I neither received it of man. Man had absolutely nothing to do with Paul's gospel. His message was not received from man as a source or through man as a channel. The preposition (Gr para) translated of emphasizes the idea of transmission and connects the giver with the receiver. Paul did not receive the gospel "from" man. Neither was I taught it. Paul was taught the precepts of Judaism at the feet of Gamaliel (Acts 5:34; 22:3), but he received no human instruction or human interpretation of the gospel. But, on the contrary, by the revelation. Therefore there was nothing human about it. It was a direct divine communication of previously unknown truth. The word "revelation" is used of the unveiling of divine persons or things, never of one human revealing a secret to another man. Paul refers to his experience on the road to Damascus (Acts 9), which was supplemented during his seclusion in Arabia. Of Jesus Christ. This can mean either Christ is revealing or Christ is revealed; both interpretations make good sense. This is a subjective genitive. Christ revealed Himself to Paul. Christ was the subject, sum, and substance of that revelation with the result that Paul became a new man with a new message to proclaim. Paul was not a man-made apostle. He received his commission and his message from Christ.

13. For ye have heard. Paul refers to the time he spent with them. He often related his personal testimony as part of his ministry (Acts 22 and 26). Of my conversation. Originally the word (Gr anastrophē) meant "upturning" and then came to mean that thing which would keep on turning up, and means the custom, conduct, or manner of one's life. It refers to Paul's everyday life. In time past in the Jews' religion. This was Judaism as a religion of faith and custom, with human traditions superimposed upon it; an apostate Judaism as an ethical, unspiritual cult. How that beyond measure. Transliterated hyperbole and means according to excess, immeasurable. I persecuted. This word (Gr diōkō) means put to flight, drive away, harass, trouble, molest, persecute. The imperfect tense denotes continuous action (I kept on persecuting). Paul constantly and relentlessly persecuted the church. The church of God. The whole body (Gr ekklēsia) of born-again believers. It is God's church; redeemed by God's Son and regenerated by God's Holy Spirit. It is the body of Christ, in whom the Holy Spirit lives and through whom the Holy Spirit ministers. And wasted it. This word (Gr portheō) means to overthrow, destroy, make havoc, lay waste. The original idea is that of rooting up and leaving devastation behind. The imperfect tense implies that Paul continually, persistently, and violently kept on ravaging the church (Acts 9:13; 26:10-11). Paul had been the supreme Judaistic fanatic of his time.

14. And profited. Literally (Gr prokoptō) "to cut forward," hence to blaze a trail or cut a pioneer path. Paul was advancing, tion, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of my fathers.

pushing forward, and outstripping all others in power and prestige. In the Jews' religion. Traditional Judaism was not much like Mosaism in its pristine purity. Paul was a zealous, law-loving Pharisee. Above many my equals. He started out with his fellow classmates but soon far surpassed them in his zeal and activities for the traditions of Judaism. In mine own nation. My race. Being more exceedingly zealous. Paul was an uncompromising partisan, a zealot burning with superabundant zeal. Of the traditions of my fathers. Traditions played a large part in the precepts and practices of the Pharisees. By traditions Paul means those hundreds of human commandments built around the Old Testament law and which must be maintained at any cost. Our Lord Jesus distinguished between the written law and man-made traditions and clearly proclaimed that the traditions of man caused the Word of God to be of none effect (Mt 15:1-6; Mk 7:3-13). But for the grace of God, Paul would have lived and died a profound protagonist of Judaism.

15-16. But. Very strong here, in contrast to the traditions. When it pleased God. God's good pleasure in His gracious purpose. Who separated me. Refers to God's setting Paul apart for special service. The word (Gr aphorizō) means to work off from a boundary, to limit, to separate, to designate, to set apart, to appoint. The Pharisees were the separatists who held themselves off from others. Paul conceives himself a spiritual separatist, separated unto the gospel of God (Rom 1:1). From my mother's womb. The preposition (Gr ek) makes the temporal starting point. Only God could define the limits of one's life while yet in the womb of his mother. God's plan for Paul's life was determined before he was born (cf. Jer 1:5). And called me by his grace. It was by means of grace that God called Paul out of darkness into His marvelous light (I Pet 2:9) and made him a chosen vessel (Acts 9:15), "a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work" (II Tim 2:21). To reveal his Son in me. Paul was inwardly enlightened. After his vision of Christ, Paul spent three days in solitary communion (Acts 9:9). There "was an inward and spiritual revelation which followed that appeal to eye and ear" (Frederic Rendall, The Epistle to the Galatians, p. 154). "The whole subject of discourse in this paragraph is not how Paul made known his gospel, but how he received it" (Ernest DeWitt Burton, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Epistle to the Galatians, p. 51). There was altogether a threefold revelation: (1) to Paul; (2) in Paul; and (3) through Paul, and in that order. That. In order that, (Gr hina). Now the purpose of the revelation is made known. It was not for salvation alone, but for service. We are saved to serve. Salvation is a means to an end, not an end in itself. I might preach him. The final object of God's revelation to Paul was that he should go on proclaiming Christ to others. The present tense (Gr euaggelizomai) speaks of continued effort, and the accusative case (Gr auton), him, the person preached. Christ was the sum total of Paul's message, not the law or ceremonies. Paul was not proclaiming a plan of salvation but the person of the Saviour. It is not a matter of one religion against another. Paul has a divine commission to preach Christ. Among the heathen. God not only told Paul whom to preach, but where to preach, among the Gentiles (Acts 9:15; 22:15; 26:16-19). Immediately I conferred not. Paul received his commission from God, and there was no need to consult man. The double compound (Gr prosanatilhēmi) means "to place over and toward," hence to put one's self in communion with another. The real purpose of a conference is to get advice from someone more knowledgeable than yourself. Paul already had been made an apostle and already knew God's plan for his life (Acts 26:14-19); he had no need of man's advice. Paul is establishing his dependence upon God and his independence from man. With flesh and blood. Apparently a reminiscence of "flesh

15 But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,

16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood:

17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus.

18 Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 But other of the apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Ćī-lī'ċia;

22 And was unknown by face unto the churches of Judæa which were in Christ:

23 But they had heard only, That he which persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father" (Mt 16:17). Flesh and blood suggests human weakness and ignorance and represents human as opposed to divine wisdom. Man could not add anything to God's revelation.

17. Neither. Literally, not even apostles before me. The Jerusalem apostles were genuine apostles, but so was Paul. Before in order of time, but not in rank; they had more seniority, but not more authority. Paul's call and commission did not come from them nor did he receive confirmation by them. Paul's apostleship was firsthand. There was no human instrumentality in his apostleship. But. On the contrary, Paul took the opposite course, I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus. Paul avoided Jerusalem and emphasizes his independence of the other apostles. The Holy Spirit has not revealed all we would like to know, but Paul spent considerable time alone with God (cf. Moses and Elijah).

2. Paul's acceptance by the churches. 1:18-24.

18. Then after three years. Paul dates the time from his conversion. During these three years, he had no contact with any of the apostles. I went up to Jerusalem. His first visit is recorded in Acts 9:26-30. To see Peter. See (Gr historeō), used only here in the New Testament, is the word from which we get our word "history." It was used to express either: (1) to learn facts from personal inquiry or observation or; (2) to relate facts as a historian would. There was an interchange of facts between Paul and Peter. The purpose of this visit was to become personally acquainted with Peter, not to gain official sanction or recognition. They met on common ground. Peter did not install Paul into the apostleship nor confer anything upon him. Paul uses the old Aramaic name "Cephas." And abode with him. The preposition (Gr pros) means "toward" him. Paul was facing Cephas in a most personal, intimate, and friendly manner, but not subordinating himself in any way. Paul visited Peter as an equal. Fifteen days. Paul's visit was interrupted because the Grecians were seeking his life (Acts 9:29) and the Lord appeared to him while he was praying in the Temple and told him to leave quickly (Acts 22:17-18).

19. James. The half-brother of our Lord Jesus Christ. This distinguishes him from James the brother of John. He was a leader in the Jerusalem church (Acts 15).

20. Before God, I lie not. Paul's enemies had accused him of being a slick talker. He asserts his integrity by a solemn affirmation, made as if in the very presence of God. His word was as good as his oath, as Christ taught every man's word should be (Mt 5:33-37).

21. Regions of Syria and Cilicia. Regions (Gr klima) is the source of our word "climate" and refers to the coastal plains of the countries named. Paul does not describe his ministry here, but it lasted for about six years. During this time Paul was out of contact with Jerusalem. Syria is named first because of its prominence in the Roman Empire and because of the greater significance of Paul's ministry here.

22. And was unknown by face. They did not recognize Paul when they saw him. Into the churches of Judea. There were other local churches in Judæa besides the church at Jerusalem. Which were in Christ. True churches are in Christ as branches are in the True Vine (Jn 15:5).

23. But they had heard only. The members of the Judæan churches kept on hearing from time to time, as the Greek present tense implies. Now preacheth the faith. The saving faith in Christ based on the truth of the gospel which was once for all delivered unto the saints (Jude 3). Which once he destroyed. Same word (Gr portheō) translated as "wasted" in verse 13. The imperfect tense speaks of continuous action. Before his 24 And they glorified God in me.

CHAPTER 2

THEN fourteen years after I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

2 And I went up by revelation, and communicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to them which were of reputation, lest by any means I should run, or had run, in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

conversion, Paul's one passion that consumed his time was to root out Christianity.

24. And they glorified God in me. They recognized God's handiwork (Eph 2:10) in Paul and kept on glorifying God for saving, transforming, and using Paul. How different from the reaction of the legalists who were seeking to destroy Paul's ministry. Paul has displayed the divine origin of his apostleship and his independence from the apostolic band.

3. Paul's approval by the apostles. 2:1-10.

2:1. Then fourteen years after. If fourteen years after his conversion, it could be his visit recorded in Acts 11:30; but if fourteen after his first visit, it would be the one recorded in Acts 15:2. Scholars are divided. J. B. Lightfoot and others hold to the traditional view (Acts 15:2) but Sir William Ramsay and many contemporary scholars hold to the other view (11:30). The evidence is not conclusive, so we must be tolerant, and not dogmatic. The exact date is important in establishing the chronology of Paul's mission but not in the exposition of his message. I went up again to Jerusalem. The preposition (Gr ana) may be used because of the geographical position of Jerusalem, or more probably because of its religious superiority. Paul's contacts with Jerusalem were few and brief. With Barnabas. A wealthy Levite of Cyprus. He had keen insight into the character of man and clear understanding of Christianity. He was a philanthropist and had the confidence of the whole church. And took. This double compound (Gr sumparalambanō) means to take along with as a companion. Titus. A Gentile convert. He is not mentioned in the book of Acts, and little is known of him.

2. And I went up by revelation. The Holy Spirit revealed His will to Paul, and Paul was obedient to His divine guidance. Paul did not go merely because of any doubt or difficulty he was experiencing, and neither on his own initiative, nor at the direction of the church of Antioch. And communicated. Literally "set up" (Gr anatihēmi) for the consideration of others. The real purpose of his visit is to place before the apostles the gospel he is preaching among the peoples in the Gentile lands. Privately. To the recognized spiritual leaders, rather than to the whole church body. This does not imply secrecy. Of reputation. The apostolic leaders (cf. vs. 6 and 9), were men of eminence, those looked upon as authorities and held in high regard. Run in vain. Lest I should be running in vain, thwarted by misunderstanding and opposition. Paul is not expressing any doubt. He desires to maintain unity and fellowship with the apostles in Jerusalem and avoid a split. A schism would have caused division in every church. But he did not go to Jerusalem to determine whether he was preaching the one true gospel but whether they were. But Paul would be running a fruitless race and to no purpose if the message of the legalists was the true gospel. There was so much at stake: Is salvation by law or by grace, a matter of human attainment or of divine atonement, by works or by faith?

3. But neither. Not even. Titus. This Gentile was accepted as a real Christian just as he was. (Not) compelled to be circumcised. Titus was a test case. The legalists failed completely in their demands and position. It is evident that the apostles at Jerusalem did not sanction their teaching that circumcision is necessary for salvation. Paul prevailed against all the pressure brought by the legalists to force the issue. Paul stood firmly and successfully and won the full approval of the apostles. Paul resisted, rejected, and refused the demands of the legalists. Concession was not expedient; it was impossible, and it would have been fatal to Christianity. Paul could not and would not surrender on this vital issue. The gospel of grace would have disintegrated if Paul had circumcised Titus on the demands of the legalists. "Once the Judaizers made their demand regarding Titus, they destroyed all reason for his ever being circumcised"

4 And that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But of these who seemed to be somewhat, (whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me; God accepteth no man's person:) for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to me:

7 But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

(R. C. H. Lenski, Interpretation of Paul's Epistles to the Galatians, to the Ephesians, and to the Philippians, p. 76). Thank God for the undaunted, uncompromising apostle who "kept the faith" (II Tim 4:7), and may He raise multitudes to follow his steps.

4. False brethren. Those who ostentatiously profess to be Christians, but who are destitute of spiritual life. They may have regarded Christ as Messiah, but they knew nothing of salvation through His atoning blood. They were clinging to a salvation-by-works system. Unawares brought in. Literally, brought in by the side or on the sly (Gr pareiserchomai). These traitors were foisted in unexpectedly, smuggled in surreptitiously and insidiously. Came in privily. Further describing the secret infiltration of these enemies who "crept in unawares" (Jude 4). The verb means to come in secretly or by stealth, to creep or steal in. To spy out. This infinitive of purpose (Gr kataskopeō) means to reconnoiter, to make a treacherous investigation, to examine carefully with hostile intent. Our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus. Our emancipation from legalism and ceremonialism. That they might bring us into bondage. Expressing the ultimate result they hoped to attain. Their object was to reduce Christians to abject spiritual slavery, completely enslave them by rites, rules, and regulations. These spies operating under false colors were trying to undermine our liberty in Christ.

5. To whom we gave place. Paul refused to yield for a single moment. He held his ground firmly and did not give in an inch. He refused to compromise the truth of God. By subjection. The article (Gr tē) identifies the submission as that demanded by the legalists. That the truth of the gospel. The gospel in its integrity as opposed to the pseudo-gospel of the enemies of the cross. This denotes salvation by faith. This was the reason for Paul's adamant stand in earnestly contending for the faith. He would not let the Gentiles be deprived of the true gospel. The future of Christianity was bound up in this test case, and by God's grace Paul gained the victory. Might continue with you. For you and your spiritual welfare. "The idea of firm possession is enforced by the compound verb, by the present tense, and by the preposition" (J. B. Lightfoot, The Epistle of Paul to the Galatians, p. 107). Many weak-kneed, jellyfish preachers would have yielded and then justified themselves on the basis of love and expediency, but not the champion Paul.

6. Whatsoever they were. Referring to the Jerusalem apostles, their past privileges and their present position. They had sojourned with Christ and had been appointed to Him. It maketh no matter to me. Paul does not say "that the standing and repute of the apostles were matters of indifference to him, but that he was indifferent about receiving his commission from them as recognized dignitaries of the church" (M. R. Vincent, Word Studies in the New Testament, Vol. IV, pp. 97-98). Paul received his apostleship directly from Christ and he was independent on the other apostles. God accepteth no man's person. Literally, God does not receive the face of man. God looks on the heart and is no respecter of persons. Phillips translates, "God is not impressed with a man's office." Added nothing to me. They imparted no new information, no new interpretation, and no new application. There was no correction of, deletion from, or addition to Paul's message. There was no deficiency in Paul's gospel. He preached the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth (Acts 20:27).

7. But contrariwise. Those in repute not only set nothing before Paul, but they heartily approved him and his mission. Saw. Perceived the divine source of Paul's apostleship. The gospel. There is only one gospel. There is no difference in content, only in recipients. The same gospel is for all men. Committed unto me. Entrusted. The perfect tense speaks of Paul's certain commission. Uncircumcision . . . circumcision.

8 (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)

9 And when James, Cēphas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do.

11 But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certain came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

Gentiles and Jews respectively. Peter. Mentioned not with the idea of excluding the other apostles, but as representing them. The ministry of Paul was primarily, but not exclusively, to the Gentiles. That of Peter was primarily, but not exclusively, to the Jews. Both men were divinely appointed to proclaim a divine message by divine power.

8. Wrought effectually. Energized (Gr energēō) by the inward power of the Holy Spirit for the furtherance of the gospel. God gets all the glory for what He accomplished through Peter and Paul. There was material acknowledgement of each other's equal apostleship.

9. James, Cephas, and John. James is named first because of the prominence of his leadership in Jerusalem and because of his strict legal tendencies. His support of Gentile freedom was of great importance. Who seemed to be pillars. The Jews used this metaphor to refer to their great teachers. The church was looked upon as the temple of God, and these men were regarded as supporters. Perceived the grace. As they reflected on the manifestation of God's grace in Paul, they recognized his equality with them, his official status and prerogative, and his independent mission to the Gentiles. The right hands of fellowship. Fellowship speaks of cooperation and joint participation. The right hand of fellowship was given to equals and indicated a token of approval and a pledge of fidelity and agreement to work in their respective fields, so that all men would be evangelized by the same gospel. This was the dramatic conclusion of the pact for cooperation in independent spheres of evangelism. The legalists were brushed aside when these five men shook hands as equals in the work of Christ.

10. Only. One stipulation was emphasized. Remember the poor. Judaea often experienced famine, and the Christians there suffered most because of social ostracism and religious hatred. I also was forward to do. Paul was zealous to keep on remembering the poor and needed no prompting. Such generosity would foster a sense of unity in both Jewish recipients and Gentile givers.

4. Paul's rebuke of Peter. 2:11-21.

11. But when Peter was come to Antioch. The exact time is not stated. Certainly it was after Peter's vision at Joppa (Acts 10:10-16) and his experience in the home of Cornelius (Acts 11:1-8). Peter knew that God is no respecter of persons and that ceremonial uncleanness was a thing of the past. I withstood him to the face. This was face to face confrontation between two apostles. Paul set himself against Peter, resisting and reprimanding him. There is no hint of Peter's so-called "primacy." The false teachers attributed superiority to Peter, whose words and actions were regarded as next to infallible. Peter had no authority over Paul. Paul is not belittling Peter in the eyes of the Galatians; he is proving his own divine commission. How could anyone claim that Paul received his apostleship from any man after he rebuked Peter? Because he was to be blamed. Peter incurred reproach by his own inconsistent conduct, and he stood self-condemned without any defense. In this verse Paul introduces an incident which not only proves that he had not received his apostleship from the apostles, but that he actually was so independent of them that he openly rebukes Peter for a course of action wholly inconsistent with the gospel.

12. For before that certain came from James. Certain certified members in good standing in Jerusalem; no doubt they were of the circumcision party who assailed Peter once before (Acts 11:1-3). At that time he successfully defended his actions. It does not say that James sent these men with any special authority or for the purpose of bringing believers under the bondage of law. However, their presense in Antioch exerted a tremendous influence on Peter. He did eat with the Gentiles. The Greek imperfect tense shows that Peter was in the habit of eating with Gentiles; his habit was to publicly fraternize with them. God had revealed to Peter that the Levitical legislation regarding certain foods had been set aside. In obedience to God's revelation, Peter laid aside the obsolete Jewish custom and was eating with Gentiles. He withdrew and separated himself. He began to draw back in isolation, holding himself aloof, and having nothing to do with the Gentiles, as if he was afraid of defilement. Peter gradually discontinued his former practice of eating with the Gentiles when the circumcision party arrived. He was trying to change his conduct without letting them know what he had been doing and without breaking off so abruptly that the Gentile brethren would notice it. Fearing them. Peter had his eyes on man instead of looking unto Christ, and he was afraid of losing his prestige in Jerusalem and of facing the arrogant attitude of the circumcision party. He concluded that it was more important to keep his Jerusalem friends happy than to avoid the possible risk of estranging Gentile believers. His breach of fellowship with the Gentiles brought about misunderstanding and division in Antioch. Paul recognized that Peter's conduct practically exhibited to the Gentiles that they were not fit company for the circumcised apostle, and was in effect a summons for them to become Jews.

13. And the other Jews dissembled. Other Jews followed the example of Peter, who was trying unsuccessfully to play both ends against the middle without letting either the Gentiles or the Jews know exactly what he was doing. Barnabas. Paul's collaborator in proclaiming grace and liberty was also carried away. The legalists claimed that the law could do something that faith in Christ could not do. They were not only trying to supplement the gospel Paul preached, but to supplant it. Carried away. Followed their example. Barnabas was swept off his feet and shaped his conduct by that of others. Their dissimulation (Gr hypocrisis). The source of our word "hypocrite." It is pretense, playing a part, believing one thing and practicing another. Their inconsistent conduct was hypocrisy because it concealed their true convictions. It was a surrender of Christian liberty, a denial of Christian unity, and an impeachment of the Christian message. Thank God Paul saw the gravity of the situation and did something about it.

14. Walked not uprightly. Literally, straight-footed, forward, unwavering (Gr orthopodeō). Peter and company were walking in a crooked path, a path that was likely to lead others astray. They were guilty of appearing to walk one way, but turning aside whenever it was convenient to give another impression. According to the truth of the gospel. Their compromising conduct was contrary to the gospel. They had deviated from the standard of God's Word. I said unto Peter before them all. Paul severely and publicly rebukes Peter for his inconsistency and his insincerity. The rebuke was as wide as the relapse. Paul, vested with divine authority, took Peter to task. Paul's unsparing, but tactful, rebuke of Peter reveals his apostolic independence of all human authority. Peter did not try to defend himself, but graciously accepted the well-deserved rebuke and later referred to "our beloved brother Paul" (II Pet 3:15-16). Livest after the manner of Gentiles. Not under the customs and restrictions of the Jews. Peter's habit had been to live according to Gentile ways, although he was a Jew by birth. With this as a condition, Paul asks Peter a pointed question. Why compellest. . . ? Indirect compulsion by his example, not by false preaching. He was guilty of compromising conduct by which he was obliging the Gentiles to Judaize, to adopt Jewish customs and observe Jewish statutes.

15. We. Paul includes Peter in holding the doctrine of justification by faith. Jews by nature. Born Jews with special privileges and prerogatives, not Jews by proselytism. Sinners of the 13 And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter before them all, If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 We who are Jews by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,

16 Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

17 But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

Gentiles. Jews regarded all Gentiles as unclean dogs, sinners without the restraint of the law.

16. Knowing that a man, any man, Jew or Gentile, is not justified by the works of the law. Justification is the judicial act of God whereby He declares righteous those who trust in Christ. It is the reversal of His attitude toward the sinner because of the sinner's new relationship to Christ. God did condemn, now He acquits. This means that all the guilt and penalty of the believer is removed forever (Rom 8:1) and that the perfect righteousness of Christ is imputed to him from (Gr ek) the works of the law, not resulting from man's deeds of obedience. The standard of the law was so exacting that no one (except Christ) ever kept it, and so the broken law could only condemn (Rom 3:19-20). But by the faith of Jesus Christ. Not on account of faith but only by means of faith. Faith is not the ground of justification: grace is. It is not faith in our faith, but faith in Jesus Christ. No one is justified except through faith in Christ. Salvation is wholly by divine mercy (Tit 3:5) and not by human merit. Even as we have believed in Jesus Christ. Even the Jews with all their privileges are no better than the Gentiles. Their law was inadequate and insufficient to bring them into a right relationship with God. Therefore it was necessary for Jews to believe in Christ in order to be justified. Since no flesh, Jew or Gentile, could ever be justified by the works of the law, how ridiculous it is to bind the burden of law-works on the Gentiles who were already justified by faith in Christ. Note the progressive order in this verse: knowing, believing, justified.

17. Is therefore Christ the minister of sin? An illogical inference. They were sinners already in spite of being Jews. Christ simply revealed to them the fact of their sin. Since grace does not encourage men to sin (Rom 6:1-2), Christ is not a minister or promoter of sin by causing us to abandon the law as a means of justification. This is a rebuttal to the argument of the legalists that salvation in Christ is insufficient.

18. For if I build again. Return to the law. After Paul had preached that justification is only by faith in Christ plus nothing, it would be folly to seek righteousness by keeping the law. This would be building again that which he destroyed. Destroyed. This word means to demolish, dissolve, disunite, pull down. Paul destroyed the teaching that salvation was by works of merit by proclaiming that salvation was by grace through faith in Christ. When Peter lived as a Gentile he tore down the ceremonial law; when he lived as a Jew he tore down the doctrine of salvation by grace. A transgressor. If he denied the absolute sufficiency of Christ. Jewish believers were right when they abandoned law-works as a means of salvation and were justified by faith in Christ; it would be wrong for them to return to law-works now.

19. For I through the law. Through the agency of the law. Paul relates his own experience. The Old Testament law is powerless to give life; it only condemns the guilty. Under the law, Paul was brought to despair; his only hope was to find salvation elsewhere. The condemnation of the law drove Paul to Christ for salvation. Am dead to the law. Better, died to the law. To die to anything is to cease to have any relation to it so that it has no claim or control over one. The law condemned Paul to death, but Christ, his substitute, died for him. Paul died in Christ and is now united with Him in resurrection life. The sentence of death was executed on Paul in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. Once the law has executed the death penalty it has no more jurisdiction over the one executed, for the law has dominion over a man only as long as he lives (Rom 7:1). Having died with Christ, Paul is dead to the law, and so is every true believer. When Christ died, we died. That I might live unto God. Identification with Christ enabled Paul to die unto the law 20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.

CHAPTER 3

O FOOLISH Ga-lā'tians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?

as a means of obtaining righteousness and to live unto God, the source of his righteousness and the object of his new life.

20. I am crucified with Christ. This is Paul's personal testimony, which may be repeated by every believer in Christ (Rom 6:3-11). The Greek perfect tense speaks of completed action in time past and present certainty of results. Having been crucified with Christ when He died on Calvary, Paul is truly dead to everything else except Christ and what He represents. Paul's faith united him to Christ in such a way that Christ's death was his death, and Christ's resurrection was his resurrection. In Christ, Paul found a perfect sacrifice for sin and a perfect righteousness forever. Christ liveth in me. This is the union of the vine and the branches. A Christian is one in whom Christ lives. Christ is our life (Col 1:27; 3:4). The old self-righteous, self-centered Saul died, and the new Christ-centered Paul lives. Paul's new life is really Christ living His life in and through Paul. It is not a matter of imitation, but of realization. A Christian is not an unregenerate, religious sinner trying to attain salvation by works, but a regenerated saint manifesting the life of Christ through the presence and power of the indwelling Holy Spirit. In the flesh. This new life must be lived in the flesh, but not by the flesh. By the faith. Not by works. The Son of God. Paul specifically states that Christ is the Son of God. Who loved me and gave himself for me. Note how personally Paul appropriates to himself the love and sacrifice of Christ, which belong equally to the whole world. Christ is our sovereign, sufficient sacrifice.

21. I do not frustrate the grace of God. Lest someone should misunderstand, Paul says he does not set aside, reject, nullify, or invalidate the grace of God. For if righteousness come by the law. Through the agency of the law. False teachers were trying to make of no effect the gospel by adding something (law-works) one must "do" instead of trusting and being united to Christ who has already "done" everything necessary for time and eternity. Then Christ is dead in vain. A logical conclusion if righteousness is through the agency of the law. The choice must be made between works and grace, between law and Christ. If salvation is of works, it is not of grace; if it is of grace, it is not of works (Rom 11:6). If salvation is by works, then the atonement of Christ was in vain, a blunder, a useless tragedy, without a cause. But the purpose of the cross has not failed; the message of the cross is not vanity. Salvation must be either by the works of the law or through the atoning death of Christ. It cannot be a combination of both. There are two mutually exclusive teachings prevalent in the world: (1) salvation is by human merit; and (2) salvation is by divine mercy (Tit 3:5). Christ is not a part Saviour, either He must be all (Col 3:11) or He is nothing at all.

II. POLEMICAL: THE DOCTRINE OF LIBERTY. 3:1-4:31.

A. Paul's Appeal to Liberty. 3:1-7.

1. Rebuke of the Galatians. 3:1-4.

3:1. O foolish Galatians. Paul jolts them with this exclamation of surprise and indignation. The Galatians were not naturally stupid or unintelligent, but were acting as if they were bereft of reason when they questioned the sufficiency of Christ. They did not stop to think how senseless it is to mix lawkeeping with faith in Christ, and they were swept along with this false doctrine (cf. Eph 4:14). Bewitched you (Gr baskainō). The Galatians acted as if subject to some weird occult influence or under the spell of an evil eye. The false teachers had so fascinated them and confused their minds that they seemed to be groping around in a spiritual fog. That ye should not obey the truth. These words are not found in the best manuscripts, but they present the fact of the Galatians' defection. Set forth. This word was used of public pronouncements and means to present vividly, displaying graphically, post clearly, placard (as on a sign board). Crucified. As having been crucified. The Greek perfect tense emphasizes a past completed action resulting in certain and positive present effects. Paul is not speaking of the figure of a dead Christ on a crucifix, but of a risen, ascended Christ who had been crucified and is now alive forever more (Rev 1:18). Paul preached Christ crucified (I Cor 2:2) as man's only and sufficient Saviour. Paul and Barnabas had lifted up Christ before the Galatians, who should have kept their eyes on Him and not heeded the errors of the legalists.

2 This only would I learn of you, Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

2. Learn of you. Ascertain from your personal testimony, not from hearsay. The mere asking of the question gives the answer and is a decisive argument. Receive ye the Spirit. The Galatians heard the gospel of grace, believed, and received the Holy Spirit. All believers receive the Holy Spirit at the time of salvation. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is the unmistakable evidence of salvation (Rom 8:9; I Cor 3:16; 6:19-20). By the works of the law. Definitely not. By the hearing of faith. From what source (Gr ek). By hearing and believing God's message of grace (Rom 10:17; I Thess 2:13). What the law could not do, grace has done. The works of the law and the hearing of faith are exclusive opposites and cannot tolerate each other. It must be one or the other, not a combination of both.

3 Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by the flesh?

3. Having begun in the Spirit. Whom ye received at the time of your salvation. The Holy Spirit is the author of the new birth; He is the creator of the new creation in Christ (II Cor 5:17). Are ye now made perfect by the flesh. The word perfect (Gr epiteleō) most certainly does not mean sinless, but complete, spiritual maturity. The middle voice implies "making yourselves perfect" by means of self-effort. The present tense indicates that the action is in progress and that there is still time to correct the error. Spirit and flesh indicate the two spheres of moral and spiritual influence, one divine and one human. Turning from the divine to the human is not the way to spiritual maturity. No man can ever do the work of the Holy Spirit. There is a double contrast between having begun and finished, and between Spirit and flesh. There is irony in this thrust. The flesh denotes the unregenerate, depraved self, all that a person is apart from the transforming power of the Holy Spirit. The flesh is incurably evil, it is corrupt, and cannot produce a holy influence. It may be educated, cultivated, reformed, and refined; but it is still flesh (Jn 3:6), still at enmity against God (Rom 8:7-8), and at war against the Spirit (Gal 5:17). It would be the height of folly to descend from the high plane of the Spirit to the low level of the flesh and expect ceremonial circumcision and ritual observance to accomplish what only the Holy Spirit can do. The natural can never produce the supernatural. The old nature can never improve the new nature. Salvation is what God does for man and not what man does for himself. Christ is the Author and the Finisher of our faith (Heb 12:2). What God begins, He finishes (Phil 1:6).

4 Have ye suffered so many things in vain? if it be yet in vain.

4. Suffered so many things. Because of their identification with Christ, they experienced many hardships. Indications of these persecutions are recorded in Acts 13:45, 50; 14:2, 5; 14:19, 22. Paul refers to them in his second letter to Timothy and then adds, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (II Tim 3:10-12). If it be yet in vain. Paul is unwilling to believe that they will completely and finally abandon Christ for Judaism; he hopes for better results. It would be vain, useless, and of no purpose for them to forsake grace for law.

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith.

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; Though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.

16 Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.

17 And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect.

18 For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise.

was written with the finger of God (Ex 31:18). Being made a curse for us. The method by which Christ redeemed us. He suffered the just for the unjust that He might bring us to God (I Pet 3:18). He was our only Mediator (I Tim 2:5). He became a curse for us (I Pet 2:24) and was made sin for us (II Cor 5:21). He did it for us voluntarily (Jn 10:17-18). This preposition (Gr hyper) implies substitution. For it is written, Cursed. Deuteronomy 21:23 does not refer to crucifixion, but rather to the ignominious hanging of a body of an executed criminal on a post or stake. God wants Christ to be seen as what He actually became, a curse. Three prepositions give us a vivid picture of redemption. We were under (Gr hypo) the curse of the law (vs. 10). Christ came above (Gr hyper) us, between us and the curse, and took us out from (Gr ex) under the curse having become a curse for us. He took our place; He took all of our sins and gave us all of His righteousness. God was satisfied forever; the law was silenced forever; and the believer is saved forever.

14. That . . . that. Two purpose clauses. The blessing of Abraham is justification by faith. There is no room for the law. This blessing is intended for the whole world, but it is only in and through (Gr en) Christ. No man is saved apart from Christ and any man may be saved by Christ (Jn 6:37). The promise of the Spirit, the gift which comes to all who accept Christ, is through (Gr dia) faith. It is folly indeed to seek for higher or holier blessings by deeds of merit.

2. The purpose of the law. 3:15-29.

15. Brethren. Denoting affection. Manner of men. Paul takes an analogy from human affairs of everyday life and illustrates his point so clearly that all can understand. Man's covenant. Better, human testament. This word (Gr diathēkē) strictly speaking is not a contract between two parties (Gr synthēkē), but a binding will or testament instituted by the first party. Confirmed. Ratified. The Greek perfect tense means that the ratification is complete and in force. The matter stands settled. Disannulleth, annul, abrogate, make void. Or addeth thereto. No new condition may be imposed, no codicil allowed. Since no one can alter, amplify, or annul a man's testament after it has been duly executed, surely no one can add to God's unconditional promise to Abraham, as the legalists were trying to do. God's promise was not a matter of mutual arrangement and it remains inviolate.

16. To Abraham and his seed. The beneficiaries of the promise were not limited to Abraham. Some may have objected that God's promise to Abraham was only temporary, so Paul adds "and his seed." The promises. Plural because frequently repeated (Gen 13:15; 17:8; 18:18; 22:18). Thy seed, which is Christ. The promise looked forward to the one descendant of Abraham in whom all the promises were to be fulfilled.

17. Confirmed before God. By repeated ratifications and sealed with God's own oath (Gen 22:16-17; Heb 6:13). The perfect participle indicates the certainty of prior ratification. Unbelief here charges God with perjury. Four hundred and thirty years after. God's ratified promise of long standing certainly could not be rendered inoperative by the law. The law, which was not given for centuries after God's gracious promise, had nothing to do with that promise or with Abraham's justification. If the law had nothing to do with Abraham's justification, how can it have anything to do with anyone's justification? Cannot disannul. Does not repeal. The law cannot unconfirm God's confirmed testament. None effect. Cancel, render inoperative. The law cannot invalidate the promise which God has validated; it cannot nullify the promise.

18. Inheritance. The messianic blessing. Of the law. Derived from the law as its source. God gave it. God graciously granted it as a free gift without reserve, with no strings attached.

God's promised gift did not contain even one legal stipulation. The perfect tense emphasizes its permanence; it still holds good after the law has come. Note that God gave it, not merely promised it. By promise. By promise alone, plus nothing. This excludes all self-effort. A new law may repeal or replace a previous law, but the law cannot affect in any way God's promise. Faith is not superseded by the works of the law. The legalists' stipulation of works meant not merely modification, but cancellation of God's confirmed promise. Grace and faith precede law and works. Grace and faith supersede law and works.

19 Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator.

19. Wherefore. Why then the law? What is the meaning and purpose of the law? It was added. Not as a codicil. The law was not part of God's original and confirmed testament, and it was not added to it later. The law was not added to grace; it did not become another ingredient of salvation. It was brought in alongside of the promise. It was supplemental and subordinate. Because of transgressions. Because (Gr charin) means for this cause and denotes the aim of the law. Transgressions (Gr parabasis) mean a step beyond a fixed limit into forbidden territory. It is a willful act of violating an explicit law, overstepping what is right into the realm of what is wrong. The law was added much later to make men conscious of the existence and the extent of sin (Rom 3:19; 5:20). The law was added to reveal sin, not remove it. To show men the need of righteousness, not to be a means of securing righteousness. The law drives men to despair and to cry out for deliverance (Rom 7:24-25). The law declares man to be a helpless, hopeless sinner. Till the seed should come. The law was temporary and preparatory, from Moses to Christ; it was not of permanent duration. It was a temporary institution between the original promise and its fulfillment in Christ. After Christ came, the law was abolished (Rom 10:4) as a means of securing righteousness. Ordained by angels. Put in force or promulgated through angels as a channel (Deut 33:2; Acts 7:53; Heb 2:2). God used angels to communicate with Moses. The angels represented God and Moses represented Israel. Hand of a mediator. Moses stood between God and Israel (Deut 5:5) and received the tablets of stone (Ex 32:15-16).

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one, but God is one.

20. Mediator. A mediator is a middleman between two parties: He does not act on behalf of one person alone. The presence of Moses implies two other parties, God and Israel. The law was a contract to which both parties agreed to the condition. God said, "If ye will obey," and Israel said, "We will do" (Ex 19:5, 8). Israel was obligated to obey, and God was obligated to bless if they did obey. The law was valid so long as both parties fulfilled the terms of the contract. Israel defaulted and did not live up to her part of the bargain. So then God was no longer obligated to keep His part. The conditions were not kept, and the blessings were not received. Israel therefore had no hope on the basis of keeping the law. God is one. The immutable God acted alone when He graciously gave Abraham the promise. He dealt personally and directly with Abraham, not through a mediator. The promise was unconditional, with no stipulation. Its fulfillment depended upon God's faithfulness, not upon Abraham's obedience to a set of rules (Rom 4:13-16).

21 Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.

21. Against the promises. The law has its own specific function; it is different in nature and purpose. It is not opposed to the promise; it is not competitive, but complementary. The law operates in a different area. The law has a ministration of condemnation. Grace has a ministration of righteousness (II Cor 3:9). If there had been a law. This premise is assumed to be contrary to fact. There never was such a law. The law was given through Moses (Jn 1:17), but not to be a source or means of justification. Could have given life. Capable of imparting life. The very impossibility of such a law is evident, and yet the 22 But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

23 But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

legalists were urging the Galatians to abandon the righteousness of Christ which was theirs by faith alone and go back to the law. Man by nature is dead in trespasses and sin (Eph 2:1, 5), and he needs a new life. It was not God's plan to make men alive by the law, but by the new birth (Jn 1:12-13). The broken law demands satisfaction and will not accept good works in lieu of the death penalty. The law demands death. It cannot give life. The law demands righteousness, but it cannot provide it. Verily. Indeed, in reality as opposed to the mere pretense. Righteousness should have been by the law. Better, it would have been by the law.

22. But. In contradiction to the hypothesis of the preceding verse. The scripture. The inspired writing (II Tim 3:16; II Pet 1:21). God's recorded will. Hath concluded all under sin. Hath confined, shut up, locked up in prison, for care and constraint. This is a universal arraignment (Deut 27:26; Rom 3:9, 19, 22-23), with no exception. All men are prisoners of sin. The law shows that man does not attain justification by human works, but obtains it by divine mercy (Tit 3:5). That the promise by faith. This states the reason for the law and the intention of God. The law paves the way for salvation by grace and justification by faith in Jesus Christ. Consciousness of sin is a necessary step to justification. Until a man realizes that he is lost, he will have little or no interest in being saved. The words faith and believe state clearly how God's gift of eternal life is bestowed. Faith always has an object, here the object is our Lord Jesus Christ. A promise is received by faith only. How can legalists, Galatians or anyone else, say that God's promise is received by the works of the law?

23. Before faith came. The personal faith mentioned in the preceding verse. Kept under the law. The Greek imperfect tense indicates that we were continually guarded, by a stern and strict jailer to prevent our escape. It was really for protection rather than incarceration for punishment. Shut up unto the faith. This expresses the object of being held in custody. It shuts men up to faith in Christ as their only means of freedom. The law imprisoned men so that they might find true liberty in Christ; it cuts off every other way of escape. The purpose of the law was to prepare men for faith in Christ. Which should afterwards be revealed. The about-to-be-revealed faith. The law was a preparation for faith in Christ, not a substitute for it or a supplement to it. The law sentry was relieved of its duty when Christ came. The legalists claim the law is still on duty and even assign it an unscriptural function. They would place God's liberated sons back in slavery under a terrible taskmaster.

24. Wherefore. So that. The law was our schoolmaster. A schoolmaster (Gr paidagōgos) is really the trusted boy-leader or child-escort employed to attend a boy from six to sixteen and who watched over his morals and manners. He was not the teacher and he had no authority to punish. His business was to see that the child went to the right place and did the right thing. Such was the purpose of the law, to prescribe right conduct and impose certain checks. The law convicts of sin, restrains from sin, and condemns for sin; but the law cannot save from sin. Bring us to Christ. The God-given purpose of the law has led us to Christ; its work is finished. That we might be justified by faith. The ultimate purpose of the law.

25. Faith. The faith in Christ. No longer under a schoolmaster. The born-again believer is no longer under the boy-leader, who has been discharged from service. We are not under the law, but under grace (Rom 6:15).

26. Ye are. Paul changes from "we" to "ye" to apply the truth to the Galatians. All. Jews and Gentiles. Children of God. There is a distinction between the term children (Gr teknon) and the term sons (Gr huios). All Christians are God's children, having been born again and sharing God's nature (II Pet 1:4).

27 For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.

28 There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

29 And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

CHAPTER 4

NOW I say, That the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all;

2 But is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world:

The term "son" denotes a legal status, that of a liberated, mature person in possession of the inheritance (fulfilled promise). By faith in Christ Jesus. The Word of God knows nothing of the so-called universal Fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man. Only those who exercise faith in Christ are sons of God (Acts 4:12). Faith in our Lord Jesus Christ is the only human condition of salvation (Eph 2:8-10).

27. Baptized into Christ. This is how one becomes united to Christ. This is not baptismal regeneration and does not refer to water baptism, for that never put anyone into Christ. Paul speaks of the baptism of the Holy Spirit which places all true believers into a living union with Christ (I Cor 12:12-13), and with each other (Eph 4:15-16). The Greek passive voice means that this was done for them and not by them. Baptism in water symbolizes, but does not effect, this glorious experience. Have put on Christ. Clothed yourself with Christ (Rom 13:14). This implies family likeness to Christ. The Greek aorist middle infers their own deed, with reflexive action, and refers to the custom of investiture. When a boy became of age, he put on a garment which signified the full privilege of a grown-up son enjoying full citizenship.

28. Ye are all one in Christ. This is a statement of fact, rather than a mere possibility. The point is that "in Christ Jesus" race or national distinction does not exist; class differences vanish, and sex rivalry disappears. These things are not barriers to Christian fellowship. At the foot of the cross all men are equal, and no one enjoys special privileges.

29. If ye be Christ's. Since you Galatians are His, it follows that you are Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise. Christ is heir to all things (Heb 1:2) and you are joint-heirs with Him (Rom 8:17).

C. Paul's Amplification of Liberty. 4:1-31.

1. The coming of God's Son. 4:1-7.

4:1. Child. One of tender years (Gr nepios) in contrast to (Gr teleios), one full grown. He is illustrating the spiritual immaturity of those living under the law and who are being prepared for faith in Christ. Differeth nothing from a servant. He has no more freedom than a slave and is no better off than a slave. Lord of all. He is an heir de jure, but not de facto. He is not enjoying the actual possession of his promised inheritance. He is Lord of all by birthright and by title. Paul's meaning is clear and his purpose is plain. He is warning the Galatians against becoming entangled in the bondage of the law, and he is encouraging them to enjoy the spiritual liberty they have by faith in Christ.

2. Under tutors. Guardians who have the supervision of the person. Governors. Stewards who have the supervision of the property. They are the trustees who manage the estate. During his minority, the heir is controlled and restrained by guardians and stewards. Until the time appointed. The time appointed beforehand for the termination of his minority status when he attains his inheritance. Under the law men were minors and enjoyed little of the inheritance because they were under tutelage and in servile condition.

3. Even so we. Paul makes the application. When we were children. In our minority. Were in bondage. The Greek perfect tense implies that we were in a real state of servitude under the legalistic system and not free sons under grace. Under the elements of the world. The word elements (Gr stoiceion) denotes things placed in a row, thus the letters of the alphabet. Hence, the ABC's or first principles of non-Christian humanity, the elemental lesson in simple symbols of outward things (Col 2:8, 20). The kindergarten department of instruction in religious observances which are external and temporal as contrasted

4 But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law,

5 To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.

with the permanent spiritual principles of faith in Christ. Under law men were in the process of preparatory training.

4. But when. Marks the beginning of a remarkable change in the state of affairs. The fullness of the time. The proper time had arrived for both God and man. The time appointed by the Father and foretold by the prophets. It was a time of outward prosperity and inward corruption. The religions of the world were spiritually bankrupt, devoid of power to change men's lives, and had degenerated into feeble superstitions and meaningless rituals. The pre-messianic period ended right on schedule. God sent forth his Son. There was no other way to save man (Acts 4:12). With Christ there is an endless hope; without Christ there is a hopeless end. God sent forth Christ from Himself, from heaven's majesty to earth's misery, to execute His plan and purpose. This reveals Christ's pre-existence, His deity, and His authority. It was the Second Person of the Trinity who was commissioned. Made of a woman. The Son of God became out of (Gr ex) a woman, became incarnate and dwelt among us (Jn 1:14). The fact of the miraculous virgin birth agrees perfectly with the language here. Christ did not cease to be God when He became man, the God-man, one person with two natures. Made under the law. Not only a human birth but a Jewish birth, subject to all the ordinances of the law.

5. To redeem. Buy out of the slave market (3:13). This means both purchase and liberation. The purpose of the incarnation was redemption, to deliver us from the curse of the law and make us sons under grace. Christ came not to explain the law, but to expiate sin, to obliterate a guilty past and initiate a glorious future. Them that were under the law. The law is not preceded by the definite article, so law in general. Even Gentiles are not without law to God (Rom 2:14). Christ came to redeem all men (I Tim 2:4-6). That we might receive. Receive from the giver for the first time, not recover something we once possessed. It means to get from, not to get back. The adoption of sons. Placed and recognized as adult sons. This means full deliverance from the child-servant status. This is based on redemption and implies family likeness with its position, privilege, and prestige. Regeneration gives us the relationship; adoption gives us the position.

6. Because ye are sons. God could not do this while men were still minors under guardians and stewards. As a consequence of sonship and as a proof of sonship (Rom 8:14-16). God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son. Commissioned Him, as He had His Son. Note the parallels: Son and Spirit. The Holy Spirit is called here the Spirit of His Son (Rom 8:9; Phil 1:19; Jn 15:26). Into your hearts. Every child of God is indwelt by the Holy Spirit (I Cor 3:16; 6:19-20). He is the earnest of our inheritance (Eph 1:13-14). All guardians and stewards have been discharged; their supervision is no longer needed because believers are full-grown sons indwelt by the Holy Spirit. Crying Abba, Father. This cry of deep emotion comes from the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. While an immature child is under supervision, he doesn't fully appreciate his Father; but when he reaches his maturity, he begins to realize who and what his Father is, and so cries out Abba, Father (Rom 8:15). These words were used by Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane (Mk 14:36). Wherever the Aramaic "Abba" occurs in the New Testament, it has the Greek interpretation added. This combination may suggest the impartiality of the Holy Spirit's ministry in all believers, whether they are Jews or Gentiles.

7. Wherefore. On the basis of what has gone before, after God sent His Son for you and His Holy Spirit in you. We are what we are because God sent forth His Son; we have what we have because God sent forth His Spirit—God's work external and internal. The whole Trinity has been involved in making the believer a son and an heir. Thou art no more a servant. Paul addresses each one individually and tells him what he is by the grace of God. Though you were once a slave (Gr doulos) to the law, you are no longer. But a son. How foolish to abandon this high position and privilege for the law state of a slave under the bondage of the law. And if a son. This is a Greek first-class condition of logic, meaning "since" you are a son. There is no doubt about it. Then an heir. Enjoying a new spiritual heritage, not through works of personal merit, but through grace. It is not by placing themselves under the law, but by remaining free from it, that they will obtain the blessing of Abraham.

2. The conduct of the Galatians. 4:8-21.

8 Howbeit then, when ye knew not God, ye did service unto them which by nature are no gods.

8. Howbeit then. In your former pagan state. Ye knew not God. Ignorant of God, not acquainted with Him. They lived in utter spiritual darkness. Paul is not excusing them, merely stating the fact of their wretched condition. Ye did service. Ye slaved and were in bondage. The Galatians had been pagans and had worshiped idols before they were saved. Which by nature are no gods. Paul is not denying their existence, but their deity. Paul refers to them as so-called gods (I Cor 8:4-6) and demons (I Cor 10:19-20).

9 But now, after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?

9. But now. Since your salvation. After that ye have known God. Having come to God by personal experience, and enjoying fellowship with Him. Or rather are known of God. This explains how the Galatians came to know God. The initiative was not theirs. Paul emphasizes the fact that it is all of grace. God recognizes them as His sons and heirs. The word for "know" (Gr ginōskō) often implies a personal relationship between the knower and the known. God knows them in a saving relationship (Mt 7:23; I Cor 8:3). The Greek aorist tense (ingressive) emphasizes the beginning of the action and leaves room for the question about the present. How turn ye again. . . ? The Greek present tense signifies that they were in the act of turning from grace and liberty to law and bondage. Their defection was just beginning and still in progress, not yet complete. To the weak and beggarly elements. These two adjectives express the utter impotence of these elements to do and bestow what was done and given by God sending His Son. These elements are without strength and without resources; they are spiritually powerless and spiritually poverty-stricken. Ye desire again to be in bondage. The combination of these words (Gr palin and anōthen) describes the completeness of their proposed relapse into second childhood. Paul's question shows the absurdity of their desire to be slaves again. They were in the process of leaving the light and liberty of Christianity for the shadow and slavery of legalism. Ritualistic observances are heathenish in principle. They are a system of bondage opposed to God's grace. How can anyone want to exchange the robe of Christ's righteousness for the filthy rags of heathenism, Judaism, or any other "ism"?

10 Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

10. Ye observe. The Greek present middle implies that they are continually observing for themselves, for their own benefit, some of the requirements of Judaism. They were in the process of launching into legalism and were scrupulously observing with meticulous care certain rules with the belief that such practice would gain merit. This shows the partial success of the legalists.

11 I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain.

11. I am afraid of you. He is afraid about or concerning them. Lest. Denotes the reason for Paul's fear. I have bestowed upon you labor. The perfect tense indicates the finished work of Paul in placarding Christ as the crucified One. Labor (Gr kopiaō) means to labor to the point of exhaustion. In vain. It is placed before the verb for emphasis and means to no purpose, without effect, without due result. Could it be possible that Paul's labor was merely a mirage and not a miracle? Paul's labor would have been in vain if all that was accomplished was for the

It means to get from, not to get back. The adoption of sons. Placed and recognized as adult sons. This means full deliverance from the child-servant status. This is based on redemption and implies family likeness with its position, privilege, and prestige. Regeneration gives us the relationship; adoption gives us the position.

6. Because ye are sons. God could not do this while men were still minors under guardians and stewards. As a consequence of sonship and as a proof of sonship (Rom 8:14-16). God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son. Commissioned Him, as He had His Son. Note the parallels: Son and Spirit. The Holy Spirit is called here the Spirit of His Son (Rom 8:9; Phil 1:19; Jn 15:26). Into your hearts. Every child of God is indwelt by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor 3:16; 6:19-20). He is the earnest of our inheritance (Eph 1:13-14). All guardians and stewards have been discharged; their supervision is no longer needed because believers are full-grown sons indwelt by the Holy Spirit. Crying Abba, Father. This cry of deep emotion comes from the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. While an immature child is under supervision, he doesn't fully appreciate his Father; but when he reaches his maturity, he begins to realize who and what his Father is, and so cries out Abba, Father (Rom 8:15). These words were used by Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane (Mk 14:36). Wherever the Aramaic "Abba" occurs in the New Testament, it has the Greek interpretation added. This combination may suggest the impartiality of the Holy Spirit's ministry in all believers, whether they are Jews or Gentiles.

7. Wherefore. On the basis of what has gone before, after God sent His Son for you and His Holy Spirit in you. We are what we are because God sent forth His Son; we have what we have because God sent forth His Spirit—God's work external and internal. The whole Trinity has been involved in making the believer a son and an heir. Thou art no more a servant. Paul addresses each one individually and tells him what he is by the grace of God. Though you were once a slave (Gr doulos) to the law, you are no longer. But a son. How foolish to abandon this high position and privilege for the law state of a slave under the bondage of the law. And if a son. This is a Greek first-class condition of logic, meaning "since" you are a son. There is no doubt about it. Then an heir. Enjoying a new spiritual heritage, not through works of personal merit, but through grace. It is not by placing themselves under the law, but by remaining free from it, that they will obtain the blessing of Abraham.

2. The conduct of the Galatians. 4:8-21.

8. Howbeit then. In your former pagan state. Ye knew not God. Ignorant of God, not acquainted with Him. They lived in utter spiritual darkness. Paul is not excusing them, merely stating the fact of their wretched condition. Ye did service. Ye slaved and were in bondage. The Galatians had been pagans and had worshiped idols before they were saved. Which by nature are no gods. Paul is not denying their existence, but their deity. Paul refers to them as so-called gods (I Cor 8:4-6) and demons (I Cor 10:19-20).

9. But now. Since your salvation. After that ye have known God. Having come to God by personal experience, and enjoying fellowship with Him. Or rather are known of God. This explains how the Galatians came to know God. The initiative was not theirs. Paul emphasizes the fact that it is all of grace. God recognizes them as His sons and heirs. The word for "know" (Gr ginōskō) often implies a personal relationship between the knower and the known. God knows them in a saving relationship (Mt 7:23; I Cor 8:3). The Greek aorist tense (ingressive) emphasizes the beginning of the action and leaves room for the question about the present. How turn ye again. . . ? The Greek present tense signifies that they were in the act of turning from grace and liberty to law and bondage. Their defection was just beginning and still in progress, not yet complete. To the weak and beggarly elements. These two adjectives express the utter impotence of these elements to do and bestow what was done and given by God sending His Son. These elements are without strength and without resources; they are spiritually powerless and spiritually poverty-stricken. Ye desire again to be in bondage. The combination of these words (Gr palin and anōthen) describes the completeness of their proposed relapse into second childhood. Paul's question shows the absurdity of their desire to be slaves again. They were in the process of leaving the light and liberty of Christianity for the shadow and slavery of legalism. Ritualistic observances are heathenish in principle. They are a system of bondage opposed to God's grace. How can anyone want to exchange the robe of Christ's righteousness for the filthy rags of heathenism, Judaism, or any other "ism"?

10. Ye observe. The Greek present middle implies that they are continually observing for themselves, for their own benefit, some of the requirements of Judaism. They were in the process of launching into legalism and were scrupulously observing with meticulous care certain rules with the belief that such practice would gain merit. This shows the partial success of the legalists.

11. I am afraid of you. He is afraid about or concerning them. Lest. Denotes the reason for Paul's fear. I have bestowed upon you labor. The perfect tense indicates the finished work of Paul in placarding Christ as the crucified One. Labor (Gr kopiaō) means to labor to the point of exhaustion. In vain. It is placed before the verb for emphasis and means to no purpose, without effect, without due result. Could it be possible that Paul's labor was merely a mirage and not a miracle? Paul's labor would have been in vain if all that was accomplished was for the

8 Howbeit then, when ye knew not God, ye did service unto them which by nature are no gods.

9 But now, after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?

10 Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

11 I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain.

12 Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am; for I am as ye are: ye have not injured me at all.

13 Ye know how through infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel unto you at the first.

14 And my temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus.

15 Where is then the blessedness ye spake of? for I bear you record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, because I tell you the truth?

Galatians to exchange their pagan religion for the old abrogated legalism of the Jews. Turning to legalism is equivalent to rejecting the gospel and renouncing Christ. Paul's admonition to the Galatians should be a solemn warning to Christians not to sacrifice their spiritual liberty in Christ for the slavery of forms and ceremonies.

12. Brethren. Paul identifies himself with them, and though fearful, he will not give them up. I beseech you. I beg you, suggesting the intensity of his appeal. Be as I am. The Greek present middle imperative means keep on becoming as I am. Don't give up grace for law, but get all the way out from under the law and come all the way under grace. Paul had been liberated from legalism; he gave it up. Paul laid aside the pedigree, privileges, and prejudices of Judaism for Christ (Phil 3:4-8). He abandoned his own righteousness of the law for the righteousness of God in Christ, and he asks the Galatians to do the same. For I am as ye are. Since being saved by grace and being liberated from legalism, Paul is living like a Gentile, in order to be more effective in winning Gentiles to Christ (I Cor 9:21). The bondage of the law does not promote spiritual life, but it endangers Christian liberty. Ye have not injured me at all. Ye did me no wrong, no injustice.

13. Ye know. In what unfavorable light his infirmity placed him when he first came among them. How through infirmity. Because of illness. An attack of some malady detained Paul and made it necessary to spend more time than he had planned to spend in their region. Some think it may have been an attack of malaria or epilepsy, or perhaps ophthalmia, an Oriental eye disease prevalent in the lowlands of Pamphylia. But whatever it was, it occasioned Paul's preaching the gospel to them. At the first. Paul's first visit. Some believe this implies a second visit on a subsequent missionary journey. But on Paul's first missionary journey, he retraced his steps after preaching in Derbe (Acts 14:20-25), so he actually visited most of these cities twice on his first tour.

14. My temptation. The best Greek texts have "your" temptation. The trial to which you were subjected by my bodily infirmity and which might have caused you to treat me with indifference. Ye despised not. This word (Gr exoutheneō) means despise utterly, set at nought, scorn, treat with contempt. Nor rejected. Literally, "spit out" (Gr ekptuō). Hence to disdain, spurn, loathe. Spitting was a sign of disgust. The ancients expectorated when they saw a person having an epileptic seizure. This may have even been Paul's malady. But. On the contrary. Received me. In spite of Paul's illness and repulsive appearance, they treated him with great kindness. As an angel of God. With veneration (Acts 14:11-18). As Christ Jesus. The highest honor.

15. Where is then. What became of the congratulatory spirit? Blessedness. The blessedness of being in a state of prosperity resulting from having Paul as their apostle. I bear you record. I testify or bear witness. Plucked out your own eyes. Literally, dug out, gouged out (Gr exorussō). Some infer from these words that Paul had a disease of the eyes and that he needed a new pair of eyes, but there is no conclusive evidence that such was the case. It is a graphic description of their attitude and expresses supreme love and devotion. Paul lamented their changed attitude toward him.

16. Therefore. And so, seeing your love has waned. Am I . . . become. The Greek perfect tense signifies permanence of the action. Your enemy. Your personal enemy (Gr echthros) in a hostile, active sense. Paul has not changed, and the gospel has not changed. Why do they regard him as an enemy? He hides them for their fickle disloyalty. Paul is not their enemy. Because I tell you the truth. The legalists accused Paul of not telling the truth and of keeping the Galatians in a retarded

17 They zealously affect you, but not well; yea, they would exclude you, that ye might affect them.

18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you, 20 I desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice; for I stand in doubt of you.

21 Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondmaid, the other by a freewoman.

spiritual condition by his adamant stand against circumcision as a means of salvation.

17. They zealously affect you. Affect has its root in (Gr zeō) a word meaning to boil with heat and is used of intense passions. The legalists were courting, taking a warm interest in, striving after, and earnestly desiring the Galatians. But not well. Not honorably. They were zealous for their own cause. Their ulterior motive was to promote Judaism and steal their hearts from Christ. Their great proselyting zeal was condemned by Christ (Mt 23:15). They would exclude you. They would separate, isolate, and shut you out from other teachers and from the liberating gospel of Christ. They would exclude you from salvation unless you observed the law. That ye might affect them. The purpose of the legalists in excluding the Galatians from salvation was that they, having no hope elsewhere, would court the legalists and seek affiliation with them. With their fawning fallacies they were seeking to monopolize the affections of the Galatians and make them a prey for their false teachings.

18. It is good. It is good to be courted in a good way. It is good for someone to take a warm interest in you in an honorable manner. Paul zealously sought the Galatians for Christ, and he welcomes all such efforts in relation to the gospel of Christ. The motive behind the courting is very important. Paul did not desire a monopoly in serving them, but he did not want them seduced from Christ. In a good thing. Paul is speaking primarily of preaching Christ and Him crucified. All true Christians are fervent in their evangelistic zeal and persistent and consistent in seeking the lost for Christ. This differs vastly from the selfish proselytism of legalists, both ancient and modern.

19. My little children (Gr teknion). The usual word for maternal endearment. It expresses the tenderness of Paul and the immaturity of the Galatians. Of whom I travail in birth again. For whom I am undergoing the birth pangs (I Cor 4:15; Phm 10). Paul is again experiencing the same painful anguish as when he brought them to Christ. Until Christ be formed in you. This word (Gr morphoō) means to give outward expression to one's inward nature. Paul wants Christ to be seen in the lives of the Galatians. A living Christ on the inside will manifest Himself on the outside (Gal 2:20; Rom 8:29). As a result of the legalists' propaganda, the Galatians were beginning to trust "self" in their efforts to obey the law, instead of depending on the Holy Spirit to produce a Christlike life in them and through them.

20. I desire. Greek imperfect tense. I was desiring to be present with you. Change my voice. Paul was under the handicap of having to write, which is never as effective as the spoken word. If Paul could speak to them, he could straighten matters out in a very short time. I stand in doubt of you. Literally, I am perplexed in you. Paul was at his wits' end, not knowing the best way to prevent them from the error into which they were drifting.

21. Tell me. A direct appeal. Ye that desire to be under the law. On the verge of adopting law and of becoming subject to all its demands and condemnation. Do ye not hear the law? Are you hearing what it really says and heeding what it really means? Paul wants them to learn a very important lesson.

3. The comparison of Hagar and Sarah. 4:22-31.

22. It is written. Not a direct quotation, but a summation of the historical facts. Abraham had two sons. Those who claim to be Abraham's sons by their submission to the law forget that Abraham had two sons. Abraham had other sons, but it is clear that Paul is speaking of Ishmael and Isaac (Rom 9:6-9). The status of the mother determined the status of the son. Natural birth is no guarantee of spiritual privilege. The son of the slave 23 But he who was of the bondwoman was born after the flesh; but he of the freewoman was by promise.

24 Which things are an allegory: for these are the two covenants; the one from the mount Sī'nāī, which gendereth to bondage, which is Ā'gār.

25 For this Ā'gār is mount Sī'nāī in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.

27 For it is written, Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not; for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband.

28 Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise.

29 But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now.

girl, Hagar, was rejected; the son of the free woman, Sarah, obtained the inheritance.

23. But. Although sons of the same father. Was born. The Greek perfect tense, "has been born," emphasizes the certainty of the distinction between these two births. Ishmael's descendants do not belong to the covenant people; Isaac's descendants have the promise. Slave girls were customarily given by a barren wife, but could not be taken by a husband voluntarily. Sarah, losing hope that the promise would be fulfilled, substituted Hagar for herself and sought to get an heir by proxy. But God had a better idea and later carried out His plan and fulfilled His promise. Ishmael's birth was natural; Isaac's birth was supernatural, through a miraculous intervention of God (Rom 4:18-21).

24. An allegory. Speaking allegorically. Paul uses the historical narrative to illustrate his point for the benefit of the Galatians who were tempted to place themselves under the burden of the law. Paul illustrates the deep distinction and distance between grace and law, between the children of promise and the subject of legalism. An allegory is a veiled presentation of a meaning, metaphorically implied but not expressly stated. The superficial reader sees only the surface, but there is more to see, the facts in their full reality. Paul gives these historical facts a symbolic meaning and uses them to illustrate the already established doctrine of justification by faith. These are the two covenants. These two women symbolize the two covenants, law and grace. Hagar represents the Mosaic covenant of law and bondage and is the mother of the child of the flesh. Sarah represents the Abrahamic covenant of grace and liberty and is the mother of the child of promise.

25. Mount Sinai. Hagar represents Mount Sinai. Answereth to. Belongs to the same or corresponds to. Jerusalem which now is. The earthly Jerusalem stands for Judaism and represents the Jewish nation. Jerusalem was the center of apostate Judaism. Is in bondage with her children. Jerusalem is a slaving mother of slaving children. A severe condemnation of the legalists from Jerusalem who were trying to seduce the Galatians, and of all who would supplant grace with law.

26. But. Opposes the preceding verse. Jerusalem which is above. The heavenly Jerusalem (Heb 12:22-24) is the spiritual city of which all Christians are children. Free. Independent of the Mosaic law. The heavenly Jerusalem is a free mother with free children.

27. Written. We have here a quotation from the Septuagint of Isaiah 54:1 which is applied to unfruitful Sarah, who answers to the heavenly Jerusalem. Abraham's spiritual seed shall be more numerous than his natural seed. Isaiah closes the fifty-third chapter with these words, "He bare the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors." The next word is "sing." Paul translates it Rejoice. The grace of God gives men something to sing about. Israel will some day realize the full meaning of Isaiah 53 and experience glorious deliverance and restoration through God's grace.

28. Now. Paul applies the truth to the Galatians. We brethren. The best texts have "ye" instead of "we," Paul assures the Galatians that they, like Isaac, are born according to promise, not of mere fleshly descent, as Ishmael. The sons of promise are free.

29. But as then. As then, so now. Born after the flesh. Born naturally and are enslaved sinners. Born after the Spirit. Born supernaturally and are liberated saints. Persecuted. The word (Gr diokō) means drive away, put to flight, harass, molest. The presence of Isaac causes Ishmael to manifest his true character (Gen 21:9). From Isaac, came the Hebrews; from Ishmael, came the Arabs. From the beginning these two sons of Abraham were unfriendly, and so have been their descendants. The presence of the new nature makes known what the old nature really is. The legalists were persecuting Paul and all who would not abandon grace for law. There are two types of men in the world: those who have been born only of the flesh, and those who in addition have been born of the Spirit. It would be better not to have been born at all than not to be born again. Men of the flesh detest men of the Spirit. No one despises grace like the man who is trying to save himself by his own merit.

30. Cast out. Abraham by divine direction sent Hagar and Ishmael away (Gen 21:10-12). This is an encouragement to all who have been born of the Spirit and a solemn warning to all who are born only of the flesh. Grace, not law, brings the inheritance in the family of God. Shall not be heir. The son of the slave girl shall not, no never, by any means share the inheritance with the son of the free woman. Those who seek acceptance with God through obedience to the law, and are destitute of true sonship, have no inheritance. This verdict stands for all who have no higher birth than Ishmael.

31. So then. A deduction from the preceding verse. Bond-woman. The absence of the Greek definite article emphasizes Hagar's lower status. God says that His children are the children of promise, saved by grace. It is impossible to be children of both the slave girl and the free woman. It is impossible to be under law and under grace. We belong to Christ and are therefore liberated from the bondage of the law. Christendom is critically infected with the deadly doctrine of the legalists. The crying need of the hour is for uncompromising men to proclaim the liberty in Christ which is the birthright of every believer.

III. PRACTICAL: THE LIFE OF LIBERTY. 5:1-6:18.

A. Liberty Is Imperiled by Legalism. 5:1-12.

5:1. Stand fast therefore. Take a tenacious stand and do not be moved from this position. Keep on standing, and do not bow your neck to the yoke of slavery. In the liberty. For the purpose of freedom which belongs to the children of the free woman (4:31). Legalism destroys liberty. Christ hath made us free. Christ, the great Liberator, definitely, deliberately, and decisively liberated us. The emphasis is on the completeness of our freedom. And be not entangled again. Stop being held in the yoke of bondage. Having escaped the slavery of heathenism, they were in danger of the slavery of Judaism. The legalists were trying to yoke the Galatians with Judaism. Yoke is a symbol of slavery.

2. Behold, I Paul. The stalwart champion of liberty asserts all his personal and apostolic authority. If ye be circumcised. A hypothetical case, but with awful consequences. If implies that they had not yielded yet to the demands of the legalists. The present tense indicates, not one act, but a practice they were considering as necessary for salvation. If they should receive circumcision under such conviction, they would obligate themselves to keep the whole law, because circumcision is a pledge to live by the law, and it is a badge of Judaism. Christ shall profit you nothing. Grace and law are diametrically opposed to each other and mutually exclusive of each other. Christ is of advantage only to the one who trusts Him exclusively. There can be no compromise between grace and law and no combination of faith and works.

3. For I testify again. Paul's emphatic protest and warning addressed to all who were contemplating circumcision. That he is a debtor to do the whole law. A debtor is one who assumes an obligation. To accept circumcision as a condition of salvation is to abandon the liberty for which Christ liberated us and to bind one's self to the slavery of legalism. Submission to circumcision commits one to perfect obedience to the whole law; he takes 30 Nevertheless what saith the scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman.

31 So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free.

CHAPTER 5

STAND fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.

2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.

3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.

4 Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace.

5 For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.

6 For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love.

7 Ye did run well; who did hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?

8 This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you.

upon himself both the requirements of the law and its curse (Jas 2:10; Gal 3:10).

4. Christ is become of no effect unto you. Literally, ye were brought to nought from Christ. Your relation to Christ is finished, rendered null and void. Without an effective relation to Christ, one deprives himself of spiritual blessing. Whosoever of you are justified by the law. Justified as you think, but not really. You who are trying to be justified in the law, trying to seek a right standing with God on the basis of works or merit. One either attains salvation by his own works or he attains it as a free gift of God (Rom 11:6). Ye are fallen from grace. The only time this phrase is used in the Bible. Having been saved by grace, the Galatians, who were reverting to the law for Christian living, were actually falling short of the standard of grace by which they were saved. The frustrating result would have been similar to the believer in Romans 7 who was struggling to live under the law (see the discussion on that passage). This does not teach that children of God can lose their salvation by falling out of grace. Paul is contrasting grace and law. Depending on circumcision, or any other work, means renouncing justification by grace through faith and takes one out of the spirit of grace and puts him under the dominion of the law. There cannot be two grounds of salvation, two means of justification, two ways of life. To accept the one means to reject the other. It is either law or grace, either works or faith, either self-righteousness, or the righteousness of God, either circumcision or Christ. The Galatians were in danger of substituting law for Christ as a means of salvation.

5. For we. True born-again believers, who cling to the covenant of grace. Through the Spirit. Not through the flesh; not through the law. Wait. This compound verb means literally, receive-away-from-out of. It means more than mere waiting passively. It suggests earnest, constant expectancy. This verb occurs eight times in the New Testament each time with eschatological significance. For the hope of righteousness by faith. The realization of perfect righteousness.

6. For in Jesus Christ. In vital union with Him, the true sphere of salvation. Neither circumcision availeth anything. Circumcision is not strong to effect (Gr ischuō) anything; it conveys no spiritual blessing in return for its binding pledge to keep the whole law. But faith which worketh by love. Faith is a vital heart trust and personal commitment to Christ (Rom 10:9-10) which identifies the believer with Christ in the sphere of grace. A living faith expresses itself in love. Love does not add anything to faith; it gives it a place to operate. This coincides with the familiar statement, "Faith alone justifies, but the faith which justifies is not alone."

7. Ye did run well. You were running nobly, gallantly, and bravely with every prospect of reaching the goal. You were making good progress on the right course. Who. Probably refers to some ringleader of the legalists. Did hinder you. A military term (Gr enkoptō) which pictures an enemy impeding one's progress and preventing him from reaching his goal by cutting off his way and setting up a roadblock. Since Paul is using the figure of a race, this word suggests the "cutting in" of one runner on another and thus slowing up his progress and throwing him off course. That ye should not obey the truth. The Galatians were turned aside from obedience to the truth by false teaching.

8. This persuasion. The flattering fallacies of the legalist; their sedulous attempts to persuade the Galatians to turn from the course they were already pursuing. Cometh not of him that calleth you. This counsel toward ritualism and legalism was not of God, who calls men to liberty. The legalists were not God's servants, and the Galatians should not have heeded them (Jn 10:45).

9 A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.

9. A little leaven. The false doctrine which appeared so slight and harmless. Leaveneth the whole lump. Goes on working slowly, silently, and satanically until the whole lump is corrupted. Leaven is corrupt and produces corruption; its nature is never altered. Doctrinal differences are dangerous. The process of doctrinal fermentation was going on but all the assemblies had not been permeated yet. Paul expresses confidence that they will deal with this doctrinal error summarily.

10 I have confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise minded: but he that troubleth you shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be.

10. I have confidence in you through the Lord. Paul has been persuaded that the Galatians will share his loyalty to Christ, but he doesn't trust them apart from the Lord. That ye will be none otherwise minded. Let us say through the influence of false teachers. He that troubleth you. The one continually agitating, disquieting, and disturbing your faith. Shall bear his judgment. He cannot escape; God will judge him. Whosoever he be. It seems unlikely that Paul knew precisely who the leader was.

11 And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? then is the offence of the cross ceased.

11. And I, brethren. Paul contrasts himself with the legalists. If I yet preach circumcision. As Paul's enemies accused. Why do I yet suffer persecution? If Paul preached legalism, he would not be persecuted. The legalists charged Paul with inconsistency and duplicity. They had misconstrued Paul's act of having Timothy circumcised (Acts 16:3). Paul could not be preaching both circumcision and the cross, for they are contradictory. Then is the offence of the cross ceased. The offense is the stumbling block of the Cross (I Cor 1:23). The Cross uproots the doctrine of salvation by human merit. Salvation is by grace alone, and justification is by faith alone; there can be no compromise. The offensiveness of the Cross to the legalists is that salvation is by grace without circumcision and obedience to the law.

12 I would they were even cut off which trouble you.

12. I would. I could wish. That they were even cut off. That they will cut themselves off. All the ancient Greek interpreters and most modern scholars apply this to the self-mutilation practiced by the heathen priests of Cybele. Paul speaks with satire. Which trouble you. Causing so much disturbance and throwing you into confusion.

13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.

B. Liberty Is Perverted by Lawlessness. 5:13-26.

13. For brethren. A tender title. Ye. Emphatic contrast to the false teachers. Have been called unto liberty. Ye were called unto liberty, not slavery. Liberty is not an excuse for license. License destroys liberty. Only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh. Some of the Galatians may have already done this, and others were tempted. Liberty must be maintained, not abused. It is abused when it is made the occasion of turning liberty into license. Occasion (Gr aphorme) is a military term signifying a camping place which becomes a launching pad to capture the opposing army. It is the base of operations for giving way to carnal passions. The flesh is the sinful nature to man, which has been crucified with Christ (2:20), but which seems to possess possibilities of revival. Therefore do not let your liberty become the impulse which will start the old nature to assert itself again. But. On the contrary. By love. True Christian love is the motive of true Christian conduct. Serve one another. Constantly and voluntarily enslave yourselves to one another.

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

14. For all the law is fulfilled in one word. The whole moral law stands fully accomplished and completed in one precept. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Such love is produced by the Holy Spirit. Love is the real fulfillment of the law which the legalists were wanting to serve. It was said of the early Christians, "Behold how they love one another," not how they quarrel, criticize, and backbite. Christ did not come to destroy the law . . . but to fulfill (Mt 5:17). Grace does not make one free to sin; it makes him free to serve.

GALATIANS 5:15

15 But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.

16 This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.

17 For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

18 But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law.

19 Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies,

21 Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

15. But if. Setting in contrast what they were doing with what they should do. Bite and devour. Continually biting and devouring like wild animals in deadly combat, i.e., a picture of church strifes. Take heed. Watch out. That ye be not consumed one of another. Mutual destruction by slander and criticism.

16. Walk in the Spirit. Have the habit of continually walking by the energizing power and under the divine direction of the Holy Spirit. This is the only way of deliverance from selfish lusts. And ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. The double negative with the aorist subjunctive means you will never gratify the sinful desires originating in and overflowing from the lower nature. When God saved us, He did not eradicate the old nature, neither did He reform the old life; He gave us an absolutely new life (Jn 3:6). The old nature is "not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be" (Rom 8:7). The Christian can conquer the self-life and have continual victory by walking by the Holy Spirit.

17. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit. There is a constant deadly feud being waged. Bunyan shows that both Christ and Satan long for the possession of the city of Man Soul. Romans 7:15-25 is an inspired commentary on this verse. The flesh opposes the Spirit in an effort to prevent the believer from a life of obedience, surrender, and victory. The Spirit against the flesh. The Holy Spirit opposes the flesh and gives the believer victory over it. And these are contrary. Lined up in hostile, face-to-face conflict. There is mutual antagonism. So that ye cannot do the things that ye would. So that you may not keep on doing whatever you may want to do.

18. But if ye be led of the Spirit. If you are being led continually by the Holy Spirit, then it follows that ye are not under the law. Christians have a live-in divine Person to keep them in line, and they do not need an external curb.

19. Now the works of the flesh. Note the plural, works, the complex mixture of evil desires and deeds. The flesh is always active; it never takes a vacation. Are manifest. Plainly evident to everyone. These works all issue from a heart in rebellion against God and insisting upon doing as it wills (Mt 15:19; Mk 7:21-22). Adultery. Illicit sexual intercourse between married partners. Fornication. Illicit sexual intercourse between unmarried partners. Uncleanness. Moral impurity. Lasciviousness. Wantonness, debauchery, lewdness. This word (Gr aselgeia) was used to describe an attitude of utter disregard for the opinions and conventions which governed others.

20. Idolatry. Worship of idols, putting anything in the place of God. Witchcraft. Sorcery, the profession of magical arts which used various combinations of chemicals (drugs) to deceive and get control of their victims (cf. Rev 21:8). Hatred. Enmities, personal animosities (cf. I Jn 3:15). Variance. Strife, rivalry, discord, factions, quarrelsomeness. Emulations. Jealousies, sedition, constant desire to excel other people and secure their admiration. Wrath. Passionate anger, stirring up the emotions of temper resulting in an explosion. Strife. Factions, intrigues manifested in party spirit. Seditions. Splits, divisions. Heresies. Choices based on preferences, sectarian parties.

21. Envyings. Feelings of ill-will. Drunkenness. Excessive indulgence in strong drink. Revellings. Carousals such as the outrageous feasts to the god Dionysus associated with horrible orgies, not unlike many riotous, wild parties of today. And such like. The list is representative, not exhaustive. They which do such things. Those whose lives are characterized by the habit of continually doing such things. Such life-style is proof positive that one has not become a new creature in Christ (II Cor 5:17), that he is not in the kingdom of God, and that he shall have no share in it. A Christian may fall temporarily into these sins, but

22 But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, 23 Meekness, temperance: against such there is no law.

24 And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts.

25 If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.

26 Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAPTER 6

BRETHREN, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.

he will be miserable until he confesses and forsakes them (Prov 28:13).

22. But the fruit. Singular in number; not nine fruits, but one fruit composed of nine elements. The first three are in relation to God; the next three are in relation to man; and the last three are in relation to one's own inner life. Of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit produces this fruit through the believer who is in vital union with Christ (Jn 15:1-8). Love. The self-denying, self-sacrificing, Christlike love which is the foundation of all other graces. A divine exposition of this kind of love is found in I Corinthians 13. Joy. The joy of the Holy Spirit (I Thess 1:6), that deep abiding, inner rejoicing in the Lord (Phil 4:4). Peace. Tranquillity of soul (Phil 4:7), the peace that Christ gives (Jn 14:27), and which the world cannot take away. Longsuffering. Patient endurance and steadfastness under provocation; forbearance under ill-will, with no thought of retaliation. Gentleness. Graciousness, kindly disposition. Goodness. Beneficence, ready to do good, love in action. Faith. Fidelity which makes one true to his promise and faithful to his task.

23. Meekness. Not weakness, but controlled strength. This word conveys the idea of a listening ear to hear what God has to say. It is submission to God and unselfishness to our fellowmen. Temperance. Rational restraint of the natural impulses, self-control. Against such there is no law. No law forbids the possession and the practice of these virtues. No law is needed to require a man who is bearing much fruit in his life to do right to his fellowman.

24. And they that are Christ's. Belong to Christ by purchase. Have crucified the flesh. This is a settled matter (2:20), but the very fact that the flesh and the Spirit are in constant conflict shows that the flesh is very active. When one puts his trust in Christ, he receives the actual benefits of identification with Christ, resulting in breaking the power of cancelled sin and in setting the prisoner free. The Christian is to daily give outward expression of his inward experience and in order to do this, he must constantly reckon himself "to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom 6:11). With the affections and lust. Emphasizes the completeness of the transaction.

25. If we live in the Spirit. Since we live by the Spirit we derive our life from Him. Let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us go on walking, making progress toward spiritual maturity, by the Holy Spirit's indwelling presence and power. The word walk (Gr stoicheō) means to walk in a line, keep in rank and file, march in battle order. We need to keep in step with the Holy Spirit.

26. Let us not be desirous of vain glory. Let us cease becoming self-conceited. Provoking one another. Challenging one another to combat. Envying one another. Pining away with feelings of jealousy over the other's undeserved praise. Such actions toward one another are not consistent with a life of faith, lived by one who has been crucified with Christ and who is keeping step with the Holy Spirit.

C. Liberty Is Perfected by Love. 6:1-10.

6:1. Brethren. Members of the same spiritual family. If a man be overtaken. Literally, to take before. Sudden temptation seized him unawares before he could escape. This is a probable contingency. In a fault. A falling beside, a trespass, a lapse or deviation from truth and uprightness. It is important to distinguish between willful, deliberate sin and sudden, unexpected failure because of overwhelming temptation taking one off guard. Ye which are spiritual. Those who are constantly walking by the Spirit and living by the Spirit (5:16, 25), and who are exhibiting the fruit of the Spirit (5:22-23). These are experts in 2 Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ.

3 For if a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself.

4 But let every man prove his own work, and then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another.

5 For every man shall bear his own burden.

6 Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things.

7 Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

mending souls. Restore such an one. This word (Gr katartizō) is used as a surgical term, of setting a bone or dislocated joint. It is the same word used in Matthew 4:21 of mending nets. The present imperative signifies to keep on having the habit of restoring the offender to his former condition. Bring him into line. It takes skill to bring one who has slipped off the road of grace and is struggling in the quicksand of legalism back into his former manner of life and rightful place of unbroken fellowship with Christ. In the spirit of meekness. A fruit of the Spirit. This is the opposite of arrogance and harshness; it is tender consideration and forbearance. There must be no self-complacency, no scolding, and no "better-than-thou" attitude. Considering thyself. Constantly looking with fixed attention on thyself. Lest thou also be tempted. All need this warning; no one is immune from temptation.

2. Bear ye one another's burdens. Have the habit of mutual burden-bearing. Lend a helping hand by lifting heavy loads. Burdens (Gr baros) is an overlaid which we can lighten, a weight too heavy for the individual and capable of being shared with others of the fellowship. And so. In this manner. Fulfil the law of Christ. Satisfy the requirements of the law and fill it to overflowing.

3. For if a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing. If he has the habit of accounting himself a big number, when he is a zero, he is conceited without a cause. Self-esteem is vanity, and vanity is nothing. The very fact of thinking more highly of himself than he ought to think (Rom 12:3) condemns him; he is weighed in the balances and found wanting (Dan 5:27). He deceiveth himself. He is constantly leading his own mind to stray; he deceives no one else. Self-conceit results in self-deception.

4. But let every man prove his own work. Let each one continually and carefully test his own actual accomplishments by objective scrutiny. Such testing is for the purpose of approving. Then. After he has done this. Shall he have rejoicing. A ground of glorying. In himself alone. With regard to himself. And not in another. He will not arrive at a wrong conclusion by comparing himself with the other person and decide that he is better than the other person.

5. For every man shall bear his own burden. Each one shall carry his own responsibility, shoulder his own pack, bear his own private load. There is no contradiction between verses 2 and 5; different Greek words are translated "burden." In verse 2 the word is the Greek baros and denotes a heavy, crushing, overtaxing weight; our extra load, which can and must be relieved. Here in verse 5 the word is the Greek phortion and is used to designate a pack carried by a soldier. It is the word used by Christ to describe the burden He lays on His disciples (Mt 11:30), which He says is light. This word is the diminutive form of the Greek phortos which is used of the lading or cargo of a ship (Acts 27:10).

6. Let him that is taught in the word. Let him that is being taught in the word. In the early church, there were those whose full-time duty it was to give instruction in the Word of God. Communicate. Be a partner with, share with, enter into fellowship with financially. Unto him that teacheth in all good things. In all material and spiritual things (cf. I Cor 9:10-11). The Christian community was expected to support these gifted teachers.

7. Be not deceived. Stop being led astray into error. God is not mocked. God is not ignored, sneered at, ridiculed, treated with contempt by cynical gestures. There can be no double-dealing with God; He is not deceived by hypocrites. For whatsoever a man soweth. Keeps on sowing. That. Not something different. There is an identity of what is sown and what is harvested. Shall he also reap. Eventually there will be a har-

8 For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.

9 And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.

10 As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith.

11 Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.

12 As many as desire to make a fair shew in the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised; only lest they should suffer persecution for the cross of Christ.

13 For neither they themselves who are circumcised keep the law; but desire to have you circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh.

14 But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world.

vest, and the immutable law of sowing and reaping applies (Mt 7:16-19).

8. For he that soweth to his flesh. The one who is constantly (Greek present tense) sowing with a view to the promotion of his own corrupt, sinful nature; that nature which is opposed to God and unrenewed by the Holy Spirit. Shall of the flesh reap corruption. Physical, moral, and spiritual rottenness and ruin. But he that soweth to the Spirit. Our life here is a sowing of one kind or another. Shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. In opposition to corruption. Eternal life is produced by the Holy Spirit in those who put their trust in Christ. Paul has shown (5:19-25) the intermediate products of the flesh and the Spirit; here he mentions the two final harvests. "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live" (Rom 8:13).

9. And let us not be weary in well doing. Stop (Greek present imperative) getting discouraged and tired of doing good, i.e., sowing to the Spirit. This word weary means to retreat in battle, to give up the fight, to flag in one's efforts. The idea is that one may get tired on the job and slacken up his work, or even stop, before the field is plowed and planted. For in due season. At its proper season, i.e., harvest time. We shall reap, if we faint not. If we do not relax, let down, become exhausted, and faint.

10. As we have therefore opportunity. Occasion, appropriate season. Let us do good unto all men. Let us keep on working the good to everyone. Especially unto them who are of the household of faith. All born-again believers belong to the same spiritual family. For these we are under special obligation to work good, whenever we have an opportunity.

D. Conclusion. 6:11-18.

11. Ye see how large a letter. Better, with how large letters. I have written unto you with mine own hand. I wrote (Greek epistolary aorist). Paul now takes the pen from the amanuensis and writes the rest of the letter.

12. As many as desire to make a fair show. Make a pretentious display of religion, i.e., put on a good front, present a good-looking face to win favor of men and avoid the loss of popularity, position, and prominence. In the flesh. In external rites and ritual. They constrain you to be circumcised. They are trying to compel you by saying it is absolutely necessary. Only lest they should suffer persecution. The legalists were not concerned for the Galatians, or for God, but only about their own comfort and reputation. For the cross of Christ. Because of the cross of Christ. The symbol of suffering and shame, which came to those identified with the cross of Christ.

13. For neither. Not even. They themselves who are circumcised. Those who are submitting to circumcision, the legalistic circumcision party. Keep the law. The legalists were insincere and inconsistent, pretending to be zealous for the law. They felt that merely observing circumcision would compensate for not observing the rest of the law. But desire to have you circumcised. They had a twofold selfish purpose in mind: (1) to escape persecution which comes with the cross of Christ; and (2) to brag and boast over the Galatians. That they may glory in your flesh. Get credit for proselytizing Gentiles or persuading Gentiles to be circumcised and adopt the legalistic system.

14. But God forbid that I should glory. May it not come to pass to me to be continually glorying. This is a wish for the future. Save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. What was a shame to the legalists was the object of glorying to Paul. The cross represents the sacrificial sufferings of Christ; not Paul's sufferings for Christ (II Cor 12:9-10), but Christ's sufferings for Paul (Phil 3:3). By whom. Our Lord Jesus Christ. The world. The satanic world system which is opposed to God and Christ, 15 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature.

16 And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God.

17 From henceforth let no man trouble me: for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus.

18 Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

both the religious and the irreligious world. Is crucified unto me, and I unto the world. The perfect tense emphasizes the present, permanent results of this double crucifixion. Crucifixion means a death of shame. The world has no more power over Paul because it is dead as far as he is concerned and Paul is also dead so far as the world is concerned. This was accomplished by means of the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. Paul was crucified to the world when he was crucified with Christ (2:20). The old Saul died and was buried with Christ; the new Paul lives.

15. For in Christ Jesus. In living union with Him. Neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision. Circumcision affects only the body, not the soul. A surgical operation can have absolutely no effect on the old nature. Nothing short of death and the creation of a new nature can be effective, and this comes only when one is identified with the crucified, risen Christ. But a new creature. The only thing that is important is to be a new creation in Christ (II Cor 5:17). "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son hath not life" (I Jn 5:12).

16. And as many as walk according to this rule. Man needs a standard or a measuring rod to guide his steps. The law was a failure, so God has given us another standard, placing all our hopes of salvation in the crucified, buried, risen, and coming again Christ. Peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God. Not a different class of believers. Israel of God is in contrast to Israel after the flesh. Those who received the Saviour who came through Israel are true Israelites, spiritual descendants of Abraham.

17. From henceforth let no man trouble me. Paul's apostleship, authority, and gospel had all been questioned. He successfully answered all the criticism, and now he says, "Let's hear no more of such disturbing, distracting attacks." For I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus. Let anyone show the like if he wants to qualify to speak. There were devotees who stamped upon their bodies the names of the gods whom they worshiped; some slaves had the names or marks of their owners on their bodies; and sometimes soldiers were thus identified. Paul glorified in being a slave of Jesus Christ. The brandmarks, his badge of lifelong, faithful service, were the scars left by scourgings, stones at Lystra, and rods at Philippi (cf. II Cor 11:24-27). Paul had endured hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ (II Tim 2:3).

18. Brethren. They remained brethren by the grace of God. This final touch of affection, in spite of the sharp things he said to them. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. What more fitting benediction could have been given at the close of a letter emphasizing grace instead of law, and spirit rather than flesh. Amen.

The Epistle To The EPHESIANS

INTRODUCTION

The Church of Ephesus. Ephesus was the queen city of Asia Minor, situated about three miles from the Aegean Sea on the Cayster River, and had a population of about 340,000. It was the capital of the proconsular province of Asia and was one of the most important cities visited by the Apostle Paul. Ephesus was noted for the Great Temple of Diana (Artemis), an open-air theatre seating 25,000, a magnificent stadium, and the shrine of Serapis (an Egyptian divinity). Ephesus was famous for its rich culture: Oriental religion, Greek philosophy, Roman government, and worldwide commerce.

At the close of his second missionary journey, Paul made a brief visit to Ephesus, left Priscilla and Aquila there to work in his absence, and promised to return (Acts 18:19-21). Apollos spent some time there (Acts 18:24-28). On his third missionary journey, Paul remained in Ephesus for about three years evangelizing the city and the surrounding region. On his last voyage to Jerusalem, Paul met the elders of Ephesus at Miletus (Acts 20:17-38). Others who labored at Ephesus were Timothy (I Tim 1:3), Onesiphorus (II Tim 1:16), Tychicus (II Tim 4:12), and the Apostle John after A.D. 70.

Authorship. The writer identifies himself as Paul (1:1; 3:1). Both the internal and the external evidences are strong for the pauline authorship.

Date and place of writing. This is one of the Prison Epistles. Paul states that he was a prisoner (3:1; 4:1; 6:20). Paul was in prison three times: (1) at Caesarea for about two years, A.D. 58-60; (2) once in Rome for about two years, A.D. 61-63; and (3) again in Rome about A.D. 67. He probably wrote the Prison Epistles during his first Roman imprisonment, A.D. 61-63. Ephesians was composed about the same time as Colossians. Tychicus was the bearer of both letters (Col 4:7-8; Eph 6:21-22).

Destination. Scholars are divided as to the destination of this epistle: (1) that it was written for and sent directly to Ephesus; (2) that it was a circular letter sent to the churches of Asia Minor, of which Ephesus was the chief; or (3) that it was addressed to Gentile Christians. The oldest and most reliable Greek manuscripts do not have the words "which are at Ephesus" (Gr en Ephesoi) in 1:1. Lightfoot maintains that wherever these manuscripts agree, they almost always represent the original text. However, the great majority of Greek manuscripts do include the words "in Ephesus," and there are no Greek manuscripts which include the name of any other city. In Colossians 4:16, Paul mentions "the epistle from Laodicea." Perhaps the autograph copy had a blank space in 1:1, and since most of the manuscripts were copies of the letter sent to Ephesus, it came to be known as the Epistle to the Ephesians. No doubt it was a general or circular letter for the churches of Asia Minor. The letter lacks a personal tone; there are no personal greetings and no personal references. After all is said, the value of the epistle is not affected by the problem of its destination.

Purpose. This epistle magnifies the church as a divine institution, sets forth God's purpose of heading up all things in Christ (1:9-10), emphasizes that salvation is only in Christ, and shows that a well-rounded life issues out of salvation by grace through faith.

This epistle is not personal, but general. It is not polemic: Paul is not defending his apostleship as in I Corinthians, not rebuking fickleness as in II Corinthians, not controverting Judaizers as in Galatians, and not battling Gnosticism as in Colossians.

Theme. Ephesians has been called "The Heavenly Epistle" and "The Alps of the New Testament." In it Paul takes us from "the depths of ruin to the heights of redemption." The church is one with Christ: it is the body of which He is the Head (1:22-23); it is the building of which He is the Chief Corner Stone (2:20-22); and she is the bride of whom Christ is the Bridegroom (5:25-32).

Comparison with Colossians. In Ephesians the emphasis is on the dignity of the church, which is the body of Christ. In Colossians the emphasis is on the deity of Christ, who is the Head of that body. Ephesians considers the church's oneness with Christ; Colossians considers the church's completeness in Christ. Ephesians speaks of the Christian being in Christ; Colossians speaks of Christ being in the Christian.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-2.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, to the saints which are at Eph'e-sus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus:

1:1. Paul. Designated as the human author. An apostle. One fully equipped and sent on a mission. Paul claims to be directly commissioned by Christ to represent Him. He was an envoy, an ambassador for Christ. Of Jesus Christ. He was owned by Christ and sent from Him; both possessed and commissioned. By the will of God. Paul is always conscious of the divine origin and authority of his commission. This assurance sustained him throughout all of his trials. His ministry was not of his own choosing. He could ever say, "By the grace of God I am what I am." To the saints. The separated and holy ones (Ps. 4:3). Saints are sinners saved by the grace of God, separated from sin, and set apart for God. They are not sinless, have not attained to certain heights of sanctity, and do not belong to some special religious group. At Ephesus. Geographically. And to the faithful. Even those who are distinguished for their faithfulness and loyalty to Christ. This is one way to describe Christians. The word means that they are "believers" in Christ. In Christ. Spiritually they are in vital union with Christ enjoying blessed fellowship with Him.

2 Grace be to you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. Grace. That divine, free, and unmerited favor of God. And peace. Not only the absence of all strife but the blessing of tranquility. It is the result of reconciliation between God and man based on faith in and union with the Lord Jesus Christ. Here both words are used as a greeting. From God . . . and . . . the Lord Jesus Christ. The source of spiritual blessings, our gracious heavenly Father and our lovely Lord.

II. THE CALLING OF THE CHURCH. 1:3-3:21.

A. The Origin of the Church. 1:3-14.

3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ:

3. Blessed. This doxology is composed of three stanzas, each of which closes with a similar refrain (vss. 6, 12, 14). This word blessed is always used of God in the New Testament, and it means praised or eulogized. Who hath blessed us. God is the great giver, and the blessings are already ours. With all spiritual blessings. With every kind of spiritual blessing. They are spiritual in nature as opposed to temporal and material, and they are the products of the Holy Spirit. In heavenly places. In the realm and sphere of heavenly things as contrasted with earthly things. The adjective expresses quality rather than place. This expression is found several times in this epistle and refers to that exalted sphere of activities to which the believer has been lifted in Christ. In Christ. In vital union with Him. Note how often these words are found in this epistle. In Christ is the key to this wonderful passage. Since the saints are in Him, nothing is too good or too great for God to bestow upon them.

4 According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love:

4. He hath chosen us. This word (Gr eklegomai) means to pick out, to choose. This is a definite statement of God's elective grace concerning believers in Christ. In him. In union with Christ. Apart from Christ, there would have been no election and no salvation. God always deals with man in Christ, who is the one and only Mediator between God and men (I Tim 2:5). Paul traces man's salvation back to the plan of God's will. Before the foundation of the world. Before the projection of the world order. God's choice was eternal; His plan is timeless. The fall of man was no surprise to God, and redemption was no afterthought. God provided for our salvation before one star glittered in infinite expanse. We must be careful not to draw false conclusions from this sublime truth. God is not stating a fatalistic doctrine in which He arbitrarily elects some to heaven and consigns all others to hell. There is no scriptural doctrine of election to damnation. God's election provides for the means as well as the ends. God's infallible Word plainly states, "For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Rom 10:13). Man either receives or disbelieves God's provisions in Christ. "So far as the human race is concerned, every man may not only accept Christ as Saviour but is urged and invited to do so. The ground of this invitation is the work of the incarnate Son . . . Divine foreordination and human freedom are humanly irreconcilable, but like two parallel lines that meet in infinity, they have their solution in God" (Merrill F. Unger, Unger's Bible Handbook, pp. 672-674). "To explain an apparent difficulty by denying one or the other of these tenets is to explain away the truth" (W. Curtis Vaughn, The Letter to the Ephesians, p. 13). That we should be holy and without blame before him in love. This is the purpose of God's election. The real purpose of God's elective grace is not "pie in the sky by and by," but has to do with a separated life here and now (cf. Rom 8:29). Holiness is the positive side of a Christlike life (Heb 12:14), separated from all evil courses and connections. Blamelessness in character is the negative side of the Christlike life: not sinless, but stainless, without blemish and without defect. God's expectation is for His saints to live on a high spiritual plane.

5 Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,

5. Having predestinated us. Having decided beforehand by marking off the boundaries of His possession in His saints. Unto the adoption of children. With a view to our being placed as adult sons (Gal 4:5; Rom 8:15; 9:4). The purpose of His predestination was that we should experience sonship. By Jesus Christ to himself. By means of Christ's mediation and for His very own to serve Him and glorify Him. According to the good pleasure of his will. It was right for Him to do this.

6 To the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved.

6. To the praise of the glory of his grace. Literally, the glory, the splendor, of His unmerited favor. The purpose was for God's glory and intended to issue forth in praise. He hath made us accepted in the beloved. God accepts us into His family because of our vital relationship with Christ and on no other grounds.

7 In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace;

7. In whom we have. A present possession, not a future prospect. Redemption. Redemption is deliverance from bondage by means of a price paid. Saints have been liberated from the slavery of self, sin and Satan, having been bought out of the slave market. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (Jn 8:36). Through his blood. His blood is the ransom price paid for our salvation. Redemption is effected by the precious blood of Christ (I Pet 1:18-20). Salvation is not a matter of human attainment, but of divine atonement. God makes everything of the blood of Christ: we are redeemed by His blood (Eph 1:7); justified by His blood (Rom 5:9); purged as to conscience by His blood (Heb 9:14); forgiven by His blood (Col 1:14); cleansed by His blood (Rev 7:14); have peace through His blood (Col 1:20); enter the Holiest by His blood (Heb 10:19). The forgiveness of sins. Remission rests on ransoming. Forgiveness means the bearing away of all our shortcomings. God's remission is unqualified and unchanging. His Word is very specific in telling us what He has done with our sins; He has blotted them out (Isa 43:25; 44:22), He has removed them (Ps 103:11-12), He has cast them behind His back (Isa 38:17), He has cast them into the depths of the sea (Mic 7:19), and He remembers them no more (Heb 8:12). God's forgiveness is free, full, and final. When He forgives, He forgets. According to the riches of his grace. Our redemption is measured by the boundless resources of His marvelous, infinite grace. This is a very rich epistle which reveals our riches in Christ; the riches of His grace (1:7), the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints (1:18), the riches in mercy (2:7), the unsearchable riches of Christ (3:8), and the riches of His glory (3:16).

8 Wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence;

9 Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself:

10 That in the dispensation of the fullness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him:

11 In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will:

12 That we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ.

13 In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, 14 Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.

8. Wherein he hath abounded toward us. Which He lavished on us to overflowing. God's grace enriches believers (cf. Rom 5:20). In all wisdom. Wise insight and spiritual perception which come from above (Jas 1:5; 3:17). Prudence. This is the practical use of wisdom and spiritual discernment.

9. The mystery of his will. God has a plan which was once hidden from human reason for ages (Rom 16:25) but now is divinely revealed (Col 1:26-27). Which he hath purposed in himself. Which He set forth in Christ.

10. That in the dispensation. A stewardship or administration to carry out His plan and purpose. The fullness of times. The appointed time of the historical ages. He might gather together in one all things in Christ. To sum up, to head up all things in Christ in orderly and harmonious completion. Christ is the center of the universe, which some day will be integrated into one harmonious whole.

11. In whom . . . we have obtained an inheritance. Better, we were made the inheritance, we became God's heritage, and became the Lord's portion (Deut 32:9). Zephaniah 3:17 records a remarkable expression, "He will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing." This is applicable to Gentile saints, as well as to Hebrew saints.

12. That we should be to the praise of his glory. This second refrain praises God the Son.

13. In whom ye also trusted. Faith is the connecting link between man and Christ. After that ye heard. They first heard God's good news, called the Word of truth and further described as the gospel of your salvation. Notice the order here. They first heard God's good news and then they put their trust in Christ. ". . . faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom 10:17). After that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise. They were sealed, not in order to be redeemed, but because they were already redeemed. They had trusted in Christ and now they are sealed in Him. The word seal means to set a seal on one as a mark of ownership. The Holy Spirit ratified God's ownership of believers by fixing His seal on them in a supernatural manner. They were sealed at the same time they believed, not at some later time. The sealing was not something apart from salvation, not something in addition to salvation, and not something subsequent to salvation. All who believe in Christ are sealed then and there. The seal is: (1) a sign of a finished transaction (Jer 32:9-10; Jn 17:4; 19:30); (2) a sign of ownership (I Cor 16:19-20; II Tim 2:19); and (3) a sign of security (Dan 6:17; Eph 4:30). The Holy Spirit is called the Spirit of promise because Christ promised to send Him (Jn 14:16).

14. Which is the earnest of our inheritance. An earnest (Gr arrabôn) is a partial down payment in the first installment and a pledge guaranteeing a complete transaction and payment of the total obligation. Since God has graciously given us the Holy Spirit and we now have a foretaste of heaven, we have His guarantee that He will perform all that He has promised (Phil 1:6). Unto the praise of his glory. Paul uses similar, though not identical, terms in ascribing these wonderful blessings to the grace of God. In verse 6, God the Father is praised for selecting us by His mercies; in verse 12, God the Son is praised for securing us by His mediation; and in verse 14, God the Holy Spirit is praised for sealing us by His ministry. We see in each stage of salvation grace, marvelous grace, and nothing but grace. In its past inception, in its present possession, and in its future glory, grace is supreme.

B. The Prayer for the Church. 1:15-23.

There are two prayers in Ephesians. God is both light and love. Paul's first prayer (1:15-23) is for light, and his second 15 Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,

16 Cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers,

17 That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him:

18 The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints,

19 And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power,

20 Which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places,

21 Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in prayer (3:14-21) is for love. It is as natural for a regenerate man to pray as it is for an unregenerate man to breathe.

15. Wherefore, on this account, for this cause. This looks back to verses 3-14, and Paul adds prayer to praise. Faith and love are two great words. Love is the outgrowth of faith, and faith manifests itself by love. Faith works by love (Gal 5:6), and love is the proof of discipleship (Jn 13:35; 15:12; I Jn 3:14).

16. Cease not to give thanks for you. A vital part of Paul's ministry was his intercession for the saints. This was his constant and continual fixed habit. Prayer and thanksgiving go together.

17. That (Gr hina). In order that. This introduces the definite purpose and object of Paul's prayer for them. He makes specific requests. The God of our Lord Jesus Christ. Paul addresses the throne of grace, the source of all blessings. The Father of glory. The one who is all glorious and the source of all that is glorious. May give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation. Revelation has to do with new truths. The Ephesians were the recipients of God's revelation, and they had knowledge of spiritual truths. The Holy Spirit knows the deep things of God (I Cor 2:11), and He is our teacher (Jn 14:26). Man needs much more than reason and research; he needs a revelation from God. Wisdom is general illumination, the know-how to apply the revealed spiritual truths. In the knowledge of him. This is that deep and wide, growing, experimental knowledge (II Pet 3:18). We all need a fuller knowledge of Christ (Phil 3:10).

18. The eyes of your understanding being enlightened. Better, that the eyes of your heart having been enlightened. The heart refers to the whole inner man. The soul has eyes that need to be and can be enlightened, i.e., flooded with divine light. The Holy Spirit opens the eyes and hearts in order that the believer may see the great truths mentioned here. The purpose of spiritual illumination and spiritual perception is that believers may know and experience God's calling, inheritance, and power. The hope of his calling. The call from Him and a summons to Him. It is a call to new life in Christ, through Christ, for Christ, and with Christ. It involves perfect deliverance and perfect fellowship. God's calling is a high calling (Phil 3:13-14) to be like Christ and with Christ. The riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints. God owns the universe, but His most precious possession is the pearl of great price, the church. The saints are the trophies of His grace.

19-20. The exceeding greatness of his power. The transcendent, immeasurable, more-than-sufficient greatness of His dynamic power. Paul heaps up terms that defy description in speaking of God's power. To us-ward who believe. We can depend on God's power. It is divine, inexhaustible, irresistible, and available. No one need ever complain of insufficient power to meet temptations, to overcome sinful habits, or to live and witness for Christ. Little power is an indisputable evidence of little fellowship with Christ. Paul prays that we may know: the hope to which He calls us, the riches He possesses in us, and the power He extends toward us. Which he wrought in Christ. A demonstration of God's omnipotence; putting forth energetically His infinite power. When he raised him from the dead. Resurrection power is available to us. The resurrection of Christ is the attestation of God's acceptance of Christ's sacrifice and the pattern and pledge of the believer's resurrection. And set him at his own right hand. This refers to the ascension, exaltation, and enthronement of Christ. God's right hand is the place of honor, privilege, and power. The same omnipotence which seated our Lord amid ineffable glory is pledged to seat the church with Him in the same glory.

21-22. Far above all. The primacy of Christ far above all angelic and celestial beings, His sovereign dominion; He is superior to and authoritatively over all. He is "KING OF KINGS, this world, but also in that which is to come:

22 And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, 23 Which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all.

CHAPTER 2

AND you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins;

2 Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience:

3 Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others.

4 But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,

5 Even when we were dead in sins,

AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev 19:16). Head over all things to the church. The word church (Gr ekklēsia) is used over one hundred times in the New Testament and in most cases refers to a local assembly of believers. In Ephesians it is used in a comprehensive sense referring to all the redeemed, the body of Christ. Christ has sovereign authority over the church, and He will rule and reign supreme.

23. Which is his body. Paul states that the relationship between Christ and His church is similar to that between the head and the body of a human organism. The church is a living organism, not a dead organization. The union of Christ and His church is a real, mystical, perfect, and permanent union. The head directs the body's activities. The church is a living expression of Christ; it is the means by which He effects His plan and purpose; it is the agent through which He accomplishes His work. Believers are not only members of His body, they are members one of another in that body (cf. Rom 12:4-5). The fulness of him that filleth all in all. Christ is the full expression of God (Col 1:19; 2:9), and the church is the expression of Christ. The church is filled with His presence, animated with His life, and endowed with His gifts. In Christ the church has everything needed to fulfill its mission.

C. The Character of the Church. 2:1-10.

2:1. And you hath he quickened. The main verb in Greek does not occur until verse 5. Who were dead. Scripture paints man as he really is. Lost men are spiritually dead, not merely weakened, incapacitated, disabled, or sick. In trespasses and sins. Trespasses (Gr paraptōma) refer to stepping out of line of true conduct, a deviation from truth and uprightness. Sins (Gr hamartia) are missing the mark of life's divine aim, as an archer misses the "bull's eye." These lead to guilt, and man's need of forgiveness; they lead to death, and man's need of new life. This truth is denied in these days. Men speak of "the better self" and "the good spark." Man needs a new heart, not just a new start; a new life, not just turning over a new leaf; a resurrection, not just reformation. Signing a pledge card will not suffice. No one can live a life for God until he first receives life from God.

2. Wherein in time past. Paul describes the past manifestation of a man devoid of spiritual life. Ye walked according to the course of this world. Before conversion, you walked habitually in a wrong path of conduct conforming to the world's low standard of morality, doing what comes naturally. Life was determined by the spirit and practice of the age in its unregenerate state. According to the prince of the power of the air. Dominated by the devil, who administers the corrupt power of unholy spirits. The devil is a real person, whose many aliases reveal his true character. The spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. Satan exerts himself effectively in the society of unregenerate men (Jn 8:44; I Jn 3:8). The conduct of lost men mark them as children of disobedience.

3. Among whom also we all. We Jews, as well as Gentiles. Our conversation. (Gr anastrephō). Literally, to turn back and forth, hence to live (II Cor 1:12). Lusts of our flesh. Dominated by the desires of the fallen, unregenerate nature. Fulfilling the desires of the flesh. Following the evil inclinations of the desires of fleshly appetites. And were by nature the children of wrath. Worthy of and subject to wrath (Jn 3:36). The only hope for men in this condition is to experience the grace of God in Christ.

4. But God. God alone can meet man's needs. Who is rich in mercy. Wealthy in mercy by His very nature. This is much more than being merciful. Instead of dealing with us as deserving wrath and judgment, He deals with us in compassionate mercy. His great love. The source of our salvation (Jn 3:16).

5. When we were dead. Spiritually dead and needing new hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;)

6 And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus:

7 That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

8 For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:

9 Not of works, lest any man should boast.

10 For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.

life in Christ (Jn 1:12-13; I Jn 5:11-12). Quickened us together with Christ. He made us alive spiritually by imparting the life of Christ in us. This is what is meant by the new birth. With Christ refers to resurrection; literal in His case and spiritual in our case. What God did for Christ, He did for all who put their trust in Him. Note that God did it. We were born from above instantly and once for all. God may have used a powerful preacher, a praying parent, or a tearful teacher; but He did it. He did it when we trusted Christ, not because we prayed so earnestly, repented so bitterly, or resolved so thoroughly. Salvation is by grace plus nothing.

6. And hath raised us up together. Christ was raised in a physical resurrection and we in a past spiritual resurrection. On the basis of that, a future physical resurrection or transformation will occur for all living at the time of Rapture. Made us sit together. God set us down alongside of Christ in the heavenly realms and relations. God has already accomplished this. He dealt with us in Christ and sees us in Christ.

7. That in the ages to come. The end in view of God's gracious salvation in Christ. He might show the exceeding riches of his grace. God delights to show great grace to great sinners. God will display the trophies of His grace throughout the endless ages of eternity. Saints will be concrete demonstrations of the overflowing wealth of His grace.

8. For by grace are ye saved. The grace mentioned in verse 5. Grace is what God does for man, not what man does for God or for himself. Salvation is God's greatest gift and man's greatest need. The Greek perfect tense denotes the certainty of this God-given salvation; we have been saved in the past, and are just as thoroughly saved in the present. We have a perfect salvation. God gives; man receives. Through faith. Grace is God's provision; faith is man's appropriation. Faith is not a meritorious act, but the indispensable channel through which man receives God's free gift (Heb 11:6). And that. The word that (Gr houtos) is neuter and does not refer to faith (which is feminine) or to grace (also feminine), but to the fact of being saved by grace on God's part and conditioned on faith on man's part. Not of yourselves. Not through your merits or efforts. It is the gift of God. The free gift of God.

9. Not of works. Not based upon or produced by the works of man. Lest any man should boast. "He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord" (I Cor 1:31). Calvin sums up Paul's meaning as follows: "In these three phrases,—not of yourselves,—it is the gift of God,—not of works,—he [Paul] embraces the substance of his long argument in the Epistles to the Romans and to the Galatians, that righteousness comes to us from the mercy of God alone,—is offered to us in Christ by the gospel,—and is received by faith alone, without the merit of works" (John Calvin, Commentaries on the Epistles of Paul to the Galatians and Ephesians, Trans. William Pringle, p. 228).

10. For we are his workmanship. We are God's poem (Gr poiëma). His masterpiece. In the matter of salvation, we are the product of the will and work of God. Created in Christ Jesus. The new birth, in living union with Christ. Unto good works. For good works, destined to good works. The purpose of the new creation in Christ. Christ in us still goes "about doing good" (Acts 10:38). We are saved apart from good works, but saved unto good works. Good works are the aim of our salvation and the evidence of our faith (Jas 2:17-18). Works never produce salvation, but salvation always produces good works. A man is not justified by works, but a justified man works. Works are the consequences, not the causes of salvation. They are the fruit, not the root of salvation. One must be a Christian before he can live as a Christian; he must be good before he can do good. One must be created in Christ Jesus unto good works before he can walk in them (Phil 1:6; 2:12-13). God is still working. By grace (vs. 8), it was Christ for us; through faith (vs. 8), it was Christ in us; and unto good works, it is Christ through us.

D. The Progress of the Church. 2:11-22.

11. Wherefore remember. Keep constantly in mind the precious truth just stated. Gentiles. All peoples who are not born Jews, as they are classified on the flesh basis and are called Uncircumcision. Called the Circumcision in the flesh. The Jews who proudly claim a religious sanction for racial exclusiveness and exaltation, even though the distinction is quite superficial. Made by hands. Handmade and limited to the flesh. Paul tactfully points out that the rite once used as a sign for spiritual promises is used now as a mere superficial thing of little or no value.

12. That at that time. Before your salvation experience. Ye were without Christ. Paul speaks of the destitution and desolation of the unregenerate, lost and undone. Being Christless we were: without rest (Mt 11:28); without life (Jn 14:6); without light (Jn 8:12); without salvation (Acts 4:12); and without peace (Col 1:20). Alien from the commonwealth of Israel. We were friendless, estranged and separated from Israel and the theocracy of God's chosen people. Strangers from the covenants of promise. We were homeless, not having any share in the messianic promises. God's Word has thousands of promises, but very few apply to the lost. God's promises are exceeding great and precious, but Christless souls see no value in them. Having no hope. We were hopeless. We had aspirations for the present, but cherished no hope for the future. Being Christless, we had no faith, no hope, and no love. And without God. We were atheists (Gr atheos) in the sense of being without God and in hostility to Him. A terrible picture, but a true one. We had gods many and lords many, but not the true God. We had no knowledge of God and no saving relationship to Him.

13. But now. A strong, glorious contrast to at that time of verse 12. In Christ. Our new position in union with Him in contrast to being without Christ in verse 12. Are made nigh by the blood of Christ. This is what God has done. We are made nigh by the blood of Christ; not by becoming a proselyte of Judaism, not by the sincerity of our repentance, not by the strength of our faith, not by the depth of our devotion, not by the joy of our spiritual experience. A new relationship has been established in a new covenant sealed with the sacrificial blood of Christ, who suffered the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God (I Pet 3:18).

14. For he is our peace. He Himself, not just what He did. He is our peace with God and with each other without distinction. Who hath made both one. Jews and Gentiles united in position and in privilege. A new unity has been established where race and national distinctions disappear in Christ (Gal 3:28). Hath broken down the middle wall of partition. The dividing wall of racial and religious enmity has been destroyed once for all. In the Temple courts a partition wall divided the court of the Gentiles from the court of Israel with an inscription forbidding a Gentile from going further on pain of death (cf. Acts 21:28). No such division exists in the church.

15. Having abolished. This modifies hath broken down and means to make ineffective, null and void. In his flesh. In His incarnate state. The enmity. The old enmity of personal and national prejudice and exclusiveness between Jews and Gentiles was slain at Calvary. Only Christ crucified can effect so great a task as to reconcile and reunite hostile members of the human family. Christ is the world's only hope. For to make in himself. There was no other way to accomplish this except by taking two separate and antagonistic groups and making one new man. God's purpose is one new people. Christ's body, the church, is

11 Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands;

12 That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world:

13 But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

14 For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us;

15 Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace;

16 And that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby:

17 And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh.

18 For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father.

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God;

20 And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone;

21 In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord:

22 In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit.

the one new man made up of new men (II Cor 5:17). So making peace. He is our peace (vs. 14) and our peacemaker (Col 1:20). He puts an end to the hostility between God and man and between man and man.

16. And that he might reconcile. Previously there had been a state of alienation, estrangement, and enmity, but there has been a change of relations both Godward and manward. Christ has harmonized both the factional and the fractional divisions of mankind. In one body. The church, Christ's spiritual body. By the cross. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself" (II Cor 5:19). Having slain the enmity thereby. God utterly put an end to the enmity that separated men into antagonistic groups.

17. Preached peace. By His vicarious death He procured peace, and by His servants He proclaims peace. Peace was the first word Christ spoke to His disciples in the upper room on the night of His resurrection (Jn 20:19). To you which were afar off. Gentiles were far away from God. To them that were nigh. Jews were regarded as near, but just as needy and just as dead in sin.

18. For through him. And only through Him. We both have access. A continuous, common, and unhindered approach to God. Through Christ all believers can "come boldly unto the throne of grace" (Heb 4:16). By one Spirit. Our access to the Father is through the Son and by the Holy Spirit. All three persons of the Trinity share in the total work of salvation.

19. Now therefore. So then, in the light of all this, because all hostility and enmity are past. Ye are no more strangers. Sojourners dwelling nearby, but not in the family of God. Foreigners. Without full rights and privileges of citizenship. But fellow-citizens. Having been born into the family of God, with citizenship in heaven (Phil 3:20). And of the household of God. Suggests the fellowship enjoyed by members of God's family.

20. And are built. Paul changes the figure of speech from a family to a spiritual temple in setting forth the unifying character of the church. The foundation of the apostles and prophets. The eternal foundation of God's purpose as proclaimed by the apostles and prophets. Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. Christ is the stone rejected by the Jewish builders but chosen of God as the Head of the corner (Mt 21:42). He is not only the Chief Corner Stone, He is also the foundation (I Cor 3:11).

21. In whom. In present, precious, and permanent union with Him. All the building fitly framed together. As architectural metaphor. God places each one exactly where He wants him. We would be misfits anywhere else. Groweth unto an holy temple. The church is a growing temple in the process of construction. It is holy in the sense of being sanctified in Christ for God's glory. In the Lord. He is the center of its unity.

22. Ye also. Gentiles are included. Builded together. The Greek present tense implies continuous and contemporaneous building together with varied materials (I Pet 2:3-7). For a habitation of God through the Spirit. The great objective is to provide a place of habitation for God, who by the Spirit dwells permanently in His holy temple (Jn 14:16-17; I Cor 3:16; 6:19-20). In Old Testament times, God dwelt with His people; in New Testament times, God dwells in His people. Note the work of the Trinity: in Christ all believers are fitted and formed into one building by the Holy Spirit who regenerates and indwells them so that we are a dwelling place for God.

E. The Function of the Church. 3:1-13.

3:1. For this cause. Refers to the preceding exposition of God's elective grace and for the sake of the holy temple of redeemed men which God is building. Prisoner of Jesus Christ

CHAPTER 3

FOR this cause I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles, for you Gentiles. On behalf of you Gentiles whom the Jews are not willing to accept freely.

2. If ye have heard. Since ye have heard with the understanding. Dispensation. Paul refers to his high privilege and sacred trust of the administration of stewardship of God's universal grace to all men. This was given to Paul, and not of his own choosing. Of the grace of God. The grace of God is to be shared with others; it is not a personal luxury (Col 1:25; I Pet 4:10). Paul was merely a channel of blessing to the Gentiles.

3. How that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery. The mystery was not unintelligent or mysterious, but merely God's secret until He revealed it. It was unknown and unknowable apart from divine revelation. It did not come to Paul by research or by rationalization, but by revelation (Gal 1:11-12).

4. When ye read. This epistle was to be read in public. My knowledge. Having this information you are able to comprehend my God-given insight in the mystery of Christ, God's eternal purpose in Christ.

5. In other ages. Preceding generations. As it is now revealed. Up until that time, God's revelation was frequent and partial, now it is full and final. Then there were faint gleams of light in types and symbols, now there is a clear and complete revelation. By the Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the agent of inspiration and illumination (Jn 14:26; 16:12-15).

6. That the Gentiles. As truly as the Jews and along with them and on the same terms. The Gentiles are not second-class citizens of heaven. Paul gives a clear statement of the mystery. Fellow heirs. Because they are in the same body and the same family by regeneration, they are joint-heirs with Christ (Rom 8:17) and co-heirs with the Jews. Of the same body. Fellow-members of the same unitary, corporate body the church (2:15). The church is one body with one head. Anything else would be a spiritual monstrosity. In Christ there is perfect amalgamation of each and every member. Partakers of his promise. Gentiles are fellow-partakers and equal sharers of the same promise. In Christ by the gospel. The Old Testament is not silent as to blessings for Gentiles, but it says nothing of a union of all believers of every nationality in the Lord Jesus Christ, so as to form one body of which Christ Himself is the glorified Head. It is all made actual by means of the gospel of the grace of God in its marvelous comprehension and its glorious contents.

7. Whereof I was made a minister. A God-appointed minister. The gift of grace. It took divine grace to transform Paul from a blasphemer into a saint, from a Pharisee into an apostle, and from a persecutor of Christians into a preacher of Christ. Then it took divine power and authority to enable Paul to function as a minister of God.

8. Less than the least of all saints. Paul's sense of unworthiness is progressive: (1) the least of the apostles (I Cor 15:9); (2) less than the least of all saints; and (3) chief of sinners (I Tim 1:15). Paul's high calling humbled him, and he never got over his own unworthiness. He is ever conscious of his demerit and never thinks of himself more highly than he ought to think (Rom 12:3). The unsearchable riches of Christ. The contents of message, the wealth beyond description which God provides for all men in the person and work of Christ. It is a vast and measureless resource, this love and grace of God. If Christ were not too big for our mental comprehension, He would be too little for our spiritual need.

9. And to make all men see. This is Paul's purpose in preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ. He would cause all men to see by turning the light on. Paul was aiming at spiritual enlightenment and spiritual apprehension. Fellowship of the mystery. The stewardship of worldwide proclamation of Christ

2 If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God which is given me to you-ward:

3 How that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery; (as I wrote afore in few words,

4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ)

5 Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit;

6 That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel:

7 Whereof I was made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of his power.

8 Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ;

9 And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ:

10 To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God,

11 According to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord:

12 In whom we have boldness and access with confidence by the faith of him.

13 Wherefore I desire that ye faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.

14 For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,

15 Of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man;

17 That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love,

18 May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and His gospel. Hid in God. The mystery of God's eternal plan and purpose had been concealed from the beginning.

10. To the intent. In order that now. Might be known. The mystery had been made known to Paul, and now he wants to make it known. Our great mission in this life is to know Christ and to make Him known. By the church. Through the church. The church is God's instrument to make known the grace of God in Christ. The manifold wisdom of God. The much-variegated and many-sided wisdom of God. This speaks of the beauty and diversity of God's grace.

11. The eternal purpose. God's purpose runs through the ages, not arbitrarily or capriciously, but according to a definite course and consummation, which He projected in Christ Jesus our Lord.

12. In whom we have boldness. Free speech. It speaks of the absence of fear and restraint and the liberty believers enjoy (Heb 4:16). And access. This is our approach to God. With confidence. Assurance of acceptance (I Jn 5:14-15). By the faith of him. Through faith in Him.

13. That ye faint not. Don't lose heart and give in to evil or behave badly. At my tribulations for you. In the thought of my afflictions in behalf of you (II Cor 11:23-28). Paul's imprisonment did not mean that the Word of God was bound, that the purpose of God had failed, or that the servant of God was out of the path of duty (Phil 1:12). Opposition and difficulty are not reasons for abandoning a divinely-appointed task. Which is for your glory. Even this experience is your glory.

F. The Fullness of the Church. 3:14-21.

14. For this cause. In view of God's plan in Christ and my relation to it. I bow my knees. The usual bodily posture in prayer. The position of the body reflects the condition of the soul. Bow in humiliation, in lowly supplication, in special solemnity, and in unusual urgency. Unto the Father. The preposition (Gr pros) implies face to face communication.

15. The whole family. God has only one family. Some of the members are already in heaven, and others are here on earth representing and interpreting Christ to the world.

16. That. The purpose of Paul's petition. Grant you. Born-again believers. According to. Not out of. The riches of his glory. God's endowment, His infinite wealth and resources. You can't possibly ask too much. To be strengthened. Paul prays that they will be made mightily strong with spiritual power. The nature of this endowment is divine, dynamic power that comes from God. In the inner man. In contrast to the outer man (Rom 7:22), the spiritual man as opposed to the fleshly man. By his Spirit. This dynamic power is communicated to us by the Holy Spirit. He is our dynamo, our powerhouse. He resides in us and works through us.

17. That Christ may dwell in your hearts. Christ should be enthroned; He must have first place. It is God's purpose that He dwell in our hearts personally, permanently, and powerfully (2:22). Christ is not a guest or an occasional visitor; He is the rightful owner and lives here (Gal 2:20). By faith. Faith is the medium of appropriating Christ. Faith opens the door and receives Him. In some Christ is just present, in others He is prominent, and in still others He is preeminent. Rooted. Established and settled securely in the love of Christ. Rooted like a tree growing strong and massive. And grounded. Deeply and firmly founded, like a building rising higher and larger.

18. May be able to comprehend. May be strong to comprehend, lay hold of effectually (spiritual enlightenment). With all saints. This is not an isolated privilege. Each one comprehends a little; all together we fathom the unfathomable. Our comprehension is partial and progressive. What is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height. The love of Christ is immeasurable. The breadth extends to all people; its length extends to all time; its depth extends to the lowest condition of human need; and its height extends to the highest heavens. Truly Christ is "able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him" (Heb 7:25).

19. And to know by experience the unknowable, the love of Christ in all its dimensions mentioned above. The love of Christ is knowledge-transcending. That ye might be filled with all the fullness of God. Filled with His presence and power, the fullness which God imparts.

20. Now unto him. This ascription of praise to God's ability expresses our assurance of answered prayer. Why should we hesitate to offer our deepest petitions? Note the expressive and exhaustive language. Is able. The strength of our confidence is the fact that He is vastly able above and beyond all that we might ask. To do exceeding abundantly. Superabundantly, overwhelming, over and above, more than enough. David said, "my cup runneth over" (Ps 23:5), and we can say, "He brought me to the banqueting house, and his banner over me was love" (Song 2:4). That we ask or think. Our highest aspirations are not beyond God's power to grant. According to the power that worketh in us. This is that omnipotence that raised Christ from the dead and quickened us when we were dead in sins.

21. Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus. Christ and His church constitute one living organism. The church is His body, and He is the Head of that one body. Throughout all ages. The duration of our praise and thanksgiving. Amen. Paul sealed the doxology.

III. THE CONDUCT OF THE CHURCH. 4:1-6:9.

A. The Undivided Conduct of the Church. 4:1-16.

4:1. Therefore. In view of grace revealed, new life imparted, and your high and heavenly calling. The prisoner of the Lord. Paul was not seeking sympathy, but declaring his acceptance of his circumstances. He was a prisoner because of his relationship to Christ, his faithfulness to Christ, and his service for Christ. Walk worthy. Walk indicates activity and advance step by step. Paul is beseeching the saints to order their lives in a worthy manner. Of the vocation wherewith ye are called. A vocation (Gr klēsis) is a calling or life's work. It behooves Christians to walk worthy of the source, the substance, and the sequence of their high and holy calling of God in Christ. Christians are called to live for Christ (Phil 1:21) and walk "even as he walked" (I Jn 2:6).

2. With all lowliness. Your high calling should not lead to pride or self-exaltation, but on the contrary to all lowliness of mind and modest opinion of yourself. This means unflinching humility, an utter lack of self-assertiveness, and a deep sense of unworthiness, in every experience and in every relationship. And meekness. This is not timidity, cowardice, or servile fear, but self-suppression for the purpose of serving others. It is the spirit that never takes offense and which manifests itself in submission to God's will and gentleness toward men. With longsuffering. This is the opposite to short-tempered. The old nature is so quick to take offense that we need longer fuses. The new life in Christ enables one to endure with unruffled temper any wrong suffered without retaliation and to turn the other cheek (I Pet 2:21-23). Forbearing one another. Forbearance is restraint under just provocation with a liberal allowance for the faults and failures of others. It is that mutual and enduring putting up with one another, and making allowances for one another (Col 3:13). In love. Love beareth all things and endureth all things (I Cor 13:7).

3. Endeavoring. This means to give diligence to do your best in persistent effort, fixed determination, and heroic persever-

19 And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God.

20 Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us.

21 Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

CHAPTER 4

I THEREFORE, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called,

2 With all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love;

3 Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

3 There is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.

4 There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling;

5 One Lord, one faith, one baptism,

6 One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.

7 But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men.

9 (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?)

10 He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things.)

11 And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;

ance. It combines the ideas of haste, eagerness, and zeal. To keep. Not produce; it already exists as a reality. The unity of the Spirit. Not external, ecclesiastical union, but internal, spiritual unity (Jn 17:21-23). Such unity cannot be legislated or produced by the mechanics of an organization. It is produced and maintained by the Holy Spirit. In the bond of peace. Peace with God and with one another is the unifying bond that holds all together.

4. There is one body. The church is a living organism composed only of living members, i.e., blood-bought, born-again, Bible-believing saints. This one body has one Head and many members (I Cor 12:12-13). One Spirit. The Holy Spirit who is the life and breath of that body, who was instrumental in the regeneration of each member, and who now maintains a vital connection of each member with the other members and with the head. One hope of your calling. The same ultimate, glorious reality for both Jews and Gentiles.

5. One Lord. The Lord Jesus Christ, not a series of aeons. "If He is not Lord of all, He is not Lord at all." One faith. Not a creed, but a commitment to Christ. One saving experience of trust in Christ, one way of salvation (Rom 10:9-10). One baptism. One result of baptizing (Gr baptisma), not the act of baptizing (Gr baptismos). Scriptural baptism is the outward expression of an inward experience; a public confession of Christ. Men are not made disciples by baptism, but merely profess to be disciples. Water baptism presupposes and pictures the baptism of the Holy Spirit (I Cor 12:12-13). The one baptism is the expression of the one faith in the one Lord which resulted in the baptism of the one Spirit into the one body.

6. One God and Father of all. For all; not a separate God for each nation. Who is above all. This speaks of His transcendence and His unshared sovereign power. And through all. This speaks of His immanence, His pervading action. And in you all. This speaks of His indwelling presence of believers, His personal relationship. The one God rules over all, works through all, and dwells in all.

7. But unto every one of us is given grace. Each member of the body receives from the Sovereign Lord his own integral value, place, responsibility, opportunity, and duty. No one should be idle for each one has a place to fill, which no one else can fill. According to the . . . gift of Christ. There is a wide variety of gifts. Each Christian has some gift; no one has all the gifts; and not all have the same gifts. These gifts are not just natural endowments, but specific graces and capacities for service. Since God deems these gifts important, man should not despise them. We should be content with our own gifts and not envy or look down on the gifts of others.

8. Wherefore. Because the living Lord distributes His grace by sovereign love to each member of the body and thus makes them fit to be His gifts for service to men. When he ascended up on high. This is a quotation from Psalm 68:18, a messianic psalm of victory in which God is praised for deliverance. He led captivity captive. The inferences drawn from the triumphal return of the King are: (1) the thought of victory; and (2) the bestowal of gifts. The captives are most probably the Old Testament saints in sheol (hades).

9. Ascended . . . descended. Christ's ascension back to heaven after accomplishing the purpose of His incarnation. The lower parts of the earth. Probably hades (Mt 12:40; Acts 2:25-35; II Cor 12:2-4).

10. That he might fill all things. The purpose and plan of Christ is to fill all with His presence and His Spirit.

11. He gave. He gave gifts to men, and He gave gifted men to the church, in which and through which they function. Apostles. The official title of the Twelve, including Paul. This was a temporary office. Nowhere does God's Word teach apostolic succession. To the contrary, God's Word indicts those who lay claim to the title of apostle as deceivers (Rev 2:2). Prophets. These men were both foretellers and forthtellers. They received their message from God and delivered it for God and to man. They had deep insight into spiritual truths as they interpreted God's message under the power of the Holy Spirit. Evangelists. These were the itinerant missionaries who preached the gospel to the unconverted in new areas (Acts 21:8; II Tim 4:5). Pastors and teachers. This refers to one office with two functions, i.e., teaching pastors. The word "pastor" is used by Christ referring to Peter (Jn 21:16); by Peter referring to ministers (I Pet 5:2); and by Paul referring to elders (bishops) of Ephesus (Acts 20:28). They were to shepherd the sheep and train the saints.

12 For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ:

12. For the perfecting of the saints. With a view to equipping them for service. The purpose of Christ's gifts is not making saints sinlessly perfect, but of completely outfitting them to be vessels unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use (II Tim 2:21). For the work of the ministry. Unto spiritual service. Not doing their work for them, but preparing them for their work. D. L. Moody said, "It is better to put ten men to work than to do the work of ten men." The church is not a spiritual rest home, but a barracks for training soldiers of the cross. For the edifying of the body of Christ. With the end in view of building up spiritually the whole body of Christ. Our Lord is interested in quantity, but He is more concerned about quality. All the saints are to be equipped for the work of edification and then be engaged in work of edification.

13 Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ:

13. Till we all come in the unity of the faith. This has reference to the whole body of Christ. We should not neglect anyone. The goal is that we attain unity, not uniformity; and our essential work is far from being accomplished. And of the knowledge of the Son of God. Paul speaks of true, accurate, and full knowledge which enables saints to cooperate with one another in working out God's plan and purpose. Unto a perfect man. As long as our faith in Christ is imperfect we cannot be full-grown, mature Christians. Unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. No under-shepherd has finished his work while the sheep fall short of this goal, a full-grown man in Christ. This fullness, this Christlikeness, is that which belongs to Christ and that which is imparted by Christ. God predestined His saints "to be conformed to the image of his Son" (Rom 8:29). It would be wise for all of us to cry out with John, "He must increase, but I must decrease" (Jn 3:30). As long as we have a factious, contentious, immature church, we will not make much headway in evangelizing the world.

14 That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;

14. That we henceforth be no more children. In this verse Paul sets forth the negative results of spiritual unity and maturity. God desires that we be stalwart Christians with doctrinal stability, spiritual perception, responsibility, and direction toward the goal. Too many are content to remain in weakness and immaturity, spiritual infancy. Tossed to and fro. Cast about as driftwood on the waves of the sea. This is a picture of instability, helplessness, and restlessness. Carried about with every wind of doctrine. Christians should not be whirled around in circles by every shifting wind of false doctrine. If not anchored in Christ, Christians are at the mercy of these ever-changing winds which blow unstable souls in every direction. By the sleight of men. By the deceit and dishonesty of the religious quacks. The word (Gr kubeia) means "dice-throwing," and the dice are loaded. And cunning craftiness. These unscrupulous, scheming frauds stop at nothing to ensnare fickle souls by their clever deceit and treacherous trickery. Whereby they lie in wait to deceive. By deliberate planning and scheming deceit, they wrestle, twist, and pervert the Word of God (Acts 13:10; Gal 1:7;

15 But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ:

16 From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.

17 This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind,

18 Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart:

19 Who being past feeling have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.

20 But ye have not so learned Christ;

21 If so be that ye have heard him,

II Pet 3:16). The Christian's only hope is to "search the scriptures daily, whether those things were so" (Acts 17:11).

15. But speaking the truth in love. Paul now turns to the positive results of spiritual unity and maturity. The truth should always be spoken in love without any tricks or gimmicks. May grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ. Ever growing up in all ways, in all respects, and in fellowship with Him and with each other.

16. From whom the whole body. Christ is the source and sustainer of the body. Fitly joined together. Harmoniously and closely fitted together, with no one out of place, and with each one contributing his share for the good of the whole body. And compacted. Firm and solid adhesion to Christ and to other Christians. Maketh increase of the body. When all the members of the body perform faithfully their several functions, it results in the growth and maturity of the whole body. The church is a living organism united to Christ and indwelt by the Holy Spirit so that every member helps and is helped, strengthens and is strengthened, whereby the whole body grows and "increaseth with the increase of God" (Col 2:19). The result is a unified and an edified church.

B. The Unblemished Conduct of the Church. 4:17-5:16.

17. This I say therefore. Paul bears his testimony as to the Christian calling and conduct. In the Lord. Speaking in His name as His servant and clothed with divine authority as His apostle. That ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles. Let the daily conduct of your lives conform with your new life in Christ. Make a clean break with your old life and stop living by the standards of behavior of the pagan people. The low standards of the world must be abandoned and repudiated, and the Christian must live ethically and morally in segregation from the world (II Cor 6:14). The church is a colony of heaven living here on earth. In the vanity of their minds. Their intellect is empty of truth and filled with false delusions and things that lead to nothing. This implies: aimlessness, uselessness, and futility.

18. Having the understanding darkened. Their beclouded intellect and their emotions have been darkened permanently so that they are without the faculty of discernment and are unable to distinguish clearly between right and wrong. Being alienated from the life of God. Having alienated themselves completely, they are held in the grips of spiritual death. The cause of their alienation is twofold. Through the ignorance that is in them. They were born in moral, ethical, and spiritual stupidity. Because of the blindness of their heart (Gr porōsis). Literally "hardness," covered with a callus (Mk 3:5; Rom 11:25). The heart lost its capacity to feel, and they became insensible, indifferent, and unresponsive to all moral principles and practices.

19. Who being past feeling. Insensible to moral and spiritual impressions and to the appeal of truth. Conscience is not functioning, and there is no hatred of sin and no love for Christ. Have given themselves over unto lasciviousness. They abandoned and delivered themselves over once for all to moral degradation, unbridled lusts, excessive immorality, and dissipating debauchery, with no sense of shame or decency and with scorn for all moral restraint. To work all uncleanness. Committing themselves to active indulgence in every form of impurity, outrageous sensuality, indecency and lewd conduct, such that shocks the public. With greediness. With insatiable desires to have more, with no regard for the person or property of others. He gets what he wants no matter whom he hurts and no matter what methods he uses.

20. But ye have not so learned Christ. In sharp contrast to the pagan life. Christ teaches men to renounce sin and vice and to cultivate holiness and virtue.

21. If so be that ye have heard him. Since you did hear.

and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus:

22 That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts;

23 And be renewed in the spirit of your mind;

24 And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness.

25 Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour: for we are members one of another.

26 Be ye angry, and sin not: let not the sun go down upon your wrath:

27 Neither give place to the devil.

28 Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that

Have been taught by him. Instructed as to the standards, meaning, and behavior of Christian living. As the truth is in Jesus. Embodied in Him and exemplified in His character and conduct, as He lived the truth on the plane of human experience.

22. That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man. Put off definitely, deliberately, quickly, and permanently, once for all the old man as a filthy and repulsive garment. The old man is the unregenerated self, a slave to sin, and headed for judgment. It is the old "I" that has been crucified with Christ (Gal 2:20) and must be so reckoned (Rom 6:9-14). Which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts. The old man is decaying day by day, like a decomposing corpse, and inevitably grows more and more corrupt. The old man is not renewed (Jn 3:6); he must be denounced and replaced.

23. And be renewed. The Greek present tense means continual and progressive renewal. This is the antithesis of the growing corruptness of the old man. In the spirit of your mind. That attitude and disposition which determines behavior and conduct. Being renewed with spiritual food, constantly and continually grasping and appropriating new truth.

24. And . . . put on the new man. Clothe yourself once for all. The old man is stripped off and the new man is put on. These two acts are inseparable. The new man is the new life we receive in Christ (II Cor 5:17; Gal 6:17; Col 3:10). Which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. This is not the reformation or renovation of the old man; this is the product of the new birth and results in a new creation. The new man is created after God and in the family likeness of God. The brand new man is known by the Christlikeness exhibited day by day in living out the new life. Righteousness refers to his new conduct toward his fellowmen. Holiness refers to his new conduct towards God. These two are the essential qualities and the evidence of the new man in Christ.

25. Wherefore putting away lying. Paul now describes the old, obsolete, filthy rags of the old man which are to be discarded. Lying is to be put away definitely and deliberately. The Greek middle voice indicates that you will personally receive some benefit from this action. Lying speaks of everything false: deception of every kind, dishonesty in personal relations, unscrupulous practices in public relations, and corruption in the government. Speak every man truth with his neighbor. Speaking the truth habitually is the only intelligent and consistent way to deal with our neighbors, or those who are members of the body and of one another, where deceit and dishonesty in any form is unthinkable. We must guard our tongue.

26. Be ye angry, and sin not. This is a permissive imperative, rather than a direct command to be angry. There is a righteous indignation which is not sin (Mk 3:5), but "the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God" (Jas 1:20). Do not go on being angry and let it not take root in your heart and degenerate into wrath. Let not the sun go down upon your wrath. There is a grave danger in cherished, prolonged anger. We must get cooled off quickly and maintain such control and restraint of our temper that we make a Christlike adjustment to the irritating circumstances.

27. Neither give place to the devil. Satan waits for opportunity to get his foot in the door. The Greek present imperative means: Do not have the habit of giving place to Satan. Uncontrolled anger is an open door and an invitation for Satan to enter in to disrupt and corrupt the body. He can only hurt and harm as he finds a place in some life to do his evil work.

28. Let him that stole steal no more. Let the one who has the habit of stealing stop stealing. There is no place for dishonesty in Christian dealings. But rather let him labor. Let him adopt the higher Christian standard and ideals of manly indehe may have to give to him that needeth.

29 Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.

30 And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption.

31 Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice:

32 And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

pendence and brotherly helpfulness. Let him toil honestly rather than subsist by the labor of others. Instead of robbing others, let him bring forth fruits fit for repentance. The thing which is good. As opposed to stealing, honest work is rich and rewarding. That he may have to give to him that needeth. That he may accumulate and contribute to the needy.

29. Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth. Corrupt speech comes from a corrupt heart, and pure speech comes from a pure heart. Corrupt speech is like rotten fruit (Mt 7:16-20) or a fish (Mt 13:48) and tainted with moral decay. Corrupt speech will contaminate the thoughts of others. But that which is good to the use of edifying. Our speech should be suitable to building up where the need for constructive help exists. We must watch our words (Ps 141:3) and be careful that our speech is "always with grace, seasoned with salt" (Col 4:6). That it may minister grace unto the hearers. Our speech should impart a blessing, not a blight. If a rotten word is found in the mind, shut it off at the mouth.

30. And grieve not the holy Spirit of God. The Holy Spirit is a very sensitive person. Paul says stop having the habit of offending the Holy Spirit by rebellious deeds and grievous words (vss. 25-31). Whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. Sealed with God's stamp, marking you as God's purchased possession and destined unto the day of complete redemption, when final redemption is realized and we are transformed into His likeness (Phil 3:20-21; I Jn 3:2).

31. Let all bitterness. Let every form of irritability, every inward resentful disposition against others, and hardness of spirit be put away from everyone of you. And wrath. This is the rapid boiling up and furious outburst of temper into passionate expression. And anger. Anger is the settled disposition of indignation. And clamor. Clamor is the loud, railing outburst in a storm of anger. And evil speaking. This is the reviling, deliberate insult with abusive words. With all malice. This refers to a vicious disposition of character. Each of these vices is to be put away once and for all. God wants us to make a clean sweep of these unchristian characteristics.

32. Be ye kind. Paul summarized Christian character. Keep on becoming kind towards one another—well disposed, useful, benevolent, gracious and gentle mannered, as opposed to being harsh, hard, bitter, and sharp. The person who is kind is full of benign courtesy, is distinguished by gracious deeds, and is desirous of promoting common interests and conferring reciprocal obligations. This kindness is the outward expression of love in the heart and applies to all contacts and situations. Tenderhearted. Merciful, compassionate, pitiful. There is a willingness to be understanding of and patient with the faults and failures of others, ready to put kindness into action. Forgiving one another. The word "forgive" (Gr charizomai) is built on the same root as the word "grace" and means to bestow favor unconditionally. This means that a Christian will always treat the offending party graciously, letting the wrong go without any claim for punishment or reparation. It means pardoning the guilty person instead of displaying resentment or exercising retaliation. Forgiveness is not probation, i.e., merely suspending the sentence under supervision and specific conditions. Forgiveness is not a reprieve, i.e., temporarily postponing the punishment. Forgiveness results in complete reconciliation and restored fellowship. Even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you. We are to forgive others just as God forgave us. We are to exhibit the life of Christ in and through us, thus giving evidence of having been made partakers of the divine nature ((II Pet 1:4). God's forgiveness is the model, the motive, and the measure of our forgiving others. God's forgiveness is free, full, and final. When God forgives, He forgets; so must we.

CHAPTER 5

BE ye therefore followers of God as dear children:

2 And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweetsmelling savour.

3 But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints;

4 Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks.

5 For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.

6 Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience.

5:1. Be ye therefore followers of God. Keep on becoming, in your daily conduct, imitators of God, demonstrating the family likeness. Christ is our example in holiness of life, purity of thought, and cleanness of speech. As dear children. Beloved children. Paul is describing the walk of heavenly pilgrims. Imitating God is the result of our acceptance in Christ, not its means.

2. And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us. The distinguishing marks of the Christlike love are forgiveness (4:32) and sacrifice. Our Lord's sacrifice involved death that was voluntary (Jn 10:17-18), vicarious (I Cor 15:3), and victorious (Rom 4:25). Christ's death was a satisfactory sacrifice to God, not to Satan (Anselm), on behalf of us (Rom 5:8). Love is the Christian standard for daily conduct. The Christlike love denies self, takes up the cross daily, and follows Him (Lk 9:23). For a sweetsmelling savor. An analogy of the sacrifices by which Israel was made acceptable to God and is a symbol of restored peaceful relations between God and man.

3. But fornication. A perilous, prevalent, perverse sin, which is lightly regarded by many and committed without scruples and without shame. It is illicit sexual intercourse between unmarried partners, similar to, but not identical with, adultery (Mt 5:32; 15:19; Mk 7:21). And all uncleanness. Every form of impurity, immorality, and lasciviousness. Covetousness. Desiring to possess that which belongs to another: inordinate desire for gain. Here it includes insatiable lusts and sexual greed directed toward the ruin of another's purity. Let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints. These sins must be dreaded and detested. Christians are saints and are to live like saints. They are separated unto God, and therefore separated from sin. These sins are not to be mentioned, much less permitted. Such terms taint the imagination, soil the lips, and cultivate sensual lusts. Such conversation is unbecoming saints and incompatible with Christianity.

4. Neither filthiness. Neither implies that the same rule applies as in verse 3. This means shameful speech, indecent talk, filthy stories, and obscenity as opposed to purity. Nor foolish talking. Senseless "fool-talk," silly speech, coarse vulgarity, evil-minded chatter, idle gossip. It is all godless discourse which is wretched in itself and offensive for Christian decency. Nor jesting. Quickness in making repartee in a profligate sense, ribaldry, scurrility, buffoonery, levity, making light of sin. Which are not convenient. Not compatible with Christianity, beneath a Christian, unbecoming, out of place, not suitable. But rather giving of thanks. This is excellent employment for redeemed tongues, and it is a positive virtue which supplants and inhibits these vices.

5. For this ye know. Keep this constantly in mind. No whoremonger. Every fornicator without exception, either the one who submits to it, or the one who perpetrates it. Nor unclean person. The impure one. Nor covetous man. The man of insatiable passion and sensual greed. Who is an idolater. Sex idolater, dreadful and debase. Inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. All these are excluded from having any share in the kingdom of Christ. An inheritance requires the certitude in character and conduct of the heir as a member of the family of God, and these prove their unfitness by their life-style. It is possible for such sinners to be delivered from the power of darkness and to be translated into the kingdom (I Cor 6:9-11; Col 1:12-13).

6. Let no man deceive you. Stop (Greek present imperative) letting a false teacher lead you astray as to the character and consequences of the sins just mentioned. These sins have their apologists: some condone them as innocent pleasure; others excuse them as weakness; still others say this teaching is puritan-

7 Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light:

9 (For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth:)

10 Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord.

11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

12 For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.

13 But all things that are reprov'd are made manifest by the light: for whatsoever doth make manifest is light.

14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.

15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, ical and a relic of outmoded standards. With vain words. Hollow words, void of truth, empty, speculative, and misleading arguments. For example, Satan said, "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen 3:4). But God, who is righteous, said, "The wages of sin is death" (Rom 6:23). Because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience. The wrath of God is real (Acts 17:30-31) and it is coming. The Greek present tense implies its certainty and its imminence. The children of disobedience are those who in selfish and fleshly abandon are so ready to disobey all moral and religious restraints.

7. Be not ye therefore partakers with them. Stop becoming partakers with them. This is a strong warning against lapsing into these sins. Paul is saying not to get involved in these sins. "If you don't want to do business with the devil, keep out of his shop." Don't become a partaker in the sin, the shame, and the eternal separation from God.

8. For ye were sometimes darkness. In time past, you were so gripped in the ways of moral darkness as to be part of it; not merely in the dark, but part of it. You were so ignorant of God's Word and will and so identified with evil, that you were the very embodiment of darkness. But now ye are light in the Lord. At present, you are in union with Him who is the Light of the world (Jn 8:12), and you are light. The Christian is not merely enlightened, he is the light of the world (Mt 5:14-16). Christ has shined in that we might shine out (II Cor 4:6). Walk as children of light. It does not say to walk in the light, but as children of light. We are to walk as possessed by the Light and radiating the Light.

9. For the fruit of the Spirit. The spiritual product of walking as light (cf. Gal 5:22). Goodness. Moral excellence, benevolence in thought, word, and deed. Righteousness. Moral rectitude, integrity and rightness as God sees it and in relation to man. Truth. Moral reality, honesty, sincerity, and straightforwardness, as opposed to all that is false.

10. Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord. Constantly learning by discrimination and putting to the test to prove what is well-pleasing to the Lord.

11. Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. The Greek present imperative means stop having joint-participation with the barren works of darkness. These works yield no profit and no reward. They do produce bitterness, pain, and disgrace. Darkness suggests action and habits characteristic to a life of sin. But rather reprove them. Not just abstain, but expose them by a consistent life. We are to express our disapproval by word and action, by the light of right living and loving example, thus attracting them from the destruction of darkness to the light of salvation in Christ (Jn 3:19-20).

12. For it is a shame. It is degrading and disgraceful, because these practices are vile and corrupt. Done of them in secret. Men hide such things because they love the darkness.

13. Made manifest by the light. The character, the course, and the consequences of sin are made clear and tested by the light.

14. Awake thou that sleepest. This is a call from drowsiness to spiritual life. Arise from the dead. Stand up from the dead among you. Christ shall give thee light. Make day dawn upon you.

15. See then. Take heed by. Looking around thoughtfully and prayerfully, by giving attention to circumstances and consequences, by guarding against everything improper and unbecoming for a Christian. Keep a sharp lookout for those things that would cause you or a brother to stumble. Walk circumspectly. This denotes that exact accuracy which is the result of diligent carefulness. Not as fools. Men lacking wisdom. But as wise. Sensibly and thoughtfully. We need to be careful and 16 Redeeming the time, because the days are evil.

17 Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is.

18 And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;

19 Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord;

20 Giving thanks always for all prayerful that we do not walk in perilous places, in the pitfalls of perdition, and in the snares of Satan.

16. Redeeming the time. Buy up the opportunity. The Greek present tense denotes keep on buying. There is a price to be paid or we will forgo the bargain. The price is self-denial and strenuous work. There is also opportunity, i.e., to serve the Lord, to witness for Christ, to be a channel of blessing, and to advance the cause of Christ. We must recognize the opportunity, appreciate it, and take hold of it for God's glory. Because the days are evil. There are many obstacles in the way, much opposition to God, and much corruption in the world. The days are full of difficulty, danger, darkness, and death. We dare not lose one opportunity by letting things drift aimlessly and carelessly.

C. The Unblamable Conduct of the Church. 5:17-6:9.

17. Be ye not unwise. Stop becoming foolish, senseless, without intelligence, and lacking in wisdom; and start exercising good judgment and reason. But understanding. Divinely enlightened by prayer and meditation. What the will of the Lord is. Be a Bible Christian; give God's Word the place it deserves, then you will understand what He wants you to be and do. The entrance of God's Word gives light (Ps 119:130). God's will is revealed in God's Word. Our first concern is God's will; it is not what is most profitable, what is most pleasurable, or what is most honorable.

18. And be not drunk with wine. Stop the habit of getting drunk. Wherein is excess. Drunkenness leads to riot and ruin. It corrupts character, debauches life, brooks no restraint, defies efforts to reform it, and sinks its victim lower and lower into helplessness and hopelessness. But. A strong contrast from the physical to the spiritual, from the debasing to the ennobling. In days of drab routine, disappointment, and depression, men need stimulation and inspiration. The Christian's resource is the Holy Spirit. Be filled with the Spirit. Although all Christians have been baptized by the Spirit at salvation, all Christians are not filled with the Spirit, which is their heritage. The fullness of the Holy Spirit was the normal experience of the early Christians. The natural man has not the Spirit (Jude 19; Rom 8:9); the carnal man has the Spirit, but lives by the power and dictates of the flesh; the spiritual man has the Spirit, and the Spirit has him, and he lives by the power and dictates of the Holy Spirit. Be filled (Gr pleroō) is full of meaning. The second person plural means "you all," everyone without exception. It is in the imperative mood, which means it is a positive command, a distinct duty. Just as surely as God commanded all men everywhere to repent (Acts 17:30), so He has commanded every born-again believer to be filled with the Spirit. This verb is in the Greek present tense and means keep on being filled moment by moment. God speaks of an abiding reality; yesterday's filling will not do for today. The early Christians were repeatedly filled with the Spirit. This verb is in the passive voice, the voice that presents the subject as receiving the action, rather than doing the action. The filling is what God does. When we are willing to let the Holy Spirit saturate us He will pervade our entire being with His presence and with His power. The filling is not a question of having more of the Holy Spirit, but a question of the Holy Spirit having all of us. Our only choice is to obey or to disobey this divine direction.

19. Making melody. Playing by means of an instrument. This word means to make or let a string twang and signifies to play an instrument as an accompaniment to the voice. In your heart to the Lord. Not merely with the lips and the fingers for man, but with the heart for the glory of the Lord.

20. Giving thanks always for all things. See Philippians 4:6.

things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;

21 Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God.

22 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord.

23 For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of the body.

24 Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing.

25 Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it;

26 That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, 27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.

In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus taught His disciples to use His name in prayer.

21. Submitting yourselves one to another. The way to have happy harmony. This submission is reciprocal, mutual, voluntary, and personal. It is opposed to rudeness, haughtiness, and selfish preference of one's own opinions.

22. Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. The duty and manner of submission. The Christian home is a symbol of Christianity, and should be a "little bit of heaven" on earth. The word submit (Gr hypotassō) is an old military figure to line up under (Col 3:18) and means to subject yourselves in line in a specialized way. Christian wives will be ordering their lives in proper subjection to their own husbands as required in this relation in the Lord, for subjection to the Lord includes loyal living in the home. Submission is not slavish fear, neither is it forced upon her by a demanding domestic despot, but it is voluntary. There is no hint of inferiority, but a matter of authority and responsibility in the home. Husbands and wives are parts of a unit. The question arises, what if the husband is not a born-again believer? The Word of God gives definite instructions covering such a case (I Pet 3:1-7).

23. For the husband is the head of the wife. The reason of submission. Authority and government are lodged in the husband. The home has its center and unity in the husband. The truest unity is conjugal duality. Even as Christ is the head of the church. Headship in a living union where Christ and His church become one. And he is the saviour of the body. No husband can ever be saviour, but he represents Christ symbolically as good provider and protector.

24. As . . . so. This description of the submissive obedience of wives is clear, concise, complete, and correct.

25. Husbands, love your wives. The plain duty of husbands is now set forth. Husbands are to love their wives, not treat them as inferior subjects. Such love will lift a husband out of a state of arbitrary self-indulgence and capricious self-satisfaction. Even as Christ also loved the church. Christ is the husband's ideal example. The measure of Christ's love for the church is to be the measure of the husband's love for his wife. Husbands owe their wives the same kind of love and loyalty as Christ has for His bride; supreme, self-forgetting, self-sacrificing love. In the economy of the family and after the manner of Christ, husbands are to reign in love. The church is called the body of Christ (1:22-23). Gave himself for it. The measure and manifestation of Christ's love for the church. Christ gave Himself both in life and in death on behalf of the church.

26. That he might sanctify. The purpose of His death is set forth in the words sanctify, cleanse, and present. Sanctify means to consecrate, set apart for sacred service. And cleanse. The tense of this participle indicates antecedent action to sanctify. First there was the cleansing and then the sanctifying. With the washing of water by the word. The washing of water refers to "the washing of regeneration" (I Cor 6:11; Tit 3:5). By the word. God the Holy Spirit uses the Word of God to accomplish God's purpose in redemption (Ps 119:9; Jn 15:3; 17:17; I Pet 1:23).

27. That he might present it to himself a glorious church. He Himself as loving, saving, and sanctifying Lord. The Bridegroom presents His bride to Himself. It will then be a glorious church arrayed in glory, with nothing to mar her beauty. Not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing. In perfect purity. Spots are from without, wrinkles from within. "The world about the church causes the stains, the flesh still in her causes the wrinkles" (R. C. H. Lenski, The Interpretation of Saint Paul's Epistles to the Galatians, to the Ephesians, and to the Philippians, p. 635). But that it should be holy. Morally pure 28 So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church.

33 Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband.

CHAPTER 6

CHILDREN, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.

2 Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise;

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

4 And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

and wholly consecrated. Without blemish. Immaculate, just like the heavenly Bridegroom.

28. So ought men to love their wives. In the same manner and same measure as Christ loved the church, assumed all responsibility for her, and spared nothing that contributes toward His purpose for her. Husbands are under similar obligations to devote themselves, all they are and have, to their own (individual) wives. As their own bodies. Treat them as constituting their own personal bodies. The two have become one in marriage. He that loveth his wife loveth himself. For he is completed and perfected in her, with whom he has become one flesh (Mk 10:8).

29. Nourisheth. That it may develop to maturity. Cherisheth. To foster with tender care, concern, and comfort. The best and highest interest of the husband is to recognize his complete identity with his wife.

30. For we are members of his body. Consequently we should understand and adopt His principle in our relationships with each other within His church (Rom 12:4-5; I Cor 12:12-27).

31. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother. In response to this divinely given ideal. And shall be joined unto his wife. Once for all glued to his wife. Marriage is a picture of the union of Christ and His church. Paul insists on the sanctity of the family and treats marriage as an inseparable union between a husband and wife. And they two shall be one flesh. One unit of flesh by assimilation (Gen 2:24; Mk 10:2-12). God is insisting that both husband and wife joined in perfect union live up to the standard of Christ and His church. They are joined together in body, soul, and spirit and should be set apart to each other in a holy union of sinless human relationship.

32. Great mystery. This holy secret revealed in the Word of God is great. The comparison of the marriage union with the union of Christ and His church is the mystery.

33. Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife. Husbands measure up to the ideal of Christ in His love for the church. And the wife see that she reverence her husband. Wives measure up to the church in its devotion to Christ.

6:1. Children. We come to the duties of children and parents. Obeys your parents. The word (Gr hypakouō) means to hear as under another with listening and attentive ears, to give obedient heed. This duty has been recognized among all people, in all lands, and in all ages. The neglect of this duty is lamented. Disobedience to parents is a sin (Rom 1:30; II Tim 3:2). In the Lord. God commands it. It is a Christian duty for children to obey their parents promptly, habitually, and cheerfully. For this is right. It is a moral duty, not merely becoming or an accepted custom (Col 3:20).

2. Honor thy father and mother. Honor is the attitude of love, respect, and disposition of heart that produces obedience. First commandment with promise. The second commandment has a general promise, but the fifth has a specific promise (Ex 20:12; Deut 5:16).

3. That it may be well with thee. Both temporal and spiritual prosperity.

4. And, ye fathers. Mothers are included in this exhortation. Provoke not your children to wrath. The word provoke means do not irritate, exasperate, rub the wrong way, incite. This is done by a wrong spirit and by wrong methods, i.e., severity, unreasonableness, sternness, harshness, cruel demands, needless restrictions, and selfish insistence upon authority. Such provocation would produce adverse reactions, deaden his affection, check his desire for holiness, and make him feel that he can't possibly please his parents. A wise parent seeks to make obedience desirable and attainable by love and gentleness. Par-

5 Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ;

6 Not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart;

7 With good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men:

8 Knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, whether he be bond or free.

9 And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, forbearing threatening: knowing that your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect of persons with him.

10 Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.

11 Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

ents must not be godless tyrants. Luther said, "Keep an apple beside the rod to give the child when he does well." But bring them up in the nurture. Discipline in general education and culture must be exercised with watchful care and constant training. And admonition. Chastening, disciplining, and counsel by the Word of God, giving both reproof and encouragement whenever needed. Of the Lord. Proceeding from the Lord, learned in the school of Christian experience, and administered by the parents. Christian discipline is needed to prevent children from growing up without reverence for God, respect for parental authority, knowledge of Christian standards, and habits of self-control.

5. Servants. Bondslave, yet free men in Christ. The Bible does not condone slavery nor does it advocate its violent overthrow. Slavery must ultimately disappear where the gospel is proclaimed, with its implications of human equality, Christian brotherhood, and the lordship of Christ. Be obedient. Servants are to be obedient and loyal. Masters. Either owners or employers, who have control of the body, but not of the spirit. With fear and trembling. Not dread of the master, but respect for authority and anxious to leave no duty undone. In singleness of your heart. With genuine readiness of heart and undivided purpose, not with pretense or an ulterior motive, not half-hearted, but sincere. As unto Christ. Your Christian duty.

6. Not with eyeservice. Working only while being under the watchful eye of an exacting employer and to make a show and gain human praise. As menpleasers. Who have no higher motive than to please their human masters and curry their favor. But as the servants of Christ. Rather meet the demands of your station as bondslaves of Christ. Doing the will of God from the heart. Even while the servants of men, view your tasks as doing God's will from the heart (lit., "out of the soul").

7. With good will doing service. And not with resentment. This implies enthusiasm and a generous spirit.

8. Knowing that whatsoever . . . any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord. Get back in compensation from the Lord. The Lord remembers and rewards. Bond or free. The law of spiritual equity operates without regard to social class or economic status.

9. Ye masters, do the same things unto them. Accept the same Christian principles, with the same attitude, and the same spirit with regard to the will of God and to the authority of Christ. Forbearing threatening. Leave off the evil practice of threatening shorter hours, lower wages, and loss of employment by using harsh compulsions and treating them like chattels. Your Master also is in heaven. He is ruling and reigning. He keeps accurate records, and we will be judged by the perfect standards of heaven. Neither is there respect of persons with him. God does not have a double standard. He weighs the unfaithfulness in servants and the unkindness in masters in the same scales of divine equity and justice.

IV. THE CONFLICT OF THE CHURCH. 6:10-20.

10. Finally. In respect of the rest. Paul has already spoken of the church's heavenly calling and her earthly conduct, now he is revealing her spiritual conflict. Be strong in the Lord. Be continuously empowered in union with Him. He is the source of spiritual power. Spiritual battles require spiritual strength.

11. Put on the whole armor of God. God supplied the panoply, the complete armor, but He expects the Christian warrior to put it on. That ye may be able to stand. A purpose clause. In order that you may stand your ground and not retreat or fall in the struggle (cf. Jas 4:7). Against the wiles of the devil. The devil's wiles are attractive, deceptive, and ensnaring. Satan is a personal enemy, a great adversary, a slanderous accuser, and a malignant foe. He uses clever and crafty methods

12 For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.

13 Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand.

14 Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness;

15 And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace;

16 Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.

17 And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God:

to deceive. Men dream of a devil that is a hideous, horned, and hoofed monster who haunts the vice dens of the world; but God says he fashions himself into an angel of light and fashions his ministers as ministers of righteousness (II Cor 11:14-15). He is the champion of liberalism, ritualism, rationalism, and every other "ism" that seeks to displace Christ. His aim is to substitute something else and something different for the grace and truth of Christ. Never underestimate the enemy.

12. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood. We are not engaged in a human, physical warfare. Wrestle means to throw or swing. It is a contest between two opponents that continues until one hurls the other one down and holds him down. The word against presents the idea of a personal foe, face-to-face and hand-to-hand conflict to the finish, a life and death struggle. Paul is not describing a Sunday school picnic. But against principalities. Principalities refer to the high-ranking hierarchy of demonic authority. Powers. Invested with authority. Rulers of the darkness of this world. The world rulers in revolt against God and limited to "this darkness" here on earth. Spiritual wickedness. The army of invisible wicked spirits. In high places. The sphere of this conflict is in the heavenlies, where life in Christ is lived (2:5-6).

13. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God. Appropriate promptly, for there is no time to lose. No ordinary weapons will do (II Cor 10:4). Confronted by the old subtle serpent out of the pit, we need the panoply of God, which is fully provided and freely given. Withstand . . . stand. The purpose of the armor is that we may hold our ground firmly, completely, gloriously, and victoriously.

14. Stand therefore. Take your stand therefore, bent on victory. Having your loins girt about with truth. This Greek aorist participle indicates antecedent action to the standing; it means belted around your thighs with the military band of true integrity and sincerity. This band holds the tunic in place and holds the scabbard. It is not an ornament, but an armament. Truth is revealed in the Word of God; it is light from heaven and dispels darkness. Having on the breastplate of righteousness. Clothed with the breastplate of righteousness both in character and conduct. The breastplate protects the vital organs in the chest area from the assaults of the enemy. Without it we would be vulnerable, disgraced, and defeated.

15. And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Having bound under (cf. Mk 6:9; Acts 12:8) for firm footing, for sure steps, and for protection. Preparation indicates readiness; prepared to see duty, prepared to do God's will, and prepared to proclaim the gospel of peace.

16. Above all. In addition to all. Taking the shield of faith. The shield is the large oblong shield for full protection. Note it is to be taken. Faith is utter dependence on God, upon His presence and His power. Faith puts God between you and the enemy. Wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. The fire-tipped darts are the arrows dipped in combustible material and set on fire in Satan's malignant efforts to destroy you. The shield will quench every one of them without exception. It will stop the missiles and put out the fire.

17. And take the helmet of salvation. Take means receive or accept it from God. It is the assurance of salvation (II Tim 1:12; I Jn 5:11-13). Salvation is a present possession. The helmet protects the head, the citadel of intelligence, from false teachings and gives confidence and boldness in the conflict. And the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. This sword is the sharp one used in hand-to-hand conflict. It is the only offensive weapon. It is provided by the Spirit. When the church, or the Christian, used the rotten sticks of culture, science, theories, traditions, or commands of men, defeat is inevitable. God has promised to bless His Word (Isa 55:8-11). Our Lord

18 Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints;

19 And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel, 20 For which I am an ambassador in bonds: that therein I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak.

21 But that ye also may know my affairs, and how I do, Tych't-cus, a beloved brother and faithful minister in the Lord, shall make known to you all things:

22 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that ye might know our affairs, and that he might comfort your hearts.

23 Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

24 Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Amen.

used this powerful source in the wilderness and met the devil with, "It is written" (Mt 4:4-10). The sword must be unsheathed; the Bible must not lie idle.

18. Praying always. Pray without ceasing (I Thess 5:17) as you engage in battle. Keep the lines of communication open with the Captain of our salvation (Josh 5:13-15; Heb 2:10). Prayer and the Word should never be separated. The searching of the Word must be done with prayer, and prayer will be effectual through knowing the Word. With all prayer. Confession, adoration, thanksgiving, petition, intercession, supplication. In the Spirit. Not for the Spirit. It is the Holy Spirit who prays in us, through us, and for us (Rom 8:26-27; Jude 20). Watching. Be on guard, vigilant, wide awake (Mt 26:41). Perseverance. Persistence and importunity (Lk 11:5-8). Supplication. Specific requests. For all saints. In behalf of all believers. Christians should fight shoulder-to-shoulder and knee-to-knee.

19. And for me. Paul requests prayer for himself. That utterance. Freedom of speech. Paul was not trusting in education or experience. Make known. With clear fullness and boldness. The mystery of the gospel. The divine meaning of the gospel in its universal application to all races on equal terms and conditions. Paul had a message from God, and desired the means to deliver that message.

20. An ambassador in bonds. An ambassador (II Cor 5:20) of the risen Lord, in chains and in prison.

V. CONCLUSION. 6:21-24.

21-22. Tychicus (Acts 20:4; Col 4:7; II Tim 4:12; Tit 3:12), the bearer of this epistle, will inform the recipients of Paul's circumstances and encourage their troubled hearts.

23. Peace. Christ's gift. Brethren. In the Lord and in the Lord's work. Love with faith. Love of the saints and faith in Christ.

24. Grace will be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ. Lord speaks of His deity, Jesus speaks of His humanity, and Christ speaks of His Saviourhood. In sincerity. Incapable of being corrupted (I Cor 9:25; 15:52; I Tim 1:17). Amen. So let it be. Amen.

The Epistle To The PHILIPPIANS

INTRODUCTION

The city of Philippi. The city of Philippi anciently bore the name of Krenides meaning "The Little Fountains" because numerous springs surrounded it. When Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great, seized it, he enlarged the site and named it after himself. It was the eastern military outpost of Philip's empire, protecting it from the wild Thracians.

We know little of the history of Philippi from then on until it was made a Roman colony by Augustus, as a memorial of his victory over Brutus and Cassius. A colony was a planned outpost of Rome, a portion of Rome transplanted to the province. The members of the colony were Roman citizens in a place of danger to defend the homeland and its borders. The colony was to Romanize the district in which it was placed. It is interesting and suggestive that Paul refers to the church at Philippi as a colony of heaven (3:20). The city is seldom mentioned in Roman history, but it is spoken of as an important city. It was destroyed or ceased to exist sometime during the Turkish domination. Today it lies in ruins. Archaeologists have uncovered a colonial archway, a marketplace, and an amphitheater. The population of Philippi was dominantly Roman with a large percentage of Greek and Oriental.

Philippi was the center of the old licentious Bacchus worship, the newer mystery religions, and the Roman Emperor worship. It also became the center of Christianity.

The church at Philippi. In obedience to the Macedonian call, Paul and his co-laborers, on the second missionary journey, took the gospel into Europe for the first time. There was no synagogue there, so Paul met with the Jews at the riverside. Paul's labors were crowned with success, and a church was established.

Luke remained in Philippi (Acts 19:10-40). After leaving Ephesus on his third missionary journey, Paul went into Macedonia (Acts 20:1-2; II Cor 2:12-13; 7:5-6), and it is reasonable to think he spent some time in Philippi. Three or four months later, on his return from Greece, he evidently spent the Passover at Philippi (Acts 20:6). Luke rejoins Paul here.

The church membership was largely Gentiles, and women occupied a prominent place (Acts 16:12-15; Phil 4:2-3). The church was loyal to Paul and grateful and generous to Paul (Acts 18:5; II Cor 8:1-5; 11:8-9; Phil 4:15-18). The Philippians had not been affected by the false Judaizing teachers, yet Paul warns them of this danger (3:14).

Authorship. The majority of scholars and a preponderance of both internal and external evidence favor the pauline authorship. There is no reason to question either the authorship or the integrity of Philippians.

Date and place of writing. Philippians was written from Rome during Paul's imprisonment. The references to the "palace" (1:13) and to "Caesar's household" (4:22) confirm this. Paul was a prisoner (1:7, 13-14) and expected a speedy release (1:19-20, 26; 2:24).

Occasion of the epistle. Epaphroditus had brought a contribution from the church in Philippi (4:18), and became sick nigh unto death (2:27). He was grieved over the sorrow which this sickness caused the Philippians (2:26). When he was well enough, Paul sent him back with this letter of thanks and explanation of Epaphroditus' long absence.

Contents. This "Hymn of Joy" has as its theme the adequacy of Christ for life and for death. The whole atmosphere of this epistle is that of joy. When Paul penned this letter, he was in a Roman prison. Years before in the jail in Philippi, Silas and he "prayed and sang praises to God" (Acts 16:25). Joy, the fruit of the Spirit (Gal 5:22), does not depend on and is not affected by outward circumstances.

The words "sin" and "sins" are not found in this epistle. The words "joy" and "rejoicing" are used eighteen times. We find no murmuring or complaining. Paul counts "it all joy" (Jas 1:2) and is glorying "in tribulation" (Rom 5:3).

Philippians shows us what true Christian experience is, the outward expression of the Christ-life within the believer in the power of the Holy Spirit, apprehending our position in Christ and manifesting Christ in our daily walk.

COMMENTARY

I. REJOICING IN CHRIST AS THE PRINCIPLE OF LIFE. 1:1-30.

A. Introduction. 1:1-11.

1. Salutation. 1:1-2.

PAUL and Ti-mō'the-us, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus which are at Phi-lip'pi, with the bishops and deacons:

1:1. Paul. Paul does not mention his apostleship in this epistle. He is not insisting on his apostolic authority; he is not defending some doctrine; he is not enforcing some command. And Timothy. Timothy is not the co-author of the epistle, but the co-laborer of the apostle. He was with Paul when the church at Philippi was founded (Acts 16:1) and had been there since (Acts 19:19-22; 20:4). Servants of Christ Jesus. A servant is one who gives himself up wholly to another's will, a bondservant, a man of servile condition, one devoted to another to the disregard of his own interest. Paul and Timothy were the property of our Lord Jesus Christ. They were His slaves and of no one else. No man can serve two masters (Mt 6:24). Paul and Timothy had been servants of sin by the first birth, now they are servants of Christ by the second birth. They have been purchased by the blood of Christ and they are owned by Christ. Therefore, they have no will of their own, no business of their own, no time of their own. They are acting for Christ; they are dependent upon Christ; they are obedient to Christ. To all the saints. Saints are holy ones both in character and conduct. They are set apart for God to be exclusively His, dedicated to God, holy (holiness of heart and conduct in contrast to the impurity of unbelievers). Saints are set aside for sacred use. In Christ Jesus. This is the position of the saints. This is Paul's summation of the Christian life, the most intimate and living union between the believer and his Lord. Which are at Philippi. This is the place of their residence, the place of their discipline, the place of their experience, and the place of their service. With the bishops. The bishops were the overseers, guardians, those who had a care for them. The word is synonymous with presbyter and elder; they were the spiritual leaders. They were not dictators, but godly examples and undershepherds (I Pet 5:1-4). And deacons. Deacons are servants (in their activities for the work and not in their relationship to any other person). "The etymology (Gr dia, konis) suggests raising a dust by hastening" (A. T. Robertson, Word Pictures of the New Testament, Vol. IV, p. 435). Both bishops and deacons were the recognized officers of the church at this time. There was simple organization in the early church. We must never violate the scriptural principals of (1) the priesthood of all believers and (2) the lordship of Christ.

2. Grace be unto you, and peace. Grace and peace, always in that order. Grace is the foundation and peace is the result. Where there is no grace, there can be no peace. Grace denotes unmerited favor and expresses God's sacrificial love to men. Peace expresses "the tranquil state of a soul assured of its salvation through Christ, a soul fearing nothing from God and content with its earthly lot, of whatsoever sort that is." Peace is that harmony and health of the one who has been reconciled to 2 Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

God through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ (Rom 5:1-2). From God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. The preposition (Gr apo) governs both objects, God and Christ, who form one unit and are placed on a level of equality. A definite affirmation of Christ's deity. God is called our Father because we are His children by the new birth; Christ is called our Lord because we live under Him and serve Him in righteousness.

2.' Thanksgiving. 1:3-8.

3 I thank my God upon every remembrance of you,

3. I thank my God. Paul expresses his personal relationship to God. He says in effect, God is mine, and I am His. Upon every remembrance of you. This is Paul's basis and the stimulus for his thanksgiving. Paul remembers their acceptance of the gospel, their consistency of faith, their growth in grace, and their burden for lost souls.

4 Always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy,

4. Always in every prayer of mine for you all. The word prayer (Gr deesis) means supplication, petition, entreaty. Paul was a great prayer warrior. In a day when programs, publicity, and promotion characterize much of the Lord's work, it should be emphasized that without prayer no lasting work will be accomplished for God. Making request with joy. Joy is the keynote of this epistle. Paul had been a happy prisoner in Philippi (Acts 16:25).

5 For your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now;

5. For your fellowship in the gospel. Fellowship is joint participation and cooperation in a common interest and activity. Not fellowship primarily with Paul or with each other, but fellowship in the furtherance of the gospel by their living, loyalty, love, and liberality. They were fellow laborers with Paul to take the whole Word to the whole world.

6 Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ:

6. Being confident of this very thing. Paul has been persuaded. The Greek perfect tense signifies past completed action with present existing results. Paul is still firmly confident and will continue to be so. He has no doubts about their salvation or their security. That he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ. God's beginning the work is a pledge of its completion. What God begins, He will finish (I Sam 3:12). The good work has its initiation in regeneration (past); has its continuation in sanctification (present); and will have its consummation in glorification (future). In the past there was God's unchangeable purpose; in the present there is God's unlimited power; and in the future there is God's unbreakable promise. This is God's guarantee for the final preservation and perseverance of the saints. Salvation is all of God.

7 Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all, because I have you in my heart; inasmuch as both in my bonds, and in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, ye all are partakers of my grace.

7. Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all. Paul gives the reason for his settled persuasion. It was right for him to feel this way concerning them. Because I have you in my heart. Paul loved them as his own soul. Paul's heart beats in unison with Christ's heart, for Christ lives in and loves through Paul. Paul's love for them was the fruit of the Holy Spirit. Inasmuch as both in my bonds. Paul's bonds refer to his present imprisonment. And in the defense and confirmation of the gospel. Defense is our word apology, but not with the idea of apologizing (Acts 22:1; 25:16). Defense is the negative side and confirmation (verification) is the positive side of establishing the gospel. Defense means clearing away the objections and removing the obstacles; confirmation means the aggressive advancement in proclaiming the good news. Both words are connected by the same definite article in Greek, and combined to form one complete idea. It is the defense and confirmation of the gospel, not Paul's self-defense. The fate of the apostle was of little concern; the fate of the gospel was then and still is everything. Ye all are partakers of my grace. Literally, my co-sharers or fellow-participants in grace.

8 For God is my record, how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ.

8. For God is my record. Literally, God is my witness (Gr martyrs). Our word martyr is derived from this word. How greatly I long after you all. The word means to long for, desire earnestly, pursue with love. In the bowels of Jesus Christ. The word (Gr splangchnos) means heart, viscera (lit., vital organs), the seat of the affections. We translate, "with the heart of Jesus Christ with the tender affections and yearnings of Christ."

3. Prayer. 1:9-11.

9. And this I pray. Keep on praying. That your love may abound yet more and more. Their love was already in existence and that in no small degree to God, to one another, and to all men. The word abound (Gr perisseuō) means to exceed a fixed number or measure, to be over, to abound, to overflow. The Greek present active subjunctive means to keep on overflowing in a perpetual flood of love. In knowledge and in all judgment. The word knowledge means whole, complete, precise, and correct knowledge, knowledge gained by experience. Judgment means perception, delicate discernment, and spiritual understanding. It is keen, intelligent, spiritual insight that selects, classifies, and applies that which knowledge furnishes. Knowledge deals with the general principles; judgment deals with the discriminating of those principles.

10. That ye may approve things that are excellent. The word approve (Gr dokimazō) means to test, scrutinize, prove, recognize as genuine after examination, to sanction after testing. Some translate "approve things that are excellent" and others, "try the things that differ." The meaning is very similar. For by testing things that differ, we approve the things that are excellent. The Greek present participle means literally to carry different ways to different places. Thus to test things that differ, sift truth from error, discriminate the higher spiritual blessings from the lower material blessings. The criterion is always the Word of God as taught by the Holy Spirit. That ye may be sincere. The word sincere means unmixed, unalloyed, pure, free from falsehood, sincere. God wants sterling Christians, not those who are merely "plated" with outward religion. God wants men and women of transparent character, clear as crystal, so that the world will see Christ in their character and in their conduct. And without offense. Having nothing for one to strike against, not causing to stumble, without offense. Here the word conveys both ideas of not stumbling and of not causing others to stumble. Stepping-stones not stumbling blocks. Till the day of Christ. With a view to His glorious appearance.

11. Being filled. The word (Gr plēroō) means to make full, cause to abound, filled to the full. This Greek perfect participle expresses the present results of a past action. They have been filled and are still filled. There is no room for anything else; there is no room for any other fruit. With the fruits of righteousness. Righteousness fruit. Which are by Jesus Christ. This fruit cannot be produced by human power but only by the Holy Spirit as the believer is in vital union with Christ (Jn 15:4-5). Unto the glory and praise of God. This is the spiritual purpose of all Christian endeavor.

B. Rejoicing in the Christian Ministry. 1:12-26.

1. Proclaiming the gospel. 1:12-20.

12. But I would ye should understand. Paul wants the Philippians to be informed that his bonds led to a wider witness. Paul turned his prison cell into a gospel chapel. His chain did not curtail the gospel, but advanced it. The things which happened unto me. Paul refers to being mobbed in Jerusalem, unjustly imprisoned, shipwrecked, chained to guards, etc. These things happened not for crimes, but for Christ. Have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel. Paul's affairs turned out just the reverse of what might have been expected. Progress means advancement. This word pictures the 9 And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all judgment;

10 That ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and without offence till the day of Christ;

11 Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.

12 But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel; pioneer cutting a way before an army and thus furthering its advance. Paul's imprisonment did not hinder his ministry of intercession, his ministry of evangelism, his ministry of writing.

13. So that my bonds in Christ. Paul's bonds were in connection with Christ and His cause. Paul is imprisoned for Christ's sake, and his chains are seen in relation to Christ and thus bear witness for Christ. Are manifest in all the palace. The palace of the provincial governor, probably including the barracks of the praetorian guard. The imperial guard was made up of noble soldiers appointed to keep guard over the emperor and the palace. These men had been reached with the gospel. In all other places. To all the rest.

14. And many of the brethren in the Lord. The majority of the brethren. Waxing confident by my bonds. Paul's courage was contagious. His confinement did not intimidate these brethren. Paul's brave and fearless example brought confidence to them. Are much more bold. In a greater degree and with increased zeal. To speak. The word denotes the fact of speaking, rather than the substance of speaking. The word without fear. The brethren dared fearlessly to proclaim God's Word.

15. Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife. Envy and strife are very low motives for preaching the gospel. On account of their jealousy of Paul, they sought to undermine his influence. These men are in contrast to the brethren of verse 14. Strife means rivalry, contention, wrangling. These men were motivated by malice. They had the right message, but they had the wrong motive. And some also of good will. These brethren found pleasure and satisfaction in Paul's work. These have the right message and the right motive.

16. The one preach Christ of contention. The word contention (Gr eritheia) means self-seeking, the desire to put one's self forward, selfish ambition, a partisan and factious spirit. Their motives were rivalry and ambition. Not sincerely. The word (Gr hagnōs) means not purely, not chaste, not modest, not immaculate. They are not preaching Christ from pure motives; not from unalloyed love for Christ; but insincerely. Supposing to add affliction to my bonds. Their aim was unchristian. Their purpose was to stir up vexation for Paul and to aggravate his sufferings. Their purpose was to triumph over Paul, not to triumph over pagans. They were concerned about promoting a sect, not saving souls.

17. But the other of love. Love both for Christ and for Paul knowing that I am set for the defense of the gospel. The same defense that is mentioned in verse 7. The word set (Gr keimai) means appointed, placed, destined. We see in these last two verses two types of preachers. They differ in their hearts: in one contention rules, and in the other love reigns. They differ in spirit: in one there is envy and strife; in the other good will. They differ in the source of their strength: in one there is merely the love of party; in the other there is confidence in the Lord. They differ in their aim: in one the aim is to advance a branch of the church; in the other the aim is to advance the cause of Christ. They differ in conviction: one aims to add affliction to Paul; the other knows that Paul is set for the defense of the gospel.

18. What then? Notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretense. Pretense means an excuse, a pretext, that which is put forward to hide the true state of things. It has the idea of an ulterior motive. Or in truth. In sincerity. Paul could not and would not condone false teaching, but he graciously could and would tolerate wrong motives. We find no resentment in Paul's part and no rebuke in his actions. Paul rose above petty jealousy and animosity. Christ was in control, and Paul was out of sight. Christ is preached. Paul was bound, but the Word of God was not bound (II Tim 2:9). And I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice. Paul rejoiced because Christ was being openly pro-

13 So that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places;

14 And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.

15 Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will:

16 The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds:

17 But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

18 What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

19 For I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, 20 According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.

21 For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

22 But if I live in the flesh, this is the claimed; not because of the wrong motive of some, but in spite of the wrong motive.

19. For I know that this shall turn to my salvation. Paul speaks of his deliverance and his preservation. He was being delivered from discouragement and spurred on to greater endeavors for Christ. He was experiencing victory and blessings in the midst of and in spite of his trials and his tribulations. It was Paul whom the Holy Spirit used to write, "tribulation worketh patience" (Rom 5:3). Through your prayer. Through your petition. Paul depended much on the intercession of God's people. And the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ. The ample supply comes as a result of the supplication. Note the cooperation of the human (petition) and the divine (ample supply). The Holy Spirit is both the gift and the giver.

20. According to my earnest expectation. The word translated earnest expectation (Gr apokaradokia) means to watch with the head erect and outstretched, to direct attention to anything, to wait for in suspense, anxious anticipation, intense desire, persistent expectation. The word is used only here and in Romans 8:19. It comes from the Greek terms apo (away from), kara (head), and dokeō (to watch closely). The idea of eagerness is intensified by (the Greek term apo), which implies abstraction. Paul's attention is drawn away from all other things and concentrated on one thing in order to see its very first appearance. That in nothing I shall be ashamed. Put to shame, disgraced. But that with all boldness. Boldness means freedom in speaking, fearless, confidence, cheerful courage, assurance, boldness. The absence of fear in speaking boldly was Paul's privilege as a slave of Jesus Christ. As always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body. Paul shrinks from using the first person (I will magnify Christ) lest he should seem to magnify himself. The Holy Spirit will use Paul as an instrument to glorify Christ. The idea is that the glory of Christ will be manifest to others through Paul. Paul desires to be a magnifying glass through whom others could more clearly see Christ in all His glory. Whether it be by life, or by death. Through life or through death. Paul's utter committal to magnify Christ is seen in his willingness to accomplish it through life or through death. The Holy Spirit will determine which means best suits His purpose.

2. Surrendering to Christ. 1:21-26.

21. For me to live is Christ. Christ lives in Paul (Gal 2:20) and is the source and sustainer of Paul's spiritual life (Col 3:4). Paul is in vital union with Christ and lives in devotion to Christ. And to die is gain. The Greek aorist tense implies the state after death; not the act of dying, but the consequences of dying. Death does not interrupt our conscious fellowship with Christ. The moment of absence here is the moment of presence there (II Cor 5:8). One of the martyrs said to his persecutors as they led him to death, "You take a life from me that I cannot keep, and bestow a life upon me that I cannot lose." The idea of gain is a precious thought on dying. After death Christians will collect the profits of their life's investments for Christ, and God pays rich dividends. It will be gain both in what we lose (sinful body, temptation, sorrow, sufferings, enemies, etc.) and in what we gain (glorified body, personal presence with Christ, joy, reunion with departed saints, etc.). Not all share Paul's view. Some would say to live is wealth, or knowledge, or fame, or fortune, or pleasure, or prestige, or power. But for Paul living in Christ: the commencement of life was being identified with Christ; the continuation of life was daily revelation of Christ; the conduct of life was self-renunciation for Christ; and the consummation of life will be transformation into the likeness of Christ.

22. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour. Paul speaks of life in the flesh because when he moves out of the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not.

23 For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:

24 Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.

25 And having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith;

26 That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me by my coming to you again.

27 Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one body, he will still be living. If to go on living in the flesh be Paul's lot, this will issue in more fruit from his work. Yet what I shall choose I wot not. This word wot or know (Gr gnōrizō) has two distinct meanings: transitive, to make known; intransitive, to know, to become acquainted with, to discover. Paul was in a dilemma concerning which to choose between life and death.

23. For I am in a strait betwixt two. The expression means to hold together, compress, constrain. Paul was hard-pressed. He was hemmed in on both sides and prevented from inclining either way because of the pressing in upon him from the two considerations. There is a desire to depart; there is a necessity to abide. There is a very strong reason for either choice; he is being pulled in both directions. Paul is in a dilemma and is held back from a decision. Having a desire to depart. This word (Gr anályō) means to unloose, to undo again, to depart. This word pictures the loosing of the tent pins for breaking up camp (cf. II Cor 5:1) or the loosing of the ship from its moorings, to lift anchor and sail away, sail away from earth to heaven, from time to eternity. And to be with Christ. The destination for which Paul yearns. There is no soul-sleeping; there is no intermediary probation. Which is far better. Very much better. By far the preferable. This is a double comparative and means literally by much more better. Labor for Christ is sweet, but rest with Christ will be sweeter. Whitfield said, "I am often weary in the work, but never weary of it." Paul was ready to go and willing to wait. Life has its attractions; death has its advantages. Paul desires to live and labor, preferring Christ's purpose.

24. Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you. It was necessary and indispensable for Paul to continue abiding in the flesh. Paul's eagerness to be a channel of blessing to the Philippians outweighs his desire for personal gain. He wants to finish the work God gave him to do (II Tim 4:6-8).

25. And having this confidence. Here the Greek perfect tense implies that Paul has been persuaded in time past, and presently thoroughly convinced with this settled conviction. I know that I shall abide and continue with you all. The preposition (Gr para) stresses the place of Paul's abiding, by the side of you all, denoting continuance in a certain place, or with certain persons, or in certain relations. For your furtherance and joy of faith. This states the purpose for which Paul will continue and remain with them. The word furtherance is the same word found in 1:12. Paul will continue abiding with them for the purpose of promoting the progressive advancement of their faith. Paul's purpose is twofold: progress of their faith and joy of their faith. Both words are connected by one definite article in Greek. It is the joy of the faith. Their progress will result in their joy.

26. That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me. The word rejoicing (Gr kauchēma) is exultation, that of which one glories or can glory, a matter or ground of glorying, reason for boasting. The word does not mean the act of glorying. Their exultation is the natural result of their joy. Paul desires that their exultation may constantly overflow, exceed a fixed number or measure, exist in abundance, be over and above, overflow. The sphere in which this blessing is enjoyed is in Christ Jesus, the only legitimate realm for glorying (I Cor 1:31). By my coming to you again. Paul refers to his own personal presence with them.

C. Rejoicing in Christian Living. 1:27-30.

27. Only. The emphatic position states Paul's purpose for which he desires to remain alive. Whatever may happen, make this your chief business. Let your conversation be. Keep on conducting yourselves. The word (Gr politeuō) means to be a citizen, behave as a citizen. Here the present imperative middle mind striving together for the faith of the gospel;

describes the subject as acting in reference to himself and for his own benefit, participating in the results of the action. This word is taken from the political life. The church at Philippi was a colony of heaven, and the members are commanded to walk as citizens of heaven, not by outward regulations, but by the power of the indwelling Holy Spirit. Their conduct is to reflect what Christ has done in them. They are to recognize their responsibilities and perform their obligations. God wants all of His children to be holy in character and conduct so that spiritual unity and power may be achieved. Our daily deportment should betray us as pilgrims and strangers down here and as citizens of that "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God" (Heb 11:10). A life worthy of the gospel is a life lived in the power of the Holy Spirit. It is the earthly walk of a heavenly man. Such consistency is: (1) the result of gospel disposition; (2) maintained by gospel principles; (3) conformable to gospel precepts; (4) resembles gospel patterns; and (5) possible through gospel power. That ye stand fast in one spirit. The idea is to keep one's ground in battle, and in order to do this, one must be settled on the firm foundation of the Rock of Ages. In one spirit means in the spirit of unity and harmony; for bickering, contention, and self-seeking hinder and mar the gospel witness. One spirit refers to that unity into which the church is fused by the presence and the power of the Holy Spirit (Eph 4:3-4). With one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel. To strive at the same time (Gr synathleō) with one another, to contend along with, share, or take part in a contest. There is to be a mutual striving together: side by side, shoulder to shoulder, and heart to heart. We get our word "athlete" from this word. The preposition (Gr syn) implies cooperation and coordination against common opposition. The Philippians are already contending with united effort, working as a team for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints (Jude 3). Every Christian is an important member of the team, an important link in an important chain extending the gospel of Christ. Christians are friends, not foes; co-workers, not competitors. Since the church has a common objective and a common adversary, Paul pleads for a consistent church, a united church, and a zealous church to resist the adversary, develop Christian graces, establish the true faith, and advance the gospel of Christ.

28 And in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of salvation, and that of God.

28. And in nothing terrified by your adversaries. The word terrified (Gr ptyrō) means to frighten, scare, alarm. This word was used of horses being scared and startled and turning about or springing aside. God wants fearless fighters with undaunted courage, who will not be startled or intimidated by anything. Such holy boldness is produced by the Holy Spirit. Your adversaries. Better, by those opposing you. Christians have adversaries. There is no middle ground; a person is either for Christ or against Him (Mt 12:30). Which is to them an evident token of perdition. This is a legal term denoting proof obtained by an appeal to the facts. The opposition of the adversaries was in fact strong evidence that they were rushing headlong into perdition. Perdition never means annihilation. Too bad they didn't realize their final destiny and flee from the wrath to come. But to you of salvation. The same evidence was a positive pledge of salvation to the Philippians. And that of God. Their salvation was from God. God is the source and origin of salvation.

29 For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake;

29. For unto you. To you who are striving and struggling. It is given. It is graciously granted. In the behalf of Christ. For His sake. Not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake. The Christian's privileges are to believe on Him and to suffer for Him, and always in that order. God confers upon us the high honor of suffering with Christ and for Christ (II Tim 2:12; 3:12). Christ suffered to provide salvation. God crowns the believing in His Son with the suffering for His Son (Mt 5:11-12). A glorious reward awaits all who suffer (II Cor 4:17).

30 Having the same conflict which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

30. Having the same conflict. The conflict (Gr agōn) signifies a contest of athletes or the inner conflict of the soul. The inner conflict is often the result of an outward conflict of struggle. Our word agony is derived from this word. Which ye saw in me. The Philippians saw Paul beaten and thrown into prison (Acts 16). And now hear to be in me. Paul was an example and an encouragement to the Philippians.

CHAPTER 2

IF there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies,

II. REJOICING IN CHRIST AS THE PATTERN OF LIFE. 2:1-30.

A. The Need of a Pattern. 2:1-4.

2:1. If. Since. Here we have a first-class conditional sentence expressing the condition as a fact in Greek. Since these things are blessed realities, how incongruous for any saint to act as if they were nonexistent. There be therefore. Paul is expanding the exhortation of 1:28. All the terms used in this verse get their coloring from that connection. Any consolation in Christ. Any exhortation. The word is always modified by the context. Paul is pleading for unity. Surely an exhortation in Christ must be heeded. If any comfort of love. Any consolation. The idea is to make things easier by speaking to a person in trouble. This is the encouragement of tender persuasiveness which love gives, an incentive to action (II Cor 5:14). Love is that unselfish, self-sacrificing love of John 3:16. If any fellowship of the Spirit. Any intimate partnership or joint participation. Such common interests and mutual, active participation are the results of the Holy Spirit's work. The fellowship of the Spirit is a blessed reality, not merely a beautiful idea. If any bowels and mercies. Bowels is the same word as we find in 1:8 and means tender-heartedness, tender mercies. Mercies means compassionate yearnings and action. These graces present in the lives of the Philippians will result in peace and in power. Unity will prevail, differences will be dissolved, bickerings will cease, and estrangements will be completely healed.

2 Fulfil ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.

2. Fulfill ye my joy. Fill up to the full. Paul wants his cup of joy full and running over. The Philippians can accomplish this by heeding Paul's admonitions and exhibiting the virtues to which he exhorts them. That ye be likeminded. That you all may keep on thinking the same thing. They are to be intent on one thing, one purpose. Having the same love. This unity of affection is the fruit of the Holy Spirit. Equally loving and being loved. Being of one accord. Literally, souls together. Souls knit together in love by the Holy Spirit, hearts beating in unison, unity in sentiment. Of one mind. Thinking one thing. Unity of thought and purpose. Unity is defined as something far deeper than: (1) consent to a common creed; (2) union in a form of worship; and (3) participation in a common task. It is unity of heart, soul, and mind. This is what Christ can and will do.

3 Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.

3. Let nothing be done through strife. Fictious strife, intriguing for office, a desire to put one's self forward, a partisan and factious spirit, self-seeking. Or vainglory. Empty, proud, or groundless self-esteem. Ambition and vanity will destroy the unity and harmony of a church. Paul's prohibitions are indicators of what is wrong, which he wishes to correct. Christians should seek the approval of God, not the applause of men. But in lowliness of mind. Humility of mind and deportment, a deep sense of one's littleness. This indicates self-forgetfulness in serving others, the spirit which most resembles Christ. The pathway to unity is lowly and lonely. Let each esteem other better than themselves. Go on regarding others above themselves. This is that Christlike spirit of humility which fixes its eyes on the excellency of others and judges them from that standpoint.

4 Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.

4. Look not every man on his own things. Keep an eye for the good of others. Have respect for, fix your attention upon with a desire for an interest in others. They were to be attentive to the interests of others as well as their own. Every member of the church should practice unselfishness and due consideration for all the others. But every man also on the things of others. Others is the keynote of these verses. This was the dominant feature in the life of our Lord who “came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many” (Mk 10:45). A man of the flesh “looks out for number one,” but a man of the Spirit lives in submission to Christ and in service to his fellowman.

B. Christ the Pattern. 2:5-11.

1. Preexistence of Christ. 2:5-6.

5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus:

5. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus. Keep on thinking this in you which was also in Christ Jesus. Paul says in I Corinthians 2:16, “We have the mind of Christ,” and here he exhorts the saints at Philippi to allow that mind to dominate and control their lives. When this is done, saints will not: (1) assert their own virtues; (2) defend their own rights; (3) promote their own selfish interests; or (4) live for themselves. Verse 5 introduces one of the most sublime and wonderful mysteries of the Scriptures, what is called the doctrine of the kenosis. This doctrine of our Lord’s self-emptying is used as an example and as an illustration of that lowliness of mind which should be the pattern for all the followers of Christ. Paul is stating accepted facts to enforce the obvious duties of humility and unselfish consideration of others.

6 Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God:

6. Who, being in the form of God. The word being (Gr hyparchō) is better translated existing or subsisting. This word is much stronger than the verb to be; it does not simply mean being but existing. Christ ever was, is, and ever shall be God. This word denotes prior existence (cf. Jn 1:1; Col 1:17). From all eternity the Son was co-existent, co-equal, and co-eternal with the Father. Christ existed in the form of God. This is the strongest Greek word (Gr morphē) to denote the exact image, the image of being and essence. It has no reference to the shape of a physical object, but refers to the expression of being. Christ is the brightness of God’s glory, “and the express image of his person” (Heb 1:3). Christ is not merely like God; He is God (Jn 1:1; Col 2:9). Form signifies the mode in which He expresses His divine essence. Form (Gr morphē) “always signifies a form which truly and fully expresses the being which underlines it” (H. A. A. Kennedy, The Epistle to the Philippians, p. 436). No creature could exist in the form of God, but Lucifer aspired to this (Isa 14:12-14). To give expression to the essence of deity implies the possession of deity. What Peter, James, and John witnessed on the Mount of Transfiguration was a glimpse of the outward expression of His deity (Mt 17:1-2). Christ’s own eternal self-manifesting characteristics were shining forth from His divine essence. Thought it not robbery. This word (Gr harpagmos) has two distinct meanings. One, a thing unlawfully seized, and two, a treasure to be clutched and retained. Christ did not cling to His prerogatives of His divine majesty, did not ambitiously display His equality with God. Christ waived His rights to: (1) express His deity; (2) display His divine attributes; and (3) demonstrate His equality with God. He did not regard His position as equal with God as something to be held onto, but as something to be relinquished for the redemption of man. He gave up His throne in glory for a cross of shame and suffering. To be equal with God. This confirms the meaning of form. Christ was on an equality with God. He laid aside His divine glory, but He did not and could not lay aside His divine nature. He laid aside the expression of deity, but He did not and could not lay aside His possession of deity. He laid aside His rights as the Son and took His place as a servant. He put aside the insignia of deity and put on the robes of humanity.

7 But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men:

2. Incarnation of Christ. 2:7-8.

7. But made himself of no reputation. He emptied Himself. He divested Himself of His prerogatives. We have an incomplete thought which leaves us with the question "of what?" Certainly not His deity, but only His divine prerogatives and privileges. He did not and could not cease to be God when He was made flesh (Jn 1:14). His deity remained throughout the whole course of His self-imposed humiliation. He gave up something that was His. Himself is accusative in Greek. He did not empty something from Himself, but He emptied Himself from something, i.e., the form of God. The figure presented is similar to pouring water from a pitcher into a glass. The form is different, but the substance remains the same. "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever" (Heb 13:8). Christ emptied Himself of His divine glory (Jn 17:3), but not of His divine nature. He emptied Himself of the self-manifestation of His divine essence. "He was not unable to assert equality with God. He was able not to assert it" (M. R. Vincent, Word Studies in the New Testament, p. 433). He stripped Himself of His expression of deity, but not His possession of deity. He restricted the outward manifestation of His deity. In His incarnation, He clothed Himself with humanity. He was like a king temporarily clothing himself in the garb of a peasant while still remaining king, even though it was not apparent. When Christ became incarnate, He was one person with two natures, divine and human, "each in its completeness and integrity, and that these two natures are organically and indissolubly united, yet so that no third nature is formed thereby. In brief, to use the antiquated dictum, orthodox doctrine forbids us either to divide the person or to confound the natures" (A. H. Strong, Systematic Theology, p. 673). Christ emptied Himself in order that He might fill us (II Cor 5:21; 8:9). And took upon him the form of a servant. The form of a slave refers to His mode of expression. He veiled Himself with humanity (Heb 2:14-18). The same divine person who existed in the form of God took on Himself the form of a slave. He who was the Sovereign manifested Himself as a slave. When He did this, His person did not change, only the mode of His expression. God refutes all claims of modernism that the Lord Jesus Christ emptied Himself of His deity. And was made in the likeness of men. Becoming in the likeness of men. The verb forms emptied, taking, and becoming are punctiliar aorists, expressing simultaneous, but not identical action. Becoming, as opposed to what He was by nature; entering into a new state. Likeness denies identity. It refers to an outward expression that is assumed from the outside and does not come from within. Likeness means similarity, but not sameness. Christ was not identical with man (not merely a man, and nothing else); He was the sinless Son of God, the God-man. Adam aspired to be like God; Christ condescended to be like man. His humanity was the vehicle through which he manifested Himself as a slave.

8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

8. And being found. Men discovered Him to appear as man. Men recognized Him as a true man. In fashion as a man. In appearance. The word form (Gr morphē) differs from fashion (Gr schēma) as that which is intrinsic from that which is outward. The contrast is between what He is in Himself (God) and what He appears to be in the eyes of men (man). Christ had all the qualities which Adam had before he sinned, but not the sinful nature which came through Adam's fall. He humbled himself. This is not the same as "He emptied Himself," but shows how the self-emptying manifested itself. His love for us prompted Him to voluntarily do this. And became obedient unto death. The mark of a slave is obedience. When slaves were executed they were crucified. Christ placed Himself on the same plane as the worst of criminals. The cross was a horrible death of shame and suffering. Christ's obedience was unto death and not to death. He never was death's slave, but death's master and 9 Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name:

10 That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth;

11 And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.

conqueror. Adam was disobedient unto death; Christ was obedient unto death (Rom 5:19). Christ's death was voluntary, vicarious, and victorious. Even the death of the cross. The most despised death of a condemned criminal on an accursed cross.

3. Exaltation of Christ. 2:9-11.

9. Wherefore. Because of His voluntary renunciation, obedience, and death (cf. Mt 23:12). God also hath highly exalted him. God exalted him supremely. Christ's exaltation is not only God's attestation of satisfaction in Christ's work, but also God's recognition of Christ's equality with God. Christ emptied Himself; God exalted Him. On earth Christ was God, but appeared as man, back in heaven. He retained His humanity, but He manifests His prerogatives of deity. God graciously granted to Him the name. On earth Christ was crowned with thorns (Mt 27:29), back in heaven He is crowned with glory and honor (Rev 5:12-14). And given him a name which is above every name. Probably "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev 19:16).

10. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow. Every created rational and moral being will bow in submission to Christ's lordship. Of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth. Heavenly ones, earthly ones, and subterranean ones. They refer to personal beings, not to impersonal things existing in heaven, existing upon the earth, and existing under the earth.

11. And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord. Every tongue shall profess openly that Christ is Lord. The word Lord is equivalent to the Old Testament word Jehovah. God made Him "both Lord and Christ" (Acts 2:36). Men may flaunt Christ's lordship here, but they will be compelled to acknowledge it hereafter. This will not result in their salvation. Subjugation is not reconciliation. When reconciliation is under consideration, only two spheres are mentioned, on earth and in the heavens (Col 1:20), but the things under the earth are omitted. This passage does not teach that ultimately all the lost will be saved, as taught by many cults. No future reconciliation for the lost is anywhere promised in the Word of God. To the glory of God the Father. God is glorified when men openly acknowledge Christ as Lord.

C. Example of Paul. 2:12-18.

12. Wherefore. So then. This refers to what precedes. Having the example of Christ's humility to guide us and the exaltation of Christ to encourage us. My beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence. There is always a tendency to relax obedience when the spiritual leader is absent, but the Philippians obeyed "much more" in Paul's absence. Work out. Keep on working out thoroughly in your own interests so as to achieve the desired results. Both freedom and responsibility are implied. In verses 12 and 13 we see divine sovereignty and human freedom in blessed cooperation. Our salvation is worked in by the Holy Spirit in answer to faith in God's promises and it is worked out by the Holy Spirit by our obedience to God's precepts. It is always a matter of trust and obey. The verse does not say "work for" your salvation. The Philippians had already been saved. Salvation is all of grace (Eph 2:8-10), but it is to be manifested in the daily life by glorifying Christ in everything. One must possess salvation first, and then work it out to its ultimate conclusion, namely, Christlikeness. No one can live the Christian life until he has Christ. It is not a matter of the imitation of Christ but the manifestation of Christ, the Holy Spirit reproducing the life of Christ in and through the believer. Your own salvation. Salvation is a personal relationship; it is a divine work accomplished at Calvary. Salvation should be viewed in three tenses: past, justification; present, sanctification; and future, glorification. With fear and trembling. These two words describe the anxiety of the person who distrusts his own ability to meet all the requirements, but nevertheless does his best to discharge his duty. This is not slavish fear, but wholesome, serious caution. It is the constant apprehension of the deceitfulness of the heart, taking heed lest we fall (I Cor 10:12); or stop short of the final goal (II Pet 1:1-11). It is that desirable distrust of our own self-sufficiency and the consciousness that all depends on the grace of God. It is not fear of being lost, but fear of the failure of not walking in lowliness of mind, in true humility, and in unflinching obedience. It is fear of all that would rob us of our spiritual vitality and spiritual victory and of shrinking from all carelessness in matters of faith and life.

13. For it is God which worketh in you. For God is the one continually working effectually in you. This word is used in Galatians 2:8 (wrought effectually) and in I Thessalonians 2:13 (effectually worketh). We are God's workmanship (Eph 2:10). Both to will and to do. To keep on willing and to keep on working. God is the source of all we need. The Holy Spirit dwelling within makes the abundant life a reality (not merely a possibility). The energy of God enables a Christian to desire God's will and replace the Christian's weakness with the needed power. "Paul has no sympathy with a cold and dead orthodoxy of formalism that knows nothing of struggling and growth. He exhorts as if he were an Arminian in addressing men. He prays as if he were a Calvinist in addressing God, and feels no inconsistency in the two attitudes. Paul makes no attempt to reconcile divine sovereignty and human free agency, but boldly proclaims both" (A. T. Robertson, Word Pictures in the New Testament, Vol. IV, p. 446). Of his good pleasure. For the sake of His good pleasure—His sovereign and gracious purpose.

14. Do all things without murmurings. Keep on doing all things apart from murmuring. Murmurings mean to mutter, to murmur, an expression of secret and solemn discontent. This word (Gr gongysmos) appears many times in the LXX (Septuagint) of the children of Israel in the wilderness and refers to their stubborn spirit. And disputings. Disputings refer to the thinking of a man deliberately with himself, rationalizing and calculating. This word is translated "imagination" in Romans 1:21. It has two distinct meanings: (1) inward questionings; and (2) outward disputings or discussions. Used here in the first sense it implies a doubtful spirit. We get our word dialogue from this word. The Christian is called to unquestioned submission to God's will.

15. That ye may be blameless and harmless. That ye may become blameless, faultless, without defect, deserving no censure. This refers to outward conduct, and presents the idea of a person in whom no grace is defective. It is that moral integrity as expressing itself outwardly. The word harmless means sincere, unmixed, pure, unadulterated. It refers to the inward, intrinsic character. This word is used of unalloyed metal. It describes the saint with not one thing in his heart or motives which ought not to be there. The sons of God. Better, the children of God. This stresses the dignity and character of the relationship. Children of God are expected to resemble their Father. Without rebuke. Better, without blemish. In the midst of a crooked and perverse nation. Crooked means forward, perverse, wicked (in the sense of departing from the truth). This describes the outward perverted conduct of their generation, crooked in mind, heart, and action, bent in all directions. The word perverse (Gr diastrephō) is a perfect passive participle and can be translated having been turned out of the way. The Greek perfect tense expresses the existence of a completed action. The word means to warp, twist, corrupt, distort, pervert, turn out of the way.

13 For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

14 Do all things without murmurings and disputings:

15 That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world;

16 Holding forth the word of life; that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.

17 Yea, and if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all.

18 For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me.

19 But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Ti-mō'the-us shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state.

20 For I have no man likeminded, who will naturally care for your state.

21 For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's.

Among whom ye shine. Among whom ye are appearing. This refers not to the act of shining, but to the fact of appearing, being recognized as God's children. As lights in the world. As luminaries. Christ is the light of the world (Jn 8:12) and His followers are luminaries (Mt 5:14-16; Eph 5:8), light-bearers, reflecting His light (II Cor 4:6). The picture is that of a procession at night, in a crooked and distorted age, in which torchbearers are going and holding high the blazing torches, so that those following can see how to walk in this sin-darkened world.

16. Holding forth the word of life. The world does not have this Word of Life. Apart from the Word of God, all are spiritually dead (Jn 6:63; I Pet 1:23). There is a connection between life and light. Christ is both the light (Jn 8:16) and the life (Jn 14:6). Christians are to be continually holding forth the Word of Life; they are to offer God's salvation to a lost and dying world. This explains how the saints at Philippi are luminaries. That I may rejoice in the day of Christ. That I may have cause of glorying or a ground of boasting and exultation. That I have not run in vain, neither labored in vain. The word run means to progress freely and advance rapidly. The idea is to spend one's strength in performing or attaining something. The word labored means toil with wearisome effort. It refers to laboring to the point of exhaustion. Paul did not want his life to be without fruit or an empty failure.

17. Yea, and if I be offered. But even if I am being poured out as a libation. In the passive, this word (Gr spendō) means to be in the act of being sacrificed. "The Philippians are the priests; their faith (or their good works springing from their faith) is a sacrifice: St. Paul's life-blood the accompanying libation" (J. B. Lightfoot, St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians, p. 119). And service of your faith. Ministration of your faith. This word (Gr leitourgia) is used of a priest's ministration of a sacrifice. I joy, and rejoice with you all. I am going on rejoicing together with you all.

18. For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me. Keep on rejoicing together with me.

D. Example of Timothy. 2:19-24.

19. But I trust in the Lord Jesus. Paul was hoping to send Timothy, and his hope is founded on faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and all of his plans and purposes center in Christ. To send Timothy shortly unto you. Paul was hoping to send Timothy to be a channel of blessing for the personal benefit of the Philippians, and to learn firsthand just how they were getting along. That I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state. Paul is facing possible death and yet he is more concerned over the affairs of the Philippian saints than over his own affairs. He longs for news from his Christian friends which will encourage him.

20. For I have no man likeminded. Not even one was available at this time. There were some of Paul's fellow workers who were not with him in Rome. The word likeminded means equal in soul. Timothy's pastoral concern (shepherd-heart) was a gift from the Holy Spirit, and no one with Paul was so competent or so willing to serve Christ and His church. Who will naturally care for your state. Or who genuinely will care for your state. The word care for (Gr merimnaō) means to be anxious, solicitous, be troubled with care, extend careful thought, feel an interest in, concern one's self, seek to promote someone's interest. Timothy was spiritually qualified to promote the interest of Christ and His church and is an example for all Christians.

21. For all seek their own. They are constantly seeking after their own affairs. All without exception were striving after, looking for, and searching for their own things. Paul does not say they are not saved, but they are not so self-sacrificing as Timothy. Some will help only when Christ's gain is compatible with their own. So few have a genuine dedication to Christ and an unselfish devotion to His church. Not the things which are Jesus Christ's. It is possible to be an admired and eloquent speaker and yet be a self-seeker, using God's gifts for personal aggrandizement, and not sincerely. These were not pursuing Christ's interest and glory, but allowing their own interests to interfere. Therefore the Philippians should appreciate Timothy all the more.

22 But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel.

22. But ye know the proof of him. The proven worth, that by which something is tried or proved, a specimen of tried worth. It refers to that which has met the test and has been approved, the sterling life, love, and loyalty of Timothy. That as a son with the father. This refers to the personal relationship, the reciprocal affection, and the closest companionship between Paul and Timothy. He hath served with me in the gospel. Better, he has discharged the duties of a slave.

23 Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me.

23. Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me. As soon as Paul gets a clear view of his own circumstances relative to his trial, he plans to send Timothy.

24 But I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly.

24. But I trust in the Lord. I have been persuaded. Paul reached this settled conviction through communion with Christ. Paul's confidence and hope are in Christ. That I also myself shall come shortly. Paul was confident that he also would soon come to Philippi.

E. Example of Epaphroditus. 2:25-30.

25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you E-pāph-ro-dī'tus, my brother, and companion in labour, and fellowsoldier, but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants.

25. Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus. Suppose (Gr hēgeomai) means to consider, regard, think. This is a word that refers to the decision made after weighing all the facts. My brother speaks of common origin and parenthood. And companion in labor. Fellow worker, cooperator. And fellow soldier. Paul emphasized Christian brotherhood and regards the Christian life as that of a soldier of Jesus Christ (II Tim 2:3-4). But your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants. Your apostle and your minister. The word apostle has a dignified tone. Epaphroditus was sent on a mission with a specific commission to minister to Paul's needs on behalf of the church. The word minister means a servant, one who ministers, acts as an official, public servant, or engages in a priestly service. Epaphroditus was duly commissioned and officially appointed by the church.

26 For he longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick.

26. For he longed after you all, and was full of heaviness. Because he was desiring earnestly to see you all and being depressed. The word translated full of heaviness (Gr adēmoneō) means to be depressed or rejected, be troubled, distressed, full of anguish or sorrow. This word is used of Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane (Mt 26:37; Mk 14:33). The word does not refer to homesickness, but to the discomfort and distress of not being at home. Epaphroditus was aggravated and full of heaviness because the Philippians heard that he fell sick. Because that ye had heard that he had been sick. Epaphroditus became ill, but he did not quit working.

27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

27. For indeed he was sick nigh unto death. His illness nearly proved fatal. But God had mercy on him. God had compassion and intervened and granted recovery no doubt in answer to prayer. And not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow. The word sorrow (Gr lypē) means pain, distress, grief, afflictions. The heaping up of one thing upon another, with the idea of accumulation. This would have been true if to Paul's bonds and trials had been added the death of his friend and benefactor.

28 I sent him therefore the more carefully, that, when ye see him again, ye

28. I sent him therefore the more carefully. Or the more earnestly, diligently, hastily. Sooner than might otherwise have been expected. That, when ye see him again, ye may rejoice.

PHILIPPIANS 2:29

may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and hold such in reputation:

30 Because for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service toward me.

CHAPTER 3

FINALLY, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe.

2 Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers, beware of the concision.

That ye may recover your cheerfulness, which had been marred by the news of Epaphroditus' illness. That I may be the less sorrowful. More free from sorrow. Paul would be more relieved than he would otherwise be. He would have one burden lifted from his heart. If the Philippians have the joy of seeing Epaphroditus again, Paul's own troubles will be lessened, but his prior sorrow (prison, trial) will remain for the present.

29. Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness. Receive him to yourselves. And hold such in reputation. Keep on holding him in high honor.

30. Because for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death. He drew near, approached death. This means that Epaphroditus was at the point of death. Not regarding his life. Having thrown by the side his life. This (Gr paraboleuomai) is a gambling term and was used when a person placed all his money on one throw of the dice. Epaphroditus threw down a stake and gambled his life recklessly in the service of Christ and in his devotion to the Apostle Paul. To supply your lack of service toward me. That he might fill up to the full the deficiency of your sacred ministration to me. The Philippians were unavoidably absent, so Epaphroditus, as their personal representative, did what they would have done if they had been with Paul. There is no reproach. They lacked the opportunity, not the will. All that was wanting was their ministration in person, which distance prevented them from rendering.

III. REJOICING IN CHRIST AS THE PRIZE OF LIFE. 3:1-21.

A. True Goal of Life. 3:1.

3:1. Finally. Literally, for the rest. My brethren, rejoice in the Lord. Keep on constantly rejoicing in the Lord. Paul exhorts them to be joyful Christians. Rejoicing in the Lord is much more than rejoicing in His grace and in His gifts, much more than rejoicing in our salvation and in our service. To write the same things to you. To go on writing the same counsel. To me indeed is not grievous. Not irksome, not troublesome. It was not wearisome for Paul to repeat his warnings of lurking dangers. But for you it is safe. It means your safety.

B. False Goal of Legalism. 3:2-14.

2. Beware. Keep a watchful eye always, constantly look out for. Dogs (Gr kuōn). The word used here is not that of a household pet (Mt 15:26), but the prowling wild dogs, without a home and without an owner. They were scavengers which ate garbage; they were vicious, attacking every passerby; they were unclean, mangy, flea-ridden dogs. Paul is referring to the false teachers who boasted in their religion, trusted in human attainment rather than divine atonement, trusted in the works of man rather than in the grace of God. They perverted the gospel and substituted something else for the blood of Christ. These false teachers dogged Paul's footsteps, snapping and snarling, biting and barking. Beware of evil workers. Deceitful workers (II Cor 11:13). They were mischief-makers who disturbed both the faith and the peace of believers. They were wolves in sheep's clothing, deceiving, deluding, and destroying the flock. Beware of the concision. Beware of the mutilation (Gr katatomē) in contrast to circumcision (Gr peritomē). Paul refers to those who are not of the true circumcision (Rom 2:28-29; Col 2:11; Eph 2:11) as merely mutilated. Circumcision has no spiritual value in itself. There were those who followed the law, but had no heart for God. They substituted circumcision for the new birth, and rested in the rite without the reality, and trusted in the sign without having the substance. Thus Paul gives a warning against false teachers.

3. For we are the circumcision. Paul presents the true posi-

3 For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

tion of the Christian. We who believe in Christ have the true spiritual circumcision of the heart. True circumcision is spiritual, not physical; inward, not outward; reality, not a rite. Which worship God in the spirit. Worship by, or render sacred service by, the Holy Spirit. Christians practice priestly service in a spiritual ministry. Their service is inspired by the Holy Spirit, guided by the Holy Spirit, and supported by the Holy Spirit. Sacred service is of the heart, not by ordinances and traditions. And rejoice in Christ Jesus. Better, glory or exalt in Christ Jesus, not in external ceremonies or legal observances. Let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord (I Cor 1:31). And have no confidence in the flesh. Have no settled persuasion in trusting in the flesh or of relying upon external ceremonies. We have not placed confidence in anything of a fleshy nature. Christians expect nothing from the flesh. The flesh is always flesh; it is always corrupt; it is never improved; it is never changed. One may educate it, or reform it, or give it religion, but it is still flesh. "They that are in the flesh cannot please God" (Rom 8:8).

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more:

4. Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. Paul now presents his pedigree. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more. Paul claims to have more ground for boasting than anyone else.

5 Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee;

5. Circumcised the eighth day. Ishmaelites were circumcised in the thirteenth year, proselytes from Gentiles in mature age, but Jews on the eighth day (Lev 12:3). Of the stock of Israel. Paul was not a proselyte; he was not grafted into the covenant race. Paul's parents were Jews. Of the tribe of Benjamin. Not one of the so-called lost tribes, but the tribe that gave Israel their first king, and the tribe that remained true to the Davidic throne when other tribes rebelled. A Hebrew of the Hebrews. A full-blooded Jew of Hebrew parents, who retained Hebrew customs and characteristics, as distinct from the Hellenistic Jews (Acts 6:1). Paul was educated at the feet of Gamaliel in Jerusalem and was proficient in the Hebrew language and the Hebrew Scriptures. As touching the law, a Pharisee. In distinction from the Saducees. Paul was of the straightest and strictest sect.

6 Concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless.

6. Concerning zeal, persecuting the church. Paul was a zealot of Judaism and against Christianity. He was the ring-leader from the death of Stephen until his own conversion (Acts 8:1-9:9). Paul was a conscientious, relentless, persistent persecutor of the Christians. Touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless. Paul observed the fine points of the law. He was blameless, faultless, and beyond reproach. He knew and practiced the rules of the rabbi. He scored one hundred percent in Judaism.

7 But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

7. But what things were gain to me. Gains (plural), assets, profits, anything that would be an advantage. Paul had natural pride in his Jewish attainment. But all these assets did not save him, justify him, give him peace, nor bring him into fellowship with God. Those I counted loss for Christ. All those things were on the wrong side of the ledger. They were as worthless stock, and Paul renounced and relinquished them all for Christ. Paul did not exchange one religion for another; he did not exchange one creed for another; he did not exchange one system of rites for another. The word counted (Gr hēgeomai) is in the perfect tense and means that Paul had counted, and at the moment of writing, he still counted all things lost for Christ, not for Christianity, but for Christ crucified, buried, risen, and glorified. Christ alone meets the needs of a soul; Christ alone meets the demands of God's righteous judgment. Paul had no reserve, no retreat, no regrets.

8 Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all

8. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss. The word count here is in the present tense. Paul says I am still counting all things but loss. For the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord. Literally, the surpassing superiority of things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ.

9 And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith:

10 That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;

11 If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

12 Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, the personal experiential knowledge of Christ, the personal relationship with Him. Excellency is the priceless privilege and the exceeding value of knowing Christ. For whom I suffered the loss of all things. Paul was willing to count everything else as a liability and as a disadvantage. And do count them but dung. Refuse of any kind, useless, worthless, and harmful. That I may win Christ. Better, gain Christ. Christ is the only item on the credit side of Paul's ledger.

14 I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

9. And be found in him. Discovered to be united to Him and in union with Him. Such union with Christ is real, vital, and fruit-bearing. One is either in Christ or out of Christ. The first question God ever asked man was, "Adam, where art thou?" Not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law. A righteousness of mine own, by works, by strict observance of the law, a righteousness that is self-achieved by a series of "do's" and "don't's." Such self-righteousness is worthless. It is the opposite of the righteousness which is of God by faith. This righteousness is derived from God, obtained by faith, and is of infinite value.

10. That I may know him. Not speculate about Him, but know Him. Paul desires a fuller and a richer experience in the knowledge of Christ. Everything else fades into worthlessness before this knowledge which makes Christ Jesus one's Lord. And the power of his resurrection. That power exercised when God raised Christ from the dead. Such power is available (Eph 1:19-20) and imparted by the indwelling, risen Christ. And the fellowship of his sufferings. Or the joint-partnership in His sufferings. Being made conformable unto his death. Christians are to live as those who died with Christ (Rom 6:6-8) and who have been raised to a newness of life (Rom 6:4).

11. If by any means I might attain. Not implying uncertainty; there is no doubt about the realization. The only uncertainty is as to how Paul is going to attain unto the resurrection of the dead: by a martyr's death, by a nonviolent death, or by the Rapture. Sufferings cannot daunt Paul; death cannot terrorize him. These are just opportunities for a fuller and a richer fellowship with Christ.

12. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect. Paul disclaims perfection; he had made great progress in Christlikeness, but the goal is still before him and not behind him. But I follow after. I am pressing on. Paul is encouraged, not discouraged, as he keeps up the chase in pursuit of the goal. If that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. If I may lay hold of that for which I was laid hold of by Christ Jesus. Christ laid hold of Paul on the road to Damascus, and Paul's desire is to lay hold of Christ's purpose for his life. God desires to reveal His Son in Paul (Gal 1:16). Paul desires a fuller apprehension of Christ, a fuller appropriation of Christ, and a fuller appreciation of Christ.

13. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended. To have grasped completely. But this one thing I do. Paul had a singleness of purpose. Paul's life was summed up in 1:21 where he said, "for me to live is Christ." Nothing could distract Paul and nothing could divert Paul from this one thing. Forgetting those things which are behind. Both his old pre-Christian life and his previous progress as a Christian. Paul had no time for the past and scant attention for the present. The future goal claims all of his attention and all his efforts. It is good to forget all that hinders and to remember all that helps. And reaching forth unto those things which are before. Paul was stretching himself out toward the goal, as a runner as he breaks down to the finish line, straining every nerve and muscle.

14. I press toward the mark. Paul was constantly bearing down upon the goal. For the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Paul found no time to relax; he found someone worth living for. Everything else was a waste of time and energy.

Note it is the high calling of God or the upward calling. It was a call from heaven and a call to heaven. It was a call to be like Christ and some day to be with Christ. Paul is in hot pursuit of Christlikeness.

C. False Goal of Antinomianism. 3:15-21.

15 Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.

15. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded. As many as are spiritually mature, full grown. This does not mean sinless perfection. We have not attained perfection. If in anything ye be otherwise minded. If ye think that ye are perfect. God shall reveal even this unto you. Such cases are turned over to God. There are three stages of perfection: First, there is positional perfection or justification (Heb 10:14; Col 2:10). Secondly, there is progressive perfection, or sanctification (II Cor 7:1; Eph 4:11-12; Gal 3:3). Thirdly, there is ultimate perfection in heaven or glorification (Eph 5:27; I Jn 3:1-2). The Philippians were not all mature; some were satisfied with low attainment and others with a medium attainment. But Paul says God will reveal this to them.

16 Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

16. Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule. We need to continue in the same straight path in which we have been walking, guided by the same divine truths and the unchanging principles of faith. We need to hold on to what we have and then strive to go higher.

17 Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample.

17. Brethren, be followers together of me. Keep on becoming imitators together of me. Paul is asking them to mimic his good example. Paul lived Christ and Paul preached Christ. It was on this basis that Paul told the Philippians to imitate him (I Cor 11:1). And mark them which walk so as ye have us for an example. Observe attentively and follow them as a pattern or model. Paul says keep your eye on your guide.

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ:

18. For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping. Paul had warned them repeatedly even weeping in deep emotion as he warned them of the enemy. That they are the enemies of the cross of Christ. Paul was not talking about erring Christians, but non-Christians. He referred to the anti-legalists, those who were a law unto themselves. They confessed Christ with their lips, but denied Christ with their lives. They taught and practiced loose living; they confused liberty with license. They taught freedom from sin, but really meant freedom to sin. They were religious and made a pretense of piety, but they denied the cross, loved the world, and lived after the flesh.

19 Whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.)

19. Whose end is destruction. Paul now gives us a description of the enemies of the cross. Paul states the plain, terrible fact that their end is doom and destruction, eternal ruin from the presence of God (II Thess 1:9). They do not realize that they are on the road to hell. Whose God is their belly. They admit of no one higher than themselves, and they worship themselves. They live for self-indulgence, for comfort, and for convenience. And whose glory is in their shame. Their glory is their shameless conduct. They boast of liberty, yet are slaves to Satan, sin, and self. Who mind earthly things. They are living for this world only. They are completely occupied with the material, not the spiritual; with the earthly, not the heavenly.

20 For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ:

20. For our conversation is in heaven. Our citizenship is in heaven. Heaven is the Christian's home; he is only temporarily in this world. The church is really a colony of heaven: our names are enrolled in heaven; we are under heaven's government; we share heaven's glory; we enjoy heaven's honor. Heavenly conduct should mark the Christian. Our allegiance is to Jesus Christ. From whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. We wait with eager expectation for the Second Coming of Christ. This is the normal attitude of a citizen of heaven. This expectancy of His coming should spur us on to higher and holier giving and living. The greatest event in a

THEREFORE, my brethren dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved.

2 I beseech Eū-ō'dī-as, and beseech Sŷn'tŷ-che, that they be of the same mind in the Lord.

colony was the visit of the emperor. Our blessed hope is in the coming of Christ: it is our daily delight; it is our earnest expectation; it is our eager longing. The blessed hope motivates heavenly living (I Jn 3:1-3).

21. Who shall change our vile body. Who shall fashion anew our body of humiliation, the body suited for this world, but not for the next. These earthly bodies are subject to disease, death, and decay. That it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body. Conformed to the body of His glory, the body in which He appears in His present glorified state. According to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Better subject, not merely subdue, all things unto Himself.

IV. REJOICING IN CHRIST AS THE POWER OF LIFE. 4:1-23.

A. Steadfastness in Christ. 4:1-3.

4:1. Therefore. For this reason. My brethren dearly beloved. This is the same word used when God spoke of Christ at His baptism (Mt 3:17). And longed for. These brethren were loved and longed for. Paul had a strong yearning to see them face to face. My joy and crown. They were his joy because he had won them to Christ; they will be his crown of reward or wreath of victory at the Second Coming (I Thess 2:19). So stand fast in the Lord. Keep on standing firm and hold on to your present possession and your heavenly hopes. They were tempted to deflection, and standing firm is difficult when a panic starts.

2. I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche. Euodias means "prosperous journey" and Syntyche means "pleasant acquaintance." These two were women of prominence, leadership, and capability. But they had had a quarrel which is the fruit of the flesh. Paul beseeches or better exhorts or admonishes these two women. He does not use his apostolic authority. Pride, stubbornness, and ambition for prominence usually get in the way of reconciliation. These two women had not been pulling together, and both were equally at fault and were not good examples. That they be of the same mind in the Lord. That they agree in the Lord. No doubt they had minds of their own. Paul admonishes them to be of the same mind in the Lord, to think the same thing. Peace and unity must be preserved. It is inconsistent for two Christians to be at variance when they are in Christ; but stubborn pride and selfish ambition get in the way. Christians should be able to resolve their differences, for the scriptural cure is natural, simple, and easy.

3. And I entreat thee also, true yokefellow. It is not known who this peacemaker was. A yokefellow is one who pulls well in double harness. Help those women which labored with me in the gospel. Take hold with and lend a helping hand to those women in their efforts to settle their differences and to be reconciled. Paul states that they had labored with him in the gospel. They had earnestly contended in cooperation by the side of Paul. They did not usurp the place of man (I Tim 2:12), but they supplemented Paul's ministry (Tit 2:3-4). Women have access that men do not have, and they have abilities that men do not have, especially in reaching other women and children for Christ. With Clement also, and with other my fellow-laborers, whose names are in the book of life. Hence they are real Christians in spite of their bickerings.

B. Rejoicing in Christ's Peace. 4:4-9.

4. Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice. The Christian is not gloomy, but glorious. The keynote of this book is joy. Paul exhorts them to keep on rejoicing. Paul kept on rejoicing whether he were in prison or in the palace; in prosperity or in adversity; in health or in sickness. Joy is a fruit of the 5 Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand.

6 Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.

7 And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

8 Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

9 Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you.

Spirit and is the result of peace with God (Rom 5:1-2). Joy drives out discord and is contagious. Christians rejoice because they are in living union with Christ.

5. Let your moderation. Your forbearance, considerateness, graciousness, gentleness, sweet reasonableness; overlooking the faults and failures of others. This is the opposite of stubbornness and thoughtlessness. The Lord is at hand. Christ may come at any moment (Jas 5:7-9).

6. Be careful for nothing. Stop being anxious and do not have the habit of worrying. In days of tension and trouble, in days of frustration and failure, instead of worrying, take it to the Lord in prayer. But in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. Prayer is the essence of worship and devotion. Supplication is entreating, earnest pleading for personal needs. Prayer is a general term; supplication is definite and detailed. Thanksgiving should always accompany a prayer or a petition. Thanksgiving for past blessings is good preparation for successful supplications. Care and prayer are mutually opposed. We should be anxious for nothing, prayerful for everything, and thankful for anything. "Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you" (1 Pet 5:7).

7. And the peace of God. This is more than peace with God (Rom 5:1); it is a peace which God has and which Christ gives (Jn 14:27). The peace of God comes to a child of God who trusts and prays. All Christians have peace with God, and all Christians may have the peace of God, i.e., that inward tranquility of soul grounded in God's presence, God's promise, and God's power. One may have peace with God without having the peace of God. Peace with God is dependent upon faith, and peace of God is dependent upon prayer. Peace with God describes the state between God and the Christian, and the peace of God describes the condition within the Christian. Which passeth all understanding. Which surpasses all power of human reason or comprehension (Eph 3:20). The peace of God in the Christian will keep peace in the church. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee" (Isa 26:3). The Christian can put everything into God's hand and let the peace of God rule in his heart (Col 3:15). Shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Shall keep safely and continually, garrison, stand guard as an armed sentinel.

8. Finally. In conclusion. Whatsoever. Whatsoever introduced six adjectives picturing old-fashioned Christian ideas. True. Resting on reality and aiming at reality. Honest. Honorable, dignified, worthy of reverence, the combination of gravity and dignity. Just. Righteous relations between man and man, and man and God. Pure. Stainless, chaste, unsullied. Lovely. Lovable, endearing, amiable, gracious, charming, pleasing, winsome. Of good report. Attractive, fair speaking. If there be any virtue. Mental, moral, and physical excellence. If there be any praise. Anything praiseworthy, deemed worthy of praise. Think on these things. Meditate on them with careful reflection, not casually and superficially, but constantly and logically. "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he" (Prov 23:7). Noble thinking produces noble living; high thinking produces high living; and holy thinking produces holy living. All these noble qualities were exemplified in Christ and are produced by the Holy Spirit.

9. Those things . . . do. Paul was the interpreter of the spiritual life, and his life at Philippi was an illustration of this high and holy thinking. Paul lived what he preached, and he preached by his living. His life spoke more eloquently than his lips. The Philippians can safely follow Paul's example and exhortation. He urges them to keep on doing and practicing those things; converting creed into conduct and profession into per-10 But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity.

11 Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content.

12 I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.

13 I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.

14 Notwithstanding ye have well done, that ye did communicate with my affliction.

15 Now ye Phi-lip'pi-an's know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.

formance. And the God of peace shall be with you. God will be with you in this turbulent, tempestuous world and bring unity and harmony to you and through you to the church.

C. Rejoicing in Christ's Provisions. 4:10-19.

10. But I rejoice in the Lord greatly. The Philippians had sent a love offering and Paul's cup of joy overflowed. But Paul rejoiced in the Lord, not their gift. Your care of me hath flourished again. Literally, you caused your thinking of me to bloom afresh. Their care not only blossomed again, but it bore fruit. Wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity. Ye were continually taking thought, but, through no fault of your own, you lacked opportunity. Paul traveled far and communication was slow. The Philippians did not lack love, but the opportunity to express it. They had not forgotten Paul; they had not failed Paul.

11. Not that I speak of respect of want. Paul's commendation was not a complaint in disguise; he was not hinting for another gift. Paul does not need gifts to rejoice. Joy is not dependent on outward circumstances, but on the indwelling Christ. Paul's joy bubbles from within, not from without. For I have learned. He did not always know this precious truth; he learned it through long, hard experience. In whatsoever state I am. In prison and in chains; in want and in hunger. Therewith to be content. Self-sufficient, not needing outside help, able to make ends meet. Paul was totally independent of man because he was totally dependent upon God. Paul's satisfaction and sufficiency were in Christ (II Cor 12:9).

12. I know both how to be abased. Humbled, having very little, and running low as a river in a drought, facing poverty. And I know how to abound. Overflow in an abundance, having more than enough, facing prosperity. I am instructed both to be full. Well-fed with a seven-course dinner. And to be hungry. Suffer need. Paul had been in God's school of discipline, and earned his advance degree by taking post-graduate courses in difficulty. Paul was a victor over every circumstance, not a victim to any circumstance. He adjusted well to the will of God.

13. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. In all things I continue to be strong by the One who infuses the power into me. Paul has such strength as long as Christ keeps pouring the power (Gr dynamis) into him. A living Christ on the inside is more than sufficient to endure the circumstances on the outside. What Christ wants Paul to do, Christ enables Paul to do. Where the finger of God points, the hand of God provides the way.

14. Notwithstanding ye have well done. Paul commends the Philippians for their loving care in relieving his sufferings. They had avoided such dangers as: (1) the deceitfulness of riches, which choked the Word; (2) contentment in their own circumstances; (3) carelessness about the needs of others; and (4) unfaithfulness in their obligations in stewardship. That ye did communicate with my affliction. They became fellow partakers in common with Paul in the furtherance of the gospel. Paul's needs were real and his appreciation was sincere.

15. In the beginning of the gospel. In the early days of Paul's missionary work he left Philippi. No church communicated with me. No other church had partnership with Paul or supported him. Paul depended upon God, and God depended upon faithful stewards. Only the church at Philippi was thoughtful in sharing and generous in giving. Concerning giving and receiving. Paul uses bookkeeping terms to express their dealings with him. Paul did not have to keep books with any other church at that time. Later Thessalonica and Berea joined in supporting Paul (II Cor 11:8). Not even Antioch contributed anything other than prayers and good wishes.

16 For even in Thēs-sa-lo-nī'ca ye sent once and again unto my necessity.

17 Not because I desire a gift: but I desire fruit that may abound to your account.

18 But I have all, and abound: I am full, having received of E-pāph-ro-dī-tus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, wellpleasing to God.

19 But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

16. For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity. Twice while Paul was in Thessalonica the Philip-pians contributed toward his needs.

17. Not because I desire a gift. This is delicate courtesy; Paul is not seeking another gift. But I desire fruit that may abound to your account. The fruit is the returns on their investments. God is a good bookkeeper; He will settle all accounts, and He pays big dividends.

18. But I have all, and abound. More than enough. You have paid me in full. I am full. I have been filled and am still full, supplied and satisfied. Having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you. The Philip-pians' stewardship was a barometer of their spiritual condition. One can give without loving, but he cannot love without giving. Love takes the stew out of stewardship. The love gift pleased God, relieved Paul, and enriched the Philip-pians. An odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God. Their generosity was like a sweet fragrance (cf. Gen 8:20-21; Ex 29:18).

19. But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus. The Philip-pians had met Paul's need out of their poverty by Epaphroditus; God will meet their need out of His riches by Christ Jesus. We see first of all in this verse a great need. God promises to meet all of their need, not all of their wishes, wants, or whims. Men have physical needs, mental needs, social needs, economic needs. Men have not only temporal needs, but spiritual and eternal needs. Men need perpetual pardon, perpetual peace, and perpetual power. Secondly, we see in this verse a great helper. Paul says But my God. Paul could not repay the Philip-pians, but God could and would. Paul does not say my God can supply all your needs, but my God shall supply all your needs. This was Paul's personal testimony and confession of faith. We see next a great Supplier. There is a total supply for a total need. God's supply is infinite, abundant, inexhaustible, limitless, boundless. God many times uses the agencies of men to meet our needs. Next we see great resources. God's riches in glory. Paul says according to his riches, not out of His riches, not off the top. God's supply is not according to our deserts, but according to His mercy; not out of debt, but out of grace; not according to our emptiness, but according to His fullness; not according to our poverty, but according to His wealth. God has great riches. Lastly, look at the great and glorious channel by Christ Jesus. "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time" (I Tim 2:5-6). There is no other Mediator; there is no other channel. With such precious truth before us there can only be concurrence with the past, contentment with the present, and confidence for the future.

D. Benediction. 4:20-23.

20 Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

21 Salute every saint in Christ Jesus. The brethren which are with me greet you.

22 All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Cæsar's household.

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

20. Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen. This doxology flows out of the joy of the epistle. For ever and ever means unto the ages of the ages.

21. Salute every saint. No partiality here. In Christ. Every saint is in vital union with Christ. The brethren. Paul's companions.

22. All the saints salute you. All of God's children join in sending greetings. Chiefly they that are of Caesar's household. Not necessarily members of the imperial family, but those connected with the imperial household. Paul had personally won many of them to faith in Christ, and they send greetings.

23. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Paul closes with this short, simple, sublime benediction, Amen.

The Epistle To The COLOSSIANS

INTRODUCTION

The church of Colossae. Colossae was located in Asia Minor in the Lycus Valley, about one hundred miles east of Ephesus on the main east-west highway. The population was heterogeneous, i.e., native Phrygians, Greek colonists, and Jews. The city was deserted completely about A.D. 700 and today is a place of ruins. The church at Colossae was not mentioned in the book of Acts, and it was not directly founded by the Apostle Paul (2:1). Probably during Paul's stay at Ephesus when "all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:23; see also 18:23 and 19:26). Philemon, Aphia, Archippus, Epaphras, and other natives were converted and became effective witnesses in this area (Phm 2, 13, 19, 23; Col 1:6-8; 4:12-13). The membership was composed largely of Gentiles (1:21, 27; 2:13). Its size is not indicated; it attained no prominence in history, and it soon faded from view.

Authorship. The author claims to be Paul (1:1, 23; 4:8), and there is no evidence that anyone else used Paul's name to palm off this powerful polemic.

Date and place of writing. This is one of the Prison Epistles and was written from Rome 61-63 A.D. Tychicus was the bearer of Colossians and Ephesians (Col 4:7-8; Eph 6:21-22).

Occasion of the epistle. Epaphras, who helped evangelize the Lycus Valley, arrived with greetings and with disturbing news from Colossae (1:7-9; 4:12). After Paul's departure from Ephesus, the "grievous wolves" (Acts 20:29 ff.) had entered into the church, playing havoc and leading many away from the truth. The Phrygians had a mystic tendency in their worship of Cybele and were susceptible to incipient Gnosticism, which later developed into strange heresies. This threatening danger was both doctrinal and ethical. There was a false conception of theology characterized by mysticism regarding the person of Christ and the origin and nature of the universe. There was also a false basis of morals characterized by ritualism and formalism. At Colossae there was a strict asceticism, attempting to purify lives by a code of strict prohibitions (2:20-23), and also a wild unrestrained license, antinomianism (3:5-7).

Purpose. Paul writes to express his personal interest in the Colossians and to warn them against reverting to their old vices. He refutes false doctrine and proclaims the truth. He presents a full-length portrait of Christ as supreme, sufficient (2:9-10), Son of Man (humanity), and Son of God (deity).

Relation to the Epistle to the Ephesians. In Ephesians the emphasis is on the dignity of church, which is the body of Christ; in Colossians the emphasis is on the deity of Christ, who is the Head of that body. Ephesians considers the church's oneness with Christ; Colossians considers the church's completeness in Christ. Ephesians speaks of the Christian being in Christ; Colossians speaks of Christ being in the Christian.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-14.

A. Salutation. 1:1-2.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Ti-mó'the-us our brother,

1:1. Paul, an apostle. Paul refers to his apostleship because he is unknown to the Colossians. This refers to his authoritative title, signifying equality with the Twelve, because he has seen the risen Christ (I Cor 15:8). It refers to the dignity of his office; he is clothed with authority and endowed with power. In his official capacity, he is writing to combat error. Of Jesus Christ. Paul is our Lord's ambassador. He bore His commission, and did His work, and sought His acceptance. Paul's life and work were ordered by Christ. By the will of God. This speaks of his divine appointment. His appointment was not by the Twelve, by religious leaders, by his family, nor by himself. This is an assertion of his divine authority, a declaration of his independence of all human authority, and he disclaims any individual merit or personal power. And Timothy our brother. Timothy was not an apostle; he was a brother. This trusted companion was with Paul in Rome. As an act of courtesy, Paul includes Timothy in the salutation. Timothy was Paul's spiritual son (I Tim 1:2, 18; II Tim 1:2; I Cor 4:17).

2 To the saints and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Co-lös'se: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. To the saints (Gr hagios). This speaks of their divine relationship. It means "holy ones," born-again believers, not some special group. It also means "separated ones": separated to God, separated by God, and separated from the world. The main idea is not excellence of character, but separation to God, for His purpose and for His service. And faithful brethren. Believing brethren. This refers to their human relationship. They were full of faith, trustful, and trustworthy. They were loyal to Christ. Paul refers to them as brethren. There is no spiritual nobility. God has one spiritual family, and all are equal, despite difference of cultural background, social status, or racial origin. In Christ. This speaks of the spiritual position of believers in union with Christ. This is a real, mystical union. There is not only filial relation to God, but also brotherly relation to believers. Paul speaks of their faith, fraternity, and fellowship. Grace. God's unmerited favor. Grace gives us what we do not deserve; mercy withholds from us what we do deserve. Grace always precedes peace. And peace. Peace with God and the peace of God. Peace speaks of the calm tranquility of heart amidst disturbing circumstances. From God. The source of grace and peace.

B. Thanksgiving. 1:3-8.

3 We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you,

3. We give thanks. Paul begins with thanksgiving because there is much for which to be thankful. Thanksgiving precedes intercession; praise precedes prayer. Paul calls God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Praying always for you. Continually, Paul practices what he preached (Eph 6:18).

4 Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints,

4. Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus. Having heard, because we heard. There were no secret believers. Paul simply refers to your faith; not your great faith, abounding faith, or extraordinary faith. Their faith was in Christ. They trusted Christ; committed themselves to Christ, and had a vital spiritual connection with Christ. Their faith was Christ-centered; they rested in Christ, and they were anchored in Christ. And of the love. Love is a fruit of the Spirit (Gal 5:22; Rom 5:5). Love is the evidence of faith (Jn 13:35; 15:12; Gal 5:6; Jas 2:14-20; I Jn 3:14). Love is the characteristic mark of Christianity; it is not superficial friendliness. To all the saints. They were not isolationists; there were no sectarian limitations. They loved everyone of whatever position or disposition. This speaks of the depth of brotherly fellowship and the breadth of brotherly concern.

5 For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel;

6 Which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth:

7 As ye also learned of Ep'aphras our dear fellowservant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ;

8 Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit.

9 For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding;

10 That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God;

They were not indifferent to the needs of others, nor disapproving of the deeds of others, nor critical of the motives of others.

5. For the hope. Because of the hope, not on account of the hope. This states the cause or reason of their love. Laid up for you in heaven. Stored up like a treasure, reserved (II Tim 4:8; I Pet 1:3-5). The hope Paul speaks of is still future, and its nature is still unknown, but its possession is absolutely certain. Whereof ye heard before. They heard the gospel from Ep'aphras before Gnosticism crept in. The word of the truth of the gospel. Knowledge of this hope came through the Word. Truth is the very essence of the gospel. Paul speaks of faith; the beginning of the Christian life, which lays hold of Christ. Faith rests in the past. Paul speaks of love; love lives in the present and links together faith and hope. Hope looks toward the future and anticipates the crown (I Jn 3:1-3).

6. Which is come unto you. Present with you. In all the world. The gospel was spreading all over the Roman Empire. Bringeth forth fruit. Is bearing fruit, keeps on bearing fruit. The gospel is dynamic, and this speaks of its inner energy and transforming power. It is folly to look for fruit before there is life. "By their fruits ye shall know them" (Mt 7:20). Increasing. Growing and fruit-bearing are simultaneous. There is inward growth and outward expression. The outward extension of the gospel never stops. We read in John 12:24, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." The church must germinate or terminate; it will either evangelize or fossilize. Since the day ye heard. This fruit-bearing and growing began and it continues. Knew the grace of God in truth. The grace of God was fully apprehended and should have made them immune from Gnosticism.

7. As ye also learned of Epaphras. Epaphras was their teacher; a native of Colosse; Paul's fellowservant; and a faithful minister of Christ.

8. Who also declared. Made manifest. Your love. This is the supernatural of John 3:16 and produced by the Holy Spirit.

C. Intercession. 1:9-14.

9. For this cause. The reason for Paul's intercession. Do not cease to pray. Daily and definitely. Filled with the knowledge of his will. This is available to all, not for a privileged few. The thoughts, feelings, and emotions are to be saturated with this knowledge of God's will. The word knowledge here is in contrast with the knowledge of the Gnostics. It is full knowledge, super-knowledge, thorough knowledge gained by experience, and deep accurate comprehension. It is not theoretical, but experimental and practical. Notice it is a knowledge of His will, not of His nature. We are not expected to understand and explain the Trinity, but we are expected to understand His plan and His purpose for our lives. This is the foundation of all Christian character and conduct. The cure for Gnosticism is more knowledge of, and obedience to, God's will. In all wisdom. This is practical good sense, the ability to use knowledge. And spiritual understanding. This is spiritual insight, correct apprehension, inner perception, and clear discernment.

10. That ye might walk worthy. To the end that ye should walk worthy. This is the aim and the result of knowing God's will. Knowledge is not an end in itself, and is not given to satisfy curiosity. Walk refers to the total conduct and course of life. Right knowledge issues in right conduct; right conduct is never the product of wrong knowledge. God wants His children to walk worthy; to be a credit to Christ, to live in conformity with our union with Christ, and in conformity with His purpose for our lives. Our lives should be Christ-centered (Gal 2:20). Unto all pleasing. Not pleasing everybody, but pleasing God in every-

11 Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness;

12 Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light:

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son:

14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins:

thing, in every way, and all the time. Being fruitful. This modifies the word walk. Continually bearing fruit. Christians are to be perennial fruit-bearers. In every good work. Fruit of right relationship to Christ. This is an evidence of discipleship (Jn 15:8). Increasing in the knowledge of God. This speaks of both the sphere where spiritual growth takes place and also the means of that spiritual growth (II Pet 3:18). A fruit-bearing tree grows; one that does not grow ceases to bear fruit.

11. Strengthened with all might. Empowered with all power. We are engaged in a spiritual conflict (Eph 6:10ff.), and we need spiritual power from God. The word strengthened is in the Greek present tense and indicates that God keeps continuously and progressively filling us with dynamic power. According to his glorious power. His limitless omnipotence. This strengthening is not proportioned simply to our need, but according to His abundant supply. Unto all. The threefold results of such empowerment: not working miracles, not outburst of eloquence, but producing homely virtues. Patience. Literally, "remaining under." This is the opposite of cowardice and despondency. It is forbearance, steadfast endurance, fortitude, and the capacity to see things through. It means remaining under difficulties without succumbing to them. Long-suffering. This is the opposite of wrath and revenge. It is self-restraint, even-temperedness, holding out long. Long-suffering does not retaliate in spite of injury or insult (cf. Jas 5:7-11). With joyfulness. Not with a long face, not with a sickly smile, but with psalms in the night. "The joy of the Lord is your strength" (Neh 8:10).

12. Giving thanks. Not striving for, not praying for, but giving thanks for three things. Made us meet. Made us fit, adequate; not worthy. He qualified us, made us competent and sufficient. This is true of every Christian. There are no degrees of fitness. Fitness depends on privilege and position, not character or experience. The Greek aorist tense points to the instantaneous act of conversion, not a progressive process. It is a present reality. To be made partakers of the inheritance. Not purchasers. We have a portion and share of the inheritance as an unearned gift. In light. This marks the inheritance as future and as heavenly. Light speaks of the realm where there is no night and no sin.

13. Delivered us from the power of darkness. God rescued and liberated us from the power, dominion, authority, and tyranny of darkness. Darkness speaks of a miserable, horrible state of being held captive by Satan. Darkness is a symbol of ignorance, falsehood, and sin. Translated us. This is an accomplished fact. God transported, transplanted, and transferred us from the devil's dominion to Christ's control. Into the kingdom of his dear son. The Son is the object of the Father's love. Paul rules out the system of aeons which the Gnostics placed above Christ. It is Christ's kingdom in which He is sovereign. God removed us from the realm of darkness and He established us as colonists and as citizens in the realm of light (I Pet 2:9).

14. In whom we have redemption. This is a present possession. We have redemption because of our vital union with Christ. Redemption means deliverance, ransom, release, emancipation. Redemption speaks of our release on the payment of a ransom (Mk 10:45; Acts 20:28; Gal 3:13; Tit 2:14). Through his blood. The best texts do not contain these words; however this truth is taught elsewhere (Eph 1:7; I Pet 1:18; I Jn 1:7). This deliverance is exhibited by the forgiveness of sins. This is the logical result of redemption, the real consequences of salvation. Forgiveness is remission, the sending away and removal of our sins (Ps 103:12; Mic 7:18; Isa 43:25; 44:22).

II. PERSONAL: THE CHRIST. 1:15-2:3.

A. The Person of Christ. 1:15-19.

1. His relation to God. 1:15a.

15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature:

15a. Who is the image of the invisible God. The image expresses Christ's deity in relation to the Father; it is the very stamp of God as He was before the incarnation (Jn 17:5). The word is not form (Phil 2:6), but image. This is more than a resemblance, more than a representation. It is a manifestation, a revelation. The "Word" of John 1:1 is a divine person, not a philosophical abstraction. In the incarnation, the invisible God became visible in Christ: deity was clothed with humanity (Mt 17:2), deity under some human limitations. Christ in God: visible, audible, approachable, knowable, and available. All that God is, Christ is.

2. His relation to creation. 1:15b-17.

15b. The first-born of every creature. This expresses Christ's deity and sovereignty in relation to creation. Christ was the first-born, not the first created. First-born signifies priority in time. First, this speaks of His preexistence, what He was from eternity. He was before all creation; not a part of creation, but apart from creation. He is not a creature, but the Creator. Secondly, this speaks of the supremacy of His position. He is the self-existent, acknowledged Head of creation. Thirdly, this also speaks of being recognized as the Messiah (Ps 89:27). So we have here declared the eternity, the sovereignty, and the lordship of Christ.

16 For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him:

16. For by him were all things created. Three prepositions tell the story: (1) In Him, sovereign source; (2) by Him, divine agent; (3) unto Him, for His use and for His glory. The first word created (Gr ktizo) is in the Greek aorist tense and views creation as a definite, historical act. Creation is a past, perfect work. The second word created is in the Greek perfect tense and speaks of the resulting state. Creation stands created, a permanent work. We have a Christo-centric universe, and this is complete denial of the Gnostic philosophy.

17 And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

17. And he is before all things. Christ existed prior to all creation. He is the great "I am" (Jn 8:58). The Jehovah of the Old Testament is the Jesus of the New Testament. And by him all things consist. Through Christ all things hold together, cohere, are sustained, and united. Christ is the personal sustainer and preserver. He maintains harmony and order. All things are created by Him and are controlled by Him. Apart from Christ all things would disintegrate: He holds the stars in their courses, He directs the planets in their orbits, and He controls the laws of the universe. We have a cosmos, not a chaos.

3. His relation to the church. 1:18-19.

18 And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence.

18. And he is the head of the body, the church. He is emphatic; He alone, and no one else. He directs, controls, guides, and governs the church. The church is His body; He is its source and its life. He unites the members into one organism. The church is a living organism, composed of living members joined together; an organism through which Christ works, carries out His purposes; and an organism in which Christ lives. Who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead. The Prince of Life (Acts 3:15). The church is also a family, composed of those who share in His resurrection life. The word beginning is used in three senses: (1) prior in time; (2) supremacy in rank; (3) creative initiative. Christ is not the first of a series, but the source. Christ is the source of new creation and the sovereign Head of that new creation. That in all things he might have the pre-eminence. He is emphatic; He alone, not angels or men. Christ has unshared supremacy; He has first place; He is in a 19 For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell;

20 And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

21 And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled

22 In the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unproveable in his sight:

23 If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister;

class by Himself; He is eminent above all others. It is not enough for Christ to be present, nor prominent; He must be pre-eminent.

19. For it pleased the Father. His good pleasure and purpose. That in him should all fulness dwell. Christ is a manifestation of God, the Sovereign Creator, and the Head of the church. The sum total of all the power and attributes are in Christ. The Gnostics distributed the divine powers among various aeons. Paul gathers them all up in Christ. In Christ there is divine perfection: not just a part, nor just almost all, but all divine nature in all its fullness (Eph 1:23; 3:19; 4:13; Col 2:9; 3:11). The word dwell indicates permanent residence, not just a temporary visit. Only a divine person could create a world, be the Head of the church, and reconcile a world to God.

B. The Work of Christ. 1:20-23.

20. And, having made peace through the blood of his cross. This for the special benefit of the Docetic Gnostics, who denied the real humanity of Christ. The blood speaks of Christ's redemptive work and the sacrificial aspect of His death. By him to reconcile . . . unto himself. Reconcile (Gr apokatallasso) means to change completely (Rom 5:6-10). Christ is the chosen and sufficient agent in reconciliation; nothing else is needed. Divine harmony has been restored; all barriers and obstacles have been removed. God took the initiative. Religion is man seeking God; Christianity is God seeking and saving man (II Cor 5:18-20; Eph 1:10; 2:14-16).

21. And you . . . alienated . . . enemies. Alienated means that we were estranged from God. Enemies means we were hostile and at war with God (Rom 1:30; 8:7; Eph 2:1-2, 12, 19). In your mind. The seat of antagonism was the thoughts, attitude, and disposition of their minds. By wicked works. The evidence and manifestation of alienation. This indicates willful opposition and personal animosity.

22. In the body of his flesh through death. This emphasizes the reality of His incarnation and humanity. Death speaks of real suffering, not mere appearance. There was an actual atonement; not through His birth, His baptism, His miracles, His teaching; but through His death (Eph 2:15-16; Heb 9:22; 10:19-20). To present you. The ultimate purpose of reconciliation (Eph 5:27). Holy. The positive side. Christians are consecrated, dedicated, and set apart for God. Christ's righteousness becomes our righteousness. Unblameable. This is the negative side. Unblameable is a technical, sacrificial term and means "without flaw, free from defects, without blemish, and stainless in character and conduct." Unproveable. There is no charge and no accusation either here or hereafter. All of this through His precious blood.

23. If ye continue in the faith. Provided that and assuming that there is a continuance in a firm position of faith. The test of reality is steadfastness in faith. There is no doubt insinuated, no threatening danger implied, but a certain necessary condition. Paul is sure that they will continue in the faith. Grounded. A firm foundation. The church is built on the rock and there is no shifting (Eph 3:17). Settled. Referring to the superstructure or the firm building in a solid fashion. The church is immovably fixed. And be not moved away. Not continually shifting away. The church has a stable position and shall never be dislodged. From the hope of the gospel. The hope given in the gospel. We read of: the hope of righteousness (Gal 5:5); the hope of His calling (Eph 1:18); the hope of eternal life (Tit 3:7); the living hope (I Pet 1:3-4); and the hope that we have (Heb 6:19). Whereof I Paul am made a minister. One who serves.

C. The Servant of Christ. 1:24-2:3.

1. Paul's solemn charge. 1:24-27.

24 Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church:

24. Who now rejoice in my sufferings. Paul was in prison and in chains. For you. Not in your place, but in your interest, on your behalf, for your benefit, and for your advantage. Afflictions of Christ. These were sufficient for the finished atonement (Jn 1:29; I Jn 2:1-2). The sufferings of Christ provided the gospel and salvation. The afflictions of Paul proclaimed the gospel, and referred to servants. The afflictions of Paul are identified with the afflictions of Christ but are on a different plane. Paul's afflictions could add nothing to the finished work of Christ. The proclamation of the gospel transforms sinners into saints, and saints into martyrs. For his body's sake. Not in the sense of atonement, but the announcing of that atonement (Phil 4:11).

25 Whereof I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you, to fulfill the word of God;

25. I am made a minister. Become a servant. Paul's appointment made him a minister of the gospel (Eph 3:7; Col 1:23) a minister of God (II Cor 6:4); a minister of Christ (I Cor 4:1); and a minister of the New Covenant (II Cor 3:6). Dispensation. Divine ordering (Gr oikonomia), administration, stewardship, trusteeship. This was Paul's high privilege and sacred trust. Paul was a steward in God's economy; a trustee in God's household; and an administrator of God's business. Paul was on business for the King. Given. Not usurped. For you. For your benefit and for your blessing. To fulfill the word of God. God's purpose was Paul's purpose, and God's Word was Paul's message. Therefore Paul's message was pure and uncorrupted by false teaching (Rom 15:19; II Tim 4:2-5).

26 Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints:

26. Even the mystery. Sacred secret. There is no connection here with mystery religions. Hid. Unknown in ages past; once concealed, now revealed by the Holy Spirit. Manifest. Clear as day. To his saints. To all born-again Christians.

27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory:

27. To whom. God was pleased to make this mystery known (Eph 1:17-18). God willed this change from hidden mystery to manifestation. Riches. Glorious wealth. Christ in you. The indwelling Christ (Jn 15:5; Gal 2:20; Eph 3:17). Christ is the answer: not the law, not circumcision, not ceremony, not philosophy, not science, not social reform. Hope of glory. Pledge of the future.

2. Paul's loving care. 1:28-2:3.

28 Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom; that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus:

28. Whom we preach. Paul did not proclaim precepts, a creed, a code of ethics, rules or regulations, not a plan, not a program, but a Person (II Tim 1:12). Warning. Addressing, admonishing the heart; reproving and convincing of error. This refers to conduct and leads to repentance. Teaching. Addressing the intellect; informing, and instructing in faith and morals. This refers to doctrine. May present. Paul's aim and purpose. Every man. This is repeated three times for emphasis. Paul has no narrow exclusiveness such as the Gnostics. Perfect in Christ Jesus. Not sinless, but perfect, complete, full-grown, mature.

29 Whereunto I also labour, striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily.

29. Whereunto. Paul's goal. I also labor. Exerting all my strength in weariness and exhaustion. Striving. Intense struggling (like an athlete), agonizing in strenuous effort. His working. Divine energy and supernatural power in Paul and through Paul. Paul was God's instrument to do God's work, through God's power, and for God's glory.

CHAPTER 2
FOR I would that ye knew what great conflict I have for you, and for them at La-od-i-ce'a, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh;

2:1. Knew. The seriousness of the situation and perils in which Paul stood. Paul desires them to know this so that they will appreciate him, pray for him, and share with him in this great conflict. Great conflict. The strain of Paul's soul in his pastoral concern (II Cor 11:28; I Thess 2:2). For you. The Colossians, Laodiceans and for others. Paul prayed earnestly for the converts and for the churches.

COLOSSIANS 2:2

2 That their hearts might be comforted, being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, to the acknowledgement of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ;

3 In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

4 And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with enticing words.

5 For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ.

6 As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him:

7 Rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.

8 Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

2. Hearts . . . comforted. Confirmed, strengthened, encouraged. Not consoled, but strengthened; not relief, but reinforcements. They were in danger of being shaken. Being knit together in love. A closer unity, a vital helpful relationship, being welded together, a unibody. This will safeguard against the corruption and the disruption of false teaching. All riches. Complete abundance of inward wealth. Full assurance. Confidence, deep convictions, full knowledge of Christ (I Cor 2:12; Eph 3:17-20). To the acknowledgement. Personal knowledge of the sacred secret.

3. In whom are hid. Don't look anywhere else. Treasures. Our thesaurus or storehouse. These treasures are available and accessible to every believer. Paul confronts the Gnostics with the fact that Christ sums up all wisdom and knowledge.

III. POLEMICAL: THE CHURCH. 2:4-3:4.

A. The Position of the Church. 2:4-15.

1. The threatening danger: false philosophy. 2:4-7.

4. Beguile. Literally, "reason alongside." This means to elude, deceive by false reasoning, and lead astray (Mt 24:4; Acts 20:30; II Cor 11:13; Eph 4:14; I Jn 4:1). Enticing words. Attractive arguments, persuasive rhetoric, plausible speech, fast talk, and a smooth line.

5. Your order. This is a military term (Gr taxis) indicating an orderly array of disciplined soldiers. The Colossians' ranks had not been broken yet; but the Gnostics were attacking, and Paul was concerned for them. Steadfastness of your faith in Christ. Another military word (Gr stereōma) signifying solidity. With unbroken ranks, every man was in his place, presenting a solid front. This speaks of the unyielding nature of their faith which was firm and true to Christ.

6. As . . . received Christ Jesus the Lord. This refers to a personal appropriation of Christ, not just believing a truth about Him. By using this unique phrase, Paul discharged both barrels at the same time to lay low the two forms of Gnostic heresy about the person of Christ: (1) the recognition of the historical Jesus in His actual humanity (Docetic Gnostics); and (2) the identity of Christ with this historical Jesus (Cerinthian Gnostics). So walk. Live accordingly, keep on walking. Our walk must match our talk.

7. Rooted. Permanently rooted in Christ and firmly anchored in Him. This is what God has done. Built up. This is a continual process, being built up constantly like an ever-expanding building. Established in the faith. This means to make firm or stable. Abounding. The natural consequence.

2. The saving doctrine: person and work of Christ. 2:8-15.

8. Beware. Take heed, see to it, be on your guard, keep a watchful eye ever open, be alert to the imminent danger because the enemy is lurking in darkness. Spoil you. Carry away captive, carry you off as booty. The picture here is of kidnapping you for the purpose of seducing you from faith in Christ. It is not robbing you of some blessing, but taking you captive; a picture of a long line of prisoners of war, leading them away into slavery. The false teachers were men-stealers, entrapping and dragging men into spiritual slavery. Through philosophy. Love of wisdom. Paul does not condemn knowledge and wisdom, but only this false philosophy, knowledge falsely named (I Tim 6:20). And vain deceit. An explanation of this philosophy: empty delusions, vain speculations, hollow sham, devoid of truth, high-sounding nonsense. This all amounts to nothing, and cannot meet the needs of the soul. After the tradition of men. That which is handed down. Here it refers to foolish theories of the Gnostics. We see here a contrast between human 9 For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

10 And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power:

11 In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ:

12 Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.

13 And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses;

14 Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross;

reason and divine revelation (Mk 7:6-9); man's theories versus God's truth; fables versus facts. After the rudiments of the world. Anything in a row or series (Gr stoicheion) like the letters of the alphabet; elementary, preparatory, and immature. Paul is speaking of the ritualistic and materialistic elements of Gnosticism. This is a contrast between the outward and the material as opposed to the inward and the spiritual. And not after Christ. In contradiction to Christ, and to God's Word. Gnosticism stood in the way of Christ, weakened faith in Christ, and took men away from Christ. Such heresy is best met, not by detailed discussion, nor by bitter denunciation, but by the declaration of truth.

9. For in him. This is emphatic, and means nowhere else. Dwelleth. Permanent residence. All the fullness of the Godhead. The godhood. All attributes and the essence of deity are in Christ; not just divinity, but deity; not Godlike, but God; not a nature like God's, but a nature the same as God's. Bodily. The incarnation was real. Here our Lord Jesus Christ was one person with two natures: the God-man. Paul disposes of the Docetic theory that Jesus had no human body as well as the Cerinthian separation between the man Jesus and aeon Christ. Paul declares the deity and the humanity of Jesus Christ in corporeal form.

10. And ye are complete in him. God did this in connection with Christ. This is both complete and permanent. Having been completely filled in the past, we are in a state of fullness now. All we need is in Christ (I Cor 1:30). We do not need the emptiness of the Gnostics, since we have the fullness of Christ. We seek no other source of grace and truth; we show no allegiance to anyone else; and we submit to no other authority. Christ is the Head; He is the source of life; and He is sovereign over life.

11. Circumcised. This points to conversion (Rom 4:1; 2:28-29; Phil 3:3). The character of this circumcision is spiritual and not physical. It is without hands; inward and not outward. The extent of this circumcision is the whole body, not just one organ. The author of this circumcision is Christ, not Moses. This circumcision that Paul speaks of is not a rite, but a reality. Putting off the body . . . the flesh. Stripping and casting aside as a filthy garment. The flesh is removed from the throne, and the Christian is set free from his sinful nature. The evil nature is not eradicated (I Jn 1:8), but its power is broken. Christ is now on the throne; but the flesh lurks about and tries to usurp the throne. Our physical members are to be instruments not of unrighteousness unto sin, but of righteousness unto God (Rom 6:11-14).

12. Buried with him in baptism. Jointly entombed with Christ; sharing in His experience. Baptism is not a magic rite, but an act of obedience in confessing our faith. Baptism symbolizes our experience of death to the old life and resurrection to the new life (Rom 6:3-5). Baptism is an outward expression of an inward experience. Through the faith. Without saving faith, baptism is an empty, meaningless ceremony. Through faith we receive Christ (Jn 1:12-13) and experience the new birth.

13. And you, being dead. Devoid of the life of God, a totally depraved nature (Eph 2:1; 5:6, 11). Hath he quickened. Made alive in union with Christ. Having forgiven you all trespasses. Graciously pardoning and cancelling the debt (cf. Lk 7:42).

14. Blotting out. Erased, wiped away, obliterated, cancelled the note. This explains the forgiveness. The handwriting of ordinances. The handwritten document consisting of ordinances. The bond here is the certification of debt, the instrument of condemnation, the indictment drawn up against a prisoner, and a signed confession of indebtedness. Three expressions describe the law: (1) it is written in ordinances, expressed in decrees and commandments; (2) it was against us, had a valid claim on us; (3) it was contrary to us, because we couldn't meet the claim. Paul states that bond was: (1) blotted out; (2) taken 15 And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in it.

16 Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days:

17 Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.

18 Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind,

19 And not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.

20 Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, out of the way; (3) and nailed to His cross. This was once-for-all removal (II Cor 5:21; Eph 2:15-16; Gal 3:13). In the East, a bond is cancelled by nailing it to the post. Our bond of guilt was nailed to His cross.

15. Having spoiled principalities and powers. Stripped off and away from. The principalities and powers are conquered antagonists stripped of their weapons, disarmed (Mt 12:29; Lk 11:21-22; Jn 16:11; Rom 8:37-39; I Cor 15:55-57; Heb 2:4). By His death, Christ conquered His enemies, stripped them of their power, exposed them to public disgrace, held them up in contempt, and led them captives in His triumph.

B. The Responsibility of the Church. 2:16-3:4.

1. Negatively. 2:16-19.

a. There must be no submission to former legalism. 2:16-17.

16. Let no man therefore judge you. Sit in judgment, take you to task, deciding for you, criticizing and condemning. Paul is encouraging the Colossians not to be enslaved by legalism, ritualism, rites, and ceremonies.

17. Which are a shadow. A shadow is not the real thing. There is a difference between the shadow and the substance. Symbols and types may stimulate thought, may awaken emotions, may convey divine truth, and may even strengthen faith; but beyond this they are meaningless and dangerous, and may replace the Living Christ. Mosaic institutions are of value, setting forth man's need for pardon, purity, and holiness; and setting forth God's provision of a great high priest, an atonement, and fellowship with God. Why look at the shadow when we can look to Christ, the Author and the Finisher of our faith? These ceremonies are shadows, superseded, and should be abandoned. Since Christ has come, we no longer need the symbols (Heb 8:13; 10:1).

b. There must be no subservience to false philosophy. 2:18-19.

18. Let no man beguile you of your reward. Rob you of your prize. The word means to act as an umpire, denying your claim, defrauding you, and declaring you as unworthy. Voluntary humility. This is self-imposed, mock humility which is expressed in worshipping of angels. Intruding . . . not seen. This refers to alleged visions, imagined and invented revelations, and the living in a world of hallucinations. Vainly puffed up. Inflated with conceit, senseless pride, like a big bag of wind. Fleshly mind. Literally, the mind of the flesh. He is dominated by his unregenerated nature and devoid of spiritual enlightenment.

19. And not holding the Head. This one lacks a vital connection with Christ, and has never been a part of the body. The body. The figure of the body emphasizes both its unity and its diversity. Christ supplies: (1) nourishment, i.e., life and energy; (2) unity, i.e., knitted together; and (3) growth, i.e., the increase of God.

a. Dead with Christ, we are free from earthly ordinances. 2:20-23.

20. Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ. Since ye died at the time of your conversion (Rom 6:2-4, 6, 11; 7:4; II Cor 5:15; Gal 6:14). Death means separation: the Colossians were separated from the rudiments of the world. This refers to the first principle, the childish lessons, and the ABC's of elementary spiritual instructions. Subject to ordinances. Pestered by rules and regulations. These are outward forms: outworn, annulled, and superseded.

21 (Touch not; taste not; handle not;

22 Which all are to perish with the using;) after the commandments and doctrines of men?

23 Which things have indeed a shew of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh.

CHAPTER 3

IF ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.

2 Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth.

3 For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God.

4 When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

5 Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry:

6 For which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience:

7 In the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them.

8 But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.

21. Touch not; taste not; handle not. Specimens of Gnostic rules, of which the Christian stands liberated, but which are still a test of holiness in certain religious groups.

22. Perish with the using. Destined for corruption in their consumption. After . . . of men. Human origin, based on the will and the word of men (Mt 15:8-9).

23. A shew of wisdom in will-worship. An appearance, a masquerading. Will-worship is self-imposed worship, prescribed for one's self. Humility. Spurious, hypocritical, mock humility. Neglecting of the body. Ascetic discipline, severe, harsh, torturing. Not in any honor. Not of any value, impotent; not a remedy, it can't deliver. Satisfying of the flesh. The indulgence of the flesh.

b. Risen with Christ, we are bound to heavenly principles. 3:1-4.

3:1. If ye then be risen with Christ. Since you are jointly raised up and new life has begun. Seek. Keep on seeking, an outward active. Things. Real, heavenly, spiritual things (II Cor 4:18). Above. The upward things (Phil 3:14), treasures of heaven (Mt 6:20). Our Head is there; our home is there. Where Christ sitteth. The place of exaltation, power, and authority. Paul gives heavenly motives for earthly duties.

2. Set your affection. This is inward active. Keep on thinking about and directing your mind toward heavenly things. We should seek everything in the light of eternity. The Christian must be heavenly-minded, not worrying about earthly things.

3. For ye are dead. Literally, you died. Your life . . . hid. Permanently hidden. We are locked together with Christ in security, and Satan can't break the lock.

4. Christ . . . our life, shall appear (Jn 14:6; Phil 1:21; I Jn 5:11-12). Shall ye also appear. Be made manifest (I Jn 3:1-3).

IV. PRACTICAL: THE CHRISTIAN. 3:5-4:6.

A. Principles for the Inner Life. 3:5-17.

1. Vices to put off. 3:5-11.

5. Mortify. Put to death quickly. The flesh must be kept in the place of death; it must be nailed to a cross. Members. Not yourselves. Fornication. A perilous, prevalent, perverse sin, which is lightly regarded by many and committed without scruples and without shame. It is illicit sexual intercourse between unmarried partners; similar to, but not identical with, adultery (Mt 5:32; 15:19; Mk 7:21). Uncleanness. Impurity in thought and speech, dirty mindedness, indecency. Inordinate affection. Depraved passion, uncontrolled lust, an evil desire. Evil concupiscence. Wicked craving and sensualness beyond natural expression. Covetousness. Greedy desire to have more; entire disregard for the right of others. Which is idolatry. The worship of false gods, putting things in place of God.

6. For which things' sake. God does not regard sin with indifference. The wrath of God. God's vengeance and dreadful judgment. Cometh. Denotes certainty and imminence (Jn 3:18, 36). Children of disobedience. Unbelievers.

7. In which ye also walked. These vices characterized their past, pagan, pre-Christian experience. They were addicted to and practiced these vices (Eph 2:2; I Pet 4:3). Lived in them. The Greek imperfect tense implies constant conduct, the habit of existence.

8. But . . . put off all these. Put aside and rid yourselves completely of all these. Anger. Uncontrolled temper, a deep-seated emotion of ill will, a settled feeling of habitual hate, revengeful resentment. Wrath. Boiling agitation, fiery outburst of temper, violent fit of rage, passionate outbreak of exasperation. Malice. Vicious disposition, depraved spite, willful desire to injure, cruel malignity, which rejoices in evil to others. Blas-

9 Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;

10 And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:

11 Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Christ is all, and in all.

12 Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering;

13 Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.

14 And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.

15 And let the peace of God rule in

phemy. Slanderous talk, reviling, evil speaking, railing insults, reckless and bitter abuse. Filthy communication out of your mouth. Obscene speech, shameful speaking, foul-mouthed abuse, dirty epithets, unclean stories (Eph 4:29; 5:4).

9. Lie not one to another. The Greek present imperative forbids a continuation of action that is going on. Stop lying (Eph 4:25), there is no such thing as "a little white lie." All lies are big and black. Seeing that ye have put off the old man. The old man is the old unregenerated nature derived from Adam and received by the first birth. The old man has not been converted, has not been renewed, and has not been improved; he is corrupt, useless, and must be put off. The word put off means to strip off and discard like a filthy, worn-out garment, tossed on the rubbish heap.

10. And have put on the new man. Have clothed yourselves with the new man. The new man is the person you are after having been saved. The new man is received from Christ at the time of the second birth, and is the regenerated man, the new nature. Renewed. This present passive participle (Gr anakainēō) indicates constantly being renewed. This is a continuous process; the new man has not yet matured and is ever in the state of development.

11. Where there is neither Greek nor Jew. In the new man there is an obliteration of distinctions. National privilege has been obliterated; ceremonial standings have been obliterated; cultural standings have been obliterated; and social castes have been obliterated. Christ is all, and in all. Christ is absolutely everything.

2. Virtues to put on. 3:12-17.

12. Put on therefore. Clothe yourselves with. This Greek aorist imperative implies a sense of urgency; this command is to be obeyed at once. We now have a characterization of believers: (1) elect of God, i.e., chosen of God; (2) holy, i.e., set apart by God and for God; and (3) beloved, i.e., loved by God. These are the attire of the new man; his spiritual wardrobe of practical righteousness. Bowels of mercies. A heart of compassion, mercy in action, and heartfelt sympathy for the less fortunate. Kindness. Thoughtfulness of others, unselfishness, sweetness of disposition, gentleness, and graciousness. This is the fruit of the Holy Spirit and refers to the inner attitude. Humbleness of mind. This refers to the outward expression of that inner attitude. Humbleness is modesty, it places self last, and regards self as least (Eph 3:8). Meekness. Not weakness, but lowliness; delicate consideration for others. It is the opposite of arrogance and self-assertion. Pride has no place in the Christian's life. Long-suffering. Patient under provocation. This denotes restraint which enables one to bear injury and insult without resorting to retaliation. It accepts the wrong without complaint. Long-suffering is an attribute of God (Rom 2:4) and a fruit of the Holy Spirit (Gal 5:22).

13. Forbearing one another. Put up with things we dislike and get along with those who disagree. Christians can disagree without being disagreeable. Forgiving one another. The word forgiving (Gr charizomai) is built on the same root as the word grace and means to bestow favor unconditionally. This means that the Christian will always treat the offending party graciously. The Christian not only forgives, he forgets. Quarrel. A quarrel is a cause of blame, a ground for complaint. He thinks himself aggrieved.

14. And above all these things. On top of all these things, like an outer garment. Put on charity. Love is the basis and cloak of all the graces (I Cor 13:13) bond. The bond that binds the others together. Perfectness. This means completeness, full grown, mature.

15. Let the peace of God. Better, the peace of Christ. This is your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful.

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

17 And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

18 Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.

19 Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.

20 Children, obey your parents in all things; for this is well pleasing unto the Lord.

21 Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.

22 Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not that heart-peace which Christ demonstrated. It is a tranquility of soul which is not ruffled by adversity nor disturbed by fear. This peace passeth all understanding (Phil 4:7) and is given by Christ (Jn 14:27). Rule. Sit as umpire, arbitrate, decide all doubts, settle all questions, and make the final decision. Hearts. Thoughts, feelings, desires. Thankful. Grateful.

16. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom. Be at home and dwell permanently (Josh 1:8; Jn 15:7). Let the Word of Christ saturate you and remain in you as a rich treasure.

17. Do all in the name of the Lord Jesus. In all relations of life, act as His representative; obeying His word, trusting in His power, and devoted to His service. We should like Christ-centered lives. All of life must be Christian; belief relates to behavior; creed issues in conduct; and doctrine relates to duty.

B. Precepts for the Outer Life. 3:18-4:6.

1. Relation to the domestic life. 3:18-4:1.

a. Helpmeets and husbands. 3:18-19.

18. Wives, submit. This is an old military figure (Gr hypotassō) meaning to line up under (Eph 5:22) or to subject yourselves in a specialized way. There is no hint of inferiority, but a matter of authority and responsibility in the home. Wives are to be in habitual subjection with implicit trust. This is voluntary, not forced on her by a demanding despot. The wife is a helpmeet (a help suitable to the husband), not a slave. The family is held together by authority and obedience. The wife's submission is prompted by the husband's love. As it is fit in the Lord. As it should be, becoming, and proper. All of life is to be lived in fellowship with Christ. God is emphasizing responsibilities, not rights (Eph 5:22-24).

19. Husbands, love your wives. Keep on loving your wives. This is more than human affection; it is produced by the Holy Spirit. The dominant trait of the Christian husband is self-devotion, not self-satisfaction (Eph 5:25-28). Be not bitter against them. Stop being bitter and do not have the habit of being bitter against them. This sin wrecks many marriages.

b. Families and fathers. 3:20-21.

20. Children, obey your parents in all things. This is an old verb and means to listen under, harken, to hear and heed, to obey. Children are to have the habit of hearing and heeding instructions (Eph 6:1-3). In all things. Continual, not just occasional obedience. This is well-pleasing. Your commendable Christian duty.

21. Fathers, provoke not. Do not have the habit of exasperating your children. This is an old word (Gr erethizō) and means to excite, to nag, to vex, to rouse to resentment (Eph 6:2-4). Fathers exasperate their children by: being inconsiderate, being too demanding, being over-corrective, and being unjust and severe. Parents also provoke their children by continual fault-finding, always frowning, never smiling, and holding other children up as examples. The twig is to be bent with caution, not broken. Lest they be discouraged. This negative purpose with the Greek present subjunctive (Gr athymeo) implies the forbidding of beginning an act. Discouraged means disheartened, depressed, frustrated. Such children are broken in spirit, give up, and feel it is impossible to please. Could this not be the source of the sorrow of so many runaway children?

c. Servants and the served. 3:22-4:1.

22. Servants, obey in all things your masters. Paul does not denounce slavery nor demand its violent overthrow. The slaves with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God:

COLOSSIANS 3:23

23 And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men;

24 Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ.

25 But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and there is no respect of persons.

CHAPTER 4

MASTERS, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven.

2 Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving;

3 Withal praying also for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds:

4 That I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak.

5 Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time.

are part of a household, and they are without rights. They are to constantly obey and give service, not demand freedom. Not with eyeservice as menpleasers. Working only while being under the watchful eye of an exacting master and for the purpose of making a show or gaining human praise. Menpleasers are those who have no higher motives than to please their human masters and curry their favor. In singleness of heart. Literally, without a fold in the heart, under which to hide a false motive. Christians are to have a genuine readiness of heart and undivided purpose, not with pretense or ulterior motive, not half-hearted, but sincere. Fearing God. Rather than the masters according to the flesh. The real motive of service is dreading God's displeasure.

23. Heartily. Literally, out of the soul. Christians are to throw their souls into their work, and labor cheerfully and diligently. As to the Lord. This is the real test of Christian service.

24. Knowing . . . inheritance. The heavenly inheritances are full recompense in return for faithful service. For ye serve the Lord Christ. Christians are actually employed by Christ. This verb could either be an indicative or an imperative, in which case it would mean, keep on slaving for the Lord.

25. But he that doeth wrong. Slave or master, God will pay either one. There is no respect of persons. Literally, receiving of face, judging on the basis of outward appearance. There is respect of persons with man, but not with God. God does not have a double standard; He weighs the unfaithfulness in servants and the unkindness in masters in the same scale of divine equity and justice. There are no partialities, no favorites, and no exceptions with God (I Pet 1:17).

4:1. Masters, give . . . just and equal. Render on your part that which is right and fair; deal equitably. This would solve a lot of problems between management and labor. Knowing . . . a Master in heaven. A reminder that God keeps His eye on the character and the conduct of all men, and that "every one of us shall give account of himself to God" (Rom 14:12).

2. Relation to the world. 4:2-6.

a. Duty of prayer. 4:2-4.

2. Continue in prayer. This is an appeal to give constant attention to prayer. The Christian should persevere steadfastly in intercession (Eph 6:18; Phil 4:6). Watch in the same. Literally, keep awake, give strict attention to and be spiritually alert. You must guard against wandering thoughts, and beware of indifferences (Mt 26:41). With thanksgiving. The heart is to be thankful.

3. Withal. At the same time (Eph 6:18-19). That God would open. Only God can open (I Cor 16:7-9; Rev 3:7). A door. A door for the Word, not the door of the prison. Paul is asking them to pray that he will have the opportunity to proclaim the Word of God (I Cor 16:9; II Cor 2:12). The mystery of Christ. As opposed to the senseless mysteries of the Gnostics. For which I am also in bonds. Paul is conscious that his chains are the result of preaching Christ. Paul is kept in prison, but yet he has opportunities to witness (Phil 1:12).

4. That I may make it manifest. Paul's chief concern is to make the message clear and plain. As I ought to speak. As it is my duty; as it is necessary for me to speak (I Cor 2:4; II Cor 2:14, 17).

b. Duty of propriety. 4:5-6.

5. Walk in wisdom . . . are without. It takes wise walking as well as wise talking to win the lost to Christ. The walk refers to one's behavior. Christians are to conduct themselves wisely, to be prudent in their behavior, and to be discreet in their conduct.

6 Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.

7 All my state shall Tých'Y-cus declare unto you, who is a beloved brother, and a faithful minister and fellow-servant in the Lord:

8 Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that he might know your estate, and comfort your hearts;

9 With O-nēs'i-mus, a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you. They shall make known unto you all things which are done here.

10 Ár-is-tár'chus my fellowprisoner saluteth you, and Marcus, sister's son to Barnabas, (touching whom ye received commandments: if he come unto you, receive him;)

11 And Jesus, which is called Justus, who are of the circumcision. These only are my fellowworkers unto the kingdom of God, which have been a comfort unto me.

12 Ēp'a-phrás, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, always labouring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God.

13 For I bear him record, that he hath a great zeal for you, and them that are in La-od-i-ce'a, and them in HĪ-e-rāp'o-lis.

14 Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas, greet you.

15 Salute the brethren which are in La-od-i-ce'a, and Ným'phas, and the church which is in his house.

16 And when this epistle is read among you, cause that it be read also in the church of the Lā-ōd-i-cē'anś; and that ye likewise read the epistle from La-od-i-ce'a

In order to advance the cause of Christ, we must walk consistently and avoid everything that would turn the unsaved off, and do everything that would turn the unsaved on. Redeeming the time. Buying up (Gr exagorazomai) the opportunity for one's self; making wise and sacred use of every opportunity; using the time to the best possible advantage. There is the price of self-denial and strenuous work to be paid or we will forego the bargain.

6. Let your speech be always with grace. Christ was full of grace and truth (Jn 1:14). Christians are to be gracious, pleasant, attractive, winsome, and courteous. Seasoned with salt. Not insipid, not flat, not dull, not tasteless. Christians are to have an edge of liveliness, and to be marked by purity, wholesomeness, and hallowed pungency. That ye may know . . . answer every man. In order that we can adapt the message to the situation and speak appropriately to each and every man.

V. CONCLUSION. 4:7-18.

7. All my state. My affairs, the things relating to me. Tychicus. The bearer of this letter (cf. Eph 6:21).

8. Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose. Paul has a twofold purpose in sending Tychicus. That he might know your estate. Better, that ye may know our estate, the things concerning us. Comfort your hearts. Give encouragement, rather than consolation.

9. With Onesimus. The co-bearer of the letter, and Philemon's runaway slave. Who is one of you. Now a brother in Christ.

10. Aristarchus my fellow prisoner. From Thessalonica, he accompanied Paul to Jerusalem (Acts 19:29; 20:4). Now in Rome with Paul. Marcus. John Mark who was once rejected by Paul (Acts 15:36-39) but now commended (II Tim 4:11). He was a nephew or cousin of Barnabas.

11. And Jesus, which is called Justus. Joshua, a common name. Who are of the circumcision. Jewish Christians. These only. Not many of Paul's Jewish friends were sympathetic to his mission to the Gentiles. A comfort. Our word paregoric comes from this word.

12. Epaphras, who is one of you. Probably one of the founders of the church at Colossae. He brought Paul news of the conditions in the church. Always laboring fervently for you in prayers. Strenuous intercession, wrestling with God on their behalf. That ye may stand. Stand firm, mature in all the will of God.

13. Great zeal for you. Expending painful toil.

14. Luke, the beloved physician. Luke, the dear and trusted friend, was now with Paul. Demas. In II Timothy 4:10-11, he is mentioned as one who deserted Paul for this present world.

15. Nymphas. This Greek word could either be masculine or feminine, depending on the position of the accent. Then some texts read "his" house and others read "her" house. Scholars are divided as to whether this is a man's name or a woman's name. The church. Christians did not have church buildings until the third century.

16. And when this epistle is read among you. Read in public to the church. The epistle from Laodicea. "The most likely meaning is that the so-called Epistle to the Ephesians was a circular letter to various churches in the province of Asia, one copy going to Laodicea and to be passed on to Colossae as the Colossian letter was to be sent to Laodicea. This was done by 17 And say to Archippus, Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it.

18 The salutation by the hand of me Paul. Remember my bonds. Grace be with you. Amen.

copying and keeping the original" (A. T. Robertson, Word Pictures of the New Testament, Vol. IV, p. 513).

17. And say to Archippus. He is mentioned in Philemon 2 in such a way as to suggest that he was a member of Philemon's household, probably his son. Take heed. Keep an eye on. Thou hast received in the Lord. Archippus was called of the Lord, and most probably had some ministerial responsibility in the church at Colossae. That thou fulfill it. That you keep on filling to the full, discharge fully. This is a lifetime job. God does not discharge His servants.

18. The salutation by the hand of me Paul. Paul adds this salutation in his own handwriting. Remember my bonds. The chain probably clanked as Paul penned the salutation. This is an indirect appeal to pray for his release. Grace be with you. Amen.

The First Epistle To The THESSALONIANS

INTRODUCTION

Historical background. Paul was personally acquainted with the city of Thessalonica and its inhabitants since he founded the church there on his second missionary journey. It had been a Roman free city, in fact the capital of the province of Macedonia, before Paul arrived there. It had a strong city government which was accurately described by Luke (Acts 17:6-7). Thessalonica was also an important city because it was on the Egnatian Way, the main East-West Roman highway.

In the western spread of the gospel, Paul was led by the Spirit all the way. After his first missionary journey with Barnabas, Paul reported his successes as he made his deputation tour of the home churches in Palestine. He began to realize the meaning and power of God's calling him to be the apostle of the Gentiles (Acts 14:27; 15:4). Anxious to return to the work, Paul chose a new companion, Silas, and started out again intending to strengthen the churches and establish new ones (Acts 15:36-41). Very soon, Paul and Silas were joined by Timothy (Acts 16:1-4). It is interesting to note how sensitive to the leading of the Spirit these three missionaries were; in Acts 16:6-9 they followed the Holy Spirit through three changes of course. As they crossed the Galatia-Phrygia border, they intended to go west to Ephesus, the leading city of Asia Minor. They were, however, in some unknown way prevented from doing this, and so followed the Spirit to the north. At the latitude of Mysia, they were again led by the Spirit of the Lord not to go into Bithynia, but instead to turn west once more toward the city of Troas on the Aegean coast. From Troas the Spirit led Paul and the others across the Aegean to Neapolis, Philippi, and then Thessalonica by means of a vision in which Paul saw a man of Macedonia calling for help. This is how the gospel got started on its way westward.

In Europe, Paul and his companions went first to Neapolis, and then founded the Philippian church, and after their miraculous deliverance from the Philippian jail (Acts 16:11-40), went on through Amphipolis and Apollonia to Thessalonica. The Bible mentions that there was a synagogue there (Acts 17:2); this synagogue was the base of operations for Paul's intensive campaign in founding the Thessalonian church (Acts 17:4). "To the Jew first" was Paul's usual method; it was effective here also, but the Jewish believers were far from a majority of those early believers. We also gather from I Thessalonians 1:9, that most of Paul's success was among Gentiles and that the Thessalonian church became a mainly Gentile church. The majority of the Jews at Thessalonica were opposed to Paul from the very beginning and became vehement enemies of the gospel not only there but throughout the area. They even followed Paul to Berea to incite riots against him. Paul escaped, in fact, only with his life to go on to Athens where he waited for his companions Timothy and Silas.

It is evident from both Acts and Thessalonians that Silas and Timothy were active fellow workers with Paul throughout the Thessalonian campaign (see the introductory words of each of the Thessalonian epistles). When Paul, throughout these two epistles, reminds the Thessalonians of things which had been taught or spoken among them, he is probably not using the editorial "we" but referring quite literally to the work of his companions as well as to his own personal accomplishments.

It seems unnecessary to make Paul the only one who could preach and teach the message of the Word of God. Furthermore, Timothy could have continued to establish the young church on his return visit as Paul's delegate. Paul's primary ministry in Thessalonica was probably not much more than a month (Acts 17:2). In that time he and his companions worked night and day not only in the gospel but also supporting themselves with their own hands so that no false accusations could be brought against the gospel.

Occasion of the epistle. At any rate, a beginning had been made for the Thessalonian church in the early part of Paul's second missionary journey, and Paul now had occasion in that same journey to write back to this church which he had established. Silas and Timothy had gotten separated from Paul at Berea. They were to meet Paul in Athens. It was while Paul was waiting at Athens for his companions that he gave his famous Mars Hill sermon and started another church (Acts 17:16-34). Paul used every opportunity to reach the world for Christ. Paul went from Athens to Corinth where he stayed and worked with Priscilla and Aquila (Acts 18:1-4) and where Silas and Timothy also worked (Acts 18:5).

Paul worked for a time in Corinth with the synagogue as his base, but soon made the decision to put all his efforts into working among the Gentiles, where he seemed to be more successful. For a year and a half, Paul taught the Word of God at Corinth. It appears that this long stay provided the opportunity to write the Thessalonian epistles. While he was still in Athens, Paul had sent Timothy to help the rapidly growing Thessalonian church (I Thess 3:1-6). It was evidently in response to Timothy's reports that Paul wrote I Thessalonians.

Date and place of writing. In light of the above discussion, it appears that the city of Corinth is the only acceptable site for the place of writing of I Thessalonians. The subscription in the AV which reads, "The first epistle unto the Thessalonians was written from Athens" is an addition to the text which is not to be accepted in light of the facts.

The date of the epistle is quite easily discerned from the fact that it was written during Paul's long stay at Corinth on his second missionary journey (see Acts 18:5; I Thess 3:6). This period itself can be dated by the reference to the proconsulate of Gallio which, according to a mutilated fragment discovered at Delphi, dated from the summer of A.D. 52. Paul arrived in Corinth before the proconsulate of Gallio, perhaps a year earlier, and thus the writing of I Thessalonians must have taken place in the summer or fall of A.D. 51.

I THESSALONIANS 1:1

Purpose. There seem to be multiple purposes for the writing of this epistle. First, Paul wanted to commend the Thessalonians that they had withstood the temptations of the devil (3:6). They were, too, examples to other believers in the area of steadfastness of faith (1:7). In addition, he writes to admonish them to keep themselves from the immoral practices of the heathen (4:1-8). But the most pressing reason for writing was apparently to reveal information to them about the coming of Christ for His church. Thus, he presents the great doctrine of the Rapture of the church in chapter 4. This would correct any erroneous ideas concerning the relation between the resurrection of the dead and the coming of Christ. It was a source of great comfort to the Thessalonians, as it is for us today.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1.

PAUL, and Sil-vā'nus, and Ti-mō'the-us, unto the church of the Thēs-sa-lō'nī-anš which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ: Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

1:1. Paul, and Silvanus, and Timothy. I Thessalonians may well be the earliest written epistle of the New Testament. Paul is writing from Corinth to encourage and strengthen these new Christians (3:1-6). Timothy had just arrived with the news from the Thessalonians of their splendid growth and Paul makes immediate reply (3:6). The salutation here is in form like that of any everyday Greek letter of the Hellenistic world; it includes the names of Paul's fellow ministers, Silvanus (Acts uses the Semitic form of his name, Silas, rather than the Latin form used here) and Timothy, because they were involved like Paul in the preaching at Thessalonica, and because they too have an interest in this letter and its encouragement to the believers.

The letter is addressed to the church of the Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ. A new entity had come into existence, and the name church (Gr ekklēsia) is applied to it. The word was common, and originally meant simply an "assembly." Jesus had used the term in His teaching (Mt 16:18) to refer to the Christian community and from that time on the word began to take on a specialized and exclusive meaning. The special group at Thessalonica to which Paul now wrote were those who had believed in Christ in response to the preaching of the gospel there (Acts 17:2-4). These people were probably immediately baptized like those in Philippi (Acts 16:33-34), and became the nucleus of the Christian community there. The word "church" is used over one hundred times in the New Testament, and nearly always has the same technical meaning as here: a local group of baptized believers in Christ. The church is said to be in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ, which limits the word "church" to its new technical meaning. In the New Testament, the word "church" never refers to a building. The people of Thessalonica believe in God and have committed themselves to Christ as the promised Old Testament Messiah (cf. Acts 17:1-4; II Thess 1:1).

Grace be unto you, and peace. This is the normal greeting in an everyday letter except that it has been adapted for Christian use.

II. PERSONAL RELATIONS WITH THE THESSALONIANS. 1:2-3:13.

A. Thanksgiving and Praise. 1:2-10.

2 We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers;

3 Remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father;

4 Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God.

5 For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake.

6 And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost:

7 So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and A-chā'ia.

8 For from you sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and A-chā'ia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak any thing.

2. We give thanks to God always for you. The "we" in these epistles is probably not editorial. Paul and his colleagues in the ministry are honestly thankful for their eager response to the Word of God.

3. The reason for thanksgiving is specifically named: they gave thanks because they remembered the faith . . . love and . . . hope of these new Christians. This is Paul's famous trilogy, "Faith, hope, and love live on" (I Cor 13:13)! See also Paul's commendation of the Colossians for the same spiritual qualities (Col 1:4-5), and observe the similar words of the Lord to the pastor of the Ephesian church (Rev 2:2).

It is interesting to note that the word patience (Gr hyponōē) might be better translated "steadfastness," since it refers to their specific endurance of evil treatment and opposition by the Thessalonian Jews, during which these new Christians had their hopes in the return of Christ and drew their comfort from that alone. The hope of His coming has given strength to endure to Christians of all ages since that time.

4. Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God. A less vague translation here would be, "We know, brethren beloved by God, that He has chosen you." The fact of election cannot be known until after a person has been saved. Paul explains how he was able to recognize it in the Thessalonians: it was their positive response to the gospel (1:5-9).

5. For our gospel came not unto you in word only. The word gospel (Gr euangelion) means "good news." This word was adopted as a technical term for the Christian message which is succinctly stated by Paul in I Corinthians 15:1-4 and finds complete expression in the four Gospels. In word only refers to the effect of the gospel. It was not mere human words; the words contained a mysterious power, the power of the Holy Spirit to change their lives. Paul describes the power of the message in a similar way when he writes to the Corinthians (I Cor 2:3-4).

6. And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word. It was because of their "reception" (Gr dechomai) of the Word (which means to receive in a respectful, obedient, and favorable way) that they became followers. A more literal translation would be, "You became imitators." The joy of the Holy Ghost is to be interpreted as a Greek subjective genitive: it is joy inspired by the Holy Spirit. Receiving the Word is receiving Christ, receiving Christ is receiving the Holy Spirit, and He brings joy and gladness. He inspires confidence and liberty in our lives.

7. The effect of the gospel was so powerful that Thessalonians became examples to the whole province of Macedonia, of which their town was the capital. The word examples (Gr typos) is singular in the original and refers not to a number of individual examples of Christian living, but rather to the single pattern of response to the Word. It was this willingness to obey the good news and believe in Christ as the Messiah promised in the Old Testament that Paul praised.

8. For from you sounded out the word of the Lord. It should be observed here that the word sounded out (Gr exēcheō) means to "bounce off" and is the word from which we get the English "echo." The Thessalonians became a sounding-board from which the gospel would echo across the world. Paul states hyperbolically that he hardly needed to preach where people had heard of the faith of the Thessalonians; he had only to ask,

9 For they themselves shew of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God;

10 And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.

CHAPTER 2

FOR yourselves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain:

2 But even after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated, as ye know, at Phi-lip'pi, we were bold in our God to speak unto you the gospel of God with much contention.

“Have you heard what happened?” The fantastic story of the conversion from idols to God was known everywhere.

9. Ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God. The word turned (Gr epistrepō) corresponds more precisely to our English word “conversion.” The Thessalonians were a classic example of Christian conversion. Conversion involves both positive and negative elements; one turns from one thing to something else. Here the positive element is stressed: they turned to God. This was a complete reversal in their religious philosophy. It was not that they “got religion” so much as that they changed religions. They turned from a pagan religion to the Christian God to worship Him through Jesus Christ. Idols were an integral part of life for pagans. I Corinthians 12:2 shows that, whatever the moving force, non-Christians are drawn to idols or false religions. It takes the reality of the true God to draw people away from the power of superstition. In the Christian religion God must be first. The Ten Commandments (Ex 20:1-17) show how that we must worship God alone. It is interesting that the word serve (Gr douleuō) means literally to be a slave to, and alludes to the Old Testament bondsman who was the personal property of another. So complete is real conversion to Christianity that one is “sold out” completely to God. We belong to Him: it is bondage, but it is a bondage of love. We love Him and want to do only His will. This is, in fact, the very heart of Christianity. God is the living God in contrast to idols which have no life, and the true God in contrast to all the false gods of the pagan world.

10. And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come. Wait (Gr anamēnō) means more than just wait; it emphasizes an expectant and active attempt to live for His glory in the meantime. It is an attitude of faith toward the complete fulfillment of the messianic promises of the Old Testament in the second coming of Christ. These last two verses contain the basic tenets of Christianity: conversion, worship of God, hope in the Second Coming, belief in the resurrection of Jesus, complete faith in salvation from the wrath of God which will surely come upon all those who do not accept Christ.

B. Defense of Paul's Motives. 2:1-12.

2:1-2. For yourselves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain. Verses 1-12 imply that there had been slanderous accusations against Paul's work and motives. Part of the purpose of the letter is to show that the allegations were far from the truth. This is important, not just for Paul personally, but for the growth and development of the Thessalonians themselves. If they had begun to believe that Paul's gospel was just another philosophical dream, and that Paul was just “in it for the money,” they could not have continued to grow in Christ. It was not that Paul's reputation alone was at stake, but that their Christian faith was in danger. Paul's coming to the Thessalonians was not in vain (Gr kenos). The word denotes what is empty of real meaning and purpose. Paul had come to them because he believed the gospel himself, and truly felt that the people of Thessalonica were eternally lost without that message. The argument is that Paul would have quit at Philippi (vs. 2), and would never have gotten to Thessalonica in the first place, had he been there for the money or for anything less than the call of God. He had no other choice but to go on to Thessalonica, “although” (Greek circumstantial participle of concession) he had already suffered shamefully (Acts 16:20-24), and although he knew that it would happen again (Acts 17:5). Paul and his companions were driven by the purest motives. They were completely committed to their own message and concerned for the welfare of the Thessalonians.

3 For our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile:

4 But as we were allowed of God to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak; not as pleasing men, but God, which trieth our hearts.

5 For neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness; God is witness:

6 Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when we might have been burdensome, as the apostles of Christ.

7 But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children:

8 So being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

9 For ye remember, brethren, our labour and travail: for labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of God.

3-4. For our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile. Paul appealed to the impartial judgment of his readers. Could they honestly say that Paul and his companions had ever acted like someone trying to deceive? Had there been any hint of impure motives? Had they not rather spoken like men who had been entrusted with the gospel message? Twice in verse 4 Paul uses the word "approved" (Gr dokimazō) by God, which means that God has "checked them out" by His own standards and has put His stamp of approval on them. Paul derived a great deal of personal confidence from the fact that God had "entrusted" (Gr pisteuō) him with the gospel (see also I Tim 1:11-12). His goal in life was not to "please" men but God (Gal 1:10). Had he not outwardly seemed true to this inner motivation?

5-6. For neither at any time used we flattering words . . . nor a cloak of covetousness. Paul calls upon God as his witness that none of their activities had been a cloak of covetousness. The word cloak (Gr prophasis) means an "excuse," "cover-up," or "front" for an impure motive of greed. We were not after glory (Gr doxa) says Paul, using the word from which we get our word "doxology." It is interesting that in John 12:43 this same word is used to condemn the Pharisees who "loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." Paul could have claimed that glory, in fact he had been a Pharisee before his own conversion. Now, he could have claimed similar glory as an apostle (Gr apostolos). He refers to himself and to his companions as apostles, since he considers them to be representatives of Christ with a commission, like his own. This word obviously is not limited in its use in the New Testament to the Twelve. That they might have been burdensome should rather be translated, "we might have made great demands." It is an idiom requiring this meaning. Elsewhere (e.g., II Cor 11:9) Paul shows that he believes that ministers of the gospel should be supported financially by the gifts of God's people. The thought of this passage is obvious: they did not even take what they had a right to because they were so motivated to get the gospel out. How could anyone accuse them of impure motives?

7. But we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children. It seems probable, although there is little certainty about the matter, that the text in verse 7 should read, "we came like infants," rather than, "we were gentle among you." If this reading is taken, the meaning would go with the previous verse. Far from coming like authoritative apostles, Paul and the others claimed no more prestige than mere infants. Paul next applies the metaphor of a nurse (Gr trophos) to himself and his companions. This word comes from a root meaning to "feed," "nourish," "support," and "provide with food." The word can also refer to a "mother," and that translation would probably make better sense here. The word cherisheth means to "take warm and tender care of." It is found also in Ephesians 5:29, where a man "takes care of" his own body. The portrait Paul intends to paint in this verse is that of a mother tenderly caring for all the needs of her own children. A few verses later in verse 11 Paul changes the figure to a father, and again it is the father taking care of his own children. It was mother-father love that motivated Paul and his companions, rather than greed as someone must have suggested.

8-9. Also our own souls. According to verse 8, they had made up their minds to share not only the gospel, but also their own lives. In verse 9, Paul asks his readers simply to recall the fact that Paul and his companions worked hard with their own hands to support themselves while they were in Thessalonica in order that they might not be a burden to the people. It was customary in Palestine for rabbis to have a secular trade with which they supported themselves. We learn from Acts 18:3 that Paul's trade was tentmaking. The two words labor and travail

10 Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe:

11 As ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children, 12 That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

13 For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.

are also used in the same context in II Corinthians 11:27 and II Thessalonians 3:8. They denote work which is very tiring and very difficult. Paul did not consider it wrong to receive help from preaching the gospel, in fact he received a gift from the Philippian church while he was at Thessalonica (Phil 4:16). His point here was that he had not made any demands on these people even though he had a right to do so. The word translated preached (Gr kēryssō) means to “proclaim.” Note that in verse 8 the gospel is imperted, and in verse 9 it is preached. Also note that it is the gospel of God here, meaning that God has given it to Paul to preach.

10. Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe. Here Paul stresses qualities of conduct which could have been denied by the Thessalonians if they were not true. Their conduct was holy, just, and blameless. It is obvious that these things were true and known by all readers. In this verse the Thessalonians are called “believers” which is synonymous with “Christians” and shows again that the church is made up of believers in Christ.

11-12. Paul again refers to the father figure to sum up and justify their apostolic activities as they founded the church. They exhorted (Gr parakaleō) the believers, which means literally to “encourage.” The noun form of this word is used as a name for the Holy Spirit (Comforter). The second word used here, comforted (Gr paramytheō) can be used of physical comforting as well as giving mental assurance. We can only guess as to the kind of comfort Paul and his companions may have given, but obviously some kind of consolation was needed in the face of the opposition of these Jews who had almost killed Paul. The third summary word here, charged (Gr martyreō), means to “witness” or “testify.” It is the word from which we get our English word “martyr.” The result toward which all this apostolic activity was directed is again stated by Paul, That ye would walk worthy of God. All through the New Testament, the Christian life and conduct are referred to as a walk. Here also, Paul is referring to proper Christian conduct which, of course, was quite different from the generally accepted conduct of the day.

C. Reception of the Word of God. 2:13-16.

13. For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe. Verse 13 is a very important verse because of its implications for inspiration and for the Christian attitude toward the Scriptures. There are several distinctions intended by Paul which do not come across in the translations of this verse. The first is the distinction between the words here translated received. The first occurrence (Gr paralambanō) is a word which means to “take to oneself.” In this context it means to listen to and apply the words that were spoken. It could have been used of the teaching of any philosopher of the day. The second occurrence (Gr dechomai) is a word which means primarily “to receive” in the sense of receiving a guest, entertaining someone, or welcoming with open arms a true friend; this word involves much more commitment. This is the word that shows the responsive attitude of all true believers for God’s Word.

It is also important in this verse to distinguish between the three occurrences of word (Gr logos). The first occurrence would be literally “word of hearing” and is a technical term for the “preached word” of the prophets and apostles. This same expression translates Isaiah 53:1, “Who hath believed our report?” It is alluded to several times in the New Testament (Jn 12:38; Rom 10:16). Hebrews 4:2 uses this technical term to allude to the promise made to the Israelites that they would enter the Promised Land. Paul also used the term of his own preaching to the Galatians (Gal 3:2, 5). The meaning in Thessalonians is that the people not only listened to and applied the preaching of the apostles, and gladly recognized this message as something more than a merely human message (word of men), but welcomed it for what it really was, the word of God. This kind of response to the Word of God is characteristic of every true believer. Effectually worketh (Gr energeō) means simply to be "effective." It is interesting that this same word is found in the same connection in Galatians 3:2, 5 and that it is the Spirit of God in both passages who causes believers to recognize the Word of God. Although Paul does not refer to the written Word of God in I Thessalonians 2:13, the implications are the same, and the oral message was just as inspired and just as authoritative. It was a word spoken by God (Greek subjective genitive) so that this verse is, in effect, parallel to II Timothy 3:16.

14 For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judæa are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews:

14. For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judæa are in Christ Jesus. Paul once more refers to the Thessalonians as followers or "imitators" (1:6). This is another reference to the persecution which these people suffered when they became Christians, at the hands of their own fellow citizens. Paul himself had been guilty of persecuting Christian churches prior to his conversion. There were already at that early date many churches (plural) in Palestine, and persecution must have been a part of their lives from the very beginning. The persecution in Thessalonica was different only in that it was carried out by Gentiles rather than by Jews.

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men:

15. Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us. Paul's sentence structure in the original emphasizes that the one whom they murdered was Jesus the Lord. Jesus Himself had reminded the Pharisees and the leaders of the Jews that prophets and wise men and scribes had been subjected to murder and beating by their ancestors (Mt 23:34). Peter denounced the Jews of Jerusalem for the murder of Jesus, even though His death was a part of the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God (Acts 2:23). Paul now justly charges the Jews of Thessalonica with their recent persecution of himself.

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.

16. Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles. Not only did the Jews persecute Paul and his companions at Thessalonica, but time after time in his life they have tried to prevent him from preaching to the Gentiles, thus hindering them from being saved. Jesus had strongly condemned those who would hinder people from believing and being saved (Mark 9:42), and Paul now reinforces that condemnation.

D. Timothy's Service There. 2:17-3:5.

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time in presence, not in heart, endeavoured the more abundantly to see your face with great desire.

17-20. Being taken from you. The word used here (Gr aporphanizō) is colorful and intensely passionate. It is related to our word "orphan," and might be translated "since we have been torn apart." It shows the characteristically strong emotional involvement of Paul with his converts everywhere; they were his children, his relatives, his joy and crown. His heart, he said, was still with them even though they had been separated. Paul had also been unable to get back and visit them personally, but in spite of his strong desire Satan somehow blocked his efforts. Paul assures them of his great love for them, and points forward to the hope of the Second Coming (Gr parousia). This is the first use of this term in the New Testament, although it was common in the Hellenistic world for the formal visits of royalty. This word became a technical term for the Second Coming of Christ. It is so used eighteen times in the New Testament and seven of these are in the Thessalonian epistles.

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you, even I Paul, once and again; but Satan hindered us.

19 For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?

3:1-2. Wherefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone. Finally, Paul 20 For ye are our glory and joy.

I THESSALONIANS 3:2

er forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone;

2 And sent Ti-mō'the-us, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow-labourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith:

3 That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto.

4 For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulation; even as it came to pass, and ye know.

5 For this cause, when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and our labour be in vain.

6 But now when Ti-mō'the-us came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, as we also to see you:

7 Therefore, brethren, we were comforted over you in all our affliction and distress by your faith:

8 For now we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord.

9 For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes before our God;

10 Night and day praying exceedingly-decided to send Timothy to help the Thessalonians while he himself continued the work in Athens. The we seems to be editorial here; he probably really intends "I sent" since he speaks of being left alone. It is not possible to know the whereabouts of Silas at this time. Minister of God is a variant reading which was probably substituted for the more prestigious "God's fellowworker" (Gr synergos). Paul had used this term when he wrote to the Corinthians to refer to himself and Apollos as "laborers together with God" (I Cor 3:9), in distinction to the Corinthian believers themselves who were "God's field," or "God's building" in the metaphor.

The reason Paul sends Timothy to the Thessalonians is, first, to establish (Gr stērizō). The word means "to stabilize," or to support an already existing structure. In the New Testament this word is used in the figurative sense of stabilizing believers. The other reason is to comfort (Gr parakleō), which should be translated "encourage" rather than comfort. It is the word from which we get the name of the Holy Spirit in John, namely "the Comforter." The same word is used of Christ in I John 2:1, where it means a legal advocate. A better translation might be, "to support and help you in your faith."

3-4. That no man should be moved by these afflictions. Paul explains Timothy's mission: moved (Gr sainō) means usually "wave," "wag the tail." Perhaps here it means "wobble," and thus collapse. This would carry on the figure of Timothy's stabilizing or "buttressing" their faith like a wall. The afflictions (Gr thlipsis) are those which had just been experienced as reported by Timothy. Paul had warned that they would come.

5. For this cause. Paul again states his reason for sending Timothy: he had to know that the Thessalonians were surviving the temptations of Satan and that Paul's work in Thessalonica had not been in vain.

E. Response to Timothy's Report. 3:6-13.

6. But now when Timothy came from you unto us. The sense of the original here is that Timothy has just now arrived with the news when Paul sat down to write. This clearly shows the occasion and purpose of the letter. When Timothy arrived, his news was good; so good in fact, that brought us good tidings is the same word (Gr euangelizomai) often translated "preach the gospel." Paul was glad to hear of their faith and love, and the fact that they had wanted to see him just as much as he had wanted to see them.

7. Therefore, brethren, we were comforted (Gr parakaleō). This is again the word which means "help" or "encourage." Another translation has, "we have been encouraged about you." The encouragement was badly needed. Paul was himself in affliction and distress. Both of these words are strong. The first (Gr anangkē) is related to the word from which we get "anxiety," while the second (Gr thlipsis) means "rubbing" or "pressure," and is the word often translated in the New Testament "tribulation." The thing that gave Paul the needed encouragement was the faith of these converts.

8. For now we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord. The idea is that we can now carry on, since we know that you are holding your ground in the faith. The word stand fast is not the usual word for stand; it meant rather "to take a stand." This gives Paul the courage to go on, now that he knows that he has made some real converts.

9-10. For what thanks can we render to God again for you . . . ? A better translation would be, "for what thanksgiving" (Gr eucharistia); it is the word from which we get the English word "eucharist." Render (Gr antapodidōmi) has the sense of paying back something owed. The meaning is that we as Christ-ly that we might see your face, and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith?

11 Now God himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, direct our way unto you.

12 And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you:

13 To the end he may stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.

CHAPTER 4

FURTHERMORE then we beseech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, so ye would abound more and more.

2 For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is the will of God, even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication:

4 That every one of you should know

ians owe to God joyful thanksgiving and praise for what He has done.

11-12. Now God himself and our Father. Another order is possible: "Now may our God and Father Himself, and our Lord Jesus direct our way to you." The Greek verb is optative (to express a wish), as are the two in verse 12. Paul has a threefold desire, or really a "prayer," since it calls upon God. He asks for himself, that God would direct his path back to the people of Thessalonica. He must, however, leave this desire in the hands of the Heavenly Father. He also asks for them, that the Lord may cause their love to continue to grow beyond all limits both among themselves and toward others outside the church.

13. To the end he may stablish. This is the purpose to which Paul's prayers are directed. Stablish (Gr sterizō) means to "but-tress" or "support" an existing structure; here the personal faith of the Thessalonians is in view. The desire is that they will be strengthened in holiness as they wait for the coming Saviour. At the coming (Gr parousia), Paul again uses what has become a Christian technical term for the Second Coming. It is qualified here by the words with all his saints. The adjective saints (Gr hagios) is used here in the masculine plural, and may refer to holy persons, namely believers (Eph 1:1), or to holy beings like angels (Mk 8:38). It is possible that both are in view.

III. PRACTICAL EXHORTATIONS. 4:1-5:28.

A. Sanctification. 4:1-8.

4:1. Furthermore then we beseech you, brethren. Vss. 1-12 comprise a key section in the book, perhaps the main point of the letter. The word furthermore (Gr loipos) may be an indication of this. At any rate, Paul now gets down to business and tells how we should live. This section on practical theology was especially important for the Thessalonians as Gentiles (vs. 5), since they had no customary moral traditions like the Jews. The words beseech and exhort are ordinary words meaning "ask" and "encourage" but here they are tempered with by the Lord Jesus. This becomes then an authoritative expression of Christian living. Paul has already passed on this Christian traditional information to the Thessalonians by word of mouth in his preaching. Now, he gives it to them in writing. The topic is very clearly labeled, how ye ought to walk, and means precisely, "how you must live and please God." These two verbs are in the present tense in Greek, implying that Christianity is a way of life which characterizes all our activities and not just a few of the things we do. It is also interesting to note from verse 1, that Paul acknowledges the fact that his readers are already living according to Christian standards; he is merely encouraging them to continue to grow as they already have.

2. For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus. Again the word commandments shows that these exhortations to purity are Christian moral standards. That these are not to be taken lightly is further indicated in this verse by the reference to Paul's apostolic authority; he is acting through the Lord Jesus, or we might say as His representative.

3. For this is the will of God. Verses 1 and 2 were quite general, while verses 3-8 are specific. In this passage Paul has in mind sanctification or "holiness" (Gr hagiasmos) as it relates specifically to sexual purity. He says in verse 3 that sanctification means to abstain from fornication (Gr porneia). This is the general word for any kind of illicit sexual intercourse, prostitution, premarital sex, or adultery. Paul is here emphasizing the negative side of sanctification when he tells his readers to abstain (the Greek word means to keep oneself entirely away from).

4-5. Every one of you should know how to possess. This is the positive side of sanctification in this same matter. A better how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour;

I THESSALONIANS 4:5

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God:

6 That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter: because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.

7 For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness.

8 He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us his holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you: for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another.

10 And indeed ye do it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more;

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you; translation of verse 4, “that each of you know how to take a wife for himself in holiness and honor.” The word vessel (Gr skeuos) is used of the wife as the “weaker vessel” in I Peter 3:7. Sanctity in marriage was something brand-new for the Thessalonians who had come from obviously corrupt Gentile culture. They grew up not knowing God, and now that they had turned to God they needed to know and conform to Christian standards.

12 That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack of nothing.

6-7. That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter. Several words need explanation here. First, go beyond (Gr hyperbainō) means quite literally “to overstep” or “break laws.” In this context it obviously means to break this moral law. Secondly, if he does break this moral law, a man will, by that very fact, defraud (Gr pleonekteō) his brother. This word denotes “taking advantage of,” “robbing,” or “cheating someone” through greed. A comment is also needed on the phrase in any matter. The construction in the original language of the New Testament (an article of previous reference) allows only one meaning here. It is not just any matter that is in view, but specifically this matter which has just been mentioned, that is unethical sexual activity. The sense of the passage is then that when a man does not live with his own wife as he should, but instead commits adultery with someone else’s, he must know that he has violated, or “robbed” his brother by so doing, and that he deserves the vengeance of God. To show the seriousness of his sin, Paul alludes to Psalm 94:1 where God is called the “God of vengeance.” Note that according to verse 7, this kind of conduct is the opposite of holiness and is called uncleanness. To be sanctified according to God’s will must mean to be pure or clean in this matter.

8. He therefore that despiseth. Paul here seems to allude to a saying of Jesus recorded in Luke 10:16, where Jesus gives authority to the apostles, and literally explains, “whoever obeys you obeys me, and whoever rejects you rejects me; the person who rejects me, rejects the one who sent me.” Note that “despise” and “reject” translate the same Greek word.

B. Love. 4:9-12.

9. But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you. This is a way of reminding the Thessalonians about the importance of brotherly love (Gr philadelphia) without sounding too harsh. Taught of God is one word in the original and implies that they should automatically know that God expects them to love (Gr agapaō) one another.

10-12. And that ye study (Gr philotimeomai). This word does not refer to study in the sense of opening books or reading; it means “to desire,” or “to determine.” A possibly clearer translation would be, “aspire to live quietly and take care of your own affairs while you work with your hands as we instructed you.” We gather from this passage, and from II Thessalonians 3:11, that some of the believers in this church believed that the Second Coming of Christ was very near, and in their zeal, abandoned their jobs. Paul gets into the social implications of the gospel when he tells them to look after their families and continue their secular work. According to verse 12 it would be wrong and harmful to their testimonies to depend upon the church to feed their families. Furthermore this might cause actual poverty and economic recession. These verses are then significant for the Christian work ethic.

C. Comfort for the Bereaved. 4:13-18.

There are several indications in these letters that Paul had given considerable emphasis to the Second Coming when he preached to the Thessalonians. One problem, as we have seen, was that some of the Thessalonians quit work to wait for Jesus to come back. In this section of the letter Paul replies to those who had lost loved ones in death since Paul had left. They wondered about the spiritual welfare of those who had died. What a tragedy, they must have thought, for their friends to have died before the return of the Lord. Would they now miss all the blessings of believers at the Second Coming? Would they still be saved even though they died before the Parousia?

13. But I would not have you to be ignorant. Although this sounds insulting to our ears, it was a formula Paul used often to mean simply, "I have something I want to tell you." The same introductory clause is used in Romans 1:13; 11:25; I Corinthians 10:1; II Corinthians 1:8. Concerning them which are asleep. This, of course, is not to be taken literally. Paul is not talking about those who are asleep, but about those who are dead. This euphemistic metaphor is common to all languages and religions and is used often in the New Testament (Mt 27:52). The word is also used in the same metaphorical sense in verses 14 and 15. That ye sorrow not. This is Paul's purpose for wanting to tell them about the dead. The Greek verb is in the present tense, making possible the translation, "so that you will not continue to grieve as others do." Paul intends to impart knowledge which they may find comforting. Others which have no hope. The word hope (Gr elpis) is the key to this passage. In the New Testament this word refers to a "certain expectation," rather than something one wishes might happen. The Christian's hope is resurrection. It is the doctrine of the resurrection which here provides hope concerning the loved ones who have died; we know for certain that they will rise. The certainty of the resurrection for the Christian is based upon the resurrection of Jesus Christ our Lord. An obvious parallel is I Corinthians 15. Christ arose according to the Scriptures and appeared to many as indisputable truth. Paul shows the relationship between the resurrection of Christ and that of Christians in I Corinthians 15:20; the fact is, however, that "now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." So the argument runs that since Christ rose from the dead, so we shall rise at His coming (cf. I Cor 15:23).

14 For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

14. Them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Again, it is the resurrection of departed saints which is based on the resurrection of Christ. We believe that Jesus died and rose again (as the first fruits), so we have the "sure expectation" that God will raise the saints as He raised Jesus. Bring (Gr agō) could mean that God will bring saints back to the earth with him in the Parousia, but that does not seem to follow in the context. Since the first part of verse 14 refers to the death and resurrection of Christ, the last part of the verse should have a corresponding death and resurrection of believers. The death of believers is obvious from them also which sleep in Jesus, but the resurrection must be implied in the word bring. At the very least, the word must imply a resurrection in order for God to bring them back with Jesus at His Coming.

15 For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep.

15. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord. By this Paul intends to make an authoritative announcement (cf. I Cor 7:10). Shall not prevent them which are asleep. The word prevent (Gr phthanō) has the meaning "precede." A better translation would be, "we who are alive, who are left until the coming of the Lord, shall not precede those who have fallen asleep." The construction in the original language (the subjunctive of emphatic future negation) emphasizes the fact that the living have no advantage over the dead at the coming of the Lord. This is clearly demonstrated in the next two verses, where Paul gives the order of events step by step.

16 For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first:

16-18. First, the Lord himself shall descend. This is qualified by three attendant circumstances each introduced with the same preposition in the original: a command, an archangel's voice, and a trumpet blast. Second, the dead in Christ shall rise first. The word rise denotes the resurrection of the body, and not "rising" into the air. Likewise first, means that this resur-

17 Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

18 Wherefore comfort one another with these words.

CHAPTER 5

BUT of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.

5 Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.

7 For they that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drunken are drunken in the night.

rection occurs before the Rapture. Verse 17 indicates the third item in order; "then" means the next thing in order after their resurrection. We which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them. It is important to note that the whole church, including those who have died prior to this event, as well as those who are still alive, is caught up together. There is no advantage either way. It is from the word caught up (Gr harpazō) in the Latin translation we get our word "rapture." The word in the original means "snatch," or "seize," and denotes a sudden violent taking away. The word pictures being "swept off" into the air as by a tornado. The result of this sweeping away, of course, is that we meet the Lord. Paul points out that these words are to be used by the Thessalonians to comfort one another concerning the welfare of their loved ones who have passed on. They will be reunited at His Coming!

D. Apocalyptic Encouragement. 5:1-11.

5:1-2. But of the times and the seasons. Two synonyms for time are used; the first (Gr chronos) denotes chronological extension or "periods of time." The second (Gr kairos) denotes "specific points" in time when designated events occur. Paul states that the Thessalonians have no need for him to write about either "periods of time" which must elapse or "designated points in time" when something, like the Parousia, might occur.

The reason that Paul would not need to write is introduced in 5:2. They know perfectly well that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. Paul here identifies the Old Testament "Day of the Lord" with the Parousia. The prominent idea associated with that Day in the Old Testament, and in this passage as well, is that of "judgment" and destruction upon the enemies of God. This stands in striking contrast to the previous passage (4:13-18), where the emphasis was hope and resurrection. The difference of course is one of focus; it depends upon whether believers or unbelievers are in view. The simile of the thief in the night heightens the element of surprise for unbelievers in the day of the Lord. Paul had perhaps taught the Thessalonians the words of the Lord Jesus himself concerning that day; Jesus had also called it "the coming of the Son of man" (Mt 24:37), and had said that the time was unknown to the angels of heaven and to Himself. Jesus had alluded to the flood in the time of Noah and the fact that the people were completely surprised and swept away by the flood.

3. Peace and safety. These were slogans of the Roman Empire. The suddenness of the event is portrayed by yet another simile, that of a pregnant woman's labor pains. Just that quickly destruction will be upon (Gr ephistēmi) them. The fact that this verb is in the perfect tense in Greek emphasizes the certainty or reality of the destruction. People in catastrophic situations have wondered, "Can this really be happening?" Paul is saying that the destruction of the Day of the Lord will not only be sudden, but it will be certain, and those upon whom it comes will definitely not escape (emphasized in Greek by the subjunctive of emphatic future negation)!

4-7. But ye. Paul, having focused briefly on the negative aspects of the Parousia, now moves to its positive aspects. This contrast is marked in the Greek text by the use of the emphatic personal pronoun with the adversative conjunction. Paul now makes full use of the symbols, day and night. His readers, since they have been saved, are children of light, which is an Old Testament figure meaning to be characterized by light, as opposed to darkness. Therefore, the negative aspects of his former simile of the thief do not apply to them. He is not trying to scare them with the Second Coming. Instead, he gives several exhortations (the Greek hortatory subjunctive corresponds to the occurrence of "let us" in the English text). The exhortations about not sleeping, and being sober correspond exactly to Paul's exhortation elsewhere to “redeem the time.” The idea is that we must take advantage of every opportunity to serve Jesus Christ (Eph 5:16).

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation.

9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ,

10 Who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.

11 Wherefore comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

13 And to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. And be at peace among yourselves.

14 Now we exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feebleminded, support the weak, be patient toward all men.

15 See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men.

16 Rejoice evermore.

17 Pray without ceasing.

18 In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.

19 Quench not the Spirit.

20 Despise not prophesyings.

21 Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

8. The metaphors of faith . . . love and . . . hope as pieces of armor are given more fully in Ephesians 6:14-17, but originally came from the Old Testament (Isa 59:17).

9. For God hath not appointed us to wrath. This again shows the intended contrast between believers and unbelievers at the time of the Second Coming. God has designed for us as believers that we should obtain (Gr peripoiēsis) salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ at His coming.

10. Who died for us. These words explain how salvation is by Jesus Christ. His accomplishment of salvation is through His death for us. The purpose for which He died, to put it another way, was in order that we might live together with Him. Again in this verse, it is the resurrection of Jesus Christ which is the basis of our new life in Christ and our hope of the resurrection.

11. Comfort yourselves together, and edify one another. The two verbs are in the present tense in Greek implying a continuing obligation of believers to “encourage” and “build” one another. This is, of course, one of the reasons for fellowship together in the church.

E. Summary Exhortations. 5:12-22.

12. The first exhortation concerns the leaders of the Thessalonian church who labor among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you. The words who are over you (Gr proistēmi) obviously indicate a governing leadership, and refer to spiritual leaders like pastors, elders, or bishops. Since the church was very young, its leaders must have been appointed by the apostolic missionaries in a manner similar to that mentioned in Acts 14:23. Paul asks his readers to know or recognize and appreciate the spiritual leaders. The spiritual nature of their leadership is indicated by in the Lord.

13. Esteem them very highly in love. The adverb here (Gr hyperekperissōs) is a double compound with a very intensive meaning which is probably quite adequately translated by very highly in the English text. The means of this high regard is suggested by in love. The reason for the high regard is that they have earned respect by their work. Paul in fact used the same word to describe their labor as he had used earlier for his own.

14. This verse sums up the responsibilities of Christians one toward another in three areas of ministry. A different imperative verb is used with each distinct group, implying that one's method must change according to the type of ministry. The first imperative (Gr noutheteō), warn, denotes a rather firm reminder to be used with the unruly (Gr ataktos, meaning, “incorrigible”). The second imperative (Gr paramytheō), comfort indicates soothing and comforting words for those who are “depressed” or discouraged (feeble-minded has other connotations not found in this verse). The third imperative (Gr antechomai), support calls for a supportive ministry for those who are weak or sick. The fourth exhortation in the verse is general, be patient, and encourages true patience toward all men.

15-18. Paying back evil with evil, in a manner similar to the Old Testament “eye for an eye,” is not a part of the Christian philosophy; we must pursue what is good in our relationships to all men. Paul encourages other positive attitudes: a continual joy, or looking for the positive possibilities in every situation, persistent prayer, and thanksgiving. These are the things which are in accord with God's will for the Christian.

19-22. Quench (Gr sbennymi) means in this context to “suppress.” It is, in fact, a synonym of the word despise in verse 20. The work of the Spirit should never be quenched, stifled, or suppressed. Verse 20 is parallel to verse 19; a gift like prophesy-

I THESSALONIANS 5:22

22 Abstain from all appearance of evil.

23 And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

24 Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.

25 Brethren, pray for us.

26 Greet all the brethren with a holy kiss.

27 I charge you by the Lord that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.

28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

ing is not to be despised or belittled. Yet, in spite of the fact that the Thessalonians are quite literally called upon to stop these kinds of activities, they are encouraged to continue "testing" all things, that is, applying Christian principles to all situations, and to continue holding fast to that which is good. The idea is that, while they should not hinder someone who is genuinely working for God, neither should they be gullible and accept anyone who claims to be religious. Paul also reminds them that they should continue to abstain (Gr apechō) from every possible kind of evil. What Paul is calling for here is balance; Christians should neither be overcritical nor gullible.

IV. CONCLUSION. 5:23-28.

23-24. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly. Paul's prayer for the Thessalonians here is put in the form of a wish (optative of wish) and might better be translated as, "may the God of peace himself sanctify you completely." The word sanctify (Gr hagiazō) is related to the word "holiness" and implies that God himself is the ultimate influence in changing a man's life. Holiness is more than a set of rules which can be legally imposed. Holiness or sanctification is the work of God's Holy Spirit who indwells us. Paul, having done all that is within his power to teach the Thessalonians to be holy, now commits them to God who alone can make them holy. I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless, should rather be translated "may your spirit, soul, and body be kept sound and blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Paul is not here giving us a list of the separable parts of man, but is simply asking God to preserve the whole man in safety and holiness so that there will be no reason for shame or punishment at the coming of Christ (cf. Phil 1:10). Again, verse 25 emphasizes that, as it is God who saves, so it is God who keeps; God called them in the first place, and He will preserve them.

25-28. In his close, Paul asks for their continued prayers for him. The affection intended is indicated by the use of the term Brethren, the intimate pray for us, and the issuing of a holy kiss by mail. Prior to the words of benediction, Paul solemnly gives a charge (Gr enorkizō), by an oath to the Lord, that this letter be read aloud (Gr anaginōskō) to all the brethren. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

The Second Epistle To The THESSALONIANS

INTRODUCTION

Authenticity. Although the authenticity of I Thessalonians has never been seriously questioned, being supported by internal evidence and the external support of Marcion, the Muratorian Canon, Irenaeus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, and others, nevertheless the authenticity of II Thessalonians has received serious objection from the more radical schools of theology.

Opponents of the authenticity of II Thessalonians have objected to the difference in tone between this and the first epistle, to the doctrine of the man of sin, in chapter 2, and, oddly enough, to the similarities between the two epistles. However, both internal and external evidence favor pauline authorship of this epistle as well.

Twice the writer refers to himself as Paul (1:1; 3:17). The general contents, style, vocabulary, theological concepts, etc. are all pauline in nature. In addition, this epistle is quoted more frequently by the church fathers as pauline than is the first epistle. Polycarp appears to quote from it; Justin Martyr alludes to it. Irenaeus mentions it directly by name. Both Clement of Alexandria and Tertullian attribute it to the Apostle Paul. It is found in the Muratorian Canon, the Syriac, Old Latin and Vulgate versions, as well as Marcion's Canon. Thus the authenticity of the epistle is only questioned by the extremely biased, and then not forcefully.

Authorship. There can be little question that, like I Thessalonians, this epistle was written by Paul. See the discussion above and that of the introduction to I Thessalonians.

Date and Place of Writing. Like the first epistle, II Thessalonians was written in Corinth. Again the names of Paul, Silas, and Timothy are associated in the salutation (1:1; cf. I Thess 1:1). Acts 18:5 indicates that these three were together in Corinth but shortly thereafter Silas drops out of sight, according to the book of Acts.

The date of this epistle must have been only months after the writing of the first. Circumstances at Thessalonica had not materially changed, yet enough time had elapsed in order to allow the believers there to fall into idleness as a result of Paul's teaching in I Thessalonians. Thus, we may date II Thessalonians during late A.D. 51 or early A.D. 52.

Purpose. As in the pauline practice, Paul never writes a church but what he commends them. This is his purpose here as well. But the overriding purpose is the correction of errors.

The Thessalonians had misread Paul's intentions in the first letter. They interpreted the coming of the Lord to be upon them in such a way as to require them to sell their houses and lands, give up their jobs, and move to the hilltops in order to wait for the coming of Christ. This attitude had created idleness in the church and was a reproach on the name of the Lord Jesus. Paul had to give them additional instruction concerning the coming of the Lord, the Man of Sin who will be revealed before the Parousia, and the order of events preceding the second coming of Christ.

This epistle, written to Gentile believers, is especially helpful to new converts to Christianity. New Christians need to understand God's prophetic program and the work ethic of serving until the Lord comes.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-2.

PAUL, and Sil-vā'nus, and Tī-mō'the-us, unto the church of the Thēs-sa-lō'nī-anš in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:

1:1-2. Paul, and Silvanus, and Timothy. The salutation of II Thessalonians is almost the same as that of I Thessalonians (see the comments there). II Thessalonians adds our in verse 1, and from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ in verse 2.

II THESSALONIANS 1:2

2 Grace unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;

4 So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure:

5 Which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer:

6 Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you;

7 And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels,

II. PERSONAL RESPONSES. 1:3-12.

A. Thanksgiving and Praise. 1:3-4.

3-4. We are bound to thank God always for you. Although the language is slightly different, Paul begins II Thessalonians in the same way that he begins I Thessalonians, by thanking God for the faith and love of the believers. "Hope" is not mentioned in these introductory remarks; perhaps it is taken for granted. This passage seems to be more direct than the parallel passage in I Thessalonians, in that there is no need to "remember." There is, however, the same warm praise and thanksgiving for the progress and growth of the Christians.

B. Apocalyptic Encouragement. 1:5-12.

5. Which is a manifest token. The word token (Gr endeigma) refers to the result of a demonstration and thus means "a sign," "proof," or "evidence." Paul says that this is a demonstration of the righteous judgment of God, but the problem comes when we ask, "What is a demonstration?" If we take this to refer back to the "afflictions" of the Thessalonians, then Paul must mean to say that God judges righteously and gives the Thessalonians what they deserve. This hardly seems fair and does not fit the context either, since verse 6 shows that God will in fact bring rest to the Thessalonians when Christ comes. Most commentators take the word token to refer back to the whole of verse 4, so that it is the way in which the Thessalonians endured their persecutions which is a sign that God judges righteously. It is not the suffering, but their faith which proves God's righteous judgment. It would seem, however, that the main verbal idea in verse 4 is the "praise," or glory which Paul and the apostles give to the Thessalonians; this could certainly be understood as a "sign" of the way God would look upon endurance of the Thessalonians in his righteous judgment at the coming of Christ. That ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, is an indication of the purpose of Paul's boasting about the Thessalonians and their faith to other churches. Paul wants them to be counted worthy which does not mean "made worthy" but simply recognized as being worthy. Paul does not consider it out of character to praise the Thessalonians for their faithfulness; in fact, that is his main means of encouraging them. Paul praises them for patience, faith, enduring persecutions, and suffering for the sake of the kingdom of God.

6. Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense. The word recompense (Gr antapodidōmi) means to "reward" or "pay back." Paul emphasizes both the negative and the positive aspects of the Second Coming. The enemies of the gospel, those who are now troubling the Thessalonians, will be paid back by God for the suffering they caused; they will suffer themselves. It is interesting that the noun and the verb here are cognate forms, so that the literal translation would be, "God will repay those who trouble you with trouble." In other words, they will get a dose of their own medicine. The theme of God punishing sinners is a primary characteristic of all apocalyptic literature.

7. And to you who are troubled rest. This is the positive side of the second coming of Christ, that God will bring comfort and reward to His saints. The reward for those who are troubled by the troublemakers is rest (Gr thlibō is the common New Testament word for tribulation). The word rest (Gr anesis) means primarily "release" or "relaxation." This is the word from which we get our common trademark, "Anacin." Real comfort and relaxation in the future, in spite of temporary affliction here, are the rewards of all those who serve the living and true God. According to this verse, Christ comes with His mighty angels, which may parallel the meaning of the original in I Thessalonians 3:13, where the angels are called His "Holy Ones." Note that the same expression in the original recurs in this chapter (1:10). The

8 In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ:

9 Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power;

10 When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day.

11 Wherefore also we pray always for you, that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power:

12 That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER 2

NOW we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him,

2 That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand.

Lord Jesus shall be revealed could be more literally translated “in the revelation of the Lord Jesus.” This is a new word for the second coming of Christ which emphasizes the manifestation of the person of Jesus Christ as a powerful Judge.

8. Flaming fire taking vengeance. In flaming fire should probably be taken as a part of verse 7; almost the same apocalyptic imagery is found in Revelation 1:13-14, as well as in Daniel 7:13. The emphasis seems to be upon His manifestation as the Son of Man. He comes with the sword of God’s vengeance to destroy those who do not know God. Not “knowing” God may be an extension of the Old Testament idiom of not loving God or serving Him rather than a simple lack of knowledge. Another important concept in Old Testament theology was obedience as we see, for example, in Isaiah 66:4, “I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not.” In Thessalonians, their disobedience is to the gospel of our Lord Jesus (an objective genitive).

9-10. Who shall be punished. The literal translation here would be, “who shall pay the penalty of eternal destruction from the face of the Lord.” Again, this is the uniform theme of apocalyptic literature in general (cf. Isa 2:11, 17; Rev 9:6). In that day alludes again to the Old Testament Day of Jehovah which has now been identified with the revelation of Jesus Christ. Here Paul mentions once more the positive purpose for the Second Coming, namely that the Lord should receive glory from those who believe because of the apostolic witness.

11-12. Wherefore should rather be translated “unto this end.” Paul’s prayer is the encouragement he desires to impart to them. Only God can accomplish His will in the lives of the believers, so Paul prayed that God would first count them worthy, and then fulfill His good pleasure in their lives. The result of the answer to this prayer will be that God will be glorified in the believers (by their good lives), and that the believers will be glorified in God. All this is accomplished by God’s wonderful grace.

III. THE DAY OF THE LORD. 2:1-12.

A. Plea for Stability. 2:1-2.

2:1. Now we beseech you, is simply the word (Gr erōtaō) “ask,” but it is used with considerable authority by Paul in this epistle (see 4:1; 5:12). Another misunderstanding about the Second Coming needs correction, and although oral instruction had been given before, Paul uses this opportunity to underscore it in writing. By the coming, is better translated, “concerning the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and our being gathered to meet Him.” Paul is not making some kind of oath, but simply introducing this next aspect of the subject at hand. Several aspects had needed comment in these letters: worshiping God involves waiting for His Son (1:10), ultimate joy and reward comes later at His coming (I Thess 2:17-20), His coming encourages us to holiness now (I Thess 3:13), those who die before His coming will not be cheated out of the Rapture, but will be raised first (I Thess 4:13-18), and now it must be shown that however they had gotten the impression that the Day of the Lord events had already started, it simply was not true.

2. That ye be not soon shaken in mind. This clause indicates the purpose of Paul’s authoritative statement. He does not want them to be easily swayed from the position they had already accepted as the Word of God. Nor should they be troubled (Gr throōō), a word denoting great inward pain and anxiety, which is used elsewhere in the New Testament only twice and both times it is in the same eschatological context of the Second Coming. Their tendency to believe that they were in the midst of the very last days had caused other problems too (see I Thess 4:11; II Thess 3:12). By spirit evidently refers to a supposed prophetic utterance which might have come from some non-apostolic source; nor by word, which again would be a false message but pretending to be authoritative like the Word that Paul had given (I Thess 2:13). Letter (Gr epistolē) means a forged letter; in 3:17 he tells them that his letters can afterward be recognized by the sign of a closing greeting in his own handwriting. That the day of Christ is at hand (Gr enistēmi) should rather be translated, "to the effect that the day of the Lord has come." The word means "to be present"; Paul wants to assure them that the Day of the Lord is not already in progress when he writes. Paul taught that the Lord was "near" (Phil 4:5), and that the era of fulfillment (the last days) was inaugurated with the first coming of Christ, but never implied that the apocalyptic Day of the Lord had already begun.

B. The Man of Sin. 2:3-12.

3 Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition;

3. Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away. Part of the sentence is implied in the original, and must be supplied in the translation; the Day of the Lord will not begin without the falling away (Gr apostasia). Our English word "apostasy" comes, of course, directly from this Greek word, which means literally a "standing away from" or "departure." In the religious sense it is a departure from the faith, and what we have in this passage is called the final apostasy which is to be led by the man of lawlessness. Some have taken the words falling away to refer to the Rapture of the church in order to prove a point; there is no historical support for that translation, however. The religious meaning is illustrated by Paul in I Timothy 1:4, and by the author of Hebrews in 3:12. At any rate, an apostasy must precede the Day of the Lord.

Simultaneously with the great apostasy, or at least another prerequisite to the beginning of the events of the Second Coming, is appearance of the man of sin. The better manuscripts read here, "man of lawlessness," but there is no important difference in the name, for the Bible tells us that "sin is lawlessness" (I Jn 3:4). That the Man of Sin is revealed (Gr apokalypō) shows that he exists prior to the time of this revelation or appearance. I John 2:18 states that there were already many antichrists, in the sense of people who are against Christ, existing in that day. It is not certain exactly who this person will be; but the identification of the Man of Sin with the coming Antichrist of Revelation is the most logical conclusion. He is the "beast out of the sea" (Rev 13:1), the "little horn" of Daniel 7:8. He is the Antichrist, i.e., the false christ who will force himself and his kingdom upon the world one day hence (Rev 13:15-17).

4 Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God.

4. Who opposeth and exalteth himself. Because of Paul's familiarity with the language of the Old Testament, there are many similarities to Daniel (especially 11:36). This is, however, a new description of the leader of the forces of evil in the final apocalyptic battle against God. Opposeth (Gr antikeimai) is present tense in Greek and implies continued, determined, and planned opposition to God. It is a common word for the opposing sides in a battle. Exalteth himself shows his extreme pride; he puts himself over everything considered as a god or an object of worship and as it were, seats himself in the Temple of God. As God was not a part of the original text, although it is certainly implied that this rebellious person acts as if he were God and sits in the Temple personally, unlike Gaius who in A.D. 40 attempted to have his statue placed in the sanctuary at Jerusalem (see Mk 13:14). Showing himself (Gr apodeiknymi) has the sense of "attempting to demonstrate" that he is God.

5. Remember ye not. Paul must have put great emphasis upon the second coming of Christ and related apocalyptic events when he was with the Thessalonians in order to refer back to that preaching so often. Two grammatical items in the Greek make the meaning clear, "You surely recall, do you not, that during my stay, I told you this repeatedly."

5 Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6. And now ye know what withholdeth (Gr katechō) is literally, "the thing which holds down." Paul seems to say that for the present (now), there is something (a Greek neuter participle) which is holding back the appearance of the lawless leader of the final rebellion. What that "something" meant to the Thessalonian readers is impossible for us to know with any degree of certainty. It may have been the Roman Empire, or perhaps more generally the social structures of law and order manifested in the Roman Empire. This meaning would explain the shift to the masculine participle (he who now letteth; same word) in verse 7. However, there is some good reason to assume that it is the ministry of the Holy Spirit which now hinders the work of the Man of Sin. The work of the Spirit is exhibited in the church and when the church is taken out of the way (vs. 7), the Antichrist will manifest his plan of world domination. This rebel will be revealed in his time (Gr kairos). This statement is very strong; and the entire section supports it, namely, that the Day has not yet begun. The "time" is a divinely predetermined time; no one knows when it will be, but Paul shows that it could not have happened already.

7. The mystery of iniquity. If this is translated, "the mystery of lawlessness," it is easier to see the connection with the man of lawlessness (vs. 3), and the "lawless one" (vs. 8). The idea is that there is already rebellion and lawlessness going on in their day, but that up to that time (now) "someone" was restraining it. Obviously, the principle of rebellion to the gospel had been at work in the opposition Paul himself experienced at Thessalonica and other places, but it was not as bad as it might have been. He who now letteth (Gr katechō) corresponds to what withholdeth in verse 6, except that the gender is changed from a restraining thing to a restraining person.

8. That Wicked is the same word translated man of sin in verse 3, and mystery of iniquity in verse 7; a more consistent translation would be "the lawless one." Whom the Lord. Better manuscripts have "the Lord Jesus." Shall consume. Again, this is a variant which should read "execute" (Gr anaireō). The Lord Jesus will execute this wicked rebel with the spirit of his mouth. This last phrase should rather be translated, "with the breath of his mouth" and means, of course, "with a word." This expression occurs only here in the New Testament, but corresponds exactly in meaning with the adjective translated "inspired by God" in II Timothy 3:16, and is related idiom. The Scriptures are the "Word" of God because they are "breathed out" or spoken by Him; in the same sense this "word" to execute the lawless one will be breathed out by the Lord Jesus. It is His word, and only a word from Him will destroy (Gr katargeō) this archenemy of the gospel. This last word means "to make ineffective"; none of his work through the ages will have any effect on the final accomplishments of the gospel. God and the Lord Jesus will have the final victory.

9. Even him, whose coming. The word coming (Gr parousia) is used for the coming or presence of various people in the New Testament; in Thessalonians it is used seven times, and except for this last time refers to the second coming of Christ. This is the Parousia of the Antichrist, corresponding to the Parousia of the Lord Jesus mentioned in verse 8; the events concomitant to each coming are supernatural and roughly concurrent. After the working of Satan. The distinction of this coming is that all the activities are satanic; they are the signs of an apostle (see II Cor 12:12), but are perverted and false.

10. In that Day, as in Paul's day, there will be followers on both sides; the Antichrist will have his "believers" too. They are

6 And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time.

7 For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way.

8 And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming:

9 Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders,

10 And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

II THESSALONIANS 2:11

11 And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie:

12 That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.

13 But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth:

14 Whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

called here them that perish (Gr apollymi) meaning “the lost” or “those who are perishing.” The reason these people are lost is because they received not the gospel. Note that the word received (Gr dechomai) is a vivid attitude indicator; it means “to welcome” as one welcomes a guest he wishes to entertain. This is an opposite attitude to that of the Thessalonians themselves who received the gospel message for what it was, the Word of God (see I Thess 2:13). These people will not be able to blame God for being lost; they refused to believe the Word of God and be saved. A better translation of the verse has “because they refused to love the truth and so be saved.”

11-12. Since they will not believe the truth, God allows them to believe the great lie. Although God is the sovereign agent behind all that happens, it is clear in this passage that a voluntary, rational choice is made by these people of every age who have pleasure in unrighteousness. The word used here (Gr eudokeō) means to “make a decision about what is right.” The decision was theirs; they decided for unrighteousness rather than for righteousness and God. The result is that they are condemned, i.e., lost!

IV. GOD’S GRACE. 2:13-17.

A. The Means of Salvation. 2:13-14.

13. Paul now moves into a more positive description of how God saved the Thessalonians by His grace through the preaching of the gospel there earlier (I Thess 1:20). Paul puts his obligation for thanksgiving in the plural, indicating that Silas and Timothy join him in feeling the obligation to give thanks to God concerning the believers. As in I Thessalonians 1:4, Paul addresses the Thessalonians as brethren beloved of the Lord. The word beloved (Gr agapaō) is in the perfect tense in Greek, emphasizing the certainty of the fact that God loves them; the passive voice also stresses once again the point that in salvation God always takes the initiative. The reason for the obligation to give thanks follows, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation. Paul gives thanks because God has chosen (Gr haireomai) the believers to salvation. It is interesting that this word, in the active voice, means “to pick out” as one picks fruit, while in the passive it is a regular word for “making a choice.” This is also the word used in the Greek Old Testament for God’s choice of Israel rather than the Gentiles; it is now applied here to Gentile believers. God has chosen them from among the Gentiles and has washed them, sanctified them, and justified them, in the name of Jesus (I Cor 6:11). From the beginning should probably be instead, “as the first converts to salvation.” The word for “first converts” (Gr aparchē) is used in six other places in Paul’s epistles as a favorite expression to show the continuity between the people of God in the Old Testament and the people of God in the New Testament. Verses 13 and 14 comprise a compendium of the doctrine of salvation where several significant redemptive concepts are given. Note the concepts of obligation, thanksgiving, brotherly love, the love of God, God’s choosing the Thessalonians for salvation, first fruits, salvation, sanctification by the Holy Spirit, faith, truth, God’s calling, the apostolic preaching of the gospel, the attainment of glory, and Jesus Christ as our Lord. Through sanctification of the Spirit shows the agency of the Holy Spirit in “setting apart” these believers to salvation, while belief of the truth shows the means of salvation is by faith in the gospel.

14. Whereunto he called you by our gospel. Here the calling of God corresponds to the “choosing” of God in verse 13. Note that God’s call comes through the preaching of the gospel, and that it results in obtaining of the glory. The word obtaining (Gr peripoiēsis) refers generally to “obtaining” or “attaining” to something but more specifically and more technically in the Bible it can refer to God's creation of a people for himself. In the Old Testament God made Israel a "people for his own possession." That same idea in the New Testament has been applied to both Jews and Gentiles as they are brought into the church which becomes a "people for God's own possession" (see also I Thess 5:9; I Pet 2:9; and cf. Mal 3:17). The interpretation of the special use of this word may be supported by the fact that the next word, glory, does not have an article in Greek so that the phrase might be translated, "to the glorious obtaining." This would mean that the Lord Jesus is accomplishing God's intended salvation by His death on the cross.

B. The Manifestations of Salvation. 2:15-17.

15. Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle. Another interesting technical term is the word traditions, which comes from a verb meaning "to hand down by tradition." These traditions were the gospel itself which had been preached among the Thessalonians. Paul uses the word taught here for what was often called "preaching." Actually there is little difference between "teaching" and "preaching" according to the New Testament; the content of the teaching and preaching of the apostles was the gospel, and Paul is saying here that it makes no difference whether these traditions were given orally (by word) or in written form (our epistle). Either way, this teaching, preaching, or tradition, is the Word of God and is authoritative.

16-17. Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father. Paul inserted a similar doxological prayer in I Thessalonians 3:11 where he also used the Greek optative mood to make his prayer concerning his readers. In both passages the prayer is directed to God the Father as well as to the Lord Jesus Christ. It is also interesting that this prayer emphasizes encouragement (consolation and Comfort are cognate) as well as support. One should note also that the word finally (3:1) marks the beginning of the conclusion of the letter after the prayer here, just as it does in I Thessalonians 4:1.

V. PRACTICAL EXHORTATIONS. 3:1-18.

A. Mutual Prayer. 3:1-5.

3:1-2. Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course. Paul again refers to the gospel as the word of the Lord, meaning the Lord Jesus. In I Thessalonians 2:13 Paul praised the believers for welcoming their preaching as the Word of God. Paul wants the Word of God to be successful and accomplish its purpose, and so be glorified as it was among the Thessalonian believers themselves when they recognized it was the Word of God, believed it, and were saved. When Paul asked for prayer for Silas, Timothy, and himself, it is the same as asking prayer for the Word of the Lord. They are stewards of the Lord who preach His Word as their primary occupation in life. He also wishes them to pray for their safety in the work, and that they might be protected from evil men who oppose them.

3-5. But the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil. Paul's statement at the end of verse 2 that all men are not of the faith is a classic understatement. Jesus had put it much more strongly, saying that the world hated them (Jn 17:14), and Paul himself had been often badly misused. The unfaithfulness of men, however, provides a transition to the faithfulness of God, which is a favorite subject of Paul's (I Cor 10:13; I Thess 5:24; II Tim 2:13). The faithfulness of God means here that He will support and keep from evil. The word keep (Gr phylassō) means rather "guard." From evil, should rather be translated, "from the evil ONE," since the gender is masculine in the original (cf. Jn 17:15). In verse 4, Paul ex-

15 Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle.

16 Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, 17 Comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work.

CHAPTER 3

FINALLY, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you;

2 And that we may be delivered from unreasonable and wicked men: for all men have not faith.

3 But the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil.

4 And we have confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both do and will do the things which we command you.

5 And the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ.

6 Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us.

7 For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us; for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you;

8 Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought; but wrought with labour and travail night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you:

9 Not because we have not power, but to make ourselves an ensample unto you to follow us.

10 For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat.

11 For we hear that there are some which walk among you disorderly, working not at all, but are busybodies.

12 Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.

presses his emphatic (the perfect tense in Greek stresses the certainty of a fact) confidence in his readers that they will continue to obey the Word of God, just as they have been doing. To that end he again expresses his prayer that the Lord will direct their hearts into the love of God and true courage for Christ. The word translated patient waiting for (Gr hypomone) has the idea of steadfastness or endurance rather than patience, and is a different word from the one Paul uses in I Thessalonians 1:10 as an example of waiting for Christ to return in the Second Coming. What Paul has in mind here is courage on the part of the Thessalonians to continue to live for God in spite of the problems.

B. The Work Ethic. 3:6-15.

6-9. Now we command (Gr parangellō). This is a very strong and authoritative word; it denotes standing beside someone like a drill sergeant and telling him what to do. Paul uses it seldom, and only when he wants to be very serious and very authoritative. Neither the verb nor the noun form is used in I or II Thessalonians except in connection with the so-called "work ethic" (I Thess 4; II Thess 3). To make this commandment even more authoritative it is given in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. This important, indirect command is completed by the infinitive of another unusual word for Paul, that ye withdraw yourselves (Gr stellomai) which denotes disassociation. The word is used only one other time in the New Testament, and even there it does not have this sense of ecclesiastical separation or censure. Other strong words are also used in this commandment; walketh disorderly (Gr atakios) indicates a continual pattern of life which is "not subjected" to and cannot be subjected to the authority of Christ. It is also noteworthy that the synonymous descriptive clause uses the cognate noun and verb for the authoritative "traditions" of the gospel. The obvious implications are that the message that was preached by the apostles was the Word of God; it was authoritative, inspired, and canonical. If a person refuses to submit to the authority of the Word of God, he is "walking disorderly." In this Paul reminds them that they must follow the apostolic pattern; for we behaved not ourselves disorderly (a cognate form is used). While the apostles were in Thessalonica they supported themselves, working hard day and night so that their demands upon the community would not be too great. Paul states again that as apostles, they had the authority to have both their wages and expenses paid by the community. They had purposely avoided using this privilege for the benefit of the Thessalonians.

10-12. For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat. Again, the word commanded refers back to the problem that arose while the apostles were still present in Thessalonica, namely that some people got so excited about the second coming of Christ they decided to quit work and just wait. It should be noted that Paul does not say that if they could not work they should not "be allowed" to eat, but rather that if anyone did not want to continue working he should decide to stop eating also. Paul has heard that some people have disobeyed his former injunction against that sort of attitude and that they have become busybodies. They seem to have been the ancestors of some today who are so heavenly-minded that they are of no earthly good.

According to verse 11, this sort of super-spirituality is really pride and a refusal to submit to the authority of God's Word; the same word disorderly is used again (vs. 11), along with the word for a "strict command" which is given in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ (vs. 12). The opposite of that sort of conduct is to eat one's own bread, which he earns by means of working at an occupation while he quietly serves the Lord.

13 But ye, brethren, be not weary in well doing.

13. But ye. The pronoun is emphatic showing that Paul here speaks to those who are really most spiritual, and whom he has often praised in these epistles. Be not weary in well doing. This statement is almost identical with that in Galatians 6:9, except that here Paul uses a Greek construction for the prohibition which implies that these believers are already doing what is noble and right, and that they have not yet begun to despair. The translation might be accurately expanded to "don't ever get depressed; just keep on doing good."

14 And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed.

14-15. Note that man. The word note (Gr sēmeiōō) implies that the person who refuses to obey the Word of the Lord while professing to be a "Christian" should be marked out and distinguished in some way from normal believers so that he is disassociated from them. He is not to be treated as an enemy, however, but as a brother. It must be made clear to that person and to the others as well that he is a disobedient Christian, and that if he wishes to associate with believers he must be willing to submit to and obey the Word of God (cf. Mt 18:17).

15 Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother.

VI. CONCLUSION. 3:16-18.

16 Now the Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all.

16. Now the Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means. In his closing benediction Paul again reminds the Thessalonians that in the end it is not their own efforts but the Lord Himself who must accomplish His salvation and His peace within them. The Lord of peace is probably intended by Paul specifically as a name for Jesus Christ.

17 The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle: so I write.

17. The salutation of Paul in his own hand is the mark of genuineness for his letter. The Thessalonians need not wonder whether another letter they might get would be authentic. It was implied in II Thessalonians 2:2 that some doubt had been present in their minds when they received a letter purporting to be from Paul. Now they would know his letters by this token.

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

18. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen. This is the identical conclusion as given in I Thessalonians, the substance of which would come to form a pauline pattern.

The First Epistle To TIMOTHY

INTRODUCTION

The three letters addressed to Timothy and Titus (I Timothy, II Timothy, and Titus) constitute what is known as the Pastoral Epistles. It is said that this term was used by Thomas Aquinas. Polycarp, bishop of Smyrna early in the second century, is known to have been aware of this corpus (see C. K. Barrett, The Pastoral Epistles, p. 1). But it was not until 1703 that D. N. Berdot, followed later by Paul Anton in 1726, popularized the term "pastoral" to describe these letters.

Authorship. The authorship of the Pastoral Epistles came slowly to be suspected as being non-pauline. In fact, it was not until the last century that these three little epistles became a battleground of biblical criticism. In 1807 Schleiermacher denied the genuineness of I Timothy. His criticisms quickly spread to the other two as well. Today scholars are divided into three camps around the question of authorship: (1) those who hold to pauline authorship (Godet, Lightfoot, Alford, Lange, Schaff, Ramsay, etc.); (2) those who believe that these epistles should be placed in the second century and consequently are not to be considered pauline in any sense of the word (Baur, Hatch, Goodspeed, etc.); and (3) those who take a mediating position claiming that while these letters were not written by Paul, they do contain some genuine pauline fragments (Ewald, Harnack, Moffatt, etc.).

1. External evidence. Although these epistles were rejected by Marcion and perhaps Tatian, the early church as a whole received them as wholly authoritative. They were accepted as canonical by Irenaeus (cf. Adversus Haereses I, Preface, I); Tertullian (cf. De Praescriptione Haereticorum 7); and were included in the Muratorian Canon (ca. A.D. 200). Perhaps the most notable concern over the canonicity of these epistles arises out of their absence from the Chester Beatty Papyrus (P<sup>46</sup>). Yet the church at large supported their inclusion into the canon.

2. Internal evidence. Personal references to Paul seem to necessitate pauline authorship. It is highly unlikely that anyone but Paul would have referred to Paul as "injurious" (1:13) or the "chief" of sinners (1:15). Paul identifies himself as author (1:1) and the author exhibits the same sense of divine call that Paul exhibits (1:12; 2:7; II Tim 1:11). The doctrine of the epistles is Paul's doctrine. Like other epistles (e.g., Romans or Philemon), a large number of personal names is introduced into this epistle. This was a pauline practice. Down through the centuries the church has been identifying elements of each of these epistles as pauline. Thus, if we are to reject pauline authorship, the objections of the critics must first be proven (which has not been successfully done) and the direct claim of authorship by Paul must be deleted from each epistle (which will never be done). For an excellent discussion of the problems and positions on pauline authorship see Donald Guthrie, The Pastoral Epistles, in the Tyndale New Testament Commentaries.

Recipient. The recipient of I Timothy was a young resident of Lystra named Timothy (Acts 16:1-3). He was the son of a Greek father (Acts 16:2) and a Jewish mother, Eunice (II Tim 1:5). He had been taught the Scriptures from his youth (II Tim 1:5; 3:15) which is a testimony to the faithfulness of his godly mother and grandmother.

Timothy came to know the Lord as Saviour through the ministry of Paul on his first missionary journey (Acts 14:8-20). When Paul revisited the Lycaonian city of Lystra on his second missionary journey he decided to take young Timothy with him as a fellow laborer. Timothy was ordained to the ministry by the presbytery, Paul being a party to that ordination (4:14; II Tim 1:6). This "beloved child" in the faith periodically spent his next years laboring with or in behalf of the apostle. In Paul's last epistle, II Timothy, the apostle summons his friend to Rome, hoping to see him once more before he dies (II Tim 4:9, 21).

That Paul loved Timothy dearly is evident from the two epistles addressed to him and the character of those epistles. Once the apostle made reference to the closeness of Timothy to his heart by saying that he had "no man likeminded" (literally, "of equal soul") as Timothy. To Paul, Timothy was a brother, a likeminded or soul brother.

Date and place of writing. On the likely assumption that there were two imprisonments of Paul in Rome, the Pastoral Epistles must be dated after Paul's first release from prison in the spring of A.D. 63. The exact date will depend on the order of activity which Paul followed between the two imprisonments. However, we will not severely stray if we place the date of I Timothy in the fall of A.D. 63 or early A.D. 64.

"This epistle was addressed to Timothy, stationed at Ephesus, some time after Paul had left for Macedonia (1:3). He appears to be in Macedonia at the time of writing (perhaps at Philippi), but it is possible that he may have gone on to Greece when he wrote" (D. E. Hiebert, An Introduction to the Pauline Epistles, p. 329).

Purpose. Although not the pastor at Ephesus, Timothy was Paul's personal envoy to that city and later became his representative there. Being a "young man," Paul felt Timothy would need encouragement for the task which faced him at Ephesus. This epistle is designed to provide such encouragement. In addition, an epistle from the respected, once-imprisoned apostle would add validity to the credentials of Timothy in the eyes of the Ephesians.

I TIMOTHY 1:1

However, it appears that false teachers, perhaps Gnostic Jews, men who sought to be known as “teachers of the law” (1:7), had invaded Ephesus and were spreading their poisonous doctrine. The pernicious effects of this teaching (1:4; 6:4-5) had to be halted. Paul advises Timothy on the exhortation needed to quell this tide of heresy (4:11, 16; 6:2).

Many of the problems that Timothy faced, the young pastor of the twentieth century also faces. Thus the Pastoral Epistles continue to be the young pastor’s best manual for church leadership.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-2.

A. Paul the Author. 1:1.

1:1. Paul. The founder of churches who was once the fighter of churches as Saul before meeting Jesus. The preacher who was the persecutor. His name (Gr Paulos) means “little.” He was “in his own sight” little (I Sam 15:17) and God highly exalted him too (cf. Phil 2:5-11)! Note his evaluation of himself as “the least of all saints” (Eph 3:8) and finally “the chief of sinners” (I Tim 1:15). He exemplified John 3:30, “I must decrease.” That’s maturing. I Peter 5:6 works today too. No wonder he could say, “Be ye followers of me” (I Cor 11:1). An apostle. His official position. An apostle was appointed by the Holy Spirit (I Cor 12:8-11), he had to have seen the risen Christ (Acts 1:22; I Cor 15:8-9), and he must be endowed with miraculous powers (II Cor 12:12). There are no apostles in this sense today. By the commandment of God, his authority, “No man takes this honor to himself” (Heb 5:4). He makes it plain God “called” him (Gal 1:15-16). There is a divine call. Happy is the church who has a God-called preacher and not a man-made preacher. God . . . our Saviour . . . Jesus . . . our hope. Our Saviour speaks of His past ministry, our hope of His future coming. It is a “blessed hope” (Tit 2:11-13), “a purifying hope” (I Jn 3:1-3), a “comforting” hope (I Thess 4:13-18).

2 Unto Timothy, my own son in the faith: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord.

B. Timothy the Recipient. 1:2.

2. Timothy. This name means “he who honors God.” My own son. Son (Gr teknon), is “a child, a born one” and own (Gr gnēstios) indicates “legitimately born, genuine.” He was for real and proved it. Every young preacher needs a spiritual father. Every church should produce preachers! What an honor to both pastor and people to have someone they can call my own son in the faith.

The salutation is Grace (Gr charis), the Greeks’ “hello.” It means to get what you don’t deserve. Salvation is by grace (Eph 2:8-9). Mercy (Gr eleos) means you don’t get what you do deserve. It is only in the Pastoral Epistles that Paul breaks from his usual pattern of saying “grace and peace” and includes “mercy.” Preachers need mercy. Peace (Gr eirēnē) means “to bind together that which has been separated.” Christ is our peace (Eph 2:14) and binds us to God.

II. THE CHARGE CONCERNING DOCTRINE. 1:3-11.

Paul begins immediately with his course in pastoral theology on how to “behave in the house of God” (3:15) which is the theme for his whole letter. The basis for correct behavior is correct belief. But correct belief should always issue in correct behavior.

A. Purity of Doctrine (Life). 1:3-4.

3 As I besought thee to abide still at Ēph’e-sus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine,

3. Besought (Gr parakaleō) the same word as Romans 12:1. It is a strong word and suggests Timothy had other plans. Abide means “stay put” and charge some that is “take a strong stand.” To build a strong church the pastor has to take a strong stand! There must be purity of doctrine maintained. No other doctrine, “other” meaning doctrine of a “different kind” from what he had taught (cf. Gal 1:6-7).

4 Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do.

4. Fables or “myths.” These and endless genealogies were so prevalent among the Jews desiring to be teachers of the law (vs. 7). These countless legends led to questions and doubts. Beware of any teacher or teaching which generates doubts and questions, rather than building godliness.

5 Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned:

B. Purpose of Doctrine (Love). 1:5.

5. The end or purpose of his charge is “charity” or “love” and not divisions. Some claiming to contend for the faith are contentious about the faith and bring divisions. God is never the author of confusion in churches (I Cor 14:33). This love can only come from a pure heart which has been redeemed and cleansed in the blood of Christ. A good conscience. There should be “nothing between” not only us and the Saviour but saints as well. Confessing our faults and forgiving others’ faults gives a clear conscience. Faith unfeigned (Gr anypokritos). The Greek word here is the one from which we get “hypocrite.” It was a term used of actors, one who pretends to be what he is not!

6 From which some having swerved have turned aside unto vain jangling;

C. Perversion of Doctrine (Law). 1:6-11.

6. Having swerved (Gr ektrepō) is a medical term which means “to twist out of joint” like an arm out of socket. This causes great pain to the whole body.

7 Desiring to be teachers of the law; understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.

7-8. Teachers of the law. The law is good and meant to be used even today, but it must be used for its intended purpose, i.e., “that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God” (Rom 3:19), so that man turns toward Christ for righteousness (Rom 10:1-4; Gal 2:21; 3:24-25).

8 But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully;

9 Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and

9-11. A righteous man, “a saved person” is not under the law but grace. He is not lawless but the controlling force is the Holy Spirit and the grace of God (Gal 3:1-5; Tit 2:11ff.). The list of sins parallels the Ten Commandments which condemn each sin profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers,

10 For whoremongers, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for menstealers, for liars, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine;

11 According to the glorious gospel of the blessed God, which was committed to my trust.

12 And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry;

13 Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious: but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief.

14 And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

15 This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.

16 Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew forth all longsuffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting.

17 Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

18 This charge I commit unto thee, son Tim'o-thēy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare; and bring guilt. Sound doctrine can be judged by whether it is a "gospel of the glory of the blessed God," which is the sense here. People are transformed in the church by "beholding . . . the glory of the Lord" (II Cor 3:18) and not a constant bombardment of legalistic preaching or teaching. Paul felt keenly this ministry was a trust.

III. THE CHARGE CONCERNING DUTY. 1:12-20.

A. The Challenge from His Own Ministry. 1:12-17.

Doctrine demands duty. These verses share the extreme gratefulness and humility in Paul. What a contrast to the Pharisaic legalities of his day. Correct behavior by the people begins with the behavior of the pastor. Paul, who greeted Timothy with grace and mercy, realized his salvation and ministry was obtained through grace and mercy.

12. I thank Christ Jesus our Lord. There was no arrogance in Paul. The world is "unthankful." He did not take his privilege for granted. Enabled me (literally, "put strength"). Paul knew well his "strength is made perfect in weakness" (II Cor 19:9). Faithful. This is required of stewards with a trust (I Cor 4:1-2). Ministry. No man takes this honor to himself (Heb 4:5) and Paul did not "handle the Word of God deceitfully" (II Cor 4:2), as did the legalizers.

13. Blasphemer. Formerly, Paul was a blasphemer of Jesus, not knowing He was God. A Pharisee couldn't slander God. He "did it ignorantly in unbelief" (Acts 26:9), and thus obtained mercy. Persecutor, with the idea of pursuing as one chasing an animal. Injurious means one whose contempt breaks forth into outrageous acts of harm. The same gospel that transformed men like this works today as well.

14. Grace . . . was . . . abundant. Regardless of what a man was before he was saved, "where sin abounded, grace did much more abound" (Rom 5:20). Paul appreciated the grace which became the main theme of his ministry. Great churches are built with great emphasis on grace. "Amazing Grace" is the theme song and a favorite of those who believe and behave in the house of God as they should.

15. This is a faithful saying or "faithful is the word," as was the familiar formula in Paul's day. He uses it five times. To save sinners. The prime purpose of Christ's coming was not to teach nor to heal nor to be an example, but to save sinners. To the self-righteous Pharisees and legalizers, as Paul himself once was, it would be repugnant to say that among sinners, I am chief. Someone said, "The beginning of greatness is to be little; it increases as we become less and is perfect when we become nothing."

16. Long-suffering. Paul was the supreme example of II Peter 3:9. We must not wonder why God does not strike down blasphemers today. He is still long-suffering and some are still being saved today. Paul was the pattern and proof of that.

17. Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory for ever and ever. Amen. Sharing his testimony and remembering what manner of man he had been causes Paul to break out with this great doxology. The Lord's Supper should remind us of the long-suffering of God and suffering of the Saviour and cause heartfelt praises today.

B. The Charge to Timothy's Ministry. 1:18-20.

18. Commit (Gr paratithēmi) means "to deposit." It is a banking term. With Paul was deposited the responsibility to warn about false teaching. Every preacher would rather preach positive truth, but God's people need warnings as well. War. War has been declared by our enemy and we are constantly engaged in warfare. It means wounds and bruises, but there are also the medals of honor.

19 Holding faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away concerning faith have made shipwreck:

20 Of whom is Hÿ-me-næ'us and Alexander; whom I have delivered unto Satan, that they may learn not to blaspheme.

CHAPTER 2

I EXHORT therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men;

2 For kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.

3 For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour;

4 Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.

5 For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;

19. Holding (the) faith. The definite article is here speaking of "the faith" once delivered (Jude 3). "Stay true to the Word" is the meaning today. Good conscience. Six times in the Pastoral Epistles Paul speaks concerning the conscience. Some people need an amplifier for that still small voice. It can only be kept clear by judging oneself and confessing sin (I Cor 11:30 ff.; I Jn 1:9). Once the conscience is seared (4:2), even a preacher is capable of committing gross sin. David's conscience wasn't cleared, his sin was ever before him (Ps 51:3), until he confessed it. Shipwreck. Many a shipwreck began with unconfessed small sins.

20. Two examples are named. Hymeneus and Alexander are mentioned again in II Timothy 2:17, but positive identifications are impossible. The seas are filled with shipwrecked preachers. Delivered unto Satan. Probably means excommunication as I Corinthians 5:3-5 indicates. It is scriptural. It certainly was effective and would be today, if done correctly (Mt 18:15 ff.).

IV. THE CHARGE CONCERNING PUBLIC WORSHIP. 2:1-15.

Keep in mind these instructions are concerning how to behave in the house of God.

A. Prayer in the Church. 2:1-7.

In Acts 6:4 the early pastors gave themselves to prayer. Prayer was very prominent and should be used properly in the church today.

1. The prescription for prayer. 2:1a.

2:1a. Prayer should include more than asking for needs. Prayers (Gr proseuchē), the common word for talking to God, should include worship and praise. Intercessions. Not in behalf of others, as the English word means, but has the idea of coming to God in boldness and confidence (Heb 10:19). Giving of thanks. This should be for specific things, not a phrase tacked on at the close of prayer (I Thess 5:18).

2. The people for prayer. 2:1b-2a.

1b. All men. This is certainly intercession and is connected with the "all men" of verse 4.

2a. Kings. Respect for authority runs throughout Scripture. Responsibility to pray for those in authority is also the Christian's obligation.

3. The purpose of prayer. 2:2b-4.

2b. The purpose of prayer for our life here is to live a quiet life. Quiet means free from outward disturbances, and peaceable means inward tranquility. This was especially significant since this was the era of terrible persecution by the Roman emperors such as Nero.

3. This. Refers to praying for all men. It's the right thing to do!

4. Who will have all men to be saved. God certainly doesn't want anyone in hell (II Pet 3:9). But no one will ever go to hell who ought not be there! He doesn't say He "wishes to save all men" for men could then say, "Why doesn't He save all of them?" Knowledge of the truth. What truth they have known, the unsaved have rejected (Rom 1:19-23) or God would have given them more truth (Jn 7:17).

4. The provisions of prayer. 2:5-7.

5. One God. Emphatically God declares there is no other God beside Him (Isa 43:10 ff.; 44:6-8; 45:5, 21-22; 46:9-10). One mediator. God is not one among many but the only one, even as only one God. The man Christ Jesus. He spells it out

6 Who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time.

7 Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, (I speak the truth in Christ, and lie not;) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity.

8 I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.

9 In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array.

10 But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works.

11 Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection.

12 But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.

13 For Adam was first formed, then Eve.

14 And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.

plainly. In Paul's day the Gnostics had a vast system of mediators made up of angels but God declares, not so. The Virgin Mary, Joseph Smith, nor anyone else is such a mediator. He is the Mediator for prayer as well (Heb 4:10; 10:19-20).

6. Gave himself. Calvary was no accident, no failure! (Jn 10:17-18). A ransom. He paid for man's sins in full, not just a down payment (Rom 5:8; I Pet 3:18). Testified. The Lord Jesus did His part and now it is up to man to get this good news to every creature (Mk 16:15). Christ was obedient in testifying the gospel to man; now men must be obedient in testifying the gospel to other men (Jn 20:21).

7. Whereunto I am ordained a preacher. The primary purpose of any preacher is to preach the gospel to every creature (Mk 16:15). Christ did the work of reconciliation, now man has the word of reconciliation (II Cor 5:18 ff.).

B. People in the Church. 2:8-15.

Paul now deals with issues concerning the place and performance of men and women in the church. He tells how they should behave in the house of God.

1. The men. 2:8.

8. Therefore. Since "men ought always to pray" (Lk 18:1) and since there is a mediator through whom man can pray, Paul now gives some instructions of how men should pray. Men. This is the word for man (Gr anēr) in contrast to women; not the word mankind (Gr anthrōpos). Men should pray, not just the ladies' missionary circles or prayer groups. Some take this specifically to mean public prayer in a church and believe it indicates men should do the public praying. The emphasis, however, is that men should pray every where as opposed to infrequently or not at all. Holy hands. Paul stresses the "holy" or "unpolluted" and not the posture of "lifting up" hands, though there is nothing wrong with the raising of hands in prayer. Men who expect to get prayers answered must be men of God, godly men, or God won't hear them (Isa 59:1; Ps 66:18). Toward others there must be no wrath, even against the evil rulers of the day. Toward God there must be faith without . . . doubting (Mt 13:58; 21:22).

2. The women. 2:9-15.

9-10. In like manner also. He now turns to women and worship. To say Paul was a woman-hater and wrote this as a personal feeling is to misunderstand the teaching of the apostle or to deny the inspiration of Scripture (II Pet 1:21). He is simply admonishing women to perform and function as God designed them to. Women are not in any way inferior to men in pauline thought. In Christ women are equal to men (Gal 3:28). Modest. This is a natural trait of women until they are taught differently. A beautiful and innate quality of womanhood is an emotional need for attention. God designed this quality but says this need should be fulfilled not by clothes but by conduct. Good works. She can win her husband to Christ by her behavior (I Pet 3:1-2).

11-12. The home is the woman's castle. In the church the situation is different (I Cor 14:34 ff.). This is God's order and chain of command "in the house of God." Proverbs 31 gives details of a wise woman's place and function: properly performed, her children "call her blessed" and "her husband . . . praiseth her" (vs. 28).

13-14. The precedent for this order in function is in creation of mankind itself. Adam was first formed. He was designed for headship by God. Woman was taken from his side to rule creation by his side (Gen 2:21-22). Of all God's creations, only woman could meet the innermost needs of a man for only woman was designed to meet those needs (Gen 2:20ff.). As man is the crown of God's creation, so woman is the prized jewel in that crown. The woman being deceived or beguiled by Satan indicates a fundamental tendency which shows the woman should not be the leader in the home or the church. Paul speaks later (II Tim 3:6) how women are susceptible to be "led away."

15 Notwithstanding she shall be saved in childbearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety.

15. Childbearing. Uniquely the woman's body is wondrously designed for childbearing. The "barren womb" is "never satisfied" (Prov 30:16). Unless psychologically scarred somewhere along the way, every woman has an inner craving to be a mother. God designed her so. Saved in childbearing. Every mother is not going to heaven simply because she is a mother. The most acceptable meaning of this passage is that it refers to the incarnation of Christ as promised to Eve (Gen 3:15) and the woman who believes in this One, the Lord Jesus, shall be saved.

V. THE CHARGE CONCERNING LEADERS. 3:1-16.

In discussing how to behave in the house of God, Paul now turns to the leader. There are two scriptural officers of the church: the bishop (Gr episkopos), the pastor or overseer today, and the deacon (Gr diakonos). The overseer, the pastor or preacher of the gospel, is to live by the gospel (I Cor 9:14). This is his calling. The deacon serves in the church but does not live by this service. He is nowhere told he is called to this as a living. There are no double standards of Christian living. What ought to be true of every believer must be true of leaders in the house of God. It is very proper to have standards of conduct for leaders in a local church. Here is a good list to go by.

A. The Pastors. 3:1-7.

CHAPTER 3

THIS is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work.

3:1. Desireth. What is the call to preach, to pastor God's people? Philippians 2:13 says, "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." God works from within. He "draws" men to salvation from within and does the same for service, through placing a desire "to do His good pleasure." This is not to be equated with "burden" for some people or particular field. You may have a burden for India and pray for those people every day; but if God has never placed a desire deep in your being to go there and minister to them, you do not have the call of God to India. One has to be sure any desire for a particular field of service is not a selfish desire of the flesh! The word "desire" is a very strong and intense word. Paul said "woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel" (I Cor 9:16). The call to preach or pastor ("to do His good pleasure") is an intense burning desire for this ministry planted in one's heart by God. Bishop means overseer or pastor; I Peter 5:12, "taking the oversight" of God's flock. Hebrews 13:17 says he is to "watch for your souls." This is not to be entered into lightly. Just as there were some disqualifications for soldiers (Deut 20:5-8) and priests (Lev 21:16 ff.) so there are for pastors. Some of the qualifications are absolute and some are relative, but one must not change nor lower the standard, only do all to measure up to God's standard. Good work. Pastoring is a good work. It must be approached with that attitude. It is a tragedy to see disillusioned and defeated ex-pastors decrying the ministry.

2 A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach;

2. Blameless. It does not mean sinless. There is to be no just cause to blame him. Pastors will never be sinless this side of glory, but they must be blameless. Husband of one wife. The traditional and most widely accepted view of Bible-believing, soul-winning preachers has been that a pastor must not be divorced and remarried. History has shown it almost never works for a pastor to be divorced. If he cannot rule his own house how can he rule the church?

Vigilant or "temperate" is the idea; watchful as he oversees the flock. Sober or serious-minded about a serious business. It doesn't mean a long-faced person with no humor. A sense of humor is essential or the strain could be too much for any man. Good behavior means orderly. It is the outward result of a sober

3 Not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous;

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity;

5 (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?)

6 Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil.

7 Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil.

8 Likewise must the deacons be grave, not doubletongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;

9 Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless.

11 Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

mind. Hospitality. He must love people. He must be given to this! A pastor once said, "I don't like people, they bother me." He loved to preach, but he had no business being a pastor. He failed in the pastorate and later became an evangelist. Apt to teach. The construction of Ephesians 4:12 indicates definitely a pastor is also a teacher. A God-called pastor most assuredly has the gift of teaching. A pastor must reach the sinner and teach the saint. To not do both is unscriptural and unbalanced.

3. Not given to wine or "not a drinker." No striker. This refers to physical acts of violence while brawler means a quarrelsome person, i.e., argumentative. He must keep his cool! Greedy. The love of money will certainly ruin a pastor. Patient or gentle with the wisdom from above which is peaceable (Jas 3:17). Covetous (Gr aphilargyros), the literal meaning is no lover of money. He must "be content with such things as he has" (Heb 13:5). The Levites had no inheritance in the land, God was their inheritance (Deut 18:2; Num 18:20). A pastor must set his affections on things above (Col 3:1).

4-5. Ruleth. It must be done by a loving leadership and not a dominating dictatorship. The test of his calling and his success can be measured by the success in his home. His sons in the faith will turn out like the sons of his family!

6. Not a novice (Gr neophytos). The Septuagint (LXX) uses this word of newly planted trees. Let these also first be proved (vs. 10) and lay hands suddenly on no man (5:22) fits here as well.

7. Good report. He must deal with them that are "without" (the secular world) and so must have a good report of them to reach them. Reproach. Satan is the accuser. He will see to it that every flaw is seen by the world and do all to ruin God's servant's testimony and effectiveness.

B. The Deacons. 3:8-13.

8. Likewise. Just as a pastor lives in a glass house and represents all a Christian should be, so does the deacon. He must be chosen for what he is and not what he has or who he is in the world's eyes. There are musts for him as well as the pastor or overseer. Deacon means servant. They were initially chosen to wait on tables and minister to particular situations in the church (Acts 6:1 ff.). They are not to "run the church." They are to relieve the pastor from tasks that would hinder him from giving himself to prayer and ministering the Word (Acts 6:4). Grave. On the positive side, the deacon must be worthy of respect. Not double-tongued. It simply means not saying one thing and meaning another. Not given to much wine. The biblical testimony is consistently against the use of strong drink. The practical application of the principle in modern society is total abstinence for all concerned. Not greedy of filthy lucre. The temptation is there even to the most godly deacon. It cannot be tolerated as it is the root of all other evil.

9. The faith. To be a deacon a man must be grounded in the faith. Belief is the basis of behavior. Pure conscience. His behavior must conform to his belief so that his conscience is pure.

10. Proved. By his belief and behavior. A new convert cannot be grounded and must not be thrust into prominence.

11. Wives. The construction and context seems to indicate "deaconesses" as Phoebe (Rom 16:1). To be sure these qualities must be in the wives of deacons as well or the deacon's ministry would be blemished and hindered for not ruling his own house well. Grave. Same as the deacon (vs. 8). Not slanderers (Gr diabolos), the word for the devil. A slanderer is a devil indeed. Sober. Same as in 3:2. Faithful in all things. This covers a multitude of areas in practical matters of the church.

12 Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.

13 For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly:

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.

16 And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory.

12. See verses 4 and 5 above.

13. Used the office . . . well. The motivation to do so is a positive promise. Purchase. Obtain or acquire is the sense. Good degree. It means standing or respect in the church. Not a promotion, for that would make the motives wrong. Great boldness. Confidence and assurance to speak with authority. This was sought after in the early church (Acts 4:13; 29ff.).

C. The Purpose of This Charge. 3:14-16.

14. Hoping to come unto thee shortly. Paul planned to come shortly with his apostolic authority to set things in order there, but the problems could not wait and so he writes his instructions.

15. The house of God . . . the church. This most assuredly refers to the local church in Ephesus. The emphasis here is in order and structure in a local church. There has to be order, or organization, a chain of command and a policy of correct behavior for God's work to function properly. No Christian is an island unto himself, nor is anyone to do that which is right in his own sight.

16. Now comes one of the greatest, most profound statements of Scripture. The depths of the truths of verse 15 he calls the mystery of godliness. Mystery (Gr mystērion) does not mean mysterious but a "secret," now being made known. It was used of Greek rites which were secret. Godliness. Godliness is "profitable" (4:8) and "great gain" (6:6). The doctrine which follows will produce this highly treasured godliness. Notice the couplets: "flesh" and "spirit"; "angels" and "nations"; and "world" and "glory." Was manifest in the flesh. Christ the eternal Son became flesh (Jn 1:14), to provide salvation which was to be both preached and believed. No wonder it is called "so great salvation" (Heb 2:3). Justified in the Spirit. The flesh refers to His humanity and Spirit refers to His deity. He proved to be all He claimed. Seen of angels. The holy angels witnessed His every move, such as His birth (Lk 2:9), temptation (Mt 1:13), Gethsemane (Mt 26:53), resurrection (Mt 28:2), and ascension (Acts 1:10). Preached unto the Gentiles. This good news is to go to all the world (Mt 28:19). This is the Christian's responsibility after Christ performed the work of reconciliation (II Cor 5:29 ff.). Believed. Man's responsibility is to respond to these great truths and believe. Received up into glory.

VI. THE CHARGE CONCERNING FALSE TEACHING. 4:1-16.

Chapter I dealt with the false teaching of Judaizers. Now Paul deals with the late false teachers such as the Gnostics. They are identifiable even today, as they were then.

A. The False Teaching. 4:1-5.

4:1. The Spirit speaketh expressly or distinctly. There is no uncertainty but that these depart from the faith. This faith is that "which was once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3) and the "one faith" of Ephesians 4:5. Giving heed to seducing spirits. They are active. There are the "deep things of Satan" (Rev 2:24). The doctrines of devils. To some it seems harsh to attribute false teaching as coming from Satan, and one must be careful not to attribute everything with which he disagrees to Satan. The doctrine of devils probably means doctrines taught by demons.

2. Conscience seared. How can they believe such things? As your finger is numb when it has been burned with a hot iron, so too their consciences are numbed by the searing of sin.

3-5. Forbidding to marry . . . meats. The Essenes of the first century felt marriage was only necessary for the preserva-

CHAPTER 4

NOW the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils;

2 Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron;

3 Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which

I TIMOTHY 4:4

God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.

4 For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving:

5 For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

6 If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained.

7 But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness.

8 For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

9 This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance.

10 For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.

11 These things command and teach.

12 Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

13 Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

14 Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

tion of the human race and thus forbade it to their followers. The Bible does not teach such a drastic policy. Forced celibacy is not scriptural. Meats (Gr brōma) means solid food in general and not simply animal meat. All types of ascetic teachings have promoted this error even to the present day. The Bible says "marriage" and "meats" were created by God and are not to be refused. Thanksgiving. The blessing at the table is not simply a ritual but is scriptural. Vincent says, "Not declared holy but made holy. Thanksgiving to God has a sanctifying effect. The food itself has no moral quality (Rom 14:14), but acquires a holy quality by its consecration to God; by being acknowledged as God's gift, and partaken of as nourishing the life for God's service" (Word Studies in the New Testament, p. 246).

B. The Faithful Teacher. 4:6-16.

6. Remembrance. It is so easy to forget. Thus the need for the Lord's Supper to "remember" His death for sins (I Cor 11:24-25), and to "stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance" (II Pet 3:1). A good minister will warn of false teaching (these things) as well, though not always a popular thing to do.

7-8. But, in contrast, Paul says, refuse profane and old wives fables. Don't get detoured by profitless trivia. Exercise about things that lead unto godliness. Exercise (Gr gymnazo) is the word from which we get gymnasium. Exercise takes determination and discipline. Godliness comes at a price but it is profitable . . . now, here and hereafter. If half the effort that goes into bodily exercise were put into spiritual exercise, God's people would be much healthier and stronger spiritually, and much better off.

9. This is . . . worthy of all acceptance and that no one can deny. The wise become doers of the Word.

10. We . . . labor (Gr kopiaō) means to work at it to the point of exhaustion as athletes do. Did you ever watch football players practice and exercise like this? To pay such a price for godliness is done because we trust in the living God. The Saviour of all men. When Christ died He made atonement sufficient for the whole world. He is the Deliverer, the preserver of all mankind, but the Saviour from sin of those who believe. This does not teach universalism, that all will be saved. When you compare Scripture with Scripture you find Him saying to some, "Depart from me, I never knew you" (Mt 7:23).

11. To timid Timothy, Paul says emphatically, command and teach these things.

12. Then follows the great verse to encourage youth. Timothy was somewhere between thirty and forty years of age. He was but a youth to the "elders" at Ephesus. The wise elder will not "look down" on those younger than he. The wise youth will be an example of believers so as to earn the respect of his elders. Example (Gr typos) is a pattern, type or model. He is to be a model in word or speech, in conversation or behavior, in charity or love, the fruit of the Spirit, in faith or faithfulness and in purity in motives as well as acts.

13. For a balanced ministry Paul admonishes Timothy concerning three things. Give attendance to reading (Gr anagnōskō), public reading of Scripture since all did not possess Bibles as we do. Exhortation or encouragement, the application of teaching. It is the grounding in the truth for belief that affects behavior. Doctrine. This is the basis of Christian belief. "Experience" is quick and easily gotten, but doctrine takes time and a great deal of effort. Yet doctrinally weak believers are immature believers and the pastor who does not give attention to doctrine does not exhibit a love for his people.

14. Neglect not. There is difference of opinion as to whether this meant stop neglecting or don't start neglecting the gift. An entrusted spiritual gift is not to be put under a bushel (Mt 5:15) nor hid in the earth (Mt 25:25) but to be put to use. Every 15 Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all.

16 Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee.

CHAPTER 5

REBUKE not an elder, but intreat him as a father; and the younger men as brethren;

2 The elder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all purity.

3 Honour widows that are widows indeed.

4 But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to shew piety at home, and to requite their parents: for that is good and acceptable before God.

5 Now she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, trusteth in God, and continueth in supplications and prayers night and day.

6 But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth.

7 And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.

8 But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

9 Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man,

10 Well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.

Christian is gifted (I Pet 4:10; I Cor 12:7, 11) and needs to heed this admonition. "The gift to Timothy was through prophecy; that is, it was made known to him by an inspired prophet. The imposition of hands was a symbolic action accompanying the reception of the gift" (H. Kent, The Pastor's Epistle, p. 164).

15. Meditate here means "to care for" these things he has just mentioned. Paul then emphasizes the importance of this by saying, give thyself wholly to them. To do so will have an effect (profiting) that is apparent to all!

16. Take heed . . . unto the doctrine of God and you will not be "giving heed . . . to doctrines of devils" (vs. 1). This seems to be the contextual meaning of "save thyself." The hearers also will be saved from "giving heed to seducing spirits."

VII. THE CHARGE CONCERNING THE LAITY. 5:1-6:2.

A. The Older. 5:1-2.

5:1. Rebuke not an elder. Timothy is not to let any man reject his youth, but he is not to rebuke an elder or older person, which is what elder here means and not an official office. There must be respect on the part of each. He should not rebuke with harsh words but entreat or beseech as a member of the family.

2. Treatment of women must be with all purity. God's servants must be so discreet. Any impropriety (especially with women) can and has ruined many a pastor's ministry.

B. The Widows. 5:3-16.

3. Widows indeed. There were almost certainly no public "widowages" as there are orphanages in the first century. Those widows, cared for by the church, had to fall into certain guidelines and have certain responsibilities.

4. Nephews (Gr ekgonos) is a word which meant descendant, usually a grandson. If widows had descendants it was their obligation to care for these widows. The widows must show piety or proper respect toward their family.

5. Now, in contrast widows without relatives to care for them, . . . a widow indeed, and desolate has some guidelines to meet before being the responsibility of the church. Trusteth in God. She must be a Christian. She should be giving herself to spiritual matters. Supplication and prayers. With the hardships and perhaps tragedies she has faced, she can have a heart for others and truly intercede on their behalf. Only eternity will reveal the enormous importance godly widows have played in the ministries of God around the world.

6. Liveth in pleasure. Her way of life is one of pleasure. Is dead is a present participle meaning now she is already useless to God and others while she still lives physically.

7-8. Women who are blameless in meeting the spiritual requirements are first to be cared for by his own, that is, the children or descendants of verse 4. For a believer not to provide for his own house is worse than an infidel, for even they recognize their obligations to widows. Believers must as well.

9-10. The widow with no descendants is not to be taken into the number, or "added to the list" to be cared for by the church, unless they meet the following conditions: they must be over sixty years of age and must not be married more than once. Good works. To qualify for receiving the good works of others a widow must have performed good works herself.

These good works follow. (1) Brought up children. The grand duty and privilege of the homemaker (Tit 2:4-5) is the bearing and rearing of children (I Tim 2:15). Women given to good works are not deceived by the clever but satanic furor of the twentieth century of the role of women in modern life. (2)

11 But the younger widows refuse: for when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry;

12 Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith.

13 And withal they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but tattlers also and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not.

14 I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, give none occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully.

15 For some are already turned aside after Satan.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed.

17 Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine.

18 For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, The labourer is worthy of his reward.

19 Against an elder receive not an accusation, but before two or three witnesses.

20 Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear.

21 I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.

22 Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.

23 Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities.

Lodged strangers. The widow should be hospitable if she wants others' hospitality now. Washed . . . saints' feet. The whole context is of good works done by women primarily in the home and not religious duties. This does not mean footwashing as an ordinance in the church. Relieved. The women should care for those neighbors or fellow Christians who are afflicted.

11. Younger widows refuse. Those under sixty years of age (vs. 9). They are not to be the responsibility of the church for they will usually wax wanton (Gr katastrēniāō). This word carries the idea of having sexual desires to which she yields and marries again.

12. Having damnation. The idea here seems to be that she marries an unbeliever, setting aside her first faith. Paul approves remarriage "in the Lord" (Rom 7:7; I Cor 7:39). The damnation has to be taken as chastening according to I Corinthians 11:30-32 and Hebrews 12:4-11.

13. Under divine inspiration Paul foretells that the tendency of young widows is to be idle, wandering, . . . tattlers, busybodies. This fits with I Timothy 3:6. It should be noted that this is not always the case, but too frequently is the case.

14-15. Because of this, Paul reasons that the younger women marry, bear children. This is the design of the Creator for their bodies and personalities. The "barren womb" is never satisfied (Prov 30:16). Under normal conditions this is fulfilling and totally rewarding to a woman. To denigrate this divine desire, as some modern liberationists have done, is to cause women to question God's wisdom. Thus they exhibit that they are already turned aside after Satan.

16. Believers are to care for their own relatives so the church can care for those who have no one to care for them.

C. The Elders. 5:17-25.

17. Elders. These are not the same as those in verse 1, but are the pastors of the church who rule (cf. Heb 13:7, 17, 24). They labor in the word, that is, teach or preach. The word labor (Gr kopos) is strong word meaning "to work hard to the point of exhaustion." The ministry is hard work and not to be taken lightly. Those who rule well, for not all do, are to have double honor. This seems best to mean honor for their works' sake as in I Thessalonians 5:12-13, and to receive remuneration as indicated in verse 18.

18. The laborer is worthy of his reward. Men called of God would preach whether they are paid or not, but God ordained they are to live by their ministry (I Cor 9:7-11). Paul says that even the animals reaped from their toils as was told they should in Deuteronomy 25:4.

19. Accusation (Gr katēgoria). This word is used of formal charges before a court. A minister has one solemn possession, i.e., his character. An accusation against him, therefore, is serious and must be witnessed before two or three persons or not at all. This would stop many rumors and save many of God's servants, if heeded.

20-21. It must be done decently and in order (I Cor 14:40). When an elder is found guilty God says, rebuke before all and it is to be done without partiality. If God's people expect Congress and public officials to police themselves, so must God's servants.

22. The charging of God's servants is important. Thus ordination must not be an impulsive act. Lay hands suddenly on no man or hastily. Many have been ordained too young or too soon. This could save having to discipline a man later if he is first proved (3:10).

23. Use a little wine, for thy stomach's sake. Obviously he did not advocate drinking, but to take the wine for medicinal use

24 Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after.

25 Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.

CHAPTER 6

LET as many servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed.

2 And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren; but rather do them service, because they are faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. These things teach and exhort.

3 If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness;

4 He is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings.

5 Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself.

6 But godliness with contentment is great gain.

7 For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.

8 And having food and raiment let us be therewith content.

9 But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition.

was common. With highly effective, prescribed medicines today there is no justification for believers to hide behind this verse to imbibe!

24-25. Cannot be hid. Time will tell! It is not always evident what is inside a man. Therefore don't rush into ordaining a man until it is quite evident by his works as to his character. Poor character qualities will always surface in a man, given enough time.

D. The Slaves. 6:1-2.

6:1. Slavery is nothing new. Paul faced it. God doesn't advocate revolution here but a resolution through proper attitudes and treatment. Servants. Addressed here are believing slaves (Gr doulos) under unbelieving masters. The Christian attitude is to honor those over you whether they are in public office (Rom 13:1 ff.), or parents in the home (Eph 6:1 ff.), or a boss on the job. God is totally against anarchy. For a Christian not to obey those in authority can cause the name of God to be blasphemed or "slandered."

2. Let them not despise believing masters either. Despise here means "to look down on." The believing master was not under any obligation to free a slave (cf. Philemon). Though equal in Christ, all men are not created equal. Some will never be leaders. Some will always have more than others by virtue of inheritance or harder work. These things refers back to the doctrine and duty presented by Paul so that one might behave in the house of God, the church. The believer is to seek godliness and not gain of worldly goods or glory. The rest of this chapter elaborates on this.

VIII. THE CHARGE CONCERNING THE PASTOR. 6:3-19.

A. His Teaching. 6:3-5.

3. If is an "if" of a fulfilled condition and could be translated, "if, as the case is." It was being done. Teach otherwise (Gr heterodidaskaleō), to teach heresy. Wholesome (Gr hygiainō, from which we get hygiene or healthy. Any other teaching is unhealthy and doesn't lead to godliness.

4. He is proud, "puffed up" or "in a fog." Knowing nothing and doesn't even know that he knows nothing. Doting (Gr noseō) means "to be sick" as opposed to "wholesome" in verse 3. Unhealthy questions and strifes bring on the diseases of envy, strife, etc. and should be avoided in the house of God.

5. Perverse disputings (Gr diaparathribē) means "rubbing against" or friction. These false teachers are a continuous friction and destitute of the truth. Supposing that gain is godliness.

The Greek construction is really saying that godliness, which is the subject in the original language, is the way or source of gain. There are those today who openly advocate riches and material gain for those who follow their brand of Christianity. They promise you will ride in the biggest car and wear the most expensive clothes.

B. His Living. 6:6-10.

6-8. Conversely the believer is to be "content" which is great gain. Too many marriages have gone on the rocks because this principle was violated. Many couples are strained financially, putting enormous pressure on their marriage. Contentment, when coupled with godliness, brings great pleasure and harmony.

9-10. They that will be rich. The word will (Gr boulomai), is not just an emotional fancy but indicates a calculated and planned procedure to get rich. It causes a temptation . . . snare, and hurtful . . . lusts. Money doesn't do this, it is the love of

I TIMOTHY 6:10

10 For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

11 But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.

12 Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.

13 I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession;

14 That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:

15 Which in his times he shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords;

16 Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.

17 Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy;

18 That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; money. Riches are neither good nor bad. It is the attitude toward them that is good or bad. Some very wealthy love money far less than poorer people who say they can't afford to tithe!

Coveted (Gr oregomai) means "to stretch one's self out to grasp." It causes to err from the faith. Rather one should "set his affections on things above" (Col 3:1).

C. His Goals. 6:11-16.

11-12. But, in striking contrast, the man of God should flee, follow, and fight. Flee is in the Greek present imperative and denotes a continuous action. The temptation for riches is ever present and Timothy was to constantly run from this desire. Instead he was to follow (Gr diōkō) or "to run" after righteousness. This is not the imputed righteousness which every believer has by faith (Rom 10:1-9), but is personal and practical righteous living which brings usefulness and rewards. Not defeated by the snares which he flees, but clothed with this fruit of the Spirit (righteousness, godliness, faith, etc.) he is to Fight the good fight of faith. The word Fight (Gr agōnizomai) is an athletic term meaning "to engage in a contest." This contest is the whole life of the believer striving to win "the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Phil 4:13). It is a good fight whereas the fight for money is evil (vs. 10).

Lay hold on eternal life. Timothy was already saved and possessed eternal life. The idea here seems to be "get hold" of this eternal life that you have until "the things of earth grow strangely dim." Let it grip you until you get into this race and win the prize. Called. This is a "high calling" and every believer has this same calling in life. Timothy had already professed a good profession before many witnesses, as every believer should.

13. Charge or command. Once again Paul presents the seriousness of what he had said. Timothy is to keep this charge, not for Paul's sake, but before God who quickeneth or "preserves life" and Christ Jesus who gave a good witness before Pontius Pilate. Pilate said, "I find in him no fault at all" (Jn 18:38).

14. Commandment probably refers to the initial command of 1:3-5. The whole book is a charge to be alert to the false teachers and their doctrine. Until the appearing. The coming of Christ is the great motivation for godly living (I Jn 3:2-3). What happened to Israel was for our admonition (I Cor 10:6, 11) and what was written to Timothy is for our admonition as well, even until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. God never changes (Heb 13:8). Standards and mores may change in men's minds, but God's standards and qualifications are the same until Jesus comes.

15. In his times. He shall show this old world who is boss, who is the only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords. We may often wonder why He doesn't quiet some of the wicked rulers today but "the fullness of time" (Gal 4:4) hasn't come yet for that great moment.

16. Who only (Gr monos); the word for "only" expresses uniqueness. Jesus uniquely has immortality. In no uncertain terms Jesus is equated fully with God Himself in this verse.

D. His Duty. 6:17-19.

17-18. With this in mind, Paul says, Charge them that are rich to trust only in the living God and not in uncertain riches. There is nothing wrong with being rich, if those who are rich are "rich toward God" (Lk 12:21) and are willing to communicate or give of what they have to those in need. Then God will give "richly all things to enjoy." This is the path to true happiness and contentment. It is the summation of Matthew 6:33 and Psalm 37:4. There is nothing wrong with making money if the 19 Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life.

20 O Tim'o-thy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called:

21 Which some professing have erred concerning the faith. Grace be with thee. Amen.

motive is "that he may have to give to him that needeth" (Eph 4:28).

19. Laying up in store. The proper attitude toward riches and the use of money lays up treasure for the future. The age-old expression, "You can't take it with you," is still true. But the believer can send it on ahead of him in the form of rewards. To do this is what it means to lay hold on eternal life.

IX. CONCLUSION. 6:20-21.

A. Plea for Faithfulness. 6:20a.

20a. O Timothy. What a pleading this is. Paul's love for Timothy comes through loud and clear. Keep (Gr phyllassō) means to "guard" in the military sense. Guard that which was committed to thy trust. Paul pleads for Timothy's faithfulness as the requirement of a steward (I Cor 4:2). To each of us are given "gifts and callings" (Rom 11:33). They are sacred; they must not be taken lightly. None of us dares let up his guard for one minute. We must all be found faithful.

B. Plea for Separation. 6:20b-21a.

20b. To not be found faithful is a sin. But, in order to be found faithful, one must avoid the detours of profane and vain babblings and science falsely so called. This is not to intimate that science is innately evil and to be avoided at all costs. The science (Gr gnōsis) here means any falsely named wisdom, any wisdom which does not begin with the fear of the Lord.

21a. Failure to avoid this type of so-called wisdom caused some to err, concerning the faith. Err (Gr astochēō) means to miss the mark. They miss the mark of God's purpose for them now and they miss the mark of God's prize for them in heaven (Phil 4:13). Believers must separate themselves from those who are drunken with worldly wisdom.

C. Benediction. 6:21b.

21b. Grace be with thee. What a fitting conclusion to a letter to the young pastor, Timothy. It takes the grace of God to shepherd the flock, but thank God His grace is sufficient and available. All of Paul's advice is of no avail unless the grace of God be present in the ministry of Timothy. The same is true today. Amen. So let it be, in every place, in every age.

The Second Epistle To TIMOTHY

INTRODUCTION

Recorded in II Timothy are the final words of the great apostle. Sometimes referred to as the Apostle Paul's "swan song," this second epistle to his own son in the faith is an exhortation for Timothy to stand strong in the face of insurmountable difficulties. As the final writing of Paul, it is tender, sympathetic, tearful, and yet heroic and stately. It is an exciting and fitting conclusion to the pauline corpus.

Authorship. As with I Timothy, the internal and external evidences for pauline authorship are strong. Paul again claims to be the author (1:1) and the style and tone are such as you would expect from the soon-to-be-martyred apostle. Everything about the epistle is typically pauline and there is little reason to question Paul's claimed authorship.

Date and place of writing. The epistle must be dated shortly before Paul's death. If Paul was arrested somewhere in the East, upon his return from Spain, and from there was taken to prison, then the date of the epistle can be fixed in dependence on the date of his arrest. Since it appears that the apostle was released from his first Roman imprisonment about A.D. 63, and since he appears to have traveled immediately to the churches he had established and loved so much in Greece and Asia Minor, we must allow a year or more for traveling from Rome to the eastern Mediterranean world and visits to the beloved churches. But in addition to this, it is implied that he also accomplished his lifelong desire to preach the gospel where no man had laid a foundation, i.e., in Spain. Another year must be allowed for this task. Thus, with time given for a return to the East and a return voyage to Rome, the earliest conceivable date for the writing of II Timothy would have been sometime in A.D. 66. Navigation on the Mediterranean comes to a halt during the winter months and thus his arrival in Rome for a second imprisonment can be safely concluded to have taken place in late summer. The writing of this epistle must have then occurred in autumn of A.D. 66.

It is evident that Paul was again a prisoner when he penned II Timothy (1:8, 16). He makes reference to the fact that he is suffering "hardship unto bonds, as a malefactor" (2:9). He is in Rome again. This imprisonment, however, cannot be the one mentioned in Acts 28, for he is no longer permitted to live in a hired dwelling under house arrest (Acts 28:30). Now he is closely guarded in strict confinement. During his first imprisonment he was readily accessible to his close friends and had many visitors (Acts 28:17-31; Col 4:10-14; Phil 1:13-14). But now he is virtually all alone (4:11).

Tradition is strong that Paul died in the Neroian persecution which began at the great fire of Rome on July 19, A.D. 64. This persecution continued until Nero's death in A.D. 68. Apparently Paul died in the heat of that persecution, in the city of Rome, about A.D. 66.

Purpose. It appears that Paul's primary purpose in writing II Timothy was to encourage the young minister. This epistle reads like a coach's halftime pep-talk to a discouraged team. Three times in II Timothy the note of suffering hardship is mentioned (1:8; 2:3; 4:5), indicating the need for Timothy's encouragement. Paul instructs Timothy to be a "good soldier of Christ Jesus" (2:3). The whole tenor of the epistle is a note of encouragement and who better to encourage Timothy than an aged warrior who was about to die.

But a secondary purpose is also seen. Paul wants Timothy to come to Rome as soon as possible (4:9, 21) for the apostle is now convinced that he will never be free again. He longs to see his young son in the faith once more before he dies. Yet with a full and rich life of service to the Lord behind him, Paul can look confidently in the face of death, whether Timothy arrives in time or not. This request, a dying request, and the letter in which it was contained must have had a devastating effect on Timothy. In the midst of Paul's strength and encouragement comes the pathetic appeal for his cloak, left at Troas (perhaps at his arrest), the books, and especially the parchments (4:13). The only worldly possessions the great apostle has left are these, the friendship of the faithful brethren, and the certain knowledge that he has fought a good fight (4:7).

COMMENTARY

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,

2 To Tim'o-thŷ, my dearly beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day;

4 Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;

5 When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also.

6 Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

7 For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

8 Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner: but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God;

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-5.

1:1. Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ. See comments on I Timothy 1:1. By the will of God. It is great to know the will of God for one's life. God has a will (Gr thelēma) "desire" for each one's life. Promise of life. An apostle was sent with a message of the promise of life in Christ Jesus. This is the preacher's message and the people's hope today.

2. My dearly beloved son. Here the aged apostle shows his deep affection for his son in the ministry. The older any preacher gets the more he appreciates his "sons" in the ministry, as should teachers and parents.

3. I thank God. What a comely trait, to be thankful. It is so characteristic of Paul and should be of any pastor (I Thess 5:18). It surely is not characteristic of the world (II Tim 3:2). Serve. What a great dividend there was to serve God, as we see in Acts 26:23ff. Pure conscience. The five references to conscience in I and II Timothy emphasize its importance. A pastor must have a clear conscience, with no unconfessed, hidden sins, to be effective like Paul. Without ceasing. "Pray without ceasing" (I Thess 5:17). Paul practiced it. What an encouragement to Timothy. Paul prayed for young Timothy daily. He prayed for Timothy for years. Much of Timothy's "success" in the ministry must be attributed to Paul's prayers for his son in the faith.

4. Greatly desiring to see thee. This again shows Paul's deep love for Timothy. Every pastor knows this feeling for some pastor who has gone out under his ministry. What an honor for Timothy. What joy for Paul.

5. Call to remembrance. Precious memories. Unfeigned faith (Gr anhypokritos), un hypocritical faith. He was no fake. What a powerful influence godly parents are. How fulfilling to any woman to influence the world so mightily through her children.

II. THE CALL TO COURAGE. 1:6-18.

A. Exhortation to Courage. 1:6-11.

6. Stir up. This is in the present tense and should be "keep stirring up." The gifts of God are without repentance (Rom 11:33), but they must be used and exercised (see note on I Tim 4:14).

7. Fear. It was probably part of Timothy's nature to be fearful. All of God's people need to fear fear itself. God can't use fearful servants (Jud 7:3). To the preacher of old God says, "Be not afraid of their faces" (Jer 1:8). This fear is not of God! Satan must be resisted and rebuked by faith (Jas 5:7; Mt 16:23). Power (Acts 1:8; I Cor 2:3, 4). Paul could identify with Timothy for he knew fear naturally, but also power supernaturally. Sound mind (Gr sōphronismos). The word here means "disciplined" or "self-control."

8. Therefore. There is no excuse to ever be ashamed of the testimony of our Lord. Paul wasn't (Rom 1:16). Be not. This is the Greek subjunctive and means "don't start." Paul had not been guilty of being ashamed of the testimony of the Lord. Nor of me. Many were ashamed of Paul and had forsaken him

II TIMOTHY 1:9

9 Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began,

10 But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel:

11 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12 For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed: for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day.

13 Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us.

15 This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me; of whom are Phylgelus and Hermogenes.

16 The Lord give mercy unto the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain:

17 But, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.

(4:10). Afflictions. This is par for the course. One wonders where such afflictions are today!

9. Called. Salvation and service are all by grace, not in human power (Zech 4:6). Us. Paul puts Timothy's calling on the same par with his own. This must have added courage to Timothy. Before the world began (cf. Gal 1:15). How humbling and awesome the responsibility.

10. The "purpose" of God (vs. 9) is now made manifest by the appearing. This refers to His incarnation including His whole life, death, and resurrection. Eternal life, immortality, comes through the gospel (Rom 1:16).

11. Preacher. How shall anyone believe this gospel without a preacher! (Rom 10:14). Men were once glad to be known as "gospel preachers." Paul was. Pastors should be known above all for their "preaching" (Acts 6:4; I Cor 1:18-21). Teacher. A pastor must also teach. He must be "apt to teach" (I Tim 3:2).

B. Example of Courage. 1:12-14.

12. Suffer. (Phil 1:29; I Pet 4:12). Paul knew it would cost him to serve as a preacher nevertheless I am not ashamed and so Timothy should not be either. The basis is knowing a person, the Lord Jesus, and His power to keep (Phil 3:10). Here the word know (Gr oida) means "absolute knowledge," beyond a shadow of a doubt. Keep (Gr phylassō) is a military term meaning "guard." That which. What is Paul committing, his salvation or his service? Both could be included in his mind, as it seems in verse 9. Committed (Gr parathēkē) is a banking term meaning "to deposit." That day no doubt refers to the day of Christ and the Judgment Seat of Christ, where believers' service and works will be judged (I Cor 3:11 ff.; 4:5).

13. Paul must have had in mind the near end of his ministry and that Timothy was to carry on in his place and so exhorts him, Hold fast. What was committed unto him, by Paul, which thou hast heard of me. Form (Gr hypotypōsis) means "pattern" of sound words.

14. Good thing refers to pattern of sound words which was committed or deposited with Timothy. He is to "keep on guard" (same word as in verse 12) even as God keeps what we commit to Him. What an awesome responsibility. What a tragedy that the truth, the faith, or the gospel has not been guarded by churches, denominations, and schools so that eventually Ichabod has been written over many. Paul did what he exhorted Timothy to do in 2:2, i.e., pass on gospel to faithful men. He is to accomplish this by the power of the Holy Spirit. There must be that conscious dependence on His anointing and teaching (Jn 2:27).

C. Experience of Courage. 1:15-18.

15. Here is one of the saddest verses of the New Testament. Asia refers to the Roman province of which Ephesus was the capital and would include what was known as Asia Minor or Turkey today. All . . . turned away. As you read the letter to the Ephesians it is obvious they were greatly instructed. The indictment of Revelation 2, that they had "left their first love" and were in danger of their church (candlestick) being removed, was solemn. The turning away was not personal but positional from the truth which Paul was charging Timothy to beware of doing or allowing. No doubt Phygellus and Hermogenes were well-known for their apostasy.

16-17. God, in His wisdom, provided the house of Onesiphorus who oft refreshed Paul. Who encourages a pastor? Who is his pastor? It is ones like Onesiphorus and his house who Paul says were not ashamed of my chain and who, when in Rome, sought me out. He looked Paul up when in Rome. No doubt it wasn't easy, but he would not be denied, he found him.

18 The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day; and in how many things he ministered unto me at Eph'e-sus, thou knowest very well.

CHAPTER 2

THOU therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.

2 And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also.

3 Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

4 No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.

5 And if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

6 The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits.

7 Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel:

18. How many things he ministered unto me. Without complaining Paul seems to cover a multitude of problems and the help Onesiphorus gave. Few people ever realize the enormous pressures and problems a pastor faces as included in the daily "care of all the churches" (II Cor 11:28). What reward there will be in that day for those who minister to the ministers!

III: THE CALL TO SERVICE. 2:1-26.

The Lord Jesus used familiar pictures and subjects to bring out great truths and now Paul does the same with seven powerful portraits of the Christian life.

A. As a Son. 2:1-2.

2:1. Thou, in the emphatic position in the Greek sentence. Though others falter and fail, he expects more of Timothy. My son (Gr teknon), child, used even of adults, is a very affectionate term. How Paul dearly loved him as a son. Be strong. This is in the present imperative and indicates the continued growth in strength and stamina one can muster to go on and not turn away (cf. Eph 6:10 ff.). Grace. This grace is available for living as well as salvation (Heb 4:16).

2. The same commit thou. Here is the ultimate goal of the ministry: pass it on. Paul is saying, what I have committed to you, you commit to faithful men who then will pass it on and commit it to others also. The buck may stop with you, but truth must never stop.

B. As a Soldier. 2:3-4.

3-4. As a son he is to be strong; as a soldier he is to endure hardness. A soldier is at war. It may mean wounds and suffering. Remember God didn't start the war, Satan did. See Isaiah 28 and Ezekiel 14. Endure hardness (Gr syngkakopatheo) has a prefix in Greek. With. Paul did not ask Timothy to do something he hadn't done. He says, "I have endured hardness, now you endure it with me." Pastors must lead the way (I Cor 11:1). Entangleth. Deuteronomy 20:5-8 warns a man not to go to war if there are unsettled affairs in his life. The battle is serious and a soldier cannot be distracted by entanglements of business or family affairs.

C. As an Athlete. 2:5.

5. Paul now speaks of one of his favorite subjects, that of athletics. Strive (Gr athleō) means to engage in athletic contests. To win the prize, he must strive lawfully (Gr nomimos) or actually keep the rules of the game. To run the race of life one does not break God's rules and get away with it. As the umpire of the game of life, God calls the fouls real close!

D. As a Farmer. 2:6-13.

6. The husbandman. Now comes the sower or farmer. The athlete gets the crown only at the end of the race. The farmer reaps of his labors before the final harvest. He must be partaker of the first fruit. Those who labor for the Lord are blessed and rewarded here and hereafter. It does pay to serve Jesus.

7. Consider. "Let this sink in." It would do well to meditate much on these things (Josh 1:8). There are many more lessons and parallels. The seed sown must be understood and bring forth fruit! (Mt 13:23).

8. Lest he become weary or fainthearted, Paul begins to elaborate on the hardness and suffering that must be endured. Remember. The death, burial, and resurrection of Christ are always to be remembered (I Cor 11:23ff.). Of the seed of David. Speaking of His humanity, He was of the lineage of David and rightful heir to the throne of David. Was raised from the dead. The Greek perfect tense denotes the certainty of the

II TIMOTHY 2:9

9 Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sakes, that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.

11 It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him:

12 If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us:

13 If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful: he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers.

15 Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

fact. My gospel means the gospel which Paul preached and if anyone preaches any other, he is to be accused (Gal 1:8, 9).

9-10. Preaching this gospel of the resurrection of Christ brought about Paul's persecution. Suffer trouble. God doesn't protect His servants from trouble, but preserves them through trouble. Sufferings or troubles are not always the chastening of God or the result of sins. A good soldier should expect suffering while in an enemy's country (Phil 1:29). This world is not our home. Paul suffered for the gospel's sake, even as an evildoer. The Greek word is a technical word meaning malefactor. Persecuting Christians and consenting to their death didn't make him a criminal, but preaching the gospel did, in the eyes of the Jews! How often someone who curses, drinks, and carouses gets saved and stops all that, and then receives persecution from loved ones for trying to live right. "Think it not strange!" (I Pet 4:12ff.). Paul was bound, but the Word of God wasn't bound, he still witnessed! The facts were that these things were to the "furtherance of the gospel" (Phil 1:12ff.). The reverse is often true today. People are free but their tongue is bound! Endure all things. He said it beautifully in Acts 20:24 when he said, "None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself. . . ." For the elect's sake. It was a joy for Paul to suffer for the gospel because when he did so he was actually suffering on behalf of the elect. The persecution which Paul endured would most certainly be a tremendous source of encouragement for other believers. He did not suffer vicariously for believers, as Christ did, but his strength in suffering incited them to action. He would endure anything to see them saved, and now would endure anything to encourage them.

11. Faithful saying or "trustworthy." You can count on it. For connects what he has been saying and the conclusions he now draws from his statements. He is talking about the great doctrine of the substitutionary death of Christ and our identification with Him in His death and resurrection as a fact. We shall also live with him. The basis of our eternal life is our personal identification with Christ and acceptance of Him. Because we shall live with Him we should endure hardness gladly.

12. If we suffer, and again you can count on it, we will. We shall also reign. The rewards are worth it all. Paul is encouraging Timothy with this great hope of the believer and we should be encouraged as well. Deny him. The Greek verb here is future, "if we shall deny him." Two things to remember here. First, Peter denied Christ three times, even though he was saved, but his reaction was conviction and contrition. Secondly, I John 2:19 tells of those who "went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us." These were apostate. It must be remembered man only sees the outward, God sees the heart (I Sam 16:7).

13. Believe not (Gr apisteuō) refers to unfaithfulness. There is an obvious play on words with he abideth faithful (Gk pistos). God has to remain true to His character. He cannot be unfaithful or deny Himself.

E. As a Workman. 2:14-19.

14. These things. The momentous facts of verses 11-13 are of such importance that it is foolish to get involved and strive about insignificant words to no profit. A faithful pastor will keep off the side issues. Paul told Timothy to keep reminding those he teaches to do the same.

15. Study (Gr spoudazō) is not the normal word you think of as a student but a word used of a workman meaning "give diligence," "endeavor," or "exert oneself." A workman is to give diligence or endeavor to show himself approved unto God. Approval means one has been put to the test and measures up, 16 But shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hÿ-me-næ'us and Phī-lē'tus;

18 Who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some.

19 Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal. The Lord knoweth them that are his. And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity.

20 But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honour, and some to dishonour.

21 If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work.

22 Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart.

23 But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes.

24 And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient,

25 In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth;

thus winning the approval of the person testing him. The workman here is one who is handling the Word of God and thus the conclusion of studying. It certainly takes diligent study of the Word to rightly divide it (Gr orthotomeō) meaning "to cut a straight course," or "lay out a road," or "correctly interpret." All of the Word of God is true. There are no contradictions when rightly laid out. You cannot add to nor take away any of it (Rev 22:19).

16. But, in sharp contrast, shun or avoid profane and vain babblings. As in I Timothy 6:20, this includes false and empty talk. It just leads to more ungodliness. False belief produces foolish behavior.

17. The tragedy is it spreads like a canker (Gr ganggraina), gangrene! Hymeneus and Philetus were prime examples of how it happens.

18. Erred (Gr astochēō) means to deviate or "miss the mark." To get bogged down debating such vain babblings only harms and pollutes and must be avoided. "If any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant" (I Cor 14:28). There are some things and some people you just don't debate. Resurrection is past. They probably spiritualized the resurrection of the future as the gnostics of the day taught.

19. Nevertheless. In spite of all the failures of men, the foundation of God standeth sure. This foundation is referred to in I Corinthians 3:11. It is Christ. Build on Him and there will be no defection, no apostasy. Remember, "they went out because they weren't of us" (I Jn 2:19). Knoweth. He surely does. About His sheep He said, "I know them . . . and they shall never perish" (Jn 10:27-28). To the lost he said, "I never knew you: depart from me . . ." (Mt 7:23). These were not sheep who once had departed. Depart from iniquity. This security never means one can live like the devil. In fact, one who appreciates his salvation never attempts to take advantage of it.

F. As a Vessel. 2:20-22.

20. House. The believer is now part of the great house of God being paralleled here. Vessels of gold . . . also of wood. Every family has their special and valued dishes as well as everyday inexpensive ones.

21. In God's house if a man purge himself from the vessels of dishonor, he shall be a vessel unto honor. A long time before Paul said, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate . . ." (II Cor 6:17). God doesn't play favorites, but He is holy and cannot use unholy vessels. God is constantly on a talent hunt "for them whose heart is perfect toward him" (II Chr 16:2). Meet means "usable" or "fit" for His use. Master (Gr despotes) from which we get despot or lord. He is Lord and must be acknowledged as such to be used. Prepared means "equipped."

22. Flee also youthful lusts. The youthful desires for fame, fortune and fun are to be run from, but to follow (Gr diōkō) which means "to pursue" and not just meekly follow. That which the believer is to pursue is a catalogue of Christian graces, i.e., righteousness, faith, charity, peace.

G. As a Servant. 2:23-26.

23-25. Once again Paul warns about foolish questions for they lead to strife. The servant here refers primarily to a pastor. A true servant obeys his master. Must not strive (Gr machomai). The word here means "quarrel" or "argue" with emotions heated. Usually there will be more heat than light. It is a sin for anyone to lose patience and especially a minister. Gentle in one's manner and meek in one's disposition. Instructing. Giving the truth from God's Word which shows the need for verse 15 and being "apt to teach" (I Tim 3:2). If God peradventure will give them repentance. Notice God must give repentance. Re-

26 And that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will.

CHAPTER 3

THIS know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.

2 For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,

3 Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,

4 Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;

5 Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away.

6 For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts,

7 Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.

8 Now as Jān'nēs and Jām'brēs

penance (Gr metanoia). Repentance is not sorrow for sin, that is, contrition. Sorrow leads to repentance (II Cor 7:9-10). Repentance is not changing direction or your ways of living; that's a result of salvation. Repentance is changing one's mind from false ideas to the acknowledging of the truth. A sinner must be willing to change directions and turn from sin, but that's not a condition of salvation, else we have salvation as a result of works or deeds and not of faith (Eph 2:8-9).

26. Here primarily here is talking about those accepting false teaching that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil. Satan is behind all false teaching. There is nothing innocent about any of it. Pastors must be good shepherds to lead their flocks and protect them from such wolves.

IV. THE CALL TO FAITHFULNESS. 3:1-17.

A. Unfaithfulness of the World. 3:1-9.

3:1. The last days. This includes the whole church age. Paul stated these conditions would be prevalent in Timothy's day, for he said to him, "from such turn away" (vs. 5). Perilous times are evident today as well.

2-3. Lovers of their own selves. Everyone does that which is right in his own eyes. Selfishness abounds. Covetous. People must keep up with the Joneses. Few are content with such things as they have. Disobedient to parents. Juvenile delinquency is the term in this generation, but now more common and rampant. Unthankful. There is no loyalty or thankfulness for anything but only wanting more. Unholy, Without natural affection. Romans 1:26 ff. is accepted as a way of life. The gay crowd, sex out of bounds from God's limits, is accepted by much of society. Trucebreakers. One only has to look at Korea and Vietnam to see blatant trucebreaking. Incontinent (Gr akratēs) meaning "no power" or "restraint" over oneself. Senseless killings and atrocious sex crimes give evidence to this today. Fierce, meaning "not tame" or "savage." Despisers of those that are good. The all-American boy is not emulated, but the radicals and immoral celebrities are. The honest, wholesome teenager is so often ridiculed! Those who do good and act good are greatly in the minority.

4. Lovers of pleasures. One would have to be blind not to see that pleasure-seeking is skyrocketing today. The cry of first-century Rome was, "Give us bread and the circus." The two "necessities" of life were welfare and entertainment. The situation hasn't changed a bit.

5. Form of godliness. Church attendance is at an all-time high, but powerless. No longer are God and His teaching considered in matters of divorce, sex, or abortion. Most Christians and churches are powerless in the community. They only appear to be godly. Inwardly they are impotent because of sin.

6. Lead captive silly women. Eve was the first deceived (I Tim 2:14). A sad fact of life is that Satan consistently attacks the women in the area of discernment. Christian women must be especially dependent upon God to give them doctrinal direction and understanding. Many cults today are directed and dominated by women who have had their discernment taken captive by Satan. A Christian woman must be wise enough to seek the counsel and advice of the pastor and church leaders lest in the areas of doctrine and practice she fall prey to the snares of the devil.

7. Ever learning. This refers to the women led astray. One of the strange phenomena of our day is the great number of women going to all kinds of Bible studies and religious meetings, who seem to gravitate to strange doctrines and unorthodox ideas. They never come for the truth, that faith once delivered unto the saints, the old-fashioned fundamentals of the Bible.

8. Withstood (Gr anthistēmi) is forceful and means "to set withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth: men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith.

9 But they shall proceed no further: for their folly shall be manifest unto all men, as theirs also was.

10 But thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, longsuffering, charity, patience, 11 Persecutions, afflictions, which came unto me at Antioch, at ĩ-cōnĭum, at Lŷs'tra; what persecutions I endured; but out of them all the Lord delivered me.

12 Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.

13 But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived.

14 But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them;

15 And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

16 All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:

17 That the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works.

CHAPTER 4

I CHARGE thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom;

2 Preach the word; be instant in sea-oneself against." The boldness of Jannes and Jambres to set themselves against Moses is manifest today in multitudes who adamantly "resist" the truth.

9. Their folly shall be manifest. Apostate individuals and groups have come and gone throughout the ages. They are finally exposed for what they really are. In our day many so-called faith healers and charlatans have faded out or died with their followers disillusioned and dispersed.

B. Faithfulness through His Word. 3:10-17.

10. Fully known (Gr parakoloutheō) is translated in Luke 1:3 as "perfect understanding." My doctrine. Doctrine is foundational and must be the basis of discipleship. Experiences can never be the basis. Paul invites close scrutiny of his whole life and ministry. This should be done with anyone who would be followed.

11. Paul endured much persecution of apostates but God delivered him. Antioch . . . Iconium . . . Lystra are but three of the places where Paul suffered persecution.

12. Then he assures that persecutions await all who will live godly. Shall suffer persecution is a promise with great prospect (I Pet 3:14).

13. This situation will continue to worsen. Evil men . . . seducers. This is an age of evil men and deception. The irony is that evil men are deceiving one another and being deceived. They must learn the truth that whatever a man sows, he also reaps.

14. Continue. Others "swerved" (I Tim 1:6). "Made shipwreck" (1:19). "Erred" (6:20). Stewards must be faithful (I Cor 4:2).

15. Holy scriptures refers to the Old Testament Scriptures taught Timothy by his mother and grandmother (1:5). It is so important to teach the Word of God to children in order to bring them to salvation. Salvation comes through faith (Eph 2:8-9) and faith comes by the Word of God (Rom 10:17).

16. All scripture refers not to the Old Testament as a whole but to every part of the Old Testament. Inspiration (Gr theopneustos) means "God breathed out" the Scriptures and not that God breathed into the human authors. The authors themselves were controlled by God so that they were not left to their human limitations (II Pet 1:21). Doctrine . . . reproof . . . correction . . . instruction. The Scriptures are not only profitable for salvation but for sanctification and Christian growth as well. They are not only the road map to heaven, but the road map of the Christian life. They are all we need for faith and doctrine.

17. When sanctification takes place in the man of God and he is perfect or mature, the Scriptures are for service "furnished unto all good works." Doctrine always should emanate in good works.

V. THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY. 4:1-8.

A. Purpose of the Ministry. 4:1-2.

4:1. Charge thee. Paul's final charge to Timothy. A charge is more than a command for a charge carries with it the moral obligation to be carried out. Judge. In the light of what has been said in chapter 3 about the last days, Paul reminds Timothy of a day of reckoning. The quick, the living, those who are alive and remain (I Thess 4:17) and the dead, "for the dead in Christ shall rise first" (I Thess 4:16). Pastors and people alike shall stand at the Judgment Seat of Christ (II Cor 5:10), at his appearing. "To whom much is given much is required" (Jas 3:1).

2. Preach the word. This means to herald as the emperor's son, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine.

II TIMOTHY 4:3

3 For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;

4 And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.

5 But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry.

6 For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.

7 I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:

8 Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but herald gave a formal message in an authoritative way. Be consistent, he says, always at it. Don't be afraid to reprove or rebuke but do it with long-suffering and doctrine. The minister's personal feelings are not the ground for reproof: doctrine alone is that ground.

B. Perversion of the Ministry. 4:3-4.

3. The time will come and most believe it is here today. Itching ears will be "tickled" by preachers who do not preach the Bible. Many pastors bow to the wishes of ungodly congregations who only want to hear what pleases them.

4. Turn away (Gr apostrophō) is in the Greek active voice and has the idea of deliberate action by themselves. Shall be turned (Gr ektrepō) means they are acted upon; it is a medical term meaning "to twist out of place."

C. Priority of the Ministry. 4:5-7.

5. But, in contrast to these, Timothy is to watch, which has the idea of being sober and alert. Endure afflictions. Satan doesn't play games. He puts up a fight. The preacher must not get discouraged and run. Do the work of an evangelist. Every pastor must evangelize, he must be a soul-winner. He cannot simply pray and preach. He cannot expect his people to witness if he doesn't. He must preach "Be ye followers of me . . ." (I Cor 11:1). To make full proof of his ministry the pastor must be faithful in all the above admonitions.

6. For. Paul's exhortation to Timothy to make full proof of his ministry was given because Paul knew his own ministry was almost over and he knew the deep satisfaction of having done the same himself. What a horrible feeling it must be to come to the end of one's life and have nothing but regrets at a wasted life. I. The "I" here is emphatic. Paul is saying "as for myself." How important to be honest with ourselves. I am now ready to be offered. Only one who had finished his course (vs. 7) could say this. Offered (Gr spendomai). This is a word used of pouring out a drink offering. Paul used it of himself in Philippians 2:17, of pouring out himself for the Philippians. The time of my departure is at hand. God's servants are indestructible until their work is done. Departure (Gr analyseos) was used by the military meaning to take down one's tent. The idea is like the old saying of the Arab who took up his tent and silently stole away. As servants we must silently steal away and soon be forgotten so that only what's done for Christ will last!

7. What a power-packed verse. There are three great statements. A good fight. The definite article is in the Greek. Paul is not boasting of what he had done but that he had spent his life in the good fight or contest. Fight (Gr agōn) was used of the Greek athletic contests. Fought (agōnizomai) in the perfect tense speaks of completed action and expresses Paul's confidence. We get our word "agonize" from this. It does cost. There aren't many who agonize in their labors for Christ today. I have finished my course. Course refers to a race track. He had crossed the finish line. He didn't quit. The Christian's life is not a hundred-yard dash; it is a marathon and most often an obstacle course. I have kept the faith. The faith is not personal faith in Christ but the whole body of Christian truth, i.e., doctrine. Paul never was detoured by some new wind of doctrine.

VI. CONCLUSION. 4:8-22.

A. Wanting of Timothy. 4:8-13.

8. Henceforth. The tragedy of life is what people miss here and hereafter. Only those who have borne their cross will win the crown. Crown (Gr stephanos) referred to the laurel wreath placed on the winner of the athletic contests. There are five unto all them also that love his appearing.

crowns spoken of in Scripture, all of which we will cast at Jesus' feet in adoration one day (Rev 4:10-11). This crown of righteousness is available to all them also that love his appearing. How tragic that multitudes are not taught about the Second Coming of Christ and therefore are cheated out of gaining this crown! No preacher should say the preaching of the Second Coming and all that surrounds it is unimportant!

Like the great crescendo of a symphony, Paul has concluded his message in verse 8 and now adds a few final remarks. Some of these give personal insights to this great man who is in a Roman dungeon awaiting his final appearance before the Roman ruler.

9. Do thy diligence. This is from the same Greek word for "study" in 2:15 and it means here "do your best," to come quickly to me.

10. Forsaken here means literally "let me down." Demas was standing with Paul in Colossians 4:14 and Philemon 24. What a disappointment. Even Paul had those moments too! Having loved this present world. No matter how much disciplining, one can still turn from faithfulness to this world. Every pastor needs to know this so that he does not falter when someone he has spent many years training turns away. They did it to Jesus too, "And they all forsook him and fled" (Mk 14:50).

11. Only Luke is with me. What a man is this beloved physician. Paul is not seeking pity here, but gives insight for pastors to know how that when he came to the end of his ministry he was fortified against discouragement during those lonesome hours. Take Mark, and bring him. In the accounts of Acts 13:13 and 15:36-41 Mark seems to have deserted Paul and later Paul and Barnabas had a strong disagreement over Mark. Mark has now proven himself and, whatever happened in Acts 13:13, Paul has years before forgiven and forgotten. This is as it should be. Too many pout today over trivial things and never are reconciled.

12. And (or but) Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus. This implies the others left on their own. Probably Tychicus was the bearer of this letter to Timothy who was in Ephesus (I Tim 1:3).

13. The cloak. This was a long heavy cape with a hole in the middle to slip over one's head. It hung down to the knees. It was now needed in this cold damp dungeon. The books or scrolls were made from papyrus and the parchments were much better quality made from sheep or goat skins. These parchments may well have been copies of the Old Testament Scriptures. To the very end Paul kept his mind sharp and his heart full by reading. What an example to this young preacher and us today.

B. Warning of Alexander. 4:14-15.

14-15. Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil. Alexander was a common name, so he is identified as "the coppersmith" and no doubt Timothy knew who he was. Paul did not do this to harm Alexander but to prevent Timothy from being hurt by this man. Too often, in our mobile society one of God's servants causes trouble in one place and then travels across the country to cause harm there also. There needs to be honesty about such a person and a warning of others, lest they be hurt too (I Tim 5:24).

C. Witness of Paul. 4:16-22.

16. Answer Gr apologia. From this we get our word apology or defense. He is referring to his trial. Stood with me (Gr paraginomai). This is a technical word and would refer to a defense lawyer or advocate. All men forsook me. The same word used of Demas in verse 10, but he did not let it make him bitter. No matter how it hurts, no root of bitterness can be allowed lest many others be hurt (Heb 12:15).

17. The Lord stood with me and He always will (Heb 13:5).

9 Do thy diligence to come shortly unto me:

10 For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thēs-sa-lo-nī-ca; Crēs-cens to Ga-lā'tia, Titus unto Dāl-mā'ti-a.

11 Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.

12 And Tŷchĩ-cus have I sent to Ēph'e-sus.

13 The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments.

14 Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works:

15 Of whom be thou ware also; for he hath greatly withstood our words.

16 At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.

17 Notwithstanding the Lord stood

II TIMOTHY 4:18

with me, and strengthened me; that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear: and I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion.

18 And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

19 Salute Prīs'ca and Āq'ui-la, and the household of Ōn-e-sīph'o-rus.

20 E-rās'tus abode at Corinth: but Trōph'i-mus have I left at Mī-lē'tum sick.

21 Do thy diligence to come before winter. Eū-bū'lus greeteth thee and Pū'dēns, and Li'nus, and Clau'dī-a, and all the brethren.

22 The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit. Grace be with you. Amen.

He is all one needs. Strengthened me (Gr endynamōō) means to pour in strength. It is always available. There is no need to give in or give up. That by me the preaching might be fully known. From this one must conclude that at Paul's trial before Nero he preached the gospel, even as he did before Felix! I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion. This referred back to Psalm 22:21. It simply means here he was not immediately executed after his trial and thus he could write this letter. We are much richer for it today.

18. Deliver me . . . preserve me. What security! He was sure of being delivered from evil work here and preserved to the glory up there! Preservation from the wicked one is a certainty for the believer (Eph 1:13; 4:30).

19-21. These last greetings show Paul's deep concern for people. It shows God's concern for people and even the smallest detail. Imagine the wonder that God included these items in the eternal Word of God.

Prisca and Aquila are the close friends of Paul (cf. Acts 18:2, 18, 26; Rom 16:3; I Cor 16:19); Onesiphorus is the Ephesian Christian mentioned in 1:18; Erastus was the "chamberlain" or treasurer of the city of Corinth, where at the time of this writing he again resides; Trophimus, a native Ephesian, had been left sick at Miletus (Miletum), on the coast south of Ephesus. For Eubulus . . . Pudens . . . Linus . . . and Claudia no positive identification can be made.

22. Grace be with you. You here is plural, not to Timothy alone but even to us also. With Paul we may exclaim, "to whom be glory forever and ever." Amen.

The Epistle To TITUS

INTRODUCTION

As a companion of Paul, Titus did not enjoy the fame of Barnabas, Silas, or Timothy. He is only mentioned thirteen times in the New Testament. Yet this young Greek (Gal 2:3), converted to Christ directly from heathenism, was one of the most faithful of Paul's own converts.

His home was apparently Syrian Antioch. His name does not come to our attention in a ministerial relation until Paul's third missionary journey. Then the mention of Titus is checkered throughout the latter years of Paul's life.

Authorship. Again, as in I and II Timothy, and all the recognized pauline epistles, Paul claims to be the author of this epistle (1:1). The discussion on authorship in the introduction to I Timothy is pertinent here.

Date and place of writing. It is impossible to date the writing of Titus with pinpoint accuracy. If it was written after Paul's visit to Spain, it would then be dated only shortly before II Timothy. If it was written before this western visit it would have been written during Paul's first year of freedom from house arrest in Rome. On the assumption that it is more likely that Paul would have written the letter as soon after his release as possible, and probably visited the churches of Greece and Asia Minor directly upon being released from prison, we can suggest a date of the fall of A.D. 63 or a bit later.

Establishing the place of writing is equally difficult. At first this may not appear to be the case for the subscription to Titus in the AV reads, "It was written to Titus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Cretians, from Nicopolis of Macedonia." This statement, which is not part of the inspired writing of Paul, is in error. It was made on the mistaken assumption that Paul was already in Nicopolis at the time of the penning of Titus. It is evident from 3:12, however, that Paul's intention is to winter at Nicopolis and he has not yet reached that point.

Thus the writing of the Epistle to Titus must have taken place somewhere en route to Nicopolis. The prime suggestion is that it was written at Corinth, following Paul's arrival there from Crete. Although this cannot be maintained dogmatically, there is nothing to suggest that this is not an accurate assumption.

Purpose. Perhaps the chief aim of Paul in writing to Titus was to authenticate the work of Titus on Crete. Titus was Paul's representative there. He would undoubtedly encounter opposition to his leadership there since he was not a native. Paul's epistle to him would add authority to his presence.

In addition, Paul found it necessary to advise Titus of specific instructions which he was to convey to the churches of Crete, the Mediterranean island. The believers of Crete had banded together to worship and pray but had not been organized into proper local assemblies. They were ignorant of church polity or structure. They had no indigenous leadership. Thus Titus was to instruct them in the basic structure of authority in the local church. He would appoint elders in the various churches and dictate the qualifications of those in leadership positions. Paul's instruction to Titus would add validity to the very existence of these churches on Crete. The Epistle to Titus was that instruction.

I Timothy and Titus are quite similar and cover a great deal of the same material. Yet Titus is less personal than I Timothy and much more brief. Also, Titus is characterized by a series of doctrinal summaries, brief capsules of what is most certainly to be believed among the churches.

COMMENTARY

PAUL, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, and the acknowledging of the truth which is after godliness;

2 In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began;

3 But hath in due times manifested his word through preaching, which is committed unto me according to the commandment of God our Saviour;

4 To Titus, mine own son after the common faith: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ our Saviour.

5 For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee:

6 If any be blameless, the husband of one wife, having faithful children not accused of riot or unruly.

7 For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not selfwilled, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre;

8 But a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate;

9 Holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers.

10 For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision:

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-4.

1:1. Paul. The common way to begin a letter in Paul's day was with an identification of the author by name and title. Paul did not vary from this form. Servant (Gr doulos). This is not just a worker but one who is born into slavery and one who gives himself wholly to another's will. This was Paul's view of himself in relation to God and ought to be that of every Christian. On the other hand, he was chosen of God to be an apostle. What a humble and high position he held at the same time. He was an apostle according to "or in accord with" the faith, the whole body of revealed truth. The church had to try those who "say they are apostles" (Rev 2:2). Paul could stand the test.

2. In hope of eternal life. (Gr epi) "upon the basis of" a hope or expectation of eternal life. Promised before the world began. God's plan of salvation was not an afterthought (Rev 13:8).

3. In due times. God has a schedule and is always on time. God's plan is revealed in his word and His Word is manifested through preaching. On the importance of preaching see Romans 10:13-15 and I Corinthians 1:17-21.

4. Own son (Gr gnēsiōs) means "legitimate born." Titus was another of Paul's converts. What a blessed event. Common faith or faith held in common. Grace, mercy, and peace. Paul's usual greeting in the Pastoral Epistles.

II. ORDER IN THE CHURCH. 1:5-16.

A. Order in the Church by the Elders. 1:5-9.

5. Crete, one of the largest islands of the Mediterranean where Paul ministered with Titus, probably between his imprisonments. Paul's ministry must have been fantastic. He left a church and converts wherever he went and they needed to set in order a church and ordain elders in every city.

The qualifications of elders in the church:

6. For the husband of one wife and other phrases not dealt with here, see notes on I Timothy 3:2 ff. Faithful or "believing" children. Not only believing children but ones not accused of riot or unruly. If Proverbs 22:6 is true and it is, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it," then there is no excuse for a Christian's son being accused of "riot" or "dissolute."

7. Bishop or overseer as the steward of God. A steward has charge of or governs another's affairs (cf. Heb 13:17). He must not be self-willed or "self-pleasing," as the Greek indicates, not arrogant. Then, not soon angry or prone to anger. The fruit of the Spirit is temperance, the opposite of this.

8. A lover of good men, really "a lover of all that is good" and not just men. Temperate. It means one who is held in check and this is done by the Holy Spirit, for it is a fruit of the Spirit (Gal 5:23).

9. Holding fast or "firmly to" the word which is faithful and trustworthy. As he hath been taught, meaning "according to the teaching" of the Lord Himself and the inspired apostles (Isa 8:20; Acts 2:42). This is necessary in order to exhort, encourage, and help believers and convince or convict the gainsayers, those who "oppose" or "speak against," as the Greek indicates, by means of sound doctrine.

B. Disorder in the Church by False Teachers. 1:10-16.

The need for elders arose because of false teachers.

10. These false teachers, teaching things which they ought not (vs. 11) are first of all unruly or uncontrolled as the children of verse 6. The same word occurs in both places. They balk at and reject any authority over them. And so we see it today. Vain

11 Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

12 One of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies.

13 This witness is true. Wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith;

14 Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth.

15 Unto the pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled.

16 They profess that they know God; but in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate.

CHAPTER 2

BUT speak thou the things which become sound doctrine:

2 That the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience.

3 The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things;

4 That they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children, talkers, in the sense of "empty" or "useless." Deceivers are really "mind" deceivers. Of the circumcision, i.e., the Jews.

11. Whose mouths must be stopped (Gr epistomizō) originally meant to put something in the mouth as a gag. Why? Because whole houses or families were being overthrown by them. There was much at stake. They taught for filthy lucre or "shameful gain," which God's true servants must not do (vs. 7).

12. A prophet of their own probably refers to the famed Cretan poet Epimenides, born around 600 B.C. Just as sodomy refers to an infamous sin of which Sodomites were guilty, so "Cretan" became almost synonymous with a liar. They were also slow bellies. The Greek here really means "idle gluttons." About such a one God says he should put a knife to his throat (Prov 23:2).

13. This witness is true. Paul confirms these as facts and says rebuke them sharply. There was no place for timidity here. Sharply (Gr apotomōs) meant "to cut off abruptly." That meant the purpose of the rebuke was that they may be sound or "healthy" in the faith. Rebuke was not vindictive but curative, as it should be always.

14. These things, Jewish fables, they taught (cf. I Tim 1:4-11) and the commandments of men that turn away from the truth of God. This was an ever-present danger of the Jews (cf. Mk 7:7-13).

15. Unto the pure . . . defiled. This is a fascinating verse and much needed today. Paul is referring to the Jewish legalists who were extremists about Old Testament Jewish ceremonial washings. These insisted on the ceremonial washings and were still calling some meats unclean, showing the need for the teaching of Matthew 15:1-20. People today can go to extremes and see something wrong in everything and every person until they separate themselves into total isolation.

16. They profess . . . but. Profession and performance should not contradict. Faith and works go together. True faith produces true works. Reprobate has the idea of being tested but disapproved.

III. OBEDIENCE IN THE CHURCH. 2:1-15.

A. Obedience of Older Men. 2:1-2.

2:1. But. In decided contrast to these false teachers Titus is exhorted. The word become has the idea of conspicuously becoming to sound doctrine. There would be no question about it.

2. The aged men are not the official elders but older men in years. Sober means sober-minded, sincere. Grave means dignified as opposed to frivolous and was used of deacons (I Tim 3:8). Temperate means "to curb one's desires and impulses." Sound, the familiar word meaning healthy.

B. Obedience of Older Women. 2:3.

3. Healthy doctrine shows up in the aged women . . . in behavior or "demeanor." As becometh means as is fitting and not out of place with holiness. Every believer's body is the temple of the Holy Spirit and everything done should be fitting the temple of God. Not false accusers (Gr diabulos) rendered devil in some places and meaning "slanderer." Not given to much wine. This is a translation of the Greek perfect participle douloō, "to make a slave of." The Greek tense speaks here of a confirmed drunkard. Women are not to be false accusers but teachers of good things.

C. Obedience of Young Women. 2:4-5.

4. They should teach the young women. Christian matrons have a responsibility to give their years of experience to the younger women. They are the best teachers of younger women.

To love their husbands . . . their children. This is a friendly

5 To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed.

6 Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded.

7 In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity,

8 Sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you.

9 Exhort servants to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well in all things; not answering again;

10 Not purloining, but shewing all good fidelity; that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.

11 For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, companionship in which you do things together. Most homes could use a lot of this teaching.

5. Discreet is the same word as in verse 2, translated “temperate,” and can mean sound-minded. Chaste or pure. Keepers at home (Gr oikourgos) means “working at home.” Again, Paul is no male chauvinist. God-ordained women are to work at home, but not as a maid or slave. Being a good homekeeper is not demeaning. There is no higher calling. Every man knows the transforming power in the home of a lovely, godly wife. Her power is felt in a much greater institute than a bank or political office when she influences the home and children for God. Obedient to their . . . husbands. What an awesome responsibility this puts on the husband to be a man of God and represent Christ in the home! Why are wives to live like this? That the word of God be not blasphemed. What an awful result when wives are out of place and unsubmitive.

D. Obedience of Young Men. 2:6-8.

6. The other side of this coin is for young men to be sober-minded. This is the same word (Gr sophroneō) as in verses 2 and 5, translated “temperate” and “discreet,” and has the idea of “curbing one’s desires and impulses,” or “self-controlled.”

7. Showing thyself. He now turns to Titus. A pattern of good works, pattern (Gr typos) meaning model or type. It is common for young men to have a hero and pastors should be the best human models for them to pattern themselves after. Then, in doctrine showing uncorruptness, that is, no taint of heresy. Gravity here means “dignity” and a man of God must have such and then he will win the respect of older men and women as well.

8. Sound speech, that cannot be condemned. Besides being a good pattern as a leader, the pastor must exhibit the wisdom to speak only that which is well-thought-out and not that which is rash or reprehensible. He should say nothing that will bring blame to his ministry (I Tim 5:14).

E. Obedience of Slaves. 2:9-10.

9. Servants (Gr doulos) were slaves in a pagan society. Paul did not get side-tracked into social reform. One cannot reform a lost society. The gospel will transform individuals in society and this is the minister’s calling. The trend today is to go around passing out aspirins, in the form of a so-called social gospel, to a sick society when it needs the work of a doctor “delivering” new babes into the kingdom of God. This is a much harder work and is opposed by every demon of hell, but it is the only lasting work and must be done by the man of God. Servants are to be obedient unto their . . . masters, not liberated! The context indicates that the obedient lives of Christian slaves should adorn the doctrine of God. (vs. 10). Not answering again (Gr antilego), not “contradicting.”

10. Not purloining (Gr nosphizomai). The root of this word really means to embezzle or pilfer. Petty thievery was common among slaves and they felt no compunction against it. Too many workers today fall into this same error. Businesses lose millions annually to employees who see nothing wrong with such thievery. Of a Christian this must not be, but he must show fidelity.

F. The Basis of Obedience. 2:11-15.

11. Why such restraining of oneself? Why demand obedience and submission of men and women? The grace of God. Let no one say grace gives license to sin or to be rude or crude. It would take volumes just to delve into the depths of God’s grace but II Corinthians 8:9 sums it up by saying, “For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.” Oh, how rich He was in glory, and how poor He became

12 Teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world;

13 Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ;

14 Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

15 These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no man despise thee.

CHAPTER 3

PUT them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, to be ready to every good work.

2 To speak evil of no man, to be no brawlers, but gentle, shewing all meekness unto all men.

as He took our sins upon Himself! Then how rich we became as the “sons of God” and “heirs of God” (Rom 8:16). This is the salvation grace brings. See Ephesians 2:8-10. Hath appeared refers to the past act of Christ’s first coming to give himself for us, that he might redeem us (vs. 14).

12. Our initial response to God’s grace must be denying ungodliness. Some very blindly accuse those who believe salvation is solely by grace of turning grace into a license to sin. Not so, for grace teaches to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts. While in the world the believer is not of the world and his desires are not to be set on this world system and its values. Rather, we should live soberly. This same word in different forms is in verses 2, 4, 5, 6 of this chapter. Righteously, or in simple terms, just do right no matter what others may do! Godly means in a godly manner, not “holier than thou” but with true piety. In this present world. The gospel is not a pie in the sky, but it is for the here and now, and it teaches how to really live and not just exist, as the world does.

13. There is a great future as well and grace teaches to look for that blessed hope. “If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable” (I Cor 15:19). There is much more to come. Jesus is coming again and it will be the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. The Greek construction here is fantastic for the construction makes the blessed hope and glorious appearing to be one and the same thing. The one true hope and expectation of the believer is seeing Jesus as He is and being like Him (I Jn 3:2). How the heart of the believer longs for that day (II Tim 4:8). Then the same rule of construction makes the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ to be one and the same thing as well. This is a strong statement of the deity of Christ. “Let God be true but every man a liar” but Jesus is God, not simply like God or godly, but He is God, for indeed, “the Word was God” (Jn 1:1).

14. Who gave himself. This is why He humbled Himself (Phil 2:5-8) and became a man so He, the God-man, might suffer and die for our sins and redeem us from all iniquity. The word redeem (Gr lutroō) means “to set free by the payment of a ransom.” The believer is now set free from sin to become zealous of good works. He is “created in Christ Jesus unto good works” (Eph 2:10), not because of good works which would be contrary to salvation by grace.

15. These things speak . . . with all authority. God’s man must be authoritative. Jesus was (Mt 7:29). The scribes weren’t!

IV. OBEDIENCE IN THE WORLD. 3:1-11.

A. Obedience in Relationship to Rulers. 3:1.

3:1. Put them in mind or simply remind them to be subject. This is in the middle voice and means “put oneself” with the idea of doing it willingly and not being made to do it. To principalities. This refers to the principal person or first in authority, such as the king. Then powers refer to those of delegated authority under them. Obey magistrates reminds us there is a chain of command in the civil realm and believers are to be obedient in civil matters. To do away with this principal would lead to anarchy and chaos. Every good work. This seems to indicate the believer’s sphere of influence for good ought to be felt in every realm. Joseph, Daniel, and Moses are good examples of this.

B. Obedience in Relationship to People. 3:2-7.

2. To speak evil of no man, from which we get blasphemy (Gr blasphēmēō). Usually this is used with reference to God but here it is to men also. How tragic to hear so much of this done among Christians today, even of one another. While this refers

3 For we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

4 But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared,

5 Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost;

6 Which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;

7 That being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

8 This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.

9 But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain.

10 A man that is an heretick after the first and second admonition reject:

11 Knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself.

12 When I shall send Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, be diligent to come unto me to Ni-côp'o-lis: for I have determined there to winter.

to the world primarily, name-calling is not a Christian's prerogative and especially of a brother in the Lord. Brawler means "not a contentious person." It is usually the contentious who speak evil of others. Gentle usually refers to our outward conduct while meekness to inward attitude. Both are Christlike characteristics.

3. We . . . were . . . foolish. It is so easy to forget what manner of men we once were. Foolish means "without understanding" which is true of the natural man (I Cor 2:14). Disobedient. Romans 1:18ff. shows just how far the unbeliever will go to be disobedient to God. He is deceived by the deceiver himself and will believe a lie rather than the truth. Serving (Gr douleuō) or slaving to divers lusts. "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin" (Jn 8:34). Living (Gr diagō) meaning "to pass the time" in malice or envy. Then, as unbelievers, we were hateful, and hating one another. What a history. Who dares write his true autobiography before he knew Christ.

4-5. But, thank God for the "buts" in Scripture. But for the grace of God we would all still be in the same wretched condition as the unbeliever in the world, therefore, beware how you speak against even them! The kindness . . . of God . . . appeared showing that Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us. We are not saved because we do not do the above things anymore, but are saved according to his mercy. Salvation comes not by trusting our works of righteousness, but His work of redemption on the cross. Salvation then includes the washing of regeneration. (Gr palinggenesia) is a compound of "again" and "to become." Jesus spoke of it as being born again. It is the act of the Holy Ghost (Jn 3:5-8).

6. It also comes through Jesus Christ our Savior. God thought it, Christ bought it, and the Spirit wrought it.

7. Salvation is not just a narrow escape from hell. What was shed on us abundantly was that we should be made heirs, heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ (Rom 8:16-17). What a "great salvation" (Heb 2:3).

C. Obedience and Our Relationship to Heretics. 3:8-11.

8. I will that thou affirm constantly. The word "affirm" is the same word used of the false teachers in I Timothy 1:7. It means to strongly affirm. Affirm that believers are to maintain good works. Sometimes this is neglected and believers can take a "who cares" attitude. This must not be so.

9. But avoid foolish questions. These admonitions were given over and over to Timothy as well. See I Timothy 1:4; II Timothy 2:23ff.

10. Heretick (Gr hairetikos) means "to choose, prefer, or take for oneself." It has the idea of choosing to believe what one wants, in spite of what God says. The Word of God must be the final authority for what we believe. Those who accept so-called "further revelations" which are contrary to the Word of God are heretics and should be rejected.

11. This one is subverted (Gr ektrepō), meaning twisted. It is a medical term used of such as an ankle that has been sprained. Being condemned of himself (Gr autokatakritos) means self-condemned. By his own contentions, the subverted one condemns himself and shows whose camp he is in.

V. CONCLUSION. 3:12-15.

Now comes a number of personal notes which conclude the epistle. This is typical of the apostle.

12. Evidently Artemas or Tychicus was to replace Titus on the island of Crete. Artemas is unknown to us but Tychicus is well attested in Pauline literature being the bearer from Rome to Asia Minor of the epistles to the Colossians, Ephesians, and to 13 Bring Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their journey diligently, that nothing be wanting unto them.

14 And let ours also learn to maintain good works for necessary uses, that they be not unfruitful.

15 All that are with me salute thee. Greet them that love us in the faith. Grace be with you all. Amen.

Philemon. Also Tychicus was to be sent by Paul to relieve Timothy in Ephesus (II Tim 4:12). He was the trusted companion of Paul. Both here and in II Timothy 4:21 there is a reference to Paul's plan to winter in Nicopolis and in each case he urges his associates to be diligent to come to him.

13. Zenas the lawyer and Apollos. Zenas the "lawyer" (Gr nomikos) is otherwise unknown but Apollos is the eloquent evangelist mentioned frequently in Acts and I Corinthians. Assistance is to be provided to them so that nothing be wanting unto them.

14. Learn to maintain good works. The Cretan Christians are not only to conduct themselves properly, but are to engage only in honorable occupations and to make themselves practically useful to all the other believers. "The practical side of Christianity is here brought into vivid focus. The words for necessary uses can be understood either as necessitous cases or as wants. The more probable interpretation is the former, as RSV 'so as to help cases of urgent need.' All who engage in such works of mercy need never fear that they will be unfruitful" (Donald Guthrie, The Pastoral Epistles, p. 210).

15. Grace be with you all. Amen. This final benediction is identical with those of I and II Timothy, except for the "all" at the end. In characteristic shortness, yet tenderness, Paul has completed his letter to another son in the faith, Titus.

The Epistle To PHILEMON

INTRODUCTION

Paul's letter to Philemon is the shortest of his thirteen canonical books (only 430 words in the AV), and is thus placed last in the collection of Pauline Epistles in our Bible. It was written and sent at the same time as Colossians, about A.D. 62, while Paul was under guard in Rome awaiting trial before Caesar (Acts 25:12; 28:16, 30).

This little letter in Paul's own handwriting (vs. 19) is to Philemon, a well-to-do Christian who resided in Colossae (cf. vss. 2, 23 and Col 4:12, 17) in the Roman province of Asia. Paul had been the principal human agent responsible for the salvation of Philemon (vs. 19), accomplished some five or six years prior through Paul's ministry in Ephesus (Acts 19:10, 26). Paul's purpose in writing is to ask Philemon to reinstate Onesimus, a slave who had run away from Philemon, and who apparently had stolen some valuables (vs. 18).

The backdrop of the whole story is, of course, the first-century Roman Empire. There were millions of slaves throughout the empire. Many slaveholders had ten or more, and not a few owned hundreds. These slaves were not of any particular race or nationality, but were composed of the people of Rome's many conquered territories from the East to the West. Roman law governing slavery was quite severe toward the slave. They were considered nothing more than pieces of property to be bought, sold, and used for any purpose whatsoever. Life was not easy for slaves. They could be beaten for minor offenses and even crucified for running away.

In contrast to Roman law was the Old Testament law about slaves. They were treated like household members (Lev 25:53) and became partakers of the covenant (Gen 17:27). They were freed during the sabbatical year (Ex 21:2). Harming a slave resulted in his freedom (Ex 21:26-27), and if someone killed a slave he would be severely punished (Ex 21:20). An escaped slave was to be neither hunted nor returned to his master (Deut 23:15-16). For more on slavery, both Jewish and Roman, see J. B. Lightfoot's introduction to Philemon, and W. Alexander's eight-page section in the introduction to Philemon in The Bible Commentary, edited by F. C. Cook.

With this contrast between the Jewish law and the Roman practice of slavery in mind, we see how masterfully Paul sought to bring mercy into the Roman system where Christians were concerned. Paul must also have had the slave Onesimus in mind when he addressed Christian slaveholders in Ephesians 6:5-8 and Colossians 3:22-25, both near the time he wrote this letter to Philemon.

COMMENTARY

I. PAUL'S PROLOGUE. 1-3.

PAUL, a prisoner of Jesus Christ, and Tīm'o-thŷ our brother, unto Phī-lē'mon our dearly beloved, and fellowlabourer.

1. Paul, a prisoner of Jesus Christ. As was customary, Paul first identifies himself to his readers. But here, instead of calling himself an apostle, he reminds Philemon that he is a prisoner for Christ's sake (cf. vs. 9; Eph 3:1; 4:1 and II Tim 1:8). And Timothy, our brother. All true believers in Christ are brothers. Timothy was no doubt visiting Paul in Rome, and was not being detained. Unto Philemon. All we know about Philemon is contained in this short letter. Residing at Colossae, Philemon was apparently a model Christian. He was an active worker for Christ and also the owner of the slave Onesimus, who had run away.

2 And to our beloved Āp'phī-a, and Ār-chīp'pus our fellowsoldier, and to the church in thy house:

2. Apphia was no doubt Philemon's wife, and is thus warmly greeted, along with Archippus, who may be their son, and who apparently has certain responsibilities in the local congregation of believers at Colossae (Col 4:17). And to the church in thy

3 Grace to you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers.

5 Hearing of thy love and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints;

6 That the communication of thy faith may become effectual by the acknowledging of every good thing which is in you in Christ Jesus.

7 For we have great joy and consolation in thy love, because the bowels of the saints are refreshed by thee, brother.

8 Wherefore, though I might be much bold in Christ to enjoin thee that which is convenient, 9 Yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee, being such an one as Paul the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ.

10 I beseech thee for my son ō-nēs'i-mus, whom I have begotten in my bonds:

11 Which in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me:

house. The word church (Gr ekklēsia), as it is used here, refers to a local group of immersed believers who would gather together for worship, prayer, edification, exhortation, fellowship, and the commemoration of Christ's death (the Lord's Supper), and then go forth to serve Christ and to tell others about Him. Since believers did not build meeting houses, they frequently met in homes (Acts 2:4-6; Rom 16:5).

3. Grace to you, and peace. Grace (Gr charis) was the common Greek greeting, just as peace (Heb shalōm) was the ordinary Hebrew salutation. Paul combines both of these terms, heightened with the full Christian meaning of all the blessings of salvation that freely come to us through Christ, and the peace of God that we have because Christ has made peace with God on our behalf. The fact that God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ together send this grace and peace illustrates their equality in the Godhead.

II. PAUL'S PRAYER AND PRAISE FOR PHILEMON.

4. Paul perpetually set a proper example in his prayer life. We should be thankful for other believers and bear them up before the Lord. Paul had a long prayer list which he remembered daily (see Eph 1:15-16; Phil 1:3-4; Col 1:9; I Thess 1:2; and II Tim 1:3). We should follow his example.

5. Hearing. Paul continually heard of Philemon's love and faith from others around him. Philemon was a model believer, both before the Lord, and with regard to other believers. This naturally has a bearing on the request Paul makes of Philemon.

6. This verse expresses the content of Paul's prayer for Philemon. He prays that Philemon might generously share with others, the results of which would glorify God.

7. This was in fact what Paul had been hearing about Philemon. Paul was encouraged because Philemon was such a rest and refreshment to the saints (other believers) in Colossae. Brother. Paul refers both to Philemon and to Onesimus (vs. 16) as his brothers. Such ties in the Lord are often more meaningful than even blood relations with those who are unsaved.

III. PAUL'S PLEA FOR PROFITABLE ONESIMUS.

8-21.

8. Wherefore. Because Philemon's heart was so gracious, kind, and loving (vss. 4-7), Paul knows that he does not need to command Philemon with the authority of an apostle to perform his request.

9. Instead, Paul makes a forthright appeal to Philemon to act on a higher plane, that of love. Paul's mention that he is aged, and also a prisoner, is calculated to gain the approval sought from Philemon. Paul must have been nearly sixty years old at that time, and he was a missionary statesman by anyone's standards. Not a young inexperienced preacher, Paul was an elder apostle who knew the mind of Christ. His status as a "helpless" prisoner made his appeal all the more weighty upon Philemon. He was trusting God to speak to Philemon concerning his plea.

10. My son Onesimus. Paul's plea is for Onesimus, Philemon's runaway slave. After Onesimus fled from Colossae he made his way to Rome, and somehow came into contact with Paul, who led him to a saving knowledge of Christ. This is why Paul refers to Onesimus as his son whom he has begotten (in the faith). Paul elsewhere refers to Timothy and Titus in similar fashion (I Tim 1:2; Tit 1:4). It is possible that Onesimus, who willingly returned to Philemon with Paul's letter, stood in the very presence of Philemon as the letter was read.

11. This verse contains a play on words. The name Onesimus (Gr ōnēsimos) means "useful" or "profitable." Paul is saying that Onesimus had previously not lived up to his name, but now

12 Whom I have sent again: thou therefore receive him, that is, mine own bowels:

13 Whom I would have retained with me, that in thy stead he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel:

14 But without thy mind would I do nothing; that thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly.

15 For perhaps he therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldst receive him for ever;

16 Not now as a servant, but above a servant, a brother beloved, specially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the flesh, and in the Lord?

17 If thou count me therefore a partner, receive him as myself.

18 If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account;

19 I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it: albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides.

20 Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: refresh my bowels in the Lord.

21 Having confidence in thy obe-

(since his salvation) he will not only be useful to Philemon, but already has proven himself such to Paul. True salvation changes one's attitude and his actions (II Cor 5:17).

12. Mine own bowels. Paul's deep affection and admiration for Onesimus must have been evident to Philemon, as he refers to Onesimus as his own heart. Paul multiplies the terms in calling Onesimus his son (vs. 10), his own heart (vs. 12), his brother (vs. 16), and even exhorts Philemon to receive him as he would Paul himself (vs. 17).

13. Paul longed to keep Onesimus with him because he ministered to him in his difficult situation in Rome. Paul lovingly mentions that if Onesimus were in Rome he would only be doing what Philemon himself would do if he could. Certainly, Philemon must have been in tears as he read these affectionate words of his beloved friend and apostle.

14. Paul refused to keep Onesimus because to have done so and then to have sought Philemon's approval may have forced Philemon to grudgingly approve of the situation. But Paul knows that if kindness or helpfulness is in any way forced, it becomes insincere. Philemon's goodness always proceeded willingly from a heart of compassion. We must constantly examine our own lives to insure that proper actions are produced by proper motives.

15. The marvelous providence of God is in view in this verse. Onesimus' departure eventuated in his salvation in Christ. Now he returns to Philemon for the duration of this life, with the happy prospect of spending eternity in heaven with Philemon and all other believers. This does not mean that Onesimus never would have been saved if he had not run away. But God in His providence did turn his evil around for good.

16. Though Onesimus was still Philemon's slave, and as far as we know remained such, in Christ he was the Lord's freeman (I Cor 7:21), and a brother to and a joint heir with Paul and Philemon (Gal 3:28; Rom 8:17). Christian bonds transcend human barriers and exceed mere earthly relationships.

17. Paul had already asked Philemon to receive Onesimus back (vs. 12), but now he put the request in terminology that could scarcely be ignored. He stated that if Philemon regarded him as an associate, a partner in spiritual matters, then he should receive Onesimus as he would Paul himself. There is, of course, no question as to how Philemon would receive Paul! This is also a perfect picture of how God receives sinners who trust Christ as Lord and Saviour. How is that? Just as He receives Christ.

18. Put that on mine account. Paul wants all of Onesimus' wrongs placed on his own account as if they were his. In the same way, Christ takes all the believer's sins on Himself and pays for all completely by His shed blood (I Pet 2:24). Christ is our substitute. He suffered our punishment. No wonder Luther could so aptly say, "We are all the Lord's Onesimi."

19. When Paul wrote his various epistles, he often used a stenographer to do the writing; but here, perhaps because of his great personal concern, he points out that he has written the letter in his own handwriting. Paul's offer to pay all that Onesimus owed must have moved Philemon, as well as the reminder that with regard to eternal values Philemon owed everything to Paul's concern for him (humanly speaking).

20. The apostle makes his final appeal to Philemon, calling him brother, and asking him, as it were, for a personal favor. The language expressing Paul's desire is very heightened. He yearns for that which will bring to his own heart abundant joy in Christ. His final challenge is that Philemon might refresh his heart, even as Philemon has refreshed the hearts of others (cf. vs. 7 where the same expression occurs).

21. Thy obedience refers to the obedience that proceeds from a heart of love, not from the compulsion of Paul's authority dience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

22 But withal prepare me also a lodging: for I trust that through your prayers I shall be given unto you.

23 There salute thee Ēp'a-phrās, my fellowprisoner in Christ Jesus;

24 Marcus, Ār-Is-tār'chus, Demas, Lucas, my fellowlabourers.

25 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

as an apostle. Thou wilt also do more than I say. The extreme confidence Paul has in Philemon's response is noted here. There is even a hint at possible emancipation, i.e., "more than I say," which was merely to receive Onesimus back.

IV. PAUL'S PERSONAL PROSPECTS. 22.

22. With the plea for Onesimus ended, Paul presents his personal plan of visiting Philemon once his case in Rome is decided. He expects to be released soon (Phil 2:24). He is confident that Philemon will provide some hospitality, and that Philemon's prayers will move God to intervene on his behalf. Prayer does move God. One can also imagine how Paul's intention to visit Philemon must have encouraged him to grant Paul's initial request for Onesimus.

V. PAUL'S POSTSCRIPT. 23-25.

23. Epaphras, my fellow prisoner. Epaphras was well known to the Colossians (Col 1:7; 4:12-13). To call him a fellow prisoner (as he did Aristarchus, Col 4:10) must mean that these men were so constantly with Paul that it seemed they were prisoners too.

24. Marcus [John Mark] had recovered from his failure on the first missionary journey (Acts 13:13; 15:36-41) and was now with Paul again (cf. II Tim 4:11). Aristarchus was one of Paul's converts from Thessalonica who accompanied Paul on much of the third missionary journey (Acts 20:4) and on the trip to Rome (Acts 27:2; Col 4:10). Demas, sad to say, later turned back from following Christ (II Tim 4:10). Lucas [Luke], the beloved physician, the author of Luke and Acts, was faithful to the very end (II Tim 4:11). These all sent their greetings to Philemon. Of the eleven persons mentioned in this short letter, Onesimus is precisely in the middle, and is the central character.

25. Paul ends this letter as he began it, with the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ directed toward Philemon's entire household. All grace resides in Him who freely gave all He had for us. "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift" (II Cor 9:15).

The Epistle To The HEBREWS

INTRODUCTION

First century Jewish Christians were involved in a traumatic identity struggle. Persecuted by both the Romans and their fellow Jews, they were involved in the always difficult conflict of trying to interpret new thoughts in contrast to long-held tradition. Further, the eschatology of Christ remained unfulfilled. There were no indications that Christ's return and the restoration of Israel would ever occur. The first generation of Christians had passed, and Israel was still unsaved. Outwardly, Christ remained unvindicated before many of these Jewish Christians (Westcott, p. V), and the purpose of the Epistle to the Hebrews seems clearly to be one of exhorting them to hold fast to their faith in Christ.

Throughout the epistle the author stresses the continuity and flow between the Old Testament revelation and the new faith in Christ, emphasizing the superiority of both Christ and the new covenant which He initiated. In doing so he assures the Jewish Christians of the biblical heritage of the new covenant. He challenges them to run with endurance the race that is set before them (12:1), even as their Jewish ancestors had done in Old Testament times. In the exhortative style of the epistle we find encouragement, comfort, and warning.

Authorship. The most intriguing mystery surrounding the book of Hebrews is that of its authorship. For one reason or another, the author remains anonymous to us, though he was known to his original readers (13:23). Discussion concerning the author's identity dates back to the second century. We are not told whether the writer was Gentile or Hebrew (see the Commentary on 13:10). He did have a superb knowledge of Jewish tradition and levitical thought. His Greek syntax and style are so outstanding that many feel that his are the finest in the New Testament. We know also that he was well acquainted with Timothy (13:23). While these facts serve to give us clues regarding the writer's identity, they also may confuse the issue. The following is a survey of the arguments, both positive and negative, regarding those who are most popularly thought to have written the epistle.

Paul. The strongest argument for pauline authorship of the epistle involves the ancient historical tradition of the church. As early as the second century, Paul was regarded in the East as the author; during the third century the eastern churches commonly accepted his authorship. In the West, where the epistle was known from earliest times, pauline authorship was rejected and did not gain general acceptance until the fourth century (Gardiner, The Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, First Series, Vol. XIV, p. 341). Even in the East, Clement of Alexandria had difficulty reconciling the literary character of Hebrews with Paul's style and thus proposed that "it was written by Paul for Hebrews in the Hebrew language, but that Luke translated it and published it for the Greeks; thus he endeavored to account for the similarity in style between Hebrews and the Lucan writings." (F. F. Bruce, p. XXXVI). Though the literary style of Hebrews in no way allows it to be a translation, the proposal by Clement does reveal the disparity some early Greek-speaking scholars saw between Paul's style and that of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

Conversely, the argument commonly raised against pauline authorship, which is based upon Paul's usual practice of identifying himself at the beginning of his epistles, lacks substance. In his epistles that are written to churches in gentile cities, Paul has good reason to immediately identify himself. But if Paul were writing to Jewish believers, it may have been to his advantage not to identify himself so readily. Also in favor of pauline authorship is the comment in chapter thirteen regarding Timothy "our brother." Further, Paul was very familiar with the Hebrew tradition and levitical ritual presented so often in the epistle. He was born a Pharisee, a son of Pharisees (Acts 23:6 NASB), and had an excellent background in the Jewish law.

The strongest argument against pauline authorship is found within the epistle itself. In 2:3 the author regards himself as one whose knowledge of Christ was secondhand. By contrast, Paul vehemently declares that his apostleship and message were directly from Jesus Christ (Gal 1:1, 12).

Luke. Those arguments which speak against pauline authorship speak for lucan authorship: the Greek literary form, the author's secondhand knowledge of Jesus, and even the witness of ancient church tradition. Also, the author's common practice of quoting from the Greek Old Testament, the Septuagint, parallels Luke's pattern while going counter to Paul's.

The argument that no Gentile could write this book is not insurmountable. Luke demonstrates himself to be a careful student of the Word of God. If a Jew could appeal to a gentile world, it is possible that a gentile Christian could admonish Jewish Christians. This could also account for the anonymous character of the epistle. One factor, however, that speaks against lucan authorship is the author's apparent identification of himself with his Jewish readers when he says "Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp" (13:13), and, "We have an altar" (13:10). Such scholars as Calvin and Delitzsch have supported the lucan authorship.

Barnabas. The viewpoint that Barnabas was the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews was put forth as early as the second century by Tertullian. Barnabas was a Levite from Cyprus. As such, he would have been familiar with levitical ritual.

HEBREWS

The arguments against Barnabas' authorship stem more from the fact that little positive evidence exists for it. Since Barnabas was well known in the early church, if indeed he wrote the book, more evidence should exist supporting his authorship.

Apollos. The view that Apollos was the author of Hebrews apparently was first suggested by Luther. Today the view is a popular one. Most of the evidence cited for Apollos stems from information contained in Acts 18:24-28. There we learn that Apollos was an Alexandrian Jew and, so, was most likely familiar with the philosophical thinking commonly seen in the development of the Epistle to the Hebrews. We further read that he was an eloquent man and "mighty in the scriptures." Apparently, Apollos had an effective ministry in reaching the Jews by means of the Scriptures, showing that Jesus was indeed the Christ. This same thought development is basic to the book of Hebrews; many quotes from the Old Testament Scriptures are used to illustrate the excellency of Christ.

The greatest weakness in the argument for Apollos' authorship is the lack of early historical evidence. It seems logical that if Apollos had indeed written such a remarkable epistle, one of the second-century Alexandrian fathers, such as Clement or Origen, would have laid claim to one of their own as the author.

It seems best to conclude the whole subject of authorship with the words of Origen from the second century: "Who the author of the Epistle is, God truly knows" (Eusebius 6.25). Whoever the author may be, the crucial thing seems to be that he encourages us to be "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith" (12:2). The author asks that we look to Jesus for everything, drawing from Him the strength and encouragement to live the Christian life that is set before us.

Recipients. The earliest extant manuscripts of Hebrews contain the heading "To Hebrews." From every indication in the epistle, it would appear that these Hebrews are Jewish Christians. The various warnings throughout the book indicate that some of them were in danger of returning to Judaism. By so doing, these early Christians could avoid persecution. Judaism was a legal religion, sanctioned and protected under Roman law;

Christianity was not. Apparently, many of the recipients had undergone suffering (10:32).

Many cities have been suggested as the locality of these believers (cf. F. F. Bruce, pp. XXXI-XXXV). The situation favors two: Jerusalem and Rome. The Jewish Christians had often received persecution in both cities. In Jerusalem, it was at the hand of Jews for being Christians. In Rome, at times they were persecuted for being Jews (Acts 18:2), and at other times for being Christians.

Though Jerusalem would provide an appealing setting, some scholars find the internal evidence to be problematic (cf. Kent, pp. 23-24). The most significant problem involves the author's statement that the readers had not heard the Lord for themselves but that the message had been passed on by those who had heard Him (2:3). Thus, it would seem easier to imagine that the readers did not live in Jerusalem.

One piece of evidence that makes Rome attractive is the author's closing statement that "They of Italy salute you" (13:24). Since the word "of" (Gr apo) is more commonly translated "from," the author may be relaying to those in Rome greetings from those who had formerly lived there. The epistle seems to have been written either by an author in Rome or to recipients in Rome.

Date. The question of date remains somewhat unresolved since the authorship and destination of the epistle escape complete analysis. The evidence clearly places Hebrews within the first century. The allusions to Hebrews by Clement of Rome demand a date prior to A.D. 96 (Bruce, p. XLII). The reference to Timothy as still living (13:23) likewise demands a date within the first century. Yet, the date cannot be early within the church age; for the readers are described as second-generation Christians (2:3). Evidently the date precedes A.D. 70; for throughout all the discourses on the tabernacle ritual, not once is any allusion made regarding the destruction of the Temple by the Romans. The Jewish sacrificial system still appears to be in effect (8:4; 10:8,11). Further, since these Christians had not undergone persecution unto death (12:4), the epistle apparently predates the last days of Nero in the late sixties. A date within the mid-sixties conforms to the known data.

- 1. The supreme example of endurance. 12:1-4.
  - 2. The example of fatherly discipline. 12:5-13.
  - 3. Exhortation to holiness. 12:14-17.
  - 4. The fifth warning: Do not refuse warning from heaven. 12:18-29.
- C. General Admonitions for Service. 13:1-25.
- 1. Involving love. 13:1-6.
  - 2. Involving leaders and living. 13:7-17.
  - 3. Involving author and recipients. 13:18-25.

COMMENTARY

I. EXHORTATION BASED UPON DOCTRINE—THE PERSON AND WORK OF CHRIST. 1:1-10:39.

A. Christ Is the Finality of Revelation. 1:1-3.

The epistle begins without any greeting or address, demonstrating that it is not a personal letter but a Word of exhortation (13:22). Immediately, the author proclaims his theme: The work of Jesus Christ is God's final work and is superior to all that which preceded it.

1. The former revelation in the prophets. 1:1.

1:1. God, who at sundry times and in divers manners. Although as the subject of the sentence, God is placed first, in the Greek it is neither first nor the thought that is emphasized. At sundry times (lit., in many parts) and in divers manners (lit., in many ways) open the message of this epistle. By putting these words first the author fixes our attention upon the variations and imperfection of the Old Testament revelation (Westcott, p. 4). That revelation came bit by bit, as men were ready and able to receive it. God used visions, dreams, events, and

GOD, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets,

2 Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds;

3 Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;

direct communication to reveal His message by the prophets. This fragmentary and varied method demonstrates God's graciousness and versatility in matching His message to the capability of man to understand it (Kent, p. 34).

2. The final revelation in the Son. 1:2-3.

2. Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son. These first two verses contrast the former revelation with the revelation which has been given through the Son. The latter revelation is not fragmentary, but complete. It has been reserved for and is now committed to the One whom he hath appointed heir of all things. Within verses 2 and 3, seven statements are made concerning the person and work of the Son. Though they are difficult to see in the English translation, these statements gather around three relative clauses, two located in verse 2 and the last in verse 3. First, the One through whom God's final revelation came to man is the One whom God has made heir of all. This language is reminiscent of Psalm 2, to which the author shortly refers (vs. 5). "In that psalm, God places His Anointed One (i.e., Messiah) upon the messianic throne, and grants Him the earth and its people for His inheritance (Ps 2:2-8). The Son's messianic office is thus fully assured" (Kent, p. 36). The One through whom God has given His final message is also the heir of God's final program for this earth. Second, the Son is described as the One by whom also he made the worlds. This work infinitely surpasses the mighty works performed by the Old Testament prophets. It is a work of deity.

3. Who . . . sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high completes the three relative clauses. Other phrases within verse 3 describe the Son, but this is the last idea that parallels those of verse 2. When He had made purification for sin, He sat down on high. This sitting does not imply present inactivity; rather, it suggests the completion of His redemptive work. This is in direct contrast to the Old Testament priest whose work was never completed.

Who being introduces the phrases which now describe Christ. The use of being (Gr ōn) "guards against the idea of mere 'adoption' in the Sonship, and affirms the permanence of the divine essence of the Son during His historic work" (Westcott, p. 9). He did not become deity; He always was like the Father. The attributes ascribed to Jesus Christ make up His very nature. They were neither added to, nor taken from, Him during His earthly life. He is the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person. The brightness (Gr apaugasma) spoken of here refers to a radiance or a shining forth of the divine glory through the Son. "As the rays of light are related to the sun, and neither exists without the other, so Christ is the effulgence of the divine glory. They are essentially one; that is, both are God" (Kent, p. 37). Further, the Son is the express image (Gr charaktēr) or "imprint," as of a die perfectly representing the original design. The radiant light implies the oneness of the Son with the Father; the imprint of His person implies the distinctness of the Son from the Father. Yet, oneness and distinctness are implicit in both; so the two figures serve to enhance and balance each other (Hughes, p. 41).

The Son is further described as the One who is upholding all things. More precisely, the Son is described as carrying (Gr pherōn) all things. Christ is not viewed simply as an Atlas supporting the dead weight of the world, but as One sustaining and bringing it to its goal (Westcott, pp. 13-14). Compare the similar teaching of Colossians 1:17.

B. Christ Is Superior to the Angels Because of the Work Accomplished. 1:4-2:18.

After declaring the superiority of the Son and the finality of the revelation which came through Him, the author demonstrates Christ's superiority to the angels. It was necessary that he prove Christ's superiority over the angels to his readers, for in the first-century world pagans and Christians alike accorded great significance and power to angels. Some had possibly taught that Christ Himself was an angel, and for that reason He was able to perform miracles. There is evidence from Scripture (Col 2:18) that some even worshiped angels. Further, angels were involved in the giving of the Mosaic law (2:2; Acts 7:53; Gal 3:19). Thus, if the author wishes to prove the overall superiority of Christ, he must prove that Christ is superior to angels.

4 Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.

5 For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?

6 And again, when he bringeth in the firstbegotten into the world, he saith, And let all the angels of God worship him.

7 And of the angels he saith, Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire.

1. The Proof of Christ's superiority. 1:4-14.

4. The first proof that Christ is superior to the angels is manifested through the name which He has received, as the Old Testament Scriptures themselves declare. Being made (Gr genomenos) indicates that the incarnation of Christ is in view here. Progress or development is involved. The author will later show (2:9) that for a short time Christ became lower than the angels by becoming man and dying for him. Still, He is better (Gr kreittōn) than they are. Thirteen times the author uses this word to develop his theme that Christ is better than any person, being, or institution. He is better than the angels, for he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they. Indeed, His is the "name which is above every name" (Phil 2:9). This includes angels.

5. For unto which of the angels said he at any time. The author here begins a series of Old Testament quotations. No other writer quotes so extensively or develops the Old Testament in the New so exegetically. No other New Testament writer quotes extended passages and then analyzes the many points more thoroughly. In verse 5 the author quotes two passages to demonstrate that Jesus Christ is the Son and is therefore superior to the angels; for they are never so designated (Ps 2:7; II Sam 7:14). Though angels have been called "sons of God" in the sense that they are of a direct creation of God, no individual angel has ever been addressed as "son of God" in all of Scripture (Kent, p. 40). By contrast, the preincarnate Christ was often designated as "the Angel of the Lord." Thus, it becomes important that the readers understand that, though He was the Messenger of the Lord, He was not in any sense an angelic being. He is superior, first, because of the name the Father attributes to Him and, second, because of His position which the author now develops in the next nine verses.

6-7. The Old Testament Scriptures abundantly demonstrate the superiority of the Son to the angels from His superior position. Five passages are cited from these few verses. And again, when he bringeth (Gr hotan de palin eisafate) suggests that verse 6 is a third quotation parallel to the two in verse 5. However, this does not seem to be the case. The phrase and again that connects the two quotes in verse 5 is different from the Greek form in verse 6. The word de in verse 6 is the word translated but in verses 8, 12, and 13. In each of these verses the Son is contrasted with the angels and Creation. Since verse 6 does not express a similar contrast between Christ and the angels, many translators use "and again." But verses 5 and 6 do express a contrast, not another contrast between the Son and the angels, but a change in thought development. In verses 4 and 5 the author has established that Christ alone is the Son. Starting with verse 6, he reveals the position of the angels in relation to Him. The earlier verses showed the relation of the Son to the Father; verses 6 and following show the relation of the angels to the Son (Westcott, p. 21).

Thus, how does again fit into the sentence? It can be taken as a particle of connection, "but again," or as qualifying he bringeth (Westcott, pp. 21-23, proposes the latter view). The Greek could literally be rendered, "But whenever He again should bring the first-born into the world." The verse would then be stating that the angels will worship the Son at His second coming, rather than as a babe at his first. Angels did worship Him at His incarnation (Lk 2:13f.), and they will at His second coming (Mt 16:27; 24:30ff.; 25:31; Mk 13:27; Rev 5:11ff.; see Hughes, pp. 57-59, for various arguments).

The reference to Christ as the first begotten (prōtotokos) is unusual; for in all other usages the word is modified, whereas here it is absolute. Elsewhere, He is spoken of as the first-born of his earthly brothers and sisters (Mt 1:25; Lk 2:7), of the dead (Rev 1:5), of other men (Rom 8:29; Col 1:18), and of creation (Col 1:15). In each case His preeminence with some group is expressed. Here His preeminence is absolute, receiving no restriction. Bruce declares that Jesus is the first-born because He exists before all creation and because it is His heritage (p. 15), while Kent refers to it as position and dignity (p. 42).

Verses 6 and 7 cite two Old Testament texts (Ps 97:7; Ps 104:4) to demonstrate that the Son is superior to the angels. He is worshiped by them; they were created to serve.

8-9. The author continues to quote from the Psalms (45:6-7) to reveal the superior nature of the Son. He is declared to be God Himself, One whose throne is righteous and eternal. Because of His righteousness, He is anointed above His fellows (Gr metochous). Because of the context, we may first imagine that the fellows are angels in that He is superior to them. Yet, it is that very fact, the contextual development, which would seem to disqualify angels from being His peers or companions. The better interpretation seems to be to regard these fellows as the brethren of Christ (2:11), even the many sons (2:10). It is with man that Christ has chosen to be identified since He has taken man's nature and not that of the angels (2:16).

10-12. And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation. The quotations from Psalms continue (Ps 102:25-27). The Son as Creator is emphasized in these verses. As Creator, He possesses a superior position. The realm of His creation that is stressed is the heavens, which by metonymy could include the angels. The heavens will pass, but the Son will stand. Thou art the same. All creation will change, but not the Son. He is the same yesterday, and today, and for ever (13:8).

13-14. The last of the seven proofs from the Old Testament which demonstrate the superiority of the Son over the angels involves the ultimate position of each. The Son sits, whereas the angels are sent. The angels are not asked by the Father to sit at His right hand, the position of privilege. They are sent to serve the brethren of the Son.

Some might argue that Christ must be inferior to the angels since He died for and ministered to man (the problem confronted in 2:5-18). Still, the angels would be no better than He is; for they, too, minister to man. Indeed, the ministry of the Son is self-initiated (Gal 1:4); the angels are sent. They were created to minister to God (including the Son) and to us who believe. Sent forth to minister. The use of the present participle here, "being sent forth," emphasizes the continuance of angelic ministry. By contrast, the aorist tense is used in 13:2, implying that though in the past some have entertained angels unknowingly, it need not happen anymore. The ministering of the angels, however, continues today without end (cf. Ps 91).

As chapter 1 ends and chapter 2 begins, one prominent thought continues: "As God had no greater messenger than His Son, he had no further message beyond the gospel" (Bruce, p. 26). The author will now warn his readers with that thought in chapter 2.

8 But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom.

9 Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

10 And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands:

11 They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment;

12 And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed; but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?

14 Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?

2. The first warning passage: Do not neglect Christ's message.
2:1-4.

The Epistle to the Hebrews contains five warning passages. The uniqueness of these passages to Hebrews lies in the rhetorical method of this author. Other New Testament writers place warnings and exhortations within the development of their message. However, our author, due to his strict, logical, grammatical development "avoided all irrelevant digression" (Marcus Dods, p. 224). He places his warnings and exhortations parenthetically, after his arguments, at opportune times. There is no grammatical formula by which any of these warnings is introduced. They must be isolated by means of context alone. Though the passage may contain exhortations, it is not merely exhortation. It must contain some explicit warning—a danger sign. Usually, the warning itself will involve only one or several verses. Such is the case with this first warning.

CHAPTER 2

THEREFORE we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip.

2:1. Therefore (Gr dia touto). This word does two things. Obviously it ties the previous message to that which is at hand. The superior Son has proclaimed a superior message which must be heeded. But it further points to the vital connection between doctrine and practice (Hughes, p. 72). Practice must follow the hearing of the truth (cf. Jas 1:22-25). The warning begins in verse 1 with the statement that we ought to give the more earnest . . . lest at any time we should let them slip. The word slip (Gr pararreō) means to slip away as a ring from a finger or as a ship from a harbor. Kent (p. 47) suggests that this term possesses a nautical connotation here, since the verb give . . . heed to (Gr prosechō) is also used nautically of bringing a ship to land. He concludes that the verse is not speaking of something drifting from us, but that we might drift from something (p. 47). The author is not warning the Hebrews to grasp the gospel more intently, lest they lose their salvation. Rather, he warns them not to drift beyond the gospel; for there is no other harbor. From the human side, there certainly is need of warning and examination to be sure that we are in the faith. From God's side, the work is accomplished and secure. One who is genuinely born again does not lose that life; yet, however, his life will manifest or demonstrate this regeneration.

2 For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward;

2. If the word spoken by angels was steadfast. As was stated earlier (1:4), the New Testament writers regarded the angels as intermediaries associated with the giving of the Law (Acts 7:53; Gal 3:19). Now, if the message delivered through the angels was so fixed that its sentences were carried out, how much more so the message given by the Son. The word steadfast (Gr bebaios) is common in Hebrews (5 of 9 NT occurrences), expressing the idea of that which is sure, steadfast, and fixed. Our author also uses it of our hope (3:6), our confidence (3:14), our anchor in Jesus (6:19), and a human covenant after its maker is dead (9:17).

3 How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him;

4 God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?

3-4. How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation. . . ? The warning reaches its climax with these words. The word neglect (Gr ameleō) does not mean to deny or to reject. It is to recognize but to ignore, to know but to fail to do, to admit but not to administer. Our author uses this word once elsewhere to express that which God did to Israel when they forsook the Mosaic covenant He "regarded them not"; He neglected them (8:9).

The author further produces three statements which emphasize the importance of this salvation. First, it was spoken by the Lord. Second, it was confirmed unto us by them that heard him. Evidently, the author had not heard the message directly from the Son, which is a strong argument against Paul's authorship of this epistle (see "Authorship within the Introduction"). Also, the readers had not heard directly from Christ—an argument against Palestinian recipients. The third statement is that God verified this salvation with signs and wonders . . . miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost. The author states that these sign gifts were given to the first-century witnesses. He does not suggest that his readers possessed these same miraculous gifts. If the phrase gifts of the Holy Ghost is a subjective genitive, then it has reference to those gifts given by the Holy Spirit to all believers for the profiting of the body of Christ (Rom 12; I Cor 12). Otherwise, and less likely, it refers to God's bestowal of the Holy Spirit Himself (cf. Gal 3:5) upon every believer (Kent, p. 50).

3. The reasonableness of Christ's humiliation. 2:5-18.

Following the Old Testament proof that Christ is superior to the angels and following the warning not to neglect His superior message, our author faces the problem of Christ's humanity. If Christ became a man and partook of death, how can He be superior to the angels? This apparent antinomy is presently answered as being reasonable and logical. The author demonstrates, first, that Christ's humanity does not conflict with His superiority over angels, and then demonstrates the same regarding His suffering and death.

a. Christ's humanity does not abnegate His superiority over angels. 2:5-9.

5. The author begins to develop his thesis by stating that unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come. The angels will not be in positions of authority when Christ establishes His kingdom. Throughout the past and present ages, angels have ministered judgment upon man: at Sodom (Gen 19:13), upon Israel (II Sam 24:15-17), upon kings (Acts 12:23), during the Great Tribulation (Rev 8-9). Angels have had power over the nations (Dan 10:13, 20; Eph 6:11-12). But in the age to come angels will have no authority over the saints. In fact, the saints will judge angels (I Cor 6:3). The verse does not specify who will have that authority; it only states that the angels will not have it. The author reveals the answer in the next verses.

6-8. Quoting Psalm 8, the author shows God's intended ruler: What is man . . . or the son of man. This Psalm does not speak both of man and Christ; it is not messianic. The son of man is not to be distinguished from man. The phrases are merely an example of the common synonymous parallelism in Hebrew poetry. "Hence this passage was not regarded as a messianic prediction by Jewish teachers, but as a description of what God intended man to be" (Kent, p. 53). God made man a little lower than the angels. A little (Gr brachu ti) has two possible interpretations. It can refer to time (a little while) or degree (a small degree). The Hebrew word (me'at) from the Psalm likewise provides both possibilities. But this is not to our detriment since the context already incorporates both concepts. Obviously, man possesses a lower status than the angels; and obviously, it is temporary. Since the time of this lower status exists until the kingdom, it seems better to understand the word as connoting degree—a small degree lower than the angels.

Although God has made man slightly lower than the angels for the present, He also has crowned him with glory and honor and set him over His creation. Thus Psalm 8 does not minimize man, but exalts him. Man is the capstone and the crown of God's creation. It is into man's hands that He will ultimately place His creation. God proclaimed this from the moment of man's creation (Gen 1:26,28). Our author further interprets all things to mean that he left nothing excluded. The intent is to show that in the coming age even the angels will be subject to man—and if to man, how much more to Christ, as verse 9 promptly declares.

9. But we see Jesus. Verse 8 ended by confessing that man's present status does not suggest (surely it does not prove) that he

5 For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak.

6 But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

7 Thou madest him a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour, and didst set him over the works of thy hands:

8 Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him.

9 But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, and crowned with glory and honor, that he should bring us unto glory, having suffered death, and being now seated at the right hand of God, and having ascended into heaven, he sitteth on the throne of God, and becometh judge of the living and the dead. And he shall come again, and his angels shall accompany him, and he shall sit upon his throne, and shall judge the living and the dead. And his kingdom shall have no end.

fering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man.

will someday be over all creation. But Christ's status does. He too was made a little lower than the angels. However, unlike man, He already has been crowned; and because of His identity with and victory for man, He makes Psalm 8 an eschatological (future) reality for man. Death is one significant quality that makes man lower than the angels (Lk 20:36). But Christ has conquered death for man.

b. Christ's suffering does not abnegate His superiority over angels. 2:10-18.

Christ's humanity does not make Christ inferior to the angels; for humanity is innately superior to angelic nature, and someday men will rule over the angels. Likewise, Christ's suffering does not make Him inferior to angels, who have never suffered. This concept of a suffering Messiah was a stumbling block to the Jews. The author tackles this problem by declaring that the suffering of the cross was an integral part of the plan of salvation.

10 For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings.

11 For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren.

12 Saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.

13 And again, I will put my trust in him. And again, Behold I and the children which God hath given me.

10-13. It became him. The first of three reasons why Christ must suffer is contained in these verses. It was necessary for His identification with humanity. For God to become truly human, He must suffer and even taste death (vs. 9). In bringing. The participle (Gr agagonta, bringing in) is aorist but appears to be timeless, merely stating an event, as our English translation suggests—In bringing many sons. It would be incorrect to restrict this to a past occurrence, referring only to Old Testament saints (Kent, p. 56).

Christ is identified here as the captain (Gr archēgos) of our salvation. The word is also used of Christ in Acts 5:31 (as a leader) and in Hebrews 12:2 (as a founder or originator). Since both ideas fit this text, the thought might be that Christ is both the Author and Captain of our salvation. Our Captain is described as made perfect through sufferings. Can the Son who was presented as the very essence of deity (1:3) and called God (1:8) somehow fall short of perfection? Surely He cannot in His deity, but in His relation to humanity He could. "The perfect Son of God has become His people's perfect Savior, opening up their way to God; and in order to become that, He must endure suffering and death" (Bruce, p. 43).

Christ's absolute identity with humanity is stressed several times in verses 11-13. First, Christ as the sanctifier and we as those sanctified are identified as all of one. This does not suggest that we are out of the same source, but that we are of the same nature or stock. We possess a common humanity. Second, we are called brethren. And He is not ashamed to call us brothers. He does not regard us as "poor relations," nor was His becoming a man a patronizing condescension (Kent, p. 57). He is not ashamed to be identified with us. How could we ever be ashamed of Him?

14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil;

15 And deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.

16 For verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham.

17 Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.

14-15. The second reason given as to why it was necessary for Christ to suffer is now provided. He must suffer even to death in order to destroy the power and fear of death. The word translated destroy (Gr katargeō) does not convey the thought of annihilation, nor has Satan been destroyed in that sense. The word means "to make inoperative" or "ineffective." Through His resurrection from death, Christ broke the hold which Satan possessed over man.

16-18. The third reason suggested by the author regarding the necessity of Christ's suffering is that He might become an intercessory high priest for His brothers. He took . . . on him. This verb (Gr epilambanomai) in verse 16 generally means to lay hold of, but in many contexts it takes on the added idea of "helping." It can at times mean simply "to help." Most likely, therefore, the idea of verse 16 is that Christ has taken hold of Abraham's seed in order to help them, whereas He has not chosen to help angelic beings. The verse probably does not have ferred being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.

reference to a nature taken and one not taken, but to a help provided and not provided (cf. Westcott, pp. 54-55).

That he might be a merciful and faithful high priest. In verses 17 and 18 the author introduces a key thought of this epistle for the first time, i.e., the high priestly nature of Christ. As a man He can compassionately serve as our High Priest. His primary role as High Priest is to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. The verb (Gr hilaskomai) means “to propitiate” or “expiate” sin. As our High Priest, He does not merely make atonement (a covering) for our sins; He satisfactorily and actually takes sin away.

The word succor (Gr boetheō) means “to come to the aid of” or “to help” someone. How much easier it is to come to the aid of someone when we ourselves have gone through similar trials. How good it is to know that Christ was fully man, experiencing what we experience and so was able to provide the comfort we need (cf. II Cor 1:3-5). These Christian Jews needed to hear that Christ had suffered as they were suffering.

C. Christ Is Superior to Moses and Joshua Because of the Rest Provided. 3:1-4:13.

The thought of the epistle shifts from angels to Old Testament leaders. Moses and Joshua were faithful and godly leaders; yet, their works were incomplete. The household wherein Moses labored did not bring security and rest to his people (3:1-6). The land into which Joshua led his people similarly did not produce rest for them (4:1-13). As the Builder of the house and as the Sabbath Rest, Jesus has placed us into the household of God and has provided an eternal rest for our souls.

1. Christ is superior to Moses. 3:1-6.

In order to reveal the truth of Christ’s superiority over Moses, three points are developed within these verses. First, both Moses and Christ have faithfully fulfilled their assigned works (vss. 1-2). Second, whereas Moses was a part of God’s house (program), Christ is the Builder (vss. 3-4). And lastly, whereas Moses was a servant in the house, Christ is the Son over it (vss. 5-6).

3:1-2. The author makes it clear that he regards his Jewish readers as believers by addressing them as holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling. He admonishes them not in his usual hortative, “Let us,” but with the imperative, consider. They are to consider Jesus as the Apostle and High Priest. These titles do not involve His divine essence; they speak in regard to His superior ministry. Moses was very highly regarded by the first-century Jews. The author of Hebrews now attempts to make his argument for the superiority of Christ without casting aspersion on the ministry of Moses. He presents nothing negatively. Rather, he simply elevates Christ. The two appellations given to Christ speak of His superior ministry. The author’s use of the word Apostle (used of Christ only here) expresses the superiority of His commission, being sent directly from God. As High Priest He is man’s direct intercessor with God.

The emphasis of verse 2 is that both Moses and Christ have faithfully fulfilled their work (cf. Num 12:7). Positioning the word faithful first in the Greek text demonstrates this. The word appointed (Gr poieō) could be translated “made.” Indeed, centuries ago the Arians used this text to support their teaching that God “made” Christ. Likewise, centuries ago Chrysostom properly responded by asking what God made Him. The context is clear; God made or appointed Him an Apostle and High Priest (see Hughes, pp. 129-130). God did not create Christ (Jn 1:1-3).

3-4. More glory than Moses. Christ’s superiority and greater glory are not based upon His faithfulness, but upon his superior position. Christ is described as the one who hath builded the

CHAPTER 3

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus;

2 Who was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful in all his house.

3 For this man was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God.

5 And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after;

6 But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

house (cf. vs. 6). In contrast, Moses is spoken of as part of the house itself (cf. vs. 5). The Builder is, of necessity, superior to his house. The author takes his argument one step farther. In verse 4 he logically proposes that every house must have a builder and that surely God's house was built by God. The conclusion is unexpressed but obvious. Christ, the Builder, is God (see A. W. Pink, An Exposition of Hebrews, pp. 160-161, regarding the implicit teaching of Christ's deity here).

5-6. Moses . . . a servant. In these verses the analogy of a house is continued. The contrast, however, is now between a servant in and a son over the house. The description of Moses as a servant (Gr therapōn) is not demeaning. This verse is a citation from Numbers 12:7, which uses the same word in the Septuagint to describe Moses. This word, used only here in the New Testament, connotes the idea of a free servant of honorable position (Dods, p. 273). Moses is described as a faithful servant in that he bore witness of those things which were to be spoken after. Moses has faithfully testified concerning the Son.

Christ is identified as a son over his own house. The translation, his own, is stronger than the Greek (auton). It is his house. But His house is the same as God's house (vs. 3). There is only one house involved in these verses. It is not Moses' house; it is not ours. It is God's. Moses was a part of this one house. It is what Paul calls the household of God (Eph 2:19; cf. I Pet 4:17) or the household of faith (Gal 6:10). It includes all believers of all time. We are included—whose house are we. It continues as a present reality, of which we are part.

If we hold fast. Bruce writes: "Nowhere in the New Testament more than here do we find such repeated insistence on the fact that continuance in the Christian life is the test of reality" (p. 59). The life of a saint is the evidence of a new life in the saint. Just as his life cannot produce new life, neither can his life remove God's new life. Moreover, God's new life will manifest itself in his life (Rom 6; 8:1-11; II Cor 5:17). In the author's thinking, new life results in continuance. With this statement the author prepares his readers for the next warning passage.

2. The second warning passage: Do not doubt God's promise. 3:7-4:13.

As is common with the other warning passages, exhortations and illustrations are incorporated into the warning. Israel's disbelief and hardness of heart, under the godly leadership of Moses and then Joshua, serve as examples.

a. The consequences of Israel's unbelief. 3:7-11.

7 Wherefore (as the Holy Ghost saith, To day if ye will hear his voice,

7. Wherefore. The admonition of verse 6 is now connected to the warning that starts at verse 12. Verses 7 through 11 serve as an introduction to this warning, as the parentheses surrounding verses 7 through 11 in our AV show. These verses cite Israel's experiences in the wilderness as an example. As the Holy Ghost saith. The words that follow from Psalm 95:7-11 are attributed to the Holy Spirit. Three times (3:7-8,15; 4:7) this Psalm is quoted within this warning passage, and in 4:7 David is implicitly regarded as its author. Also, the Holy Spirit is the speaker, demonstrating that the words and message are God's, though recorded by means of a man's words. Today. The emphasis our author picks up here is the same point stressed by David to the people of his time—do not commit the same sin that Israel committed in the wilderness.

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness:

8. As in the provocation, in the day of temptation. The terms provocation (Gr parapikrasmos) and temptation (Gr peirasmos) are taken from the Septuagint reading of the Psalm, which is an etymological translation of the Hebrew words, Meribah and Massah, respectively. These Hebrew terms are likewise descriptive translations, rather than the rendering of proper names. Both terms originate with Moses' smiting the 9 When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years.

10 Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do alway err in their heart; and they have not known my ways.

11 So I swear in my wrath, They shall not enter into my rest.)

12 Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

13 But exhort one another daily, while it is called To day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end;

15 While it is said, To day if ye will rock for water while in Rephidim (Ex 17:1-7). Following that experience, Exodus 17:7 says concerning Moses, "And he called the name of the place Massah, and Meribah, because of the chiding of the children of Israel, and because they tempted the LORD, saying, Is the LORD among us, or not?" At this time, Israel had been out of Egypt only one month. Within that one month they had repeatedly witnessed God's miraculous deliverance and provision. They had witnessed the last of the plagues (Ex 12), God's leading by cloud and fire (Ex 13), the Red Sea divided (Ex 14), the bitter water of Marah purified (Ex 15), and the provision of manna and quail (Ex 16). Yet, almost immediately they murmur and harden their hearts against both Moses and God. This incident with the water at Rephidim became symbolic of Israel's temptation (Massah) of God (cf. Deut 6:16). David uses it to speak of Israel's continuous rebellion throughout the 40 years in the wilderness. See the discussion of the subject by F. F. Bruce (p. 64) and Homer Kent, Jr. (p. 70).

9. Saw my works forty years. The unexpected placing of the forty years with the seeing of God's works, rather than with God's grieving as it is in Psalm 95 and as our author later uses it (3:17), is unusual in the light of his careful exegesis. Kent suggests, as one good possibility, that "the writer was conscious of a parallel in years between the forty years of Israel's rebellion in the wilderness and approximately the same period that had now elapsed since the rejection of Christ in A.D. 30" (p. 71). As Israel saw God's work forty years in the wilderness, so the present readers have had almost forty years since A.D. 30 to observe the evidence regarding Christ.

10-11. The psalmist records God's estimation of Israel and His resultant action. The people do always err and have not known my ways. Therefore, they would not enter into God's rest.

b. The warning against unbelief. 3:12-19.

12-14. This warning is addressed to the brethren the professing believers, lest any have unbelief in his heart and thus depart from God. This departing (Gr apostenai) is the source of our word apostasy, which is a deliberate departure from God's full revelation. These Jewish brethren were being tempted by an "evil heart of unbelief" to return to Judaism. To do so meant they would have to reject that fuller revelation which they have received and return to the incomplete revelation of Judaism. Thus, they are admonished to exhort one another daily with the truths that will strengthen their faith in Christ, such as the truths in this epistle.

For we are made partakers. The verb uses the perfect tense (Gr gegonamen) and might be better understood if it were translated, "we have become." With it is placed the condition, if we hold . . . steadfast unto the end. Because of this condition, some propose that one cannot become, or at least be sure of becoming, a partaker until the end. If the verb were future, that would surely fit—we will be partakers if we hold fast. The verb, however, is perfect, expressing a completed action with existing results—we have become and remain partakers, if we should hold steadfast. If the verb were future, then the partaking would be based upon one's ability or determination to hold on. As it is, the condition is a test by which one can know if he has faith—the test of continuance. The author proposes that Israel's fickle faith did not manifest itself as true faith, nor will such faith today. As Jesus taught, true faith is the implanting of the Word into a receptive, believing heart (Lk 8:4-15). Although partakers (Gr metochoi) could also be translated "partners," neither the context nor its usage in 3:1 favor it. We have become partakers in Christ, not partners with Him.

15-19. The author develops the last portion of chapter three by looking back again at Israel's history and asking three ques-hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, whose carcasses fell in the wilderness?

18 And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not?

19 So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.

CHAPTER 4

LET us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

3 For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

5 And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief:

7 Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time; as it is said, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

8 For if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

tions. For some. The Greek pronoun (Gr tines) can either be indefinite ("some") or interrogative ("who?"), depending on the accent. Since the oldest Greek manuscripts do not contain accents, the context must determine the appropriate usage. The context favors the interrogative usage in verse 16, for the same word is used interrogatively in both verses 17 and 18. Since the form of those two interrogatives is the same (Gr tisin de), each appears to be a continuation of the interrogation. Thus the questions begin in verse 16, not 17. Likewise, the thought development favors the interrogative idea. The idea of the passage is that all, not some, provoked God. Though two spies brought back a good report, it was 600,000 men who rejected it. Verse 16 might better be translated as: "For who after they heard, did embitter (God)? Yea, did not all who came out of Egypt through Moses?"

The second question is found in verse 17. With whom was he grieved forty years? It was those who sinned. The use of the aorist participle puts the emphasis on the nature of the action, rather than an idea involving continuation or a single act. He was grieved because that which Israel did was sin. The third question asks, to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest? (vs. 18). Those who deliberately disobeyed through unbelief did not enter. They doubted God's promise.

c. The warning against missing God's rest. 4:1-13.

4:1-2. The author continues his warning: Let us therefore fear lest we think we have missed God's promise. Seem (Gr dokeō) might here be translated "to think." The readers may have imagined that since they had left the Jewish temple and its ritual, they may lack something and end up short of God's promise in lack of faith (vs. 2).

3-5. These verses attest that a rest has definitely been provided. Evidently, the idea supposes that since Israel never knew it, some Jews might challenge the actual existence of the promised rest. The author offers two logical arguments for the existence of this rest and accents each argument by explaining Israel's lack—God swore it would not happen to Israel. The first argument states that we which have believed do enter into rest. Presently, God is providing a rest.

If they shall enter into my rest. As it is translated here, this clause, found in both verses 3 and 5, is confusing. If the translators had followed the same grammatical principles here that they used in 3:11, there would be no problem. Each of these passages has exactly the same Greek clause; in fact, each is precisely the same quotation from Psalm 95:11. It is an elliptical form of a Hebrew negative oath, of which the complete form might be, "May I be judged more, if they shall enter into my rest." In its shorter, elliptical form it is better translated, as in 3:11, "They shall not enter into my rest" (see Kent, p. 72). They who believe have rest, but unbelieving Israel shall not enter God's rest.

The second argument for the existence of a genuine rest states that rest has existed ever since the seventh day of creation week (vss. 3-4). God rests; but unbelieving Israel will not rest, as He has sworn.

6-8. Not only has God provided a rest, but the promise that some should enter it must be fulfilled (vs. 6). Today. Long after Israel's failure, David was still looking for a rest in his own day. Likewise, the author of Hebrews uses that word repeatedly in this passage to declare that a rest can still be known. The reference to Jesus (Gr Iēsous) in verse 8 involves Joshua of the Old Testament. The two names are identical, both in Hebrew and Greek. The context certainly involves Joshua, the son of Nun. Joshua brought the second generation (those under twenty when the spies were sent) into Canaan, and they did enter into a rest as the Scriptures record (Deut 12:9-10; Josh 21:44; 22:4; 23:1). Yet, the author suggests that there must be a permanent, better rest for the people of God; or David would not have still been looking forward to it in his day.

9 There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God.

9. There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God. We must come to this conclusion from a study of Old Testament revelation, even as our author has done. This rest is greater than that realized through Joshua. The author stresses that fact by introducing a new word into the text (Gr sabbatismos, sabbath rest), which is used only here in the entire New Testament. It is a word that suggests a rest like God's own rest following creation (vs. 4). On the theological significance of rest as referring to the present blessing of God, cf. F. F. Bruce, The Epistle to the Hebrews, pp. 73-79; contra, as the Millennium, see G. H. Lang, The Epistle to the Hebrews, pp. 73ff.

10 For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.

10. For he that is entered into his rest. Several views exist as to whom the he might be (see Kent, pp. 86-87). It could represent the believer who has experienced spiritual rest, either in salvation or by consecration. With this interpretation, however, the verse lacks unity; for the one who experiences this rest has ceased from his own works, as God did from his. Since God has ceased from good labor, parallelism would favor the cessation of good works on the part of the other. The works given up in salvation or consecration, however, are evil works of self. A better view would be to understand this as describing the Christian at death. At that point he ceases from his good works and enters into heaven's rest (cf. Rev 14:13). The third, and most likely view, is that this refers to Christ, who has finished His work of redemption and so, like the Father, has entered into His rest. The theme of this book would surely favor this view, as does the personal pronoun he. In this passage the believers have continually been referred to in the plural and in the first or second persons as we or you.

11 Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief.

11. Let us labor or be diligent to enter into God's rest. Rest involves more than mere inactivity. It is that which follows the satisfactory completion of a task. Salvation rest is the gift reckoned to the believer resulting from Christ's finished work. Heaven and millennial rest is the reward of the believer's labors for the Lord (Rev 14:13). Verse 11 records the warning one more time: Do not miss through unbelief what God has promised.

12 For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

12-13. For the word of God. The reason given for our careful scrutiny of our lives involves the reality that God is intently scrutinizing us. His Word exposes us; His eye sees through us. His Word is quick (living). This is the first word of the verse and is, no doubt, the emphasis. God's Word is not old or archaic; it is living. It is not inept or inactive; it is powerful (active). God's Word is sharper than any two-edged sword. It has no blunt side; it cuts both ways. It penetrates so deeply that it divides the soul and spirit and the joints and marrow. These phrases suggest that there is no part of man which God's Word cannot penetrate—immaterial or physical. In fact, it reaches into the inner secrets of man's mind to discern his thoughts and intents. Likewise, God's eye sees man as though he were naked, unable to hide behind any excuse or pretense. Let us be careful not to reject His Word through unbelief.

13 Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.

D. Christ Is Superior to the Levitical Priesthood Because of the Intercession Provided. 4:14-7:28.

The central and extended theme of Hebrews involves Christ's priestly ministry and the levitical priesthood. In the author's mind Christ's superiority to the prophets, the angels, Moses, and Joshua is seemingly secondary to the absolute superiority of Christ to the Old Testament priests. Even the following section

(Chs. 8-10), which contrasts the Old Covenant with the New, focuses upon the high priestly work of Christ.

1. The confidence provided through Christ's priesthood. 4:14-16.

The author both begins and ends this unit about Christ's priesthood by showing the confident access we possess through Christ's intercession. The present verses provide a comfort that is in vivid contrast to the fear pronounced in 4:1.

14 Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession.

14. We have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens. The first evidence of Christ's superiority is that He has passed into the heavens into God's very presence to intercede for us (cf. 9:24). Conversely, the Aaronic priests only passed through an earthly tabernacle. At best, one man (the high priest) once a year (the Day of Atonement) was allowed to pass through the earthly veil to enter the Holy of Holies in order to gain access to the mercy seat (cf. Lev 16). Jesus is described here as the Son of God and so is not to be confused with the Jesus (Joshua) of 4:8. Because of the Son's great priestly work, we are admonished to hold fast our profession (Gr homologia). This word, which is also translated "confession," involves both the inward confession of the heart and the outward profession before men (Hughes, p. 171).

15 For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.

15. Tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Christ is able to understand our weaknesses and miseries, for He Himself has experienced these very things. To imagine that since Jesus could not sin, He could not suffer is to miss the point of the passage. First, this passage only explicitly states that He did not sin, not that He could not. Second, temptation can be, and is, a reality apart from sin. God cannot be tempted (Gr apeirastos) with evil (Jas 1:13), yet God is tempted (Gr peirazō) by men (3:9; Acts 15:10). Christ was tempted; He did not sin; He can understand and intercede. Yet, beyond the explicit statements of this passage, He who is God was made like sinful man (Rom 8:3). But He could not sin (impeccable); and, indeed, He need not sin to be human. Before he sinned, Adam was human, and probably "more" human than after his fall; for that was not how God had created him. One needs not sin to be human, nor does one even need to possess the potential to sin. The glorified saint will never again be able to sin, yet he remains human. Christ's temptation was real, for temptation exists apart from yielding to it through sin. Indeed, the temptation is greater in duration and intensity when one does not take the "easy" way out by sinning. If man's temptation is greater when he endures it, surely Christ's was great since He had no alternative but to endure it. He has suffered, or endured, the temptation (2:18).

16 Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

16. Because of our tried and proven High Priest, we can come boldly to God's throne. In the Old Testament everyone who looked upon the Ark of the Covenant faced the fear of death, including the high priest, unless he met all of the conditions, and then only on the Day of Atonement. Now we, including these Jewish saints, are encouraged to come before the Lord at any time, especially when we truly need help. Only Christianity provides such boldness by sinful men before a holy God, and that boldness is only possible because of our great Intercessor, Jesus Christ.

2. The qualifications of a priest. 5:1-10.

This section breaks naturally between verses 4 and 5. The first four verses describe the qualifications of the levitical priests, the other six verses demonstrate Christ's qualifications.

CHAPTER 5

FOR every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:

5:1. Sacrifices for sins. The discussion of the priestly office focuses first upon the function or goal of that office. Men were placed in the office to minister on behalf of (Gr huper) other men by offering sacrifices and offerings for their sins.

2 Who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity.

2-3. The second qualification of a human priest involved his character. He must have compassion upon those who inadver-

HEBREWS 5:3

3 And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

4 And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

5 So also Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Mēl-chī's'e-dēc.

7 Who in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared;

8 Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered;

9 And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him;

10 Called of God an high priest after the order of Mēl-chī's'e-dēc.

tently sin out of ignorance. This compassion (Gr metriopatheō) is a controlled compassion, meaning "to be gentle with." Etymologically, it involved a measured, or balanced, feeling. This unusual word (found nowhere else in the New Testament) was used "in the Aristotelian philosophical tradition in the sense of to moderate one's feelings or passions and so to avoid excesses either of enthusiasm or impassivity" (Hughes, p. 176). It involves caring without undue harshness or weepy sentiment. It was a necessary quality of character for all priests. It stemmed from the patience learned by the priest's own infirmity and out of his own need of a priest for his sins.

4. The third qualification of the priest concerned his appointment. He must be appointed by or called of God. These qualifications are listed here, not because God is looking today for those who aspire to be priests, as He is for pastors (Gr episkopos, I Tim 3:1). Just the opposite—the priests were appointed by God's decree. Those who took the office to themselves suffered severe consequences (Korah in Num 16:1-35; Saul in I Sam 13:9-11; Uzziah in II Chr 26:16-23).

5-6. Starting with verse 5, Christ's qualifications are shown to parallel those of the levitical priests. They are, however, presented in reverse order. The author's first point, therefore, is that Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; rather, God the Father appointed Him, as the Scriptures declare. The first of the two passages cited, Thou art my Son, is from Psalm 2:7 and was previously cited in Hebrews 1:5. Even though a reference to Christ's Sonship may seem irrelevant here, Christ's position as Son, and hence sovereign King, is important in light of the priesthood He possesses. He has been appointed a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek. Since Melchizedek was a king-priest (cf. 7:1-3), so Christ, who is of that order, must be a king-priest.

7-8. Christ also meets the qualification of being a compassionate priest due to those things which He has suffered. Who in the days of his flesh speaks of the thirty years during which the Son became flesh and dwelt among men (Jn 1:14), suffering many things in behalf of His people. After this brief phrase concerning His life, the author focuses upon one trying event—Gethsemane. Offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears. These words are even more intense and descriptive than those that are recorded in the Gospels. The tone compares to that of Psalm 22, in which Christ's thoughts upon the cross are expressed. In Gethsemane, Jesus reveals that His soul is ". . . exceeding sorrowful unto death . . ." (Mk 14:34). He prays to the Father, asking if this cup might be taken away, referring to His suffering on the cross. Though it may involve the ignominy and anguish of the physical death, its quintessence is the horror of the Son's separation from the Father, bearing the wrath and curse of God's holiness against man's sin. For the first time in eternity, the fellowship between Father and Son will be broken; God will forsake Him.

And was heard in that he feared. How the Father heard or answered Christ's prayer is not answered here since it is not the point of the author's discourse. God may have answered by removing Christ's fear of the imminent cross experience. More likely, in harmony with the statements of Psalm 22, He answered by reaffirming the promise of the Resurrection (see Bruce, pp. 100-102).

9-10. He became the author of eternal salvation. That which had been described first in relation to the levitical priests has been reserved until last in relation to Christ. His offering for sin was complete and final, providing eternal salvation for all them that obey him. It is eternal, but not universal. Only those who come to God claiming the sacrifice of Christ receive this eternal life (7:25; 9:26, 28; 10:10-14).

3. The third warning passage: Do not be spiritually immature.
5:11-6:20.

a. The rebuke of immaturity. 5:11-14.

11 Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing.

12 For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat.

13 For every one that useth milk is unskillful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe.

14 But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil.

11-12. Of whom we have many things to say. This parenthetical passage of warning is placed where one would expect the author to develop his discourse on the priesthood of Melchizedek. He has just brought the Old Testament prophecies that predicted Christ's priesthood according to the order of Melchizedek to light. Obviously, his intent is to develop this theme as quickly as possible; for he begins to do so in chapter 7, immediately after this rebuke. The author wishes to present many things concerning Melchizedek; but he knows they are not ready to receive them, for they are dull of hearing. This adjective (Gr nōthroi) means to be lazy or sluggish. In Proverbs 22:29 (LXX) it is translated "slothful." The only other New Testament occurrence is in the next chapter (6:12). In verse 11 the rebuke concerns the slothfulness of their hearing. They have not been listening; they have not, therefore, been growing. Shortly, he will warn them, lest their whole life becomes sluggish (6:12).

In verses 11-12 he describes their condition as due to poor, lazy hearing. They are immature. Whereas they should now be teachers, they still need to be taught. Whereas they should be ready to understand new and difficult teachings from God's Word, they can only handle the milk. They have not advanced beyond the first principles of the oracles of God. Most likely, these first principles involve the "principles of the doctrine of Christ" that are enumerated in 6:1-3.

13-14. The author has used the second person to present the condition of his readers; now he changes to the third person to teach the nature of immaturity in general. Those who are immature are as babies who can only digest milk. They are unskillful (Gr apeiros), inexperienced in or unacquainted with the word that instructs them in how to live a life of righteousness. By contrast, the strong Christian is the one who by constant application of God's Word to his life has his spiritual senses exercised (Gr gegymnasmena) as an athlete exercises or trains his body. Thus, the strong Christian can discern truth from error.

b. The exhortation to maturity. 6:1-3.

6:1. Therefore leaving the principles. The author is not content to allow his readers to remain in their immature state (5:11-14). Unlike Paul's capitulation to his Corinthian hearers, in that he feeds them as the babes they are (I Cor 3:2), our author admonishes his readers to "grow up." Such words sting, but they are sometimes necessary. Let us go on (Gr pherōmetha). The verb is unusual in that it is not active as the translation would imply; rather, it is passive. It does not involve going as much as "being carried" or "being moved." Westcott (p. 143) suggests the translation, "Let us be moved along." Maturity will not be attained by personal effort as much as by personal surrender to God, who alone can accomplish the needed perfection (cf. vs. 3). The principles of the doctrine of Christ involve the same elementary principles that were mentioned in 5:12. The six doctrines now cited are probably representative, rather than inclusive, of all elementary teachings. They can be easily gathered into three sets. The first set involves conversion itself: of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God. Both the negative (repentance) and the positive (faith) aspects of conversion are cited. The dead works refer to one's former sinful ways, which are ways of death. These works might include either the sinner's unholy deeds of the flesh or his ungodly deeds of self-righteousness. Both produce death and must be renounced. The positive aspect, faith, must always be directed toward God alone. Paul's witness regarding the Thessalonian believers, that they turned "... to God from idols . . ."

CHAPTER 6

THEREFORE leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God,

2 Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do, if God permit.

4 For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come,

6 If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.

(I Thess 1:9), likewise expresses these two aspects of conversion.

2. The second set of elementary doctrines represents post-conversion experiences: Doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands. The word baptisms (Gr baptismoī) creates several difficulties. First, the other uncontested usages of this word involve ceremonial washings (9:10; Mk 7:4), rather than Christian baptism. The usual word for baptism (Gr baptisma) is not used here. Nevertheless, baptism may be the correct usage; for baptismos appears to be the proper reading for the contested passage (Col 2:12), which does refer to Christian baptism. Second, the fact that the word is plural suggests to some that the reference must be to ceremonial washings. Yet, there are several baptisms to which the author could be referring—John’s baptism (with which these Jewish readers should be acquainted), Christian baptism, and Spirit baptism. The third set of elementary teachings are eschatological, involving last things. Some eschatological teachings are closely associated with the salvation message, such as resurrection and eternal judgment; for they involve the hope of salvation. Eschatology is included here among the first truths, not as part of the deeper truths. The mere study of last things does not demonstrate spiritual maturity. The practical changes which these eschatological truths produce within our lives are what manifest maturity.

3. And this will we do. The author now uses chapter 6 as a warning and admonition to move his readers on to maturity in order that they might receive and understand the difficult doctrine which they are about to hear (chs. 7ff.). If God permit. We must acknowledge that when a man is going in the wrong direction, only God can change his life.

c. The warning of apostasy. 6:4-8.

4-6. For it is impossible . . . to renew them again unto repentance. For centuries Hebrews 6 has been a battleground. That fact alone ought to warn us to study carefully and to conclude slowly concerning the teaching of these verses. The crux of the issue is whether or not a born-again believer can lose his salvation. Though many interpretations of these verses have been proposed, four common, contemporary views merit listing.

Some propose that these verses refer to the saved who have fallen from salvation (cf. Lenski, Interpretation of Hebrews, pp. 185-187). Others teach that these are professing Christians, though unsaved, who apostatize and so are forever unable to be brought to repentance and true saving faith (cf. Bruce, The Epistle to the Hebrews, pp. 118-125). A third group proposes that these are indeed saved people who do not fall from salvation, but who fall into sin—they backslide. This view understands the statement of something being impossible as the impossibility of starting over again in the Christian life. These have fallen in regard to Christian growth, or concerning the perfection spoken of in 6:1. They have become castaways from God’s service (cf. G. H. Lang, The Epistle to the Hebrews, pp. 93-107; M. F. Unger, Unger’s Bible Handbook, pp. 95-101). The fourth popular view states that these verses refer to a hypothetical situation whereby the author stresses what would happen to a saved person if he could fall away (cf. Kent, The Epistle to the Hebrews, pp. 107-115; and, T. Hewitt, The Epistle to the Hebrews, TNTC, pp. 108-111). The author does not believe one can lose his salvation, or that his readers had (6:9); but he speaks to demonstrate the folly some might have in imagining that they can turn back to Judaism without suffering loss. “The warning was directed to those who claimed to be saved, and took them at their own estimate of themselves to show the folly of their viewpoint” (Kent, p. 113). True believers would also be warned of the severity of excluding Christ from their lives. Though the author is not writing about his readers (vs. 4, those), he is still writing for their sakes (vs. 9, you). This writer sees the fourth interpretation as harmonizing best with the grammatical and doctrinal data in the passage.

Though much uncertainty exists regarding the interpretation of these verses, six facts stand forth. First, verses 4-6 contain no regular, finite verbs. The verbal forms are participles, an infinitive, and an implied verb. This structure makes interpretation difficult. Second, those who are described within these verses have received profound spiritual blessings (whether saved or not). Third, it is impossible to bring those who fall away back again to repentance. So if this passage teaches that a person can lose his salvation, it also must teach that he can never be saved a second or third time. Fourth, whatever these verses might teach, such is not true of those believers to whom the author writes (vs. 9). Fifth, though these things are not true of the recipients, yet they are warned to be diligent to the full assurance of hope (vs. 11). They need to know the security which they possess, so as to gain assurance. Sixth, verses 13-20 emphatically teach the certainty of God's promise of redemption. Despite the negative tone with which the warning began (5:11-14), it ends positively. In fact, it speaks against insecurity regarding the believer's salvation. Actually, the problem of the passage is immaturity, not insecurity.

Hebrews 6 agrees with the general tenor of Scripture concerning the security of the born-again believer. Security is objective and depends upon God. Assurance of salvation, however, is subjective, depending upon the believer's acceptance of God's promise. Although a believer's spiritual life is secure, he may not think or feel so; and thus, he lacks assurance. We cannot mature in the Christian life if we are uncertain about God's promise of eternal life, for it is the first step of trust. One basis for the security of the believer involves the promises that are recorded in God's Word (6:18-20; 7:24-25; 8:12; 10:10-14; Jn 10:28-30; Rom 8:28-39; Phil 1:6; I Jn 5:13). Yet, an even stronger basis for our security is found within the nature of the new life that God gives. Though conversion involves man's will, it is God's will that produces regeneration (Jn 1:13). Thus, salvation is infinitely more than a decision that man can make and then break. It is the work of God that transforms us from darkness to light (Col 1:13; II Cor 4:4), from death to life (Jn 5:24), from a child of the devil to a son of God. God makes us His sons (Rom 8:14-17). It is a completed, regenerating work (10:14; Eph 2:8—"Ye are saved" or "You have been and stand saved," perfect tense). And through His saving grace He makes us holy (II Cor 5:21; Rom 4:8—"Blessed is the man concerning whom the Lord will never reckon sin," Gr ou mē).

Several participles within these verses describe those who cannot be renewed. One should not base any doctrine upon these descriptive terms, since none absolutely imply regeneration; yet, they do suggest the salvation experience. The author refers to these persons first as those who were once enlightened (vs. 4). Even though this phrase could refer to something short of regeneration, two facts favor the idea that it is. It is used in the parallel fourth warning (10:32). There the author seems to describe their salvation experience: "But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions." Second, the use of once (Gr hapax, once-for-all) suggests finality. The second participle describes these people as having tasted of the heavenly gift. The word tasted (Gr geuomai, taste) often carries a broader meaning (to partake of something in its entirety). In Acts 10:10 it refers to partaking of a meal, not merely tasting the food. In Chapter 2 verse 9, Christ tasted death; He fully partook of it. In the same sense these people have partaken of the heavenly gift and of the Holy Spirit. Further, they have fully experienced the Word of God and powers of the coming age.

If they shall fall away. The interpretation of the fifth participle has created much controversy. This participle (Gr parapesontas) has the same basic form as the first four, which have been translated substantivally (those who were). Our version translates it circumstantially (adverbially) as a condition: if they shall fall away. This is a legitimate usage and even a common practice by our author as witnessed in 2:3 and 10:26, but especially in 6:8 (if it bear thorns). The context does allow a difference between the fifth participle and the first four, in that the first four refer to blessings which they have experienced, whereas this one and the following two do not. The very last two are commonly treated as circumstantial with a causal idea, as in our Authorized Version (seeing they crucify). It should not be assumed that the fifth participle cannot also be circumstantial. Nevertheless, extreme caution should be taken in developing any doctrine or even an interpretation based upon these participles alone. The utter impossibility of the next phrase would indicate that this “falling away” is hypothetical and not actual.

They crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh. The author’s thought is that once they have experienced all that Christ has to offer and then deliberately turn back, they are as those who first crucified Christ. By their rejection of Christ’s ministry on their behalf, they put him to an open shame. The last two participles use the present tense (the first five are aorist), expressing a continuous act, so that they keep on crucifying Christ and exposing Him to shame. Anyone who would do such things can never be brought to repentance, for there is no other gospel. There is no other Saviour. Since this epistle makes it clear that Christ can only be crucified once, this situation must be viewed hypothetically. The writer’s argument is that “if” one could “fall away,” he would, thereby, “crucify afresh” his Lord. Since that cannot happen (for Christ died once for all sin), then the one falling away could not be renewed to faith and repentance. Such is never the case, for Christ is always available to the repentant sinner.

7-8. For the earth. To enhance the blessing of maturity and the ultimate destruction of that which is barren, the author provides an illustration from nature. Much effort or work must be placed into the earth in order for it to produce. This is also true in the hearts of men if they are to produce perfection (6:1). That upon which no effort is expended becomes worthless. It should also be noticed that the illustration does not speak of a parcel of land that first produces and later becomes void of life; so it does not illustrate someone saved then lost. It speaks of two kinds of fields, one maturing unto blessing and the other degenerating unto cursing.

d. The encouragement to go on. 6:9-12.

9-10. We are persuaded better things of you. Following this severe warning, the author consoles his readers with his confidence concerning them. He was not speaking about them; he does not even suggest that he was speaking of some of them who were merely professing Christians. He is persuaded that his readers possess better qualities and things that accompany salvation, or literally “things having salvation” (Gr echomena). This warning was hypothetical, showing the awesomeness of apostasy if one could actually renounce Christ after being born again. The fourth warning (ch. 10) demonstrates the hypothetical nature of these warnings more clearly than chapter 6 does. In chapter 10 the author includes himself within the warning (10:26) and further states that neither he nor his readers were on the road to apostasy (10:39). He pronounces the fearful punishment upon one who would trample the Son of God under foot and would count the blood by which he was sanctified as unholy (see the commentary on 10:29). He is describing what would happen to him and to them, not what has happened to anyone.

7 For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God:

8 But that which beareth thorns and briars is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.

9 But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak.

10 For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister.

11 And we desire that every one of you do shew the same diligence to the full assurance of hope unto the end:

12 That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promises.

13 For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself,

14 Saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee.

15 And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men verily swear by the greater: and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife.

17 Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath:

18 That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us:

19 Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, and which entereth into that within the vail;

20 Whither the forerunner is for us

11-12. Show the same diligence to the full assurance of hope. The author is desirous that, as they were diligent in the past, so now in the present they might grow and mature in order to know the full assurance of their eternal life, or "so as to realize the full assurance of hope until the end" (NASB). They must not become slothful (Gr nōthroi) or sluggish. They had already become sluggish in their hearing (5:11); they must now be diligent, lest such sluggishness characterize their whole life. They need to become followers of those saints who demonstrate faith and patience. To follow (Gr mimētēs) involves much more than trailing after another. The word used here refers to an imitator, or to one who follows another's example. One such example was Abraham.

e. The certainty of God's promises. 6:13-20.

13-15. For when God made promise to Abraham. The greatest encouragement to faith and patience is the confidence that God's promises are trustworthy. So the author uses Abraham as an example of one who practiced the diligence of a fruitful life. In so doing, he cites God's promise to Abraham in Genesis 22:16-17, which is a restatement of His promise in Genesis 12:2-3. God backed up His promise with His integrity. He signed His name to the promise. "Thus both God's authority and His integrity were at stake" (Ross, Wycliffe Bible Commentary, p. 918).

The interpretation of he obtained the promise (vs. 15) must consider the significance of 11:13, which states that Abraham died not having received the promises. The ultimate fulfillment of the Abrahamic Covenant involved the coming and ministry of the Christ Himself, which Abraham did not see during his lifetime. Yet, the promise to which our author refers in chapter 6 concerns the receiving of Isaac. And though the quote is taken from the statement made to Abraham when he offered Isaac to God on Mount Moriah, it is only the reaffirmation of a promise made before Isaac was born. Of course, this promise was simply the first step of the ultimate fulfillment, but in no way does it contradict the promises referred to in 11:13 (see Kent, p. 119).

16-18. An oath . . . is to them an end of all strife. Since God accompanied His promise with an oath, the author seeks to show the value of an oath. Even when men take an oath, swearing by someone greater than themselves, others regard it as a confirmation (Gr bebaiōsin) of the promise. This is a technical usage involving a legal guarantee. God . . . confirmed it by an oath. God desired that His people should fully understand the certainty of His promises, and so He established them by His oath.

That by two immutable things. God's covenant to Abraham was based on two immutable (unchangeable) elements. First, God's promise was based upon His own unchanging word. He cannot lie; He will not allow His word to fail (Mt 5:28; Jn 10:35; 17:17). What He says, He will do. Further, His word was confirmed by His oath. And since He can swear by none greater, He swears by Himself. If in any way His word would not be sufficient, He bases His promise upon His own holy character. We might have a strong consolation. God's covenant to Abraham is irreversible. It is as immutable as God Himself. That truth did not provide assurance for Abraham alone, but it applies equally to us who have received the salvation provided in the Abrahamic covenant. The author has focused upon the appropriate text to prove the security of salvation which he desires his readers to have.

19-20. Which hope we have as an anchor. Starting at the end of verse 18, the author uses three illustrative pictures to demonstrate the security of being in Christ. First, it is described as being a safe protection to the believer, as the six cities of refuge in the Old Testament were to those allowed their protecentered, even Jesus, made an high priest for ever after the order of Mēl-chīś'e-dēc.

tion (Num 35:6-32). Second, our hope is sure and steadfast as a well-placed, unbending anchor. Our anchor is not located in the deepest sea, but in the highest heaven. It is fixed in the surest of all places—in the sanctuary of heaven itself. The third figure is that of a forerunner. Though the figure changes, the location does not. Our forerunner is likewise positioned in the sanctuary of heaven. As our forerunner, Jesus is far different from the Old Testament high priest could represent and intercede for the people within the sanctuary, the Holy of Holies; but he could not take the people into it. As our forerunner, Jesus has opened the way before us, that eventually (but certainly) we might enter in with Him.

The warning passage ends where it began, speaking of Jesus as a priest according to the priesthood of Melchizedek. It is the author's hope that his readers would no longer be sluggish in hearing (5:11) but would be ready to grapple with this new and difficult doctrine.

4. The priestly order of Melchizedek. 7:1-28.

The thesis that Christ is superior to the levitical high priest began at 4:14. Due to the immaturity of the readers, our author has not yet presented the main part of his argument. He now does this in chapter 7. Christ's ministry is superior, for his priesthood is after the order of Melchizedek.

a. A royal priest. 7:1-3.

7:1. For this Melchizedek. Melchizedek appears only briefly in the Old Testament (Gen 14:18-20; Ps 110:4), but our author minutely scrutinizes him in his epistle. The preliminary discussion presented in these verses is taken from the historical account in Genesis. Who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings. The capture of Lot during the battle at Sodom between four northern kings and five southern kings caused Abraham, with 318 men, to pursue them. After defeating them near Damascus, he turned south with the people and goods which had been plundered. Melchizedek, King of Salem (later called Jerusalem) and priest of the most high God, brought out food to feed them and blessed Abraham. Abraham acknowledged Melchizedek's priestly status by giving him a tenth of all the spoils.

2-3. Being by interpretation. The writer sees in Melchizedek a type or figure of Christ and begins to express the parallels which he sees between the two. The word interpretation (Gr hermēneuomenos) might better be rendered, "by the translation of his name" (NASB). His name means King of righteousness. His position as king of the ancient city-state of Salem made him also "king of peace," since Salem means peace. Thus, by name and location he is king of both righteousness and peace, two attributes that link him in type to Christ. By emphasizing the silence of the passage, the author is able to establish many parallels within the typology. Without father, without mother. What is true of Melchizedek (the type) only because of silence is intrinsically true of Christ (the reality). Melchizedek is without parents only in that they are unknown. He is without descent in that his genealogy has not been preserved, as verse 6 implicitly states. Genealogy was essential to a priest, for under the levitical system one could not serve if he could not prove his pedigree (cf. Ezr 2:62; Neh 7:64). Melchizedek had no papers. Similarly, in His divine person Christ was indeed without father or mother, without genealogy. Melchizedek is without beginning and ending due to silence; so is Christ due to His eternal nature. The author explicitly states his point when he declares that Melchizedek is made like (Gr aphōmoīōmenos), or resembles, the Son of God. Has the author taken too great a liberty with his typology? No, for it is God Himself who first made the similar connection in Psalm 110:4, ". . . Thou art a priest for ever after the order of

FOR this Mēl-chīś'e-dēc, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

2 To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace;

3 Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.

Melchizedek." It is God who decrees that Melchizedek's priesthood is everlasting. Abideth a priest continually. Our author concludes exactly that which God had proclaimed earlier—Melchizedek's priesthood continues. The present tense indicates that Melchizedek is a priest, not that he was a priest.

Some have understood these verses in Hebrews to suggest that Melchizedek was a theophany, an appearance of Christ Himself, rather than a historical king at Salem. Neither Hebrews nor Genesis, however, supports that view. Even in Hebrews, such phrases as made like unto the Son of God (7:20) and after the order of Melchizedek (vs. 20) seem to indicate a clear distinction between Melchizedek and Christ. The Genesis account provides sufficient historical data to disallow the idea that this is a temporary manifestation. This Melchizedek was a king of a literal city in Canaan. The setting of Genesis 14 is unlike any of the settings involving a theophany. In those settings the theophany is recognized as the Lord or is declared within the text to be the Lord (Gen 16:7ff.; 18:1ff.; 22:14ff.; Ex 3:2ff.). Further, to argue from etymology that since the name means "king of righteousness," Melchizedek is not historical, lacks substance. Both historical and archaeological evidence demonstrate that the Jebusite kings of that area used compound names including "-zedek" for their titles. For example, Adoniz-edek was the Jebusite king of the same city several centuries later (Josh 10:1). For an extensive treatment of this subject, see James Borland, Christ in the Old Testament, pp. 164-174.

b. A priest greater than Aaron. 7:4-10.

4 Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils.

5 And verily they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham:

6 But he whose descent is not counted from them received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.

7 And without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die receive tithes; but there he receiveth them, of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.

9 And as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Mel-chi's'e-d'ec met him.

4-7. Consider how great this man was. The point being made now is quite obvious. Even Abraham, the patriarch, or father, of the Jewish people, considered Melchizedek superior enough to tithe willingly and humbly of his spoils. Spoils (Gr akrothimion) means literally the top of the heap or the best of the spoils, which were usually reserved for deity. The point of verse 5 is not as clear, but it seems to focus around two factors that distinguish Melchizedek from the levitical priests. First, the levitical system was according to the law, so that tithing to them was the result of mere legal consignment. Second, they received the tithes from those who were brethren. Therefore, Dods concludes, "Paying tithes is in their case no acknowledgement of personal inferiority, but mere compliance with law. But Abraham was under no such law to Melchizedek, and the payment of tithes to him was a tribute to his personal greatness" (p. 309). Verses 6 and 7 add the further point that Melchizedek blessed him that had the promises. Even though the great Abraham was the recipient of the Covenant, he is the receiver, rather than the bestower, of the blessing. Thus, Melchizedek is his better and is certainly superior to Abraham's offspring.

8-10. Here men that die receive tithes. In these verses the author marshals two ideas that will not allow any to think that the more recent levitical order was a replacement of the earlier system. First, the levitical system is weakened by the continual death of its priests. The Melchizedecian order, however, has the witness of God (vs. 3; Ps 110:4) that its priest lives on. Second, Levi, also . . . paid tithes in Abraham. The levitical system was neither a better nor a later replacement, for in a corporate sense even Levi was present at the Genesis 14 event. The author is cautious in his assertion, as his introductory words indicate: As I may so say. The phrase might more clearly be expressed by "I might almost say" (Dods, p. 310) or "so to speak" (NASB). The author suggests that there is a sense in which even Levi paid tithes to Melchizedek. He cannot be Melchizedek's superior.

c. A priestly order which is unending. 7:11-25.

Though the author has repeatedly referred to the unending nature of the Melchizedecian order, this now becomes the cen-

11 If therefore perfection were by the Le-vit'i-cal priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Mēl-chīs'e-dēc, and not be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.

14 For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Juda; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Mēl-chīs'e-dēc there ariseth another priest, 16 Who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Mēl-chīs'e-dēc.

18 For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.

19 For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did: by the which we draw nigh unto God.

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest:

21 (For those priests were made without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Mēl-chīs'e-dēc:)

22 By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament.

tral point. But before developing the positive aspects of this, he addresses the weaknesses of the levitical system. The Old Testament bears witness within itself to the provisional nature of its priesthood.

11-12. What further need was there that another priest should rise. . . ? The author raises the questions as to why the Old Testament should make reference to another (Gr heteros), a different priesthood. If the levitical priesthood was producing perfection (Gr teleiōsis), meaning completion or fulfillment of its role, why is another needed? The old system pronounced its own doom by speaking of another. Further, the author teaches that the passing of the levitical priesthood necessitates the removal of the Mosaic law, for they are inextricably united. According to verses 11-12, the Law did not produce the levitical priesthood; but the priesthood required the Law. Both Moses and Aaron were chosen of God before the Law was given. The Law was given at Sinai to provide the procedures and ordinances for the functioning of the priesthood He had already established. So our author accurately acknowledges that the passing of the levitical priesthood demands the passing of the Mosaic system (cf. Kent, pp. 132-133).

13-14. Another tribe. As long as the Mosaic law was operative, the fact that Jesus was of the tribe of Judah created an insurmountable obstacle. The Law never honored or allowed one from that tribe to function as priest. Conversely, when King Uzziah, a Judahite, took that role to himself, God judged him with leprosy (II Chr 26:16-21). As long as the Law was functional, Jesus could not serve as priest. But the Law promised another priest, one after the order of Melchizedek, who would replace the insufficient levitical priesthood and its law.

15-19. After the power of an endless life. One has arisen who is qualified to serve after the order of Melchizedek, for He has an endless life. As in verse 11, the word another (Gr heteros) in verse 15 means another who is different rather than a similar one (Gr allos). Verse 16 indicates how He is different in His qualification. Under the levitical system, men were appointed on the basis of physical descent. The word carnal (Gr sarkinēs) does not mean fleshly, implying sinful characteristics (as sarkikēs would); rather, it means "fleshly," implying that which pertains to the physical. Christ was not appointed because of physical descent, but because of His spiritual fitness. He possesses endless life. He possesses divine qualities that no levitical priest ever possessed. Thus, though their priesthood was weak and ineffective, His is able to present men before God forever.

20-22. Not without an oath he was made priest. The oath with which God established the Melchizedecian order certifies it as unending. The levitical system received no such certification. God did not swear that it would endure, but this one will. There will never be a third system. There are no new, latter-day priesthoods. God's oath will allow no other.

With the new priesthood, God has also established a new and better testament, or covenant, just as the levitical priesthood contained the Old Covenant, the Mosaic. The Greek word translated testament (Gr diathēkē) is used seventeen times in Hebrews, the first being here. During the New Testament era this was the exclusive word for a will or testament (a one-sided promise involving the death of the testator). The Greek word uniformly used to express a compact, or covenant (a two-sided agreement), was synthēkē. Yet, the Old Testament word for covenant (Heb berit) consistently uses diathēkē, though one might expect to see synthēkē. The reason for this word usage arises from the fact that God's covenants were not compacts or agreements made between equal parties. Thus diathēkē more aptly expresses the one-sided nature of God's covenants (Moulton and Milligan, The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament, pp. 148-149). This better covenant is a promise, not an agreement. It was established solely by God and confirmed with His oath. No one can annul it or the eternal salvation which it promises. Jesus Himself is the surety (Gr eggyos) of the covenant. He is not here presented as the mediator, but as the guarantor, of this better covenant. A mediator is one who gathers the two parties to devise an agreement. A guarantor is one who sees that the obligations of the covenant are carried out (Kent, pp. 137-138).

23 And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death:

24 But this man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

26 For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens;

27 Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for evermore.

23-25. An unchangeable priesthood. The levitical high priest possessed an inherent instability due to the death of his priests. Each generation faced this change. By contrast, the New Covenant possesses a priesthood that is unchanging (Gr aparabaton). This word has the connotation of that which is not passed along. This new priesthood needs no successor. Therefore, He is able to save them to the uttermost (Gr eis to paneles). The possibilities for this Greek phrase are twofold, completely or forever. The context allows both ideas; and so the broader meaning, completely, seems the more appropriate usage. The one other occurrence of this Greek phrase also suggests completeness (Lk 13:11—of a woman completely stooped over). Christ has saved us to the uttermost; our salvation is complete in every respect. It is complete in regard to time; so it is secure to the end of time. It is complete in that it can perfect regeneration in any life. Christ is a better high priest because His intercession is unending and complete, providing access into God's presence (cf. 4:14-16).

d. A priestly character which is superior. 7:26-28.

26. Much has been said previously concerning Christ's priestly character, coming bit by bit and in various ways; but here the message reaches its climax. For such a high priest became us. The passage might be rendered more forcefully, as, "such a high priest meets our need" (NIV) or, "such a high priest does indeed fit our condition" (NEB). He meets our needs so well because of His qualities. He is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners. Westcott cleverly arranges these attributes as follows: "Christ is personally in Himself holy, in relation to men guileless, in spite of contact with a sinful world undefiled. By the issue of His life He has been separated from sinners in regard to the visible order, and, in regard to the invisible world, He has risen above the heavens" (Westcott, p. 193). It seems simpler and more congruous with the context to regard these as qualities which merely distinguish His priestly role from that represented by the levitical priests. He is holy in His personal piety; He is harmless or guileless morally. He is undefiled, similar to the cleanness required of levitical priests (Lev 21:1-21:16ff.). But whereas theirs only involved physical contacts, His undefilement is total. Outwardly, they were separated from sinners; His separation is total, for He is sinless. They interceded to the God in heaven; He is the God of heaven. Though He intercedes daily, He has no need to sacrifice daily.

27-28. The levitical priest offered sacrifices first for his own sins day after day (see Lev 4:2-3; 16:6). Christ offered Himself as the sacrifice for the sin of man (II Cor 5:21; I Pet 2:24). The beautiful aspect of this passage is that it reveals Christ as both high priest and sacrifice (cf. Gal 1:4). Christ has both all the authority and holiness of a superior high priest and all the love necessary to become the very sacrifice for our sin. Verse 28 states the contrasts once again. They whom the Law appointed have infirmity (Gr astheneia) or "weaknesses." The Son, who has been perfected (Gr teteleiomenon) forever, was appointed after (Gr meta) the Law by God's oath.

E. Christ's Ministry Through the New Covenant Is Superior to the Old System. 8:1-10:30.

Whereas the former chapters have highlighted Christ's superiority due to His personal character or work, chapters 8-10 lay

CHAPTER 8

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens;

2 A minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.

3 For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer.

4 For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law:

5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

6 But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises.

7 For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

stress upon the superiority of the new system with its heavenly tabernacle, its New Covenant, and its totally efficacious, once-for-all sacrifice.

1. The better sanctuary in which Christ ministers. 8:1-6.

8:1-3. Of the things which we have spoken this is the sum. Although this translation of verse 1 suggests that chapter 8 provides a summary of the preceding discourse, this does not seem to be the case. The word translated sum (Gr kephalaion) equally means main point. In view of the fact that the participle used here is present tense rather than a past tense, the author appears to be emphasizing that which he is about to speak, rather than what he has said. A fitting translation would be, "The point of what we are saying is this" (NIV). The point is that Jesus has His ministry in the heavenly sanctuary, even the true tabernacle.

Just as any credible earthly priest, Jesus must have somewhat also to offer. The author makes the statement, but does not provide any proof. One reason for the omission of a response at this point could be that he has mentioned Christ's offering only several verses earlier (7:27), stating that he gave himself. Another reason for the omission might be the fact that he will develop shortly that very truth regarding Christ's sacrifice (cf. 9:12ff.). The contrast between the continual offering of the priests and Christ's one-time offering is demonstrated in verse 3 by the tenses of the infinitives, being first present (to continue offering) and then aorist (to offer).

4-5. He should not be a priest. The author seems to desire to squelch any notion that if Christ did not have a priestly office on earth, how could He have one in heaven. The author's point is that another levitical priest was not needed. They have enough. In fact, He would not qualify according to that order. Jesus is part of God's new, heavenly order.

The example and shadow of heavenly things. Verse 5 sets forth three words that demonstrate the relation between the earthly and heavenly tabernacles. First, the earthly is called an example (Gr hypodeigma), implying that it is a copy or model of the heavenly. This word is used again to express the relationship of the tabernacle furniture to the heavenly elements (9:23). It is an imitation of the heavenly. Second, the earthly is a shadow (Gr skia). This word suggests several further facts. A shadow requires the existence of the real thing from the beginning. The heavenly tabernacle has existed at least as long as its shadow—the earthly. A shadow also adds depth and perspective to the real. The levitical priesthood with its Mosaic ritual is a shadow, but the reality is Christ (cf. Col 2:16-17). The third word, pattern (Gr typos), speaks to the opposite relationship—that of the heavenly to the earthly. The heavenly provided the stamp or imprint from which the earthly came. The pattern, or archetype, which Moses was to follow when building his tabernacle was that of the true tabernacle, spoken of in verse 2. Due to their presentation in the Old Testament, biblical types, such as the Mosaic tabernacle, are revealed before their antitype, which is found in the New. Their existence, however, is preceded by the antitype, as here with the heavenly tabernacle.

6. The superiority of Christ's ministry to that of the levitical priests is parallel to the superiority of the New Covenant, of which He is the Mediator, to that which Moses mediated (Gal 3:19). Furthermore, the New Covenant is superior because it possesses better promises.

2. The promise of the New Covenant proclaimed in the Old Covenant. 8:7-13.

7. For if that first covenant had been faultless. The author again takes up the point which he had mentioned in 7:11, that the Law and the corresponding levitical priesthood could not bring men to the necessary perfection. Its fault was that it could not save (Rom 3:20), nor could it sanctify (Rom 7:12-24; 8:2-3). Yet, we must not assume that the Law has failed to do its work; for its work was not to save, but to reveal sin (Rom 3:19-20), making men aware of their sin and condemnation (Rom 4:15; Deut 27:26). The Law manifests sin's terrible nature (Rom 7:7-13) and extent (Rom 5:20). Furthermore, the Law was given to actively restrain sin (Gal 3:23; I Tim 1:9-10).

But the Law was never intended to be God's final program, or even His first. It was not first, for Paul says "it was added"; nor was it final, for it was only given ". . . till the seed should come to whom the promise was made . . ." (Gal 3:19, cf. Gal 3:23-25). God first made the promise (the Old Covenant) with Abraham. During the interval, before the promise was fulfilled, the Law was added until Christ should come. He has now come, and the Mosaic law has passed away. Scriptural proof is abundant (Rom 6:14; 7:1-6; Gal 3:10,13,19-25; I Cor 9:20; II Cor 3:11-13). Its removal, however, did not involve its destruction (Mt 5:17-18), but its fulfillment. Christ has attained the righteous goal toward which the Law was directed (Rom 10:4). He has paid its penalty on behalf of others, and so He has fulfilled its demand (Gal 3:10-13). Thus, the believer is now free from the Law and united with Christ (Rom 7:1-6; Gal 2:19-20; 3:19-25). The unsaved man, however, still lives under its convicting and condemning work (I Tim 1:8-11).

8 For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah:

9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people:

11 And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest.

12 For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.

13 In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away.

8-12. For finding fault with them. The fault lay not so much in the Law as it did in those who were to live by it. Despite Israel's failure, God promises that the day will come when He will make a new covenant. The content of verses 8-12 involves the quotation of one extended Old Testament passage (Jer 31:31-34). Many important truths can be gleaned from this passage regarding the New Covenant. First, during Jeremiah's day it was future and was something new. Second, it will be established with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah. The statement concerning those with whom this covenant is made is very precise. It involves the Jewish people at a time when they will again be united. When Jeremiah revealed this prophecy, Israel was scattered throughout the Middle East and Judah had just recently begun its exile in Babylon. This New Covenant made with the Jewish people would come after they were regathered to Israel (Jer 30:1-3) and after a time of severe tribulation identified as "the time of Jacob's trouble" (Jer 30:7). Third, it is unlike the covenant God made with Israel at Sinai (vs. 9). It is different in that the Old Covenant had been conditional. When Israel abandoned it, God also abandoned it and them.

Fourth, this New Covenant is based upon an inner, spiritual change within people. This covenant is not written upon stone, but in their hearts (cf. Ezk 36:26-27; II Cor 3:6-18). The next two principles of the covenant also involve its spiritual superiority over the Old Covenant. All who are involved in the New Covenant will personally Know the LORD. It is unlike the old, Mosaic covenant which included all according to a physical, national qualification. Further, this covenant involves a complete forgiveness for its people (vs. 12). The once-for-all sacrifice of its High Priest will remove the remembrance of sins. The daily sacrifices made it difficult for the Old Testament saint to forget his sins.

13. He hath made the first old. In that God calls this one new, the author concludes that God is also calling the former one old. And if it is old, it decayeth and is ready to vanish away. Even in Jeremiah's day (ca. 600 B.C.) the Law was already regarded as old. Yet, most amazingly, the Old Covenant prophecies the new and, thus, foretells its own demise.

The relation of the New Covenant to the gentile, church-age believer is commonly viewed in several ways. First, the amillennialists believe that the church replaces Israel; and so this covenant is fulfilled by the church. A second view proposes that this covenant, like Jeremiah 31 suggests, is for the nation of Israel alone. The third view suggests that two new covenants exist: one for Israel and one for the church. In the understanding of this writer, the best view is that there is one New Covenant, which God will one day fulfill with Israel and in which the church participates soteriologically today. In other words, though the covenant is not fulfilled, Christ's death has initiated its benefits for today for those who will some day share in its ultimate blessings when it is fulfilled with Israel. This view allows the witness of both the Old and New Testament to stand. Further, nowhere does Scripture speak of two new covenants, any more than it speaks of two old covenants. Paul was a minister to the churches of this New Covenant (II Cor 3:6). The ordinance of the Lord's Supper that has been given to the church is based upon the sacrifice of the New Covenant—Christ's death. Many references to the New Covenant within the New Testament clearly relate it to the church (12:23-24; I Cor 11:25; II Cor 3:6), and others also relate it to Israel (8:10; 12:23-24; Rom 11:27). As heirs of Christ's kingdom, we partake of the New Covenant's spiritual blessings today and in the future will share in its fulfillment with Israel. See Homer Kent, Jr., in The Epistle to the Hebrews, for a concise summary of these views (pp. 156-160).

3. The operation of the Old Covenant. 9:1-10.

Chapter 9 continues the theme of the superiority of Christ's ministry to the levitical priesthood and its Mosaic covenant. In chapter 8 Christ's tabernacle was declared to be the true tabernacle in heaven and its covenant to be the New Covenant that would replace the Mosaic. Now chapter 9 pronounces another fault (cf. 8:7; 7:11) within the Old Covenant, that is, its tabernacle involved a physical ritual which could not make men perfect (righteous). The old tabernacle would stand only until the true tabernacle would come. The first part of the chapter (vss. 1-10) describes the operation of the Old Covenant through its tabernacle; the second part (vss. 11-28) reveals the operation of the New.

a. The contents of its tabernacle. 9:1-5.

9:1-2. The first covenant had also ordinances. The author does not speak derogatorily of the Old Testament tabernacle. He gives it its rightful dignity, for it had been ordained by God and was a type of the heavenly tabernacle. God very precisely established its physical features and service. The fact that it was a worldly (Gr kosmikon) sanctuary does not reveal anything regarding its spiritual status, but rather its role in this world. It had been made by man's hands from earthly elements (cf. 8:2; 9:11).

The author then proceeds to describe its structure and furniture. Within its sanctuary (Gr hagia) were placed the candlestick and the table of showbread. Into this area, often called the Holy Place, the priests entered daily to minister before the Lord. The candlestick was a lampstand holding seven lamps (Ex 25:31-39; 37:17-24), which were trimmed daily (Ex 30:7-8). The table of showbread contained twelve loaves or cakes of bread that were replaced each Sabbath.

3-5. The tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all. Within the holy place behind the second veil, the Holy of Holies (Gr hagia hagiōn) was located. It was a fifteen-foot cube into which only the high priest was allowed to enter, and that only on the Day of Atonement.

Which had the golden censer. Two difficulties arise when seeking to interpret this phrase. First, what was the censer (Gr thumiaterion)? Second, could it have been located in the Holy of Holies? The word translated censer properly refers to a vessel

CHAPTER 9

THEN verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary.

2 For there was a tabernacle made; the first, wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shewbread; which is called the sanctuary.

3 And after the second vail, the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all;

4 Which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden pot that had manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the covenant;

5 And over it the cherubims of glory shadowing the mercyseat; of which we cannot now speak particularly.

used for burning incense. It might properly describe either the shovel (censer) for carrying the coals or the altar upon which the coals were placed. Two factors support the usage of this word as censer. First, the Septuagint uses this word to translate censer, but never uses it for the incense altar (II Chr 26:19; Ezk 8:11). Second, this translation avoids the difficulty of placing the incense altar within the Holy of Holies. Several problems, however, exist with this view. First, no mention is ever made in the Scriptures of such a censer within the Holy of Holies. Second, the censers are never described as golden. The third, and biggest, problem with this view is that it only makes the problem of the incense altar greater. For if this word refers to a censer, then the golden incense altar is totally overlooked by our author. The second view, which regards this as the incense altar, presents fewer problems and has significant supporting factors. First, this word (Gr thumiaterion) is used for the incense altar by both early Jewish (Philo and Josephus) and Christian writers (Clement of Alexandria and Origen). Second, the incense altar was golden, even as this is (Ex 30:1-10). Third, as versed as he is regarding the Old Testament and the tabernacle, our author would not have overlooked the incense altar when describing the tabernacle.

Since the thumiaterion properly refers to the golden incense altar, how could the author locate it in the Holy of Holies? Quite the contrary, the author does not explicitly say the altar was in the Holy of Holies. When he refers to the incense altar, he changes his language from wherein was in verse 2 to which had in verse 4. The author's intent seems to be that while the Holy Place had the candlestick and table within it, the Holy of Holies only had the incense altar related to it. Exodus 30:6 similarly stresses the close relation of the incense altar to the Holy of Holies, even though it was not in it physically: ". . . thou shalt put it before the veil that is by the ark of the testimony . . ." (see also Ex 40:5). The altar was located in the Holy Place so incense could be placed upon fresh coals morning and evening. It was located immediately in front of the Holy of Holies so that its fragrance might enter into the Holy of Holies. Thus, its physical location was in the Holy Place, but its liturgical function was with the Holy of Holies.

Within the Holy of Holies proper was the ark of the covenant and the things stored within it. The golden pot of manna and Aaron's rod were missing as early as Solomon's day (I Kgs 8:9). The stone tables of the Law and the ark itself probably vanished during the Babylonian captivity. Our author, however, is de-

THE LAYOUT OF THE OLD TESTAMENT
TABERNACLE

Measurements are in cubits; a cubit = ca. 18 inches

6 Now when these things were thus ordained, the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God.

7 But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people:

8 The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing:

9 Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience;

10 Which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation.

11 But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;

12 Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

13 For if the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh:

scribing the tabernacle as it existed in Moses' day. Upon the ark or chest was a cover called the mercy seat which was overshadowed by cherubim. The Greek word used to translate mercy seat (Gr hilastērion) is used in the Septuagint to translate the Hebrew word (Heb kapporet, meaning covering). On the Day of Atonement the high priest would sprinkle blood upon the mercy seat, first for himself and then for the nation (Lev 16:14-15). The mercy seat was a covering for more than the ark alone. It became a place of covering for the sins of the people.

b. The closed chamber of its tabernacle. 9:6-10.

6-7. Accomplishing the service of God. The priests entered daily into the Holy Place to fulfill their continuous tasks. Morning and evening the lamps were trimmed and the coals with incense were placed upon the golden altar. The showbread was replaced weekly. But the Holy of Holies was a closed chamber into which the high priest ventured alone once a year with blood to sprinkle for his sins first, and then for the errors of the people. These errors (Gr agnoēmātōn) involved sins of ignorance and weakness in the flesh, such as lying, stealing, and adultery. There was no atonement for sins of defiance or deliberate rebellion against God (see Num 15:27-31 and Commentary notes on 10:26).

8-10. The Holy Ghost this signifying. Through this typological picture of the tabernacle the Holy Spirit was showing that man did not possess direct and complete access to God (and would not) while the tabernacle and its law still stood. The tabernacle further served as a figure (Gr parabolē), a physical picture or symbol, for all to see that, just as access was not open into the Holy of Holies, access to God was not complete. Man's conscience was always left unsatisfied. Since he must return repeatedly and since he never knew what happened within the closed chambers, he could never feel he had been completely and permanently cleansed. These outward rituals could not meet the deep spiritual need of man, nor would they remain after the time of reformation. This reformation (Gr diorthōsis—used only here in the New Testament) involved a reconstruction, a reshaping of all that existed within Israel's religious structure. It might be called a "New Order" (Bruce, p. 197).

4. The operation of the New Covenant. 9:11-10:18.

In chapter 9 the author declares the superiority of the New Covenant to the Old by focusing upon their respective tabernacles. The tabernacle of the Old was earthly and symbolic; but, most importantly, its inner sanctuary was a closed chamber (vss. 1-10). Beginning at verse 11, the author demonstrates the superiority of the New Covenant by expressing four things which Christ has done so as to make it superior.

a. Christ has opened its inner sanctuary. 9:11-14.

11-12. First, Christ has opened the inner sanctuary of the heavenly tabernacle, quite in contrast to the closed sanctuary of the earthly. The reference in verse 12 to the holy place (Gr ta hagia) needs to be understood as the Holy of Holies. This Greek phrase is not used consistently for any one part of the tabernacle. In 9:2 it is used for the Holy Place; in 9:25 it has reference to the Holy of Holies. Thus, the usage of the phrase must be determined by the demands of the context. Verses 11-12 clearly relate to the inner sanctuary, the Holy of Holies, as have the preceding verses (vss. 7-10). These two verses present the essentials in operating the New Covenant: a superior tabernacle and an infinitely superior sacrifice.

13-14. For if the blood of bulls . . . sanctifieth. The total efficacy of Christ's sacrifice is now demonstrated by the incredible fact that the animal sacrifices effected a cleansing. The blood of bulls and of goats obviously makes reference to the activities within the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement (Lev 16:5ff.), when the high priest sprinkled first the blood of a bull for his sins and then the blood of a goat for the sins of the people. The ashes of a heifer refers to the ceremony involving the red heifer (Num 19). A heifer would be taken outside the camp, killed, and then burned. As it was burning, the priest would throw cedar, hyssop, and scarlet wool upon it. Afterwards, the ashes would be gathered and stored outside the city. Whenever anyone became ceremonially unclean because of contact with a dead body, these ashes would be mixed with water to constitute a “water of separation” or “water for impurity” (NASB) and sprinkled upon this one to the purifying of the flesh. “Perhaps this particular practice was selected because it illustrates so clearly the largely ceremonial nature of the purity provided by Old Testament sacrifices” (Kent, p. 172).

14 How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?

How much more shall the blood of Christ . . . purge your conscience. If the rituals of the Old Testament tabernacle possessed merit, even as an outward, ceremonial cleansing, how much superior the merit of Christ’s shed blood will be! If God accepted the former ritual as a purifying of the flesh, how much more will God be satisfied by the sacrifice of His Son! He accepts it so completely that it inwardly regenerates the individual and purifies his conscience (cf. 9:9). There exists a peace of conscience because there is now peace with God (cf. Rom 5:1). Access to God within the Holy of Holies through Christ’s sacrifice brings peace with God.

b. Christ is the Mediator of the New Covenant. 9:15-22.

15 And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

15. For this cause he is the mediator of the new testament. Because of His blood, His death, Christ has accomplished what the Old Covenant could not. Therefore, He has been set as the Mediator for a New Covenant. His sacrifice has achieved what the many sacrifices of the Old Testament could not, for He effectuated the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament. The Old Testament sacrifices could not take away sin (10:4); they merely made an atonement, a covering for sin. Christ’s sacrifice expiated all those past sins that had received atonement. The Old Testament sacrifices might be compared to the writing of a check. The paper upon which it is written is practically worthless. Yet, it is used and accepted in place of money, since it is backed by what has been deposited in the bank. Christ’s death was deposited from the foundation of the world as that which backed the Old Testament sacrifices. With Christ’s death upon the cross, the deposit was released and all the past checks were honored and paid.

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator.

17 For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.

16-17. The author now avails himself of the natural realm to provide an illustration of a will or testament. The word is the same as that used in 8:6-7, for a covenant (Gr diathēkē), but its usage here is obviously different (see the discussion at 7:22). The usual Greek usage of this word (rare in New Testament usage, however) is that of a will. Such is its usage here, for this testament required the death of its maker. The Old Testament covenant may or may not require a sacrifice. A will, however, requires the death of its own maker. Indeed, a will can be changed many times, so long as its maker lives; but his death sets it in force. The nature of Christ’s death satisfies the requirements of both a will and a covenant, and it may thus be described as both (ch. 8—a covenant; here—a will).

18 Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood.

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people,

18-22. Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood. Verse 18 establishes the thought for the next several verses. Even the Old Covenant was activated by death and the shedding of blood. At the confirmation of the Law, Moses ratified it by sprinkling both the Book of the Covenant and the people with blood, saying, This is the blood of the testament (cf. Ex 24:8; and Christ’s words in establishing the New Testament, Mt 26:28). Likewise, when the tabernacle tament which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 Moreover he sprinkled with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission.

23 It was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;

26 For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world; but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

27 And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment:

28 So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

was finished, both it and its vessels were dedicated by the sprinkling of blood. No explicit record of this sprinkling is recorded in the Old Testament, but Exodus 40:9 does speak of a complete anointing of its parts with oil. Later, in Numbers 7:1, reference is made to Moses' act of anointing and sanctifying it. This latter passage may be the source of our author's seeing the anointing with oil and the sanctifying with blood. On the basis of the preceding verses, the author concludes two things in verse 22. The law seems to require that everything be purged with blood. And there is no remission (Gr aphesis), forgiveness, without the shedding of blood.

c. Christ is the perfect sacrifice. 9:23-28.

23-24. The perfect nature of Christ's sacrifice is observed first from the fact that he purified heavenly things by means of His sacrifice. As the lesser tabernacle needed lesser sacrifices, so the heavenly tabernacle needed a perfect sacrifice. Since the patterns (Gr hypodeigmata) or examples of the heavenly things need purification, it might be easy to imagine that the heavenly tabernacle is tainted and needs cleansing. To suppose that satanic defilement, or even God's wrath, necessitated a purification of the heavens is to miss the point of the context. Even the earthly tabernacle itself did not need cleansing. It was those who approached it who needed the cleansing. Further, the comparison which our author has just presented involved the consecration of the tabernacle when it was instituted. For a comprehensive presentation of this heavenly purification, see Philip E. Hughes, A Commentary on the Epistle to the Hebrews, pp. 379-382.

Verse 24 identifies the true holy places as heaven itself. This would dispute the notion that heaven contains a tabernacle corresponding in appearance to that which Moses was commanded to build. Heaven itself is the fulfillment, or archetype, of that pattern.

On behalf of those Jewish Christians who had difficulty relinquishing the ceremony and ritual of Judaism from their past, Christ has provided a superior ritual. Though the physical embellishments of the church are plain and simple, the symbolism of our Saviour is superior to all. The priest of Christianity is the Son of God Himself. The sacrifice is the Lamb of God. The tabernacle into which the shed blood has been taken is heaven itself. And beyond any parallelism, we, the people, have been taken into the Holy of Holies itself, possessing complete access to God.

25-26. A second quality that makes Christ's sacrifice perfect is that which has often been stated and will extensively be treated in the first half of chapter 10—it is once-for-all. If Christ's sacrifice, of which the animal sacrifices were a type, had to be repeated, it could not be perfect. And if a continuation of His sacrifice was necessary, then His sacrifice would have had to start at the foundation of the world (e.g., Gen 3:21).

27-28. As it is appointed unto men once to die. The relation of verse 27 to its context is often dismissed in order to stress the certainty of man's future judgment. It is axiomatic that man dies once. Exceptions do exist: Enoch and Elijah of the Old Testament, the New Testament saints who will be alive at Christ's return who will never die, or Lazarus and others who have been raised from the dead and died twice. But no exceptions concerning God's judgment can be cited. There is no reincarnation; every person gets one chance to prepare for God's judgment.

Yet the full significance of verse 27 cannot be seen apart from verse 28. As it is appointed unto men once to die. . . . So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many (cf. Isa 53:12). The author is clearly presenting a comparison. As it is with man, so it was with Christ. As man can only die once, so the man Christ could only die once as a sacrifice. His relation to humanity would be marred if he would have to die more than once. Similarly, a second comparison seems evident. Beyond death there exists another reality. For man it is the reality of appearing for judgment; for Christ it is the certainty of appearing with deliverance from condemnation unto them that look for him.

Three "appearings" of Christ are noted in this paragraph. Verse 24 states that he now appears in heaven and on our behalf. Verse 26 speaks of His former appearance on earth to bear sin. His next appearing is that future coming when our salvation is brought to its complete realization. (The Greek verbs used for the "appearings" are, however, three different words.) This last appearing is without sin in the sense that He will not need to deal with sin again (Hughes, p. 387).

d. Christ's offering is once-for-all. 10:1-18.

The fourth feature of the New Covenant to be emphasized is Christ's once-for-all offering. The author has frequently stated this feature in the preceding chapters (cf. 7:27; 9:12, 26, 28), but now it becomes the focal point of the discussion.

10:1-4. The truth of Christ's one-time sacrifice is emphasized by means of relief—a distinct contrast with the Mosaic system. The Mosaic system is first described as a shadow and not the very image. This figure was used earlier at 8:5. There, however, the tabernacle itself was described as a shadow of the heavenly tabernacle; here the levitical sacrifices are designated as a shadow of Christ's one-time offering. The two are not of the same essence or image (Gr eikōn); the later sacrifice is the reality of which the former was a mere shadow (cf. Col 2:16-17). The sacrificial system of the Old Testament was planned and ordained of God; and it fulfilled its temporary, imperfect role. Its role, nevertheless, was that of a picture and prophecy of Christ's later, totally efficacious, sacrifice.

The repetitious nature of the Mosaic system serves as another means for highlighting the once-for-all sacrifice of Christ. Those sacrifices had to be offered year by year continually. They served as a reminder that sin needed continued cleansing. If the levitical system had cleansed the Old Testament people, then, according to verse 2, they would have had no more conscience of sins and would have ceased to sacrifice. This must not be misconstrued to suggest that once one has been born again he will have no remembrance or consciousness of sin in his life. What is true is that the Christian knows peace with God (Rom 5:1) and peace from the guilt of sin. He must still deal with daily sin (I Jn 1:6-10). As Dods aptly states: "The sinner once cleansed may, no doubt, be again defiled and experience a renewed consciousness of guilt. But in the writer's view this consciousness is at once absorbed in the consciousness of his original cleansing" (Dods, p. 342). Thus, the guilt of sin is removed for all time for the New Testament saint. For the Old Testament saint that guilt had to be removed yearly.

Yet, one must not imagine that there was no forgiveness possible for the Old Testament sinner. The Scriptures clearly state otherwise (Lev 4:20,26,31,35). What the sinner did lack was a full and final cleansing; he did not know the assurance of permanent forgiveness. As Kent says: "Day of Atonement offerings brought forgiveness 'up to date,' but subsequent sins required further sacrifices and the passing of another year necessitated the cycle to begin again" (p. 185).

5-10. When he cometh into the world. The author sees further proof of the superiority of Christ's one-time sacrifice to the many sacrifices of the levitical system within a prophecy from Psalm 40:6-7. The words of David are used typologically of Christ as a conversation between Himself and the Father. When Christ came (referring to His entire incarnation, rather than

CHAPTER 10

FOR the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect.

2 For then would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins.

3 But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

4 For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me:

6 In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God.

8 Above when he said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin thou wouldst not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law;

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

11 And every priest standeth daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

12 But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God;

13 From henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said before,

16 This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

17 And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

merely His birth) he said, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldst not, but a body hast thou prepared me. The quotation is taken from the Septuagint and, at first sight, appears to fail to express the Hebrew. In Hebrew the last clause reads: "mine ears has thou opened." Though "body" is used here instead of "ears," neither the Septuagint nor the author of Hebrews should be regarded as corrupting or even weakening the meaning of the Hebrew. Rather, they heighten its meaning. And, as Owens suggests, synecdoche is being used, that is, the substitution of a part for the whole. The use of the ears for the body is fitting here, since the context involves the hearing of and obedience to the will of the Father. Ears require the reality of a body (John Owen, Hebrews: The Epistle of Warning, p. 189). God prepared a body for Christ, inasmuch as levitical sacrifices could not ultimately fulfill God's will. His will was to sanctify men through the once-for-all offering of the body of Christ (vs. 10).

11-14. Every priest standeth daily ministering. The levitical priest never finished his work. The symbolism of the tabernacle involves no element that suggests rest or completion. These priests never sat in the tabernacle. They stood and offered the same sacrifices day after day. But after the Son had offered His one sacrifice, He sat down and is now waiting at God's right hand. His work as a priest offering sacrifices is accomplished by His one offering. He now awaits to function as King. Verses 12 and 13 are a quotation of Ps 110:1 (the author's third from that passage; cf. 1:3,13).

Christ's once-for-all sacrifice has perfected for ever them that are sanctified. The use of perfected (Gr teteleiōken) involves the completed cleansing of regeneration (Tit 3:5). This verse (vs. 14) reveals the twofold nature of salvation. The believer possesses a positional, judicial standing of righteousness and, second, a remaining need for practical, progressive holiness. Three factors within this verse make perfected absolute, suggesting the eternal security of the believer. The word itself (Gr teleiōō) involves completion, the bringing of something to its end. Second, the use of the Greek perfect tense suggests that the perfection has been accomplished and its effects are continuing. Third, the modifier, for ever, expresses security for the believer.

The need, however, of a progressive sanctification is expressed by the word sanctified (Gr hagiazomenous). The use of the present participle implies the thought of a sanctification that is continuing, rather than completed. There is an initial, or positional, sanctification involved in regeneration (I Cor 1:2; 6:1). Equally, there is a progressive sanctification by which the Holy Spirit continually maintains and strengthens the holiness imparted in regeneration (Rom 6:19; II Cor 7:1; I Thess 4:3). Finally, there exists for the people of God an ultimate or completed sanctification whereby we will be freed from even the very presence of sin within our lives (I Thess 5:23). Even though the believer's sanctification is still in progress, yet because of Christ's once-for-all sacrifice, he stands eternally secure and perfect because of Christ's righteousness (II Cor 5:21).

15-18. The Holy Ghost also is a witness to us. The Holy Spirit adds His testimony to what Christ has just said. Jeremiah 31:33-34 is quoted again (cf. 8:8-12). The institution of the New Covenant promises the removal of sins. Christ's one-time sacrifice has fulfilled that promise. Their sins . . . will I remember no more. This does not suggest that part of God's omniscience is lacking. Rather, He no longer remembers it against us. Christ has taken our sin upon Himself; thus, the Father will not hold it against us who have turned to Christ's redemption (I Pet 2:24). See J. Brown, An Exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrews, pp. 458-461, for an excellent discussion on the "assurance of faith."

5. The fourth warning passage: Do not turn back. 10:19-39.

In light of Christ's superiority to every aspect of the Old Testament system (its covenant, its tabernacle, its priesthood and sacrifices), the readers are warned not to turn back to the former ways. In this fourth warning (see 2:1-4; 3:7-4:13; 5:11-6:20 for earlier warnings) the critical danger of turning from Christ's once-for-all, perfect sacrifice is emphatically proclaimed. The warning consists of three parts. First, exhortations involving the new access through Christ are pronounced; then the warning is sounded, followed by a second series of exhortations.

a. Exhortations to use the new access. 10:19-25.

19-23. The author begins his practical exhortations on the basis of Christ's priestly work, as the inferential conjunction, therefore, indicates. Before he pronounces the three explicit exhortations of this passage, he restates in summary fashion that which Christ has accomplished for the believer (vss. 19-21). We have direct access into the very holy place of God by means of the blood of Jesus taken within the veil by our priest, Jesus Himself. This access is living; for, unlike the lifeless animal which made the access of the high priest in behalf of the people possible, this access is made possible by the resurrected and living Lamb of God. And the imagery connecting Christ's flesh with the veil is fitting, when we remember that the veil into the earthly sanctuary was rent in two by God, simultaneously with the breaking of Christ's flesh (Mt 27:50-51). Christ's sacrificial death removed the barrier of the veil, making access possible.

Verse 22 contains the first exhortation: Let us draw near. This verb (Gr proserchomai) can simply mean to come to. Yet, in this chapter its meaning is semitechnical and refers to the approach of the worshiper to God, which is a common usage in the Septuagint (Moulton and Milligan, The Vocabulary of the Greek New Testament, p. 547). No doubt, the author is contrasting this use with his usage in verse 1: For the law . . . can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto (Gr proserchomai) perfect. What the law could not do, Christ has now accomplished. Therefore, Let us draw near.

The author next proceeds to tell the readers how they are to approach God. He first uses two prepositions to show the present, subjective qualities that God expects: with a true heart and in full assurance of faith. He then uses two perfect passive participles that manifest the completed, objective work which God has provided: having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water. As the sprinkling of blood and the washing with sacrificial ashes (cf. 9:13-14) ceremonially cleansed those under the old system, so Christ's sacrifice has sprinkled us in regard to our hearts and washed us in regard to our bodies.

The second exhortation is contained in verse 23. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering. This is an exhortation for endurance. First come; now stay. The reason, God is faithful in regard to His promise.

24-25. The third exhortation presents the greatest problems and also has the closest relationship to the warning which follows. The exhortation itself reads: And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works. The word translated provoke (Gr paroxysmos) usually has a negative sense as is witnessed by its only other New Testament usage at Acts 15:39. The bad relationship between Paul and Barnabas occasioned by John Mark is expressed by this word: "And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other . . .". The positive connotation that this word possesses means to stir up, as our present context de-

19 Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,

20 By a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh;

21 And having an high priest over the house of God;

22 Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.

23 Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised;)

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works;

25 Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching.

mands. It is easy to stir up hate and godless deeds; it takes much more to stir up another to love and good works.

Verse 25 continues to develop the exhortation by the use of two participles: Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together and exhorting one another. These two participles seem to function modally, showing that the manner in which one is to consider others is his "stirring up." One is negative; the other is positive. The positive manner involves encouraging (Gr parakaleō) one another. The negative to be avoided concerns forsaking the assembling. One very important reason Christians are to assemble is for reciprocal encouragement, strengthening, and stirring up that they can gain from one another (cf. Col 3:12-16). Without such assembling all this is impossible.

But the author has more than mere erratic attendance in mind. Complete separation from the assembly of the believers is involved. Several elements clearly demonstrate this point. First, the word used in verse 25 is severe (egkatalēpō). It is an intensified form, meaning to leave behind, forsake, abandon, or desert. This is more than just an inconsistency. Second, the close positioning of this action with the warning of no more sacrifice (vs. 26) demands some severe negative action. The use of for in verse 26 indicates that the warning served as the basis for one or more of the preceding exhortations. This third and closest exhortation would certainly be one that related to the warning. Third, the historical situation of these Jewish Christians, which has already been described, involved something severe.

Exactly what is involved in the expression forsaking the assembling may be difficult to state precisely. Arthur Pink, following John Owen's understanding, states that "there is a synecdoche (a part put for the whole) in the word 'assembling,' and it is put for the whole worship of Christ" (p. 607). The assembling of the believers is often an outward indication of the inner condition. If a man's faith will not get him to church, it is doubtful if it will get him to heaven. Further, the importance of assembling is both subjective and objective. It benefits the individual with spiritual stability and growth. It benefits objectively by its positive effect on others. The church meeting is far more than a place for one to be entertained or to hear, for these can be accomplished through radio or television. The purpose for the assembling is for participation in worship and fellowship and with one another. Attendance is necessary. The church is a body interacting (I Cor 12:14-27), not merely a granary for dispensing food. The assembling of the believers is one measure that indicates the condition of the heart. Thus, the author encourages the readers not to desert the assembly.

And so much the more, as ye see the day approaching. For these Jewish readers this day may have involved either the day wherein the Jewish nation would be destroyed (A.D. 70) or the second coming of Jesus. In fact, they may have viewed them as two phases of one event. For us, it involves obedience in the light of Christ's second coming.

Lenski aptly summarizes these three exhortations in the following words: "The first admonition deals with the heart, the second with the mouth (confession), the third with conduct. The first with God, the second with the world, the third with the church" (p. 352).

b. The warning, 10:26-31.

These verses, which pronounce the fourth warning of this epistle, contain no promises or exhortations, but only the severity and meaning of the warning. The contents seem better fitted for topical analysis, rather than strict chronological presentation; and so they will be presented under the following three topics: the nature of the sin, the content of the warning, and the judgment of the sin. Verses 26, 28-29 will aid in describing the sin to which the author is referring.

26 For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins.

27 But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.

28 He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses:

29 Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?

26-29. In verse 26 we read the statement: For if we sin willfully. Westcott notes two distinct elements within this phrase: voluntariness, that is, a realized consciousness of the sin, and the habitual practice of the sin (pp. 327-328). The verbal expression employed in this clause is a circumstantial participle used conditionally inasmuch as that form best fits the context, as was true in several earlier warning passages (2:3; 6:6-8). The participle is in the present tense, implying that the act is habitual, as Westcott noted. The use of the adverb willfully reveals that this sin is deliberate and intentional. This is not a sin of ignorance or weakness; it is by choice.

The nature of this sin fits perfectly with the illustration given in verse 28: He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses. The indefinite pronoun (Gr tis), translated he in our version, indicates that what is to follow applies to every one. Thus, the use of despised (Gr atheteō) for the one who rejects the law of Moses is "plainly not every violator of that Law; since for many of its violations there were expiatory sacrifices" (Brown, p. 471). The author seems to be alluding to a particular rejection of the Law, which is recorded in Deuteronomy 17:2-7. These verses record that upon the evidence of two or three witnesses, death by stoning was the punishment for rejection (Deut 17:5-6). The sin of rejection in this passage is apostasy—going after and serving false gods (Deut 17:2).

On the basis of the description of the sin of apostasy in verse 28, the word willfully in verse 26 could hark back to Numbers 15:22-31. Numbers 15:30-31 easily parallel the situation in Hebrews. Numbers 15:27-31 reads: "And if any soul sin through ignorance, then he shall bring a she goat . . . . And the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly . . . . But the soul that doeth aught presumptuously . . . . that soul shall be cut off from among his people. Because he hath despised the word of the LORD . . . that soul shall utterly be cut off; his iniquity shall be upon him."

When one willingly or defiantly (lit., with a high hand—Heb beyad ramad) disobeyed God, there was no sacrifice for such apostasy. He must die. This is the nature of the sin of Hebrews 10:26.

Verse 29 further pictures this sin as parallel with the apostasy of Numbers 15. This sinner would tread under foot the Son of God, consider his shed blood as unholy, and insult the Spirit of grace. He is equal with the one who would raise his hand in defiance of God. This one despises both the person of Jesus and His ministry as priest. He will not allow the Spirit to work within him. Brown aptly describes the sin of this one: "He treats with the greatest conceivable indignity two divine Persons—the Son and the Spirit of God; he 'tramples under foot' Him whom angels adore; he counts polluted and polluting that which is the sole source of sanctification" (p. 475).

The grammatical forms of verse 29 are very significant. The three particular, defiant sins are expressed by three aorist participles used adjectivally. All three relate to the phrase, shall he be thought worthy. The fact that this sin is described by aorist participles does not suggest that it has already been committed. Aorist participles normally express antecedent, and possibly even simultaneous, time. Since the main verb is in the future tense, the aorist participles can appropriately be translated with the word "would." Verse 29 might fittingly be rendered, "By how much worse punishment do you think he will be deemed worthy who would tread under foot the Son of God, and would reckon the blood of the covenant as common by which he was sanctified, and would insult the Spirit of grace?" The one who would commit such sin would be guilty of apostasy—nothing less.

After expressing the nature of this sin, verses 26-27 describe the twofold nature of the warning. They set forth the negative condition that there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, and the positive prospect of a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation. The one who would commit this sin of apostasy can know no more sacrifice for his sin.

One element that demands our attention at this point concerns the possibility and reality of this sin. Had some born-again believers apostatized and thus been removed from God's saving grace? Is the author implying that one can lose his salvation? Several facts disallow that supposition. First, as has already been stated, the participles in verse 29 by no means imply that some believer has indeed trampled under foot the Son of God, etc. Rather, if one would do this, then certain judgment would fall. The author does not say believers have apostatized, nor does he say they would (Pink, p. 612). Second, the author includes himself in the warning—For if we sin willfully. Surely the author was not on the road to apostasy when he wrote this epistle. He makes that clear in verse 39: But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul. He describes his readers as saved. Even his description of the apostate concerns one who has a genuine knowledge of Christ. Maybe the author includes himself to soften the blow and also at the same time to broaden the scope. All must beware. By placing himself under the warning, as he has done in all of the preceding warnings, he demonstrates that they are for the saved, not the unsaved. Yet, here, as in chapter 6, the author clearly does not say that anyone has committed this sin. He always describes what would happen, not what has happened. He is describing a hypothetical situation. The severe admonition of this warning, and all others in Scripture, is God's means to ensure our perseverance.

The final topic within the warning is the judgment that would be poured out. This judgment occupies the majority of these verses, and its emphasis is upon the severity and certainty of the judgment.

The severity of the judgment is demonstrated in verses 27-29. The author describes it as a certain fearful looking for of judgment. The author's carefully chosen words (Gr tis phobera edochē) suggest an indescribable, terrifying expectation (Brown, p. 469). In verses 28-29 the author uses comparison to describe the degree of its severity. Under the law of Moses, everyone who rejected the law by apostatizing died without pity. In verse 29 the comparison which expresses the severity here is stated: Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the son of God. . . ?

At times some express the idea that God's punishment ought to be milder during this age of grace. They entertain the notion that under law judgment was more severe. This verse should shatter that impression. It harmonizes with what Jesus Christ often taught. The man who has greater revelation will receive greater judgment (Mt 11:20-24); and to whom much is given, much is required (Lk 12:48).

30-31. The certainty of this judgment is expressed in verses 30-31. The author first states that one's knowledge of God ought to strengthen, not weaken, his awareness of God's inevitable judgment. His divine character demands justice and holiness; His divine attributes can perform punishment. To emphasize this certainty, he quotes two statements from Deuteronomy 32:35-36: Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord and The Lord shall judge his people. The most significant fact concerning these two quotations from Deuteronomy involves their historical setting. This was Moses' final warning to the Israelites before he died and they entered the Promised Land. Our author pronounces this same warning of God's certain judgment for his Jewish readers. He then concludes this fourth warning of the epistle by stating, It is a fearful

30 For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people.

31 It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

thing to fall into the hands of the living God. God is still living and active; His judgment is certain and severe. For believers, our God is a God of love and mercy; for the defiant, He is a God to be dreaded and feared.

c. Exhortations to recall former victories. 10:32-39.

The connection between the following exhortations and the warning itself is not as close as it was between the preceding exhortations and warning. The for of verse 26 attests to this. Those exhortations were based upon the warning. Now the author makes two final exhortations and concludes with a note of confidence in his readers.

32 But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions;

33 Partly, whilst ye were made a gazingstock both by reproaches and afflictions; and partly, whilst ye became companions of them that were so used.

34 For ye had compassion of me in my bonds, and took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing in yourselves that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance.

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward.

36 For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise.

37 For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

38 Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

39 But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul.

32-34. The first of these two exhortations enjoins the readers to remember the sufferings they endured shortly after they were saved: call to remembrance. They had been made a gazingstock (Gr theatizō), and they had lost their possessions. They had sympathized and associated with others who had experienced even greater trials. The textual support for the reading of verse 34 as me in my bonds is very weak. The verse probably refers to their companions who were put in bonds or in prison, rather than to an imprisonment of the author. Through all this they had endured with joy and with a knowledge that they possessed something far greater than that which they had lost. They had done it before; they must do it now.

35-38. In the second exhortation the author encourages them to hang on to the boldness they have known: Cast not away therefore your confidence. A just man must live by faith (cf. Hab 2:4; Rom 1:17; Gal 3:11). God will reward that endurance, but the reward cannot come without the perseverance.

39. Verse 39 expresses the author's confidence and assurance concerning the recipients. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul. They had been disillusioned and were indifferent, but, due to their former action, the author expresses confidence, just as he had done in the third warning (6:9-10). Nairne notes: "As in chapter six so here, a severe warning is followed by encouragement based on the remembrance of former faithfulness" (Alexander Nairne, The Epistle of Priesthood, p. 384). The form and content of the warnings of chapters 6 and 10 are so similar that each must be understood in the light of the other.

In both the preceding and the following contexts, the author has spoken of the recipients as true believers. In the former he exhorted his readers to claim and continue in what they possess. All three former exhortations employ the present tense, suggesting a continuation of action. In the following context the author speaks of them as believers who have already severely suffered for Christ. In both he identified himself with his readers (vss. 19 and 39). Therefore, it would be strange if the warning passage between them would not somehow involve these same believers also. The warning is spoken to believers. Yet, the sin described and the judgment pronounced could only involve an unsaved person. Thus, the warning is hypothetical and is designed to stress the severity of sin and the need for perseverance to believers.

II. EXHORTATIONS BASED UPON EXAMPLE.

11:1-13:25.

The first 10 chapters contained exhortation based upon the person and ministry of Christ. In chapters 1-7 He was portrayed as better than the prophets (1:1-3), than the angels (chs. 1-2), than Moses and Joshua (chs. 3-4), and the Levitical priests (chs. 5-7). In chapters 8-10 his ministry was described as better than the old system because of His New Covenant, His heavenly tabernacle, and His once-for-all sacrifice. Starting at chapter 11, the motif shifts from doctrinal themes to practical examples. The exhortations which follow are not so much to teach doctrine as they are from the example and practice of others.

A. Past Triumphs Through Faith. 11:1-40.

The first examples for living which our author sets forth demonstrate faith—the faith needed to please God during Old Testament times. The author has just finished exhorting his readers to patience and faith (10:36-38). He now provides abundant examples. This chapter might rightly be called “The Hall of Faith.” By faith, those under the old system gained approval from God (vs. 2). They all died, not experiencing the fulfillment of God’s promises (vs. 13), never seeing the better, heavenly city (vs. 16). The final testimony concerning these saints is that they all gained approval through their faith, though they did not receive the promises during their lifetime (vs. 39).

11:1-2. Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. Verse 1 is not so much a definition of what faith is as it is a description of what faith does. Two truths concerning its activity are stated here. First, faith provides substance (Gr hypostasis). Precisely what this word means here is difficult to determine. The word hypostasis occurs twenty times in the Septuagint and translates twelve different Hebrew words. It is used five times in the New Testament. Four main connotations must guide us as we determine its usage here. (See Hughes for a comprehensive treatment of this subject, pp. 438-440). The first connotation is that of substance as an essence of something. This is its sense in Hebrews 1:3, where Christ is described as the hypostasis of God, the essence or express image of God. But since faith is not really the substance or essence of something else (if this connotation were to be used), it would have to be construed in a subjective sense as lending substance to. The second connotation is that of substance as the foundation of something. Faith then would be regarded as the foundation upon which hope is built. The third connotation is that of assurance. This concept has the support of all other New Testament usages (3:14; II Cor 9:4; 11:17), except Hebrews 1:3. This concept is simpler; it also is more fitting and parallels the concept of the last half of verse 1. The fourth connotation, that of a guarantee, finds some support from Greek papyri documents. Thus, faith might be looked upon as the “title deed” of things hoped for (Moulton and Milligan, The Vocabulary of the Greek Testament, pp. 659-60). Moulton and Milligan conclude that within all the connotations “there is the same central idea of something that underlies visible conditions and guarantees a future possession” (p. 660). “Assurance” may be the best translation for Hebrews 11:1.

Second, faith provides evidence (Gr elegchos). It is evidence in the sense of proof which results in conviction. Now, the difference between the substance or assurance of the first part of the verse and the evidence or conviction of the last part may seem minimal; but the contrast within the verse focuses upon the qualifying phrases: of things hoped for and of things not seen. The first involves future hopes; the second involves present realities, which are unseen. The first includes the hope of the resurrection, the return of Christ, and the glorification of the saints. The second involves unseen realities, such as the forgiveness of sin through Christ’s sacrifice and the present intercession of Christ in heaven. Hope is faith relating to the future; conviction is faith relating to the present.

CHAPTER 11

NOW faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

2 For by it the elders obtained a good report.

Because of faith, objective reality is not required. Faith is the affirmative response to God's will and Word. Man possesses faith when He takes God at His Word. One does not need to see something to believe it. Faith is the acceptance of something merely because God has said it. ". . . blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed" said Jesus (Jn 20:29). For these Jewish readers (and us as well), faith must involve Jesus; for as the Son of God, He is the Revelation and Redemption for man. Therefore, our author later concludes this treatise on faith with these words: Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith (12:2).

Faith is necessary, for it underlies both our future hopes and present spiritual blessings (vs. 1). It is faith alone that makes the lives of these Old Testament individuals worth noting (vs. 2). In fact, "faith is absolutely necessary if we are to understand even the first pages of Scripture" (Kent, p. 217). Verse 3 begins our study of faith at the right place, not with the history of Moses or Abraham, but with the Creation as revealed in Genesis 1. No man was present to witness the Creation; it must be accepted by faith.

3. Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God. The word translated worlds (Gr aionas) refers to "the vast eons of time and all that fills them" (Kent, p. 218). Though the word has mainly a temporal idea, it involves the physical world that is united with time. God is the framer of time and space. His word (Gr rhēma) was the creative fiat; He spoke, and it came into being. He created ex nihilo, "out of nothing," so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear. The book of Genesis explains the events of this creation, and that explanation must be accepted through faith.

2. Prepatriarchal examples. 11:4-7.

4. By faith Abel. The author begins his cavalcade of the faithful by focusing upon the first man in the biblical record to demonstrate faith. Abel's faith was demonstrated in that he offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain. In what way was his sacrifice better? Was it because his was animal and Cain's vegetable? or his a firstling and Cain's not the first-fruit? or his with blood and Cain's without? Genesis 4:1-15 helps us understand our text. Genesis states that God ". . . had respect unto Abel and to his offering," and that God did not receive ". . . Cain and . . . his offering" (Gen 4:4-5). In other words, it was not the offering that made one acceptable and the other unacceptable, since God accepted both grain and animal offerings according to their purposes. But it was the character of the person that made one offering acceptable and the other not. Both Hebrews and Genesis stress that point. In Hebrews it is witnessed that Abel offered By faith; obviously Cain did not. Genesis records that even before the rejection of his offering Cain's heart was not right with God (Gen 4:7). God's acceptance of Abel's offering was a witness that he was righteous (cf. Mt 23:35). He being dead yet speaketh. This statement may suggest an allusion to Abel's blood speaking from the ground (Gen 4:10); more likely, Abel's testimony of faith, given so long ago, still speaks to us.

5-6. The second example of a pre-Jewish saint is Enoch. Genesis 5:21-24 briefly records the life of this saint. By faith he was translated, never experiencing death, because he pleased God. The verb pleased (Gr euarestēō) is the Septuagint rendering of the Hebrew phrase "to walk with." Enoch pleased God in that he walked with God. Thus, our author concludes that without faith it is impossible to please God. One cannot please God without walking in the light of truth and in righteousness before God (cf. I Jn 1:5-7).

7. By faith Noah. Noah was asked by God to do things in

3 Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.

4 By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh.

5 By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith Noah, being warned of God

HEBREWS 11:8

of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.

8 By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him faithful who had promised.

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead, so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable.

13 These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

14 For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country.

15 And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city.

17 By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises offered up his only begotten son.

18 Of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called:

19 Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from faith which were incongruous with what he had formerly experienced. He had never seen rain (Gen 2:5), and yet God told him to build an ark because of a coming flood (Gen 6:13-17). By the which he condemned the world. The word which allows either faith or ark as its antecedent. The better idea is that in sharp contrast to the godlessness of the world, Noah's faith condemned it (cf. Gen 6:5-12).

3. Patriarchal examples. 11:8-22.

8. By faith Abraham. Extended portions of this chapter are allotted for the faith of the two prominent Old Testament fathers—Abraham and Moses. The first recorded incident involving Abraham's faith was when he left Ur of the Chaldees (Gen 11:31; 12:1). That act involved great faith, for he left family and friends to go to a place he had never seen, not knowing what it was like or how to get there. He went merely because God had told him to go, and he obeyed. Likewise, at times God asks us to take a step of faith to leave home for school, to leave friends in order to serve Him somewhere else, or to leave our country to serve in another.

9-10. By faith he sojourned. Yet, even after Abraham received the promise of this land, he never possessed it. The only property he owned in Canaan was the burial plot at Machpelah (Gen 23:1-20). The verb sojourned (Gr paroikeō) means to migrate. He was a transient. An interesting contrast is found in the verb dwelling (Gr katoikeō), which means to dwell permanently or to settle down. The only thing permanent about Abraham's dwelling was that he always lived in a tent. Still, he continued to look for a city that God would build (cf. 12:22; Ps 87; Rev 21). By faith, he expected that city; so he never returned to Ur, not even to Haran.

11-12. Sarah's faith in the birth of Isaac may seem out of place here. When she first heard the announcement she laughed in unbelief (Gen 18:10-15). Still, she did have faith and cooperated in carrying out God's promise. This necessitated considerable faith, for she was a woman who had been barren all her life; and she was now ninety years old. God's promise came to pass, and he who was as good as dead became the father of a great nation. The whole Jewish nation is the product of a miracle birth. The Messiah, of whom Isaac was a type, would also be the product of a miraculous birth (Isa 7:14; Mt 1:18-25). More than anyone else, a Jew ought to be able to accept the supernatural birth of Jesus; for he himself is the result of Isaac's miraculous birth.

13-16. These all died in faith is obviously a summary of only verses 8-12, for these refers to the patriarch and his seed who had received the promises but never possessed the land. Enoch is no contradiction to this statement since he was not one of these who were pilgrims. These had enough faith to recognize the promises of God from afar off.

17-19. The point of these verses is that Abraham, after he had finally received the son of God's promise, now when he was tried, offered up Isaac (cf. Gen 22:1-19). This was his only begotten son (Gr monogenē) which must be understood as his unique or one-of-a-kind son. Abraham had other sons, but Isaac was the miraculous son through whom God would fulfill His promises (cf. Abraham's other unique descendant, Jn 3:16).

whence also he received him in a figure.

20 By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph; and worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff.

22 By faith Joseph, when he died, made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones.

23 By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment.

24 By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter;

25 Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;

26 Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward.

27 By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible.

28 Through faith he kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the firstborn should touch them.

29 By faith they passed through the Red sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.

30 By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.

31 By faith the harlot Rahab perished not with them that believed not, when she had received the spies with peace.

By this time in life Abraham's faith was so strong that he could believe that God would raise Isaac from the dead, though he had never seen such a miracle. He totally trusted God to do all things well. From whence also he received him in a figure. Though Abraham was stopped before the actual slaying of his son, Isaac was as good as dead; here he serves as a parable (Gr parabolē) of a literal resurrection. This incident prefigured the resurrection of Abraham's ultimate Seed, Jesus Christ.

20-22. The author briefly expresses the faith of the other patriarchs. By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau. Even though these events of the Book of Genesis 27:1-28:5 seem to involve deceit rather than faith, Isaac's part was in faith in that He was accomplishing God's will. Likewise, Jacob's blessing of both sons of Joseph involved faith, for it also involved the carrying out of God's promise. The choice of these particular events from the lives of Isaac and Jacob to serve as the one demonstration of this faith surely demonstrates the intimacy between faith and God's will and Word. Yet, even more amazing is the accompanying statement that Jacob did this leaning upon the top of his staff. The reason for this statement probably lies in the fact that nothing depicted Jacob's dedication and faith more dramatically than his staff. Evidently, Jacob's life of surrender and faith began the night he wrestled with the Lord at Peniel (Gen 32:24-32). God permanently put Jacob's thigh out of joint that night as a reminder of their encounter. Jacob's staff was a daily reminder of God's promises, and his life of faith was best symbolized by his staff.

Similarly, Joseph's faith is also united with the promise God made with the patriarchs. For though he spent most of his life in Egypt, Joseph gave commandment concerning his bones that they should be carried back to the Promised Land.

4. Examples from Moses and at Jericho. 11:23-31.

23-26. By faith Moses . . . was hid. This of course is not the faith of Moses, but that faith which was exercised by his parents at his birth (Ex 2:1-10). How much his parents understood concerning the imminent completion of Israel's four hundred years in Egyptian bondage (see Gen 15:13) or the part Moses would play in Israel's deliverance is impossible to imagine. Yet, somehow, through faith they responded to God's leading.

By faith Moses made his break with the world and was willing to suffer with the people of God (the same thing our author is anxious to see his readers do). Moses knew that the pleasure of sin lasts only for a season, and he reckoned the reproach of Christ greater than the treasures of Egypt. Moses did know of the coming Messiah (Deut 18:15) and was willing to bear reproach on His behalf.

27-29. By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king. Moses left Egypt twice, first for Midia, and forty years later at the Exodus. His first departure was a hasty flight because of his fear. Forty years later he had learned to walk by faith and did not fear the entire Egyptian nation. The second departure must be understood as the correct one, even though it puts the next event of faith out of order. By faith, Moses kept the passover, which is mentioned in verse 28 before his departure spoken of in verse 27.

The last example of Moses' faith demonstrates that faith is not a daring leap in the dark. Faith is man's response to God's command. Thus, by faith Israel passed through the Red Sea; but when the Egyptians mustered enough audacity to try it, they were drowned.

30-31. By faith the walls of Jericho fell. Surely, neither the marching nor the trumpets brought the walls down. Likewise, a doubting heart would cause one to stop such marching long before the seventh day. But by faith they persisted in obedience to God's command. Similarly, within the city, faith also deliv-

32 And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gēd'e-on, and of Bâ'arak, and of Samson, and of Jēph'tha-ē: of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets:

33 Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions,

34 Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

35 Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection:

36 And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, more-over of bonds and imprisonment:

37 They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented;

38 (Of whom the world was not worthy:) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth.

39 And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise:

40 God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect.

CHAPTER 12

WHEREFORE seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, ered the life of Rahab, the harlot. And though Rahab's faith delivered her, it was her works, James says, that demonstrated her to be righteous (justified her). Although her epithet as a harlot lingered, her life changed (Jas 2:25).

5. Examples from the judges, kings, and prophets. 11:32-38.

32-38. And what shall I more say? The author wants to go on, but time constrains him. So many more deserve recognition. Verses 33-38 list mighty deeds of faith done by those of biblical history. Surely David is an example of one who subdued kingdoms (II Sam 8:1-14) and wrought righteousness, in that he "... executed judgment and justice unto all his people" (II Sam 8:15). Daniel stopped the mouths of lions (Dan 6:16-23), although in a lesser sense so did Samson (Jud 14:5-6) and David (I Sam 17:34-36). Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego Quenched the violence of fire (Dan 3:19-30). Zechariah, the son of Jehoiada, was stoned (II Chr 24:20-22); according to tradition Isaiah was sawn asunder. These are but a few examples of those who endured because of faith.

6. The conclusion. 11:39-40.

39-40. The important thing is that these all persisted in their faith even though they received not the promise. Genuine faith persists unto the end; emotional decisions do not. True faith continues to believe the truth. Once again, the author shows the superiority of the New Covenant. God saved this better thing, or fulfillment of the promise, for this age. In fact, without those of the New Covenant, even the mightiest champion of faith in the Old Testament could not be made perfect.

B. Exhortation to Perseverance and Holiness. 12:1-29.

Chapter 12, probably more than any other, sets forth the practical aspect of this book of exhortation (cf. 13:22). Prior to chapter 11, the primary emphasis was doctrinal, with a lesser place given to exhortation. Chapter 11 began the practical section of the book by parading many Old Testament examples of faith and patience. Now chapter 12, building upon those examples, begins the extensive exhortations of this epistle. Chapter 13 also contains many exhortations, but they are general admonitions which are not directly based upon the thought developed in the earlier chapters.

1. The supreme example of endurance. 12:1-4.

12:1. Wherefore . . . let us run expresses the exhortation and, hence, the main idea of verse 1. The exhortation finds its ground, or basis, within the examples of the champions mentioned in chapter 11. These heroes of the faith are like a cloud of witnesses. These witnesses (Gr martyrōn) could easily be imagined as spectators (Gr theatai) or as martyrs; yet this Greek word should be understood as referring simply to those who testify. During the terrible days of martyrdom following the New Testament era, this word became the common term for identifying those who testified through their death. In our verse these witnesses testified to the need for a persistent faith through their lives. These saints may also be spectators, and some were surely martyrs; yet the emphasis of this verse (in harmony with the choice of martyrōn) is upon the witness their lives demonstrated.

We also need to run as they. The author is emphatic about this point. What they have done, we must do. Let us run. Whereas the Christian's position involves a sitting in the heavens with Christ (Eph 2:6) and his conduct is as a walk (Eph 4:1,17; 5:2,15), his activity or service is described as the running of a race (12:1; I Cor 9:24-27). Let us run is the only cohortative or hortatory form in the Greek text. Let us lay aside every weight is an aorist participle used circumstantially, probably telling us how we are to run—by laying aside every weight. The participle may also be attendant and so translated like the main verb, as in our translation; but nevertheless, it is subordinate to the main idea of let us run. We are to run by laying aside every weight and the sin which does beset us. The weight (Gr ogkos—used only here) refers to that which impedes or burdens by weighing one down. For a runner it could either refer to clothing or his own excessive body weight (Hughes, pp. 519-520). Obviously, for the Christian it would involve not wicked but weighty things. It would include anything that could hinder his effectiveness for service. These are not things which are inherently wrong, but for the diligent runner or the faithful Christian they are an impediment that must be removed. The Christian is not allowed to be selective regarding these weights; he will remove them. He must put off every weight. Whatever does not aid in the race is a weight and must be cast aside.

The second thing which must be put off is of itself morally wrong, for it is sin. The adjective that describes this sin is difficult to interpret; it is found nowhere else in the New Testament. It is translated easily beset or "easily entangles" (NASB and NIV). Kent believes that this does not refer "to some specific sin, but to the peculiar character of all sin as continually surrounding men and so easily getting hold of them" (p. 258). Truly this is the nature of all sin; yet, the use of the Greek article would certainly support the notion that individual sins are in mind. This probably does not refer to some universal sin. Yet, it may refer to one sin above all others that defeats one's Christian life. This may be a different sin for each Christian. For one person it may be sensual lust; for another it may be money, greed, gossip, or lying. That sin must be put off in order to run the race which God has placed before us.

The casting off of every weight and the entangling sin refer to what one must do before he can seriously run the race. The use of the aorist participle also supports that understanding; they might even have been translated "having put off every weight . . ." Now, after the race has begun, we are encouraged to run with patience (Gr hypomonēs). Since patience is not an attribute commonly associated with running, this word would be better translated as endurance. Endurance is a quality that every distance runner must develop. It is amazing that this translation was not used since the cognate verb used in verses 2-3 is translated endured. Endurance and persistence have been upon the mind of the author since the end of chapter 10 (cf. 10:32, 36-38; 11:13). We must run with endurance, for a race has no rest stops; it knows no vacations.

2 Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

2. Just as verse 1 establishes some qualities for the entrance and actual running of the race, so verse 2 directs our eyes to the finish line. Looking (Gr aphoraō) is an uncommon word that literally means to look away or to fix one's eyes, and so to gaze. Our gaze or attention is to be focused upon Jesus the author and finisher of our faith. He is our pioneer and perfecter (Hughes, p. 522). He has "blazed the trail for us and has completed the course" (Kent, p. 258). Though chapter 11 has provided us with many champions to emulate, the supreme example of endurance is Jesus Himself. So the Christian is to run the course that has been placed before him with endurance,

3 For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.

5 And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him:

6 For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 If ye endure chastening, God deal-eth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?

8 But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

9 Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits, and live?

10 For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11 Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

12 Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees;

13 And make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed.

as Christ endured the cross for the joy that was set before him. The usual translation of the preposition for (Gr anti) is instead of. Thus, some (e.g., Goodspeed, Delitzsch) would understand this to say that Christ took the difficult course, rather than the course that led directly to joy, an idea parallel to Philippians 2:6-8. However, the context favors the less common idea, for the sake of. As Jesus fixed His gaze upon the joy which lay at the end of the course, so we must fix our gaze upon Jesus; for as the finisher of our faith, He is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

3-4. For consider him. Jesus provides a far better example of persistent endurance than any Old Testament saint, and He is a better example of endurance than the readers are. They had been mocked and afflicted (10:32-34), but they had not paid with their lives for their opposition to sin. If they had, and if we would look to Christ's example instead of looking at our own afflictions, we would not become so weary or fainthearted. Are you unhappy over your sacrifice? Take a new look at His!

2. The example of fatherly discipline. 12:5-13.

5-8. Several concepts unite this section with the preceding—endurance, affliction, and fainting. In the preceding context they were told to endure the opposition of sinners and not faint. Now they are told to endure the chastening of God and not faint (vss. 5,7), for the former may be the means to the latter. God may be using the opposition of sinners to accomplish His good work within the believer. Ye have forgotten. They had forgotten God's earlier exhortation of Proverbs 3:11-12. The afflictions of life are for our good, so we must endure them whether it is God scourging (Gr mastigoō, flogging with a whip) or the world persecuting (Jas 1:2-12). Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth. God's principle of disciplining His own people is completely congruous with human practices. This quotation from Proverbs 3:12 stating God's practice, corresponds to the commands God gave in Proverbs to fathers. "He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes (promptly)" (Prov 13:24; cf. 22:15; 23:13). Love and corporal punishment are not incongruous; they are two complementary and necessary aspects of training. Indeed, if ye be without chastisement, then you are not a true son. Somehow, this one got among the sons, but he was not one. God's discipline is universal, whereof all are partakers. Every father who loves his son disciplines him; and, likewise, it is true that the father does not discipline the boys of the neighborhood. They understand that they are not sons.

9-11. Fathers of our flesh. Our physical fathers have corrected us and we have called them blessed. Should not the Father of spirits, our spiritual Father, receive like reverence when He disciplines us? Our earthly fathers corrected us after their own pleasure. Sometimes they were severe, other times mild. Sometimes they showed favoritism; sometimes they were concerned only for their own interest. But our heavenly Father always corrects us for our profit (Gen 50:20; Ps 119:71; Rom 8:28), that we might share in his holiness. The persistent endurance which God desires of His people is not to weaken but to strengthen them. It is to produce maturity and holiness (Rom 5:3-5; II Pet 1:4-8). When passing through affliction, one must also remember that it is brief. With our human fathers it was for a few days, and with God there is an afterward during which the benefit of our training is enjoyed.

12-13. Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees. The inferential conjunction, Wherefore, suggests that the following exhortations develop logically from the preceding statements. Verses 12-13 revert to the athletic figure of speech. The description of weakened hands and feeble (Gr paralyō), even disabled, knees depicts those who were too weak or weary to run with endurance the course which lay before them. The verb lift up (Gr anorthōō) literally means to straighten up, as with the crippled woman who was healed (Lk 13:13) and once more stood erect. Likewise, some of the runners of verse 1 have grown so weary that they have become stooped and need the spiritual strength to be straightened up again. A cognate of this verb is used in verse 13 for making the paths straight (Gr orthos). The path must be simple for those who are weak. This is not to suggest that we must make the Christian life easy or compromise its principles. It is the weak one who is commanded to keep his path straight: You make straight paths for your feet. He must keep the obstacles which would trip him up spiritually out of his path. Lest that which is lame be turned out of the way has two possible interpretations. Bruce believes that turned out of the way (Gr ektrapē) possesses its medical connotation of to put out of joint in this context, for it next exhorts them to be healed. Thus, "dislocation and not deviation" would be implied (Bruce, p. 363). Hughes is equally convinced that the connotation is "to turn aside," for this is its usage in all other New Testament locations (I Tim 1:6; 5:15; II Tim 4:4). And since the concept of apostasy is involved in each of those texts (except I Tim 6:20), this ought to be its usage here, inasmuch as apostasy has been prominent in the thought of the author of Hebrews (Hughes, p. 535).

3. Exhortation to holiness. 12:14-17.

14. The athletic motif is now dropped. Likewise, the primary exhortation is no longer one of endurance, but that of holiness. Follow peace . . . and holiness. To follow (Gr diōkō) more precisely means to pursue. This is not a passive role that one just lets happen; it is an active concept that one must strive for. They must pray for a life of peace with both other believers and the world (I Tim 2:1-2); they must labor for it, too (Ps 34:14; Rom 12:18). Yet this must not be peace at any cost. We are to strive for peace and holiness, for without holiness no man can see the Lord. This holiness has been imputed through Christ to those who have made Him their Saviour and Lord (10:10-14; II Cor 5:21; I Pet 2:24). Man's righteous acts can never attain to this holiness (Isa 64:6; Mt 5:20). Without which must not be construed as meaning that without peace no one will see the Lord, or even to mean without peace and holiness. The relative pronoun, which, is singular and in the masculine gender. Thus, being singular it cannot refer to both and must refer to the noun, which is masculine. Holiness is masculine; peace is not.

Holiness, like faith, is a crucial element in the Christian's life. Without the former one cannot see God; without the latter one cannot please God (11:6). At salvation, God changes man's spiritual nature. Before salvation we are free from righteousness (holiness) and slavery to sin (Rom 6:17,20). At salvation we become free from sin and a slave to holiness (Rom 6:18). This radical change should become apparent shortly after salvation, for one is not and cannot be a slave to two masters. Even a spy who appears to serve two masters serves only one. Even if he is a double agent, he has one true master.

15-17. The author continues this exhortation with a series of subordinate admonitions. Looking diligently. With this participle the author cautions his readers in four areas. First, he cautions lest anyone fail of the grace of God. He reminds them that some of them may have entered into close contact with Christians, but might stop short of salvation itself and so fail to experience the grace of God. Second, he cautions lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you. Probably the Old Testament source to which our author is alluding is Deuteronomy 29:18: "Lest there should be among you man, or woman . . . whose heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations; lest there should be

14 Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord:

15 Looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled;

16 Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright.

17 For ye know how that afterward, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.

among you a root that beareth gall and wormwood.” This one who possesses the root of bitterness is, also like the first, one who continues among the believers but was never born again. He is like a root. At first his bitterness is hidden; but when it is discovered, its noxious roots have spread and it springs up as something much bigger and more destructive. Beware! Live peacefully, but require holiness to govern your life and the life of the church.

The third and fourth cautions are located in verse 16. The third briefly warns against the unholy practice of fornication. The fourth occupies the remainder of verses 16-17. Beware of the profane person. This profanity (Gr bebēlos) involves far more than one’s speech. It is a quality of one’s life. The author sees that quality exemplified within Esau, even though Esau was not a vile man. In fact, he was less of a crook than his brother Jacob. The author accurately focuses upon the one area that revealed Esau as profane—the selling of his birthright. To profane is to regard something as unhallowed, to make something sacred to be common. Esau took that which God considered sacred and made it common. Being so totally concerned with his temporary and material needs, he gave them priority over his rights as the first-born son and his responsibilities as heir to the blessing of the Abrahamic covenant (Gen 25:29-34). Every Christian must beware lest he count as unimportant what God considers sacred. The result in Esau’s life was that afterward, when he wanted that blessing, he was rejected. He repented with tears, but the situation was irrevocable.

4. The fifth warning: Do not refuse warning from heaven.
12:18-29.

This is the fifth and final warning passage of Hebrews. Within each of these passages a particular area of danger is revealed. This fifth warning is similar to the second (3:7-4:13). Likewise, there is a parallel between the third (5:11-6:20) and the fourth (10:19-39). But, whereas the parallelism of numbers three and four involved teaching or doctrine, the parallel between two and five concerns form. Both the second and fifth warnings begin by exhibiting Israel’s failures and disobedience while journeying to the Promised Land of Canaan. In the second Israel’s sin was unbelief concerning God’s promise to care for them; in the fifth their sin is the refusal to hear God’s warning at Sinai.

18-21. For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched. The author describes the day at Sinai when God spoke to the whole congregation of Israel (Ex 19:9-25; 20:18-21; Deut 4:10-24). Though our author depicts it as a physical mountain that could be touched, on that day (ironically) they were not allowed to touch it as the author later stresses. Normally, God spoke only to Moses; but on this one day God spoke to all. When God spoke, His presence was accompanied with fire . . . blackness . . . darkness and tempest. God’s purpose for that day is expressly recorded in the Old Testament: “. . . I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth . . .” (Deut 4:10; cf. Ex 20:20). God was warning them from heaven with an awesome demonstration in order that they might fear and obey Him.

They that heard entreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more. The word they requested not to hear did not involve the Ten Commandments; but, as verse 20 demonstrates, it was the command that not so much as a beast touch the mountain. God had been very severe in His restrictions regarding even the slightest touching of Mount Sinai (Ex 20:18-21). If even a beast should touch the mountain, they were forbidden to touch the beast, but must rather immediately stone it or shoot it with an arrow. Such stringent regulations did not produce a proper, positive response in the hearts of the Israelites. Rather, they entreated God to call the whole thing

18 For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

20 (For they could not endure that which was commanded, And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

21 And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake:)

off; and instead, they spoke to Moses privately. The verb (Gr paraiteomai) could also be translated to require or to beg. More significantly, it can also mean to refuse, which is its translation only several verses later: See that ye refuse not him that speaketh (vs. 25). Since this whole warning involves the drawing of a comparison between then and now, the author's use of this verb for both parties should suggest approximately the same idea for both uses of the verb. At Sinai the Israelites refused to hear God's awesome voice from heaven; now we must not do the same. They preferred that He did not speak (cf. Ex 20:19); they rejected His voice of warning from heaven. Truly, the presence of our holy God is awesome, as Moses himself testifies (vs. 21). Since no Old Testament passage explicitly expresses Moses' fear, the author may be inferring it from Exodus 19:16 by including Moses among the congregation.

22-24. But ye are come unto Mount Zion. How much better the relationship between God and His people is under the New Covenant. We have come unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem. This city is not part of the Old Covenant, nor even of this present earth. It is that city for which Abraham looked, but never saw (11:16); it is the one called the New Jerusalem (Rev 21:2). We have an inheritance in this city wherein God Himself will live (Rev 21:22-23).

Several groups of inhabitants are identified within these verses. First, there is an innumerable company of angels. The next phrase, to the general assembly, is ambiguous. This word (Gr panēgyris), which is used nowhere else in the New Testament, refers to a festal assembly, as at one of the Jewish feasts. This certainly does not refer to a second group of inhabitants; but whether it refers to the angels or has reference to the church is difficult to ascertain. Kent prefers to regard this assembly as a festal gathering of angels. "This is somewhat similar to the presence of angels at Sinai . . . , although here the emphasis is on festive celebration rather than awesome majesty" (Kent, p. 273).

The second group of inhabitants is described as the church of the firstborn. Obviously, the word church (Gr ekklēsia) suggests that they are the saints of the church age; but it may refer only to the living saints since these have their names enrolled in heaven, suggesting that they are still upon the earth. We are described as the church of the firstborn because of our privileged position with Christ "the first-born" (Col 1:15,18). A third group involves the spirits of just men made perfect. Since they are spirits, they are those who have died but have not yet been resurrected. Since they are just men made perfect, certainly they refer to the Old Testament saints who could not be made perfect before Christ's time (11:40); but now, they have been made perfect through His one sacrifice (10:14; Bruce, p. 378).

This heavenly Jerusalem is also the abode of God, the Judge of all, and of Jesus the mediator of the new covenant (cf. Rev 21:22-23). It is the shedding of His blood in the New Covenant that makes this assembly possible. That speaketh better things than that of Abel. Abel's blood, being the first blood shed by another man, speaks from the earth, crying for vengeance (Gen 4:10). Christ's blood, which alone has been shed for His brothers, speaks better things; for it speaks of blessing instead of cursing. "Abel's blood cried out for judgment; but Christ's blood cries out for mercy and pardon" (Hughes, p. 552).

25-27. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. Verse 25 contains the heart of this warning. The danger lies in refusing to hear the warning of Him who speaks from heaven; for if those at Mount Sinai did not escape God's wrath, much more shall not we escape. One may escape God's warnings now, but God will not be escaped then.

Exodus 19:18 tells us that God's voice then shook the earth. Haggai 2:6 states that God will again shake both earth and

22 But ye are come unto mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels,

23 To the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect,

24 And to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.

25 See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven:

26 Whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven.

27 And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.

28 Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear:

29 For our God is a consuming fire.

heaven. This shaking will occur only once more; so this probably refers to the occasion of Christ's second coming. Most likely this is not a metaphorical shaking, referring to political or social upheavals; rather, it is physical. The shaking at Sinai was physical; and since this is God's final shaking of heaven and earth, it relates well to the physical calamity at Christ's second coming, prophesied by Old and New Testaments (Joel 3:14-16; Isa 34:1-8; Mt 24:27-30; Rev 16:16-21). Further, the author says that it is the things which are made, the physical things, that will be shaken.

28-29. Let us have grace. We who are of God's kingdom, which cannot be shaken, are exhorted to have grace (Gr echomen charin). This phrase might more meaningfully be translated, "Let us be grateful." "As ingratitude lies at the very root of all sin and rebellion against God (Rom 1:21), so gratitude is the pulsating heartbeat of every positive response to the gospel, gratitude which spontaneously bursts forth in the apostle's exclamation: 'Thanks be to God for his inexpressible gift!'" (Hughes, p. 559). Our service for God involves love and gratitude, but also reverence and godly fear; for our God is a consuming fire. Inasmuch as our author quotes Deuteronomy 4:24 and identifies the Old Testament "God of fear" (the epithet given by some) as our God, we ought to worship Him with love and godly fear.

C. General Admonitions for Service. 13:1-25.

This final chapter is a composite of admonitions which covers a wide range of topics. The author has finished the main thrust of the epistle. In chapter 13 he focuses upon the particular needs and problems of those to whom he is writing. These admonitions cluster around the basic topics of love, leadership, and last words.

1. Involving love. 13:1-6.

The author's admonitions involving love contain cautions against selfishness in regard to people (vss. 1-3), lust in physical love, (vs. 4), and greed for things (vss. 5-6).

13:1-3. Let brotherly love continue. This exhortation applies to all of God's people and must be proclaimed constantly (Rom 12:10; I Thess 4:9; I Pet 1:22; II Pet 1:7). One incentive for showing such love and hospitality is that some have entertained angels unawares. For example, Abraham (Gen 18:1-3) and Lot (Gen 19:1-2) were unaware that their guests were angels at the time they received them. Care must be taken so as not to read too much into this statement. The verse says that some have entertained (aorist tense). The use of the present tense, meaning that some do entertain angels, would provide grounds for expecting this will still happen. This is not correct teaching. Nevertheless, we should show hospitality to the needy; for indeed, it will benefit us as well as them, when it is done in the name of the Lord and as to the Lord (cf. Mt 25:35-40).

Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them. These Jewish believers had gone through severe persecution (10:32-34) and had possessed a camaraderie, rallying to the needs of others (10:33). Now they have begun to grow indifferent to those who suffered and may even have avoided them, trying to escape such suffering themselves. They must remember to help their fellows, for they are in the body. This should not be construed to mean that they are in the body of Christ, since the Greek article is missing and simply says, "in body." The point our author is making is that his readers need to be concerned about those who are suffering; for since they possess the same physical body as others, it could happen just as easily to them.

4. Marriage is honorable in all. The author now turns to some problems regarding physical love. To determine the full

CHAPTER 13

LET brotherly love continue.

2 Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares.

3 Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body.

4 Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled; but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.

5 Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.

6 So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.

7 Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation.

8 Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever.

9 Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines. For it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace; not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein.

intent of this verse, one grammatical point must be resolved. In the Greek clause, the verb is omitted and must be supplied by the reader, as is common in both Hebrew and Greek. One may supply an indicative verb, marriage is, and make it a declarative sentence (KJV). Or one may supply a subjunctive verb, "let marriage be," and make it an exhortation (NASB). The latter seems preferable since the context is hortatorical and the author is bringing up a new subject for exhortation. Also, if the first half is exhortation, the second half of the verse fits better. Thus, this is a command to purity, rather than a declaration against the ascetic teaching which regarded the marriage relation itself as unwholesome. Ascetic teaching was a problem at this time (cf. I Tim 4:3). But this does not seem to be the intent of our author. Marriage is honorable and the marriage bed undefiled. It must be kept that way. But (Gr gar) could better be translated for. Keep marriage relationships, for God will judge those who do not. The whoremongers (Gr  pornos) are the fornicators, that is, those who indulge in sexual relationships, heterosexual and homosexual, outside of marriage bonds. The adulterers are those who are unfaithful to their marriage vows.

5-6. Let your conversation be without covetousness. The problem touched upon here is the love of things—greed. The phrase without covetousness is one word (Gr aphilargyros) literally means without money-love. The admonition is to be content with such things as ye have. These Jewish Christians to whom this epistle was written had been spoiled financially by their persecutors, and they had accepted it joyfully at first (10:34). But, as is often true, it grew more difficult to live with the condition as it continued. The author then bases his admonition to contentment upon two Old Testament promises. The first is positional in concept: for . . . I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. This is God's encouraging promise to Joshua, recorded in Deuteronomy 31:6 and 8 (cf. also I Chr 28:20). The second promise is provisional: The Lord is my helper (Ps 118:6). God's presence and provision will produce contentment. When trust is placed in money, it will only produce covetousness and contention (cf. I Tim 6:9-10).

2. Involving leaders and living. 13:7-17.

7-9. Remember them which have the rule over you. Time often brings changes, and apparently these Jewish Christians falsely believed that things had now changed from when they first believed. In light of such possible changes, several admonitions regarding their leaders and their own lives are necessary. First, they must remember their spiritual fathers. These first leaders had probably died already, considering the use of the word end (Gr ekbasis), which suggests the end and outcome of one's life. The word remember and the reference to the present leaders in verse 17 further support this interpretation. These Christians are to remember the godly character of these fathers, for such character gives credence to one's message. They are to follow (Gr mimomai) or imitate, not merely the men, but their faith. Second, they must understand that the program and person of Jesus Christ have not changed from when they first believed. He is the same yesterday, and today, and for ever. Third, they must not be carried about with divers and strange doctrines. They must rather mature in the grace which they received when they first believed. The reference to seeking spiritual profit from meats would suggest that some of these Jewish Christians were being tempted to return to the ritual of the Jewish system. Meat was a vital element of Jewish ritual, for it was that which established the greatest barrier between Jew and Gentile. The distinction of what was clean or unclean for eating was largely based upon that which was clean or unclean upon the altar. Thus, for a Jew to eat any or all meats meant that he was implicitly setting aside the distinction of clean and un-

10 We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle.

11 For the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest for sin, are burned without the camp.

12 Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.

13 Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing his reproach.

14 For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come.

15 By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name.

16 But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.

17 Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief: for that is unprofitable for you.

clean sacrificial meats (Owen, p. 274); and for a Jew to return to a doctrine involving clean and unclean meats was a tacit return to the Jewish sacrificial system (cf. 9:9-10; Acts 10:9-16,28; 11:1-13; I Cor 8:8; Col 2:16-17).

10-14. We have an altar. The precise meaning of we is significant. Does the author mean “we Christians” or “we Jews”? If he is referring to Christians, then our altar should be understood either as the cross, which was the place where Christ was crucified, or as Christ, the sacrifice itself. If this interpretation is true, then the Jewish priesthood would have no part in that altar (vs. 10) and verse 11 would explain why that was so. For example, verse 11 might state that because they have not partaken of Christ they have no right. But verse 11 does not state any such thought. Therefore, it is much easier to understand the we as Jews. The argument, then, would be, that there were times within the Jewish ritual when even the priests could not eat of the sacrifice. One such time was the Day of Atonement, when the priest took the blood of a goat and sprinkled it upon the ark in the Holy of Holies. However, the flesh would be taken outside the camp and burned (Lev 16:27; for other sin offerings which were burned rather than eaten see Lev 4:3-21). Verse 11 does fit with this view, for it expresses the very thing that was just explained—the events on the Day of Atonement.

Wherefore Jesus also. Jesus is presented as the fulfillment of that picture. He suffered outside the gate upon Golgotha. The Gospels do not place stress upon the fact that Golgotha lay outside the city; but each does imply this fact, and John is sufficiently clear: “. . . the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city . . .” (Jn 19:20). Let us go . . . without the camp. The admonition is clear. As our sin offering, Christ has been separated from the Jewish camp. Those who have turned to Him for redemption must also join Him outside the camp. “Jesus had been rejected by Judaism, both literally by crucifixion at the demand of Jewish leaders and symbolically by suffering outside the gate analogous to the sin offering” (Kent, p. 286). For here have we no continuing city. Here is a foreboding of Jerusalem’s imminent destruction. Even if there was no prophetic intent within the author’s statement, God is about to remove the temptation for Jewish Christians to return to the sacrificial ritual of the Jerusalem temple. Though the city of Jerusalem would continue but briefly, we seek one to come (10:16; 12:22).

15-16. Let us offer the sacrifice of praise. Our sacrifice is not to involve blood or an animal, for that sacrifice has seen its fulfillment in the once-for-all sacrifice of Christ. Our sacrifice, therefore, ought to be one of praise on behalf of Christ’s perfect offering. Though Christ’s perfect sacrifice was onetime, ours is to be continually. Whereas the Levitical system required yearly and daily outward ritual, God desires from us an unending offering out of our hearts. Our second sacrifice, involved with our daily living under the new system, is to do good; and the third is to communicate. This word (Gr koinōnia) can mean fellowship; or, in a more restricted sense, it may mean generosity, sharing, contribution or gift. Due to the exhortations regarding hospitality and the love of money in the early part of this chapter, it seems that the idea of sharing of goods is apropos. Our sacrifices to God, then, involve our tongue, our actions, and our finances. Surely such teaching is harmonious with Paul’s exhortation to present our bodies as a living sacrifice (Rom 12:1).

17. Obey them that have the rule over you. Our author begins this section with an exhortation for his readers to remember their former leaders (vs. 7). Now he speaks in regard to the present leaders. Obey (Gr peithesthe) is passive and more simply means be persuaded; but it can also mean trust, believe, obey, or follow. In fact, in the very next verse this word is translated trust: for we trust we have a good conscience. Our author seems to suggest that we ought to believe, trust, or be persuaded by our leaders. The next command is to submit (Gr hypeikete), or yield. Kent sees the first verb as denoting an assent to another's direction, whereas the latter denotes a yielding of one's contrary opinions in favor of another's opinion (p. 288). The leader must not imagine that this passage authorizes him to dictate. God has given to the leaders the work of overseeing, not by being an overlord but by being an example (I Pet 5:1-3). We must follow our spiritual leaders and submit to them; for they watch over our lives, knowing that they, as well as we, will give an accounting of our lives. We ought to make their ministry over us joyful rather than miserable.

3. Involving author and recipients. 13:18-25.

18-19. Pray for us. Surely this request on the part of the author implies an acquaintance between the author and his readers. They knew who he was, even though we today can only guess. Greater still, that for which they were to pray, that I may be restored to you the sooner, suggests a former association with them. Whether it was imprisonment (see Commentary on 10:34), illness, or some mission that had prevented an earlier restoration is impossible to know (see Introduction at the beginning of this commentary for views regarding authorship).

20-21. Now the God of peace. The benediction of these verses provides the formal conclusion to this epistle; they serve as a postscript. Following the extended and severe admonition contained in this epistle, this benediction, involving the God of peace, is comforting. Likewise, the appellation of Jesus as the great shepherd of the sheep is a consolation to God's people. The application of the Shepherd motif to the Messiah is common in Old and New Testaments (Ps 23; Isa 40:11; Ezk 34:23; Jn 10:11; I Pet 2:25; 5:4). The description of Jesus as brought again from the dead is the only explicit statement of Christ's resurrection within the epistle, which is surprising since so much is taught concerning Christ and His death. References to His present position in heaven, however, are abundant (e.g., 1:3; 5:7; 6:20; 12:2). Thus, the doctrine is sufficiently taught.

The purpose of this blessing is that God may Make you perfect. This is not the same perfection which the author earlier stated to be the result of Christ's once-for-all sacrifice (10:14; 11:40). That word (Gr teleiōō) involves the positional sanctification of the redeemed. Our word in 13:21 (Gr katartizō) has more the idea of to mend or to equip for a task. The equipping needed here is to do every good work.

22. Suffer the word of exhortation. Obviously, as the author now attests, the primary nature and purpose of this epistle has been for exhortation. And his last admonition is that they might bear with it. The author regards his letter as brief, inasmuch as he would like to have said more (cf. 9:5; 11:32).

23-25. In his last few personal notes he wants them to know that Timothy is set at liberty. Apparently, Timothy was well-known to both the author and readers and was the Timothy common to the New Testament since he is only given the appellation brother Timothy. He had recently been released from an imprisonment, and the author hopes to meet him and his readers at the same time.

Second, he wants them to salute all their leaders. They need to submit to and have respect for every one of them. And, finally, he extends greetings from They of Italy. The preposition (Gr apo) might better be translated from Italy. At first sight this phrase seems to imply those in Italy; but it can equally mean those who presently are in Italy, or those who formerly were from Italy. Acts 10:23 provides an example of the former interpretation of this construction for it speaks of those still living in Joppa (cf. also Acts 17:13). On the other hand, Acts 21:27 uses

18 Pray for us: for we trust we have a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly.

19 But I beseech you the rather to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner.

20 Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant,

21 Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

22 And I beseech you, brethren, suffer the word of exhortation: for I have written a letter unto you in few words.

23 Know ye that our brother Tim'othy is set at liberty; with whom, if he come shortly, I will see you.

24 Salute all them that have the rule over you, and all the saints. They of Italy salute you.

25 Grace be with you all. Amen.

this same construction to identify those from Asia who were then in Jerusalem. Thus, They of Italy may refer to those in Italy or those from Italy. The phrase only identifies their origin; they were Italians. It does seem safe, though, to conclude that either the writer or the recipients were living in Rome (see Introduction for further discussion).

May God's Grace be with you all. Amen.

The Epistle Of JAMES

INTRODUCTION

The Epistle of James was one of the last books of the New Testament to be accepted into the canon. One of the earliest lists of authoritative books, the Muratorian Canon (A.D. 170-200), omitted it, but general agreement of its canonicity solidified at the Council of Carthage (A.D. 397). Some early Christian writings did allude to it, and Origen definitely accepted it (A.D. 250). Although Eusebius categorized it among the disputed books, he affirmed that it was received by most churches. The primary cause for reluctance to recognize the epistle lies in a misunderstanding of James' soteriology (2:14-16). However, a close examination of his "justification by works" discussion reveals no disagreement between himself and Paul.

Authorship. The author identifies himself as "James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ" (1:1). Four men in the New Testament bore that name: First, the father of Judas (the apostle) not Judas Iscariot (Lk 6:16); second, James, the son of Alphaeus, another apostle (Mt 10:3); third, James, the brother of John and the son of Zebedee (Mt 4:21); and last, the brother of the Lord Jesus (Mt 13:55). Since the first two are rather obscure, neither has been postulated as the author, and the brother of John was martyred too early to receive serious consideration. The Lord's brother not only has overwhelming traditional support, but his prominent position in the Jerusalem assembly makes him the most likely choice (cf. Acts 12:17; 15:13; Gal 1:19; 2:9). Prior to Jesus' death and resurrection, James, along with his brothers did not believe (Jn 7:5). Perhaps it was Christ's post-resurrection appearance to him that brought about his conversion (I Cor 15:7).

Recipients. The salutation labels the addressees as "the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad," which could have been translated "the twelve tribes of the diaspora (dispersion)." Because the expression was typically applied to Israel, some conclude that James was addressing all Jews. Others interpret the phrase metaphorically, referring to Christians in general. In its content and style the letter concedes partial truth in both views. He wrote to Christian Jews. "Brethren" of James 1:2 and 2:1 addresses fellow Christians, while the style and content anticipate a Jewish reader.

Occasion and date. The date of writing proposed is either early or late and, ironically, for the same reason, i.e., the epistle's apparent contrast to Pauline theology. To those who argue for a late date, Paul's "justification by faith" had been abused and exaggerated resulting in the neglect of Christian service. Accordingly, James refutes perversions of this doctrine. Others, contending that he wrote before Paul, explain that his aim centered around the practical, works being emphasized. That being the case, a salient need still existed for a clear exposition of justification, which, of course, was accomplished by Paul. Another indication of an early date is found in James 2:2, where the "assembly" mentioned is actually "synagogue," the place commonly used for worship in the earliest years of Christianity. The epistle probably was written in the middle forties, prior to the Council at Jerusalem, which dates to A.D. 49.

The author's subject matter also implies that he wrote early. New Testament epistles notably involve doctrinal issues, because sufficient time had elapsed for perversions to arise. Nevertheless, James disregards such discussion, which implies that significant heresies had not yet developed. Since the initial church consisted of Jews only, the prevailing Jewish style also suits this period.

Characteristics. Many view the Epistle of James as the foremost Jewish book in the New Testament. Christ's name is found only twice (1:1; 2:1), and the author resorts to the Old Testament freely. Illustrations, such as, Abraham, Rahab, and Elijah, and peculiar expressions, as "your synagogue" and "the Lord of Sabaoth" attest to this.

The author's approach is pragmatic. Wielding warnings and reproofs (there are over fifty imperatives), James resembles the prophets of old.

Contents. Admittedly the book's structure is somewhat loose, but it is an exaggeration to characterize it as a series of independent admonitions. An outline within the epistle offers general advice to those under adverse circumstances (1:19): they should be "swift to hear, slow to speak, and slow to wrath." The first point is modified to "obedience" (1:22), the crowning purpose of hearing. Details may be examined in the separate outline.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1.

1:1. The author identifies himself as James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ. He, as well as Jude, was a brother of the Lord. For further discussion about him see the introduction. The designation servant (Gr doulos) means "bond-slave," and is to be distinguished from an employee. He affirms his life, and therefore what he writes, to be under the direction of the One who owns him.

The twelve tribes which are scattered abroad refers to Christians who were by persecution driven out of and scattered from Jerusalem (Acts 8:1). Since James was the leader of the Jerusalem congregation, it was only natural that he write to them regarding their faith.

II. THE TESTS OF LIFE. 1:2-18.

A. Joy Under Temptations. 1:2-11.

2. The trials which befall Christians should not cause alarm or sorrow. In fact, James urges his readers to count it all joy. The child of God may rejoice victoriously in the darkest hour. The following verse explains why. My brethren: the recipients are Christians. When ye fall into divers temptations: the trials (Gr peirasmos) refer to internal and external adversities which would misdirect the servant of God. The verb and adjective join to underline a predominant characteristic of trials; they cannot be anticipated in type or time.

3. Joy amid hardship springs up from an illumined heart. The Christian perceives purpose among persecution and problems. Knowing (Gr gnōskō) involves experiential knowledge, not merely the accumulation of known facts. That the trying of your faith worketh patience: the word for trying (Gr dokimion) implies victory over trial, and may be better rendered "the proving of your faith. . . ." Patience (Gr hypomōnē) does not mean waiting without anxiety, but to endure adverse circumstances without letting them sour the attitude.

4. Endurance is a virtue which very few people experience fully. Too often we grasp relief from trouble so eagerly that we fail to receive the entire lesson that God intended for us. Let patience have her perfect work cautions us to observe our attitudes more than our circumstances. If one does this, he will realize the road to Christian maturity. Perfection in the absolute sense, however, will be reserved for the life to come (I Jn 1:8).

5. The close connection between verses 4 and 5 is marked in the AV by translating a single Greek word in two ways. Wanting (vs. 4) and lack (vs. 5) stem from the same word (Gr leipō) which implies that the reader might ask after verse 4, "How can I find purpose in this predicament?" If any of you lack wisdom (specifically in what God is accomplishing through the trials), let him ask. Two characteristics of God's attitude toward giving become apparent; God that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not. Both contrast to man's style of bestowing. He neither displays reluctance to release His gifts, nor humiliates the needy petitioners.

6. The restriction involves the receiver, not the Giver. To ask

JAMES, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad, greeting.

2 My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations;

3 Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience.

4 But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.

5 If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

6 But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.

7 For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double minded man is unstable in all his ways.

9 Let the brother of low degree rejoice in that he is exalted:

10 But the rich, in that he is made low: because as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.

11 For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man:

14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed.

15 Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.

16 Do not err, my beloved brethren.

17 Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

18 Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.

19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath:

20 For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.

in faith denotes the absence of wavering (Gr diakrinomai), which suggests an anxious reevaluation, "second thoughts" about one's prayer. This type of person compares to a wave which is driven and tossed by circumstances. Christians, by faith, should persistently avow under any circumstances that God is all He claims to be.

7-8. A "waverer" may expect nothing. He lives in two philosophical worlds, the natural and the supernatural; and while he rejects the natural intellectually, he will not wholly commit himself to God. The Lord covets servants who will be "one hundred percenters."

9-11. These three verses underscore the urgency of submitting to God's perspective. We are to rejoice not because of earthly circumstances but by reason of spiritual realities. A brother may be of low degree (Gr tapeinos), of a "lowly" economic or social status, but there is reason for joy. In God's esteem he is exalted. Through the grace of God he has been lifted out of the miry clay (Ps 40:2) and claims a heavenly position in Christ (Eph 1:3). Conversely, the rich may rejoice because temporal possessions are not all they have. When they humble themselves, repenting of sin, they become children of God and joint-heirs with Christ (Rom 8:17). The illustration of the short-lived flower reminds us how ephemeral this life really is.

B. The Source of Temptations. 1:12-18.

12. Endureth. (Gr hypomenō) is the verb form of the word "patience" (see 1:3 for its etymology). The crown of life is not a tangible wreath as in the Greek games, but the reward is life itself.

13. Since temptation may have beneficial results, some might conclude that God Himself sends it. The author categorically denies that; God is never the source of temptation.

14. The actual source of temptation lies within man, his own lust (Gr epithymia), his inherent longings.

15-16. The process of evil compares to a life cycle. Lust may seem insignificantly small, but it produces sin, which, when it is finished (Gr apoteleō), literally, has matured enough to bear children, bringeth forth death. Lust, so to speak, is the grandmother of death.

17. Not only are God's gifts good (useful, practical) and perfect (nothing lacking in them), but His liberality is wholly consistent. Fickle man may succumb to "lusts," but He, the Father of lights, does not embrace the faintest shadow of change.

18. If "justification by works" (2:24) causes one to question James' soteriology, he should note here the basis of salvation: Of his own will begat he. The verb, begat (Gr apokyeō), stems from the same root as "bringeth forth" of verse 15. Sin kills, but God regenerates.

III. THE CHRISTIAN LIFE THROUGH TESTING. 1:19-5:20.

A. The Author's Structure. 1:19-20.

19-20. From this point, the practical Epistle of James follows the three categories listed here: (1) swift to hear (1:21-2:26), regarding hearing as doing; (2) slow to speak (3:1-18), including the vulnerability of excessive talking and the comparison of conduct and speech; and (3) slow to wrath (4:1-17), identifying the sources of bitterness. The threefold admonition explains the proper response to the trials of life discussed in 1:2-18.

21 Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls.

22 But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves.

23 For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass:

24 For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

25 But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.

26 If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.

CHAPTER 2

MY brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons.

2 For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment;

3 And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool:

4 Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

5 Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?

6 But ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment seats?

B. "Quick to Hear." 1:21-2:26.

1. Real hearing involves doing. 1:21-25.

21. The command to lay aside all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness employs expressions of coarseness rather than immorality. To overcome trials one must shun vulgarity as well as wickedness. The engrafted word, the implanted message of the gospel (1:18), should be received by Christians (cf. "brethren," 1:19) with unqualified submissiveness. The phrase, able to save your souls, points out the inherent efficacy of the gospel which they have already accepted.

22. The Greek present tense in be ye doers of the word may be rendered "Continue being doers. . . ." However, the word be (Gr ginomai), often translated "become," views their obedience as a constant struggle. Hearing profits when it generates a transformed life, but hearers only merely soothe their consciences temporarily, deceiving themselves.

23-24. He who follows this form of irrational thinking sees his natural face in a glass (mirror) . . . and goeth his way. He observes, becomes entirely cognizant of the flaws, and promptly forgetteth.

25. The perfect law of liberty parallels the glass of verse 23. James chose two words which contradict each other. Law signifies restrictions; liberty the absence of them. The apparent misnomer sets forth a momentous teaching. Although God embraces inflexible standards and laws, He freely pardons anyone who trusts in Christ. Whoso looketh (Gr parakypō) implies much more than a glance (vs. 24), for the word involves bending over for closer inspection. It pictures a person before a mirror noticing a blemish, then leaning forward to examine and attend to it.

2. Doing involves mercy. 1:26-2:13.

26-27. The word religion (Gr thrēskeia), has to do with worship in the outward sense, religious service. An uncontrolled tongue exposes a spiritual problem. This man's religion is vain (Gr mataios); it yields no results. Pure religion and undefiled involves visiting the forsaken and relinquishing worldly enticements. Without governmental-aid programs widows and orphans face hunger and cold alone. Their welfare was the responsibility of Christians. It still is.

2:1. The AV's chapter division here is misleading, for the two previous verses relate closely to this passage. If true religion entails visiting the destitute, it leaves no room for respect of persons (Gr prosōpolēmpsia), which connotes "receiving because of one's face or appearance."

2-4. A clear illustration dismisses all excuses and exceptions. One might imagine two visitors arriving at a church on a Sunday morning. A chauffeured limousine exhibits a man arrayed in expensive clothing. Another man approaches in an old jalopy, and his cheap suit has almost worn through. When the usher favors the wealthy man, he becomes partial and a judge of evil thoughts. Partial comes from the same verb (Gr diakrinomai) as a word used in 1:6 ("wandering"). By their partiality the offenders have "wavered" in their faith. "Judges with evil thoughts" (RSV) explains that their evaluation was based on sinful attitudes.

5. In contrast to these inequitable religionists, God chose the poor of this world. Christian paupers possess secret riches both in their present faith and in His eternal kingdom.

6. Despised. (Gr atimazō), involves not only attitudes but shameful treatment, as when Jesus was "dishonored" by the Jewish leaders (Jn 8:49). Oppress refers to the arrogant flaunting of governmental authority over Christians, as tyrants over helpless peasants. James has Jewish officials in mind when he says they draw you before the judgment seats (Gr kritēria). Acts 9:2, where Saul traveled to Damascus with official letters to arrest Christians, testifies to the authority which Rome handed over to the Jews. The judgment seat speaks of the local court.

7. Not only do they despise the poor and oppress Christians, but the rich direct their assaults against the Lord Himself. They blaspheme (Gr blasphēmō) or “speak evil against” that worthy name by the which ye are called, i.e., Christians (Acts 11:26).

8. The royal law means “law that is truly royal in its quality” (R. C. H. Lenski, The Epistle of Hebrews and James, p. 570), because the definite article is absent in Greek, indicating that quality is emphasized. It is royal or kingly in its relation to other laws. Jesus said that this and the first commandment are so fundamental that on them “hang all the law and the prophets” (Mt 22:40). An individual “loves” himself irrespective of financial or social status. We should love others in the same manner. When we practice the law, we do well; it’s beautiful!

9. The secular view of success assumes that favoritism must be employed, if one is to “climb the ladder” of accomplishment. Nonetheless, James warns that if one adopts this method, have respect to persons (2:1), what he “accomplishes” (AV is commit, but the Greek is ergazomai) in God’s eyes is sin. Singular in form, the word sin points to quality. Convinced of the law as transgressors may be better translated “convicted by.” The word for “convinced” (Gr elengchō) means to point out the guilt or fault in someone. The law is not the Mosaic code, but the “royal law,” the law of love. Partiality represses genuine love.

10. Offend (Gr ptaiō) literally means to stumble or trip. Thus, James, for the sake of argument, awards the party pure motives, granting that the sin appears accidental. The result, guilty of all, contradicts salvation by works. Since all men are “guilty before God” (Rom 3:19), salvation necessarily is by grace through faith (Eph 3:8-9).

11. A basketball, whether it misses the hoop by an inch or a yard, still fails to score. Likewise, he who shows partiality becomes a transgressor just as readily as if he had murdered or committed adultery.

12. So speak ye, and so do. Both of these verbs being in the Greek present tense, which connotes continuous action, this phrase would be better translated, “Continue speaking and continue doing.” How may we be motivated to do so? As they that shall be judged. The AV phraseology, however, implies a too distant judgment. The verb (Gr mellō) means “about to be,” denoting imminent retribution. Christians ought to conduct themselves as if judgment may come at any moment. The constraining stimulus should not be a harsh, merciless court, but the law of liberty, which assures us we are free from the bondage of sin.

13. Mercy is so basic to Christian living that it is impossible for a true believer not to have it. Of course, the extent may vary, but he that shows none will find judgment without mercy.

3. Doing demonstrates faith. 2:14-26.

The last thirteen verses of the second chapter of James have been among the most controversial passages in Scripture. The statements in this chapter may appear to oppose pauline doctrine, but a careful analysis demonstrates indissoluble harmony between the two inspired writers. The difference in expression arises from their distinct purposes. Paul wrote to explain the gospel; James had in view its practical implications.

14. If one regards the author’s purpose, the discussion will be less difficult to interpret. Many misunderstand this verse be-

7 Do not they blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called?

8 If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well:

9 But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors.

10 For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.

11 For he that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.

12 So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty.

13 For he shall have judgment without mercy, that hath shewed no mercy; and mercy rejoiceth against judgment.

14 What doth it profit, my brethren,

JAMES 2:15

though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?

15 If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food,

16 And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?

17 Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone.

18 Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works.

19 Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?

21 Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?

22 Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?

23 And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, Abraham believed God, cause they fail to observe two significant facts. First, James does not state that the hypothetical person “has” faith, but merely a man say he hath faith. It distinguishes the one who “possesses” from the one who merely “professes.” Secondly, conclusions are based on the question, can faith save him? The AV unfortunately gives a wrong impression, for he is not asking about faith in general, but that type of faith which one has who makes claims without producing fruit. This is affirmed by the presence of the definite article in Greek meaning “the faith.” “Can that faith save him?” would be a proper translation. Which faith? That which the man claims to have. That being the case, James does not contradict Paul. Both affirm that true saving faith results in a changed life as evidenced by works (Eph 2:8-10).

15-16. When Christians say empty platitudes without actually helping those in physical need, what doth it profit? How many words fill a hungry stomach?

17. Even so. As the worthlessness of well-wishers reveal their selfishness, so barrenness in a professing believer’s life exposes his insincerity. Significantly, the Greek text states with the article, that “the faith . . . is dead, being alone. James refers specifically to the faith which is claimed, not the genuine brand.

18. A man may say. The author communicates his accusation through an assumed third person, allowing his remarks to be received more objectively. The matter of contention is not works per se, but the evidence of faith. Pious expressions may seem to be religious (1:26), but actions are what people hear.

19. One fixed tenet of these Jewish readers was monotheism, Thou believest that there is one God; but doctrine alone does not save. Thou doest well inserts a measure of sarcasm, for he quickly points out that the devils (Gr daimonion, “demons”) also affirm that truth. Demonic faith, far from effecting service, exists in terror.

20. Wilt thou know is rhetorical. Having developed his argument to this point, James expects the recognition of truth. The address, O vain man, extends beyond empty faith to a person void of reality. As in verse 17, the word faith occurs with the Greek definite article meaning “the faith” or “that faith.”

21. Abraham is the father of all believers (Rom 4:16), but the reference here, our father, links him with his nation, the Jews. That he was justified by works appears to contradict Paul’s “justification by faith” (Rom 3:28; 4:2; 5:1). Romans 3:20 conclusively declares, “Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight.” Observe Paul’s references to God: “in His sight” plus “before God” in Romans 4:2 (cf. Thomas Manton, An Exposition of the Epistle of James, p. 244). Most frequently, the word for justify (Gr dikaioō) in the New Testament speaks of God’s positive verdict, the opposite of condemnation. The unjustified man, according to Romans, is a condemned sinner; but in the Epistle of James he is a hypocrite. Consequently, Abraham’s justification in this passage consisted of man’s verdict. Christians, Jews, and Arabs have “declared righteous” this man of God, because of the faith demonstrated when he offered his only son.

22. A more accurate translation of faith wrought with his works would be “faith operated by means of his works.” Salvation is not accomplished through the cooperation of faith and works, but faith finds its channel of expression in works. By works was faith made perfect may be rendered “out of works was faith completed.” James 1:3-4 embraces the same thought: the development of inner character parallels the extent of testing endured (1 Pet 1:7).

23. The author never impugns faith per se, but he candidly denounces that brand of self-acclaimed faith which finds no and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called the Friend of God.

24 Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only.

25 Likewise also was not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?

26 For as the body without the spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.

CHAPTER 3

MY brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation.

2 For in many things we offend all. If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body.

3 Behold, we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body.

4 Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth.

5 Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!

6 And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell.

7 For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in profitable service. Genesis 15:6 was spoken years before Isaac was offered, but it was then that Abraham's faith became evident. His fame resulted from works, the corollary of real faith (Rom 4:19-22); but his relationship with the Lord had been settled years before. He has been called the Friend of God for centuries by Jews, Arabs, and Christians.

24. In a court, if a man's motive comes in question, the only means to justify or vindicate his motive is to examine his acts. Genuine faith is conscious of others. "Pure religion" involves a life of ministry, not introspective qualities.

25. Rahab's works were done by faith (Heb 11:31), but actions were necessary to affirm her inner change. Had she remained in sin while acclaiming faith, she would never have been "declared righteous" (justified).

26. The comparison of the human spirit and faith converges around their modes of operation. The spirit (Gr pneuma) may also be translated "breath." As a breathless body emits no indication of life, so fruitless faith exhibits nothing more than hypocrisy.

C. "Slow to Speak." 3:1-18.

1. The tongue is destructive. 3:1-12.

3:1. According to the structure provided in James 1:19, the second directive is "slow to speak." The problem is rather obvious: too much talking. Its root cause lies in a proud attitude, which thrives in pretentious self-expression. Being masters or teachers (Gr didaskalos) could become the means for releasing it. Having too many teachers is like having more foremen than laborers. The Bible clearly commends submissiveness, "a con-trite spirit" (Isa 66:2), but humility must not be equated with position. James cautions those who would be leaders to examine their motives. Is the Lord Himself directing you, or are you gratifying desires for self-promotion? Greater condemnation or judgment (Gr krino) parallels greater responsibility (Lk 12:48).

2. The verb offend (Gr ptaio) means to trip or stumble, and thus, the clause may be rendered, "We all are stumbling in many areas." None of us has reached perfection. Perfect (Gr teleios) describes the man who has reached his goal, the man who is self-controlled. That being the case in speech, he is able also to bridle the whole body, because the tongue resists control more than any other area of behavior. Bridle pictures restrained guidance.

3-4. Two illustrations emphasize that often what holds the greatest influence may appear insignificant, size having nothing to do with importance. In comparison to the total dimensions of a horse, a bit in the mouth appears trivial, yet the animal obeys it. Ships, enormous and driven by awesome winds, may be steered by a very small helm (Gr pedalion), rudder. Whithersoever the governor listeth in contemporary language may be translated, "Wherever the pilot wants it to go."

5. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! The tongue may be compared to a match in size, but its effect is like a raging forest fire.

6. Nowhere else in Scripture is the tongue pictured with such pungent language. It is a world of iniquity (Gr adikia, literally, unrighteousness), and it spreads throughout the body like a devouring cancer. The course of nature (Gr genesis) refers to the pattern of history; a sharp tongue may instigate war or prevent an election. The source accounts for its character; hell, (Gr geenna) originally referred to the Valley of Hinnom, south and west of Jerusalem, where a perpetual fire blazed on its garbage heaps. It became an awesome symbol of the eternal abode of the lost.

7-8. Every is obviously restricted to creatures of sufficient intelligence to be tamed. The wildest stallion may be broken, the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of mankind:

8 But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison.

9 Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God.

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter?

12 Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh.

13 Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom.

14 But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth.

15 This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish.

16 For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work.

17 But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy.

but the tongue continually erupts in outbursts of uncontrolled emotion. This does not necessarily mean that everyone unceasingly makes unintended comments, but it does mean that even the most respected, gracious people have their own seasons of regretful words. Full of deadly poison speaks of the death blows words may deliver to good relationships. A single sentence uttered in heated discussion may sever a long friendship.

9-10. Contrasting the actions of the tongue unveils its inconsistency: bless . . . curse. Although the offender may excuse his contradictory expressions on the basis of depravity, men are made after the similitude of God. In spite of man's fall and resulting wickedness, he still bears God's image (Gen 1:26; 5:1, 3; 9:6; I Cor 11:7; Eph 4:24; and Col 3:10). Although there is an infinite qualitative difference between them, man resembles God in a way which distinguishes him from the rest of God's creation. The Bible does not clearly specify the nature of the image, and therefore, scholars differ as to the meaning. The main views are: (1) bodily form; (2) dominion over the animal world; (3) moral nature; and (4) personality. Stephen Barabas synthesizes three of these. Man is a "rational, self-conscious, self-determining creature, capable of obedience to moral law, and intended by God for fellowship with Himself." (Merrill C. Tenney, Ed. Zondervan Pictorial Bible Dictionary, p. 371). These things ought not so to be. A distinction may be seen in Scripture between carnal judging and spiritual discernment. Care must be practiced to aim denunciations against sin and not the sinner. The Lord can forgive the worst offender; thus Christians should hope for God's regenerating power even in unlikely persons.

11-12. Fountain (Gr pēgē would be a "spring" in modern terminology. Just as it would be absurd to think that it produces both sweet water and bitter, or salt water and fresh, or that a grape vine yields figs, so a mouth which condemns men while praising God lacks credibility. That sort of person would have a shallow Christian experience, if one at all.

2. True wisdom is expressed through daily living. 3:13-18.

13. A wise man may desire to manifest his knowledge through teaching, but James says let him show a changed life through works. Conversation (Gr anastrophe) means behavior or conduct.

14. The verse correlates the tongue and wisdom. The former, as an outward sign, may reveal a heart of bitter envying and strife, which is founded on pride. To bless and curse out of the same mouth (vs. 10) is to elevate oneself above God's truth. A man may judge others for wrongdoing, yet overlook his own failure of the royal law (2:8). Glory not, and lie not, both present tense verbs, may be translated "stop glorying and stop lying."

15. If wisdom displays itself apart from good conduct and meekness, it is not from above. In fact, it is characterized as earthly, wise by the world's standards, sensual (Gr psychikos), meaning natural as distinguished from spiritual, and devilish (Gr daimoniōdēs), of demonic influence.

16. The author leaves no doubt about the effects of envying and strife of verse 14. Confusion (Gr akatastasis) opposes that which is established. Every evil work specifically means "every foul practice." Strife usually begins with gossip and climaxes in direct confrontation.

17. Pure contrasts with evil of the previous verse. Peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated join as opposites of confusion (vs. 16). Full of mercy and good fruits reminds one that faith apart from works is unprofitable (2:14-26). Without hypocrisy. Practicing partiality (2:4), faith without works (2:17), and boasting (2:14) all involve hypocrisy, which originally referred to the "acting" that was performed in theaters.

18 And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.

CHAPTER 4

FROM whence come wars and fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your lusts that war in your members?

2 Ye lust, and have not: ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not.

3 Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts.

4 Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.

5 Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy?

6 But he giveth more grace. Wherefore he saith, God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.

7 Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.

18. This section, “slow to speak” (1:19), has focused around the uncontrolled tongue. Inner qualities are what season one’s speech, and here peace is emphasized in two ways: (1) righteousness is sown, that is, it has its beginnings in peaceful conditions, not envying and strife (vs. 16); and (2) righteousness appears in those who practice peace. The glaring blemish of evangelical churches is inner turmoil and bickering, yet Christian living depends upon peace.

D. “Slow to Wrath.” 4:1-5:6.

1. Wrath stems from a worldly attitude. 4:1-5.

4:1. James addresses church members who are infected by materialism, given to partiality, and jealous of each other. War in your members sounds like Peter (I Pet 2:11) or Paul (Rom 7:23) who agree that carnal desires rage within the believer or thwart his spiritual progress. Since self-control is a fruit of the Spirit (Gal 5:22), His filling is the means of victory.

2. Kill, along with wars and fightings of the previous verse, is best taken figuratively. It seems inconceivable that Christians were involved in actual combat and murder without any mention of any governmental intervention. These strong words were chosen to stress the seriousness of their acts.

3. Even when they did ask, their prayers went unanswered, because they sought personal gratification, disregarding God’s will. “What a picture of the lustful heart tossed about and buffeted on the sea of his own selfish desires, committing murder in his heart attitude, jealous and contentious, forgetting to pray except only to pray amiss, always and ever unrestful and unsatisfied” (Zane Hodges, Lectures on James, unpublished).

4. Ye adulterers and adulteresses. Spiritual adultery was mentioned often in the Old Testament (Isa 57:3-9; Jer 3:20; Ezk 16:32, 35, 38; and Hos 2). It is no more right for a Christian to love both God and the world, than for a man to have two wives. Unfaithfulness would repulse the offended party in either case. Know ye not. . . ? A common characteristic of backsliding is the voluntary blindness toward the seriousness of sin. Enmity with God is something the Christian was delivered from (Rom 5:10), and therefore, his “affair” with the world should cause shame and remorse.

5. Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain expects a negative reply. Could we imagine God’s Word going forth without purpose, direction, or power? Since this quote cannot be found in the Old Testament, it appears that James alludes to a principle. In the original, to envy (Gr phthonos) receives prominence by its position. This expression, when taken adverbially, “the Spirit that dwells in us lusts jealously,” speaks of divine jealousy, a familiar doctrine to these Jews (Ex 20:5; 34:14; Zech 8:2). Dwelleth (Gr katoikeō) differs from the word which signifies a temporary dwelling. The Holy Spirit’s indwelling in the believer is not transient, but He, as it were, makes His residence within us. Lusteth (Gr epithēō) speaks of intense desires, which explains why the charge of spiritual adultery was made in the previous verse. Its counterpart, spiritual faithfulness, measures the believer’s love for the Lord. Friendship with the world exposes the shallowness of one’s spirituality.

2. Wrath stems from a proud attitude. 4:6-17.

6. A sharp contrast exists between worldly and divine jealousy; men want revenge, but he giveth more grace. That statement, plus the quote (Prov 3:34), assure the repenting sinner that no offense is too great for God’s forgiveness.

7. Verses 7 through 10 contain a group of imperatives, the first and the last being almost identical: Submit . . . Humble yourselves. Submit (Gr hypotassō), a combination of two words, literally means “to place under,” hence, subjection or submis-

8 Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded.
 9 Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness.

10 Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up.

11 Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.

12 There is one lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy: who art thou that judgest another?

13 Go to now, ye that say, To day or to morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain:

14 Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.

15 For that ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that.

16 But now ye rejoice in your boastings: all such rejoicing is evil.

sion. Because of God's never-ending grace, the Christian's logical behavior is total submission to Him, rather than enslavement to the world's allurements (Rom 12:1-2). Two factors should be mentioned regarding Resist the devil. First, we should stand against outward opposition, even though we are instructed to flee inner cravings (II Tim 2:22). Secondly, devil (Gr diabolos), a word meaning "accuser," portrays our enemy scrutinizing the intimate details of one's personal life to expose any fault. Thus the believer must walk in the Spirit with the utmost caution. He must walk worthy (Col 1:9-10).

8-9. The tense of Draw nigh implores the listeners to complete a single, definite act. Cleanse and purify differ in what they affect. The former, along with hands and sinners, speaks of actions which may be observed. The latter, addressed to the internal insecurities of the "double-minded" (1:8), is aimed against improper motives and wicked thoughts. Spirituality involves regeneration and revival, not just reformation; a new heart precedes a changed life.

10. Humble yourselves. The man who submits himself to the Lord will be exalted in ways which he himself could never accomplish. This primarily refers to one's spiritual relationship with God.

11. With the wars and fighting among you (4:1), James discussed humility in order to advance a principle. True humility cannot be achieved by one who slanders his brothers. As an appeal to spiritual unity, the word brother is mentioned three times. When a man impugns his Christian brother, he proudly sets himself above the law that God has established.

12. The word, one is placed first in the original to extol Him above all others. In many older manuscripts He is called lawgiver (Gr nomothetēs), the one who is able . . . to destroy, and also judge. These designate God as author, interpreter, and executor of the law. If He alone holds these functions, then who art thou that judgest another? Yet, in spite of its haughty character, Christians, through various attempts to rationalize, condone its presence in each other.

13. Go to now, used as an interjection, compares to our expression, "Come now!" James attacks another area where pride frequently erupts: the world of business. God has gifted His chosen people with unusual ability in commercial ventures, and these Christian Jews erred because of wrong attitudes toward it. Careful planning must be included in successful business methods, but sound principles of management are insufficient. Before making expensive investment in a wise executive considers all factors in painful detail. The folly exposed is disregarding the preeminent fact of life, i.e., God! Carnal men assume extended life without knowing "the Life" (Jn 14:6), taking for granted each day as if they had earned it.

14. Ye know not. In spite of human frailty and ignorance of tomorrow, man arrogantly predicts his life's course. For what is your life? The question hopes to shake someone out of apathy and cause him to reassess his priorities. Vapor (Gr atmis) is used of smoke (Acts 2:19), incense (Ezk 8:11), and of steam. It makes no difference which one is chosen, for all are transient and gone in a moment. Compared to eternity, the span of our lives appears insignificant.

15. The command does not mean to keep adding the phrase, If the Lord will, to everything one says. To do such could become another form of pride. At the same time one's behavior and plans should consistently demonstrate dependence upon the Lord. He may determine that at the present time patience through tribulation (Rom 5:3) is a greater need than attaining our goals.

16. Rejoice (Gr kauchaomai) could be translated "boast." The noun, boastings (Gr alazoneia), connotes vain pretensions. A man who brags about future plans while ignoring God's 17 Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

CHAPTER 5

GO to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.

2 Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten.

3 Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.

4 Behold, the hire of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sáb'a-óth.

5 Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter.

6 Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you.

7 Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious sovereignty is foolish, but more than that his attitude is evil. The extent of this marks the depravity of contemporary society.

17. Not only does pride condemn others and boast in its potential, but it overlooks its own failure, and those failures which go unnoticed longest are omissions. It is easier to detect wrong than the absence of right. To him that knoweth to do good specifically addresses their lack of submission to God's will, which is called sin (Gr hamartia), missing the mark.

3. Extreme wrath often comes from the rich. 5:1-6.

5:1. The author censured pride in the previous chapter, and here, in phraseology similar to the prophetic tones of certain Old Testament literature, he repudiates the rich. Go to now appeared in 4:13 where it also was used as an interjection. Weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you reminds one of ancient apocalyptic outcries (Isa 13:6; 14:31; 15:3; Jer 4:8; Joel 1:5, 13). Audible crying is heightened by outbursts of wailing. Miseries . . . shall come contrasts to present Christian suffering under trials. When the Lord comes, the experience will be reversed (5:8) in greater proportions. Who are these rich men? This social class receives attention neither as a tangent nor because his recipients were such, but James is indirectly warning his double-minded Christian readers of the life-styles they approach.

2. One characteristic of prophetic literature is to view the future as though it were present. The perfect tense of are corrupted and are moth-eaten pictures the effects of riches as already having occurred.

3. The destructive results of rust upon gold and silver testify to the vanity of riches. It is difficult to affirm conclusively the meaning of eat your flesh as it were fire, but perhaps James uses this dramatic phrase to contrast the array of mortal bodies to their final state. Analogous to quotes of Jesus (Mt 6:10-20 and Lk 12:21), the last days should be a time for securing heavenly treasure, not earthly wealth ("in" the last days would be a more accurate translation than for).

4. Uncontrolled appetites for worldly accumulations have carried them to the worst extremes. Not only did they strive for the greatest profits, but they cheated employees in order to do so. By fraud they tricked the laborers out of their wages. The resulting desperate cries seemed to be in vain, but eternity reveals them to have entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. That title, often translated "Lord of Hosts," emphasizes His omnipotence; in spite of how things may appear, He is sovereign!

5. In a day of slaughter may be taken in two ways. Some explain the slaughter as the excess killing of animals to prepare for a great feast. Thus, preparations for further indulgence seem to be in order. Others find eschatological significance to the phrase (Jer 12:3), making it refer to their self-fattening process for their own slaughter. Perhaps, the author had both ideas in mind. They anxiously make ready for another "day of slaughter" and feasting, while being ignorant of their own ensuing judgment.

6. The just does not refer to Christ (in favor of this interpretation, see Thomas Manton, An Exposition of the Epistle of James, p. 416). It is a common Old Testament expression which emphasizes a believer's faithful life. Resist has nothing to do with the good man's opposition to the oppressor's wickedness. It deals with the victim's mute response toward the tyrant abuse.

IV. CONCLUSION. 5:7-20.

7. Be patient (Gr makrothymēō) may be translated "endure" or "be long-tempered," as opposed to short-tempered. The coming of the Lord will dismiss present inequities, while be-

JAMES 5:8

fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain.

8 Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

9 Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, the judge standeth before the door.

10 Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience.

11 Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.

12 But above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath; but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation.

13 Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms.

14 Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord:

coming a special goal for oppressed believers. The husbandman, farmer, illustrates the type of patience believers should possess. Plowing, planting, and caring for his crop are all means to an end, i.e., the harvest. He labors because he believes a day of reaping will be enjoyed. Christians likewise should view current trials and hardships as a preparation process that helps conform them to the image of Christ.

8. The command of the previous verse here becomes personal: ye also. The coming (Gr parousia), often translated "appearance," implies the suddenness of His arrival, and thus urges constant readiness. Stablish (Gr stērizō) may be translated "fix firmly" or "set fast" and is another indication of the double-mindedness of a certain element among the recipients.

9. The foremost unbefitting response to testing is bitterness; but since Christians are reluctant to assault God for their problems, their bitter attitudes erupt against others. The command, grudge not, is appropriate here. As when a judge enters a courtroom, a reverent hush moves over the audience, so the judge who is before the door should quell slanderous remarks among His people.

10. A man undergoing trying circumstances may be comforted to learn that others have endured worse situations. The word example (Gr hypodeigma) is positioned first in Greek to receive emphasis. A man's outspoken testimony for the Lord, not only attributes a positive stand for the gospel, it frequently occasions harsh opposition from its enemies. Of suffering affliction, and of patience both have definite articles in the original, which signifies "an example of the suffering affliction and the patience" which James has been discussing. The prophets stood loyal to their Lord, suffered for it, and now their experience encourages us.

11. We count them happy holds somewhat of a paradox, although it may not have been intended. Objectively as we observe suffering in others, we urge them to endure, because victory will eventually arrive. Yet when we ourselves fall into divers temptations (1:2), our immediate human response often is negative. Job, who endured loss of property, family and health, stands out as a specimen (see J. Moulton and G. Milligan, The Vocabulary of the Greek New Testament) of enduring faith. His case not only asserts his patience but demonstrates the purpose and character of his Lord. The end of the Lord (Gr telos) may be better rendered "the Lord's goal." Our Lord permits suffering, because it leads to His excellent purposes (Rom 8:28; Phil 1:6). Moreover, while critics blaspheme God because of human suffering, Job's record shows the Lord to be "full of pity" (this translation is more accurate than the AV's very pitiful, which suggests a negative idea) and of tender mercy. Suffering, then, must be attributed either to the means for God's ultimate purposes or (more often) man's own doing through corrupt leaders or personal sin.

12. Swear not, etc., is the clearest allusion in this epistle to the Sermon on the Mount (Mt 5:34-37). The importance of this command, above all things, has two views: above (Gr pro) may signify superiority (A. T. Robertson, A Grammar of the New Testament in the Light of Historical Research, p. 622), but commonly it means "before." The latter view makes better sense, for the absence of oath-taking could hardly be superior, but speech should be the first notable change when the Spirit receives control.

13-14. God honors unity in prayer (Mt 18:19), but the healing process here specifically involves the elders (Gr presbyteros), mature spiritual leaders of the church. No inference can be found of the gift of healing. Moreover, it is the sick who must take the initiative: let him call. The oil carries no supernatural powers, but often was used in anointing to symbolize the outpouring of God's Spirit. The phrase, in the name of the Lord, 15 And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.

16 Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

17 E-l'as was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain; and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months.

18 And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.

19 Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him;

20 Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins.

points to the real source of healing. Also, the service is to take place in the privacy of the home, since the needy person summoned the elders to him.

15. All too often prayer bears little fruit, but the prayer of faith, of unqualified trust, will deliver. Nothing about the passage requires instantaneous healing, nor is there any restriction of medical treatment. The presence of sins may be the cause for the sickness, but not necessarily. We must reserve judgment for God alone. They shall be forgiven assumes that the one who seeks help from the church also recognizes his personal shortcomings.

16. The two imperatives, Confess and pray, both in the Greek present tense, call for the habitual practice of openness in two activities. Caution should be observed though; confession should be made only to the extent that the sin is open. Lest anyone regard the prayer of faith to be an impulsive expression of desire, James describes its involvement as The effectual fervent prayer with only one adjective in Greek, not two as in the AV. One may observe that our English word "energy" is akin to this modifier (Gr energeō), which stresses hard labor. If one becomes desperate about a critical situation, he will not be satisfied uttering a few pious sentences.

17-18. The adverb much (vs. 16) leaves the effects of prayer ambiguous. The example of Elijah's answered petition responds to the assumed question by the reader, "How much?" Even the forces of nature may be altered, for three and one-half years! But a doubter may react, "That's fine for a prophet, but what about an average man like me?" Only two qualities are ascribed to this man: (1) a man subject to like passions as we are: he fled Jezebel's fury immediately after God sent fire on Mount Carmel (I Kgs 19:1-4); (2) he prayed earnestly. His greatness did not lie in special gifts or a superhuman character, but he is distinguished by the way he prayed. One may imagine earnestly to hold special significance of a unique manner, but not so. He prayed with all superficial distractions removed. And he prayed again. The simplistic wording, in fact, seems to ignore the manner. Prayer is communicating with God, and genuine communication results in visible response. Most public "prayers" are ineffective, because in reality they are intended for man's ears.

19-20. The author speaks to Brethren who are in doctrinal error. Err from the truth may be rendered "misled from the truth," but the passive voice in no way excuses the sin. And one convert him means return or persuade him back to the truth. Save a soul from death. Since the word soul (Gr psychē) may mean "life," the clause may be taken as a warning that backsliding may end in physical death (I Cor 11:30). Shall hide a multitude of sins along with the former clause attributes supernatural accomplishments to the one who converts the sinner; God alone can save life or forgive sin. The human connection relates to I Corinthians 3:9, "For we are laborers together with God."

The First Epistle Of PETER

INTRODUCTION

Authorship. Peter identifies himself as the apostle of Jesus Christ in the salutation to his first epistle (1:1). This identity has never been seriously questioned among evangelical scholars. The book was received and used as the authentic and authoritative Word of God by Peter from earliest times in Christian churches. I Peter is quoted by Clement of Rome, Polycarp, and other early Fathers of the Christian church.

It is interesting that Peter mentions in the close of his letter that he is writing "through Sylvanus," who was a companion of Paul on his second missionary journey (I Pet 5:12). This probably means that for I Peter, Silas (which is the name used in Acts) was the amanuensis or secretary for Peter. Paul also wrote most of his letters in the same manner.

We should mention that the objections to apostolic authorship have been mainly based on language and style. Could Peter the fisherman have written such a polished book with its many allusions to the Septuagint? We might briefly answer that some "polish" would be assumed with the passing of time between Peter's introduction to Jesus and the writing of the book. Peter's lack of education has often been misunderstood or overemphasized. An important factor to note is that Acts 4:13 does not mean to teach that Peter was stupid or even that he was less educated than his peers. It was confidence and authority that priests detected in Peter and John, but could not discern where they had gotten it since they were not priests but laymen. Their "field was not religion," we might say today. The clause might be better translated, "they saw that they were laymen rather than formally educated priests." It is ridiculous prejudice which supposes that Peter could not have written such a good book. Furthermore, even if Peter had been incompetent to write the book himself, he might have done quite well with the help of his secretary, Silas. Often, in ancient times, style and precision of expression were attributed more to the amanuensis than to the author of a letter. Sylvanus (or Silas as he is called in Acts) does not appear to be less competent than Paul himself as a preacher of the apostolic message; Paul includes him in all the "we" references in the Thessalonian epistles.

A third authenticating figure is Mark who was with Peter (5:13) in Rome. Since Peter says calls him "my son," we assume a very close working relationship. Mark is, of course, John Mark who also wrote the Gospel.

Purpose. Peter wrote to the Christians who lived in the Roman provinces of Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia (1:1). From the tone of the book and its vocabulary we gather that it was a time of persecution and suffering (1:6; 2:12, 15; 4:12, 14-16; 5:8-9). It is not necessary to assume any specific historical period; in fact, we do not have much information about persecution in individual localities throughout the Roman Empire. It is not certain how far and fast official government persecution spread when it did begin. Perhaps persecution started earlier in various communities. No specific information about this is given in the book itself either. It is obvious that Peter writes to encourage faithfulness and praise to God in spite of some assumed persecution. The important thing in this book is the attitude a person takes toward the suffering, persecution, and circumstances of life. Encouragement to praise God in spite of the circumstances seems to recur throughout the book along with the exhortations to holy living and hope.

Characteristics. Peter is a book of praise as much as the Psalms. The salutation itself is an abbreviated Christian psalm of praise for God's grace in Christ. The book mentions suffering and persecution but is not at all pessimistic. 1:3 praises God for the new birth. The Christian life is to be a life of hope, and the greatest hope is the return of Christ and the resurrection. Peter is a real positive thinker; note 3:13-14, "who is he that will harm you . . . and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye." This attitude of praise in spite of persecution is probably not peculiar to Peter but seems to be a part of the apostolic pattern of early Christian preaching. The readers are also encouraged to live lives of purity as God's people (2:9) and God's servants (2:16). They must submit to and live in accordance with God's will for their lives in this world (2:13-3:12). Peter exhorts his readers to true humility and unity as well (5:1-6), and asks them to follow the example of Christ (2:21).

Date and place of writing. Peter wrote from "Babylon" (5:13), which is an esoteric symbol of Rome. The same symbolism is used in Revelation 17 and 18. Although persecution is mentioned often in the book, no specific persecution is mentioned, and the fact applies only generally to the latter part of the first century for a date. The most probable time seems to be between A.D. 62 and 64. Besides the references to suffering and persecution, the primitive state of the development of the church in the epistle, and the still high regard for the authority of the state (I Pet 2:13-17) support a date before A.D. 64. It was, in fact, during the notorious bloodbath begun in A.D. 64 that both Peter and Paul laid down their lives in martyrdom.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-2.

PETER, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Ga-lā'tia, Cāp-pa-dō'ci-a, Asia, and Bī-thŷn'ī-a,

2 Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied.

1:1-2. Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ. This letter opens in the usual manner for New Testament epistles and for all letters of the Hellenistic world, with the name of the writer, the address, and a greeting. Peter names himself as an apostle of Jesus Christ, which means that he is sent by the Lord with a commission. With this statement Peter claims a certain authority; his letter must then be received and recognized by the churches as the Word of God. The name Peter is the Greek form of the Aramaic "Cephas" and means "a stone." The name was given to Peter by the Lord Jesus; compare John 1:42 and Matthew 16:18. To the strangers scattered. The Greek word for scattered (Gr diaspora) means literally "to sow through," and was a technical term for Jews who lived outside of Palestine. Here it is applied to Gentile Christians who figuratively were sown throughout the world by God to be a witness for Him. Although they live in these various Roman provinces, Peter looked upon these Christians as strangers, a word that means something like "landed immigrants," and indicates that they are foreigners to the native residents, and that their permanent homeland and citizenship is in heaven. Elect (Gr eklektos) is in verse 1 in the original, and means "chosen." The implication is that God has purposely placed these Christians in their respective communities to serve Him; they are selected temporary residents who are representatives of God.

Peter now summarizes his theology within his greeting by referring to the Trinity and their cooperative work in accomplishing our great salvation. According to the foreknowledge (Gr prognosis) which means more than to merely "know about ahead of time." It is a term emphasizing the biblical idea of foreordination. Compare the use of this word in Acts 2:23 and I Peter 1:20 with reference to Christ, and in Romans 8:29 and Romans 11:2 with reference to God's people. It is especially significant here that Peter uses this word with reference to Gentiles, although he had been a devout Jew himself. Foreordination, with reference to these Christians, was accomplished by God the Father through the agency of the Holy Spirit in sanctification. This word (Gr hagiasmos) means literally "to set apart" or "make holy." The purpose toward which this activity of the Father and the Holy Spirit is directed is the obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ. In other words, the activity of the Father and the Spirit is directed toward salvation.

II. THE GLORY OF SALVATION. 1:3-12.

A. Salvation of Hope. 1:3-4.

3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

3. Blessed be the God and Father. The word blessed (Gr eulogēios) is the word from which we get "eulogy," and means "to be well spoken of" or "to be praised." Peter is expressing a desire that God should be praised by all believers everywhere. Although it would be frowned upon in some churches where gravity is a visible virtue, Peter says in effect "Praise God!" The thing for which Peter wishes to praise God is the very foundation or beginning of our salvation, the new birth. If for no other reason, every Christian should praise God for being born again. It is entirely of God's initiative that we have been included in His family. He hath begotten us again by His great mercy and for this reason is worthy of all our praise. The words begotten again (Gr anagennaō) is used only here and in verse 23 in the New Testament and means "to give new life to." In other literature outside the New Testament this word is used in a botanical sense, as when the trees, plants, and flowers come to life in the spring. Peter pictures the heart of man as dry, shriveled, and dead in sin until God implants the principles of the new life. When this happens, we sprout into life, leaf out, and grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Note the ideas of the "sprouting seed" and "new life" which recur in verse 23 where this same word is used. The results of the new birth for which Christians are obligated to praise God are indicated by three words in the original each preceded by the same Greek preposition: observe the words lively hope in verse 3, inheritance in verse 4, and salvation in verse 5. Because of the new birth we have a lively hope, which should probably be understood as the hope of the resurrection. We should note that the word hope is used in the Bible with the distinctive meaning "confident expectation." Today, of course, hope means merely to "want" something to happen, without having any real assurance that it will happen, as in the sentence, "I hope tomorrow will be a sunny day." The resurrection is the central hope of Christianity; it is not merely something that we want to happen, but an assurance we have. We know we shall rise!

Furthermore, Peter tells us that this living hope is built upon the resurrection of Jesus Christ Himself. This is the core of the gospel and all Christian creeds through the ages. To prove a point, Paul, in I Corinthians 15:16, reasoned negatively, "For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised." He went on to say, in I Corinthians 15:20, that Christ had in fact risen from the dead, and as Peter points out here, we shall rise also.

4 To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you,

4. To an inheritance. The second result of the new birth for which we should praise God is called our inheritance (cf. Col 1:5, 12). The idea of an inheritance was much more important to a New Testament Jew than it is to us today. For some of us this spiritual inheritance is the only one we will ever have, but its description as incorruptible, undefiled, and unfading, evokes from us the greatest possible praise to God. This inheritance is more lasting than any earthly inheritance could be. Every stone of earth will crumble, every column will fall, every arch will collapse. Diamonds chip, gold wears away, but this inheritance of ours is a truly "imperishable" commodity. This inheritance is also described as undefiled, which means that it has no spot of dirt or pollution on it; it is pure as the driven snow (cf. Jas 1:27). Fadeth not away. Furthermore, this inheritance is "unfading," which alludes to the inheritance or "crown" of an athlete which, although considered very valuable, would very quickly fade and lose its beauty. This inheritance is said to be reserved in heaven for you. The perfect tense is used in Greek to show the confirmed nature of the reservation; it will not be given to someone else by mistake, it cannot be devalued by taxes, and title insurance is provided.

5 Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

6 Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations:

7 That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ:

B. Salvation of Power. 1:5.

5. Who are kept by the power of God through faith. Believers themselves are now declared to be kept (Gr phroureō) by the power of God. This is a military term for the protection of a city by means of a military garrison. In the picture here, the power of God corresponds to an army base with the sole function of protecting believers. The soldiers of God, His angels, surround us to protect us from the bombardment of various trials and temptations so that we do not become crushed by depression and despair. The soldiers are visible only through the eyes of faith.

Unto salvation. The third result of God's grace in giving us new life in Christ is called salvation. This, of course, does not refer to the initial experience of accepting Jesus Christ as Saviour, but to the final, inclusive result of salvation; eternal bliss in the presence and service of God. What does the consummation of salvation include? No one knows, for as Paul said, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard" what "God hath prepared for them that love him" (I Cor 2:9). We have not yet seen this full and final manifestation, but Peter tells us that it is ready to be revealed. The implication here is that everything is fully prepared and accomplished, but remains to be unveiled. The moment of revelation is called the last time. The word time (Gr kairos) does not denote extension of time but designated time when something is to happen. This corresponds to the day of the Lord in Paul's writings, or the second coming of Jesus Christ. The upshot of all this is that, although a person is truly saved when he gives his life to Jesus Christ, and although he experiences the blessings of salvation every day, these are only the pledges of that glorious salvation to which he looks forward in the Day of Christ.

C. Salvation of Trial. 1:6-9.

6. Wherein ye greatly rejoice. The two words greatly rejoice (Gr agalliaō) are one word in the original which conveys the idea of a strong, deep, supporting exultation; this verb form in the original may be taken as indicative or imperative, depending on the context. The context of exhortation here seems to favor taking it as imperative. The translation would then be, "Always rejoice in this!" The thought here is parallel to the beginning of verse 3, where Peter implies the imperative "Praise God!" Although you would never realize it to look at the faces of some Christians, God wants us to be happy, and to enjoy all the physical and spiritual blessings which He gives to us. Though now for a season. These words indicate a concession in spite of which Christians are commanded to praise God. Another translation puts verse 6 this way, "Continue to praise God for this, even though now for a little while you may have had to suffer various trials." We shall have to learn to live more positive, happy, and praise-filled lives in obedience to this commandment if we want to hear His "Well done" on that day.

7. That the trial of your faith. The purpose toward which this command of praise is directed is that the approved character of our faith might result in praise, glory, and honor for us in that day in which Christ is revealed. Verse 7 is better translated, "So that the genuineness of their faith, more precious than gold which though perishable is tested by fire, may redound to praise and glory and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ." It is interesting that the three words for the "approval" that God will give to those of true faith on that day are found elsewhere in Scripture with the same sense, for example I Corinthians 4:5, where Paul expresses his disinterest in the praise of men because of his forward look at the future and says, "then shall every man have praise of God."

8 Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:

9 Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

8-9. Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:

Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls. The mention of the name of Jesus Christ in verse 7 causes Peter to insert here a doxological creed concerning the One who is the center of our faith. In this passage two central concepts of Christianity, love and continual joy, revolve around the central person in Christianity by means of two relative pronouns in the original language, of which the antecedent is "Jesus Christ." It does seem strange that the recurrent theme of praise for our great salvation which pervades this passage is so often absent from our preaching today. Likewise, the two concepts of love and joy, which according to these verses should characterize all those who possess this great salvation, seem now to be in rather short supply.

D. Salvation of Revelation. 1:10-12.

10 Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:

11 Searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.

12 Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into.

10-12. Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently. To show how great a privilege it is to possess this glorious salvation, Peter refers first to the Old Testament prophets. To describe the excitement and wonder of the prophets concerning salvation and grace, verse 10 uses two emphatic compound words. The objects of this industrious research on the part of the prophets were first, the person specifically in whom all these messianic prophecies would be fulfilled, and second the precise moment of fulfillment (Gr kairos). The prophets knew a great deal about the coming salvation and the coming Saviour. They knew that their prophecies reached far beyond their own times, and even beyond the bounds of their own nation. These things were supernaturally revealed to them. There were certain aspects of the glorious salvation which they prophesied which continually escaped them, and Peter's point is that the glorious objects of prophetic inquiry have now been openly proclaimed and fulfilled in the preaching of the apostles.

The privilege of living in the age of fulfillment should overwhelm us. This privilege is further emphasized by Peter as he refers in verse 12 to the angels; which things the angels desired to look into. The last word in the verse, look into, means graphically "stooping down close to get a peck at." The picture is that this is something the angels had always wanted to do (Greek present tense) but have never been able to accomplish. This stresses the point that although prophets and angels have been unable to satisfy themselves as to precisely what salvation is all about, we have the privilege not only of full exposition, but of real possession.

III. THE EXHORTATION TO SANCTIFICATION.

1:13-25.

A. Admonition to Sanctification. 1:13-16.

13 Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ;

13. The main verb in verse 13 is an imperative hope with a participle in attendant circumstance, gird up (Gr anazōnnyμι) which is a metaphor referring to the ancient Oriental custom of tying up one's loose flowing robes in the process of getting ready for hard work. An equivalent contemporary metaphor would be, "let's roll up our sleeves and get right to work on the business of holiness." Observe that the main command is hope, which means to assume a confident attitude of expectation toward the grace (Gr charis). Into this one word grace Peter has put all the glorious content of our salvation previously given in verses 3-12; this "package," he says, is now being brought to us (Greek present tense), and we should live with our expectations fixed

14 As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance:

15 But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation;

16 Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy.

17 And if ye call on the Father, who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, pass the time of your sojourning here in fear:

18 Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers;

19 But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot:

20 Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you.

21 Who by him do believe in God, that raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God.

upon it. The package, grace, is on its way now, and will arrive in the revelation of Jesus Christ.

14-16. Not fashioning yourselves. Again, the main verb is imperative: be ye holy. Holiness is the emphatic demand put upon believers. Here it is to involve, as a better translation has it, "all your conduct." The participle of attendant circumstance not fashioning yourselves (Gr syschematizo) means "to assume the same visible form," and likewise assumes the imperative character of the main word. Holiness has both a positive side, patterning oneself after God, and a negative side, nonconformity to one's former, sinful life. Pagan standards are to be abandoned; the new model is God Himself (see Isa 40:25; 41:16, 20).

B. Basis for Sanctification. 1:17-27.

17. And if ye call on the Father. This clause is the protasis of a logical premise, and might better be translated "since you invoke as Father Him who judges each person impartially according to his deeds, conduct yourselves with fear." The thought is that since these Gentiles have named the name of God, and since He is the one who will judge all men as a truly just Judge, conduct here is important. Pass the time of your sojourning here in fear. Pass the time (Gr anastrephō) might be misunderstood as "twiddle your thumbs" and tremble. Once again, this is the main verb in the imperative, and means "conduct yourself in godly reverence." Holiness is to pervade every secret corner of one's life. When we name the name of God we must abandon all to Him.

18. Forasmuch as ye know. The participle here implies cause, and gives reason for conducting oneself with godly reverence; it is because we know that we have been redeemed. The word redeemed (Gr lytroō) refers to the payment of a required price to release one from an obligation. This is one of the most important words in the Bible since it succinctly describes the atonement of Jesus Christ and the reason for His death on the cross. Peter refers to the fact that his readers, like all Christians, have been released from empty and meaningless lives by a payment made on their behalf. The value of the payment that was made was far greater than silver or gold in any amount; it was the blood of Christ, meaning His death on the cross, which paid the price of release from traditional, pagan conduct. The command to live holy lives for our brief sojourn on the earth, in the interim, as we wait for the consummation of our salvation, is based upon the great price paid by Jesus Christ.

19. But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot. Note the continuity that Peter assumes between the Old and New Testaments in the phrase like that of a lamb without blemish or spot. This metaphor of Jesus as the sacrificial lamb may have been the first thing that Peter himself learned about Jesus (see Jn 1:29-42).

20-21. Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world. The word foreordained is the verb form of the noun in 1:2 translated "foreknowledge." Here in this verse it refers to the prior determination on the part of the Father, to send the Son as the Saviour of the world. Although He was predestined before the foundation of the world, He was not made known or manifested until these last times. The last times (Gr chronos) translates the idea of "extension of time." According to the overall schema of the Bible, there are two extended periods of time called "the former times" in which the prophecies and promises were made, and the "latter times" in which the prophecies and promises were fulfilled. This is, of course, another reference to the fulfillment of prophecy in Jesus Christ. The believers of Peter's day and the New Testament were the first generation to have these things preached and made known to them as fulfilled. In verse 21 Peter again refers to the privilege and blessing of belief and hope in God.

22 Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently:

23 Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever.

24 For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away:

25 But the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.

CHAPTER 2

WHEREFORE laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings,

2 As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby:

3 If so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious.

4 To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,

C. Results of Sanctification. 1:22-25.

22-25. The appeal now goes back to the important ingredient of love mentioned in 1:8. The main verb in these four verses is love one another; this is the fourth in a series of imperative main verbs which are all based on the primary description of our glorious salvation in verses three through twelve. The call to holiness in verses 13-25 then involves: hope (vs. 13), holiness (vs. 15), reverence (vs. 17), and now love (vs. 22). Love, not bitterness and separation, is the outcome of holiness. If we have really purified (perfect tense in Greek) our lives by obeying the truth, Peter says it will result in unhypocritical brotherly love. This is possible because of our new life in Christ (again the participle in Greek is the perfect tense and implies the reality or certainty of the fact of life in Christ). Here, in verse 23, the living Word of God is the instrument used by the Spirit of God to impart principles of the new life (cf. Hebrews 4:12). Peter now quotes from Isaiah 46 and following in praise of the Word of God, which unlike any human or created thing continues its beauty, effectiveness, and life forever. Everything else in the world is like grass; its beauty is only temporary. The grass dies, and its beauty fails. God's Word, however, is living and effective. Note the synonyms for the Word: in verse 23 it is the word of God, in verse 25 it is first, the word of the Lord, and then the word which by the gospel is preached unto you. It is interesting that four different expressions are used here in the Greek.

IV. THE COMMITMENT TO THE LORD. 2:1-8.

A. The Exhortations. 2:1-3.

2:1-3. Another vivid word picture is painted by Peter as he refers to Christians as needing milk to grow. The metaphorical allusions are mixed, since Peter goes from "putting on new clothes," to "fussing for milk," to "growing like a plant" unto salvation, to "tasting" the goodness of the Lord, to "stones," and "spiritual houses." One thing is common to all these metaphors, however, and that is the idea of growing to maturity, or becoming what God wants us to be in the world. Again, Peter introduces his thought with a subordinate clause and a participle of attendant circumstance, laying aside. This is an everyday word which means "to change clothes"; it is the word used by Paul in Ephesians 4:22 where he speaks of putting off the old man and putting on the new man like a suit of clothes. As Christians, we must take off the ragged and filthy clothes of sin: malice, hypocrisy, deceit, envy, and slander.

In verse 2, the figure changes to a hungry, fussing, sucking baby who wants to be fed. The milk with which we long to be fed in the figure is, of course, the word (Gr logikos). This adjective really means "reasonable" or "rational," and intends to interpret the figure. Peter intends the reader to understand "milk for the mind," rather than for the mouth. We are to desire this milk; the word used here denotes a very strong emotion or passion fixed upon something. The figure is again changed to plant growth, where the resulting mature plant or tree is salvation (see 1:3-12). The idea of a tree, perhaps with fruit, may have suggested Peter's next figure of "tasting" to see if the Lord is good (quoted from Ps 34:8).

B. The Stone of Stumbling. 2:4-8.

4. As unto a living stone. Since Peter had become very familiar with the Greek Old Testament and the striking continuity between its prophecies of the Messiah and their fulfillment in Jesus Christ on the one hand, and between the people of God in the Old Testament and believers in his own era on the other hand, he is here taken up completely with the beauty of 5 Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded.

7 Unto you therefore which believe he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,

8 And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: whereunto also they were appointed.

9 But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light:

10 Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

metaphor and allusion. He is thinking now of God's people as a building and of Jesus Christ as the living stone, fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah 28:16, "Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation." Christ is called a living stone because, although He is a part of the figure, He is also a real person. Likewise, those who have come to Christ and have received life through Him are called living stones. Since Christ had been rejected by the chief priests and leaders of the Jews, Matthew (21:42) saw this as a fulfillment of the Old Testament. Paul also (I Cor 3:11) looked upon his preaching of Christ as laying a foundation upon which others might build. For Paul too, the church was a "building" (I Cor 3:9).

5. Peter uses the same figure that Paul had used and says, ye also, as lively stones or "and like living stones you are yourselves being built into a spiritual house so that you may be a holy priesthood." The preposition used in the original language here implies that the purpose for which these Gentile Christian stones are being selected, trimmed, and built into a structure is that they might function as a holy priesthood. With this, Peter again changes the figure momentarily from buildings and stones to the priesthood. Since the priesthood in the Old Testament had the function of offering animal sacrifices acceptable to God, in the metaphor the church as the new priesthood offers sacrifices through Jesus Christ, but they are spiritual sacrifices. The author of Hebrews (13:15) also uses the same figures but more specifically names the sacrifices as those of praise and confessing His name.

6. Another reference to the chosen and valuable cornerstone, Jesus Christ applies this statement also, he that believeth on him shall not be confounded. The word confounded (Gr kataischynō) comes from a textual variation in the Septuagint translation of Isaiah 28:16 which is quoted by the New Testament writers. Paul, in Romans 9:33 and 10:11, seems to define quite well the meaning of being confounded, or being "put to shame"; it means to "fail to be saved." Whatever the meaning in the Old Testament, the meaning of the quotation in the New Testament and here is, "the person who believes in Him will certainly not fail to be saved."

7-8. Christianity is a matter of one's attitude toward Jesus Christ. He uses the quotations from Isaiah to show that while believers consider this choice stone to be valuable in that they honor, respect, and worship Him, to the unbelievers and disobedient on the other hand Christ has become a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense. According to the Old Testament prophecy and Peter's view of its fulfillment, the "chief cornerstone" and foundation of salvation for some, has become the cause of destruction for others who refuse to believe in Him.

V. THE IMPLICATIONS OF HUMILITY. 2:9-3:12.

A. The Believer's Life in General. 2:9-21a.

9-10. But ye shows a strong contrast between unbelievers and Peter's readers who are Christians. The figure is changed again, and the focus is on the church (New Testament believers) to which are applied the words ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him. These words are from two Old Testament passages (Ex 19:6; Isa 43:21) and show that Peter considers that the privileges and responsibilities of Israel in the Old Testament are now being transferred to the church as the people of God in his own day. This same continuity is recognized by the other New Testament writers as well (see II Cor 4:6; Col 3:12; Rev 1:6). Along with the great blessings of being the heirs of God's salvation, however, there are great responsibilities.

Peter sums up these in the words that ye should show forth the praises of him. The word show forth (Gr exangellō) means literally "to tell out," and refers to the "preaching" of the gospel, the good news, or praises of God. His marvelous light (see II Cor 4:6) is probably a reference to Isaiah 9:1, and Christ as the "Light of the World." See also II Peter 1:3. Another amazing proof of the continuity between the Old Testament and Peter's age of fulfillment, and between Israel and the church, is the application of the Hosea passages (1:6, 9; 2:3, 23) directly to his readers and therefore to the church.

11 Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul;

12 Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evildoers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

13 Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

11-12. Dearly beloved, I beseech you. The word beseech (Gr parakaleō) actually denotes encouragement, and might better be translated, "My dear people, let me encourage you. . . ." Although this is the main verb in these two verses, it is completed by two others which comprise the content of the exhortation to these who are strangers and pilgrims (that is, they are in the world of the Gentiles, but no longer of the world.) The first exhortation is to abstain from fleshly lusts, and the reason given is that they are in constant battle against the soul or the spirit (cf. Gal 5:24). The second exhortation is to maintain good conduct among the Gentiles. It should be noted that conversation, as usual in the New Testament, does not refer to talking but to conduct. Note further that the word honest, with reference to conduct, does not mean merely the virtue we today call honesty; Peter means rather to say that one's whole life is to be good, in the sense of being "Christian." The purpose toward which all this care in conduct is directed is the glory of God. Even though some people might slander the believers as if they were evildoers, they would in the long run, as they observed their Christian conduct, be forced to glorify God in the day of visitation. This phrase comes from Isaiah 10:3 where it is the name for the day of punishment or judgment; since that eschatological day is for some a day of judgment and for others a day of vindication and salvation, the term can have either connotation (cf. Lk 1:68 and 19:44).

13. Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake. The word submit (Gr hypotassō) is the key to the whole section 2:11-3:12; it means literally "to arrange under," and is used in various contexts to indicate subjection or subordination. In military contexts it was used for the idea of rank. In various New Testament contexts it is used for the relationship between children and their parents, servants and their masters, or wives and their husbands. Here, Peter seems to command the believers, "fit into your place in the social structure with Christian humility." This idea of subordination to the system controls the whole passage. Notice that the word is used in verse 18 for servants, in 3:1 for wives, and implied in 3:7 for husbands (not subjection to their wives but to the social structure as Christians).

In this passage as well as in Ephesians 5, this word for "submit" is very closely related to the word for "humility" which is found in 3:8 as a summary of this whole passage. The implications of Christian humility for Christian living are first given generally in 2:13-17, and then specifically as they relate to servants, wives, and husbands. To every ordinance of man is a difficult phrase to translate; perhaps, "Be subject for the Lord's sake to every human institution." Peter writes that they are to be subject to the king because he is supreme; the king or ruler at this time was the Roman Emperor Nero. Christians respected the office regardless of the personal ethics of the man because they believed he had been appointed by God to rule.

14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well.

15 For so is the will of God, that with 14-17. Or unto governors. Since they are authorized by the king, the reasoning behind this philosophy is that we are all the servants of God (vs. 16) and so are obligated to submit to those whom He allows to be in office. The passage seems to be assuming a good government which recognizes, at least in gen-

I PETER 2:16

well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

16 As free, and not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.

17 Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king.

18 Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward.

19 For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully.

20 For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God.

21 For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:

eral, the laws of God according to the Scripture. Government is supposed to punish those who do evil (vs. 14), and reward those who do good. There are times when government is itself in violation of the power and authority given by God and contrary to Scripture, when the Christian must not submit (Acts 5:29). Peter himself on one occasion boldly refused to submit to authority on the grounds that it was contrary to the will of God (Acts 4:19). The general introduction to the subject of humility is summarized by four brief commandments in verse 17: Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king.

18-21a. Peter now approaches the subject of the implications of humility for specific groups, and deals first with Servants. The word used here for servants is used of household servants or domestics who received wages for what they did in the household. Out of respect for their masters they are to submit or conduct themselves properly under the circumstances of this social institution. This is Christian humility. Their conduct is not to be determined by whether their masters are good and gentle, but by Christian ethics; they must also submit to those who are “crooked” and difficult, since there are some people who are hard to get along with. For this is thankworthy. The word thankworthy (Gr charis) is idiomatic for “what pleases God”; the literal translation would be “grace,” which in the New Testament usually has the underlying connotation of something which is acceptable to God. Here, what pleases God is that a man can endure pain while suffering unjustly for the sake of his godly conscience.

A similar idiom is found in verse 20, For what glory is it. Here, the word “glory” is likewise idiomatic. It is not the punishment, or even enduring punishment which is creditable, but doing good, continuing to be humble, and continuing to submit even though your goodness is not recognized. For even hereunto were ye called. Peter indicates by this that the humility or submission that is advocated is the will of God for all Christians. At this point Peter introduces the example of Christ.

B. The Atonement of Christ. 2:21b-25.

21b. Christ also suffered for us. That the suffering of Christ was vicarious is indicated by the preposition for (Gr hyper), which means “in behalf of” or “instead of.” The passion of Christ was the most prominent aspect of the preaching of Christ, and was very familiar to all Christians. No mere human being could ever suffer as He suffered.

Leaving us an example. This, of course, is not the main purpose of the suffering of Christ (a participle of attendant circumstance in Greek) but it does so happen that His conduct even in His passion provides us with a perfect pattern of Christian humility, and this is what Peter offers here. Example (Gr hypogrammos) was literally something to “write under.” Originally a line of writing at the top of a tablet written by the teacher so that the child could write under it and make his letters like the master. Our Lord and Master suffered more than any other, and we are called upon to follow His humility. The figure is emphatic, here, since the word follow really means “follow exactly” and there are clear “footprints.” The mention of the suffering of Christ leads Peter into a recitation of the essentials of the messianic nature of the suffering experienced; He suffered, but more important than that, He suffered as the Servant of Jehovah, and as it was predicted of Him in the Old Testament. This was too important to Peter to be left unsaid; he had been rebuked as “Satan” for missing it before (Mk 8:31-33.)

22-23. Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth is a quotation from Isaiah 53:9 and was part of the apostolic preaching identifying Jesus as the Messiah. The silence of Christ in the fact of His extreme suffering is also a prominent idea

22 Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

23 Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:

24 Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed.

25 For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.

CHAPTER 3

LIKEWISE, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives;

2 While they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear.

3 Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, found in Isaiah 53:7. He as our example in humility left the vindication with God the Father.

24. Who his own self bare our sins in his own body is from Isaiah 53:4-5, and is used to show the vivid and detailed way in which Jesus fulfilled the prophecies and accomplished our redemption. He had no sins of His own (vs. 22); He suffered and died vicariously. He gave His body in death on the cross for the purpose (Greek final clause) that we being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness. Being dead (Gr apoginomai) means literally to "move away from," and might be better translated, "that we might die to sin and live to righteousness." The thought is that the life of Christian humility which is being exhorted here is a basic part of the reason for Christ's death on the cross. By whose stripes (wounds) is another supporting quotation from Isaiah 53:6.

25. For ye were as sheep going astray. Healing is one primary figure for redemption; coming home is another, probably suggested by it. Ezekiel 34:5-6 refers to the people of God as scattered sheep; Peter sees that the church has now been brought back, and since it is Christ who has accomplished this, He is the Shepherd. The word Bishop (Gr episkopos) meaning "manager" is used in the New Testament as synonymous with "elder" or "pastor," but is here applied to Christ as the ultimate Bishop of souls.

C. The Believer's Life at Home. 3:1-12.

3:1. Likewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands. This section (3:1-6) is grammatically related to the general statement on humility (2:13-17) by likewise (Gr homoios), and by the general dependent participial clause translated be in subjection. The word subjection (see on 2:13) says to the women readers, "Your part in applying humility to Christian living is to be a living testimony to your own husbands by the way you fit into the social structure; take your place in marriage seriously and be a good wife." It is obvious that the attitude encouraged here can only be expected from a Christian person; Peter does not imply that women are inferior, and therefore should submit to their husbands. A person who is born again has already submitted to God through Christ. If he wants to live Christian humility, he will also submit to government for God's sake, to his masters or employers, and now in this institution of marriage, the wife will submit to her husband (a good or bad husband) in the same spirit.

Does this mean that the husband is the boss in the institution of marriage? How can it mean anything else? The king is the boss, the employer is the boss, and now in the same context the husband is the boss. Keep in mind that in verse 7 Peter has a word to the husband concerning his part in submitting to the system. This does not mean, of course, that wives must obey their husbands if their husbands command something that will violate the law of God; here, the principle of Acts 4:19 would once more apply. The purpose toward which this unbearable humility is directed is that they also may without the word be won (Gr kerdainō). This is a business word and means "to make a profit" as opposed to experiencing a loss; it vividly portrays the credit and debit sides of the ledger. In the New Testament, the "business" of the church is "winning" the lost (Mt 28:19); the converts are in the sense of this word, "gains." In this verse Christian wives can win their husbands to the Lord just by applying humility and by being a good wife.

2. Conversation in the Bible means "conduct" or "behavior," and the kind of behavior suggested here is further described by chaste, and coupled with fear, fear meaning respect or reverence, and implying true humility.

3-4. Whose adorning (Gr kosmos) means to refer to the beauty or attractiveness which these husbands will see in their

I PETER 3:4

and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel;

4 But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.

5 For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands:

6 Even as Sara obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement.

7 Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; that your prayers be not hindered.

8 Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous:

9 Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing.

10 For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile:

11 Let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it.

12 For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open wives. The sense is, "Make sure your primary beauty is found in your heart and not merely in your clothes and jewelry." These verses should not be twisted to condemn the use of cosmetics or jewelry; they merely emphasize that, as far as God is concerned, it is more important to have a meek and quiet spirit.

5-6. For after this manner. Peter again turns to the Old Testament for illustrations to support his exhortation to humility. This is the way holy women . . . who trusted in God adorned themselves. Trusted (Gr elpizō) means literally "hoped" in God, and pictures a life of calm assurance and certainty about the fact that God will reward such humility. These women made themselves beautiful to God by being in subjection unto their own husbands. Sarah is the prime example. As Abraham was the father of the faithful, so Sarah is the mother of the faithful. Peter's readers should want to be her daughters; this can be accomplished by doing well. Doing well in this passage can only mean humbling oneself to submit to one's husband. The meaning of humility for wives becomes terribly clear with the concrete example of Sarah: she obeyed her husband and called him lord.

7. Likewise. This is the same word which was used in 3:1 to refer back to 3:18 and 3:13; by it Peter introduces the third specific group to which he applies the principle of humility. The use of this word implies that the husbands are also to be "subject" in the social institution of marriage which is in view here; the Greek word for subjection is not used but the idea is understood as now applying to husbands, just as it did to servants and wives. In what sense can husbands "be subject" in marriage? Certainly, they cannot be subject to their wives for that would contradict 3:1-6. In a marriage, someone has to be the head of the home; it cannot be a fifty-fifty split of authority, and democracy will not work here since the vote would be tied. The husband is the leader, and yet he must also submit in humility, not to his wife, but to the good of the marriage.

Ye husbands, is now addressing Christian husbands who may or may not have unsaved wives to win to the Lord. Dwell with them according to knowledge. The husband has a much greater responsibility than the wife; all the decisions of living together are his. Giving honor unto the wife may imply a great deal of humility and self-sacrifice in order to show this honor. In this way the husband can submit without neglecting leadership. As unto the weaker vessel does not imply inferiority, but probably does refer to physical strength. As being heirs together of the grace of life. The grace of life is the inheritance which has been received together; part of that grace is the wife's, and the husband is to see that she gets it. If the husband does not give honor to the wife, prayers will be hindered. All the responsibility in this verse is with the husband; all the blessing and honor belongs to the wife.

8-9. Finally. This does not signal the end of the letter, but the end of the section (2:11-3:12); this is to introduce another summary or general statement like that at the beginning. Again, the central idea is humility, and the same main verb is implied, namely, "submit" to one another, each one humbly filling his place in the Christian community by being or doing the things listed here. Be pitiful, be courteous should rather be translated, "have a tender heart and a humble mind."

10-12. For he that will love life. Although the arrangement of the text does not show it, verses 10-12 are a poem quoted from Psalm 34:13-17 of the Septuagint, the Greek version of the Old Testament. The poem sums up the implications of humility for all the aspects of life in general; it is the epitome of the Christian life. The person who wants a truly happy life, enjoying all God's blessings, must first turn away from evil in both word and deed. On the positive side, he must pursue or "run after" peace. This unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil.

kind of person can be happy because God's eye is on him for protection, God's ear is open to his prayer.

VI. THE CHRISTIAN ATTITUDE TOWARD SUFFERING. 3:13-4:19.

A. Christians and the World. 3:13-17.

13 And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

13. And who is he that will harm you. . . ? Paul had asked (Rom 8:34) a similar question, "Who can condemn you?" Peter seems to take the view that is highly unlikely that anyone would deliberately bring harm to someone who is a follower (Gr zēlotēs) or "zealot" of that which is good.

14 But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;

14. But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye. This is a future condition with the Greek optative mood indicating the possibility that some of them could suffer in the future, but even if they should suffer, they would in fact be happy. Happy does not mean they will be singing about it, but rather that they would in fact be privileged to suffer for the sake of Christ. This is exactly what Jesus had taught in the Beatitudes (Mt 5:10), and what Peter had reminded his readers of in 2:20.

15 But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear:

15. But sanctify the Lord God. Following another text, a better translation has, "Have no fear of them, nor be troubled, but in your hearts reverence Christ as Lord." Be ready always to give an answer (Gr apologia), that is not just a reply, but a defense of the hope that is in you. What Peter is suggesting is that suffering may be another opportunity to testify of the saving power of Christ and so win some of the persecutors. The word hope refers to the whole system or philosophy of Christianity in general, as well as specifically to the attitude of certainty and assurance about the resurrection and the coming of Christ. With meekness and fear. These indicate an attitude of humility toward men, and not fear but reverence and worship toward God.

16 Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

16-17. Having a good conscience. Again, Peter emphasizes that it is better to suffer for doing good than for doing evil. (On these verses, see 2:20.)

17 For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

B. Christ's Ministry on Earth. 3:18-22.

18 For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit:

18. For Christ also hath once suffered for sins. Some texts have "died for sins," but most interpreters opt for suffered because it fits the context better and is a very common word in this epistle. The word for translates three different Greek words in the verse; some translations have four "for's." The reason for the advice in verse 17 is, "Because Christ suffered" (Gr hōti). Christ suffered "concerning" (Gr peri) sins, and He suffered on our behalf, the Just One "in place of" (Gr hyper) unjust sinners. It is made very clear that His suffering was not just an exemplary suffering; it was vicarious, and it was an atonement for our sins. Its purpose was to bring us to God.

Peter now moves into the illustrative and hortatory part of his citation of the suffering of Christ. He is writing to those who may very soon have to suffer at the hands of wicked men, and so refers to the fact that Christ had also suffered at the hands of wicked men. This is apparently the meaning of the cryptic being put to death in the flesh. The word flesh is used by Peter to refer to mankind in 1:24, and this seems here to be the obvious opposite to the Spirit who raised Christ to life again. At any rate, it would seem that flesh and Spirit have a parallel but opposite meaning; if Jesus' flesh and spirit are meant rather than the Holy Spirit, it is difficult to view the resurrection as pertaining to only the spirit and not the body. Furthermore, the "in-his-flesh, in-his-spirit" interpretation says nothing as to the agents of the passive verbs, and gives no example or encouragement for Peter's readers.

19 By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison:

20 Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water.

21 The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ:

22 Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him.

CHAPTER 4

FORASMUCH then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;

2 That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.

3 For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciv-

19. By which also he went and preached connotes the agency of the Holy Spirit if we retain the AV translation, by the Spirit (vs. 18). In this view, maintaining the continuity between verse 18 and verse 19, the same Holy Spirit who raised Christ from the dead had enabled him to preach to the men of Noah's day through Noah himself. While this interpretation fits the context and is legitimate by twentieth-century standards, it does require some juggling of one's natural understanding of the original text. The alternative interpretation is to understand that before the resurrection someone "made alive" the human spirit of Jesus so that in this form He preached to the spirits in Hades. This interpretation has problems too; for example, the content of the preaching is supposed to be an announcement of victory rather than the preaching of the gospel message, but the wrong word is used (Gr kēryssō). Also, according to 4:6, the gospel is preached to the dead, and the word there definitely means "preach the gospel" or "evangelize" (Gr euangelizomai).

20-21. The ark . . . wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The mention of Noah and the ark provides the perfect opportunity to expound on the figurative correspondence between the ark and baptism, which doth also now save us. Technically, of course, it is not true that baptism saves; the merely mechanical performance of the religious rite would only make a sinner into a very wet sinner. Peter means to explain this with not the putting away of the filth of the flesh. What is meant is just as the ark had something to do with the deliverance of those people from the judgment of the Flood, so baptism, assuming that a person has accepted Christ as Saviour and desires to obey in this ordinance, has something to do with deliverance from sin. It's only a picture, a type, and the correspondence is very close.

22. Angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him. The mention of the resurrection and ascension calls for the declaration of Christ's victory over the powers; they have all been subjected to Him (Gr hypotassō). Just as Christians must submit to human social structures (2:13-3:12) to live in true humility, so the structures themselves together with all supernatural powers must submit to Jesus Christ who is over all (cf. Eph 1:21; Col 2:15; Heb 2:5).

C. Christ's Example in Suffering. 4:1-6.

4:1-2. Peter now goes back to the thought of the suffering of Jesus mentioned in verse 18, in order to encourage these believers who might very shortly have to suffer themselves. Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh. No article or preposition occurs before either use of flesh in verse 1 or the use in 3:18; the contexts alone must determine the meaning. Arm yourselves likewise with the same mind. Arm (Gr hoplizomai) means to "equip" or "outfit" as one would outfit an army unit with the best possible weapons for a particular battle. The best "weapon" here would be the same mind (Gr ennoia) or view toward the suffering that Christ Himself had. It was not that Christ enjoyed suffering, but He endured it in order to accomplish our salvation (3:18). For (Gr hoti) may indicate the content of the proper view toward suffering at the hands of sinful men, namely that he that hath suffered . . . hath ceased from sin (Greek perfect tense, meaning "to have truly stopped"). That (Gr eis) indicates the reason or purpose for so equipping oneself, that is, so that he need no longer live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God. "In the flesh" in verse 2 has a preposition which may mean "among."

3. For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles. This might better be translated, "You have already spent too much time thinking like iousness, lusts, excess of wine, revelings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:

4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you:

5 Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

6 For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.

7 But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.

8 And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins.

9 Use hospitality one to another without grudging.

10 As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.

11 If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

Gentiles, living in licentiousness, passion, parties, carousing, drinking, and meaningless idolatry."

4. Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them. Peter's readers were, of course, Gentiles, and had lived like Gentiles all their lives. Their salvation and conversion to Christianity was much more profound than we can imagine today. It is no wonder that the companions of these people were surprised when they no longer continued to live in sin. Speaking evil of you (Gr blasphēmeo). Since they were unable to understand the Christians, they abused them.

5-6. Who shall give account. There will come a time when they shall have to settle up with God who is ready to judge the quick (living) and the dead. For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead. The idea here parallels 3:19, although the word preached (Gr euangelizomai) here is different and means specifically to "evangelize." It is probably impossible to be sure, but to the dead could mean that they are dead when Peter writes, but were alive when the gospel was preached to them. At least we know that the Bible does not teach that men have a second chance to be saved after death. That they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit. If this refers to the opportunity these Gentiles had to be saved while they were still alive, we might rephrase it, "They had a choice between human condemnation by wicked men, or divine life by the Spirit." This interpretation at least allows a consistent meaning throughout the passage for "flesh" and "Spirit."

D. Christian's Conduct through Suffering, 4:7-19.

7. But the end of all things is at hand. As he continues to develop the theme of the Christian attitude toward suffering, Peter wishes now to reemphasize the positive elements of the Christian life in light of the consummation of all things. At hand (Gr enggizō) is in the perfect tense in Greek and emphasizes the certainty of the nearness of the end. Although this word is used only once in Peter, it was a frequent topic in the apostolic preaching and in the preaching of Jesus and John the Baptist. An equivalent statement in James 5:8 says that the Parousia of the Lord is very near.

8. Have fervent charity means, of course, "warm love" toward each other as Christian brothers; it has nothing to do with either giving money as a contribution or the slippery, formal, outward courtesy of good culture. Charity shall cover the multitude of sins. Peter draws support from the Greek Old Testament with the quotation of Proverbs 10:12, which simply means that if a person has true love for others, his shortcomings will not be obvious.

9-11. Hospitality . . . without grudging (Gr gonggysmos) is easily understood if difficult to perform; hospitality, again, should not be confused with courtesy which is far less costly. Because of the separation of verses in our Bible, it is easy to overlook the fact that verses 10 and 11 are an exposition of "love" and "hospitality" in verses 8 and 9. As every man hath received the gift (Gr charisma) does not refer to talents, nor does the word have the article in the original. Not "the gift," but "any gift" (meaning something one gets for nothing) is to be given in the same way that it is received, without grudging. This is the thing that makes us good stewards of God's grace. Minister the same one to another in this context means being hospitable to one another. In the early church, apostles and preachers were constantly travelling from one town to another spreading the gospel. In this type of ministry, they needed someone to minister to them in return by providing the physical necessities of life. The gospel came as a free gift, so should the support of the gospel preachers. In this passage, both the 12 Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you:

13 But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy.

14 If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.

15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody in other men's matters.

16 Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf.

17 For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?

18 And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

preaching of the message of the gospel, and ministering to the physical needs of the preachers through genuine Christian hospitality, are to be done to glorify God in the name of Jesus Christ.

12-13. Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you. It is possible that the Amen of verse 11 was an attempt to close the letter and Peter may have just now heard of some new development in which some of his readers are involved. If not, then he feels that he needs to say a bit more about the attitude of a Christian toward suffering. Either way fiery trial need not refer to literal fire like that of Rome in A.D. 64. The important thing here is to note how they are to look upon whatever trial it is; they are not to consider it strange (Why me, Lord?), but to rejoice (consider themselves privileged) that they can share in the sufferings of Christ. Then, in the Revelation of Christ, they will be able to be glad also with exceeding joy. Three words for joy are used to emphasize true happiness at His coming, and the translations are necessarily awkward at expressing this.

14. If ye be reproached (Gr oneidizō) is present tense and literally, "if you are being reproached"; the word denotes heaping insults upon a person. The reproach here is caused by confessing the name. The apodosis of the sentence implies "you are" really fortunate, that is, according to the teachings of Christ (Mt 5:10) and Christianity. Happy are ye. The reason they should consider themselves fortunate is because of the presence of the Spirit which is a sign of the approval, blessing, and protection of God. The spirit of glory and of God. Glory may be an allusion to the "Shekinah" glory cloud of the Old Testament (Ex 33:9-10; 40:34-35).

15-16. But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody. Peter again returns to this truth mentioned before in 2:20 and 3:17, to show that it is not suffering in itself which is virtuous, but suffering for the name of the Lord, or as a Christian, which counts. None of his readers should suppose that just punishment for sin by the government would bring the praise of God. The name "Christian" was applied in New Testament times as a term of derision (Acts 11:26; 26:28). Just being a Christian was at times punishable by death, or lesser penalties. History indicates that many have been killed for admitting to being Christians in these times of persecution by the government. Let him not be ashamed, that is, of this name of being a "Christian." Let him rather be proud of it, and use this derogatory name as a means and instrument for bringing glory to God.

17-18. For the time is come. The word time (Gr kairos) refers to a specific, designated, or predicted time when something is supposed to happen. Peter is again making reference to the end time; these verses are an apocalyptic pronouncement with application from the persecution which is beginning to come upon believers. One of the elements of apocalyptic discourse is judgment (Gr krima); the meaning here would be rather general, the same as "suffering" or "punishment." The application runs that if in the end time judgment and punishment are to come, and we are now beginning to see suffering and punishment (for being a Christian) of the people of God (this is the meaning of house of God), this must mean that the end of time is here, or at least very close. What shall the end be, that is, what will happen most certainly before this is all over, to them that obey not the gospel of God? There is obviously no doubt at all about what will happen to them; they will be judged, and all the apocalyptic predictions about God's wrath upon His enemies will be fulfilled. Peter is attempting to encourage the believers to gladly face any dangers or suffering for Christ by appealing to the apocalyptic comfort that God will punish the ungodly in that day. He draws support from his deep knowledge of the Old Testament and quotes Proverbs 11:31, if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

19 Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

CHAPTER 5

THE elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:

19. In summary of this section, Peter exhorts, let them that suffer (the Greek present tense implies the suffering may already have begun) . . . commit (Gr paradidōmi). It is interesting that this is the same word Peter used in 2:23 to describe what Jesus did in His suffering for our sins on the Cross; He committed Himself "to him that judgeth righteously." Compare Luke 23:46, where Jesus committed His spirit to God, and Acts 7:59, where Stephen prayed in his martyrdom for the Lord Jesus to receive his spirit. This may be an encouragement to bravery in martyrdom if it becomes inevitable, rather than telling Christians to pray for deliverance.

VI. THE CHRISTIAN AND THE COMING OF THE LORD. 5:1-9.

A. Exhortation to the Elders. 5:1-4.

5:1. The elders which are among you I exhort. The elders (Gr presbyteros) are not a group in any one place, since this is a circular letter intended for several different congregations, but probably individuals who have been appointed by the apostles in various cities (see 1:1; Acts 14:23). Elder as the title for an office has not to do with age, but respect (which originally came from age). Peter has a special exhortation for these spiritual leaders, and to make it more effective, he briefly lists his superior qualifications. Who am also an elder. The original has the compound word (Gr sympresbyteros) which means an elder serving along with you who are elders.

Peter is also a witness of the sufferings of Christ. The word "witness" (Gr martyrs) is the word from which we get the English word "martyr," but denotes here a person who testifies to the truth of something. A witness of the sufferings of Christ, then, does not mean someone who has necessarily seen the sufferings, but someone who testifies to the truth and meaning of what happened. The apostles were all witnesses in the sense that they affirmed Jesus to be the Suffering Servant of Jehovah, who according to the Old Testament, was to accomplish the salvation of God's people. Peter learned this himself (cf. Mk 8:31-33) and was now an authoritative proclaimer of the sufferings of Christ. It should be noted that the prophets (1:11) had the Spirit's witness of the sufferings of Christ, long before anyone had "seen" these sufferings.

And also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed. A partaker (Gr koinonos) is one who shares in something, or is a partner in it. It is not likely that Peter would call himself a "partner" in something that was not yet revealed; it may be that he means to say that he is a partner in the great glory of salvation which was revealed (partially) to the prophets and now had already been fulfilled in his time. See again 1:3-12, and note especially verse 1:11 concerning the glory that was to follow the sufferings of Christ according to the prophets. Shall be (Gr mello) is a present participle in the original which might be better translated, "the glory that was to be revealed," meaning the prophesied blessing of salvation to the Gentiles. Note in this connection, Acts 2:39 from the preaching of Peter at Jerusalem.

2. The content of Peter's exhortation to the elders is expressed in the first word of verse 2, Feed the flock of God. This one word sums up the total pastoral responsibility to the flock, or congregation. The word feed (Gr poimainō) is a cognate of flock (Gr poimnion), and is especially important because of the biblical metaphor of the people of God as a flock, and their spiritual leaders as shepherds (Gr poimēn). The responsibilities of the shepherds (or elders, the terms are synonymous) are many, but are quite obvious from this metaphor of "tending the flock.” Compare Jn 21:16; Acts 20:28; I Tim 3:2-7; Tit 1:11; Phm 14; I Pet 2:25. The shepherd has the total responsibility for the care and welfare of the flock; he does not just feed. This basic concept has come down to the present day in the word “pastor” (from the Latin pascere, “feed”); it is the key concept in seminary training.

2 Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;

Peter defines his exhortation to the elders with three sets of negative and positive words; two sets of words deal with how to pastor as far as the pastor’s attitude is concerned, while the third set deals with how to pastor as far as the method is concerned. Not by constraint, but willingly means that the pastor or elder is “called” to this vocation; he does not need to be pressed into it, for he feels called, he wants to do it. This is the proper attitude for the pastor today as well; he should enjoy his work. Not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind. Filthy lucre (Gr aischrokerdōs) is an adverb from two words meaning “shameful gain.” Since the word is used only one time in all Christian literature, it is difficult to determine its precise meaning, but we know that its opposite here is of a ready mind (Gr prothymōs) which means “eagerly.” The passage does not say that there is something wrong with money, or with the pastor getting paid. The Bible clearly teaches that pastors should be paid at least as well as other professional people. The pastor or elder should not choose this vocation just because it is such a lucrative occupation (fortunately, there is no danger of this today!), however, but should be eager to do it.

3 Neither as being lords over God’s heritage, but being ensamples to the flock.

4 And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

6 Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time:

3. The third set of words, Neither as being lords over God’s heritage, but being examples to the flock, has to do with method of ministry. Another translation has, “not as domineering over those in your charge.” The idea is that there is to be no “browbeating,” “whipcracking,” or “intimidation.”

4. Peter refers to the second coming of Christ as the manifestation of the chief Shepherd, when the shepherds will be rewarded with a glorious and unfading crown.

B. Exhortation to the Younger. 5:5-9.

5. Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Both words are in the plural; the younger men likewise have an exhortation from Peter. It is to submit (Gr hypotassō) to the elders. See 2:13-17 for the meaning of this word which here implies that the younger men, the elders or pastors, as well as all Christians in general (in this text, the congregation) must fit themselves into the social structure (here the church) and do their part. The elders are not told to submit because they are the leaders, but it is implied that they submit to the “Chief Shepherd.” Be clothed with humility. The word be clothed (Gr engkomboomai) means literally to “tie on” an apron; here the thing to be tied on is humility, which is the same word used by Peter in 3:8 in the same close connection with the word “submit.” Humility is simply assuming the proper role in relationship to others. Again Peter draws upon the Old Testament to prove his point by quoting Proverbs 3:34.

6. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time. Due time (Gr katros) sounds like “by and by” or “after sufficient time has passed,” but the word really means a specific and designated time; here it refers to God’s time, namely the second coming of Christ, and more precisely, at the Revelation. Humble (synonymous with humility and submit above) is the opposite of exalt; it means literally “think low,” but in actual usage in the Bible it does not gender a lack of self-confidence or a low self-image. Humility in the Bible, in fact, is an attitude that will bolster and support self-confidence, for it simply means assuming the role that God has assigned to us in life. True humility does not say, “I’m no good; I can’t.” It says, “This is what God wants me to do; I shall.”

7 Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you.

8 Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:

9 Whom resist stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.

10 But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you.

11 To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 By Silvanus, a faithful brother unto you, as I suppose, I have written briefly, exhorting, and testifying that this is the true grace of God wherein ye stand.

13 The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you; and so doth Marcus my son.

14 Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.

7. Casting all your care. Humility means that we do not have to bear our anxieties; we are told to "toss them over to him" (casting is a participle of attendant circumstance which assumes the imperative character of the main verb here). The two words for "care" in verse 7 must be distinguished: the first means anxieties, the second refers to the meticulous, personal concern God has about us. He is interested in us and willing to carry all our anxieties if we are willing to do what He wants us to do.

8-9. Several summary exhortations are now given: Be sober is nearly the same in meaning as be vigilant. The devil is pictured as a prowling lion who is seeking someone to devour. The mention of suffering twice in the context indicates that the devil is to be blamed for it, but is to be resisted with strong faith.

VIII. CONCLUSION. 5:10-14.

10-11. Verses 10 and 11 are more than a doxology and close; they are a great encouragement to these suffering saints. They promise that God will Himself make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, and settle the faithful.

12-14. By Silvanus probably indicates the amanuensis or secretary who assisted Peter. Note that he is a faithful brother (a preacher in his own right, and apostolic companion of Paul for some time). The purpose is restated: to encourage, and testify (solemnly affirm) that this is the true grace (note that he means by grace the whole system of Christianity). Greetings are included from the church (implied by the feminine form of elected together) at Rome (which here has the symbolic name of Babylon).

The Second Epistle Of # PETER

INTRODUCTION

Authorship. Peter identifies himself as the “apostle of Jesus Christ” in 1:1 and maintains this claim by implication in 1:14 with reference to the Lord’s statement about his death. The claim is assumed in 1:18 when he recalls the Mount of Transfiguration experience, and again in his mention of Paul in 3:15. In 3:1 the author mentions by the way that this is the second epistle to these same general readers.

Although there is little certain external evidence (Origen, A.D. 250 is the first to definitely mention it by name) for the book in the earliest times, it was finally and formally recognized as canonical in A.D. 397 at the Council of Carthage. Origen and Eusebius show that there was dispute about its authenticity at first among some of the churches, but it cannot be denied that quotations and allusions of it occur in Irenaeus, Justin Martyr, the Shepherd of Hermas, the Didache, and Clement of Rome.

In modern times some scholars have questioned the authenticity of the book because of the great dissimilarity in style and content between I and II Peter. Other scholars, however, have demonstrated convincingly that there are definitely similarities in style and content between the two books, as well as between II Peter and the sermons of Peter in Acts. Arguments from style and content seem to cancel each other out; but no one has ever disproved the apparently direct and honest claims of the book itself.

Jude seems to be slightly later in date than

II Peter, and attests to the apostolic authorship of the latter by his apparent use of it. There is, in short, no reason to doubt the author’s statement in 1:1 that he is the Apostle Peter.

Purpose. Reports on the activity of false teachers among the churches of Asia must have come to Peter shortly after the writing of the first epistle. He seems very concerned about the effect these false teachers might have on his readers, who may have already been depressed by suffering and persecution according to I Peter. The book, then, intends to remind the believers of the importance of supplementing their faith with virtue, knowledge, and steadfastness (1:5-7, 12). Peter also turns to the Old Testament again in this letter to find illustrations for the dangers of listening to the false teachers (ch. 2), and reminds the believers of the approaching day in which the ungodly false teachers will be destroyed (3:1-10). In the light of these facts, Peter encourages his readers to holy lives as they wait for the coming of the Day of God (3:11-13).

Date. This second epistle must have been written quite close to the end of the Apostle Peter’s life. He sensed (1:15) that the end was near for him, and wanted to provide written reminders for his readers. The terminus a quo would be, according to 3:16, the circulation of several of the epistles of Paul; the terminus ad quem, the martyrdom of Peter in about A.D. 67.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-2.

SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ:

2 Grace and peace be multiplied unto

1:1-2. Simon Peter includes both his given Jewish name and the symbolic Christian name given to him by the Lord Jesus (Mt 16:18). A servant and an apostle. Apostle claims the authority to be heard in the name of the Lord, but servant (Gr doulos) is a word of deep humility meaning literally “slave” and implying total and permanent ownership by a master. Paul also used this you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord.

word to describe his relationship to the Lord (e.g., Rom 1:1) as did Jude the brother of the Lord. It is difficult to see why, if the author here had been an impostor, a false author would have changed the introductory formula in this way and made it different from I Peter. This seems then to be an open and direct claim to acceptance. Here, believers are called those who have obtained like precious faith with us. Obtained (Gr langchanō) means "to be chosen to a position by divine will or by lot," and suggests exactly the same theology as elect in I Peter 1:2. Christians are those who are saved only by the grace of God; they do not obtain it by their own initiative or works. The word like precious expresses the same theme as I Peter 1:3-12, namely, the glory of salvation. We have been chosen to the faith . . . through (Gr en), literally "in" the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ. In order to show that the titles God and Savior both refer to the same person, the translation should be, ". . . in the righteousness of our God and Savior Jesus Christ." Peter clearly calls Jesus God.

II. SUPPLEMENTING OUR FAITH. 1:3-21.

A. Christian Virtues. 1:3-14.

3 According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:

3. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness. There is no main verb in verse 3, and we must assume that the whole of verses 3 and 4 is preparatory in some way for the major exhortation of the chapter in verse 5, "supplement your faith." Verses 3-4 are perhaps a review for his readers of what was started in I Peter 1:3-9. Hath given (Gr dōreomai) means "to freely give"; the stress is on "freeness" of the gift. The names Dorothy and Theodore come from this word and mean "God's gift." In the original, the perfect tense also stresses the certainty of the fact and possession of this gift.

The context of the gift is expressed in the words all things that pertain unto life and godliness. Everything that has to do with life or serving God has been freely given so that we lack nothing. Through the knowledge of him expresses the means through which He gives us these things; it is through knowing Him (objective genitive in Greek). Him that hath called us to glory and virtue does not refer to our glory and virtue, but that of Jesus Christ. A better translation would be, ". . . through the knowledge of him who called us by his own glory and excellence." Compare I Peter 2:9, which uses both "called," and "virtue" in the same sense as here.

4 Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

4. Whereby are given unto us (Gr dōreomai). Once more, as in verse 3, the perfect tense is used in Greek to imply the certainty of the unmerited gift of his great and precious promises. The word promises (Gr epangelma) really is not the promise, but the result of the promise, namely its "fulfillment." Peter proposes in both epistles that we no longer live in the age of prophecy and promise, but in the new age, the age of fulfillment. Taken together, these two words stress that God has in fact freely given to us the very things that He had promised in the Old Testament. The verse corresponds to I Peter 1:12, and emphasizes the privilege of living at a time when through the preaching of the gospel the promises were fulfilled. That by these ye might be partakers. The final clause shows the reason that the promises were fulfilled: that they might become partakers of the divine nature. That is, God intended by accomplishing salvation in Christ that believers would share a common quality of life. Peter is not making new promises for the future, he is proclaiming fulfillment and present reality for his readers; he is a preacher and a witness, not a prophet. That this is true is seen also in his use of the word partakers which he had used in the same sense in I Peter 5:1 where he stated that he was a partner, not that he would be.

Having escaped (Gr apopheugō) is a participle of attendant circumstance and must be translated according to the mood of the main verb; the vague translation having escaped implies that we can become partakers of the divine life only in the far-off future after we have safely escaped the corruption of the world. Peter's point is totally different from this: God has made it possible for us to share this new quality of life now by having accomplished the promised salvation in Christ. A more accurate translation would be, ". . . so that through these you might escape from lustful, worldly corruption and share a new divine life." This is the same general idea that was expressed in I Peter 1:3 and 23 where he called it a new birth and used the same word for "corrupt seed" from which we are born.

5 And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;

5. And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith. A translation may read, "For this very reason, make every effort to supplement your faith with virtue. . . ." The word add to (Gr epichorēgeō) originally in the Athenian drama festivals meant "to finance, support, or back a chorus," and financial support is primary to most usage of the word in Christian literature; in 1:11 it means "provide." Here Peter calls upon believers to put everything they have into supporting their faith with virtue, etc. Faith is not something the believers could "provide" in this verse (cf. 1:1); faith has been given to them or rather they have been chosen to it. What they are called upon to do here is to "provide" certain items of support for faith. Each item is, in turn, to be supported or supplemented with another. Seven items are needed to support perfect faith; each of them is a philosophical abstraction of an aspect of the Christian life or divine nature that we share.

6 And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness;

6-7. To read the list one must understand the main verb "support" with each quality named. The most important item of support to each quality will be the quality which follows in the list. At the end of the list is the quality which support all the others and is most needed in the Christian life, love (cf. I Cor 13). Temperance means "self-control," and this is the item that is most needed to support knowledge. An ancient Greek saying put it briefly, "Know yourself." Self-control requires more than anything else patience, which should rather be translated "endurance," or "strength of character" (Gr hypomonē).

7 And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.

8. For if these things be in you, and abound. Peter now points out how important these items of support to faith really are. If they exist in you and if they abound you will be effective and fruitful. These are the elements of success in the Christian life. They make you (Gr kathistēmi) has the connotation of "distinguishing as" and could be translated, ". . . they keep you from being ineffective or unfruitful." In the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. The word knowledge (Gr epignōsis) is the same one which recurs in 1:2, 3, 8, and 2:10; it means "knowledge" or "recognition of," and may be equal to the simplex form used in 1:5-6; 3:18. There is an emphasis on knowledge in this chapter: grace and peace are in the knowledge or recognition of God (1:2), all things are in the knowledge or recognition of God (1:2), all things are given through this knowledge (1:3), and knowledge must support virtue (1:5).

8 For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9. He that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Verse 9 is a conditional sentence corresponding to the one in verse 8; they are positive and negative reinforcements of the importance of the seven indispensable qualities of the Christian life listed in verses 5-7. The protasis here establishes that the person does not possess these qualities; the apodosis is a metaphor: he is blind. The two circumstantial participles explain first the meaning of the metaphor (cannot see afar, Gr myōpazō, from which we get "myopia"), and then the application of the metaphor: he has spiritual myopia. He never got close enough to Christianity to focus on the fact that he needed to be 9 But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.

10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:

11 For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth.

13 Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance;

14 Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.

15 Moreover I will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.

16 For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty.

17 For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

18 And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.

19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in cleansed from his sins! It should be obvious that the object of the forgetting here is not that he was purged, since he had never been cleansed in the first place. What escaped him was "the cleansing"; he never saw that his sins had to be cleansed or washed away before he could live the Christian life.

10. In verse 10, Peter urges his readers to confirm calling and election, not memory. It does not seem likely that a person could forget it if his sins had been washed away by the atoning death of Christ, but the whole matter could escape his notice if he were not urged to make sure about it. We cannot be sure of calling and election if we have not been purged (vs. 9) from our former sin. On the other hand, if these are confirmed by the fact that we have been cleansed from our old sins, it is certain that we shall never fall (Greek subjunctive of emphatic future negation)!

11. For so (meaning "in this way") an entrance (Gr eisodos, with the article, "the way into," and there is only one Way; see Jn 14:6) shall be ministered (Gr epichorēgeō, see 1:5) unto us. This means that if we make sure our sins are washed away by Christ, God, the richest supporter possible, will back us and provide everything else that is needed on our road to heaven.

12-14. Wherefore refers back to According as (1:3) and now introduces a new paragraph based on the propositions of the previous one. Since we share a new nature, and have a new quality of life in Christ, Peter says, I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things. A more accurate translation has, "I intend always to remind you of these things." What is given here is the purpose for the writing of the letter. Though ye know them, and be established in the present truth, is a tactful concession. As long as I am in this tabernacle. Tabernacle (Gr skēnōma), meaning "tent," is a Christian metaphor for the body or this earthly life as a temporary quarters for the real person which lives on after death.

To stir you up by putting you in remembrance. Stir (Gr diegeirō) is the word for "wake up" from sleep. Peter's purpose is to remind them and wake them up because he feels that suddenly and unexpectedly he will be taken from them (alluding to Jn 21:18). He wants them to have a reminder for reference after his death.

B. Christian Doctrine. 1:15-18.

15-18. The two key verbs in this paragraph of the letter are made known (16) and We have (19). In the light of the work of false teachers, these are the things Peter wants them to remember. For we have not followed is not a main verb in the original, but a circumstantial participle of cause; the reason Peter and the other apostles preached was not because they had researched (followed, Gr exakoloutheō) and believed in sophisticated fables (Gr mythos) but because they were eyewitnesses of the greatness of Jesus Christ. The main verb is we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. What is referred to here is the preaching of the apostles. Peter says that they (the apostles) preached Christ because they were eyewitnesses of the gospel events; the implication is that the false teachers were not, and therefore should not be listened to. To further corroborate the apostolic authority of his message, Peter vividly recalls actually hearing the voice of God who proclaimed on that holy mountain, "This is my beloved Son." Peter and the apostles knew what they were talking about when they preached; this is the meaning of the reminder here. Could the false teachers come up with this kind of authority?

C. Christian Scriptures. 1:19-21.

19. The other key verb in the passage is We have also a more sure word of prophecy. The meaning here is clearer in the translation, "We also have the confirmed, prophetic Word."

II PETER 1:20

a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:

20 Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

21 For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER 2

BUT there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.

3 And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now

Peter is appealing not only to the apostolic preaching of Christ, but to the Old Testament prophetic Word, that is, the promises and prophecies about Christ which have now been fulfilled. More sure (Gr hebaios) is a predicate adjective here. It means "confirmed," "well-established," and often used with the promises or prophecies which have been fulfilled in Christ (cf. I Pet 1:12, "which in the Gospel have been declared as fulfilled"). They must, at least, believe the Old Testament. Peter insists in fact, that they must take heed to the Old Testament; it is like a light. This is of course another simile: they are in the dark dungeon of sin, they need a lamp to find their way out; they need it until dawn. They have, of course, already seen the light and believed the Old Testament prophecies about Christ. Both the verbs are progressive present in the original; they are "doing well," and they are already "paying attention" to the light. This figure suggests the metaphor of Christ as the light: like the dawn, He shines into their hearts (cf. Lk 1:78-79, Jn 8:12).

20. Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture. The word scripture (Gr graphē) is obviously the Old Testament Scripture and is synonymous here with the prophetic Word. Peter uses the same word with the same meaning in 3:16 to refer to the "other Scriptures" which the false teachers pervert. It is also used in I Peter 2:6 to refer to the Old Testament. Paul used it as well in II Timothy 3:16 when he said, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." Is of any private interpretation. This verse needs to be retranslated. First note that it is not interpretation (Gr epilysis) really tended here (Gr ginomai means "become," "originate"); origin is implied in the word came in verse 21 as well as in the process of inspiration described there. The word translated as interpretation (Gr epilysis) really means "ingenuity." Secondly, note that private does not mean the opposite of "public" but means "pertaining to a particular individual" which in this case is the prophet. Thirdly, note that specific reference is made to the Old Testament prophecies, the same prophetic Word mentioned in verse 19. The implied question is "How can you recognize a real prophetic Word?" The reply given is, "No prophecy of Scripture ever arises from human ingenuity, for never did a single Old Testament prophecy come at the impulse of a man; what those men spoke was the Word of God because they were being influenced by the Holy Spirit" (II Pet 1:20-21). In these verses then Peter has made it possible on the basis of his reminder of the apostolic preaching, as well as on the basis of the Old Testament, for his readers to recognize a false prophet when they see one. Now in chapter two he will become more blunt.

21. Prophecy refers to the total revelation of God which did not originate by human invention but as the writers of scripture were moved by the Holy Ghost, meaning they were "borne along" by the Holy Spirit. Thus, He moved upon them in such a way that their words were indeed the very Word of God!

III. SECURING OUR FAITH. 2:1-22.

A. Warning Against False Prophets. 2:1-14.

2:1-3. There were false prophets among the people. The people here means the people of Israel, God's chosen people, and Peter believes, like Paul, that "... these things happened unto them for examples: and they are written for our admonition" (I Cor 10:11). See also I Peter 2:9 where people is applied to the church. Deuteronomy 13:1-5 warned the people that if a false prophet came and tried to draw them away from the worship of God, they should not listen. It was a test to see if they loved God with all their hearts. Peter is telling his readers the same thing; he draws upon all the apocalyptic passages he knows to show that the false teachers are despicable to God and doomed to destruction as His enemies. Peter warns that there shall be of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.

false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in (that is smuggle into the church false doctrine without the people knowing it) damnable heresies (literally heresies of destruction, which means that the faith will be destroyed if people believe these things). The reason the false teachers sneak in heresy is because they deny the Lord that bought them. This does not mean that Christ is their Lord (master, despot) or ever was, but He could have been since He had paid the price for their release from sin. They denied Him (renounced) and would not have anything to do with Him when they could have been saved, and so will bring upon themselves swift destruction.

The problem for Peter and the church is that many shall follow them. Paul mentions the great apostasy of the end times in II Thessalonians 2:3 as well as in II Timothy 4:1. This is harmful to the testimony of the way of truth (another name for the church). Make merchandise of you. The word (Gr emporeuomai) means "exploit." The false teachers are in it only for the money (cf. I Pet 5:2). Their judgment and destruction are sure since they have made it obvious that they are the enemies of God, and God's enemies will be judged.

4. Peter again draws from the Old Testament to make it very obvious that the false teachers who are exploiting (or soon will be) his Christians readers will certainly be punished in the day of judgment by our Righteous God. This is the implied apodosis to the "if" clause begun in verse 4 but never completed; verse 9 could be translated, "... then the Lord knows how to. . . ." Three terrible examples of God's judgment are given. For if God spared not the angels that sinned. In Jude 6 they are called "the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation." Compare Genesis 6:1-4. These are said to be chained in darkness until the judgment.

5. The second example is the old world, meaning the people who lived in the time of Noah before the Flood. God destroyed the whole world by the flood (Gr kataklysmos), the great cataclysm, and saved only eight people. The word saved here (Gr phyllassō) means literally "guard" or "protect," and this is exactly what God did for Noah and his family (eighth is an idiom which includes the other seven).

6-8. The third classic example (Gr hypodeigma) is the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah from which only Lot was delivered (Gr hruomai, meaning "rescue"). It strikes us very strange that Lot, of all people, should be used as an example of the righteous. You will remember, however, that in this instance he is the only person who could be used since he was the only one delivered (except for his daughters who were probably more immoral than he). Perhaps in contrast to the totally wicked population of the cities, he was righteous, or perhaps we do not have as much information as we need to judge. At any rate, we are told that he vexed his righteous soul (Peter uses the word "just" or "righteous" of Lot three times here) from day to day with their unlawful deeds. It is interesting that the Flood and Sodom and Gomorrah were used by Jesus as examples of judgment (Lk 17:25-30).

9. These examples were cited by Peter to show that The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly . . . and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished. To be punished is a present participle in the original, and might better be rendered, "... and to keep the unrighteous under punishment until the day of judgment." The Lord will deliver the godly, but He will punish the ungodly, and especially these false teachers to whom Peter applies this whole section (vs. 10a).

10-14. Peter now describes them as bold and willful, slandering even the angels of God (cf. Eph 1:21; Col 1:16). But even the angels do not bring a slanderous word against them. But these, as natural brute beasts (i.e., "dumb animals," Gr zōon). So deserving are these false teachers of judgment, that Peter says

4 For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment;

5 And spared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly;

6 And turning the cities of Sodom and Go-mōr'ra into ashes condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly;

7 And delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked:

8 (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds);

9 The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished:

10 But chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise government. Presumptuous are they, selfwilled, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities.

II PETER 2:11

11 Whereas angels, which are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation against them before the Lord.

12 But these, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption;

13 And shall receive the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure to riot in the day time. Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you;

14 Having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: an heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:

15 Which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Bō'sōr, who loved the wages of unrighteousness;

16 But was rebuked for his iniquity: the dumb ass speaking with man's voice forbad the madness of the prophet.

17 These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest: to whom the mist of darkness is reserved for ever.

18 For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that were clean escaped from them who live in error.

19 While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.

20 For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.

they ought to be caught and killed like animals, they will be in fact. As a reward for their wrongdoing, they will themselves be wronged in the judgment. They shall utterly perish in their own corruption, should rather be translated, “. . . they will be destroyed like them” (i.e., as if they were dumb animals). They revel in the daytime; they are like blotches and blemishes, and have an insatiable appetite for sin.

B. Characteristics of False Prophets. 2:15-22.

15-16. They have forsaken the right way and the point of the whole description is that they will get what they deserve.

17. These are wells without water. More properly “springs” (Gr pēgē); either way they are quite worthless without water. Clouds (or mists) are not much help for watering a crop. For these worthless false teachers, the gloom of darkness is reserved.

18-19. For when they speak. Probably this is a participle of means; it is by their well-modulated, authoritative, bloated vanities that they are able to lure (Gr deleazō, a fishing term) those that were clean escaped (rather, those who are just now barely escaping). New converts are easy prey for these slick-talking pseudo-Christians who are really false teachers. Although they promise freedom (vs. 19), they are themselves slaves of corruption and sin. Here the principle of Romans 6:16 is stated: if anyone is in fact conquered by something, he is actually a slave to it.

20-22. Verse 20 begins with an if which must not be overlooked. Peter does not say that these false teachers have escaped from the pollutions of the world. The main verb is overcome (Gr hētaomai) which is in the Greek present tense, implying that they are now being overcome or conquered by the terrible sins depicted in this chapter; the construction in the original has the effect of a present contrary-to-fact protasis. The writer, Peter, views the statement as a premise which is contrary to fact. He says, “If it were true that these false prophets were just now being conquered by sin and had already escaped the pollutions of the world (it is not true, but if it were), then they would actually be in worse condition now than when they started.” These false teachers, of course, had never really escaped the pollutions of the world like true believers (cf. 1:4); if they had, and were now as entangled (Gr empekō, meaning “hopelessly trapped” like a fish in a net) as they are in sin, they would be better off if they had never heard of Christianity. According to their pretense, they claim to have been saved; according to fact, they have returned to the most despicable sins. This would be, obviously, like a dog eating its vomit, or a pig which has just been washed going back to wallow in the mire.

The whole chapter warns the believers to secure the faith which had been preached to them by the apostles against the barbarous attack by obvious frauds who have shown themselves to be worthy of the certain judgment of God which will come upon them.

IV. SERVING IN FAITH. 3:1-13.

CHAPTER 3

THIS second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance:

2 That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:

3 Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts,

4 And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water:

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished:
7 But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against

A. Purpose of the Epistle. 3:1-2.

3:1-2. This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you . . . to stir up . . . in remembrance. Another allusion to the purpose of writing the letter (see 1:12-13, where the same words are used) as being hortatory and didactic, and, of course, an implied claim to apostolic authorship. The reminder is that, although there are false teachers among them who claim to be also representing God, believers must recognize, accept, and obey only the true word of God as found in the Old Testament (the holy prophets) and in the preaching of the apostles (meaning himself and the others). This is parallel to 1:16-18, and shows the aspects of continuity between the Old Testament and the new age, and the promise and fulfillment theme of the apostolic preaching.

B. Unbelief of Scoffers. 3:3-9.

3. Knowing this first. This is an emphatic reminder of a primary fact (Gr prōtos); Peter had used these exact words in 1:20 to stress the primary fact that their preaching did not arise from their own ingenuity but was the Word of God as much as was the Old Testament. The fact here is that scoffers will come. Although the great apostasy was a generally known fact from all apocalyptic literature (see I Tim 4:1; II Thess 2:3 which also assume this), Peter now applies it to his own time and specifically to the reports of the false teachers, giving us a hint of the occasion of the letter. For Peter, as well as for Paul (I Tim 4:1), the days in which he lived were the last days. In biblical terminology, these were not the former days of promise and prophecy, but the latter days of fulfillment and blessing in Jesus Christ. By calling the false teachers scoffers (Gr empaiktēs), denoting one who ridicules or scorns, a "satirist", Peter is in turn ridiculing them and coming to the aid of the truth of the Second Coming.

4. Before coming to the message of the scoffers Peter stresses their false character and corruption. They heap scorn and ridicule on the message of the gospel (lit., "scorners with their scorn") and yet they themselves live (Greek present tense) in lust. Talk about the pot and the kettle—how ludicrous can one get? Once again, it is obvious that these false teachers will be destroyed as the enemies of God in the day of judgment! The ridiculous implication of their question (vs. 4) is: "There is no Second Coming, we can live any way we want. God will never judge us." This was, of course, in direct opposition to the apostolic preaching which always included the second coming of Christ as the ultimate fulfillment of the prophecies of the Old Testament. All things continue as they were, they said, God won't bring judgment upon the living and the dead.

5. But this they willingly are ignorant of. A more precise translation would be, "They persistently (Greek progressive present) ignore one obvious fact." The fact is, all things are not the same; God destroyed the world in judgment once, and this confirms rather than disproves the warning that He will do it again (vss. 5-6). By the word of God (vs. 5) is emphatic in the original. Creation was by the Word of God; the sky, the dry land, and the water were distinguished by the Word of God (Gen 1:6-7, 9), and the world continues to exist by the Word of God (cf. Col 1:17 where the same word is used for Jesus Christ as the Living Word of God in exactly the same sense of sustaining the world).

6-7. According to Peter's analogy here, water and the Word were involved in the destruction of the world by the Flood according to verse 6 (Whereby is plural and means "by these two things"). With pungent success comes the reply to those satirists who dared to suggest that God would not keep His the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9 The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

10 But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

promise of the Second Coming: by the same word of God, this world is kept in store. Both ideas, kept in store, and reserved are certified as fact by the use of the perfect tense in the original. It is as clear as Peter can make it that God's Word will certainly be fulfilled in this matter as it has been in others, the second coming and the day of judgment will transpire exactly as promised, and these ungodly men will be destroyed!

8. Be not ignorant of this one thing. Be not ignorant (Gr lanthanō) is the same word used in verse 5 but here there are no condemning insinuations; we might translate, "Don't allow this fact to escape your notice any longer," or, "You are overlooking something, my friends." This one thing. Several things are brought up here, but the one idea supported by them all is that "the day of the Lord will come." This part of the apostolic preaching is the main point that had been challenged by these immoral false teachers, and this is the main reason Peter had written this second letter. His readers needed this encouragement to be true to Christ and the gospel as they waited for the glorious appearing of the Lord. First, God does not count time in the same way that we do. To Him a thousand years may count as one day (cf. Ps 90:4).

9. Secondly, the reason for the delay in the return of Christ is not that the Lord is slack concerning his promise. This means that it is not one of God's attributes to be slow about keeping promises, although some (like these false teachers) might consider that to be true. The thought is probably parallel to Habakkuk 2:3 (quoted also by Heb 10:37 in another connection), where the writer says, "The prophecy awaits its time; if it seems to be slow, wait for it. It will surely come." But (a strong adversative emphasizing that the reason for the delay is a different matter entirely) is long-suffering. Long-suffering (Gr makrothymēō) is the regular word for "patience," and has the idea deep concern and feeling for someone over an extended period of time. The reason God has delayed that final day is His patience and concern for men that they might be saved. This same word is used again in verse 15 where God's patience is to be considered as salvation; it is made very plain in the passage that the reason for the delay is not negligence on God's part but concern for salvation. This is also stated in a negative way: not willing that any should perish. The word willing (Gr boulomai) means the same as "want" in English; God does not want men to be lost (He does not elect them to damnation but to salvation). The main verb in this sentence is translated by "God is patient"; the word "want" is a circumstantial participle expressing the reason for God's patience. The reason is both negative and positive as shown in the two complementary infinitives; He is patient because He does not want any to be lost, but wants all to come to repentance. Come (Gr chōreō) to repentance or "make room" for repentance (as one would make room at home for a welcomed guest) expresses the same thought as I Timothy 2:4, but with different words.

C. Looking for the Day of the Lord. 3:10-14.

10. These facts make it clear that the day of the Lord will come. Peter uses the same figure as Paul (I Thess 5:2) to express the imminency of the coming, as a thief in the night. The description of the judgment of that Day is given in the most vivid apocalyptic terms: weird noise (Gr hroizēdon, meaning a "rushing" and "sizzling" sound; the Greek, like the English word is onomatopoeic), destruction of all the elements by means of burning, and the leveling of all earthly constructions. The last of these descriptions, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up, involves a textual variant; instead of burned we should read "discovered," which is difficult to understand, but evidently means that everything which has been constructed upon the earth is razed or pushed away so

11 Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness,

12 Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?

13 Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.

15 And account that the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you; that the earth itself is exposed and nothing else remains. After the noise and the burning, the bulldozer of God's wrath will level the site in preparation for the new city.

16 As also in all his epistles, speaking in them, of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.

11. Peter now, having reminded his readers of the certainty of the coming Day, encourages them to holy conversation (always means conduct in the Bible) and godliness. The beginning of verse 11 in this version is a bit misleading because of some textual variations and peculiarities of translation. First, note that Peter is not talking about the dissolution of things per se, but about the judgment and destruction of ungodly "people," and particularly about "these" ungodly people described in chapter two. He speaks about the coming of Christ as a day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men (3:7). Although verse 10 mentions works being burned up, it is for the punishment of the ungodly false teachers. Peter begins in verse 11, "In the light of the fact that all these ungodly men are to be destroyed (present tense to make it vivid) in this way, shouldn't you live your lives in holiness and godliness as you eagerly anticipate the coming of the day of God?" Note the contrast between "these" ungodly false teachers, and the emphatic "you" in verse 11. These ungodly false teachers have been trying to lure the Christians into immorality; it should be plain now that, since they will be judged and destroyed, their way is not the way to live.

12-14. Verse 12 continues to mark the contrast in the way the Day is viewed by the ungodly and the godly; they tremble because it means punishment and destruction, while the Christian is Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day. Looking for (Gr prosdoxaō) is used in this context with the sense of "anticipation" with the word hasting (Gr pseudō) which means "hurry," or "get busy," and is translated be diligent in verse 14. The hope or expectation of the Christian, new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness, is the basis for the exhortation to blamelessness and purity of conduct. There will be no false teachers in heaven.

D. Exhortation Against the Unstable. 3:15-16.

15-16. The imperative of verse 15, account that the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation, encourages believers to recognize the fact that just because God's day hasn't come yet, they shouldn't follow the false teachers in believing that it's not going to come; they should think of it in God's way: the longer He delays it, the more people can be saved. Peter draws support from Paul, saying that he taught the same thing; this is perhaps a reference to Romans 2:4 where God's patience is twice called "kindness," and "leads" to repentance. It is interesting that Peter should consider Paul hard to be understood! He does not say that all of Paul is difficult, only certain things in his epistles (most of which would be written by this time and would already have been read and known according to this statement). What those things are we can only guess, but Paul also had a great deal to say about the Second Coming, and since that is the point here, we could assume the connection. Those who had the most problem with Paul's writings (and Peter's too) were the unlearned (Gr amathēs), which is a rare word meaning literally "not a learner," and, as the opposite of "disciple" (Gr mathētēs), means here a non-Christian. Compare I Corinthians 1:18; 2:14. These difficult passages in Paul are also a problem for the unstable (Gr astērīktos), meaning those who needed support in their faith. Paul often used this word (in its positive form) in praying for God to "strengthen" or "stabilize" his readers, and Peter uses it in I Peter 5:10; II Peter 1:12, and also in the next verse (3:17). The are said to wrest (Gr strebloō), literally "twist," or "torture," also the other scriptures. The mention of scriptures shows not only that others existed, but that they were early regarded as the Word of God, equal to the prophetic Word of the Old Testament, and the apostolic preaching (see 1:16, 20, 17 Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness.

18 But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

21). The result of contradicting and opposing the Scripture, or the teaching of the apostles as the false teachers had done, was destruction.

V. CONCLUSION. 3:17-18.

17-18. Peter encourages them to be on their guard beware, (Gr phylassō, meaning "guard," or "protect" yourselves) that they do not get dragged off with these false teachers and fall from their own steadfastness. He encourages them rather to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The First Epistle Of

JOHN

INTRODUCTION

Although this writing does not display the usual features of a letter, nevertheless it has always been classified as an epistle. Like Hebrews, it lacks an opening salutation, but in addition it lacks the epistolary conclusion of a letter. No formal mention of thanksgiving for the readers is given in the opening sentences (a practice never violated by Paul except in Galatians). It does not contain a single proper name (except that of Jesus Christ). In addition it does not locate itself historically, geographically, or personally. Nothing in the epistle is specific or local. The contents of this epistle clearly show that it was intended for a local audience. However, on the basis of contents alone it has properly been judged a letter (not a sermon).

Authorship. Although the author does not identify himself directly in any of the three epistles traditionally ascribed to him, the consensus of scholars is that they are all from the pen of the Apostle John, the son of Zebedee.

Tradition and internal evidence make it hard to deny the united assumption that John is the author. There is reference to the gospel and epistles of John in the Muratorian Canon. Various allusions to the epistles are found in Clement of Rome, the Didache, and the Epistle to Diognetus. Polycarp quotes I John and Papias also used it.

There are obvious similarities between the epistles and the gospel. The themes of light and darkness, life and death, Christ and antichrist, love and hate are all prevalent in both. The author claims to be an eyewitness (I Jn 1:1-3) and speaks with authority using "we" as if to include himself with the other apostles.

Date and place of writing. There are no indications in the epistle which assist us in fixing a definite time for its composition. The tone and writer's paternalistic attitude toward his readers suggests an old man is writing to a younger generation. The fact that the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70 is not mentioned would mean that the epistle was either written before the city fell or a sufficient time afterward to make common reference to its destruction unnecessary. Generally, a date around A.D. 90 is accepted as accurate.

There is no hint as to where John was when he wrote this epistle, but since the latter years of the apostle's life were spent in Ephesus, it seems most likely that this is the place of writing. No evidence exists to the contrary.

Purpose. The purpose of the Gospel of John was "that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life . . ." (Jn 20:31). The purpose of the first epistle is, "that your joy may be full" (I Jn 1:4), and, "that ye may know that ye have eternal life" (I Jn 5:13). Joy and assurance seem to be the attitudes John wishes to encourage in his readers.

The readers were already believers in Jesus Christ and they worshiped and fellowshiped in rather well-defined churches with membership rolls and local pastors. Evidently false teachers (not unlike those in II Peter and Jude) had caused some basic doctrinal problems (I Jn 1:10). With the emphasis on light and darkness, and the incarnation, and knowing, there must also have been an incipient quasi-gnostic movement afoot. John, at any rate, with apostolic concern, writes to encourage the believers to joy and assurance in purity of life as they wait for the appearance of Christ.

I. INTRODUCTION. 1:1-4.

THAT which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life;

2 (For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;)

3 That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

4 And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.

1:1-4. That which was from the beginning. We must take verses 1-4 as one long, involved, elliptical sentence, and look for the key main verb, which seems to be and show unto you in 1:2 (Gr apanggelō). The word means “declare,” “announce,” or “make known.” What is being “made known” in this letter is the object of the verb here and is multifaceted: it is something which existed from eternity, it is something with which the writer has the most detailed personal acquaintance. It could be called the “Word of Life”; it has made a real appearance in the world of men. Others besides the author have seen it and can prove it. Finally, it existed earlier in close association with the Father and then made its appearance into the world. That object which is now being “made known” more fully in this letter is, of course, Jesus Christ. More succinctly, the author is saying that in this letter, “We are declaring Jesus Christ.”

The purpose for this declaration is also given in duplicate form: that ye also may have fellowship with us (vs. 3), and that your joy may be full (vs. 4). Several of the verbs in this sentence are repeated for emphasis and clarity, and those which support the eyewitness nature of his testimony are given in the Greek perfect tense to stress the certainty of the facts. This should be brought out in the translation; for example, “. . . we have actually heard, in fact have seen him with our own eyes. . . .” That ye also may have fellowship with us is the purpose, but not the ultimate purpose, for fellowship with the apostles without fellowship with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ, would be mundane. Verse 4 should read “that our joy may be truly complete,” rather than your joy. This makes little difference in the sense, however, since the joy of the apostles is truly complete when the believers have real fellowship (Gr koinōnia) with the Father and Son.

II. Fellowship with God. 1:5-2:8.

A. Walking in the Light. 1:5-7.

5 This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.

6 If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:

7 But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

5-7. John has made it clear that the purpose of his writing is that the believers might have true fellowship; he now proceeds to make some subtle philosophical implications about fellowship with God which will apply to the present circumstances of the believers. God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. Here are the two great symbols suggesting moral purity and evil; John says literally that there is not even one bit of darkness in God. Therefore, If we say introduces the protasis of a general condition used as the premise of a syllogism; the first negative conclusion (vs. 6) is we lie. It is obvious that if there are false teachers or any others who claim to have fellowship (Gr koinōnia) with God (having something in common with God), and at the same time (both verbs are in the progressive present in Greek) continue to live according to the standards of darkness only, there is no way around the conclusion that they are lying! “Walking” (Gr peripateō) is the regular metaphor for “living” or “conducting one’s life” in these epistles. Now, John may have come right to the point; he is probably dealing with a real situation where there are those who claim that you can have fellowship with God and live any way you please. Exactly this situation had existed earlier, and occasioned the writing of II Peter and Jude. More sophistication had probably been added, but these false teachers or incipient gnostics showed signs of having the same warped logic which would permit practicing known and willful sin. John now states the positive form of the conclusion to the syllogism: we have fellowship one with another. The grammar here is ambiguous, but the context makes it obvious that one with another means we who walk in the light have fellowship with God. Thus, it is clear that the epistle deals with fellowship as fellowship in the life eternal. John's evidences of fellowship are not proofs of whether a believer is right with God, but are proofs of whether one is saved at all! Fellowship here refers to being born again. And the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. If it were not for the atoning death of Christ (the original reading was "Jesus his Son") fellowship with God would be impossible according to the syllogism because of the opposing symbols of light and darkness. What makes the difference is the blood of . . . Christ, His atoning death, which cleanseth us from all sin; this makes the darkness (here specified as sin) into light.

B. Walking in Sin. 1:8-10.

8 If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

9 If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

8-10. Sin must be dealt with; it is a fact. Note the simple style of the Hebrew parallelism, saying the same thing in two different ways, and the repetition of ideas. The correct way of dealing with sin is not to deny it, but to acknowledge it and allow God to cleanse it. If we confess (Gr homologeō, meaning "acknowledge" or "agree with") our sins, he is faithful and just (He can be faithful to us and fulfill His promise, as well as just in accordance with His own righteousness and require the punishment of sin in Christ) so that (non-final clauses with Gr hina are possible in John) He forgives our sins, and cleanses us from all unrighteousness. If we say that we have not sinned (vs. 10). This is different from saying that we have no sin in verse 8. In verse 8 it is a matter of recognizing what can be classed as sin in our lives; in verse 10 it is a matter of denying that we have ever really (perfect tense in Greek) sinned at all. We make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

C. Walking with the Advocate. 2:1-2.

CHAPTER 2

MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:

2 And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

2:1-2. My little children. These words are, of course, not written merely to little children; this is an idiom of endearment, as if to say, "My dear friends." On the other hand, John is assuming apostolic authority and responsibility for these his spiritual children. These things I write unto you, that ye sin not. Again, John is assuming some threat that would lure the believers away from Christ (perhaps false doctrine). Obviously, in the light of chapter 1, he is not saying that his writing will enable them to avoid committing their first sin. But, if any man sin, that is if any believer who has already acknowledged that he was a sinner, and has already been cleansed from his sin by the atoning sacrifice of Christ, if this person should be led off into sin, would he be eternally lost? He could sin, but he would not be hopelessly lost, because we have an advocate. Advocate (Gr paraklētos) is the word John used four times in his gospel for the Holy Spirit as the "Comforter." It is not so much "comfort" as "encouragement" or "help" which is usually meant by this word, and the help sought is pictured as an advocate (which word comes from the Latin equivalent of our Greek word here) or "attorney." With the Father means that He will stand and face the Father for us; the very same words are used of Christ in 1:2 (and in Jn 1:1). If we sin, our trouble with the Father will be darkness or unrighteousness, and we will be out of fellowship (1:6) with Him; but our Advocate who is to get us out of the difficulty is the righteous One.

And he is the propitiation for our sins. This very important biblical word propitiation (Gr hilasmos) denotes the price which must be paid to avoid the divine punishment upon sin. It is, therefore, the "fine" we must pay in court to avoid going to jail. In the Bible, there are other synonyms for this concept of the "fine," such as the "atonement" or "ransom" or "sin offering." One really should study all these words throughout the Old and New Testaments to get the full picture of this important re-

3 And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments.

4 He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him.

6 He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you; because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth.

demptive term. Here, Christ is not only the Righteous Lawyer who is on very familiar terms with the Father (Judge), but he pays our "fine," or, more properly according to the text, He is the "fine" or "atonement" for our sins. Exactly in what sense Jesus Christ is the propitiation for our sins, John does not say; he assumes this knowledge from 1:7, and from a thorough discussion of the passion of Christ in the gospel. For the sins of the whole world does not mean that the application of the atonement is automatic for all the individuals in the world, but simply that if anyone in the world will believe in Christ and confess his sin, he too will find the atonement sufficient. Christianity is not exclusive like Gnosticism; anyone can know Him if they want to.

D. Walking under Commandment. 2:3-8.

3-4. And hereby means "in this way," and is used often in the epistle. We do know that we know him. The last occurrence of know is in the perfect tense in the original stressing the certainty of the action; we should translate, "In this way we know that we really know Him," or, "By this we may be sure that we know Him." If we keep his commandments. This is another simple syllogism (major premise, minor premise, and conclusion): "Everyone who truly knows Christ keeps His commandments; a certain person does not keep His commandments (regardless of his verbal claim that he truly knows Him); conclusion? Simple: he is a liar!"

5-6. Next, John shows how the syllogism applies with a positive minor premise: keeping His commandments (living according to His moral standards) means not only that we have true knowledge of Him, but also that love of God (objective genitive) is perfected in him (that is, he is a true Christian). He that sayeth he abideth in him (talk is cheap) ought to walk (live) even as he (Christ) walked. All of this sounds as if it was meant to deal with the antinomian, gnostic false teachers.

7-8. I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye had from the beginning. We must keep in mind that John wrote with his immediate readers and their problems in view. He is reminding them of the preaching of the other apostles. What he writes is not new in that sense; it is the Word which they heard from the apostles. Note the emphasis in chapter 1 on terms like witness, declare, and message. Note also that in 1:5, the content of the message is "that God is light and in Him is no darkness at all." Now observe that commandment (2:7-8) is another didactic term like message, and has a content which is quite similar to the content in 1:5, that darkness is vanishing, and true light is already shining. In one sense these readers must accept nothing new (like a new teaching or commandment from false teachers), and in just that sense John's message is not new; it is old. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard (from the beginning is not original). The word (Gr logos) is not, it seems, a verse of Scripture which we know, but the word in the sense of the "preaching" of the apostles (cf. "the preaching of the cross," I Cor 1:18). There is also another sense in which John's readers need a new commandment, a new word, and they must receive it not from quasi-gnostic false teachers, but from the apostle himself. The new word is true with respect to them, or (in a different sense) with respect to Christ. The new commandment is, "Darkness is vanishing and the true light is now shining." This new word is in fact the major premise for John's third syllogism. How it applies to Christ is left to the reader's ingenuity (obviously He is the Light of the World, etc.); how it applies to the believers is the subject of 9-11.

III. FELLOWSHIP WITH LIGHT AND DARKNESS. 2:9-28.

A. Walking in Love. 2:9-17.

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.

10 He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him.

11 But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.

12 I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for his name's sake.

13 I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father.

14 I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.

15 Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.

16 For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.

18 Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time.

19 They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, that

9-11. First, the negative application (vs. 9): if every believer has the True Light shining in his life (major premise), then the person who continually hates (Greek progressive present; his life is characterized by hate) his brother (minor premise: his life is all darkness), is still in darkness (conclusion) to this very moment, and thus is not a believer at all. Next, the positive application (vs. 10) which is just the opposite in its conclusion: the person whose life is characterized by love and light is a true believer. In verse 11, John goes back to negative application of the light-and-love premise in order to emphasize that hatred (perhaps he has in mind some aspect of the problem with the false teachers) creeps over one's life like the darkness, affecting his walk, and even his knowledge (knoweth not whither he goeth), making him in fact spiritually "blind." See II Peter 1:9, where false teachers were also a problem.

12-14. I write unto you little children. John is not, of course, writing to literal children, young men, and fathers in this passage. These are metaphors which refer to the various levels of spiritual maturity among his readers. In one sense, all the believers are like children to him (cf. 2:1, 18; 3:7; 5:21). In another sense, John can include himself with them as children of God (3:1). In still another sense, as in this passage, some of the believers are less mature (having just recently been converted) than others who may have been saved from the beginning and are in a sense fathers in the faith to them. The metaphorical use of age for maturity is not at all unusual in the New Testament. The problem of the changes in tense where I write (Gr graphō) occurs in these verses is not significant; the six instances all refer to the present letter as he is writing it (the Greek aorist being epistolary). John, however, uses the perfect tense in Greek to stress the certainty of the reality of Christianity for each of the six metaphors (sins have "really been forgiven," they have "truly known," "have actually conquered," etc.). In this way John assures the readers of his confidence in them, while in the same letter he repeatedly exposes the false teachers for what they really are.

15-17. Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. This prohibition (present tense in the original, and thus progressive action) would literally be translated, "Don't continue your love for the world . . ." (meaning after you have been saved). This introduces the next (fourth) syllogism on how to tell a real believer from a phony. The major premise is found in verse 17; in the lives of those who really love God, the world passeth away. Note that passeth away (Gr paragomai) is the same word used of the darkness in the last syllogism, and that world is the same in meaning as darkness (cf. 2:8). It follows then, that one who continues his love for the world while he claims to know and love the Father (vs. 15) is a phony. Loving the world (lust, greed, pride, etc.) is the opposite of doing the will of God. With a positive minor premise (vs. 17), the conclusion is positive: he is a true believer rather than a false prophet, and he abideth for ever.

B. Walking with Apostates. 2:18-28.

18-19. John now moves into his fifth test (another syllogism) by which the believers may determine whether the self-authenticating teachers are true or false. First, it is to be expected that false prophets will arise since it is the last time. The coming of Christ marked the beginning of the "last days" (cf. I Cor 10:11; I Pet 4:7; Heb 9:26); God's promises of blessing were fulfilled, but there were also prophecies of apostasy and the Antichrist yet to come (II Thess 2:3; I Tim 4:1; II Tim 3:1; 4:3; they might be made manifest that they were not all of us.

20 But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things.

21 I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but] he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also.

24 Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.

26 These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce you.

27 But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him.

28 And now, little children, abide in him; that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

II Pet 2:1; 3:3; Jude 18; I Jn 4:1). In one sense, then, the prophecies are already fulfilled in these false teachers, for they are antichrists, that is they are against Christ. They went out from us, but they were not of us. The meaning of this play on words is obvious: they associated with the believers but they were not real believers. John uses a contrary-to-fact condition in Greek to express his proof that the false teachers are impostors.

20-24. But ye have an unction. This is the key concept in the major premise; the word unction (Gr chrisma) denotes literally the “oil” or “unguent” with which a person has been anointed. In the Old Testament, kings were “anointed” as a part of the inaugural ceremony (I Sam 16:6-13); it involved simply pouring oil on the head of the chosen person. The chosen person then had the “oil” on him and was called the “anointed” (Heb meshiach, Gr christos). Thus, throughout the New Testament, God’s chosen King, the Messiah, is designated the Christ, meaning in translation, “the Anointed One” or the one who had the “oil” (Gr chrisma). The baptism of Christ (Mt 3:13-17, et al.), with the Spirit coming upon him, and the voice with its messianic pronouncement, is symbolic of the King’s coronation, and announced Him to the world as the anointed King.

The verb form anoint (Gr chriō) is also used several times in the New Testament to allude to the anointing of Christ, but once it is used of Christians, who are also in a sense (obviously a lesser sense than Christ) anointed (II Cor 1:21); in this passage it is clear that the “oil” with which we are anointed is the same as that with which Christ was anointed, namely the Holy Spirit (cf. II Cor 1:22). This, in fact, is the meaning behind the name “Christian,” for believers are “little christs,” “little anointed ones.” When John, therefore, uses this word unction (Gr chrisma), or, as it occurs twice in verse 27, anointing, he simply means to say that all believers have the Holy Spirit. Since believers have the Holy Spirit, they have an “edge” on unbelievers and can “know” certain things that unbelievers cannot. So, John says in verse 20, ye know all things. Do the gnostic false teachers claim to “know”? Here is truth they cannot know, which even the simplest believer “knows” because he has the Spirit. The truth which makes it possible to tell Christians from antichrists is the truth that Jesus is the Christ. This is the message which the believers had heard from the beginning (compare this clause of verse 24 with verse 7, and note the emphasis on hearing and receiving the Word of God from the apostles, as well as holding to that same commandment, or letting it remain in you). The major premise of John’s syllogism can be rephrased: “Every believer has been anointed with the Holy Spirit, and therefore knows that Jesus is the Christ.” Add the negative minor premise, “The false teacher denieth that Jesus is the Christ (vs. 22),” for the obvious conclusion: “He is a liar and an antichrist.”

25-27. In case anyone has not been able to follow the logic of it all through the many subtle implications and plays upon words, John states plainly in verse 26, that this is a test to be used on false teachers: These things have I written unto you concerning them that seduce (lit. “try to deceive”) you. It is clear from verse 27 that they do not need to listen to these false teachers; they have been taught the Word of God by the apostles, and they have the indwelling Holy Spirit who will give them assurance and teach them to live by that Word.

28. John’s exhortation to them is to the effect that they should continue to live in Christ (Greek present tense), ignore the false teachers, and look forward to the second coming of Christ with joyous confidence.

IV. FELLOWSHIP AND LOVE. 2:29-4:21.

A. Identification of Believers. 2:29-3:10.

29. Every one that doeth righteousness is born of him. This is the summary of the sixth major premise and test to be applied to the false teachers. It is important to note first that doeth (Gr poieō) is progressive present in the original; this means that John is not talking about a person who performs one or two righteous acts, but about a person whose conduct can be characterized as righteous. Of such a person it may be said that he is born (Gr gennaō), or rather "has been truly born" (perfect tense) of God.

3:1. That we should be called the sons of God. Note that sons (Gr teknon) is the word usually translated "children" in the New Testament, and stresses the fact that we are members of God's family by birth; this relates 3:1 to 2:29. John stresses that we are now the children of God.

2. It doth not yet appear what we shall be. What we shall be along with all John's stress upon true birth and children of God, gives us reason to believe that besides the emphasis on knowledge, the false teachers also believed in some kind of esoteric spiritual rebirth. The argument is that if they do not live righteous lives, they are not born of God; they are, of course, somebody's children, the devil's!

3-5. Every man that hath this hope. The hope (Gr elpis) is not a "hope-so" chance for the Christian, but a "know-so" expectation which is part of the "knowledge" we have because of the indwelling Holy Spirit. It is because of this "sure expectation" that we "purify" our lives. But the implications here for the false teachers are: they do not purify their lives because they do not have the hope; they do not have the hope because they do not have the Holy Spirit; they do not have the Holy Spirit because they are not children of God, which is obvious because they do not live righteous lives.

6. Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not. Sinneth not (Gr hamartanō, progressive present) does not mean that once a person is saved he never sins again! It does mean, however, that once a person is saved he no longer lives in sin; his life is no longer characterized by sin (as the lives of the false teachers here are). This is just the other side of the coin of 2:29. To say, "No one who is alive in Christ lives in sin" is the same as saying, "Everyone who is truly born of God lives righteously."

7-8. Let no man deceive you. It is obvious, again, that the false teachers fail the test; they are not born of God (vs. 9) at all, whatever they may have claimed. Their lives, characterized by sin, show that they have not really seen, or truly known God. Living in sin is the opposite to Christianity, for Christ came to take away sin (vs. 5). Sin is a characteristic of the devil, and Christ came to destroy (Gr luō) the works of the devil (vs. 8).

9. It is clear that the false teachers are not children of God at all, like John's readers, but are in reality the children of the devil.

10. Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother. Being of God or of the devil can be determined in another way, to deal more fully with a proposition introduced earlier (2:10); a man cannot make claim to righteous living if he does not love his brother. The word brother cannot be restricted always to mean only a true, born-again Christian, as is obvious if the logic is pressed here. It has always been part of the Word that was preached, as well as the Old Testament Word, that love is the fulfillment of the law of God. We are to love God with all our hearts; we are to love our neighbor as ourselves.

B. Living with the Believers. 3:11-24.

11-12. This is the message that ye heard from the begin-

29 If ye know that he is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him.

CHAPTER 3

BEHOLD, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not.

2 Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.

3 And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

4 Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for sin is the transgression of the law.

5 And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins; and in him is no sin.

6 Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him.

7 Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.

8 He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 For this is the message that ye

I JOHN 3:12

heard from the beginning, that we should love one another.

12 Not as Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you.

14 We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

15 Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.

19 And hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him.

20 For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21 Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God.

22 And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

23 And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment.

24 And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

CHAPTER 4

BELOVED, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

ning, that we should love one another. The same expression, almost verbatim, appears in 1:5, "This then is the message which we have heard of him. . . ." It appears again at 2:7 and 2:25. The formula stresses that what is expressed was an important part of the Word of God. John had also expressed in his Gospel (13:34-35) that love for one another should be an identifying characteristic of Christians. Cain is given as a negative example, and would probably have been suggested by the ruthless attitude of the false teachers.

13-16. If every believer lives righteously and loves his brother, then it is easy to deduce that these people who persist in hatred are not believers. On the other hand, the positive minor premise applied to the principle will give assurance that we have passed from death unto life (Gr metabainō, perfect tense shows certainty of the fact). John uses the supreme example of sacrificial love here (as he did in Jn 13:34-35) to show what love is ultimately, he laid down his life for us. Here, the word for (Gr hyper) shows the vicarious nature of the atonement; Christ died in our place, and suffered the punishment for us. This is made the basis for the obligation of Christian love.

17-21. Whoso hath this world's good. This translation of the original idiom should not be taken to mean that a person must be rich before he is obligated; the text says only that he has the "sustenance" that his brother needs, understands the need, and refuses to help. Again, the conclusion is obvious: this person does not have the love of God living in him, or to put it another way, he is not a true believer. Hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him. The result of the test when applied to the true believer, on the other hand, is comforting assurance, and enables us to look forward to his coming with joyous confidence.

22. Our prayers are likewise answered because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight. "Keeping" his commandments alludes to "doing righteousness" in 2:29 which is the major premise in this syllogism. Pleasing (Gr arestos) is also a basic part of the righteousness of believers. This was a common way of expressing this "heart attitude" of Christians; in John 8:29 these words come from the lips of Our Lord Himself. This is not at all like legalism, any more than it is like antinomianism; the believer just naturally wants to do the will of God.

23-24. His commandment is not any one word to which our attention is now directed, but it is simply his will or desire for us (cf. John 6:29 where instead of commandment we find work). His will for us involves trusting in Him, loving one another, and in general, living the Christian life ("abiding" means living), and enjoying the gift of the Holy Spirit (especially in our confrontation with the false prophets, to which subject he now turns).

C. Warning to the Believers. 4:1-6.

4:1. Believe not every spirit. Spirit does not, of course, refer to merely spiritual or supernatural beings; these could not be tested by John's readers. John has just made mention of the fact that believers are indwelt and led by the Spirit of God; the false prophets also claimed spiritual leading. John warns against believers' accepting from these teachers things that are contrary to what they have already received from the apostles. But try the spirits. Try (Gr dokimazō) means to check out by a pattern or standard that never changes; the standard intended is the Word of God. John has, in this letter, been reminding them of that Word, and the principles by which these false prophets should be checked. Here he repeats one of them.

2 Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God:

3 And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of anti-christ, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.

4 Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.

6 We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

2-5. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God, that is the truly Christian teacher who has the Word of God. Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God. This test is equal to that already given in 2:22; the inference to be made here is that the gnostic or quasi-gnostic teachers denied the incarnation and refused to believe that Jesus was God in the flesh. The deduction to be made concerning the false teachers, then, is that they are not inspired by the Spirit as they claim, but are against Christ, and of the same character as the Antichrist (cf. 2:18).

6. We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us. Here John includes himself with the other apostles as spirits who follow the Spirit of Truth, and thus proclaim the truth. The readers, who truly know God, will recognize and willingly accept the word of the apostles for what it really is, the Word of God (cf. I Thess 2:13).

D. Love and the Believers. 4:7-21.

7-10. Let us love one another. Again John returns to the theme of love, but this time it is as a direct exhortation to the believers in order to show that they are different from the false teachers. Once more the principle is stated that every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. The negative minor premise is He that loveth not knoweth not God. The major premise is listed both here and in verse 16 (where it is followed by the positive minor premise) God is love. This should be compared to 1:5 where "God is light." The proof of God's love to us is clearly seen in that He sent His only Son into the world to die on the Cross as our propitiation (cf. 4:10 with 2:2, and see the comments there). That we might live through him, shows the purpose and design of the atonement, as well as the fact that life (that is the new quality of life for the Christian) does not come by knowledge, but rather through the atonement of Christ alone.

11-16. The love of God to us makes us obligated to love one another, for this is the only way we can show that we really have love. Claiming to love God is meaningless without showing love to each other. Because he hath given us of his Spirit. This is repeated from 3:24, except that here the word given (Gr didomi) is in the perfect tense in the original, showing the certainty of the fact that the apostles rather than the false teachers are moved by the Spirit of God, and are united in their testimony about Christ. We have seen and do testify refers again to the testimony of the apostles; this is the same way the epistle started (see 1:1-4). The testimony of Christ is here more general, to include that God has sent the Son as the Saviour of the world.

17-19. Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment: because as he is, so are we in this world. This verse does not mean to say that we can become perfect in fulfilling the command of love. First, the original does not say, our love but "love with us." It is because God is love, and because He lives in us, that love can be truly accomplished with us. God is love, so in a sense, we are love (we are all the world will ever see of love). The whole point is that We love . . . because he first loved us.

20-21. The principle of love is repeated here, and once again it is demonstrated that the false teachers do not pass the test. How can they claim to love God if they do not love a brother

7 Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love.

9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.

10 Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.

11 Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.

13 Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.

15 Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.

16 And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment: because as he is, so are we in this world.

18 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love.

19 We love him, because he first loved us.

20 If a man say, I love God, and hateh his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?

I JOHN 4:21

21 And this commandment have we from him. That he who loveth God love his brother also.

CHAPTER 5

WHOSOEVER believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him.

2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.

3 For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous.

4 For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

6 This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.

7 For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one.

(person) who is right there before their eyes with a real need. Love in "word" is not real; it remains to be demonstrated.

V. FELLOWSHIP AND ASSURANCE. 5:1-17.

A. Assurance of Victory. 5:1-8.

5:1-3. Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God. Is born (Gr gennaō) should rather be translated, "has been truly born," since it is perfect tense in the original. This is another test for the believers to use on the false teachers. Every person who believes (John does not mean merely intellectual assent, for that would contradict the total message of his writings) that Jesus is the Christ is a real Christian (see again on 2:22; 4:2). He now moves on to reiterate several of the tests in their connections to each other. Since the true believer loves God (the begetter, active voice of Gr gennaō, meaning to give birth to), it follows that he will also love other believers (loveth him also that is begotten of him, is passive voice of the same verb; in this context John is not referring to Christ, though he does in 5:18). The tests are mixed: By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments. Love to God is again defined, it is keeping His commandments which are not grievous (Gr barys), that is they are not difficult to fulfill because we are truly "born of God" and have therefore easy victory.

4-5. Whosoever is born of God overcometh the world. Overcometh (Gr nikaō) denotes gaining victory over; it is used four times in these two verses (4-5). Its first occurrence is present tense in the original, giving the sense: "The true believer is always victorious over the world." Victory is normal and natural, and that is why His commandments are not difficult. This is the victory that overcometh (gnomic aorist) the world, even our faith. This could be put, "Our faith is the key to victory over the world." Faith, in verse 4, is defined as "believing" that Jesus is the Son of God; the words are cognate and reiterate the same test found in 2:22; 4:2; and 5:1. This faith, saving faith, is what makes us true children of God, which in turn assures us of victory over the world.

6-8. John now gives a description of Jesus Christ as he that came by water and blood. No one knows (now) exactly what John had in mind when he used these two symbols. Tertullian's guess seems to fit the facts best: the water is a reference to His baptism or inauguration, where the Voice from heaven declared, "This is my beloved Son," and established that Jesus was the Christ. The blood is a common symbol for His death, where there were also supernatural miracles to cause even the confirmed and cruel Roman centurion to realize that this man (Jesus) was more than a mere man (Mt 27:54); also, by the Resurrection, the Father confirmed Jesus as the Son of God (Rom 1:4). This interpretation also fits the facts concerning the gnostic-type beliefs of Cerinthus who taught that the Christ came upon Jesus at the baptism but left Him before the Cross; John could have been refuting some such heresy. It is interesting that John called attention to the water, and the blood which came from the side of Jesus on the cross (Jn 19:34-35). At any rate, these were important symbols or witnesses to the deity of Christ in John's mind. He also adds a third witness, the indwelling Spirit. Thus, according to John's count here, there are three that bear record. The rest of verse 7 and the first nine words of verse 8 are not original, and are not to be considered as a part of the Word of God (refer to the marginal notes in any reference Bible). John's three witnesses then are: the spirit, and the water, and the blood: and the three agree in one. Agree in one is an idiom which is properly translated simply, agree. Only two or three witnesses were needed to establish the truth of a fact (Deut 19:15; Jn 8:17).

9 If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.

11 And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son.

12 He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.

13 These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

14 And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:

15 And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

16 If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it.

17 All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin not unto death.

B. Assurance of Eternal Life. 5:9-13.

9. The witness of God is greater. It is greater because he is God; if numbers are important (and John did stress the numbers in Jn 8:17-18, where Christ's own testimony is counted with the Father's for the necessary two), God's testimony is three in one. The point is only that there is plenty of evidence to confirm the fact that Jesus is the Christ. Which he hath testified (Gr martyreō); the Greek perfect tense is used for this word to stress the certainty of the fact of God's witness.

10. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; by believing, a person mystically lives in Christ, and Christ lives in the believer. The believer also has the Spirit who is once more a third witness. Because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. There is a play upon the cognate forms record (Gr martyria), and gave (Gr martyreō), here, with the latter being in the perfect tense stressing again the absolute certainty of the truth of the witness; the allusion is to the apostolic preaching of which the content is now specified in brief.

11-12. The message of the apostles was essentially, God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. The one who has the Son, that is in the sense of believing in Him (2:22; 4:2; 5:1), hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. See again 1:1-4 on giving the testimony or "preaching."

13. In summary and conclusion, John wants to make his purpose clear; These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God. Note the similarity to John 20:31: ". . . that ye might believe. . . ." which was the purpose there, is changed to . . . that ye may know. . . . The letter is written so that believers might have "knowledge" or assurance about eternal life. In these last few verses, John refers to "knowledge" nine times by means of four synonyms; it must be clear that there were false teachers who were engrossed in a quasi-Gnosticism.

C. Assurance of Answered Prayer. 5:14-17.

14-17. This is the confidence (Gr parresia). This word originally meant "speaking out" boldly, but later came to denote the boldness or confidence without reference to the "speaking." In this book, it means "joyous confidence" toward God; in 2:28 it can be seen as the opposite of shame. If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death. It is important to keep the context in mind while focusing on the meaning of the sin . . . not unto death. It has been emphasized by John that believers have passed over from death into life (3:14). It is quite possible that John is still on the same track; his concern could be over believers who might have already been influenced by heresy, and are living in sin because they think it has nothing to do with worship of God. He would stress that God would answer prayers like this and restore such backsliders to life in Christ. It may be, too, that some who were in the church and considered to be brothers in Christ (although they were not, they went out from us, but they were not of us 2:19) have been so influenced by the false teachers that they have, speaking figuratively, now already passed back over from life into death. In this sense the sin unto death would be rejection of God's truth to the point that one died in unbelief. Others suggest that the sin unto death is not a particular act of sin, but any sin that occasions one's untimely death. Therefore, a living person need never fear that he has already committed the sin unto death, since he is still alive. Only total rejection and rebellion against God, and rebellion to God's laws, may cause one to sin unto death.

VI. CONCLUSION. 5:18-21.

18 We know that whosoever is born

18. Whatsoever is born of God sinneth not reiterates the

I JOHN 5:19

of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.

19 And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness.

20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life.

21 Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

principle which has been stated in many different ways throughout the book, that if a person is genuinely born of God (Gr gennaō is used in the perfect tense), he will not live in sin (Gr hamartanō is used in the present tense to imply a life characterized by sin, rather than an isolated act of sin). John again plays upon the word born by using it to refer to Christ; he that is begotten of God keepeth himself should rather be translated, "The One who was born of God keeps him." It is because Christ keeps the believer that the evil one cannot touch him.

19-21. The theme of assurance and true knowledge continues its intensity to the very end of the epistle as John repeats in the perfect tense, we know (for sure!) that we are of God . . . we know (for sure!) that the Son of God has come (for sure!), and hath give us an understanding (for sure!). The purpose for all this assurance and certainty is, "so that we might enjoy knowledge (Greek present tense denoting not just coming to know, but enjoying continually) of the True One." In place of the benediction is the closing exhortation, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

The Second And Third Epistles Of

JOHN

INTRODUCTION

These two letters, II and III John, have the distinction of being the shortest books of the Bible. Each of these epistles contains less than three hundred Greek words and was no doubt written on a single sheet of papyrus.

These two brief letters give insight into the hospitality of Christians to fellow travelers. Since inns in the first century were notoriously flea-infested and rapacious, where would a Christian stay while traveling? The answer was in the home of another Christian. "For example, Paul was entertained by Lydia in Philippi, Jason in Thessalonica, Gaius in Corinth, Philip the evangelist in Caesarea and the Cypriot Mnason in Jerusalem (Acts 16:15; 17:7; Rom 16:23; Acts 21:8, 16)" (John R. W. Stott, The Epistles of John, pp. 198-199).

Authorship. Again, the author of II and III John is accepted as being the Apostle John. Such was the belief of the Church Fathers. Eusebius listed these two brief books among the antilegomena (Eccl. Hist. III. 25). Irenaeus twice quotes from II John in his Against Heresies. Clement of Alexandria speaks of John's "longer epistle" which would probably indicate that he was aware of some shorter epistles that John had written.

Date and place of writing. Like the First Epistle of John, these writings offer no hint as to the date of their writing. Their close affinity to I John would probably suggest that they were written shortly after the first epistle.

The common assumption is that they were written from Ephesus, as the first epistle. This is based on the history of John's life after receiving the care of our Lord's mother at the cross (Jn 19:26-27). John was called to be the pastor at the church of Ephesus and there apparently labored until he died, with the exception of the brief interlude on the island of Patmos.

Purpose. It appears that the great purpose of II John was to warn the believers not to give indiscriminate hospitality to strangers or traveling evangelist-teachers. Those who did not meet the sure test of sound doctrine were to be refused hastily.

III John seems to have been penned in order to gain the services of Gaius on behalf of the missionary representative John was sending out. Gaius is encouraged not only to continue in his good work, but to learn from the worthy example of Demetrius and the unworthy example of Diotrephes.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1-3.

THE elder unto the elect lady and her children, whom I love in the truth; and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth;

1. Only a hint of the identity of the author is given when John calls himself here the elder (Gr presbyteros). The word is synonymous to "pastor" and "bishop" in New Testament literature. Being used with the article, it implies that John has a superior position of leadership and respect in the Christian community. John the Apostle writes to the elect lady. Lady (Gr kyria) is the same word as "Lord" in the New Testament, except that it is feminine here (and in vs. 5), and refers not to a literal "lady" but to the "congregation" or "church" in a figurative sense. The church is a lady in much the same way as we refer to a ship as "she." As the bride of Christ, it is proper to refer to the church as "she." The adjective elect is more important; it defines the church "chosen," and implies the metaphor of the church as "bride of Christ." And her children, would mean, of course, the members of the church, i.e., the people who make up the church (churches are never merely buildings in the New Testament). Whom I love in truth. The references here to truth, love, and knowledge show the similarity to especially I John. Also all

II JOHN 2

2 For the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3 Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love.

4 I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another.

6 And this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

7 For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist.

8 Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward.

9 Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath they that have known the truth. Known is perfect tense in the original, stressing the certainty of the fact of the knowledge; it does not mean all who have ever known the truth in any way, but rather all who "really know the truth," that is, real believers.

2-3. The reason that real believers love each other is because of the indwelling truth (which is the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of Truth). Grace . . . mercy, and peace are part of the standard, Christian greeting formula (cf. I Tim 1:2; II Tim 1:2).

II. EXHORTATION TO LOVE. 4-6.

4. I rejoiced greatly that I found. I found is the same as saying "I learned," and may even mean simply "I heard." This is a way of starting the letter in a positive tone; what follows is the real conciliatory message. Evidently the same problems faced this particular congregation as those to whom I John was written. There were ruthless and immoral teachers who claimed authority and spirituality over the believers and threatened to lead some of them astray. Walking in truth is here and elsewhere in the New Testament the same as "living righteously." As we have received a commandment. This would be the preaching of the apostles which was recognized by the various churches as the Word of God, and so is here spoken of as coming from the Father.

5-6. What John is writing is not a new commandment in the sense that it is different from that apostolic message. This was an important point to make, since the message of the false teachers was new and different rather than being part of the original message. Love, and walking according to God's commandments are the same message as was given all along.

III. EXHORTATION TO DOCTRINE. 7-11.

7. The reason given for the exhortation to love and righteous living is that many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. The deceivers (Gr planos) are the apostolic impostors who are trying to lead astray those who are true believers. They are the same false teachers in view throughout John's first letter. The deceivers have not just entered into the world, but according to the original reading of the text, have "gone out into the world," the sense of which is more fully explained in comparison to I John 2:19, where they were professing Christians as became obvious when they left the church. Another of John's descriptions for the impostors is those who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. Another translation has, ". . . who will not acknowledge the coming of Jesus Christ in the flesh." The words is come are in the original a supplemental participle in indirect discourse; however, there may be some of the Old Testament apocalyptic flavor remaining in this word, and John may be alluding to the rejection of the Messiah as the "Coming One." At any rate, the deceivers, because they will not agree to this basic truth, are antichrists (cf. I Jn 2:18, 22; 4:2; 5:1).

8. Look to yourselves simply means "Watch out!" Two alternative possibilities are laid out with the warning in regard to the false teachers. That we lose not those things which we have wrought. The text should probably read, "that you do not lose what we have accomplished." It is the apostles who have preached and thus fulfilled the Commission and made great gain (salvation) possible for the believers; the apostles will not lose anything themselves, but the believers stand to lose all the blessings of Christianity if they listen to the false teachers. It is the believers also who will receive the reward, which is not a reward for something done, but the gift of salvation by grace.

9. Whosoever transgresseth (Gr proagō, rather than parabainō) should be translated "Whoever goes too far and refuses to not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

live by the teaching," hath not God. Now the standard by which the false teachers are to be tested is called the "teaching," which is another technical term to denote the message or preaching of the apostles. The application of a positive minor premise to this syllogism would change the conclusion to the positive, "has both the Father and the Son," which means that he is a true believer rather than one of the impostors.

10 If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed:

10-11. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine. This reveals an interesting characteristic of the primitive church, the itinerant prophets or teachers. These circuit-riding preachers depended upon the people of God in each town along their route for food and sustenance; they could not survive without the help and support of Christians. Any of these who do not bring the distinctively Christian message of the apostles, John says, should not be "received," which means that he must not be supported; the hope is that he will be starved out of his diabolical mission. John says that even a greeting is too good for them! Bid him God speed (Gr chairo) means only to say "Hello." It was a greeting as common in that day as our "Hi!"

11 For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.

IV. CONCLUSION. 12-13.

12 Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink: but I trust to come unto you, and speak face to face, that our joy may be full.

12-13. Having many things to write unto you. II John is a mini-version of I John. The author is saying that although he could go on and write much more, he prefers to be with them and speak to them face to face (which in the first-century idiom is vividly "mouth to mouth") in order that he might, as it were, restore them to spiritual life in Christ. The greeting from the elect sister is, of course, another congregation, perhaps a larger one where John lived.

13 The children of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1.

THE elder unto the well-beloved Gaius, whom I love in the truth.

1. The author's identity is given in the same way as it is in II John 1:1 (see comments there). The letter is addressed to the well-beloved Gaius, an individual rather than a church congregation as in II John. Since Gaius was a common name, it cannot be said with certainty that this Gaius identifies with Gaius of Derbe (the traditional view, cf. Acts 20:4), Gaius of Macedonia (Acts 19:29), or Gaius of Corinth (I Cor 1:14; Rom 16:23). The traditional view is quite possible; at least we know that this Gaius was a leader in the church, he was very hospitable, and that he was a dear friend, perhaps a convert of John's. The word well-beloved (Gr agapētos) is simply the adjective "loved," and would quite naturally translate into, "To my dear friend Gaius"; the same word is found referring most probably to the common bond in the one message of the apostolic preaching; the same words were used in the address to the congregation in II John 1.

III JOHN 2

2 Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth.

3 For I rejoiced greatly, when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth.

4 I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth.

5 Beloved, thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers;

6 Which have borne witness of thy charity before the church: whom if thou bring forward on their journey after a godly sort, thou shalt do well:

7 Because that for his name's sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers to the truth.

II. PRAYERS FOR THE BELOVED. 2-4.

2-4. Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth. This is John's wishful prayer for Gaius. The word prosper (Gr euodōō), which occurs with soul as well as with respect to physical well-being, means literally to "have a pleasant trip," and came to denote "getting along well." John hopes that his letter may find everything going well, and Gaius in good health physically as he is spiritually. For I rejoiced greatly, expresses the reason and basis of John's knowledge of Gaius' "prosperous soul." He knows that Gaius is doing well spiritually because of the situation he is about to describe. Brethren came and testified. The use of the progressive present tense in the original here indicates that this was not a one-time witness; from "time to time" brethren have come to John and testified of how Gaius had helped them along their way. The truth that is in thee, even as thou walkest in the truth. The evidence that the truth is in Gaius is that he walks (Gr peripateō) in the truth, meaning that he lives according to the message of the apostles, rather than just giving mental assent to it. John has no greater joy than hearing that his children walk in truth. The use of the word children with Gaius may indicate that he was a convert of John's; tradition has it that John later appointed Gaius as the first bishop of Pergamum.

III. EXAMPLES OF THE BELIEVERS. 5-8.

5. Beloved, thou doest faithfully. This indicates the value of the service which has been performed; another translation has, "It is a loyal thing you do. . . ." Whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers. But these are not to be understood as two separate groups; the brethren are the strangers (Gr xenos), or those to whom the "hospitality" (Gr philoxenia, a cognate) is shown. It is important that aspiring bishops show this quality among others (I Tim 3:2).

6. Which have borne witness of thy charity (Gr agapē), which is rather "love" as a proof of Gaius' genuine Christianity. The mention of the church is perhaps a reference to the larger congregation from which John writes; this also gives some indication of the conduct of meetings where missionaries gave reports and testified before the group. Another indication of the life of the early church is the use of the technical term to denote missionary support, "send forward" (Gr propempō), which is translated here as if thou bring forward on their journey. The phrase after a godly sort is an idiom meaning that Gaius' support is deserved by the missionaries in the Christian system, since they have given themselves to serve as God's representatives.

7. Because for his name's sake they went forth. This "going out" is missionary service; it is the corresponding opposite to the "going out" of the false teachers (cf. I Jn 2:19; 4:1; II Jn 10). The itinerant missionaries went out in the name of the Lord (literally, "in behalf of the Name") and unlike representatives of other religious cults, they did not receive anything of the Gentiles. Gentiles (Gr ethnikos), although it usually signifies Gentiles in contradistinction to Jews, here means non-Christians; God's people have the privilege and responsibility to support God's workers.

8. We therefore ought to receive such. Such missionaries are to be received by the Christians, meaning that they are to be given food, supplies, and money to help them along their way. By doing this the Christians at the home base become fellow helpers (Gr synergos, a technical term for missionaries and workers for the Lord in distinction to laity; used exclusively by Paul except for this one use in John) to the truth (truth is personified here as God, so that Gaius is working with God).

9 I wrote unto the church; but Diōt're-phēs, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not.

10 Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words; and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and casteth them out of the church.

11 Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God; but he that doeth evil hath not seen God.

12 De-mē'trī-us hath good report of all men, and of the truth itself; yea, and we also bear record; and ye know that our record is true.

13 I had many things to write, but I

IV. DIOTREPES AND THE BRETHREN. 9-10.

9. I wrote unto the church. Exactly what was written, we have no way of knowing, since the letter must have been destroyed by Diotrepes or otherwise lost. This indicates something of John's position as an elder who evidently had some kind of supervision of the churches and local bishops. Probably Gaius and Diotrepes were teachers or preachers in the same congregation, although they could have had neighboring churches in the same community. At least they were rivals and Diotrepes was far different in character from Gaius. Diotrepes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence. To apply some of the tests given in I and II John, Gaius measures up as a true believer: he walks in the truth (lives righteously), serves God faithfully and obeys the commands, he demonstrates that the love of God is fulfilled in him as he loves and ministers to others. Diotrepes, on the other hand, measures up as a false teacher, an impostor! He loves himself more than anyone else; the word loveth to have the pre-eminence (Gr philoprōteuō) means literally, "to love first place." He does not receive the word of the apostles as the Word of God, but instead continues to reject it personally (cf. I Thess 2:13, where a cognate word for receiveth us not appears). His works are evil, and he shows hate rather than love for the missionaries as well as the members who want to help them.

10. I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words. Diotrepes not only refuses to acknowledge the authority of the Apostle John, he is in active opposition to him. Prating (Gr plyareō) means "to talk nonsense," and is used in the present tense here to denote the way Diotrepes always treats the Word of God through the apostles. He mocks it like the false teachers in II Peter 3:3 who are called "scoffers." Not content therewith. There is more to show that he is a false teacher: he not only refuses to receive, welcome, and care for the missionaries himself, but he further shows his malicious nature by attempting to prevent (conative present in Greek) real Christians from doing it, and excommunicating them from the church.

V. DEMETRIUS AND HIS BELIEF. 11-12.

11. Beloved is singular and vocative; it again addresses Gaius directly, probably as a younger or aspiring bishop. He must not follow (Gr mimēomai), meaning to "mimic," an evil pattern, but a good one. Again one of John's syllogisms is applied to Diotrepes in contradistinction to Demetrius a real believer, and probably another bishop in the congregation or community: he that doeth evil hath not seen God. Not seen is in the perfect tense in the original, and emphasizes the negative certainty of the action here, ". . . has never really seen God at all." Diotrepes is not even a believer! How can he be a leader of believers? He certainly should not be respected, obeyed, or allowed to influence Gaius who aspires to be a minister.

12. Demetrius, on the other hand, would be a good pattern; he checks out all right. Hath good report (Gr martyreō), the same word that is used for preaching, or testifying to the truth of the gospel; the perfect tense is used in the Greek to show the certainty of the testimony concerning Demetrius both by all the believers, and by the truth (which is demonstrated in his life). And we also bear record; and ye know that our record is true. We bear record is the same word as report. John means that in this letter he is now giving his word concerning the genuine Christian character of Demetrius.

VI. CONCLUSION. 13-14.

13-14. I had many things to write, but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee. The same idea is expressed here as in the will not with ink and pen write unto thee:

III JOHN 14

14 But I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak face to face. Peace be to thee. Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name.

close of II John, but here the desiderative imperfect tense in Greek occurs with a different verb (had), and a slight variation in vocabulary provides a change in style. The same desire to speak face to face (or as the original idiom has it, "mouth to mouth") is present. Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name. Friends (Gr philos) is used here in place of "children of your elect sister" in II John 13, but this is merely another name for "brethren" or "saints." Jesus called his disciples his friends (Jn 15:13-14). It is easy to see why John would use this term if it is remembered that the literal meaning is "loved ones"; it is a synonym for the word beloved in verse 2. By name hints that the churches were quite small which must have promoted close, personal, and sincere fellowship and love. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (Jn 13:35).

The General Epistle Of JUDE

INTRODUCTION

Authorship. In the normal manner, this author identifies himself in the salutation as Jude, 'the brother of James. This means that he was also the brother of our Lord (Mt 13:55; Mk 6:3). He preferred not to mention the family relationship to Jesus directly; perhaps the mention of James, who was a leading figure in the church in Jerusalem, was enough to give weight to his identity. His boast, like that the Peter and Paul, was that he was a "slave" of Jesus Christ.

Jude was listed as a disputed book by both Origen and Eusebius; this means only that there were some who did not accept it, but Origen himself quoted it as Scripture, and even states that it was "divine Scripture." However, external evidence for this book is strong. It was quoted by several early church Fathers (Polycarp, Clement of Rome, etc.), and is listed in the second-century Muratorian Canon.

The outstanding reason for disputing the authenticity of Jude in ancient and modern times has been the fact that Jude quotes from the apocryphal Enoch, evidently accepting that he is the seventh from Adam. Another problem is the amount of duplication from II Peter, although there could have been a common oral or written source behind both. There is no real reason for not accepting the traditional canonical status of Jude.

Occasion and purpose. Jude, like Peter, writes to encourage believers to continue to hold to the faith against the diabolical attack of false teachers. The Old Testament Scriptures and the common apostolic preaching are the authorities which predict both the presence and the doom of the scoffers. His letter has the stated purpose of encouraging his readers to contend for the faith (vs. 3). The letter assumes an existing danger of apostasy into immorality and deep sin because of the influence of shrewd and greedy teachers. Jude writes to correct this.

Date and place of writing. Whether before or after II Peter, Jude is at least in the same general period. There is the possibility that both draw heavily from a contemporary oral or written source which is no longer extant. The fact that Jude is more definite in his reference to the false teachers as a present reality to his readers (vs. 4) suggests that he wrote after Peter when the problem had more fully developed.

No hint of who the readers are is given in the book, except that they are perhaps in the Palestine area so that they will know who James (vs. 1) is; they may be Jews or Gentiles. The date must then lie somewhere between about A.D. 65 and 80, perhaps A.D. 67-68. The place of writing is not indicated but quite likely is Jerusalem.

Characteristics. The book is characterized by the strongest apocalyptic condemnation of the ungodly and immoral false teachers. Jude, like Peter, refers to the Old Testament to prove his point about the judgment of God upon sin; unlike Peter, he freely refers also to the apocryphal works that were current. Of all New Testament writers, Jude is more noted for this, but he is not alone in doing it. Matthew, Paul, and the writer of Hebrews all do things with quotations which require strained explanations if we judge their literary practices by twentieth century western standards. The book is definitely in character with the other apostolic writings and there is no reason not to accept it as authoritative today.

COMMENTARY

I. INTRODUCTION. 1-2.

JUDE, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are 1-2. Jude. The salutation is normal and unpretentious. The author identifies himself as the brother of James (who was well known as the leader of the church in Jerusalem), but more sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called.

JUDE 2

2 Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied.

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.

4 For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

importantly to him, as the servant of Jesus Christ. The word servant (Gr doulos) is literally "slave" and conveys the picture of a bondslave who belonged to another person. Even though, as the brother of James, Jude was the brother of Christ, he prefers that we know him as the "slave" or property of Christ. Peter (II Pet 1:1) and Paul (Rom 1:1) also spoke of themselves in this way; it is a metaphor of complete dedication. Of the readers, we know only that they were sanctified . . . preserved, and called, and that they must have lived somewhere in the vicinity of Palestine in order to know who James was. There is a variant in the text which should read "well-loved" rather than sanctified, and an acceptable translation would be, "To those who are called, beloved in God the Father and kept for Jesus Christ."

II. OCCASION OF THE EPISTLE. 3-4.

A. Change of the Purpose. 3.

3. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you. This diligence (Gr spoudē) is really "eagerness" here and is the object of a circumstantial participle in the original, which seems to be a polite concession in order to introduce the real purpose for writing. It is like saying, "Although I've been wanting to write to you for a long time about our common salvation, I now find that there is a compelling necessity, I must write." Common salvation is an abstract term like Christianity. Peter begins the first General Epistle with a discussion of salvation, as he does in his second epistle; so does Paul in all his epistles, and Hebrews and James assume salvation. None of the epistles are primarily evangelistic; they are not like "gospel tracts," but are written to Christians who have some specific need for correction, reproof, encouragement, or instruction. Here Jude sees that it was needful for me to write unto. The word needful (Gr anangkē) implies a compelling, pressing need; a serious problem has come up among the believers, and it must be dealt with. He had to write to encourage them to earnestly contend (Gr epagōnizoman) for the faith. This word means "fight for" someone; here Jude is writing to encourage whatever "agonizing struggle" might be necessary to defend the good name of the faith. The faith (vs. 3) is synonymous with "common salvation" or Christianity; they are to "fight for" the honor of the faith. Note that the emphasis is not on contention, but on the faith which is now described further as once delivered unto the saints. The faith is shown to be synonymous with the apostolic preaching by the use of delivered (Gr paradidō) which is a technical term for the preaching or handing down of the gospel message by the apostles (the word is used twice in I Corinthians 15:3 for the message which Paul "delivered" after having "received" it himself). What is being promoted here is the apostolic preaching, that is, the Word of God, not an attitude of constant fighting with other believers. This is reinforced by the use of once, which is not the word for "once upon a time" assuming a considerable passage of time, but rather means "once for all," and refers to the fact that the apostles preached this Word as a final and authoritative message which cannot now be changed by the false teachers.

B. Purpose of the Change. 4.

4. For there are certain men crept in unawares. Jude here (vs. 4) explains why he had to write giving this encouragement; false teachers had sneaked in (Gr pareisduō; denotes a "sneak" or furtive attack) and they must continue their fight for the purity of the Word. The same idea had been used by Peter (II Peter 2:1) and by Paul (Gal 2:4) to alert believers to the presence of heresy. Jude says (and so had Peter) that such people as these stand under the condemnation of the Old Testament itself: who were before . . . ordained to this condemnation (here and elsewhere in this letter Jude seems to allude to Deuteronomy

13:1-11, where people who lure others away from true worship of God are condemned in the strongest possible terms). The false teachers are further identified with the enemies of God in all apocalyptic literature by the word ungodly (Gr asebēs); these are by no means Christian brothers with a different opinion. What they have done is called turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness. The word turning (Gr metatithēmi) means "transfer" but what these people have done is called negative transfer; they have "misapplied" the grace of God. While God accepts us and forgives our sin, we cannot and dare not misapply this grace and say that therefore we can sin all we want and still enjoy forgiveness. So that there will be no doubt, these people are further described as those who deny the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ. Note that the titles here both refer to the one person Jesus Christ. These false teachers denounce Him and want no part of being "Christian."

III. THE APOSTATE PAST. 5-7.

A. Israelite Apostasy. 5.

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward destroyed them that believed not.

5. I will therefore put you in remembrance. Jude now gives three examples of how Deuteronomy 13:1-11 has applied in history and resulted in death and destruction for the offenders. First, those who believed not were destroyed (Num 14:35). That great tragedy, you will remember, was called the "day of bitterness," or "day of testing" in the wilderness before the entrance into the Promised Land. The greatest responsibility was upon those "spies" or scouts who brought the "evil report." They not only disbelieved themselves, but they caused the people of God to despair and disbelieve the Word of God. They were destroyed.

B. Angelic Apostasy. 6.

6 And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day.

6. Then there were the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation whom he has reserved (perfect tense in Greek to show the certainty of the fact) to the Day of Judgment. On this compare Genesis 6:1-4, the apocryphal interpretation of which both Peter (II Peter 2:4, 9) and Jude accept, at least for the sake of the illustration.

C. Pagan Apostasy. 7.

7 Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.

7. The third example is taken from the fiery destruction of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah and the surrounding cities which committed fornication and went after strange flesh. The use of fornication (Gr ekporneūō), which occurs only here in the New Testament, with "strange flesh" refers to the distinctive and terrible sin of Sodom, homosexuality, for which God destroyed the whole area. The point in this passage is that the people of God were lured away from the true worship of God by the homosexual cities (cf. Gen 18-19) and they were therefore destroyed. In the Bible, the most serious sins are those which draw others away from the true worship of God or hinder others from believing in Christ (cf. Deut 13:1-11; Mk 9:42).

IV. THE APOSTATE PRESENT. 8-16.

A. Activity of the Apostates. 8-10.

8 Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities.

8-10. Jude now shows the complete and total corruption of these false teachers to prove their identity with the kind of people mentioned in the above three examples. Likewise also these filthy dreamers. The word filthy is not in the original text but is mistakenly supplied; dreamers (Gr enyptiazomai) means that they are prophets, or actually false prophets, who claimed to get their teachings by revelation or dreams (cf. Deut 13:1-5). That they are filthy is not to be denied but is brought out by the fact that they defile flesh which seems to mean men as opposed

9 Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee.

10 But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves.

11 Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Cō're.

12 These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots;

13 Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And E'noch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, 15 To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

16 These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage.

17 But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ;

18 How that they told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit.

20 But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, 21 Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

to angels, and also connects them with the people of Sodom who went after strange flesh. So bold in their false teachings are these men that they despise (which means "reject") dominion (probably God's rule) and speak evil of dignities. These false prophets evidently openly rejected God's Word and all spiritual powers, and were so audacious that Michael the Archangel beside them looks timid! On blaspheming those things which they know not, compare Paul's words in I Timothy 1:7. But what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves. Here in a very cryptic sentence would seem to be another reference to their wickedly perverted conduct (homosexuality and gluttony) in which they become completely corrupt, and for which they are to be justly destroyed (both meanings are possible for the Gr ptheirō).

B. Warning of the Apostates. 11-16.

11-13. Woe unto them! They are doomed as certainly as Cain . . . Balaam . . . and Korah. These false teachers are denounced as being as worthless as spots (blemishes) in your feasts (vs. 12), rainless clouds (vs. 12), fruitless trees that have been plucked up by the roots (vs. 12), Raging waves (vs. 13), and wandering stars (stars out of orbit, vs. 13).

14-16. Verses 14 and 15 are quoted from Enoch 1:9 (and 60:8) verbatim. They stress typically the ungodliness of the sinners (ungodly recurs four times) and the judgment they deserve and get at the Lord's coming. A clearer translation of verse 16 would be, "These grumblers and malcontents follow their own lusts; their bloated words are nothing but flattery."

V. EXHORTATIONS AGAINST APOSTATES. 17-23.

A. Exhortation by the Apostles. 17-19.

17-19. Remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ. Spoken before (Gr proeipon) has been taken to mean that Jude is a late author writing in another generation than that of the apostles; this is not a valid inference, since the word does not necessarily mean "a long time ago." Paul often used this word to refer to his own previous statements made only weeks or months before; once, in Galatians 1:9, he uses it to refer to his statement in the previous verse! The whole purpose of the letter is to remind them that the Word of God was given once and for all by the apostles. The words were not, of course, spoken of the apostles (objective genitive), but "by the apostles," as is obvious from the next verse as well as from the grammatical construction of the original. There should be mockers in the last time. There are close verbal correspondences with II Peter 3:3 and I Timothy 4:1 which seems to hint at some kind of oral formula in apostolic times (see II Pet 3:3).

B. Exhortation by Warning. 20-21.

20-21. But ye, beloved, building up yourselves. This is now the positive exhortation of the letter. The main imperative verb is Keep yourselves in the love of God. Keep (Gr tēreō) means "guard" or "reserve," and its object is yourselves. The meaning here seems to be "keep yourselves from being dragged off into a life that is different from what God wants for you." The love of God may be objective genitive, meaning the true worship of God; again compare Deuteronomy 13:3; “. . . for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul.” The main exhortation to keep yourselves in the love of God is supplemented with three circumstantial participles of means in the original; they answer the question, “How does one keep himself in the love of God?” By building up yourselves in the faith, which means learning more about the faith, or growing in the grace and knowledge of the Lord and Saviour. He adds, by praying in the Holy Spirit, which may be simply worshiping God as led by the Holy Spirit rather than listening to these false prophets who do not have the Spirit at all (vs. 19). And, thirdly, keep yourselves by looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life. Looking for (Gr prosdechomai) means to “anticipate.” What is meant here is probably the same exhortation as was given by Paul when he used this very word in a similar connection in Titus 2:13, “Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ.” It is interesting that Paul also used the word mercy in a reference to the Second Coming, “The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy . . . in that day” (II Tim 1:18). Peter also closed his second epistle with a triple use of a synonym, asking his readers to look for the coming of the Day of God.

C. Exhortation by Example. 22-23.

22-23. Jude seems to have some mercy himself for the false teachers (more likely, for some of the brethren who may have been influenced by them) and we would translate, “Have mercy on those who waver in doubt; save those you can by snatching them, as it were, from the flames. Show mercy in godly fear, although you hate the clothes they wear, stained as they are by the flesh.”

VI. CONCLUSION. 24-25.

24-25. In closing Jude gives one of the most balanced and beautiful benedictions in the New Testament. It is a prayer fitting for his readers who are threatened both with falling and with fault because of the false teachers who are trying to lure them into sin with claims of false revelation. Only by recalling the Word of God, i.e., the Old Testament, and especially the preaching of the apostles which showed it to be fulfilled in Jesus Christ, can they be “kept” from falling, and “presented” faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy.

22 And of some have compassion, making a difference:

23 And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh.

24 Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy,

25 To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

The Book Of REVELATION

INTRODUCTION

The name of the book. It is definitely not "The Revelation of St. John the Divine" (AV). Better is "The Revelation of John." Best is "The Revelation of Jesus Christ" (cf. 1:1).

Authorship. The author of the book is John, the son of Zebedee, author of the Gospel of John and I, II, and III John (cf. 1:1, 4, 9; 22:8). Donald Guthrie (New Testament Introduction, p. 933) has stated: "... There are few books in the New Testament with stronger early attestation." Apostolic authorship was questioned by Dionysius, Eusebius of Caesarea, the Council of Laodicea (ca. A.D. 360), and the Peshitta Version (early fifth century).

1. Arguments for apostolic authorship are:

a. External evidence. Those who witnessed to belief in apostolic authorship in the second and early third centuries were Justin, Irenaeus, Clement, Origen, Tertullian, and Hippolytus.

b. Internal evidence.

(1). He was known by the name John to the seven churches of Asia, and knew the activities of each church.

(2). He writes with authority, expecting the churches to accept what he has written as a message from God.

(3). His book, belonging to the style of apocalypse, is different from the noncanonical Jewish types. It is not attributed to an ancient worthy like Enoch or Baruch.

(4). The writer is conscious of divine inspiration (1:1, 11, 19; 10:10; 22:6-9, 18ff.).

(5). Similarities of thought indicate a close relationship between the Apocalypse, the Gospel of John, and I, II, and III John. The affinities are seen in common ideas, theology, and wording (cf. Jn 1:1 with Rev 19:13; Jn 4:10-14ff.; Jn 7:38 with Rev 7:17; 21:6; 22:17; Jn 10:1ff. with Rev 7:17; Jn 4:21 with Rev 21:22). There is a marked use of antithesis in both books, e.g., the power of God and the power of the world; light and darkness; truth and falsehood.

2. Arguments against apostolic authorship (pro John the Elder) are:

a. Linguistic differences. No one denies there are differences in language between the Revelation and the other works of John. Explanations have been given to account for these:

(1). There was an interval of a score of years between the gospel and the Revelation. However, different grammatical constructions appear by choice.

(2). Revelation differs from the gospel because as prophecy it follows Old Testament patterns.

(3). There is no proof for the use of amanuenses. Guthrie (op. cit., p. 942): "It should be noted, incidentally, that in spite of linguistic and grammatical differences the Apocalypse has a closer affinity to the Greek of the other Johannine books than to any other New Testament books."

b. There are no apostolic claims. Since John's apostleship was not disputed (unlike Paul), there was no need to stress his office.

c. Non-johannine features. The doctrines of God, Christ, the Spirit, and future things are said to be different from the gospel. Differences do not indicate incompatibility. There is progress in doctrine and necessary additions to doctrine already revealed.

d. The conflicting traditions of the apostle's death. One holds that death occurred in his old age at Ephesus and another earlier at the time of martyrdom of James (Acts 12). The first is the stronger and more reliable tradition.

As to authorship by a John the Elder, there is no solid evidence that such a person ever lived. The view that the author was John the prophet is no more tenable than the position just given.

Place and date of writing. Patmos, where the Apostle John was exiled for the faith (1:9). Patmos, a small rocky island in the Mediterranean Sea, is about thirty-five miles southwest of Miletus. During the time of the Roman Empire, it was used as a place of banishment. Because of John's exile here, the island was esteemed during subsequent times, although it was depopulated by pirates.

The date of the book is ca. A.D. 95/96 in the reign of the Roman emperor Domitian, which is the most generally accepted view. Most authorities feel the background of persecutions (1:9; 2:10, 13; 3:10; 6:9; 18:24) best fits the reign of Domitian (A.D. 51-96). The date in the reign of Nero (A.D. 37-68) has little to commend it.

Canonicity. A canonical book is one which carries divine authority and is normative for Christian belief and behavior. Revelation was early considered as part of the canon, but not all were persuaded. Justin, Melito of Sardis, Irenaeus, Tertullian, among others, accepted the book as the work of the Apostle John. On the other hand, the Eastern Church expressed doubts on the question and did not accord the Revelation canonicity until the fourth century. Luther, Zwingli, and Erasmus did consider it apostolic; Calvin did not address the question. But in the light of uniform ancient tradition, the book must be accorded canonical status (H. C. Thiessen, Introduction to the New Testament, pp. 318-319).

Destination. The indicated destination of the book, as given in chapters 1-3, was certain churches in Asia, specifically, Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. But unquestionably, it was intended for other churches of that day and the church universal of all ages. The promise of blessing (1:3) cannot be restricted.

Place in the canon. It is in every sense of the word the capstone of the Bible, and its significance cannot be overestimated. It is indeed the grand consummation of all God's earthly and heavenly plans and the supreme vindication of Christ's person and work.

Use of the Old Testament. The Apostle John, steeped in Old Testament truth, drew his concepts and symbols from Daniel, Ezekiel, Isaiah, and Zechariah, as well as Exodus, Jeremiah, and Joel (D. Guthrie, op. cit., pp. 964-967). Although the apocalypse does not quote directly, its four hundred four verses contain about five hundred fifty references to the Old Testament (B. F. Westcott and F. J. A. Hort, Greek New Testament, pp. 184ff.).

Interpretation. There are four main interpretive approaches to the book:

1. The Historical Method. This view claims the book covers the entire history of the church, picturing the antagonism of the forces of evil in the world against the church.

2. The Praeterist. This approach sees the greater part of the prophecies as fulfilled in the past, especially in the confrontation of the church with the Roman Empire. The victory of the church is foretold and assured.

3. The Spiritual. This method of interpretation holds that the book manifests the ultimate and permanent triumph of truth over error.

4. The Futurist Approach. This approach maintains that from chapter 4 on all is predictive (1:3, 19).

Purpose of the book. The book exhibits a threefold purpose:

1. To encourage believers. In the times of the Roman persecutions of the early church this book aimed to assure believers of the final victory of Christ.

2. To enlarge upon and add to the Old Testament. This book explained prophetic truth, especially in the area of the consummation of human history.

3. To present Christ as He enters His purchased possession. The Revelation is a vivid unveiling of the Lord Jesus Christ throughout creation.

Style of the book. It is a message in symbolic language; e.g., "signified," i.e., conveyed the message by sins (1:1). The book can only be properly understood in light of the scores of symbols and figures from the Old Testament.

Characteristics. The book is an apocalypse, i.e., an unveiling or disclosure. This type of literature is found in Isaiah 24-27, 65, 66; Joel 2:1-11, 28-32; Zechariah 9-14; and especially in Daniel. There are certain general characteristics of apocalypse which distinguish this literature from prophecy in general. Prophecy and apocalyptic differ as to content. The predictive element in prophecy is more prominent in apocalyptic, covers longer periods of time, and is more comprehensive in its view of the world. Both prophecy and apocalypse tell of the coming of the Messiah, but in the latter it has a broader reference. In prophecy, the rule of Messiah is mainly related to Israel; in apocalypse, it is seen in relation to the dominant powers of the world (cf. Dan 7:13, 14; Rev 11:15). The prophet as a preacher of righteousness used prediction as a guarantee of his divine mission or as a display of the natural result of rebellion against God. The apocalypticist assigns great importance to prediction.

Prophecy and apocalyptic differ as to form. Prophecy uses visions; but they are implied, rather than described. In apocalyptic the vision is the vehicle whereby the prediction is presented. In prophetic visions the symbols used are natural, e.g., the bones of Ezekiel 37. The visions of apocalyptic are arbitrary, e.g., the horns of the goat of Daniel 8. They have no basis in nature. Whereas the prophets wrote in a style that bordered on poetry, the apocalypticists always used prose.

Theme. The glorious theme of the book is the Lord Jesus Christ Himself as He enters upon His purchased possession. Specifically, He is revealed in representative chapters as follows:

1. Ch. 1—The medium of God's revelation (vss. 1, 5).

2. Ch. 2—The coming Ruler of the nations (vs. 27).

3. Ch. 5—The Lion of the tribe of Judah (vs. 5)—The slain Lamb (vs. 6).

4. Ch. 7—The Lamb the Shepherd (vs. 17).

5. Ch. 14—The Lamb on Mount Zion (vs. 1).

6. Ch. 18—The Judge of Babylon (vs. 8).

7. Ch. 19—The Bridegroom (vss. 7-9)—King of Kings and Lord of Lords (vs. 16).

8. Ch. 20—The Reigning Christ (vss. 4-6).

9. Ch. 21—The Alpha and the Omega (vs. 6).

10. Ch. 22—The Root and Offspring of David, the Morning Star (vs. 16).

Critical questions. See under Place and date of writing and Authorship.

Plan of the book (1:19).

1. The things John saw (ch. 1).

2. The things which are (chs. 2-3).

3. The things which shall occur after these things (chs. 4-22; cf. Dan 9:27).

a. Tribulation Period (chs. 4-19).

b. Millennial reign (ch. 20).

c. Eternal glory (chs. 21-22).

COMMENTARY

I. THE VISION OF THE RISEN CHRIST. 1:1-20.

A. The Introduction. 1:1-8.

1. Title of the book. 1:1.

The correct title for the book indicates that it is not a revelation of John, but of Jesus Christ. The unveiling tells what He will accomplish in consummating time and ushering in eternity.

2. Means of communication. 1:1-2.

1:1-2. So significant is the truth embodied in the message of the book that there is a fivefold avenue of transmission of the servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John:

2 Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw.

3 Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for the time is at hand.

4 JOHN to the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven Spirits which are before his throne;

5 And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood,

6 And hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen.

word: the Father to the Son to the mediating angel to John the apostle/prophet to God's servants. Emphasis is laid on the fact that John not only heard messages, but he saw visions as well (Gr hosa eiden).

Things which must shortly come to pass. This statement gives no basis for the historical interpretation of the book. Events are seen here from the perspective of the Lord and not from the human viewpoint (cf. II Pet 3:8). The same Greek words appear in Luke 18:7-8 (Gr en tachei), where the delay is clearly a prolonged one.

He sent and signified it by his angel. He signified (Gr esēmanen) the message; that is, He conveyed it by signs to the angel. In both the Old and New Testament the ministry of angels is employed with regard to future events (Ezk 1:5ff.; Dan 8:16; Zech 1:9; Acts 8:26; 10:3, 7).

3. The promised blessing. 1:3.

3. Only this book in the Bible pronounces a blessing on he that readeth (singular because with few copies of the Scriptures in those days, one read while many could hear), and they that hear and keep (obey) those things which are written. Scripture can only be effective when applied in the life. It is vital to notice that the book is called the prophecy. Future things are at the heart of the book. The time is at hand. These words (Gr ho kairos engus) appear only twice in the Revelation. Neither reference indicates the possible length involved. Again, all is seen from the perspective of God.

4. Messages to the seven churches. 1:4-8.

a. Salutation from the triune God. 1:4-6.

4. John to the seven churches which are in Asia. The writer is the Apostle John (see Introduction), who is mentioned besides here in 1:1, 9; 22:8. Asia does not refer to the continent of Asia, but rather to the Roman province of Asia Minor. There were other churches in the province (e.g., Colossae), but these were chosen because of specific characteristics in them. The salutation combines both the Greek (grace) and Hebrew (peace) elements found in the New Testament books, and issues from all the Godhead: the sevenfold fullness of the Holy Spirit (cf. Isa 11:2), the eternal Father, and Jesus Christ the Mediator.

5. Christ is seen in His threefold office as prophet, priest, and king. The Father is on the throne; the Spirit is before the throne; and the Son is connected with the earth as supreme Ruler. The doxology is carried through from this verse to the next. It is directed to Christ in His ever-present love (loved us) and accomplished release of His own from sin by the work of Calvary.

6. As redeemed ones, believers constitute a kingdom and are kings and priests unto God. Since Christ is both king and priest, His own partake of His nature and offices. Notice the emphasis on glory and dominion, a dual objective of the entire book (cf. Rev 20:6; also II Tim 2:12).

b. The visible return of Christ. 1:7.

7. The second coming of Christ to earth in fulfillment of Old Testament prediction (cf. Dan 7:13) will be seen by all kindreds of the earth at the time, Israel and the nations. The time is that spoken of in Zechariah 12:10. But believers also now long for that coming.

c. The Author of the messages. 1:8.

8. The three persons of the Trinity put their authoritative seal to the message.

which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty.

9 I John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, 11 Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia; unto Eph'e-sus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Per'ga-mos, and unto Thŷ-a-tŷ-ra, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto La-od-i-ce'a.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks;

13 And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 His head and his hairs were white

B. The Vision on Patmos. 1:9-20.

1. The recipient of the vision. 1:9.

9. John, already seen in verse 4, identifies himself with his readers as your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ. The tribulation referred to is not the one so fully described in the Revelation, but those trials common to all believers in this life (cf. Acts 14:22), and more particularly, endured in that day under the widespread persecutions of Domitian the Roman emperor. The kingdom mentioned may indicate that of verse 6 or more probably the kingdom on earth to be established through the coming of the Lord Jesus to earth. The perseverance spoken of is that patience and steadfastness required in the midst of persecutions.

2. The place of the vision. 1:9.

The isle that is called Patmos. Indeed, John was writing that very hour from a lonely island where he had been banished for his fidelity to the Word of God.

3. The Revealer of the vision. 1:10.

10. Just as all Scripture is given by the inspiration of the Spirit, so John was under the control of the Spirit when the vision was revealed to him. What is meant by the Lord's day? J. A. Seiss (The Apocalypse, pp. 17-19), among others, considered that the phrase could mean only the Day of the Lord, referred to so many times in the Old Testament and elaborated on in the Revelation. However, the majority of expositors are surely correct in understanding the reference to be to the first day of the week, Sunday. A. T. Robertson (Word Pictures in the New Testament, Vol. VI, p. 290) has written: "Deissmann has proven (Bible Studies, p. 217ff.; Light, etc., p. 357ff.) from inscriptions and papyri that the word kuriakos was in common use for the sense 'imperial' . . . and from papyri and ostraca that hēmera Sebastē (Augustus Day) was the first day of each month. . . . It was easy, therefore, for the Christians to take this term, already in use, and apply it to the first day of the week in honour of the Lord Jesus Christ's resurrection on that day. . . . In the N.T. the word occurs only here and I Cor. 11:20 (kuriakon deipnon the Lord's Supper). It has no reference to hēmera kuriou (the day of judgment, II Pet 3:10)."

A great voice is that of Christ (vs. 15) and is likened to a trumpet sound to indicate that the message was a matter of great public importance.

4. The destination of the message. 1:11.

11. The seven churches (vs. 4) to whom the book is sent, are named in the order messengers would carry letters, going from northwest to northeast and southeast.

5. The content of the vision. 1:12-16.

a. The seven golden candlesticks. 1:12.

12. There is an allusion to the candlesticks in the tabernacle and Temple, the difference being they were all united there, whereas they are separate here, with Christ in the midst in the place of preeminent authority. The churches are seen in their sphere of earthly authority.

b. The Son of Man. 1:13.

13. Christ is revealed as the High Priest coming in judgment, yet as the serving One (the golden girdle).

c. His head, hair, and eyes. 1:14.

14. His head . . . hairs . . . white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire. This description of the Lord Jesus

REVELATION 1:15

like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire;

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and out of his mouth went a sharp twoedged sword: and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last:

18 I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death.

19 Write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter;

20 The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches.

Christ is reminiscent of the judgment scene of Daniel 7:13-14. What is stated in Daniel of "the Ancient of days" (the Father) is true of the Son, because they are both truly divine.

d. His feet and voice. 1:15.

15. In judgment Christ will trample the winepress of God's wrath (Isa 63:1-5). His powerful voice will not be lifted to quiet the troubled sea, but to call down the judgment of God on the wicked.

e. The seven stars, a sword, and His face. 1:16.

16. The seven stars (to be explained in vs. 20) are securely under His complete control. The two-edged sword is His Word (cf. Heb 4:12; Rev 19:15, 21), which will be active in the coming judgments. His countenance. As for His blessed face, here are brilliance, splendor, and holy strength.

6. John's reaction. 1:17a.

17a. Though John had fellowshipped with the Lord in His earthly ministry, the vision of the risen Christ was so glorious and overpowering that John fell at his feet as dead.

7. Assurance for John. 1:17b-18.

17b-18. Fear not. John is reassured by Christ's word concerning His person and nature. He is the eternal One; He dominates time: I am he that liveth. He lived, lives, and lives forever; He has supreme authority over death (the body) and Hades (the soul).

8. The command to write. 1:19.

19. Write the things which thou hast seen . . . which are . . . which shall be hereafter. This is the key verse of the book; it indicates the threefold plan of the prophecy (see Introduction); and it is the only safe guide to its correct interpretation.

9. Interpretation of the seven stars and seven candlesticks. 1:20.

20. The angels of the seven churches are not literal angels, nor believers in general; but, as chapters 2-3 show, they are pastors, or ministers, of the local churches in places of authority and responsibility. Local congregations are likened to seven candlesticks in order to convey their function of testimony and to spread the light of the gospel.

II. THE LETTERS TO THE SEVEN CHURCHES.

A. The Letter to the Church of Ephesus. 2:1-7.

There are seven churches chosen, because in Scripture seven is the number of completion. In these seven letters the Spirit gives a complete picture of the moral and spiritual history of the church, along with other truths. The letters have seven exhortations to hear them, yet they are sadly neglected. The messages have spiritual, historical, and prophetic value. Since chapter 1 dealt with the things John saw—the risen Christ—and chapters 2-3 treat of the things that are, then they are pertinent to the church age from Pentecost to the Rapture. Each letter has four elements: (1) The manner in which Christ presents Himself; (2) the commendation (or condemnation) He gives; (3) the reward He promises; and (4) the exhortation to hear. The messages refer to distinct, historical churches in the province of Asia; hence, they are timely. They also apply to types of believers in every age; hence, they are timeless. Ephesus may be characterized as the church of departed love.

CHAPTER 2

UNTO the angel of the church of Ēph'esus write; These things saith he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks;

2 I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars:

3 And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast not fainted.

4 Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the NĪC-o-lā'i-taneš, which I also hate.

7 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write; These things saith the

1. The description of Christ. 2:1.

2:1. In the history of the church, this congregation speaks of the apostolic period. Ephesus was the main center of Grecian culture and heathen idolatry. Here was located the temple of the goddess Artemis (Diana), adorned and ornamented by all of Asia, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world (cf. Acts 19). Aquila, Priscilla, and Apollos labored in this city; and Paul preached here for three years at one time. In Ephesus John, having left his home in Jerusalem, ministered for thirty years.

Christ is seen here in His proper place of guiding, controlling, and ruling over all. His servants are secure, since He holds them firmly in His right hand. Outwardly, everything is in proper order.

2. Commendation of the church. 2:2-3.

2-3. I know thy works . . . labor . . . patience. In each letter it is indicated that Christ has absolute knowledge of what transpires in each local congregation. Deeds, toil, and perseverance are all virtues. Moreover, the Ephesians put to the test those claiming apostolic authority. The apostles were dying, and perhaps John was the only one left. The Ephesians kept their doctrine pure.

Further commendation is stated in verse 6, because the Ephesians hated the deeds of the Nicolaitanes (lit., conquerors of the people). It is not known who they were, although some interpreters try to connect them with some sect. Archbishop Richard C. Trench states simply, "Nicolaitanism is clerisy" (Lectures on the Book of Revelation, p. 52).

3. Rebuke of the church. 2:4-6.

4. In spite of all the commendable qualities of this church, there was one vital lack: they had left their first love. This was true of the church whose name means "desired." Their hearts were drifting away from Christ. The first love is marked by its all-engrossing quality, fervency, and constancy. It can be seen in the words of Philippians 1:21. The first danger sign for any believer is to grow cold toward Christ. A church may have great zeal and activity, soundness of doctrine and practice, yet have its first love for Christ on the decline. It is subtle. Love looks for love, and meticulous care with doctrine and discipline will not take its place. Loss of first love can be so easily followed by evils in doctrine and practice. Christ will have all the believer's love or none (cf. Lk 10:38-42).

5. The church is commanded to repent or suffer removal. This does not mean that individuals lose their salvation, but the church can forfeit its place of light-bearing and witness. Ephesus is a city now wrapped in the mantle of Islam. The light of the church has indeed been moved.

6. See above notes on 2:2-3.

4. The command to hear. 2:7a.

7a. He that hath an ear. It is clear that the message and warning of this church were for all in that day, but the admonition is pertinent to all believers today.

5. The promise to the overcomer. 2:7b.

7b. The paradise of God expresses the blessedness of heaven. Possibly, Ephesus had tried to make her Paradise here on earth and so allowed her love to grow cold (cf. Col 3:1-2).

B. The Letter to the Church of Smyrna. 2:8-11.1. The description of Christ. 2:8.

8. The letter to Smyrna is the shortest of the letters; that to Thyatira is the longest. Smyrna was originally an Ionian settle-first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;

9 I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

ment that passed into decline in the process of time. Rebuilt by Alexander the Great and Antigonus I, it became immediately wealthy and famous. It was about forty miles north of Ephesus. In some respects, it was the rival of Ephesus. Because of its natural and commercial situation, its wealth, commerce, and splendid buildings, it was called "the beautiful." It was not far behind Ephesus in idolatry. This city is not named in the Acts or the epistles of Paul; so it is not known when the gospel was first preached there. The Roman imperial laws against Christianity were strenuously enforced in Smyrna. The persecutions of believers in Asia Minor were centered here. Polycarp, friend of John and the last disciple who knew the apostle personally, is said to have been slain here in A.D. 168. It is generally believed that Polycarp was the angel of the church in Smyrna.

Christ's eternal nature and deity are expressed in absolute terms. The infinite Saviour is supreme before all things and all time. He is also the last as the goal of all things (cf. Rom 11:36). His great triumph over death is next stated. He has destroyed death and its power. How important that Christ should be revealed in this light to the suffering and persecuted church. It was the period of the Roman persecutions of the church which lasted for two centuries. Smyrna means "myrrh," which must be crushed to give forth its fragrance. In the martyr age the church yielded a sweet fragrance to God (cf. II Cor 2:14-16).

2. Commendation of the church. 2:9.

9. The Lord informs them that He knows their works, and tribulation (Gr thlipsis, a word that conveys the idea of pressing grapes until the juice comes forth). Christ has gone to the utmost depths of suffering and death. He sometimes permits trials in order to rekindle lost first love (Ps 119:67). Furthermore, He knows their poverty (cf. II Cor 8:9); they had, like Hebrew believers of a former time (Heb 10:34), suffered the loss of everything. Confiscation of goods attended and followed persecution. But they are reminded that though poor in worldly goods, they were rich in faith (cf. I Cor 3:21-23). The risen Christ informs them that He knows the reviling of the synagogue of Satan. The reference is not to the Jewish nation in general. What is meant is the legalizing, Judaizing movement of the early Christian era. It was Galatianism which made its appearance in the apostolic and sub-apostolic age, because men tried to dilute the grace of God with legalism and ceremonialism. Satan's synagogue is in opposition here to the church of God. Satan attacked this church from without by persecution and from within by perversion of doctrine. The evil had evidently not made inroads into this church, for there is no censure or command to repent.

3. The coming trial and call to faithfulness. 2:10.

10. It is interesting that there is no word that the Smyrnans would escape their suffering. But even more, they are told their trials would be increased. They were tortured, exposed to wild bulls and lions that tore them to pieces. In the Roman Empire, imprisonment was not a form of punishment as today, because the government was not willing to support a multitude of prisoners. A man in prison was either awaiting his trial or death. As for the ten days, there were ten persecutions from Nero to Diocletian (A.D. 312). They were under Nero, Domitian, Trajan, Antoninus, Severus, Maximian, Decius, Valerian, Aurelian, and Diocletian. Too, Diocletian's persecution lasted ten years.

They are encouraged to be thou faithful unto death, not just as long as they lived, but even if it cost them their lives. The call speaks not of extensiveness, but of intensity. In the Old Testament saints were delivered from death (cf. Job 2:6; Dan 3:19-30; 6:16-24), but in the New Testament they triumph over death. Their hope was to be dependent on the Lord. The reward was to be a crown of life. Christ Himself, faithful until death, was crowned with life on resurrection morning. Believers may be rewarded with one or more of five crowns (2:10; 4:4; II Tim 4:8; Jas 1:12; I Pet 5:4).

4. The command to hear and the promise to the overcomer. 2:11.

11. The second death is eternal death (cf. 20:6, 14; 21:8). It is the portion of all the unsaved. Notice how well this promise is suited to those who were threatened with the first death.

C. The Letter to the Church of Pergamos. 2:12-17.

1. The description of Christ. 2:12.

12. Pergamos lay north of Smyrna and was considered one of the finest cities of Asia. It had little or no commerce but was remarkable for its learning, refinement, and science, especially medicine. A number of kings made this their royal residence. Its famous library, second only to that of Alexandria, consisted of 200,000 books. Ephesus and Smyrna were evil cities, but Pergamos was especially so in its idolatry. Here was to be found the renowned temple of Aesculapius in which the most prominent object was the wreathed serpent. The early science of medicine was identified with the worship of Satan who usurped the place and dignity of Christ, for they called Aesculapius, the Preserver and Saviour.

As Ephesus was the church of departed love and Smyrna the church of fiery persecutions, so Pergamos (meaning marriage) was the church of worldly alliance. This was the period in the history of the church when she was elevated to a place of power and married the world. It was the era when church and state came together under the reign of Constantine (A.D. 313) and his successors. After the reign of Diocletian, there was a power struggle between Constantine and Maxentius, with victory going to the former, who claimed he had a vision of a cross with these words (in Latin): "In this sign conquer." Upon his accession to the throne of Rome, Constantine declared Christianity the official religion.

Christ is revealed as the One which hath the sharp sword with two edges. This is undoubtedly the Word of God (cf. Jn 5:22, 27; Heb 4:12). Since this church is tolerating error, it needs to have the measuring rule of God's Word brought into action.

2. Commendation of the church. 2:13.

13. Satan's throne speaks of his usurped world power. He is identified in Scripture as the prince of this world (cf. Mt 4:8-9; II Cor 4:4). In the Smyrna age Satan tried to destroy the church by persecution. In the next centuries he tried to ruin her testimony by patronage without and false principles within. Constantine's attitude toward the church brought into it many who were pagan at heart. Gibbon, in his famous work on the decline and fall of the Roman Empire, stated: "The salvation of the common people was purchased at an easy rate, if it be true that in one year 12,000 men were baptized at Rome, besides a proportionable number of women and children, and that a white garment with twenty pieces of gold had been promised by the emperor to every convert." In many cases, heathen were won over by adoption of pagan rites and festivals as parts of Christian worship. The union of church and state has wrought havoc wherever introduced, as attested in ancient times and to this day.

Holdest fast my name may well refer to the Arian controversy, which lasted for over a century and was finally settled in A.D. 325 by the Council of Nicaea (southeastern France on the Mediterranean Sea). They did not deny Christ's name, for the essential deity of the Lord Jesus Christ was maintained. The 11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.

12 And to the angel of the church in Per'ga-mos write; These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with two edges;

13 I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is; and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein An'ti-pas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication.

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nic-o-lā'i-taneš, which thing I hate.

16 Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.

18 And unto the angel of the church in Thŷ-a-tī'ra write; These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass; commendation of Antipas (lit., against all), my faithful martyr, is explicit indeed. He is unknown to us, but God knows all His faithful witnesses.

3. Rebuke of the church. 2:14-15.

14. In Ephesus there was one cause of censure; here Christ says a few things. Pergamos was one of the fulfillments of Paul's warning in Acts 20:29-30. Notice the decline from Ephesus where the deeds of the Nicolatanes were hated, to Pergamos where their teaching was held and tolerated. It appears that the teaching of Balaam and that of the Nicolatanes are distinct, but they have the same disastrous results. Numbers 25:1-9 gives a clear picture of the union of church and state. Balaam taught Balak how to draw Israel away from their position of separation (Num 23:9).

15. The doctrine of the Nicolatanes, as already noticed in the church of Ephesus, has reference to clericalism, which developed rapidly in this era of the church. There is no basis in Scripture now for a special class of priests, such as God instituted in Israel (cf. Lev 8). The ultimate claim of Nicolatanism is infallibility.

4. Call to repentance. 2:16.

16. Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly. The church was called upon to exercise its discipline. The coming mentioned is a judicial visitation in speedy judgment according to the Word of God.

5. The command to hear and the promise to the overcomer. 2:17.

17. Manna (lit., What is it?) in the Old Testament was not hidden. For 12,500 mornings the Lord rained this bread from heaven for His people. It was later preserved (cf. Ex 16:33; Heb 9:4). Notice the contrast between the hidden manna (type of Christ, Jn 6) and the public glory of union with the world. To go to the place of separation with Christ, the hidden manna, is greater gain than consorting with the world. The white stone speaks of the custom of casting such a stone into a voter's urn with the name of a candidate, indicating the approval of the one who cast it. Special divine approval will be the portion of the godly nucleus in Pergamos.

D. The Letter to the Church of Thyatira. 2:18-29.

1. The description of Christ. 2:18.

18. Thyatira lay southeast of Pergamos. Ephesus, Smyrna, and Pergamos were more noted than Thyatira, which, nevertheless, has an interest of its own. The city is first mentioned in connection with Paul's missionary labors in Europe. His first convert on that continent was a woman of Thyatira, Lydia, a seller of purple, a commodity for which the city was famous (cf. Acts 16:14). The city was founded by Seleucid I, the first of the Seleucid dynasty (early fourth century A.D.), although it had been inhabited before that time and, indeed, was when John wrote. It came to be a garrison city and military post because of its unfavorable natural condition—an open valley with great sloping hills of moderate elevation—which had to be strengthened in the interest of security. It is the longest of all the letters. It marks the beginning of the second group of letters in which the moral history goes on to the second coming of Christ. In this and the following letters the call to hear comes after the promise. The title the Son of God is used only here in the Revelation.

Thyatira, which means continual sacrifice, is the church of clerical domination. It designates the period in the history of the church from the sixth or seventh century to the Reformation in the sixteenth century. The dominant church of that period promoted continual sacrifice in its services.

When anyone is permitted to usurp the place of Christ, the emphasis must be placed on Him as Son of God, rather than the son of Mary. The title is meant to convey power and authority. The Saviour is revealed as searching, penetrating, and judging. His eyes like unto a flame of fire discern evil, for He cannot tolerate it. His feet are like fine brass indicates that He stamps out evil with judgment (cf. as a parallel Isa 63:1-6).

2. Commendation of the church. 2:19.

19 I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first.

19. This church has much evil in it, but Christ looks first at what can be commended. These are the strongest words of commendation addressed to any of the churches. Faith, and thy patience, and thy works. Devotion and zeal did exist in the Middle Ages in spite of the apostasy and corruption of the majority. The last to be more than the first. The darker the night, the more ardent was the company of the godly minority.

3. Rebuke of the church. 2:20-21.

20 Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman Jēz'e-bel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

20. That woman Jezebel (cf. I Kgs 19-21) was the wife of Ahab and the source of idolatry in Israel. Balaam attacked Israel from without; she, from within. Recall that she was a stranger in Israel; she was responsible for the worst idolatry in the nation, and she persecuted the servants of God. Which calleth herself (never called of God) a prophetess, claiming infallibility in setting forth doctrine and new revelation from God. The dogmas of papal Rome are clearly discerned. This church leads people astray by her teaching; it points them away from divine authority to man's. But there is still a remnant of the faithful bond servants of Christ. As a counterpart of Jezebel of old, there is a godless consorting with the world and an intricate system of worship of idols.

21 And I gave her space to repent of her fornication; and she repented not.

21. Space to repent . . . she repented not. In His grace and forbearance God gave this church time to repent. Godly men called upon the church to repent, but she refused to do so. Therefore, there is no call to repent in this letter. Only judgment remains. This church remains apart from the truth of God until she is joined with all the systems of religious evil of the world (cf. chs. 18-19).

4. Warning to the church. 2:22-23.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.

22. Except they repent of their deeds. In this portion there are three groups: Jezebel, those who dabble with her system perhaps from a spirit of tolerance or unity, and her children, i.e., her adherents. Notice that her judgment is in the very place of her corruption.

23 And I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts: and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.

23. I will give unto every one of you according to your works. The lesson given is both individual (to Thyatira) and general (to all the churches).

24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thy-a-ti'ra, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak; I will put upon you none other burden.

5. Counsel to the godly. 2:24-25.

25 But that which ye have already hold fast till I come.

24. The rest in Thyatira are evidently a godly remnant who did not follow the corruptions of the church, but rather denounced its unbiblical ways. In compassion, the Lord would lay none other burden on them; they were suffering much for the truth.

25. Hold fast till I come. Since there is no hope that the corrupt church will repent, the godly in her can only look for the coming of the Lord in faithful holding to the truth. The fact that the Thyatira saints are seen to go on to the time of Christ's coming reveals that the church as such goes on beyond its original period in the Middle Ages.

6. Promise to the overcomer. 2:26-28.

26 And he that overcometh, and

26. He that overcometh. Those who refuse the advantages of the world, which the ungodly prematurely enjoy, will yet enter keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations:

27 And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father.

28 And I will give him the morning star.

29 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

into the ample privileges provided for them by Christ (cf. II Tim 2:12). Theirs will be a blessed portion in the coming kingdom of Christ on earth.

27. Even as I received of my Father. Since this is not usurped authority, it will be enjoyed and will endure (cf. Ps 2:7-9). Mark you, the authority granted the faithful will come from God the Father, as did Christ's.

28. The morning star (cf. II Pet 1:19; Rev 22:16) is the promise of being with Christ before the day breaks; it is the promise of the Rapture. Israel awaits the Sun of righteousness (cf. Mal 4:2); the church looks for the Morning Star (cf. Rev 22:16).

7. The command to hear. 2:29.

29. He that hath an ear. The message to this church, as all the rest, has an application to all believers at all times.

E. The Letter to the Church of Sardis. 3:1-6.

1. The description of Christ. 3:1.

Sardis is about twenty-seven miles due south of Thyatira. It was one of the oldest and greatest cities of western Asia. In ancient times it was a proud, wealthy city, the capital of the kingdom of Lydia. It had a history of many wars, and it was the city of the wealthy Croesus. The patron deity of the city was Cybele, whose form appeared on their coins. She was represented as half-human and was regularly associated with a pair of lions or single lion. The deity was supposed to have power to restore the dead. The city fell before Cyrus the Great of Persia in the sixth century B.C. In A.D. 17 the city suffered greatly from an earthquake. When John wrote this letter, the city was a city of the past. Later, it was restored and continued to flourish until A.D. 1400-1403, when the Tartar Tamerlane swept over the area and destroyed everything. The city has never recovered from this desolation.

Sardis (probably meaning remnant) was the church of empty profession. This period in the history of the church was that of the Reformation. The moral and spiritual corruption of the church of the Middle Ages, together with the evangelical preaching of certain godly leaders, brought about needed reform.

3:1. The seven Spirits of God. Paul speaks of the unity of the person of the Spirit (cf. Eph 4:3); John emphasizes the diversity of His attributes and actions as well as the fullness of His power (cf. Isa 11:2). In the different creeds of Christendom, it will be remembered, the Holy Spirit was not given His rightful place. The seven stars are an allusion to the way Christ was revealed to the Church of Ephesus. The Reformation itself was God's work; the resulting ecclesiastical systems were of man. Man is ever prone to error, so the results of the period reveal the presence of error and shortcoming. I know thy works. Sadly, the Lord commends nothing in this church. The measure of its privilege and profession was the measure of its responsibility. It was full of empty profession; hence, it was dead. Again, the union of church and state brought about more profession than life.

2. Call to repentance. 3:2-3.

2. The call to be watchful and wakeful was directed to the spiritual leaders to carry out their responsibility. They were exhorted to strengthen the things which remain, because they had the testimony of the Word of God more fully than those who were engulfed in the ecclesiastical formalism of the former period. It may surprise many to learn that not all truth was recovered in the Reformation, but this verse indicates that all was not perfect before (complete in the sight of) God. It was

CHAPTER 3

AND unto the angel of the church in Sardis write; These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars; I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead.

2 Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God.

3 Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

4 Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white: for they are worthy.

5 He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

6 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

7 And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write; These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth; not a complete return to the apostolic church. Areas of doctrine and behavior were left incomplete, i.e., truths found in the epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians were not emphasized by the reformers. How much of the truth of the Holy Spirit was there? of life truth? of prophetic truth?

3. Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard. Sardis believers are alerted to recall how much of recovered truth they had, and to hold fast the good they had received. Also, they needed to repent of the inadequate use they were making of it. If the church did not awake, they were in danger of meeting Christ when they were not ready. Mark you, the Lord does not come to believers as a thief, but to professors only.

3. Reward for the worthy. 3:4.

4. In spite of all appearances, there was a godly remnant in this church which have not defiled their garments (cf. Jas 1:27). They are worthy. The worthiness spoken of is a reckoning of grace; they had been made such by Christ.

4. Promise to the overcomer. 3:5.

5. There are actually three promises here. Clothed in white raiment. Garments are made white only in the blood of the Lamb (cf. 7:14). The promise not to blot out his name out of the book of life is strong assurance of the eternal security of the believer in Sardis. Moreover, Christ will delight to recognize (confess his name) as His own all overcomers. The method of overcoming is clear throughout the Word (cf. I Jn 5:4).

5. The command to hear. 3:6.

6. This is a simple call to a simple act, but it is so seldom heeded.

F. The Letter to the Church of Philadelphia. 3:7-13.

1. The description of Christ. 3:7.

7. The city was named after its founder, Attalus Philadelphus, king of Pergamos (159-138 B.C.), because he was loyal to his brother Eumenes. It was situated twenty-five miles south of Sardis. Its modern name is Allah Shehr (city of God). The remains of early Christian times are more numerous here than in any other of the cities named by John. It was a missionary city in the Greek world, promoting unity of spirit, customs, and loyalty within the kingdom (cf. W. M. Ramsay, The Letters to the Seven Churches, pp. 391-412). It is the only one of the seven churches whose name has been preserved to this day. The Pennsylvania city named Philadelphia was founded by William Penn. This church is the church of the faithful remnant; the reference appears to speak of no distinct church period. There are no words of censure for them. Philadelphia (brotherly love) may cover the times of revivals and missions that began in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries after the deadening effect of doctrinal controversies and state-church union in the midst of professing Protestantism, but the letter is manifestly to faithful individuals in all groups of professing Christians.

He that is holy, he that is true. The One speaking is holy in life and true in doctrine, holy in character and true in action. Christ is not revealed by this characteristic in chapter 1. He is seen here not in His judicial nature, but in His personal character and attributes. The key of David is mentioned in connection with the treasurer of David's house in Isaiah 22:22. He that openeth by His Spirit the truths of the Word, no man shutteth; to hardened spirits He shutteth and no man openeth. Christ is also the key to the Word of God. His administrative authority is revealed here as well; He opens and shuts doors of ministry (cf. Acts 16:6-10). Connected with David, He is depicted in His messianic, kingly office.

8 I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12 Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

14 And unto the angel of the church of the Lā-ōd-i-ċē'anś write; These 800

2. Commendation of the church. 3:8.

8. The open door is that of witness and testimony, including the worldwide mission field. To be sure, it is not a matter of human power and ingenuity; for these believers had a little strength. But no individual or group has power to frustrate the service of those joined to Christ. Their weakness is their defense (cf. II Cor 12:10). Smyrna and Philadelphia are the only churches without reproof; the one is a suffering church, the other, a weak one. Hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name. Moreover, this church kept Christ's Word, speaking of their obedience and submission (cf. Jn 14:23). Nor have they denied the name of Christ: obedience and no apostasy.

3. Reward for faithfulness. 3:9-10.

9. Synagogue of Satan. Since there is a return to the first principles in this assembly, Satan again marshals his old attacks. He injects legalism; it is the Judaizing system in its opposition to the truth of grace. However, this Judaizing is not true Old Testament theology.

10. Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, the promise is that they will be kept from (not through) the hour of temptation, which is the Tribulation Period (chs. 6-19) that is to come upon all the world of those who have completely settled upon the earth (Gk is not merely oikeō, to dwell, but katoikeō, to settle down, which is contrary to the pilgrim nature of the church, cf. Phil 3:18-20; I Pet 2:11).

4. Exhortation to steadfastness. 3:11.

11. Behold, I come quickly. Because Christ will come suddenly, they were not to surrender one iota of Christ's word that they then possessed. That no man take thy crown. If the truth is relinquished, the crown is lost. Notice the word is not that anyone would take their salvation, but their crown. A faithless servant may lose his crown, but not eternal life. Lost opportunities will result in lost crowns.

5. Promise to the overcomer. 3:12.

12. Notice the repetition of my God. The promises are full of identification and appropriation. The pillar is a reminder of the two in the temple of Solomon (cf. I Kgs 7:21) and connotes stability, strength, and permanence. Those who have been with Christ in the day of His rejection will realize the glory of the day of His enthronement.

6. The command to hear. 3:13.

13. A command to believers to hear is never out of place, because it is a long spiritual exercise to be quick to hear.

G. The Letter to the Church of Laodicea. 3:14-22.

1. The description of Christ. 3:14.

Laodicea is about forty miles southeast of Philadelphia. Built by the Seleucid monarch, Antiochus II (261-246 B.C.), it was named after his wife, Laodice. It was a city of considerable size, trade, and wealth, specializing in the manufacture of wool. It was a bone of contention in Asia Minor under the Romans and under the Turks. In later times it was a Christian city of importance and was the residence of a bishop, as well as the meeting place of church councils. Pride and self-satisfaction characterized the people and made their impression on the church as well. The city was destroyed by the Moslems in the Middle Ages, and today the site of the once wealthy city is a mass of ruins.

14. Laodiceans. The church at Laodicea (rights of the people) is the church of insipid lukewarmness. It describes the things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, the beginning of the creation of God;

15 I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot.

16 So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

19 As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.

20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

moral condition of the church at the close of the church age. The people demand their rights with democracy and almost anarchy as the result (cf. II Tim 4:3). There is nothing to commend in this church, although it thinks it is perfect (cf. vs. 17). Christ refers to Himself as the Amen, the One who establishes all God's promises. He is the Last Word, the Ultimate Authority, the Finality of all things. When the church in her closing days will be unfaithful and untrue, He is seen as the faithful and true witness (cf. 1:5). All God's witnesses have failed at one time or other, but Christ never. Moreover, He is the beginning of the creation of God. This does not invalidate His eternity. It indicates that He is Head of the new creation (cf. II Cor 5:17).

2. Rebuke of the church. 3:15-17.

15. The fault with this church is that it is neither cold nor hot; there is neither zeal for God nor absolute repudiation of the Lord. Lukewarmness (lukewarm water is an emetic) is hot and cold together: in Laodicea there are great humanitarian and cultural projects without the saving grace of the gospel. Here is their attitude toward Christ; they are totally indifferent. It is worse to be lukewarm (evangelical but not evangelistic, as many say) than to be one who abandons all profession. An active, positive opposition (notice Paul on the Damascus road) could be faced with better results.

16. I will spew thee out of my mouth. Spitting the church out of Christ's mouth has no reference to loss of salvation, but removal from a place of witness. When believers are raptured, the Laodicean Church will remain on earth, spewed out by Christ to endure the Tribulation Period.

17. This church claims it has need of nothing; it is self-satisfied and self-complacent. Boasting of wealth and methods of organization, it fails to realize the absence of spiritual life in its midst. Christ informs them that they are utterly insensitive to their condition.

3. Counsel for the church. 3:18.

18. For their threefold need (poverty, nakedness, and blindness), they are advised to buy, without money and price to be sure (cf. Isa 55:1), gold, which speaks of divine righteousness, white raiment, which denote practical righteousness, and eye-salve, which points to spiritual discernment. Their trouble was that they had never really seen themselves as sinners.

4. Call to repentance. 3:19.

19. As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten. The reason for the rebuke and counsel was His love. If not for this, He would have forsaken her. The mass will not heed these words, but individuals will (so the singular Gk verbs). Grace is still open to individuals.

5. Invitation to accept Christ. 3:20.

20. Here is a tragic, but true, picture. It is a group professing the name of Christ, but keeping Him on the outside. He is knocking at the door of the church for an individual to let Him in (sup with him). Christ may disown the church as a whole, but He still makes His plea to the individual heart.

6. Promise to the overcomer. 3:21.

21. To sit with me in my throne. To sit with Christ on His throne is indicative of royal authority, power, and glory. Kingdom participation is in view here. Christ will have His throne (cf. II Sam 7:13; Lk 1:31-33; Mt 25:31). He is now set down with my Father in his throne (cf. Ps 110:1; Heb 1:3; 8:1; 10:12-13; 12:2). The overcomer will reign with the victorious Christ on His blessed glorious throne.

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

7. The command to hear. 3:22.

22. The tireless Spirit of God still pleads with the individual heart.

III. THE VISION OF THE THRONE IN HEAVEN.

4:1-5:14.

A. The Creator on the Throne. 4:1-11.

1. The call to ascend. 4:1.

Thus far, the first two divisions of the prophecy have been covered (cf. 1:19): the things John saw (ch. 1) and the things which are during the church age (chs. 2-3). The largest section of the book (chs. 4-22) is divisible into three parts: (1) chapters 4-19; (2) chapter 20; and (3) chapters 21-22, all relating the things that are to be hereafter, subsequent to the church period. The same words (Gr meta tauta) appear once in 1:19 and twice in 4:1. Chapters 4-19 cover the Seventieth Week of Daniel (cf. Dan 9:27), known as the Tribulation Period. Recall that if the consistent chronology of the Revelation is to be followed, all this is to be fulfilled in the future after the church is taken home to heaven. It is clear how many times the word church has appeared in the first three chapters; it does not occur again until 22:16. The bride of chapter 19 is the church, but no other references occur with that word during the time of trial on earth.

4:1. Come up hither. John is commanded to come up to heaven, so that he may see and understand the things that are to transpire on earth from that vantage point. Christ Himself has changed His position: in chapters 1-3 He was seen among the candlesticks on earth. Now He is in heaven. A number of expositors see the call to John as that of I Thessalonians 4:16-17 namely, the Rapture of the church. H. A. Ironside has put it concisely: "Of this the rapture of the apostle is the symbol" (Lectures on the Revelation, p. 80), a view held by many others. It is the position of this commentary that the Rapture does occur after chapter 3, but there are more compelling reasons than the one just stated, as will be shown below.

2. The throne and its Occupant. 4:2-3.

2. The throne . . . set in heaven occupies the attention of John first, as it will the adoration of the redeemed. The throne is occupied by the Son (cf. Jn 5:22), though neither the Father nor the Spirit is excluded.

3. When heavenly things are spoken of, the description beggars earthly speech, so beautiful and durable are the precious stones introduced (cf. ch. 21). Jasper is of various brilliant colors, and sardine is a red color. These stones were the first and last precious stones in the breastplate of the high priest (cf. Ex 28:17-20). Emerald is green. The rainbow reveals God in covenant relation with nature (cf. Gen 9:16); He does not forget His promises. Many judgments in this book will be poured out on the earth, but it is not God's purpose to bring about earth's utter destruction.

3. The twenty-four elders and thrones. 4:4.

4. As important as 3:10 is for the pretribulation Rapture, so is this crucial verse. In fact, it is decisive in the matter. How so when it only speaks of four and twenty elders and four and twenty seats? The reasons are these: (a) The elders are enthroned (cf. 3:21). (b) Their number is important. The Levitical priesthood had twenty-four courses (shifts) in Israel (cf. I Chr 24:7-19). The church is a priesthood (cf. I Pet 2:5-9; Rev 1:6). (c) Their office is indicative; it is an eldership, a representative office, showing they are not to be understood in an individual capacity (cf. Acts 15:2; 20:17). (d) Their testimony is distinctive

CHAPTER 4

AFTER this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

(cf. 5:9-10). This is true only of the church. (e) They display spiritual insight and are acquainted with the counsels of God (5:5; 7:13; Jn 15:15). (f) Their garments indicate they have been redeemed (cf. 3:18). (g) Perhaps as determinative of all these reasons is the fact that they are crowned. Only saints of the church age are promised crowns of gold as rewards. They have already received them, and that means the judgment seat of Christ has taken place (II Cor 5:10). The Rapture, let it be remembered, is not a reward; it is of grace, just as salvation is.

4. Activity before the throne. 4:5.

5. It is significant that from and before the throne there are lightnings and thunderings and voices: and . . . seven lamps of fire. Here the throne is one of judgment, not of grace. Judgment is pending and ready to break.

5. Four creatures around the throne. 4:6-7.

6. The sea of glass is reminiscent of the laver in the Mosaic tabernacle and the bronze sea of the Solomonic temple (cf. II Chr 4:2-6). Holiness is now a fixed state, as in 15:2. Much discussion has centered about the four living creatures (not beasts as in AV). Some connect them with the four Gospels, as did some of the early church fathers; others see in them the cherubim. Still others consider them as representative of the basic forms of the divine government. They are God's instruments for the carrying out of His judgments. They indicate the attributes of God and the principles of His actions represented by angelic beings. The fullness of eyes denotes the omniscient perception of God in His judgments. All is under His infinite wisdom. Four is the number of universality (cf. Walter Scott, Exposition of the Revelation of Jesus Christ, pp. 125-126).

7. The lion represents power and majesty; the calves, endurance; man, intelligence; the eagle, speed in execution of judgment. The parallel with Ezekiel 1 is inescapable.

6. Worship by the four creatures. 4:8-9.

8. They rest not day and night. Untiringly and without interruption, they worship, ascribing holiness to the triune God in the Trisagion of Isaiah 6:3. The eternity of the Godhead is emphasized again.

9. They so enter into the purposes of God that they can give glory and honor and thanks to Him for all that will proceed from His throne.

7. Worship from the twenty-four elders. 4:10-11.

10. Worship him. The church in heaven will occupy herself with worship, the highest function of any creature of God. In this exercise the rewards (crowns) will find their greatest use.

11. Thou hast created all things . . . for thy pleasure. The focus and worship here center on the fact of God's claims as Creator. There is another basis upon which God can rest His judgments of man and creation; it is His right as Redeemer, a truth enunciated in chapter 5.

B. The Redeemer on the Throne. 5:1-14.

Chapters 4-5 are introductory to, and explanatory of, the remainder of the Apocalypse. This chapter carries on the scene from the previous chapter.

1. The book with seven seals. 5:1.

5:1. One must first disabuse his mind concerning the meaning of the book, because it has no relation to modern bookbinding. A book written within and on the backside. It was in fact a

5 And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.

9 And when those beasts give glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever.

10 The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

11 Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

CHAPTER 5

AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not; behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.

8 And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of saints.

9 And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10 And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.

scroll which was so full of information that it took both sides, front and back. Moreover, it was firmly sealed with seven seals, so that the contents could not be known until God's appointed time. R. H. Charles (The Revelation of St. John, I, pp. 137-138) states: "A will . . . in Roman law bore the seven seals of the seven witnesses on the threads that secured the tablets or parchment. . . . Such a Testament could not be carried into execution till all the seven seals were loosed." The scroll was not a book of prophecy, or even the Book of Revelation, because they would not require worthiness to open it. It is the title deed to the earth, to which Christ has the right of ownership, both by way of creation and, even more, by way of redemption at Calvary. The book was in the right hand of him that sat on the throne (the Father) and is the same as that in 10:2.

2. The Lion of Judah and the book. 5:2-5.

2-3. The strong angel is not further identified, but his question points up the dilemma connected with the book. No one of the angelic host or the human race or the demonic host could open the seals or look into the book.

4. No man was found worthy. The failure was not merely lack of power, but of worthiness. The book must involve a matter of importance for the apostle to have wept much.

5. Weep not. Weeping is turned to joy when one of the elders points out the One able to open the book and the seals. The designation of Lion of the tribe of Judah and the Root of David directly relate Him to Israel (cf. 22:16; Mt 22:42-46).

3. The Lamb and the book. 5:6-7.

6. Notice that the Lion is the Lamb (cf. Jn 1:29, 36). He will always bear the marks of His suffering and death in His glorified, resurrected body. He overcame as a Lamb (cf. Isa 53:7), and all can overcome through His blood (cf. Rev 12:11). He now sits at the right hand of the Father (cf. Heb 1:3), but in that day He will stand (cf. Isa 3:13). A Lamb as it had been slain. He was slain but is alive now forever. The seven horns point to His fullness of power (cf. Ps 89:17, 24); the seven eyes speak of complete wisdom (cf. Zech 4:10), a characteristic of the fullness of the Spirit, which was uniquely His. Thus, the Lamb's three qualifications are: (1) He was sacrificed for man's sins; (2) He has all power to overcome every foe; and (3) He enjoys all wisdom and intelligence to foresee and oversee.

7. He came and took the book. The act described here represents and includes all that the Revelation will yet unfold. It is that for which creation (that is, the world of humanity) and the church especially have been waiting through all the centuries.

4. The worship of the creatures and the elders. 5:8-10.

8. Now will be answered the prayers of saints of all ages, symbolized by the golden vials full of odors (incense). It is the saints holding up their own prayers to Christ, those for one another and those for all the redeemed.

9. They sung a new song, but it is the old, old story. The worthiness of the Lamb is clearly stated as a result of His work on Calvary (thou wast slain), which redeemed to God every trusting heart. Notice the three circles of praise (vss. 9-13). The redeemed in heaven are the closest to the throne, and from them praise goes out in ever-widening circles.

10. Many claim that the reign of the saints on the earth is a fancy. It is claimed that it is carnal and Jewish. The saints in heaven, who are made kings and priests (1:6), do not so regard it. That reign is not first spoken of in 20:4, because it has been stated in 3:21 in a promise and here in praise (cf. Mt 25:31).

5. All creatures worship the Lamb. 5:11-14.

11. Many angels. Both in verse 9 and here, a vast multitude of redeemed are seen in heaven. It must be noticed that the angels do not indicate they have been redeemed. They have been preserved, not saved.

12. Power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing. Sevenfold accrual is the Lamb's because of Calvary and the unfathomable agony endured there.

13. Every area of creation—heaven, earth, subterranean, and sea—is included (cf. Phil 2:10-11). Both the Father and the Son are recipients of the acclaim.

14. Every creature. Now the four living creatures and the elders respond, Amen, in unanimity. The psalmist was right: "Praise is becoming to the upright" (Ps 33:1).

IV. THE SEAL JUDGMENTS. 6:1-17.

Chapters 4-5 were occupied with heaven; in chapter 6 events of the earth, with which most of the Apocalypse deals, come before the reader. The method by which the truth of chapter 5 is carried out is presented here: Christ's entering in upon the purchased possession. The Day of the Lord, the time of God's judgments on earth before the visible reappearing of the Lord Jesus, is the subject in this and the following chapters.

A. The First Seal: The White Horse. 6:1-2.

6:1. The Lamb opened one of the seals. At this point it is well to make an important distinction. When the Tribulation Period is spoken of, reference is to all the Seven Years of Daniel 9:27. The Great Tribulation covers only the last three and a half years of the period. Expositors are far from agreement on when the latter part of the trials on earth will begin. The present writer holds that the final part of the Tribulation Period coincides with the events of Matthew 24:15ff. Thus, the first six seals occur during the first half of Daniel's Seventieth Week. They are the beginning of sorrows (cf. Mt 24:8). The first four seals are broken in connection with the four living creatures, but it is the Lamb who has the power and authority to break the seals. As He does so, more of the contents of the scroll are brought into view.

2. The rider on the white horse has been identified with Christ (cf. ch. 19), or even a false Christ. To identify the rider as any specific person is not in keeping with the interpretation of the other horses, which symbolize conditions and not individuals. This rider and horse refer to the attempts of many to bring in permanent peace (cf. I Thess 5:3). It is verifiable from many times in the past, and especially in this century, that before some of the greatest conflicts between nations, there have been powerful attempts at man-made peace. The text indicates the desire to conquer in this area, but does not state that the objective was achieved. In this passage horses speak of the powerful providential actions connected with the government of the earth. Speed is also a factor (cf. Zech 1, 6). White speaks of victory and triumph, a bloodless victory for the moment.

B. The Second Seal: The Red Horse. 6:3-4.

3-4. The second beast or living creature is connected with the breaking of the second seal. Unquestionably, this seal

11 And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

12 Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

13 And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

14 And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever.

CHAPTER 6

AND I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard, as it were the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see.

2 And I saw, and behold a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.

3 And when he had opened the sec-

REVELATION 6:4

and seal, I heard the second beast say. Come and see.

4 And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.

5 And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And Power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellowservants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

speaks of war, bloodshed. There went out another horse that was red. Man's attempts at world peace have failed miserably and carnage is the result (cf. Mt 24:6-7). The great sword indicates war's ravages will be let loose on a universal scale throughout the earth.

C. The Third Seal: The Black Horse. 6:5-6.

5. A pair of balances in his hand. The rider of the black horse is holding a symbol of commerce. Too, when there is abundance, there is no minute weighing of common articles of food (cf. Ezk 4:10, 16). Worldwide war is followed by worldwide famine (cf. Mt 24:7b), because the soil is abused and men are not free to work it as necessary.

6. The scarcity of the time is underscored by the inflated price of necessities. One man's measure of wheat will take a day's wage; three measures of barley (the food for cattle and horses) can be bought for a day's wage. These are starvation conditions. Wheat and barley are necessities of life, but why the mention of oil and the wine? They are luxuries (cf. Ps 104:15; Prov 21:17) for the rich. The wealthy will apparently not be touched at the first, but ultimately they will undergo suffering as well (cf. W. Scott, op. cit., p. 150).

D. The Fourth Seal: The Ashen Horse. 6:7-8.

7-8. The livid or pale horse clearly speaks of death, probably by pestilence and plague. Death is the place of the body of the departed and is synonymous with the grave; Hell is the abode of the departed spirit (cf. Ezk 14:21; see Mt 24 for the same order as in the horses). Notice that one-fourth of the earth is involved. When in human history has such a pestilence overtaken man?

E. The Fifth Seal: The Martyrs. 6:9-11.

In verses 2-8 of this chapter the first four seals are grouped, and the remaining seals are conceived of as united. The providences of verses 2-8 have occurred in other ages also, but not with such severity as in the age of judgment under consideration.

9. The scene is now of the Temple, incidentally another indication that Israel is in the fore in these dealings with earth. The altar was the appointed place of sacrifice, because these martyrs had been slain as burnt offerings for the Word of God and their testimony. John on Patmos could understand something of their experience. The souls are the Jewish martyrs of that period.

10. Their cry for vengeance is in keeping with an age of judgment. How long is the well-known prayer of Jewish saints, so often found in the imprecatory and other psalms. These departed saints must not be confused with the saints of this age, who have already been seen as seated and crowned in heaven.

11. These souls are not unredeemed, crying out for revenge on their persecutors. White robes were given to each. This indicates they are justified and accepted by God. Then they are told something of God's counsels. They are to rest a short while longer until their fellow servants also and their brethren of the last part of the Tribulation Period will have been slain. In grace God desires the witnesses of other martyrs to be added to theirs already given.

F. The Sixth Seal: Upheaval in Nature. 6:12-17.

Interpreters are divided as to whether all this judgment is to be taken literally or symbolically. The best hermeneutical principle is to take all elements of a passage literally, unless such a procedure issues in conflict with other literal passages of Scripture and the demands of reason. Too, it must always be remembered that in the Apocalypse, symbols and signs are normative and not an intrusion (cf. 1:1). The features under the sixth seal

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;

13 And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.

14 And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

16 And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:

17 For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?

could well speak of literal occurrences, which in their universal effects must have social, emotional, and spiritual implications for all men involved. In these instances parallel passages are very helpful. Earthquakes, changes in the heavenly bodies, falling stars, and the movement of mountains and island from their place are striking and terrifying phenomena of nature.

12. Earthquake . . . the sun became black . . . the moon became as blood. Our Lord had predicted earthquakes (cf. Mt 24:7); Isaiah had foretold the darkening of the sun (cf. 50:3); and Joel had prophesied the change in the moon (cf. 2:30, 31).

13. Stars of heaven fell unto the earth. The Olivet Discourse mentions the falling of the stars (cf. Mt 24:29 with Isa 34:4).

14. Every mountain and island were moved out of their places. With such comprehensive upheavals in nature, no part of the physical universe could remain untouched. Earthquakes alone could be responsible for violent changes in mountains and islands, but in that day the phenomena will be greatly heightened in their effects.

15-16. Hide us . . . from the wrath of the Lamb. How could society go on in an orderly manner? There will be unsettling religious and social forces. Human life will be in chaos and turmoil. But in that day there will be no escape. None will be exempt. The terror will be universal. Notice that the cause of the miseries is not lost on those undergoing them. All understand that the trials of the Tribulation Period are traceable to the Father and the Lamb. The reference here is not to the judgment of chapter 20, nor is it a judgment of saved and unsaved alike. These individuals are beyond the day of grace.

17. Who shall be able to stand? They cry out, not for salvation or the intervention of God on their behalf, but for an end to their miseries.

V. A PARENTHESIS. 7:1-17.

That there is a parenthesis, or hiatus, in this chapter is clear from a comparison of 6:12 and 8:1. This chapter does not carry on the episodes of Daniel's Seventieth Week in a chronological way, for there is a break between the sixth and seventh seals. In the midst of wrath God remembers mercy for His own (cf. Charles, op. cit., p. 203).

A. The Sealed Remnant of Israel. 7:1-8.

All interpreters have seen two groups in this chapter, one mentioned in verses 1-8 and another in verses 9-17. In fact, they are so distinct that some have even considered that they do not belong in the same chapter. But to believe that would be to disregard the unity of the passage.

7:1. The four angels are not prominent creatures, or they would have been specified with more detail. They are God's providential restraining forces against judgment until the sealing is completed. Winds are known to be God's agencies to carry out His purposes (cf. Ps 148:8).

2. The angel in this verse is quite different by description and performance. Just as today the seal is the Holy Spirit (cf. Eph 1:13; 4:30), so it will be in the Tribulation Period. Only Christ can perform this sealing by the Spirit. He is the Angel of the Lord and the Angel of the Covenant of the Old Testament, another incidental proof that these events are related to Israel's age. The seal of the living God probably includes a special impartation of the Holy Spirit for their specific service for God.

3. Have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads. In a period when ownership and security are vital factors (cf. 9:4; 14:1; 13:16), the seal of God on the foreheads of His servants is essential to their ministry.

4-8. I heard the number of them which were sealed.

CHAPTER 7

AND after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God; and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

3 Saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Juda were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Ā'ser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nēph'tha-līm were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Ma-nās'sēs were sealed twelve thousand.

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Īs'sa-char were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zāb'u-lon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

Strangely, at this point there is much divergence of views as to the identity of the company in verses 4-8. Some take an allegorical interpretation, but this allows for great latitude for the imagination and provides nothing firm upon which to rest one's interpretation. Some indicate the group must be the first fruits of the church ("the Israel of God," cf. H. Alford, The Greek Testament, Vol. IV, Part II, pp. 623-625). Still others hold they are the Jewish nation in general. First, that they are of Israel is manifest from their identity (vs. 4); they are from all the tribes of the children of Israel. Second, they cannot be reckoned as the church; for that body is never called Israel (even in 6:16, where the issue is legalizers over against genuine believers in Israel, who are the elect remnant in the church, Rom 11:5). Third, they cannot be Israel in general; for God would not place His seal upon unbelievers for service to Him. Finally, these servants are from the tribes of Israel, literally so, redeemed by God and sealed for service when the church has been raptured to heaven (cf. 14:4).

As to the number a hundred and forty and four thousand, some take it literally and others symbolically. If it is understood symbolically, it appears strange that there is such a detailed enumeration of the tribes. If the number appears too small for the magnitude of the task, one needs only to remember that twelve apostles and their converts in the early church turned the world upside down in the first century (cf. Acts 17:6). The fact that Levi is included in the enumeration has intrigued readers of the Apocalypse (he was never given a portion in the land under Joshua, only forty-eight cities in the territories of the other tribes). Also, the list substitutes Joseph for Ephraim; and, most puzzling, it omits Dan. There is no ground for dogmatic assertion here, although many opinions have been offered to explain the omission. One position is that Dan is omitted because the Antichrist will come from that tribe, judging from Genesis 49:17. Built on so many imponderables, such a view can scarcely be called valid. Notice also, 49:16 is a strong promise. Another explanation is that Dan does not appear in the list because it was the first tribe to embrace idolatry (cf. Jud 18). But nowhere is this serious departure from the Lord evaluated as worse than the idolatries of the other tribes. Moreover, in the distribution of the land in the reign of Christ in Jerusalem, Dan is in fact given his inheritance (Ezk 48:1-2).

The time of the sealing is important, even if it can be determined only approximately. Judging from the fact that the sealing is accomplished before the breaking of the seventh seal (8:1), it probably will take place before the last seal, thus before the second half of the Tribulation Period when Satan's forces will be arrayed against the godly and the witnesses will indeed need the added protection of God for their work. They are a special group commissioned for a specific mission.

B. Tribulation Saints. 7:9-17.

Again, various opinions have been advanced for the identity of this group. First, it can be stated with confidence that they are not the same group that is mentioned in the first part of the chapter. It is clearly set forth that this second company is from all the nations of the earth, whereas it was clearly presented that the 144,000 were from one nation alone, Israel. To mingle the groups would confuse identities that the Scriptures are careful to distinguish. Second, they are not the church; they are separate from the elders (vss. 11, 13). Third, nothing is intimated concerning death or resurrection; thus, they are probably (to be seen later) on earth. Fourth, they are redeemed, as indicated in verses 13-14. Fifth, the time of their salvation is after the Rapture (vs. 14). How they came to saving faith is not expressly stated, but the highest probability is that they were redeemed through the preaching of the 144,000 witnesses. It is difficult to 9 After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands;

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God, 12 Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they?

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.

16 They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

discern why the two groups are placed in juxtaposition in this chapter if this is not the case.

9. The great multitude is innumerable, whereas the witnesses from Israel were exactly numbered, even with subdivisions in each case. They have access to the throne, the presence of God, and the Lamb, clothed with white robes, the garments of righteousness. Moreover, the palms in their hands speak of victories over the enemy.

10. Their praise accords with the similar exercise of the redeemed ones in this book.

11-12. Angels . . . elders and the four beasts join in the symphony of praise to God.

13. One of the elders (since he is part of the church in heaven, he knows the answer, cf. I Cor 13:12) asked John the identity of the great company, evidently to focus attention on their essential nature.

14. If they are the church, it would be amazing that John could not recognize them as such. The elder identifies them as redeemed ones, they which came out of great tribulation (Gr ek tēs thlipseōs tēs megalēs, out of the Tribulation, the great one).

15. Where are these redeemed standing? Some declare they are in heaven; others, on earth. It seems that the second is the true view, because this verse mentions that they are before the throne of God and speaks of serving day and night. According to 21:25 and 21:22 of this book, there is no night or temple in heaven (cf. F. W. Grant, The Revelation of Christ, Part II, pp. 80-81 et al.). Isaiah 66:19-21 teaches that there will be a temple in the Millennium, and Isaiah 4:5-6 predicts a tabernacle as well (for the details of the temple cf. Ezk 40-48).

16. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst. (see Isa 49:10). The reason many cannot conceive of these things happening in the Millennium is their lack of understanding of the glories of that wonderful age and reign, when the Lord Jesus Christ visibly rules the earth from His headquarters and capital in Jerusalem.

17. For the Lamb shall feed them . . . lead them . . . and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes. In view of the unprecedented agonies these redeemed have endured through the Great Tribulation, the words of promise in verses 15-17 are all the more welcome. The truth of Romans 8:18 will be found as true for them as it is for the church today.

VI. THE SEVENTH SEAL AND FOUR TRUMPET JUDGMENTS. 8:1-13.

When the seventh seal is opened, the entire scroll is open to view. The seventh seal includes the seven trumpets, a fact which would preclude the seal and trumpet judgments being simultaneous or concurrent. Apart from two parentheses (chs. 7 and 10:1-11:14), the events of chapters 4-11 are in sequence. With the beginning of chapter 12, events are again viewed with reference to Israel especially and the chief participants of the last days of Israel's age. As for the vial judgments of chapters 15-16, they appear to be the scroll reversed (cf. 5:1). It must be emphasized that the seal, trumpet, and vial judgments are not contemporaneous, but successive. As events move on to a consummation, there is no marking time or retrogression.

With the seal judgments, the mass of humanity on earth view them as providential acts only, like those that have occurred in history previously, although not with such severity. With the blasts of the trumpets, the judgments take on a severer and more judicial aspect. In the vial judgments the concentrated and unmixed wrath of God is poured out; and the trumpet judgments are treated from 8:2-11:18.

The Scriptures reveal that trumpets accompany significant events. There was a trumpet at the giving of the Law at Sinai (Ex 19:19). There were trumpets appointed in Israel for both worship and warning (Num 10:1-10); at Jericho the walls fell flat at the blasts of the trumpets (Josh 6:13-20); the Midianites were routed under Gideon when the trumpets were blown (Jud 7:16-22); and the Rapture of the church will occur at the blowing of the trumpet of God (I Thess 4:16; I Cor 15:52). It is the very nature of the case that a trumpet is blown when something of great significance transpires, which must have widespread attention; and Messiah's reign will be prepared for by trumpet judgments on the ungodly.

CHAPTER 8

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 And I saw the seven angels which stood before God; and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth: and there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake.

6 And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound.

7 The first angel sounded, and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast upon the earth: and the third part of trees was

A. The Seventh Seal. 8:1-2.

8:1-2. No events are recorded with the breaking of the seventh seal. But an ominous silence pervades all nature, which is indicative of the solemnity of the things that are about to take place. It is the calm before the storm. The space of half an hour is not a reckoning according to a heavenly chronometer, but it does indicate a very brief period.

There are seven angels entrusted with the service of blowing the seven trumpets of judgment. Since they are not further described, there is no warrant to identify them with extrabiblical angels found in apocryphal books of Tobit or Enoch, where Uriel, Raphael, Raguel, Michael, Sariel, Gabriel, and Remeiel are named. Speculation in such matters is futile.

B. The Angel with a Golden Censer. 8:3-5.

3-5. This angel is entirely separate from the seven angels mentioned in verse 2, not so much because of added description, but by the very nature of the work involved. It is undoubtedly the Lord Jesus Christ. The Bible knows of no other than Him who does the work of mediating the prayers of all saints, symbolized by the incense (cf. 5:8; see also Ottman, The Unfolding of the Ages, p. 201 and Lincoln, Lectures on the Book of Revelation, I, p. 137). Again, it is vital to realize that the golden altar, much incense, and a golden censer remind one of Old Testament worship, another proof that attention is centered on Israel's (not the church's) age. Here He is not functioning as the Advocate of the church's saints, because she is already in heaven. He is invoking the judgments of God on the oppressors of the remnant of Israel. In chapter 6 the altar was the bronze altar, because sacrifice of life was in view; here it is the golden altar, because intercession is in mind. This is the work of no mere human being or angel (other references where Christ is seen as another angel are 10:1 and 18:1). There was no intercession in 6:9, but there is here; grace is needed by the living, not the dead. The prayers of the saints must be for judgment on their oppressors (in keeping with a time of judgment, but not in this day of grace), because this is the nature of the answer.

Fire . . . voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, and an earthquake all constitute a formula for catastrophe of universal proportions.

C. The First Trumpet Sounded. 8:6-7.

6-7. Once the mediating Angel has performed His work, the seven angels ready themselves for their important task. All interpreters express difficulty in explaining the trumpet judgments. The visitations do remind one of the plagues of Egypt in Exodus, but the present judgments are much more severe and universal. Scott states (The Book of the Revelation, p. 188): "The burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

interpretation of the Seals is a simple matter compared to that of the Trumpets." With the trumpets there is more of the element of mystery. The trumpet judgments, like the seal, are divided into two groups of four and three, indicating the number of the world, i.e., the four points of the compass, and the number of the Trinity. The last three trumpet judgments have the added designation of woe judgments because of their severity. Some interpret the judgments literally, which is the correct starting point hermeneutically, whereas the majority take them symbolically, a method impossible to rule out in view of the symbolical character of the Apocalypse.

As symbols, hail speaks of sudden judgment from God (cf. Isa 28:2, 17); fire, of God's wrath (cf. Deut 32:22 and numerous other times); and blood, of death (cf. Ezk 14:19). Cast upon the earth. The casting of them (they did not just fall) to the earth indicates omnipotent power. The third part is referred to several times in this chapter, and it has been understood as a reference to the revived Roman Empire of the end time. However, there is insufficient evidence to be so specific at this point. Trees and grass have been understood symbolically to refer to the high and low in society, but the literal sense is surely potent enough to convey horrendous decimation of natural elements so necessary for ongoing human existence on earth.

D. Second Trumpet Sounded. 8:8-9.

8 And the second angel sounded, and as it were a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea: and the third part of the sea became blood;

9 And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

8-9. With the sounding of the second trumpet, something like a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea. It is usually held that the mountain is to be taken symbolically because of the expressed comparison (simile). To what is the reference made? In Scripture a mountain is used to speak of a great kingdom power (cf. Isa 2:2; Zech 6; especially Jer 51:25). Some students of the passage have even named the kingdom, Babylon, probably on the basis of the Jeremiah passage. But with a minimum of scriptural characterization, it is not wise to be so specific because of the wide range of possibilities. Seiss (op. cit., p. 195), who takes the mountain symbolically, understands the sea as probably the Mediterranean Sea, the prominent sea of the Bible because of its relation to the Land of Promise. If the sea is symbolical, it is known in Scripture as a symbol of people in general (cf. Ps 2:1) and of restlessness among them (Rev 17:15). The trumpet judgment could well refer to a great upheaval in nature (as with the first trumpet), with disastrous results for the waters of the sea, making them unfit for human use, marine life, and commerce. Though in each instance only a third is involved, it is enough to disrupt life beyond recognition.

E. Third Trumpet Sounded. 8:10-11.

10 And the third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters;

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

10-11. But the wrath of God is still not fully expended on the wicked of earth. Water is such an indispensable element of life that again waters and springs are affected, as the sea was under the second trumpet judgment. A great star from heaven, burning . . . fell. It is understandable that stars can refer to important personalities. For example, today there are sports stars of all descriptions, entertainment stars, and a host of others. Scripture uses the term symbolically of our Lord Jesus (cf. Num 24:17). Some interpreters find an apostate ruler or dignitary here, perhaps even a church leader who falls from a high position. The symbolic explanation has credence because of the figurative name given the star. If so, then the contamination of the waters must indicate the corruption of the spiritual life of the masses. Wormwood (Gr apsinthos), that which makes water no longer potable, is a bitter and poisonous herb. When used without control, it can produce convulsions, paralysis, and even death. In fairness to all views, it must be indicated that, if the falling

12 And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.

13 And I beheld, and heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, Woe, woe, woe, to the inhabitants of the earth by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound!

CHAPTER 9

AND the fifth angel sounded, and I saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit; and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

star refers to a celestial phenomenon, it is difficult to see how it could contaminate so large an area.

F. Fourth Trumpet Sounded. 8:12.

12. When earth, sea, ships, rivers, and springs of waters have been touched, there are other areas that have not been involved. Sun . . . moon . . . stars . . . the third part of them was darkened. This reference is to the heavenly bodies. Notice once again the specific enumeration of one third. It is as though in infinite patience God touches just a part in order to bring it to repentance before everything is involved. Literal and symbolical interpretations of this section have long vied for attention. Some who have explained the judgment symbolically have gone far afield into naming specific areas of land, people, rulers, religious leaders, doctrines, and much more. If taken literally, the objection has been that the obscuring of the heavenly bodies would not result in darkness for only two-thirds of the time. It may be pointed out that in Scripture certain signs and symbols go beyond the range of the natural (as the beasts of the book of Daniel and the Revelation) in order to bring out certain truths of revelations. Then the symbols are admittedly arbitrary.

G. Announcement of Woe Judgments. 8:13.

13. The reading of angel here is doubtless to be discarded in view of the strong testimony of Codices Sinaiticus, Alexandrinus, Vaticanus, and a host of eminent authorities (cf. Seiss, op. cit., pp. 200-201). The reading of "eagle" (NASB) underscores the swiftness of the coming judgment (cf. Mt 24:28). Ample warning is given again. So terrifying are the last three trumpet judgments that they have the added nomenclature of woe judgments. Once more, it is announced that the judgments are intended for those who have settled down on the earth (a characterization of the ungodly, cf. for contrast with 3:10; the verb in both cases is katoikeō, not simply oikeō). Man can never claim he has not been sufficiently warned of coming judgment. As with the judgment on sin in Eden before the Flood in Noah's day, and in every age since, God is infinitely patient and compassionate toward those deserving of His wrath.

VII. THE FIFTH AND SIXTH TRUMPETS. 9:1-21.

A. Fifth Trumpet Sounded. 9:1-12.

The last three trumpet judgments (also called the woe judgments) are equally as difficult to interpret as the first four. The last woe trumpet is to be found in 11:15-18.

9:1. The first of the woe judgments is directed from Satan against the ungodly in Israel (cf. vs. 4); the second is from the east upon idolatrous Gentiles (vss. 14-15, 20). The star in mind had already fallen from heaven, the seat of authority. It appears to be the same as in 8:10, but important details are added here. It is the great apostate leader of the third trumpet. Some suggest it is the Antichrist, but to become that specific here without further particulars is unwarranted. Why is a literal star not in view? It refers to a living person, for the work performed is that of a human or living being. On the basis of 12:12, A. C. Gaebelien (The Revelation, p. 63; so also Seiss, op. cit., pp. 202-203) maintains it was Satan himself. If it is a false teacher, then Satan works through him, as is clear from numerous other occasions in the history of mankind. The key of the bottomless pit (abyss, so the Greek) was entrusted to him.

2. What is the bottomless pit of the abyss? Is it Hades (Sheol), Tartarus, or Gehenna? The full discussion of the phrase will be found in this commentary at chapter 20. For the moment, let it be said that it is the detention place of Satan and the demons (cf. Lk 8:31; Rev 20:3). When the abyss is opened, a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace issues from it. The blinding affect of smoke is well-known; here it refers to moral blinding. The reference is to that strong delusion that leads to perdition (cf. II Thess 2:11-12). Their whole spiritual horizon will be darkened by the false system let loose, obscuring the true light from God. All the apostate, pagan systems are leading to this dire situation, culminating in the Tribulation Period.

3 And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

11 And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is A-bād'don, but in the Greek tongue hath his name A-pōl'ly-on.

3-4. There came out of the smoke locusts, which have power, as the scorpions of the earth. It is immediately clear that these are not ordinary, earthly locusts. They are symbolic, not literal, because they do not feed on the natural food of locusts, such as grass, greenery, trees; indeed, they do not seem to eat at all, but rather injure men. They do no harm to nature; but they torture men, especially the ungodly in the land of Israel (cf. vs. 4 last clause with 7:1-3).

5. Their function is that they should not kill, but torment. Here, as in the book of Job (cf. 1:9-12), Satan must operate within the authority permitted of God. The torment is for five months, a limited time. This is the natural life of a literal locust, that is, from May to September. The pain from the torment (sting) of a scorpion, though not always fatal, is often so; it is perhaps the most intense that any animal can inflict on the human body. These forces with malign intent thus overrun the Holy Land and the unsealed portion of Israel.

6. Men seek death, and shall not find it. So great will the torment of those with sin-laden and guilty conscience be, that men will seek relief in self-destruction; but suicide will be impossible. There will be no rest of heart or peace of mind.

7-10. Now a detailed description of these supernatural locusts follows. In their strength and irresistible onslaught they are likened to horses prepared unto battle. Further, they will be victorious; for on their heads they wear crowns like gold. As to facial features, they resemble faces of men, indicating human intelligence. Another symbolic detail indicates their hair as the hair of women in attractiveness. Teeth of lions remind us that they are fierce and rapacious in their destructiveness. Nor are they to be halted in their designs, for they have the protection of breastplates of iron. Stubborn resistance and impenetrable qualities are indicated here. Locusts would be expected to have wings, so these locusts have them; but they are of such number and power that they sound like horses running to battle and chariots rushing on to combat.

The portrayal thus far, has been fearful enough, but more is yet to come. As in verse 5, they are compared to scorpions with stings in their tails capable of inflicting excruciating pain. No dimensions are given for them, but in view of the other details of the picture, they must be of extraordinary proportions. They have a certain degree and measure of intelligence; they do not hurt the ones with the seal of God, and they are able to understand and execute the commands given to them. They combine characteristics of horses, chariots, lions, men, and scorpions. This full description is sufficient in itself to demonstrate that the locusts cannot be literal, but are symbolic. Mark you, they are nonetheless real because of their figurative character.

11. A king over them. Although locusts have no king (cf. Prov 30:27), these revelatory locusts have one who is identified as the angel of the bottomless pit. Moreover, this king's name is given in both Hebrew (Abaddon) and Greek (Apollyon). Some interpreters believe the angel of the abyss is someone other than Satan, whereas others hold that they are one and the same being. Probably the latter is to be preferred; at any rate, their objectives are undoubtedly the same. The names of this creature mean Destruction or Destroyer. Abaddon is first because his blighting influence falls on Israel first, as in the first woe trumpet (cf. vs. 4). Apollyon signifies that his judgment will next light on 12 One woe is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter.

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Eūphrā'tēs.

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand: and I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone: and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire and smoke and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

19 For their power is in their mouth, and in their tails: for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads, and with them they do hurt.

20 And the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood: which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk:

21 Neither repented they of their murders, nor of their sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.

the gentile world. The first title connects him with unbelieving Jews; the second, with apostate Christendom.

12. One woe is past . . . two woes more hereafter. The Spirit states that only one of the woe judgments have been fulfilled; two others will be also.

B. Sixth Trumpet Sounded. 9:13-21.

13. The golden altar in the Temple, and in the tabernacle as well, was placed directly before the veil, which hid the Holiest of all from human gaze. This verse is the answer to the prayers of 8:3-4. The voice is that of God or one of His delegated messengers. The four horns indicate the whole strength of the altar of intercession exerted to answer the prayers of the persecuted saints.

14. The four angels here are not those of 7:1-3. The first (7:1-3) are at the ends of the earth; these of chapter 9 are in the limited region of the Euphrates. Those of chapter 7 restrain; these do the opposite: they release. The Euphrates is usually spoken of as the great river; it is 1780 miles long. It will be referred to in 16:12. It is the longest and most important river of western Asia. It will be remembered that the River of Egypt (the Wadi el Arish) and the Euphrates are the bounds of the Promised Land (cf. Gen 15:18). The Euphrates was the boundary of the eastern powers and of the old Roman Empire.

15. Four angels were loosed . . . to slay the third part of men. A specific time had arrived in the counsels of God; all proceeds on proper schedule with Him. The mission on which the four angels are sent is to accomplish a vast carnage.

16-17. The number of the army (cf. Ps 68:17) is 200,000,000. It is an immense army, far beyond calculation. John did not count them, but he was told their number. The armies of horses and horsemen will be involved in waves of invasions. The horses evidently have riders upon them, but the horsemen are not of primary importance. They only serve to state the protection for their bodies. The heads of the horses were as the heads of lions, and from their mouths fire and smoke and brimstone issue. The fire will burn, and the smoke and brimstone (sulphur) will choke and stifle to death. The combination here has been called the "defensive armor of hell." Jacinth (hyacinth) is a deep blue like that of a flame, but it is the blue of the pit and not the blue of heaven (cf. Gen 19:24 for fire and brimstone in judgment).

18-19. The fire, . . . smoke, and . . . brimstone are so deadly that they are now called plagues (vs. 20). They decimate one-third of mankind, a visitation not known in history apart from the Flood of Noah's day. But the physical havoc is not all; symbolically, the smoke can indicate the moral, blighting delusion of the pit. The teachings and lies of Satan will be manifold. The tails like unto serpents speak of deceit and falsehood. The tails are described as possessing heads; that is, they are intelligently guided.

20-21. Men which were not killed by these plagues yet repented not. If ever human obduracy and perversity were pictured, it is here. Those who are spared the visitations just set forth will neither repent of their wickedness nor their worthless idolatries, which are totally useless. Verse 20 tells of their worship; verse 21, of their works. Is it possible that boasted civilization will revert to basest idolatry? It is unmistakably stated that it will. The second woe is far worse than the first, but there is no repentance. The ungodly are incorrigible in their murders, sorceries, and immorality. Punishment does not soften wicked hearts; only the love of God can.

VIII. A PARENTHESIS. 10:1-11:14.

Just as there was a parenthesis in chapter 7 between the sixth and seventh seals, so now from 10:1-11:14 there is a parenthetical section between the sixth and seventh trumpets. There is a very brief parenthesis (cf. 16:15) between the sixth and seventh vial judgments. This shows the orderly arrangement of the Revelation.

CHAPTER 10

AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud; and a rainbow was upon his head, and his face was as it were the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire:

A. The Angel with the Little Book. 10:1-11.

10:1. Another mighty angel. Of primary importance is the identity of the strong angel. Happily, there are details which reveal that He is the "angel of the Lord" of the Old Testament, the Lord Jesus Christ. He sealed the 144,000 (cf. 7:2-3); He offered incense with the prayers of the saints (cf. 8:1-6); He is clothed with a cloud, a heavenly clothing; his face was as it were the sun (cf. 1:16); a rainbow was upon his head (cf. 4:3); his feet as pillars of fire tallies with the description in 1:15. Why does Christ appear in the Apocalypse as an angel? Is this retrogression in doctrine, rather than progress? He appears as an angel because reference is made to conditions in Israel before their Messiah had been revealed to them in His incarnation. He takes the same position as He occupied in Old Testament times, another proof that the Tribulation Period is a part of the Jewish age and will remain unfinished at the first coming of Christ.

2 And he had in his hand a little book open: and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth,

2. Attention is next directed to a little book open in the hand of the Angel. There are three views as to the identity of the little book: (1) It is the same book as the seven-sealed book of 5:1; (2) it is the aggregate of Old Testament prophecy concerning Israel (it is strange that a little book could contain so much prophetic truth); and (3) it is the part of the Revelation that is subsequent to the sounding of the seventh trumpet (i.e., 11:19-19:21). We prefer the first position (cf. also Ironside, op. cit., pp. 175-176). The reason is that in a book of symbols it would be confusing to have a detail in chapter 5 appear again in chapter 10 with another meaning and without some explanation. The reference then, is, to the title-deed to the earth. Here He makes His indisputable claim to all creation as His inalienable right. Further proof is forthcoming in the Angel's action. He set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth. In the Old Testament such an act signified taking possession of that place (cf. Deut 11:24; Josh 1:3).

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, seven thunders uttered their voices.

3. And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth. The voice of the Angel was like the roaring of a lion, for He is the Lion of the tribe of Judah (cf. 5:5). A lion always roars when he has caught his prey (cf. Amos 3:4). In chapter 5 He was seen in the role of Lamb; here He is pictured in His wrath as a Lion (cf. 6:16). Again, seven thunders speak of God's activity in judgment.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.

4. Seal up those things . . . and write them not. At this point John was about to write the import of the seven thunders, but the Lord did not permit it. The manner in which all takes place is not revealed (cf. Deut 29:29). In this book of disclosures this is the only detail sealed.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven,

5-7. And swear by him . . . who created heaven . . . the earth . . . the sea, and the things which are therein. The solemnity of the transaction is underscored. He swears by the God of all creation. What is the subject of the oath? Simply, it is that there will be delay no longer. The translation of "delay" (Gr chronos) as time is unfortunate (so AV), because it is inaccurate (cf. NASB). There is here no announcement of the end of time and the ushering in of eternity, for that comes over 1000 years later. The Angel is stating, rather, that there will be no more delay in rectifying the wrong government of the earth. Sin has held sway long enough. God's secret dealings are over, and His public judgments begin. Heaven is silent no longer, and man's day is about to close. The seventh angel is the one who sounds the seventh trumpet. What is the mystery of God that is finished? Reference is to His permission for evil to go on in its present course with seeming impunity. God appears to be silent

6 And swear by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, that there should be time no longer:

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

CHAPTER 11

AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court which is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles; and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.

in the whole conflict between good and evil. According to a Jewish proverb, "Michael flies with but one wing, and Gabriel with two." In short, God is quick in sending angels of peace, and they fly swiftly. But the messengers of wrath come slowly. But they do come!

8-11. Now John is told to become actively involved in the unveiling of coming events. He is charged to take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel. The reply of the Angel in verse 9 reminds one of the experience of Ezekiel in his ministry (cf. Ezk 2:8-3:3). The eating of the scroll is done by faith through meditation and reflection. To eat is to incorporate into one's being (cf. Jn 6:49-58). The study of the prophetic Word, and its central emphasis on Christ and His ultimate victory has a twofold effect: sweet and bitter. It both gladdens and saddens. The truth of the Lord's reign and triumph was sweet to John, but the judgments and plagues by which that consummation will be brought about will be bitter indeed.

What is the meaning of the command to prophesy again concerning kings and nations? It will be remembered that only the first and second series of septenary judgments have been covered in the chapters thus far. There remains the last series (the vial judgments) to be unfolded. Furthermore, there are other disclosures in chapter 12 to the end of the book concerning Satan, a final political leader, the Antichrist, the world system of godlessness, the reign of Christ, judgment, resurrection, and the new heaven and new earth. It is an approach to the subjects of chapters 1-11, but with many significant details added. The truth of the book is duplicated, just as Pharaoh's dream of the famine (cf. Gen 41:32) was repeated to him.

B. The Two Witnesses. 11:1-13.

11:1-2. Again, the mention of the temple of God, and the altar, . . . the court, . . . and the holy city alerts the reader that events continue on Jewish ground. Yet there are some eminent students who claim that verses 1-14 are one of the most difficult portions of the Revelation (cf. H. Alford, in loco). Much of the confusion is attributable to the fact that they inject the church here, whereas she has been seen in heaven since chapter 4.

This chapter, through verse 14, is the continuation of the parenthesis begun in 10:1 between the sixth and seventh trumpets. The background of chapter 11 is essential. The nation Israel is returned to their land in unbelief. They had made a covenant with a sinister political leader of the time (cf. Dan 9:27), who promises them political protection and religious freedom. The Temple is rebuilt with an attempt at restoring the Mosaic ritual. It may be well to review the status of the Temple in Israel here and then touch on a preview of what is yet in store. The tabernacle of Moses (cf. Ex 25ff.) was the pattern, greatly enlarged to be sure, for the majestic temple of Solomon (cf. I Kgs 7-8). With its destruction in 586 B.C. by Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon and the subsequent exile, Israel was without a Temple. More than a score of years went by before the restoration Temple was built under Zerubbabel, a scion of the Davidic house, who built it with the spiritual motivation provided by the prophets Haggai and Zechariah near the end of the sixth century B.C.. During the reign of Herod under Roman suzerainty, the Temple was renovated over a period of time (cf. Jn 2:20), only to be destroyed by the armies of Titus at the end of the Judaeo-Roman War of A.D. 66-70. Israel has not had, and does not now have, a temple in Jerusalem. Judaism knows only worship in synagogues around the world. (Reformed Jews speak of their places of worship as temples, but in no sense do they imply any relationship to the temples already discussed here.) When the church has been taken to heaven in the Rapture (an event that may transpire at any moment—"in a moment," I Cor 15:52) and Israel is returned to their land, they will build a temple in Jerusalem. It may be called the Tribulation Temple (the Scripture references are clear: 11:1-2; Dan 9:27; 11:31; 12:11; Mt 24:15; Mk 13:14; II Thess 2:3-4). There is yet to be another temple constructed, and it will be built by the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the millennial temple (cf. Isa 66:20-23; Ezk 40-48; Zech 6:12-13). In the New Jerusalem there will be no temple (cf. Rev 21:22).

• Rise, and measure. John's people are in view; so he is commanded to measure the temple, the altar, and the worshipers. The altar is that of burnt offering, God's first provision for Israel's drawing nigh to Him. The measuring reminds one of Revelation 21:15ff; Ezekiel 40; and Zechariah 2. Measuring conveys the concept of marking off for one's own possession. God does recognize and claim a godly, worshiping remnant in Jerusalem in the time of the Tribulation. The measuring must be symbolical in that the worshipers are included. The court which is without the temple leave out. The outer court, it is explicitly stated, is to be excluded. In the temples in Israel in the past this was the court of the Gentiles. Now it is indicated that the Gentiles will not only command this area as their own, but for forty and two months (i.e., the three and a half years of the Great Tribulation) they will overrun Jerusalem as well. During the domination of the beast and the Antichrist (cf. ch. 13) Jerusalem will not enjoy autonomy. The rejected court speaks of the mass of the nation being in apostasy and rejection, as well as their being the prey of the nations. It is Jerusalem's greatest hour of agony.

3 And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.

3-4. Prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth. But God never allows Himself to be without a witness. The very period of the trampling down of Jerusalem will be the time of their testimony, i.e., 1260 days. Their clothing of sackcloth shows their afflicted condition regarding the spiritual desolation about them. Notice that they preach with power. Since they were identified only by the description in verse 4, which is general indeed, various identifications have been suggested by interpreters. Some claim the two witnesses are Elijah and Enoch, who did not experience death in order to see death here. Others say they are Moses and Elijah. This has much to commend it in the light of Malachi 4:4-5 and the nature of the works that they perform (see vs. 6 of this chapter). A good number prefer to think of them as a godly remnant in Israel and not two men, since two are required to insure competent witness (cf. Deut 17:6; Jn 8:17). Some are uncertain in identifying the witnesses, but the opinion of the majority is that the witnessing ministry and miracles are like those of Moses and Elijah.

Their function is stated in verse 4 as being similar to the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks before the Lord in Zechariah 4:14. In that passage the reference was to two specific men, Joshua the son of Jehozadak, the high priest, and Zerubabel the son of Shealtiel, the governor, one representing governmental power and the other religious. Through them the light and message of God were mediated to the people of Israel in those post-captivity days. The two witnesses of the Great Tribulation serve in a royal and priestly capacity, witnessing to the soon coming of the King of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the

5-6. Also, they have power to accredit and authenticate their mission to unbelieving Israel. Miracles like those of Moses and Elijah will confirm their divine empowering. Israel will be in a state of slavery, as in Egypt (now under the domination of the first beast); and she will also be in a condition of apostasy, as in Elijah's day (now under the delusion of the false prophet, the second beast, cf. 13:1-18). Because they testify for God, they will be hated by the ungodly. But they will be invincible and immortal until their ministry is completed. Notice the range of earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

REVELATION 11:7

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.

10 And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.

11 And after three days and an half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them.

13 And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second woe is past; and, behold, the third woe cometh quickly.

15 And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are their authority in verse 6: to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7-10. When they shall have finished their testimony, the beast . . . shall make war against them. Once the testimony of the witnesses is completed, they will glorify God even to death, being slain by the beast. This is the first mention of the beast of Revelation 13:1ff. He actually carries on warfare against them until they are martyred. Evidently, the populace will assent to the work of the beast, because in their anger against the two witnesses they do not allow their dead bodies to be put in graves, an indignity of immense proportions in the East. With satanic cunning and deception, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit has won over the masses to himself.

Jerusalem is characterized mystically (not literally) as Sodom, because of its wickedness, and as Egypt, because of its oppression and enslavement of the people of God. Both names appear repeatedly in Scripture as the objects of God's unrelenting wrath. Lest any reader misunderstand the geographical place intended because of the use of symbolism, the passage identifies the place as Jerusalem, where also our Lord was crucified. That Christ is designated as their Lord is proof that the two witnesses are not representative of masses of individuals, nor are they angelic beings. They are redeemed men on earth.

The three days and a half of verse 9 are obviously intended to be literal days. Now the utter depravity of the dwellers on earth is manifested. They refuse decent burial for the witnesses; but even more, they want to celebrate the cessation of that witness that was so irksome and tormenting to them in their incorrigible godlessness. They will carry out their merriment in feasts, banquets, and exchange of gifts, so galling had been the testimony of the godly messengers.

11-13. Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud. But the hour of vindication arrives at last. Their indecent merriment would redound upon the heads of the insensitive wicked. The witnesses are resurrected in the sight of all their enemies. But even more, a heavenly voice calls them into the presence of the Lord; they are afforded an ascension in the presence of their foes. What an honor! Even Paul and the apostles were not so rewarded. Furthermore, the ungodly experience a final stroke of God's displeasure at the very hour of the ascension of the witnesses, an earthquake strikes the city of Jerusalem with lethal results: seven thousand people are slain in the disaster. Even the blindest spiritually could not escape the meaning of the earthquake and the decimation of the population. The remnant mentioned are those who were spared. Their reaction was terror, the result of human fear with no practical outcome. Outwardly, they gave glory to the God of heaven; but their hearts are not genuinely touched, as future events will clearly attest.

C. Announcement of Third Woe. 11:14.

14. The second woe is past; and, behold, the third woe cometh quickly. The parenthesis which began with 10:1 ends here. It further confirms that the reader is not to expect an improvement or amelioration in conditions on earth; for without change in men's hearts, God's righteous judgments must continue. Six trumpet judgments (including two woes) are concluded; there remains only fearful looking forward of more judgment, especially the seventh trumpet or third woe visitation.

IX. THE SEVENTH TRUMPET (THIRD WOE). 11:15-19.

15. Verses 15-18 return to the trumpet judgments, last dealt with at 9:21. It is immediately evident that under this trumpet many particulars of the events of the Tribulation Period are not become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And the four and twenty elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God.

17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament: and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail.

treated. Verse 19, it is generally agreed, belongs to the next chapter and the additional details that follow in the subsequent chapters. The seventh seal and the seventh trumpet are similar in that no judgment is directly announced under them (cf. 8:1; 11:15-18). Nothing is spoken of as coming from the sounding of the seventh trumpet; it is wrapped in silence. But loud voices in heaven have a vital declaration to make before the details of the last trumpet are revealed in the seven vials (bowls) of wrath in chapter 16. The heavenly announcement proclaims that the kingdoms of this world (Gr basileia is singular, as in the NASB, not plural as in the AV) are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. The seventh trumpet does not bring in the kingdom; it only shows its proximity. The kingdom should be in the singular, because under earth's final sinister political leader there will be an amalgamation of all kingdoms into one universal kingdom. Christ's reign will be eternal. If His rule is eternal, then how can it be a thousand years, millennial reign? He rules a thousand years (cf. 20:1-7) in time to vindicate and execute God's purposes for earth; then that kingdom is merged into the eternal kingdom. Verse 15 speaks of the kingdom anticipatively, as a preview; the actual realization is to be seen in chapters 19-20.

16-18. As in chapter 4, the four and twenty elders, the church in heaven, worshipped God. Unstinted praise is rendered that God has finally consummated events on earth and reigns in omnipotence. So certain is it that it is spoken of as already accomplished. Five significant factors are fulfilled at that time. (1) The rage of the nations. They have exhibited defiance and arrogance against God many times before, but now it has reached its culmination (cf. 16:13-16; 19:19; Ps 2). Here is an epitome of Armageddon. (2) The wrath of God. No longer will the patience of God be manifest. The hour of His vengeance will have arrived (cf. Ps 2:5; II Thess 1:7-8). (3) The judgment of the dead. This is probably a reference to the future Great White Throne judgment (cf. ch. 20). (4) The rewarding of the godly. This will occur for the church at the Rapture; for other saints it will take place at the resurrection of the righteous in the first resurrection (cf. ch. 20). (5) The destruction of the destroyers of the earth. The reference amply covers those who carry out their diabolical purposes in the Tribulation Period. What a summary this is!

19. The temple of God was opened in heaven. With this verse John resumes the entire history from a different viewpoint, i.e., that of the chief participants in the soon-coming events. A good number of scholars connect this verse with the next three chapters, thus making yet another parenthesis, from 11:19-14:20, before the unveiling of the vial judgments in chapters 15-16. There is much to be said in favor of this position. God resumes His relationship with Israel (his temple, the ark of his testament), but there is still judgment ahead as evidenced by the lightnings, voices, thunderings, earthquake, and great hail.

X. CHIEF PARTICIPANTS IN THE TRIBULATION. 12:1-14:20

From chapter 12 on, a new beginning and fuller details are presented. Chapters 12-14 constitute a connected and important prophecy in the book. Chapters 12-13 depict the principal agents for good and evil in the end time. Chapter 14 gives the consummation preparatory to the setting up of the kingdom. From 12:5 to 14:20 a great sweep of history is covered from the birth of Christ to the time of His treading the winepress of God's wrath. In chapter 12 alone, there is a grouping of events second to none in this book. The chapter takes the reader farther back than any other in the Revelation.

CHAPTER 12

AND there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

2 And she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads.

4 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth: and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

A. The Woman, the Red Dragon, and the Child. 12:1-6.

12:1-2. The great wonder in heaven is something pointing to a definite subject or object. The woman is actually on earth; but the wonder or sign is seen in heaven, so that God's purposes concerning her may be made known from heaven. Two distinct features are indicated concerning her: her clothing and her condition. The sun . . . the moon . . . a crown of twelve stars. She is clothed brilliantly with the heavenly bodies and a crown; she is a mother with child and is in labor. When the Revelation is studied, it will be seen that the book pictures four women, all of them in a representative capacity. In 2:20 the woman Jezebel was seen, not in her individual and historic position, but as representing the clerical system at its highest, i.e., the papal system. In 17:1 the great whore, as will be shown later, is all corrupt, apostate religious systems, especially professing Christendom. The wife, the church in heaven, is indicated in 19:7.

The fourth woman is considered in verses 1-2. Various views of her identity have been put forth. There are three positions as follows: (1) She is the virgin Mary. Nowhere in Scripture is Mary pictured as in verse 1. She is not portrayed in the Gospels as verse 4 indicates. There is no biblical ground to believe Mary underwent the experience of verse 6. Moreover, how could verse 17 apply to her? She does not fit the picture. (2) She is the church. This view has many adherents and defenders. H. Alford (op. cit., in loco); Matthew Henry (Commentary, VI, 1160); J. A. Seiss (in loco) represent this view, along with numerous others. The difficulty here is that the church did not give birth to Christ; He is the builder of the church (cf. Mt 16:18) and its foundation (cf. I Cor 3:11). (3) Many hold the woman is Israel. A. T. Robertson (op. cit., in loco) holds that John must have had Isaiah 7:14 in mind. Even more, under the direction of the Spirit, he knew Isaiah 9:6; 66:7-8; Micah 5:2; and Romans 9:4-5. The sun, moon, and stars indicate a complete system of government and remind the reader of Genesis 37:9. God had caused royal dignity to rest in Israel in the line of David. The number twelve appears with the twelve patriarchs, twelve disciples, and twelve thrones (cf. Mt 19:28). In verse 1 Israel is seen, not as she has been or is now, but as she will be. It is the nation as God had intended her to be, a condition that will be fulfilled in the reign of her Messiah. When the child, who is Christ, was born, the people of Israel were not in a place of power and dignity, but under the galling yoke of Roman domination.

3-4. The scene now shifts to heaven where another wonder is closely observed. The symbol is a great red dragon. It is called great because it is not a minor or insignificant creature. He has great power. He is red because he is eager and ready to shed blood. A dragon is a winged (for speed) serpent (for deception). The figure is meant to bear out great cruelty and hatred. Undoubtedly, this is Satan (cf. vs. 9 and 20:2). This is the first place in the Bible where Satan is called a dragon. But the description is enlarged: (1) he has seven heads; (2) ten horns; and (3) seven crowns. Some try to connect the seven heads with the seven great world monarchies of Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Persia, Greece, Rome, and the Roman Empire in its restored condition (cf. J. A. Seiss, op. cit., in loco). This is artificial and arbitrary, for the seventh kingdom is not a separate one from the Roman Empire of history. A head is a symbol of wisdom; seven speaks of fullness and completion. Satan is indeed wise and powerful. Horns represent power in Scripture (cf. I Sam 2:1; Zech 1:18-21; especially Dan 7:7-8, 24-25; Rev 13:1; 17:3, 12-16). Ten is the number of universality, and the goal of Satan is nothing less than world domination. Such is his objective, as will be seen in chapter 13. The seven crowns indicate Satan's objective to be crowned; he would reign over all men at all costs.

The tail symbolizes delusive power (cf. Isa 9:15), which Satan uses to accomplish the moral ruin of those in highest position. But he is not successful with all, only a third. Upon whom was the venom of Satan to be poured out? The answer is clear: the woman's child as soon as it was born (cf. Mt 2 with Gen 3:15). Herod was merely a tool of Satan's power, but he was nevertheless responsible.

5 And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.

6 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

5-6. The identity of the woman and her child is assured beyond question in verse 5. The man child is to rule (Gr poimainō, to shepherd) all nations with a rod of iron: He is unmistakably the Lord Jesus Christ (cf. Ps 2:7, 9). As the Son of Man, He has sovereign rights of world rulership (cf. Ps 8; Dan 7:13-14). What is remarkable is that the entire period in the life of Christ from His birth until His ascension is omitted here. But, as has been seen many times in Scripture, the record contains not only history, but divine history, and that from a specific viewpoint. History as such is not the aim, but the moral and spiritual purpose of God in the earth. The church age is omitted also in verse 6 because the purpose of God in Israel is at the center of the book. What the woman in Genesis 3 was not able to accomplish, namely, victory over Satan, the woman here did effect in her all-victorious, ascended Lord.

Again, a large span of history is not mentioned, that is, from the ascension of the Saviour to the flight of Israel in the Tribulation Period. Here is proof again that from the vantage point of the Old Testament the entire church age is an unrevealed mystery (cf. Eph 3:1-7). The same satanic fury unleashed at the birth of Christ is still operative against the godly of the nation that gave Him birth. A place prepared of God, that they should feed her. The same faithful Father, who watched over His people in the time of the Saviour's birth, provides a place and nourishment from the relentless fury of the dragon. A wilderness is a place lacking human resources. It may have reference to Ezekiel 20:35, but there is no valid reason why it cannot refer to the literal wilderness east of the holy city, Jerusalem. The time is the latter half of the Tribulation (1,260 days), what Daniel refers to as the "final period of the indignation" (NASB) In the AV Daniel 8:19 reads "the last end of the indignation." Chronologically, verses 7-12 occur before the flight of the woman into the wilderness and explain, at least in part, the reason for the flight.

B. War in Heaven. 12:7-17.

This conflict is not said to be a sign, because the presence of Satan in heaven is a reality (cf. Eph 6:10-12). The first step in the execution of the final judgment on Satan is depicted here.

7-8. In this section of the chapter another important personality of the Tribulation is introduced, namely, Michael the archangel. Notice these features: (1) His name. It means "Who is like God?" This bears testimony to the uniqueness of the God he serves. (2) He is clearly designated as "the archangel" (cf. Jude 9). Nowhere in Scripture is there a plural to this noun (cf. I Thess 4:16; Jude 9). (3) He has the added description of "the great prince" (cf. Dan 12:1). (4) He has power even to challenge Satan (cf. Jude 9). (5) He has angels at his command (cf. 12:7). (6) He will be present at the Rapture of the church (cf. I Thess 4:16). (7) He is the champion of Israel and the espouser of their cause (cf. 12:7; Dan 12:1). He appears when they are in question and their interests are involved. His presence immediately alerts the reader that the events relate to Israel and her enemies.

It is unusual to read of war in heaven, a place where peace and bliss prevail. But here the ultimate doom of Satan must begin, just as his first sin did (cf. Isa 14:12-14; Ezk 28:12-15). In pre-time, his early fall was from the immediate presence of God to the second heaven (cf. Eph 6:10-12). Just as Michael has a retinue of angels at his command, Satan has his followers. The 7 And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven. Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

11 And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child.

14 And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

battle will be no dress rehearsal or sham encounter; it will be mortal conflict. But Satan, already defeated at Calvary, is no match for Michael and his angels.

Neither was their place found any more in heaven. The weaker foe will be permanently dislodged, never to regain access to heaven. Doubtless, Christ foresaw this in Luke 10:17-18. Satan's forceful eviction from heaven is a chief cause of the Great Tribulation. The three steps in Satan's ultimate doom are in 12:9; 20:3; and 20:10.

9. Twice it is stated that Satan . . . was cast out, and once that his angels were cast out with him. Now he will be identified to the full. First, he is the great dragon. Here power and cruelty are to the fore. Second, as that old serpent, called the Devil, he is the master of cunning, as with Eve in Eden. The added characterization, old (some versions have "ancient" or "original"), directly relates him to Genesis 3. In the Greek Devil conveys the force of slanderer or false accuser. Recall his blasphemous insinuations concerning God in tempting Eve. Satan means the adversary or opposer. All these attributes are employed toward the one great objective of all his activities, namely, to deceive the entire world.

10-12. In the Apocalypse, when earth mourns (cf. 18:11; 19:1), heaven rejoices, an indication of how out of tune with heaven the earth is. The loud voice . . . in heaven is not identified, but the message is filled with good news. The consummation of God's gracious purposes for His own draws nearer. Satan is called the accuser of our brethren, and he is tirelessly at his occupation (cf. Job 1:11; 2:5; Zech 3:1; Lk 22:31; see also I Jn 2:1 with its implications). The godly of all ages have been the target of his slanders. Surely, the 144,000 and the godly Gentiles (cf. ch. 7), with other redeemed ones of that time, will be especially the objects of his unbounded fury for his expulsion from heaven.

The manner of the victory of the godly over Satan, different from the victory of Michael and his angels, will be threefold: the blood of the Lamb (their justification before God on that basis), the word of their testimony (faithful witness) to the work and grace of God, and their willingness to be martyred (loved not their lives) for their faith. No wonder heaven is called upon to rejoice. No earth-originated faith could accomplish this. But a warning is sounded. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea (heaven now being inviolate without the sinister presence of Satan and his own), in view of the increased wrath of the devil because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13-17. Verses 7-12 explain why the woman had to flee and why Satan is so furious on earth. In short, verse 13 resumes the thread of thought in verse 6. If further proof were needed, it is to be found in a comparison of the notations of time in verses 6 and 14. They treat of the same time, namely, the Great Tribulation; the 1,260 days are identical with the three and a half years. (Note: for purposes of computation, the Bible reckons a year as 360 days.) Throughout the account it is clear that the objective of the hatred of the dragon is the woman, Israel. What he could not accomplish at the birth of Christ, i.e., the extermination of the Saviour, he now seeks to compensate for by the persecution of Israel (vs. 13) and the remnant of her descendants (vs. 17).

But as the Lord undertook for Israel at the incarnation, so He does now. The wings of a great eagle are known for their strength; here they represent God's enablement of the godly in Israel (perhaps the result of the witness of the 144,000 among them also). In Exodus 19:4 God indicated to Israel that He had borne them on eagles' wings and had brought them into the wilderness from the hostile Egyptians. Here He will grant them eagles' wings to flee from Jerusalem to the wilderness to escape the deadly venom of their archenemy Satan. His past faithfulness is a pledge of His fidelity in the then present hour. She is nourished for a time. Nourishment (same as in vs. 6) will be afforded her in her extremity. Since the eagles' wings are intended to be understood symbolically in Exodus and in this passage, they may refer to friendly persons and nations who will espouse the cause of Israel.

And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood. Satan does not relinquish his evil schemes so easily. In a final desperate thrust, he now tries to engulf the godly in Israel as by a flood. Continuing the symbolism, this may refer to Satan's activating hostile nations on earth against the Jews. Again, he will be foiled by the alertness and activities of those who come to Israel's aid. Defeated repeatedly, Satan's rage will be unbounded. His goal now is to annihilate the remnant of her seed who remained in Jerusalem. That they are redeemed ones is manifest from the characterization of them in the last words of the chapter.

C. The Beast from the Sea. 13:1-10.

The apostle continues the delineation of the chief participants of the end time in this chapter, adding two more to those given in chapter 12. A study of Daniel 7; 9; and 11 is essential to the understanding of this vital chapter of the Apocalypse.

13:1. In 19:20 the two beasts of this chapter are designated as the beast and the false prophet. With the dragon (vs. 2), they form a horrendous trio of evil. The beasts are the chief wicked instruments of Satan. Here is the culmination of the world's desire for the amalgamation and merger of political and religious power, a combination of church and state. The Roman Beast and the Antichrist (man of sin of II Thess 2:3) will fulfill the longing of the ungodly.

The better manuscripts read "he stood," instead of I stood in verse 1. It is still the dragon spoken of in chapter 12. He stands upon the sand of the sea in order to motivate the rise of the beast from the sea. The verse first gives the origin of the beast and then offers a general description of his appearance. In Scripture, the sea represents multitudes of nations in tumult and unrest (cf. 17:15; 20:8; Ps 2:1). Interpreters of the Revelation differ as to the identity of the two beasts of this chapter. Some hold that the first beast (vss. 1-10) is the Antichrist, a political leader; and the second beast (vss. 11-18) is an apostate Jew, a religious leader (cf. F. C. Ottman, op. cit., p. 321ff.). Others maintain that the first beast is the Roman Beast, a political leader; and the second beast is the False Prophet or Antichrist (cf. New Scofield Reference Bible, p. 1364, fn. 2; H. A. Ironside, op. cit., pp. 219-252). As the commentary proceeds, it will be seen that this writer holds to the latter view.

The first beast represents the revived Roman Empire (vs. 3), the ten toes of Daniel 2, which have not been historically fulfilled. So united with Satan is this beast-like leader that what is written of Satan in 12:3 is here ascribed to the political leader (cf. Dan 7:8).

2. This verse throws much light on Daniel 7:1-12. There the first beast was a lion (eagles' wings are added to bring out added truth), namely, Babylon; the second was a bear, that is, Medo-Persia; the third was a leopard (birds' wings and heads are included to set forth additional truths), i.e., Greece. The fourth beast is not likened to any known animal in nature; hence, it is called the nondescript. Now it is clear why the fourth beast is not named, because there is no beast that combines the features of a leopard, bear, and lion. But the revived Roman Empire will incorporate the features of the preceding three empires. Ancient Rome boasted that no matter how many powers she subjugated in her conquests, she could always assimilate them into her hegemony. That political power is being emphasized here is certain from the mention of his power, and his seat (i.e., the whole earth), and great authority.

CHAPTER 13

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw a beast rise up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the name of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and the dragon gave him his power, and his seat, and great authority.

REVELATION 13:3

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast.

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

3. His deadly wound was healed. Rome did suffer political decline. The city of Rome fell in A.D. 476, and to this hour the Roman Empire has ceased to exist. But it will rise again, as this chapter reveals. Since World War II and Churchill's statement concerning the United States of Europe, there have been strong currents to build a confederation of nations in Europe as a sort of buffer between the superpowers of the East and West. Ten kingdoms will arise in western Europe (cf. 17:12). The ancient Roman Empire never existed in this form. It will represent a strong attempt to centralize political and economic power (17:13). The ruler over the federated kingdoms will be the "little horn" of Daniel 7:8 (cf. also Dan 9:27). The first beast of chapter 13 is the "little horn" (signifying political power) of Daniel 7:24-25. All the world wondered after the beast. Because the turn of events will be beyond normal expectation, the whole world will be astounded and, feeling there is the exhibition of supernatural power, will give their allegiance to the beast. Their wonder will turn to worship, because the world has not witnessed such a sight as the revived Roman Empire. Once more Satan will attempt to usurp God's place.

4. And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast. Realizing that the political leader is exercising power delegated from Satan, the world will turn to worship the source of that authority. In doing so, they ascribe omnipotence and invincibility to the beast. The insolent questions are to be answered in 19:11-16.

5. Notice that here, and in verse 7, the words given unto him occur four times. All is under the permissive direction of God, as with Job and Satan long ago (cf. Job 1-2). Only great things and blasphemies issue from the mouth of this beast (also vs. 1, name of blasphemy; cf. Dan 7:8, 11, 20, 25). This latter part of the Tribulation Period, called the Great Tribulation (cf. 7:14), is so important that it is referred to explicitly by days (12:6), years (12:14), and months (here).

6. By definition, blasphemy is irreverent speech against God; but this beast is not satisfied with maligning God and His blessed character. He includes, as well, all the saints who are with the Lord in heaven. How could he have failed to realize the importance of the great event of the Rapture of the church?

7. As Daniel had prophesied (cf. 7:21-22), this vile political leader was permitted to make war with the saints still living on earth. Notice the wide range of his authority; in verse 15 he is enabled to kill all who do not worship his image.

8. With the display of such unprecedented power, it is easy to see how all that dwell upon the earth (cf. 3:10; 13:12) will be quick to enlist themselves as worshippers of him. The times of the Gentiles began with man-worship (cf. Nebuchadnezzar in Dan 3); and they will end the same way, as is clearly stated here. Only those who have trusted Christ as Saviour, whose names are eternally recorded in the book of life of the Lamb, will refuse the beast the worship that belongs only to God. If occurrences foretold here seem incredulous, let it be remembered that the deification of Roman emperors in the past is well-attested in history. They assumed divine titles, commanded divine honors, and built temples for the worship of themselves.

9-10. The sway of the beast will be worldwide; so the call to hear is similarly broad. Retributive justice will be experienced in that day. In that day, the godly on earth, especially the remnant in Israel, are called upon to refrain from employing the sword (carnal weapons; cf. the three witnesses in Dan 3). God's saints must have patience, thus exhibiting their sole faith in God.

D. The Beast from the Earth. 13:11-18.

The first beast comes from the sea, hence, it is a Gentile; the second has his origin from the earth (or land) or the Land of Promise. As indicated earlier in this chapter, those who identify this beast with the Antichrist (which is the position of this writer) claim the second beast is an apostate Jew. Is this conclusion regarding his national origin a compelling one? It is true that Jews would not accept a non-Jew, as their Messiah, and history witnesses that they have received some scores of false Messiahs already (cf. Jn 5:43; Acts 5:36-37). But the portrayal of the Antichrist in Daniel 11:36-45; Zechariah 11:15-17; Matthew 24:15-28; John 5:43; II Thessalonians 2:1-12; and here in Revelation is such that the one called "the man of sin" is not likely to be compelled by truth as to his national origin, any more than he adheres to the facts in claiming to be God Himself (cf. II Thess 2:4). Falshood is one of the staples of his stock in trade. Thus, he will arise from the Land of Promise and will falsely claim to be of the nation of promise and the promised Messiah.

11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

11. Like Satan, this beast, the third member of the evil trio of the Tribulation Period, traffics in counterfeiting. He has horns like a lamb; Satan's agents are able to pass themselves off as messengers of light (cf. II Cor 11:13-15). F. W. Grant (cf. The Numerical Bible, in loco) has suggested that this beast seeks to imitate the kingly and prophetic ministries of Christ. Spake as a dragon. But his speech betrays him as a tool of Satan; he pretends meekness and humility as a lamb, but in actuality is a masterpiece of the devil. He is stationed in Jerusalem (cf. II Thess 2:4); but he owes his position and power to the first beast, who resides in Rome (cf. Dan 11:38-39, especially the words "god of forces" and "strange god"). With the military help of his superior, he can command universal compliance with his demands.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

12. As stated, the first beast is willing to sponsor the Antichrist (he is also the false prophet, cf. 19:20), with the understanding that the coadjutor direct all worship to the first beast. What a singular stroke of Satan that all this transpires at the focal point of the world's three monotheistic religions, namely, in Jerusalem.

13 And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

13. Because God never sent a prophet of His without proper attestation with miracles (cf. Moses and Elijah as examples), Satan must counterfeit this feature also in order to carry through the greatest deception of the ages. Notice that the miracles are characterized as great wonders, and one is specified (fire come down from heaven) which could deceive men into thinking that the Antichrist has power even in heaven.

14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

14. It is known that a lackey will often overdo his role. So the Antichrist, in working his miracles, commands that an image (idol) to the beast be made for universal homage. Christ referred to this in Matthew 24:15. It is the ultimate in man's search to be like God. Satan tried it; those at the Tower of Babel attempted it; now the Antichrist puts the finishing touches to the gruesome blasphemy (cf. Mt 24:24-25; II Thess 2:9-10).

15 And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

15. And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast. Even more, God permits a power which is not seen elsewhere in Scripture. The Antichrist wants to make the deception as strong as possible. So the image is given breath to speak, to command worship, and to mete out capital punishment to those who refuse adoration of the idol. When political power and man's religion are so wedded, Satan is indeed the master of ceremonies.

16 And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

16-17. All is despotic tyranny without consideration for divine or human rights. It is one thing to suffer social ostracism, political deprivation, or religious persecution; but to link idolatrous worship with economic deprivation is a master stroke of Satan. Boycott is a potent use of force. In order to obtain the elements for livelihood, it will be necessary for everyone to be branded in a visible place in their right hand, or in their foreheads with the mark of the beast, either his name . . . or the number of his name given in verse 18.

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six.

18. His number is Six hundred threescore and six. It is almost impossible to list the number of suggestions for 666; they range all the way from Nero in ancient Rome to persons in this day. Probably the most that can be gleaned is that since seven is the biblical number of completion, six, which falls short of it, is man's failure at its worst. Man's worship of man is, indeed, spiritual insanity to the highest degree.

CHAPTER 14

AND I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps:

3 And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the firstfruits unto God and to the Lamb.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God.

E. The Lamb and a Remnant on Mount Zion. 14:1-5.

Chapter 14 is the sequel and God's answer to the wickedness of the persons in chapter 13. God intervenes in grace and judgment. As stated earlier, chapters 12-14 form a series of their own and are placed between the trumpet and vial judgments, intending to emphasize the individuals who are prominent in the end time. R. H. Charles claims: "The entire chapter is proleptic in character. That is, the orderly development of future events as set forth in the successive visions is here . . . abandoned, and all the coming judgments from xvi. 17 to xx. 7-10, are summarized in xiv. 6-11, 14, 18-20" (The Revelation of St. John, II, p. 1).

14:1-5. And, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Zion. All the persons mentioned in verse 1 have appeared before the reader earlier in the book. The Lamb is Christ, so designated by John as the favorite appellation for the Saviour. A hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads. The Father needs no explanation. The 144,000 are undoubtedly those of chapter 7, the godly witnesses during the Tribulation, sealed and marked out for God. Mount Zion, is the literal city of David, entirely consistent with the godly remnant for Israel.

The scene in verses 2 and 3 changes to heaven, from which comes forth a remarkable voice which sounds like many waters, . . . great thunder: and . . . harps. Who are the harpists and singers? By elimination, it is evident that they are not the four living creatures, nor the elders, nor the 144,000 who had need to learn the song. The singing was done before the three already-named groups. Ottman (op. cit., p. 339) suggests that they may be those who are martyred under the rampages of the beast. This proposal is as good as any other, because details for ascertaining the identity of these godly ones are general.

First, they are noted for their testimony; in their witness they were not ashamed to bear the name of their God (when puny, wicked man was claiming divine prerogatives) on their foreheads. Second, they kept themselves separated from the defilement of the world. The virgins of the AV (Gr parthenoi) is a correct, literal translation; but the connotation is misleading. There is no intent to advocate celibacy over against marriage (cf. Heb 13:4), but only to emphasize their chastity in life as virgins are. They have kept themselves from the idolatry so blatantly fostered by the Roman beast and the false prophet (ch. 13). Repeatedly in the Old Testament, idolatry is likened to fornication and adultery (cf. the book of Hosea for an extended example). Third, they have chosen the highest fellowship in the universe; they are constantly in the company of the spotless Lamb of God. Fourth, they are honored to be first fruits to God and Christ. The Lord Jesus is the first fruits in resurrection (cf. I Cor 15:20); the church is the "firstfruits of his creatures" (cf. Jas 1:18); here are the first fruits of the coming kingdom age (cf. Ironside, op. cit., p. 256). Finally, in a day of wholesale falsehood and deception perpetrated by Satan and the Antichrist, these will keep themselves unblemished (not sinlessly perfect) by avoiding all lying.

F. The Angel with the Eternal Gospel. 14:6-7.

6-7. In the next seven verses of the chapter, three angels with different announcements are introduced. If voices are silenced

6 And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people.

7 Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

on earth by devilish agents, God is not thwarted in His purposes to send forth His message to needy men. Gaebelein (op. cit., p. 87) and Ottman (op. cit., pp. 344-346) maintain that a literal angel is not in view here, but witnesses during the Tribulation Period who preach the gospel of the kingdom, that is, preparation by repentance for the coming of Messiah. The passage indicates nothing concerning the gospel of the kingdom (as John the Baptist preached it and the apostles as well before the crucifixion of Christ), but rather speaks of an eternal gospel. Nor is there basis for assuming that the angel represents witnesses during the Tribulation Period. Moreover, this is not the gospel preached during the church age for the purpose of gathering out a bride for the Redeemer. It is specifically "good news" (Gr euangelion) of an eternal character intended for those who inhabit (not the same Greek word as in 3:10) the earth from all nations. Verse 7 seems to contradict the concept of good news, for the contents appear to announce only judgment. This is a hasty conclusion. The dual appeal in the message is to reverence God, giving Him glory, and to worship Him as Creator of the universe (cf. Rom 1:20 with Ps 19:1-6). This gospel proclaims that God is the sovereign Maker, and blessing is only in obedience to His will. It is everlasting because it has abided through the ages. It is in effect a call to come from the worship of the Roman Beast, a creature, to God the Creator. But the element of good news is definitely here: the declaration of soon-coming judgment is made in view of the time still granted to turn to God. If the die were already cast, then the element of good tidings would be absent; but such is not the case here.

G. Babylon's Fall Announced. 14:8.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, Bābylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

8. Babylon is fallen. The second angel has an announcement unrelated to any offer of grace. In broad outlines, it states the fall of Babylon the Great, who has seduced all the nations with her immorality. Drawing on many Old Testament passages, the reader is able to transfer the figure of physical uncleanness to that of spiritual defection from God to idolatry (cf. Jer 51:8). Interpreters differ on the identity of this Babylon. There is a general consensus that the Babylon introduced here proleptically is that of chapters 17-18. R. H. Charles maintains that the fall of Rome is announced (op. cit., II, p. 14). Scott holds: "But what is before us now is the mystic Babylon, that huge system of spiritual adultery and corruption which holds sway over the whole prophetic scene. It is scarcely possible to conceive of a huge system of wickedness eagerly embraced by the nations once called Christian. It will nevertheless be so. Babylon here is the full development of the state of things under the Thyatiran condition of the Church (chap. 2:18-23)" (op. cit., p. 299). R. C. H. Lenski (The Interpretation of St. John's Revelation, p. 432), after designating the first beast of chapter 13 as "anti-christian power" and the second beast as "antichristian propaganda," feels that "All those who do this constitute Babylon, the antichristian world city or empire, which is named 'Babylon the Great' after the Old Testament Babylon . . . the great enemy of Israel, Jerusalem, Zion." He elucidates further by way of summary (p. 434): "The preterists regard Babylon as a reference to pagan Rome alone; the historical interpreters as a reference to papal Rome; the futurists as a reference to the capital of the antichrist who is yet to come, either Rome or Jerusalem. Babylon . . . is the entire antichristian empire throughout the whole New Testament Era. Both pagan and also papal Rome would then be included." Since the mention of Babylon here is admittedly anticipatory to the detailed treatment in chapters 17-18, the entire subject will be dealt with at that place. This is the first mention of Babylon in the Revelation, but already her widespread influence and her wickedness are clearly set forth.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand,

10 The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

12 Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them.

14 And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle

H. Judgment on Worshipers of the Beast. 14:9-12.

9-12. They have no rest day nor night. The third angel has a message of unrelieved judgment. Both verses 9 and 11 designate the objects of the divine visitation to be the worshipers of the beast and his image and the recipients of his mark. The judgment depicted is horrendous indeed. It will be intoxication with the unmitigated wine of the wrath of God, torment in the presence of the holy angels, and . . . the Lamb, and unceasing restlessness, namely, eternal torment. Those who hold that the unrepentant wicked will be ultimately restored to bliss (they are known as restitutionists) find no confirmation in verse 11. In fact, the words used in the New Testament about the eternity of God are found here (Gr eis aionas aionon; cf. 22:11 also). Their trust in the power and authority of the beasts (ch. 13) will not stand them in good stead in that coming day. Finally, as in 13:10 (last clause), perseverance and faith will be called for in the days when believers on earth are undergoing affliction and trials (W. Hendriksen, More Than Conquerors, pp. 186-187).

I. The Blessed Dead. 14:13.

13. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. It must be remembered that not all will share the experience of the 144,000 sealed ones. Many will suffer martyrdom in the period under consideration. Although it is always blessed to die in Christ (cf. Phil 1:21 with II Cor 5:6, 8), it will be peculiarly so in this time; for the blessedness will be near. Too, to die will be preferable to living, because they will be spared the remaining portion of the Great Tribulation. The alternatives will be either worship the beast and live, or resist him and be killed to die in the Lord. God will take full notice of their faithful works; their rewards are assured.

J. Reaping Earth's Sin. 14:14-20.

14-16. God's judgment of the ungodly on earth is now delineated under two figures: the harvest of the earth (vss. 14-16) and the vine of the earth (vss. 17-20). Careful consideration of the scene will reveal that the Great White Throne judgment is not in view here, but rather the judgment of the nations of Matthew 25:31-46, the tribunal at the end of Israel's age referred to in Matthew 13:40. The Judge is the Lord Jesus Christ, as the portrayal indicates (cf. 1:13; 10:1). The designation "a (not "the," as in the AV, for the Greek text does not have the definite article) son of man" (NASB) identifies Him with the events of Daniel 7:13-14, and all the references to Son of man in the New Testament. The evidence of John 5:22, 27, is weighty. The golden crown speaks of His royal prerogative to judge. The sharp sickle can only remind us of reaping activity. The sickle is mentioned only twelve times in the Bible, and seven occurrences are in this portion of the Revelation (cf. W. R. Newell, The Book of the Revelation, p. 228).

Notice that the angel of verse 15 proceeds from the temple in heaven, another indication that the age is related to Israel, not the church. Apparently, the angel conveys the signal of God the Father to the Son of Man to begin the work of harvesting. No sooner is the will of the Father declared than the Son performs it with obedience and power. The earth was ripe for judgment.

17-20. In verse 17 another angel is seen leaving the temple in heaven, and he is equipped with a sharp sickle. A caution is needed at this point. Some students of the book claim the reaping is of both saints and sinners. Surely, the entire context of the book would lead the reader to see "that this Revelation scene is purely one of judgment" (Newell, op. cit., p. 229). In Scripture, fire is a common figure for purifying by fire as a means of judgment (cf. 20:10, 15, the lake of fire; God in His purity is likened to fire, Heb 12:29). The reference to altar has already been found in 6:9 and 8:3. Again, an angel conveys the into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great winepress of the wrath of God.

20 And the winepress was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

message to begin the work of judgment; but this time it is not a reaping of a harvest, but the gathering of the vintage into the winepress of the wrath of God. Just as the harvest was ripe (vs. 15), so the vine (vs. 19). Though the judgment in this chapter includes both Jews and Gentiles, verse 20 indicates where the center of events will be. The city is unquestionably Jerusalem. Instead of grape juice flowing from the winepress, it will be the blood of men. But the fearful picture is even more explicit; and blood came out . . . unto the horse bridles, estimated to be about four feet. Yet more, this river will stretch for two hundred miles (Gr stadia, i.e., the total of 1,600 stadia or furlongs). This is the distance from Bozrah (Edom) in the south (cf. Isa 63:1-6) to the Valley of Jehoshaphat at Jerusalem (cf. Joel 3:1-3, 9-14) to Megiddo in the north (cf. Rev 16:14, 16). It is generally conceived that Armageddon will be a battle; this stems from the translation in AV, RSV, NIV, and NEB of "battle" for the Greek polemos. This gives too simplified a picture of the conflict. The rendering in ASV and NASB of war is correct (cf. H. G. Liddell and R. Scott, A Greek-English Lexicon, Vol. II, col. 2), because the first meaning of the word is war. Thus, Armageddon is not an isolated battle, but part of a larger picture of encounters in different parts of the land. The name of the war is called Armageddon, because the terrain there is better suited for warfare than anywhere else in the land. However, the climax of the War of Armageddon is at Jerusalem (cf. Zech 14:1-5, 12-15) with the visible appearing of the Lord Jesus.

XI. THE SEVEN VIAL JUDGMENTS. 15:1-16:21.

A. Preparation for the Judgments. 15:1-8.

The chapters now under consideration form a literary unit that follows logically after chapter 11, giving the third series of the septenary judgments of God. Why need there be three series of these judgments? They evidently follow the pattern of warfare as men know it: first, the initial encounter; then, the intensive assaults; finally, the consummating blows. Undoubtedly, the vial judgments take place in the Great Tribulation in its last stages. The implication seems to be that they will transpire in a very brief period of time. They will be both rapid and severe. The Revelation does deal repeatedly with judgment, but not exclusively so; for the final prospect is bright indeed.

1. Seven angels with seven plagues. 15:1.

15:1. In 10:7 it was stated that the mystery of God was finished, but no details were given. They are now seen in chapters 15-16. To introduce these fearful judgments called plagues, John is shown a sign in heaven (cf. 12:1, 3), which is characterized as great and marvellous. The concept of greatness is here, because in scope and intensity there has been nothing previous to this to compare with them. The idea of marvel is introduced, because the inflictions will excite amazement and wonder. These plagues are marked as last, because in them the wrath of God is fully spent upon ungodly mankind.

2. The godly victors. 15:2-4.

2-4. Before judgment falls, John saw a company of victors with harps of God. They are the ones mentioned in 14:2-3. Why the reference to a sea of glass? These who have triumphed over the beast (cf. ch. 13) have paid the supreme price and have entered into bliss. The sea may have reference to the bronze laver in the tabernacle of Moses and the bronze sea in the Temple. Here its waters are not disturbed any longer; it is that which is unalterable and firm. Purity is indicated here, but it has been attained at the cost of trials under the beasts (so the fire). As in 14:2, they have harps to accompany their praise to God.

CHAPTER 15

AND I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven angels having the seven last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God.

3 And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints.

4 Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy; for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest.

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.

7 And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

The theme of their harp playing is the song of Moses and the song of the Lamb (cf. Ex 15:1-18). What do these songs have in common? They both celebrate redemption and deliverance. In the first case, it was God's physical release of Israel from Egyptian servitude through the Passover Lamb; here it is liberation spiritually from the bondage of Satan and his agents through "Christ our passover" (cf. I Cor 5:7). In their singing they extol God's great and marvelous works, His righteousness and truth, His sovereignty over the nations, His holiness, and ultimate reception of universal worship through the disclosure of His righteous dealings.

3. The temple in heaven. 15:5-8.

5-8. In order to underscore the holiness of God in His righteous judgments on sinful man, John is granted a view of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven. Ready to perform their duties, the seven angels (cf. vs. 1) proceed from the temple fully equipped for their tasks. They are priests as well as angels, because their attire of pure and white linen and golden girdles marks them as God's priests (cf. 1:13 of Christ). Seiss has aptly indicated (op. cit., p. 370): "They appear as priests, because they come for the sacrificing of a great sacrifice to the offended holiness and justice of God."

Notice how all is pervaded with gold, an emblem of the holiness and righteousness of God (cf., e.g., the cherubim of gold over the ark of the covenant in the Holy of Holies). One of the four living creatures at the command of God presented the seven angels seven golden vials full of the wrath of God. The vials of the AV (derived from the Gr phialē) is too weak to convey the idea that the receptacles were bowls, like those used for pouring libations in the Old Testament. (Cf. Zech 12:2 where the translation "cup" is inadequate; "bowl" is intended from the Heb word employed.)

The smoke filling the temple came from the incense of the priests' censers (cf. 8:5). Two attributes of God are now underscored: His power and His glory. Where God's glory is manifested, man is unable to abide the sight. So it was with Moses (cf. Ex 40:34-35) and in Solomon's day (cf. I Kgs 8:10-11). So solemn and grave is the action that no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled (the chapter beginning and ending with the concept of finality and irretrievability).

B. Six Vials of Judgment. 16:1-12.

1. Command to empty the vials. 16:1.

16:1. It is quite instructive to compare the plagues of this chapter with those recorded of Egypt in Exodus 7:20-12:30. The great voice out of the temple is evidently that of God who authorizes the fearful final pouring out of His wrath on all nature and man. Notice throughout the chapter how the ultimate objects of the visitations are men (cf. vss. 2-3, 8-11, 14, 21). Moreover, the increased intensity and range of the plagues are easily seen in this final series of God's dealings in judgment with ungodly men. In previous judgments it was common to learn that the inflictions touched a third part of the earth; the areas were limited. But no such restriction is recorded concerning the vial judgments. There is an unmistakable finality about all the transactions. The pouring out indicates an overflowing measure without stint or reserve. Vials or bowls of the temple employed for purposes of grace are now used for judgment.

2. Plague on the earth. 16:2.

2. The first went . . . and there fell a noisome and grievous sore. The first visitation reminds at once of the sixth plague in Egypt (cf. Ex 9:10-11). The contents of this vial were loath-

CHAPTER 16

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshipped his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of waters; and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus.

6 For they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy.

7 And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun; and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.

9 And men were scorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: and they repented not to give him glory.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast; and his kingdom was full of darkness; and they gnawed their tongues for pain.

11 And blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, and repented not of their deeds.

some, unsightly, and malignant (cancerous) sores, which afflicted all men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshiped his image. Ulcers will outwardly reveal their inner corrupt moral and spiritual condition. Since no symbolism is indicated, the plague must be considered as literal as the corresponding judgment on Egypt of old.

3. Plague on the sea. 16:3.

3. Every living soul died in the sea. Under the second trumpet (cf. 8:8) only a third of the sea was involved; here the picture is of the whole sea. Some expositors prefer to understand the verse symbolically, but it is confusing to shift from literal to symbolic without some basis for doing so. Water, a source for the sustenance of life, is here made an agent of death. So it was with the water of Egypt in the first plague of Exodus 7:17-25. All marine life died immediately. Coagulated blood is death-dealing and emits an unbearable stench.

4. Plague on the rivers and waters. 16:4-7.

4. The rivers and fountains of waters . . . became blood. Again, the similarity with the plagues of Egypt is undeniable (cf. Ex 7:19-21). In 8:10-11, under the third trumpet, only a third of the waters was involved; here, there is no limitation whatever. Water, an indispensable commodity for life, is once more the object of God's judgment, as in verse 3.

5-7. It is interesting that so many subjects in the Apocalypse have their special angel. The angel of the waters has authority over this area of nature, and the judgment strikes his sphere of rule. But he justifies the judgment of God. God is as righteous in judgment as He is in blessing. Because men have heedlessly poured out the blood of God's servants, He operates on the principle of what the Latins termed lex talionis, the law of recompense in kind. It is attested to in numerous portions of Scripture. They deserved exactly the visitation God brought on them. Even the altar, symbolically to be sure, vindicates the wrath of God. Evidently, there is a connection here with the altar of burnt offering in 6:9-11.

5. Plague on the sun. 16:8-9.

8-9. William Barclay has correctly stated (op. cit., p. 165): "In Hebrew thought every natural force—the wind, the sun, the rain, the waters—had its directing angel. These angels were the ministering servants of God, placed by God in charge of various departments of nature in the universe." With the fourth trumpet judgment (8:12) the sun was darkened, along with the moon and the stars; but only a third part of them was affected. Now, only the sun is touched, but in a totally different way. Instead of the sun being darkened, its rays were heightened in heat to scorch men with fire. The sun, the source of such blessing and essential to plant and animate life on earth, is now a medium of God's wrath. They repented not to give him glory. Three times in this awesome chapter (vss. 9, 11, 21), it is declared that men reacted to their punishments with blasphemy against God and not with repentance. These judgments are not remedial or corrective in effect, but they reveal the corruption of those undergoing them all the more. The judgments are punitive; the dwellers on earth are incorrigible. Men who will not be drawn by God's love will not be attracted by His wrath, either.

6. Plague on the beast's seat. 16:10-11.

10-11. The fifth vial judgment is poured out upon the seat of the beast. W. Hendriksen (op. cit., p. 195) writes: "This throne of the beast is the center of anti-christian government. Cf. Nah 3:1; Hab 3:12-14." Adhering to an undeviating symbolism often results in generalities which leave the student of the book with few certainties of a specific nature. The seat of the 12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Eū-phrā'tēs; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet.

14 For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

15 ¶Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Ar-ma-gēd'don.

beast (evidently, the first one of ch. 13) is Rome, his capital city. This plague is God's unequivocal answer to the insolent question of 13:4; that arrogance is further met with finality in 19:19-21. The darkness is another allusion to the plague of darkness in Egypt (cf. Ex 10:21-23). Gnawed their tongues for pain is the only expression of its kind in the Bible and speaks of the most intense agony and suffering. There is no repentance, but rather a further degradation. In verse 9 the name of God was blasphemed; here He Himself is derogated. Is there any question as to whether there will be repentance in hell?

7. Plague on the Euphrates River. 16:12.

12. The great river Euphrates. This important river has been introduced earlier in connection with the sixth trumpet judgment. As noticed earlier, the river is 1,800 miles long, from 3 to 1,200 yards wide, from ten to thirty feet deep (cf. Seiss, in loco). History records what hindrance the river has been to military operations. Reminding one of the drying up of the Red Sea, this river will be dried up to allow passage of inimical forces into the Middle East area for the final conflict. The kings of the east referred to (Gr apo anatolēsēliou, lit., from the sunrise) are the Asiatic lands like China, Japan, and the nations of the Far East.

C. Preview of Armageddon. 16:13-16.

13-14. Verses 13-16 are evidently an integral portion of that which transpires at the pouring out of the sixth vial. When verses 12 and 14 are compared, the conclusion that the action of the first verse is related to that of the second as cause and effect is compelling. Notice the evil trio—dragon, beast (13:1), and false prophet (13:11)—are out in full force, ready for mortal combat for the final consummation. All three are characterized by the same uncleanness and corruption. The three unclean spirits are not said to be frogs, but like frogs. They are further explicated as spirits of devils working miracles, but of such magnitude and convincing quality that they are capable of motivating and energizing, not only the kings of the Far East but the kings of the earth and of the whole world. What is the objective of this vast enterprise? Simply stated, it is the summoning of all of them to the War of Armageddon, captioned here as the battle of that great day of God Almighty. The mind can scarcely conjure up or fathom the scene and its vast implications for the world of mankind (cf. for further light I Kgs 22:19-38; Ps 2:1-3; Joel 3:9-11; Mt 24:24-25; I Tim 4:1).

15. Before a concluding word about this unparalleled conflict, the Spirit indicates a parenthetical word in verse 15. It is Christ speaking and declaring that He will come as a thief. Nowhere in Scripture are believers warned against the coming of the Saviour as a thief. In II Thessalonians 5:1-8, notice how carefully the Spirit distinguishes believers ("children of the day") from unbelievers ("children . . . of night"). Because of the intensification of demon activity, just stated in verses 13-14, the godly of the Tribulation are warned against defilement from the widespread corruption, issuing in their shame.

16. And he gathered them together. There is no question that this verse carries on the thought of verse 14, because the same verb (Gr sunagō, to gather together) is found in both contexts. A place called . . . Armageddon. The additional information of verse 16 is that the place of the conflict is named in Hebrew, Har-Magedon. The conflict has been foretold in various passages in the Old and New Testament (e.g., Ps 2:1-3), but now the geographical location is added. The more popular name is Armageddon (the Greek noun has a rough-breathing equivalent to the letter H). Har is a well-known common noun for "mountain." Megiddo comes from a verb, meaning "to slaughter" (Heb gadad; its basic concept is to cut off, cf. KB, Lexicon, s.v.). The site was the great battleground of the Old Testament. It was the place of the victory of Deborah and Barak (cf. Jud 5:19); Josiah met his death before Pharaoh Nechoh in the Valley of Megiddo (cf. II Chr 35:22-24). Since the subject will be treated more fully in chapter 19 below, it will suffice to state that Megiddo is the mountain overlooking the Valley of Esdraelon (Gr for Jezreel), the great plain in the northern part of Palestine. Napoleon I is credited with having said of Megiddo: "What an excellent place into which all the armies of the world could be maneuvered."

D. The Seventh Vial. 16:17-21.

1. Plague on the air. 16:17-18.

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, It is done.

17. When the seventh vial was poured out, it was into the air. This is the domain of Satan as prince of the power of the air (cf. Eph 2:2). Though cast out of the highest heaven in his pre-time rebellion against God (cf. Isa 14; Ezk 28), Satan has had access to the second heaven (cf. Eph 6:12; Rev 12:7). When cast down to the earth (12:8-9) after his complete expulsion from the heavenly spheres, he could have limited activity over the air immediately above the earth. All this is with the authorization of God and in keeping with His holiness, out of the temple of heaven, from the throne. The voice from heaven utters one word (Gr Gegonen, It is done), which declares that all God's plagues have thus been exhausted. By contrast, the word of the Lord Jesus on Calvary (Gr Tetelestai, "It is finished" in Jn 19:30) has all the blessedness of a finished redemption for sinful men.

18 And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.

18. Since all judgments are completed with this vial plague, it is valid to see the remaining chapters concerning God's visitations (i.e., chs. 17-19) as summarized here. When the seventh vial has done its intended work, all judgment will have been accomplished. Verse 18 easily reminds one of similar expressions in 4:5; 8:5; 11:19 (cf. W. Lincoln, II, p. 86). Always, there is an intensification of the trials and agonies. Yet more, an earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, occurs. It is characterized by the words great (twice) and mighty. Its scope, mark well, is unlimited.

2. The fall of Babylon. 16:19.

19 And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Bāb'y-lon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.

19. The cities of the nations fell. This is the second mention of judgment on great Babylon (cf. 14:8). It is remarkable in that two chapters (17-18) are occupied at length with Babylon and her fate. In chapters 14 and 16 the city is described as great; the same is true of the portrayal in the following chapters. Expositors are divided as to whether the great city in verse 19 is the same as the Babylon of the same verse. They are definitely divided also as to the identity of Babylon, now mentioned for the third time in the book. One group of commentators equate the great city and Babylon with Jerusalem (cf. 11:8); others, with Rome (whether political, religious, or papal). When reliable expositors differ so widely, it is presumptuous to be dogmatic. Furthermore, all would greatly desire more details before making a final decision. As the reader of this commentary has already noticed, this writer prefers, as a principle in both extrabiblical and biblical writings, to understand the subject under discussion as staying the same unless there is clear basis for the introduction of another element. If the great city is other than Babylon, whose identity will be dealt with at length in the following two chapters, why is Babylon introduced here without further introduction? Moreover, the catastrophe will strike not only Babylon the Great, but the metropolises of the nations. J. A. Seiss sees a gradation in severity of judgment and doom: Jerusalem was two-thirds destroyed; the cities of the nations

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent: and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

completely; finally, Babylon with the greatest onus of sin and guilt, suffering most poignantly (cf. op. cit., in loco).

3. Nature in upheaval. 16:20-21.

20-21. Verse 20 must not be made to teach the destruction of matter, which is neither biblical nor scientific. All that need be understood is that there will be a shifting and upheaval in the island and mountainous areas. Whether or not these changes are to be directly related to the earthquake mentioned in verse 18 (so H. Alford, op. cit., in loco), it is not essential to determine.

And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven. Hailstones have already been mentioned in the Apocalypse, but not like those that are indicated here. Their magnitude and severity are emphasized. Each hailstone weighed about one hundred pounds. It takes little imagination to picture the destruction these would cause to houses and structures and, most agonizing of all, upon human beings, especially children. Does man fathom the depth of his alienation from God and earnestly seek to be reconciled to his Judge? The more severe the judgment, the greater the blasphemy.

XII. JUDGMENT ON BABYLON. 17:1-18:24.

A. Doom of the Harlot. 17:1-18.

That the theme of Babylon is an important one in the Revelation can be seen from the fact that the Spirit of God devotes two chapters in this essential book of prophecy to the subject. From Genesis 10:10 (Babel is from the Akkadian Bab-ilu, gate of God), which is the first mention, to 18:21, which is the last reference, this subject of biblical revelation and prophecy is given extraordinary prominence. The student of the Word of God is wise to stress what the Spirit underscores. All the so-called major prophets (Isa-Dan) have important disclosures concerning Babylon). Isaiah refers to the city some thirteen times, Ezekiel, some seventeen times, but Jeremiah most of all with one hundred and sixty-eight citations. In the Revelation, besides chapters 17-18 which are entirely devoted to the subject of Babylon, the first occurrence of the word is in 14:8, the second, in 16:19. Both passages briefly indicate the fall and doom of Babylon. In a true sense, chapters 17-18 are an elaboration of 16:19.

Because so much has been written on the matter and so many differing views have been advanced, it is helpful to clear up certain positions at the outset. First, no student of the Bible, theological or otherwise, doubts that in historic times there has existed a literal city called Babylon on the plain of Shinar (cf. Gen 10:10).

Second, large numbers of reverent students of Scripture understand Genesis 11 as teaching the inception of idolatry at Babel (Heb from balal, to confound, from which Eng "babble" is derived) and the confusion of men's languages (cf. Gen 11:7, 9).

Third, the city of Babylon was the seat of a great empire, dominating the ancient world from the fall of the Assyrian Empire with the capture of Nineveh in 612 B.C. until the demise of the Babylonian Empire through the capture of Babylon by Cyrus of Persia in 536 B.C. The city continued until about A.D. 100 (cf. ZPEB, I, pp. 439-448, art. by D. J. Wiseman). Today there are a number of cities, like Hilla, which have utilized the sun-dried and kiln-baked bricks of the ancient city to build new walls, houses, and dams (cf. Isa 13:19-22; Jer 50:23-26; 51:24-26; Wycliffe Bible Encyclopedia, I, pp. 187-190, art. by F. E. Young).

Fourth, it is well-known how idolatrous Babylon has been; both biblical and secular sources leave no room for doubt in the matter.

Fifth, it must be kept in mind that Revelation 17-18 are not dealing with literal, historical Babylon, so that the question of the rebuilding of a future Babylon is irrelevant in the interpretation of these chapters. Proof is forthcoming from verse 9 (Babylon was situated in a plain, not on seven mountains); 18:24 (such a wide range could not be true of literal Babylon); and especially verses 5 and 7 (MYSTERY, which indicates something hitherto not made known, but now revealed, cf., Rom 16:25-26; Eph 3:4-7. The import of the word is that a sense other than literal is to be understood; cf. 11:8 where Gr pneumatikōs is translated spiritually in the AV and “mystically” in the NASB).

CHAPTER 17

AND there came one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither; I will shew unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters:

2 With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

3 So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication:

5 And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS

1. Her position. 17:1.

17:1. John the apostle/prophet is invited by one of the seven angels, which had the seven vials (bowl judgments), to witness the judgment of (1) the great whore and (2) her position (that sitteth upon many waters). The reader is not left to his own resources in the interpretation of this important chapter, but he must scrutinize every clue given. Harlotry is amply explained in passages of the Old and New Testament (cf. Ezk 16:15; Hos 1-3; Jas 4:4; II Pet 2:14). Both adultery and harlotry are sins of physical immorality which are made to represent spiritual defecation and apostasy. Wherein her harlotry consists is explained in verses 4-6 of this chapter and in 18:3-5, among other passages. The many waters upon which she sits are interpreted explicitly (stated in vs. 15) as peoples and nations.

2. Her sin. 17:2.

2. Her dominant position over the nations could be political or spiritual. Those interpreters who believe the domination is political identify the harlot as the Roman Empire. Those expositors who consider the rule and subjugation are spiritual/religious, among whom the present writer is one, identify her as a corrupted papal Rome, with the inclusion under her hegemony of all systems and sects which are basically anti-Christian, not excluding apostate Christendom. So grievous were her acts of immorality (mentioned twice in this verse) that the results are likened to a drunken stupor.

3. Her seat on the scarlet beast. 17:3.

3. In verse 1 the position of the harlot was described in its wide scope, all nations and peoples; here she is seen sitting (dominating and domineering) upon a scarlet-colored beast. Is the harlot the same person as this woman? Context and logic demand an affirmative reply. The meaning of her riding the scarlet beast, replete with names of blasphemy, and having seven heads and ten horns, is that the religious system is controlling and subjugating the political power (cf. 13:1 for the connection with the beast from the sea). In short, at Rome the political power is under the absolute sway of the religious system. This was revealed supernaturally to John by the inditing Spirit. The scarlet color indicates the glory and splendor of the political power, but it cannot hinder the suppressive control of the religious leaders.

4. Her clothing. 17:4.

4. Some six elements are introduced to demonstrate the wealth, luxury, and extravagance of the harlot. But all is utilized toward the one end—her uncleanness and immorality (cf. 18: 9-19 for a picture of extensive wealth). The golden cup here is related to the enticements spoken of in verse 2.

5. Her name. 17:5.

5. There is no mistaking her identity, for her name is written upon her forehead. Roman harlots in their brazenness wore a label with their names on their foreheads (cf. R. H. Charles, op.

AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

6 And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

cit., II, p. 65). The name contains a mystery, a disclosed secret for this time. Her widespread influence is underscored by the repeated references to her greatness. She is the source of godlessness and idolatrous practices throughout the world (cf. for a lengthy sketch, H. A. Ironside, op. cit., pp. 285-302). In the Greek text of the United Bible Societies her name is in normal lower case except for the B in "Babylon"; AV, ASV, NASB, and NIV use the upper case. What is the intended meaning of this verse? It is stating that literal Babylon of old is typical, symbolical of religious Babylon (cf. Jer 50:38; 51:7). For a parallel usage, see 11:8 of Revelation. MYSTERY, BABYLON is in fact the mystery of iniquity in its final form (cf. II Thess 2:7).

6. Her bloodthirstiness. 17:6.

6. To this point one may feel that the harlot system is guilty of atrocities in the moral and spiritual realms alone. But she is culpable of much more. The blood of the saints and witnesses for Christ has stained her hands. In 18:24, the climax of the two chapters on Babylon, she is again charged with being drunken with the blood of the saints who have been martyred on earth. Thus, the harlot cannot be literal Babylon nor papal Rome alone; it must comprehend all godless systems, consummating at last in this hideous figure. Here it is professing Christendom with her motley followers persecuting and slaying the saints of God; it is not now pagan emperors as in the days of the early Christian centuries. No wonder John was amazed. He was astonished that the professing church of his day could become so degenerate in a coming day.

7. The mystery of the woman. 17:7.

7. What the Apostle John saw still needed to be explained to him in its details. Since the disclosure was granted him, not to perplex but to instruct him, the angel (cf. vs. 1) promises to clarify the mystery of the woman, and of the beast.

8. Identity of the beast. 17:8-13.

8. There is a consensus among interpreters that the beast (the same as 13:1) is the Roman Empire: its historic appearance, its long disappearance, and its future reappearance. As to its motivation in reappearing, it will come from the bottomless pit, devilish empowering, and finally find its end in perdition. The ancient Roman Empire was destroyed in its imperial form in John's time in A.D. 476. That political power is not in existence today. But Satan will see that it is revived to fulfill his purpose. Notice that, as to his human origin, the beast is from the nations (cf. 13:10); but as to its supporting power, it is a satanic revival. Such a resurrection of the old Roman Empire, almost endlessly scoffed at by unbelievers and even many believers, will amaze the earth-dwellers, who are plainly stated to be unbelievers. John wondered (vs. 6); the world of a coming day also shall wonder.

9. It is immediately stated that it takes God's wisdom to understand the disclosure. The seven mountains (or hills) are proof that mystical Babylon cannot be ancient, literal Babylon, which was situated in a plain and not on mountains. However, it is known that Rome is built on seven hills (e.g., the Quirinal, Capitoline, Palatine); classical writers familiarly spoke of "the city of seven hills" (cf. Charles, op. cit., II, p. 69).

10. If there has been a variety of views to this point, it has surely been increased to confusion in verses 10-11. Who are the seven kings? The text plainly states that five are past, one is present, and the last is future. R. H. Charles (op. cit., II, p. 69; followed by Barclay, op. cit., p. 181 et al) names them as Augustus, Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, and Nero, then Vespas-sian, and finally Titus. The reign of the last is held to be a short one, thus fulfilling the text. However, much discussion has been expended on the state of the original manuscript and a Nero redivivus (resurrected) for 17:8, 11, 14. It is poor exegesis to find fault with the condition of the original Greek when the interpretation does not fit the exigencies of the case. History will verify that in Roman rule six types of government are to be found: kings, consuls, dictators, decemvirs, and military tribunes; the sixth is the imperial form, which was in existence when John was on Patmos. The seventh type is the Roman Empire under a new head (cf. 13:1). This government will have ten kingdoms (cf. Dan 2 and 7), never equalled before and all subject to the beast (cf. Gaebelein, in loco; also Ottman, pp. 309-311), whose tenure of office will be brief.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition.

12 And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 And he saith unto me, The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

17 For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

11. The human revival of the empire (cf. 13:1) in the Tribulation Period will be followed by the hellish revival (cf. vs. 8), which is so complete in itself as to be called an eighth feature (eight is the number of resurrection). There will be an organic connection between the last two stages of the Roman Beast in his sovereignty. He will be one of the seven, but distinct enough to be considered the eighth (cf. Dan 7:7-8, 23-26).

12. The ten kings kingdom (cf. 13:1) is the form in which the Roman Empire will be revived. It has never existed thus before (cf. Dan chs. 2 and 7). Verses 10 and 12 both stress the shortness of this rule: a short space and for one hour. The precise time has been given earlier in the book more than once.

13. The confederated kings of the revived Roman Empire will have one mind and purpose: total subservience to the Roman Beast.

9. The victory of the Lamb. 17:14-18.

14. What is the goal of the confederated powers? Nothing less than war with the Lamb. Recall the war in heaven between Michael and his angels (cf. 12:7ff.) and the dragon and his angels—quite an unequal combat. But here the balance of power is infinitely against the ungodly armies. The Lamb shall overcome them . . . and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful. The issue is never in doubt; it is victory for the Lamb and His redeemed (not angels) in heaven, as can be discerned from the three adjectives that conclude the verse. Notice the honorific, well-deserved title of the Lamb. Here, by anticipation, is another preview of Armageddon, yet to be fully set forth in 19:14-21.

15. Peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues. In an apocalyptic book with rich symbolism and a multiplicity of participants, there is need for occasional explanation; so this verse identifies the waters of verse 1.

16. Here illumination is given concerning the beast and his underlings who were dominated by the apostate system (vs. 3). In some way not stated, the subservient ones turn the tables and vent their hatred against the harlot. So thoroughgoing will their judgment on her be, that it must be expressed by four concepts: desolation, nakedness, consumption (cannibalism), and burning (cf. with the fate of Jezebel of old, II Kgs 9:30-37).

17. Overruling all the feelings of the enemies of the harlot, it will ultimately be God who directs them to execute His judgment on her. All He has given in the prophetic word shall be fulfilled.

18. The woman of this verse is the same as the one in verse 16, and indeed throughout the chapter. This verse is not an unnecessary addendum to the chapter. It reveals (1) that the woman (harlot), though a colossal system of apostasy and idolatry, is also to be thought of in terms of that great city of her headquarters, namely, Rome; and (2) that her reign is worldwide (over the kings of the earth).

B. Fall of Babylon. 18:1-24.

This chapter carries on the subject of God's judgment on Babylon. Strangely enough, some writers have understood chapter 17 to speak of one person and system, and chapter 18 to deal with a totally different individual. The Scriptures use multiple figures, and the careful student will have sufficient clues to come to the proper understanding of each passage. Since the church is the Bride of Christ and a city, the New Jerusalem (cf. 21:9-10), there is no valid reason to deny that the harlot Babylon is a city (cf. 18:10). It is proper to think of Babylon in chapter 17 as a vast religious (ecclesiastical) system (cf. vss. 2, 4, 6), and also in chapter 18 as a huge interlocking commercial system (cf. vss. 3, 11-17). The present chapter pictures the doom of so-called Christian civilization in its social and commercial aspects. Civilization ever since the time of Cain has followed a path apart from God. See Genesis 4:16-24: cities, property, music, skilled art, polygamy, violence, and murder (cf. W. R. Newell, op. cit., pp. 281-285, for his masterful treatment of "The Character of Commerce" and his inclusion of the equally able, extended quotation from J. A. Seiss, The Apocalypse). Since the Hebrew ephah is emblematic of commerce, compare Zechariah 5:5-11 (esp. vs. 11: "in the land of Shinar") with the present chapter in the Revelation.

CHAPTER 18

AND after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory.

1. The glorious angel. 18:1.

1. Although this angel is introduced by the general word another, he is not one connected with the bowls of wrath mentioned in 17:1. Two features indicate his importance: (1) great power (there are degrees of authority among the angels), and (2) the ability to illuminate the earth . . . with his glory. The strong probability is that Christ is meant here as in 8:3 and 10:1. In the first reference He is the Angel-Priest; in the second He is the Angel-Redeemer; here He is the Angel-Avenger of His own.

2 And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.

2. Babylon's fall realized. 18:2.

2. Babylon the great is fallen. In 14:8 the announcement of the fall of Babylon was prophetic; similarly, in 16:19 the statement was brief and anticipatory. But here God's purpose concerning her is actualized. True, in chapter 17 Babylon's doom is brought about by the ten kingdoms and the Roman Beast (the political power); here, her downfall is seen as issuing directly from Christ. Surely, there is no discrepancy here; for 17:17 clearly states God's sovereign, righteous employment of the human factors in accomplishing His purpose. Just as idolatry came into the human sphere in Genesis 11 with Babylon of old (there is no record of idolatry before the flood of Noah), so it will have its hideous, unclean, hateful consummation in the Babylonish system of the future. The hold of every foul spirit, and a cage. All Satan's evil agencies will congregate in her. There will be no freedom there, as words used for "prison" are mentioned twice (NASB). It is a veritable cesspool of corruption.

3 For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies.

3. Babylon's guilt. 18:3.

3. All nations. Again, the universality of her sway is underscored as in 17:1, 2, 15, 18. All the nations are pointed out here as the subjects of her deceptions and seductions. Godless religion knows how to capture the attention of the unwary world by display, ritual, easy means of redemption, and vast amounts of wealth. The kings of the earth referred to now are not those included in the ten kingdom confederation; these kings are outside that conglomerate. An additional element is introduced by the merchants (Gr emporoi, to which the Eng emporium is related) of the earth, and their riches and wealth are set forth (along with sensuality). There is a commercial side to MYSTERY, BABYLON.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

5 For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works: in the cup which she hath filled fill to her double.

7 How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

9 And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning.

10 Standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas that great city Babylon, that mighty city! for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more:

12 The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble.

13 And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men.

14 And the fruits that thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all.

15 The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall

4. Call to flee the doomed city. 18:4-8.

4-5. The voice now is not that of the angel of verse 1. It is directed to God's people. Before judgment falls on the wicked (cf. Noah and his family, Gen 6:13-22; Lot and his daughters, Gen 19:12-22; and, as has been shown in this book, the church in the Rapture before the Tribulation Period, 4:1ff.), God mercifully warns His own in order to deliver them from the coming catastrophe. Thus, as far as the apostate system is concerned, the call is applicable at all times (cf. Heb 13:13). It will be all the more applicable in the time under consideration in this chapter. In short, both believing Jews and Gentiles will heed the warning and will escape the burning destruction.

Ancient, literal Babylon wanted to build a "tower" (ziggurat for their gods), as stated in Genesis 11:4. Here her mystical counterpart piled up her sins . . . unto heaven, an affront to the thrice holy God of heaven and earth. While it is indicated that God hath remembered her iniquities, it is not that He had forgotten them previously. It is the biblical way of stating that the hour of reckoning and judgment had arrived.

6-8. Double unto her double according to her works. Because Babylon's sins have accumulated over so long a period of time, and she has been impervious over the centuries to God's loving entreaties to repent, the Mosaic law of recompense in kind is doubled (cf. Ex 21:23-25). In the light of I Corinthians 6:2, the summons in verses 6-7 could well be addressed to the church. The root of Babylon's degeneration was her pride, self-security, godlessness, and glorification of wealth and luxury, all directed toward self-exaltation. The Lord God in His omnipotence will be her Judge (cf. Isa 47:9-11). The visitation is detailed in five particulars: plagues, . . . death and mourning, and famine; and . . . fire. All this will come upon her in one day.

5. The mourning of kings and merchants. 18:9-20.

9-10. In the verses under consideration (vss. 9-20), weeping and mourning are repeated as a theme in a sonata. First, the kings of the earth, who have the most to lose in any economic or commercial collapse, shall bewail . . . and lament inconsolably over the torment and demise of the wicked system, which has interlocking interests throughout the civilized world. They cry out woe upon the great and strong city, whose judgment has overtaken her. The one day of verse 8 is now one hour, a clear indication that mathematical precision is not intended. It will be in a very short time. Fair-weather friends that they are, the kings bewail Babylon's calamity, but stand at a distance lest they become involved in her misery and agony.

11-17a. The merchants, who are directly involved in day-by-day transactions with her, mourn over the economic collapse of that vast system with its many commercial ramifications. The cargoes include some twenty-eight distinct items. Here there is a combination of the religious with the commercial, for it begins with gold and ends with human lives (vs. 14). The list includes costly ornaments, costly raiment, costly furniture, costly perfumes, costly food, costly equipages, and men's souls and bodies (cf. W. Pettingill, The Unveiling of Jesus Christ, p. 80). The wealth of the world will be thrown into confusion and hopeless collapse.

REVELATION 18:16

stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing.

16 And saying, Alas, alas that great city, that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls!

17 For in one hour so great riches is come to nought. And every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off, 18 And cried when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, What city is like unto this great city!

19 And they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! for in one hour is she made desolate.

20 Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her.

21 And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.

22 And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee;

23 And the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth; for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived.

24 And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.

17b-19. Moreover, the fall of commercial Babylon has serious consequences for maritime projects, involving shipmasters, sailors, and passengers. All will be crippled in one hour (cf. vss. 17, 19). The losses will be irretrievable.

20. Rejoice over her, thou heaven. What a change is now before the reader. The scene is shifted to heaven and God's perspective. The dwellers there—"saints and apostles and prophets" (NASB), believers of every station—are summoned to rejoicing. Earth mourns, but heaven rejoices (cf. 19:1-6). This reveals how out of tune with heaven earth dwellers can be. When on their pilgrimage on earth, the saints suffered grievously at the hands of the apostate system; but now, in their hour of vindication, they exult in God's justice.

6. The finality of her doom. 18:21-23.

21-23. Her ruin is final, complete, and irreversible. The symbolism in verse 21 is related to Jeremiah 51:63-64, which bears out the impossibility of recovery from this judgment. Along with the passing of the city, there will be an end of music, crafts, housekeeping (sound of a millstone), illumination, and the joys of marriage. The cause of it all is her deception of all the nations with her religious sorcery, an activity promoted by demons and Satan. Included is the entire system of ungodliness from the beginning of man's sojourn on earth.

7. The reason for her fall. 18:24.

24. Any pity or compassion on her is misspent and misdirected, for she is worthy of all the misery and judgment God pours out on her. She is guilty of the blood of martyred prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth. This inclusive statement shows that more than one apostate organization is meant; it involves the totality of all of them, from man's appearance on earth until the coming of the Son of man to earth.

XIII. THE SUPPER OF THE LAMB AND THE SUPPER OF GOD. 19:1-21.

The events toward which the book of Revelation has steadily been leading are recorded here. Until the usurper on earth (the harlot) is judged, the bride (the church) is not made manifest. The harlot and the bride do not occupy the scene of action at the same time.

A. Alleluias in Heaven. 19:1-6.

19:1-2. It is after the doom of mystical Babylon (after these things—see the same Gr wording in 4:1), fully detailed in chapters 17-18, that the invitation to rejoice in 18:20 can be fulfilled. Those participating are indicated only as much people (a great

CHAPTER 19

AND after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia; Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God:

2 For true and righteous are his judgments: for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand.

3 And again they said, Alleluia. And her smoke rose up for ever and ever.

4 And the four and twenty elders and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen; Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, both small and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

multitude in vs. 6). There is no profit in seeking to particularize here, when the designation is so broad. It is all the redeemed in heaven, including the twenty-four elders and the four living creatures (vs. 4). The rejoicing begins with the word Alleluia, which occurs four times in this chapter (vss. 1, 3, 4, 6). It is a transliterated (not translated) Hebrew word, found no other place in the New Testament. In fact, even in the Old Testament, especially in the book of Psalms, it is correctly translated "Praise the Lord!" It is thus interesting that four times in the Revelation the Hebrew word (actually two words) should be found. It is indeed a beautiful word known worldwide, which needs no translation. Augustine said that both the feeling and saying of the word incorporate all the blessedness of heaven (cf. J. A. Seiss, in loco). Earth knows much of blasphemy and vile vituperation against God and His blessed Name, but heaven gloriously rings with His praises. Three attributes of God are singled out for acclamation: Salvation, and glory, and honor. W. Barclay has well stated: "Each of these three great attributes of God should awaken its own response in the heart of man, and these responses taken together constitute real praise. The salvation of God should awaken the gratitude of man. The glory of God should awaken the reverence of man. The power of God is always exercised in the love of God, and should, therefore, awaken the trust of man. Gratitude, reverence, trust—these are the constituent elements of real praise" (op. cit., II, p. 218).

The attributes of truth and righteousness have been clearly witnessed in the judgment of the great harlot. The latter part of verse 2 could well apply to the martyrs, though the language is couched in the third person.

3. Apparently, the same company utter the second Alleluia. They give praise for the finality, the completeness, and eternal character of Babylon's judgment.

4. The reader is here immediately reminded of those who worship and praise God in chapter 4. They join the heavenly Alleluia chorus.

5. With so much praise and adoration filling the scene, one would not expect further summons to praise and extol God. But even after the third Alleluia, it must be stressed that God is worthy of nothing less than eternal praise. All God's bond servants, of whatever rank or position, both small and great, are included in the invitation to praise Him; for the word of invitation comes from the seat of God's government.

6. With this verse a crescendo appears to be reached, as the wording indicates. In his oratorio of "The Messiah," Handel has correctly caught the climax: "Hallelujah! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." This is the hour for which the church has prayed and longed, and all creation has groaned (cf. Rom 8:18-23). Before Christ assumes His rightful throne on earth, Babylon must be judged on earth and His marriage celebrated in heaven. The first is past (chs. 17-18); the second follows here. What was stated by way of anticipation in 11:15 is now realized.

B. The Marriage of the Lamb. 19:7-10.

Of all the provisions of God for man's well-being and joy on earth, marriage, God's first social institution, ranks second only to that of salvation. Both Old and New Testament give ample evidence of the importance of this symbolism. Hosea spoke of it from a traumatic experience in his own life (cf. Hos 2:19-20); Isaiah spoke glowingly of it (cf. Isa 54:5); Jeremiah dwelt on the theme (cf. Jer 3:14; 31:31-32); and Ezekiel portrayed it with fullness (cf. Ezk 16). The New Testament speaks of the marriage feast (cf. Mt 22:2), the bridal chamber and wedding garment (cf. Mt 22:10-11), the sons of the bridal chamber (cf. Mk 2:19), the bridegroom (cf. Mt 25:1; Mk 2:19), and the friends of the bridegroom (cf. Jn 3:29). Paul writes of the church as the 7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready.

8 And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.

9 And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God.

10 And I fell at his feet to worship him. And he said unto me, See thou do it not: I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus: worship God: for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

11 And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war.

betrothed virgin of Christ (cf. II Cor 11:2) and of the pattern of the relationship between husband and wife (cf. Eph 5:21-33; also Barclay, The Revelation of John, pp. 222-223).

7. The wording of verse 7 is unusual and must not be overlooked. In normal parlance the wedding is spoken of as the marriage of the bride, but here it is the marriage of the Lamb. And rightly so, for the chief joy is His. It takes place in heaven, and no details are given. Care is to be exercised in speaking of the relationship of Israel and the church with reference to marriage, so that biblical norms are not violated. Israel is the unfaithful, yet to be reclaimed, wife of the Lord in the Old Testament; the church is the bride of Christ the Lamb in the New Testament. Once the wife or bride is mentioned, there is no further reference in the book to elders as in verse 4.

8. For this glorious occasion the bride of necessity had to make herself ready. The preparation includes: (1) acceptance of the marriage offer of the Lamb, which is regeneration; (2) the desire to be properly clothed for the wedding; (3) a willingness to receive what is given her for the joyous event. When the bride clothes herself, it is with the finest of apparel. Her basic clothing is the garment of salvation, which she received at her acceptance of the Lamb's gracious offer of marriage (cf. Isa 61:10). Now, in addition to the initial clothing, she has granted to her (still all of grace) fine linen, clean and white. It is identified as the righteous acts (Gr is plural, dikaiōmata) of the saints. How has she obtained these? It is inescapable that the judgment seat of Christ has already been held in order to grant rewards to the saints for faithful service to Christ (cf. II Cor 5:10). What a recognition day that will be!

9. But another important element of every wedding is the guests, so John is instructed to indicate Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. These are the friends of the Bridegroom (cf. Jn 3:29); the guests are seen in another figure as the virgins, the companions of the bride (cf. Ps 45:9, 14). They are probably all Old Testament saints. All others than the church are the guests at the marriage supper. Lest some reader consider these words to be too good to be true, the mediating angel (cf. 1:1) informs the apostle that the words are sure and certain; they come from God.

10. I fell at his feet to worship him. The disclosure of truth was so marvelous, and perhaps the appearance of the angel was so striking, that John was moved to worship at his feet. When John did this at Christ's feet (cf. 1:17), he received no rebuke, but was rather delivered from fear. But in this verse, and in 22:8-9, the apostle is forbidden such worship; for no creature in heaven, on earth, or under the earth is permitted to receive man's worship. Men may receive honor and respect (cf. Rom 12:10; 13:7), but no creature may receive worship. Angels are servants on the basis of creation; believers are servants on the basis of redemption. All homage and worship belong to Jesus, to whom all prophecy points. The last sentence in verse 10 is one of the most important in all Scripture. For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. Plainly stated, it declares that the witness and testimony that are borne to Jesus are the motivating and underlying purpose of all prophecy. Prophecy is meant to convey an indispensable witness to Jesus.

C. The Visible Coming of Christ. 19:11-16.

11. And I saw heaven opened. Now heaven is opened to the gaze of John; he had seen it open several times before (cf. 4:1 et al), but never on such a sight as this (cf. Acts 1:11; esp. Rev 1:7). Here John sees the One with dyed garments from Bozrah of Isaiah's prophecy, the Righteous Branch and King of Jeremiah's prediction, the returning Shekinah Glory of Ezekiel's foretelling, the Stone cut out without hands of Daniel's announcement, the Lord coming with His saints of Zechariah's 12 His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crowns; and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself.

13 And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called The Word of God.

14 And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean.

15 And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

16 And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

17 And I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God; prophecy, and the appearing of the Son of Man of the Saviour's own prophecy (cf. Mt 24:29, 30). The white horse symbolizes victory and triumph. He is Faithful and True in His character and every deed. Indeed, He is the mighty Warrior who will right the world's every ill (cf. Acts 17:31). He doth judge and make war under the same principle, that is, righteousness.

12. The description of His glorious Person continues. That His eyes were as a flame of fire indicates penetrating scrutinizing omniscience. On that blessed head, once crowned at Calvary for sinful men, were many crowns. His is supreme authority. Saints have crowns; He has many crowns. The Roman beast (cf. 13:1) has crowns also, but only because he assumes absolute authority. But how can one head have many crowns? They are in tiers, one above another, indicating highest majesty and authority. Many things have been divulged in the Apocalypse so far, and more will follow to the end of the book; but there are certain elements which must remain hidden from man (cf. Deut 29:29). From scriptural usage it is known that the name written indicates His own essential glory, which expresses the fullness of His divine nature.

13. The Redeemer does not come now to save, but to judge. A vesture dipped in blood points to the activity in Isaiah 63:1-6 (see vs. 15). The judgment of Christ will be exercised to the full. His name is called The Word of God and shows that He is the full expression (as a word is of the thought in the mind) of God, but now in judgment (cf. II Thess 1:7-10).

14. Who are the armies . . . upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean? Good men differ as to their identity. All are agreed that they are believers, redeemed ones; some even include the angels. It appears that they are, first, the church, second, the Tribulation saints, then the Old Testament saints. Jude 14-15 will then be fulfilled.

15. The description continues, not merely to fill out the portrait, but to reveal the activity with which the Lord of glory is occupied. The sharp sword issuing from His mouth is undoubtedly the Word of God (cf. Isa 11:4; Heb 4:12), but specifically in judgment. The nations, the objects of His rule, will be ruled with a rod of iron (cf. Ps 2:9; Rev 12:5). The rule will be stern and inflexible, but always absolutely righteous. He has ample power to implement His every command. Besides the mention of the sword and rod of iron, there is now the figure of the winepress. Again, this is the figure of the vintage (cf. 14:19-20; Isa 63:1-6).

16. In addition to the two names connected with the returning Lord Jesus (cf. vss. 12-13), there is another on his vesture and on his thigh. KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS. It has been introduced already in 17:14, but in reverse order. It is His full majestic name in His glorious position relative to the earth, visible for all to read. Such a title was arrogantly assumed by men in the ancient Near East. Conquering kings allowed their subjugated, royal enemies to retain their former title in order to convey the idea that they, the victorious ones, were the highest and supreme above all. To be sure, this was empty boasting, but not so with the conquering Christ.

D. The Supper of God: Armageddon. 19:17-19.

17. Actually, the picture of Armageddon continues on through verse 21, but the account narrows down in verses 20-21 to the two principal offenders of the time, the beast and the false prophet. Although the record is not an extended one, it is the last treatment of the subject of Armageddon, the former two references (cf. 14:18-20 and 16:13-16) being anticipatory and on the whole general. One must not expect a recital of a war such as is found in extra-biblical works, because the objective in Scripture is quite different. The details of the war are given under the figure of a supper in contrast to the marriage supper of the 18 That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.

19 And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.

20 And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.

21 And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh.

Lamb. The invitation is addressed to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven. The vultures remind of Matthew 24:27-28, as well as Isaiah 34:2-6.

18. Notice the inclusiveness of those who are involved in the conflict: kings, . . . captains, . . . mighty men, . . . horses, . . . them that sit on them, . . . all men, both free and bond, both small and great. Five times the word flesh is found in this verse; a vast feast of carrion is envisaged. No wonder; for it takes place on an ideal battlefield, the most famous in the world. Among the battles fought there are: Sisera against Barak (cf. Jud 5:19-20); Gideon against the Midianites (cf. Jud 6:33-34); Saul and Jonathan against the Philistines (cf. I Sam 31; King Josiah against Pharaoh Nechoh (cf. II Kgs 23:20); on the western border Elijah contended with the prophets of Baal (I Kgs 18:39-40); Ahaziah died there (cf. II Kgs 9:27). It has been the scene of conflict from ancient times to modern days. The relevant Scripture passages are Psalm 2:1-3; Ezekiel 38-39; Joel 3:9-16; Zechariah 12:1-9; 14:1-4, besides others in the Old and New Testament. In the Revelation, 9:13-18; 14:14-20; and 16:12-14, 16 have already prepared the way for the final treatment in this chapter. In view of the foregoing comments, it is difficult to understand how an able scholar can state: "Since Megiddo is not associated with any eschatological expectation, it is possible some corruption underlies this word" (cf. R. H. Charles, op. cit., II, p. 50). Another writer feels that "such a Mount does not appear elsewhere in Scripture or in other ancient literature" (cf. R. C. H. Lenski, op. cit., p. 479). Yet another comments: "Har-Magedon is the symbol of every battle in which, when the need is greatest and believers are oppressed, the Lord reveals his power in the interest of his distressed people and defeats the enemy" (cf. W. Hendriksen, op. cit., p. 96). Some men are driven to such extremes when they forsake the literal interpretation of prophecy.

19. The Roman political leader (cf. 13:1) musters his following among the kings of the earth, with their respective armies to do battle with Christ and His followers (cf. vs. 14-15). There will be no need for the redeemed to fight. The encounter will be both short and decisive.

E. Judgment of the Beast and False Prophet. 19:20-21.

20-21. Now the chief antagonists, the beast (cf. 13:1) and the false prophet (cf. 13:11), are seized and thrown alive into the lake of fire. The false prophet (the Antichrist, religious leader) is singled out, because it was he who worked miracles to seduce and deceive men (cf. II Thess 2:1-12). It is remarkable that these two ungodly leaders find their final place of judgment even before Satan does (cf. 20:7-10). Their followers are slain by the sword of Christ; notice the wording of II Thessalonians 2:8: ". . . the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth" to learn the literalness of these events. The final word is that the supper of God filled the appetite of all the fowls. Horrendous carnage it will be.

XIV. THE MILLENNIAL REIGN OF CHRIST. 20:1-15.

This chapter serves as a Continental Divide of Scripture. If one follows a single, consistent hermeneutical principle in interpreting Scripture, it will lead him to one perspective on this chapter. If, on the other hand, one should employ a dual hermeneutic (one for non-prophetic portions of Scripture and another for the prophetic parts), it will carry him to a totally different interpretation of this pivotal chapter. Premillennialists (also known as chiliasts from the Greek word for 1000) use a single interpretive principle and find in this vital chapter that, after the visible coming of Christ in chapter 19, He will set up His earthly kingdom and reign with His saints for a thousand years, while Satan, the Roman Beast, and the Antichrist are confined to the bottomless pit. Later, the evil trio are cast into the lake of fire to remain there forever. Amillennialists employ a dual hermeneutic in interpretation and find no earthly reign of Christ either predicted in the Old or New Testament or realized in a thousand-year kingdom. For them Satan was bound by Christ (contra I Pet 5:8) and is imprisoned throughout the church age. As to the two resurrections of chapter 20, one is said to be spiritual and the other literal and final. There is an admission on the part of some that in the early church the millennial view was dominant, if not general, because of the Jewish view of the messianic rule of the Son of God, fortified, they say, by the teaching of the apocalyptic works which arose between the Old and New Testament. But when Christian doctrine became more explicit, chiliasm was rejected. The fact is that chiliasm was dominant until Augustine rebelled against it and introduced his spiritualizing method of interpreting prophecy. For a full discussion of the question, see the present writer's Millennialism: The Two Major Views, Moody Press, 1980 and 1982.

CHAPTER 20

AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years,

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

A. The Binding of Satan. 20:1-3.

20:1-3. This chapter follows the events of the previous chapter. Though unseen by mortal eye, Satan has been on earth since 12:9, carrying on his blighting work. The angel is probably the Lord Jesus Christ, for He alone is a match for Satan (Michael is not, cf. Jude 9). The scene is admittedly symbolic (cf. 1:1), because a spirit being is not susceptible to treatment by keys and chains. The key is to lock, and the chain is to bind. In the last analysis, God has authority over the bottomless pit.

The purpose of the angel is to bind Satan for a thousand years. Dragon indicates cruelty; serpent speaks of guile; Devil indicates him as the tempter of man; and Satan indicates he is the adversary of Christ and His people. From verse 2-7 there are six mentions of 1000 years. If this number is symbolic, of what is it a symbol? It cannot mean that which is endless, because the Greek language, as well as the Hebrew, has ample means to convey endlessness without ambiguity.

Thrown into the abyss, Satan is incarcerated, so that he is unable to deceive the nations for the length of that period, namely, the Millennium. The sealing is for security, as elsewhere in Scripture. He is adequately curbed and restrained. What a boon to mankind is this! Deception has characterized Satan from Genesis 3 to the time now under consideration (cf. II Cor 4:3, 4). In God's purpose Satan will be loosed a little after the allotted time. Why? Simply, God would reveal to us that he has not changed his nature, and that man still is susceptible to his wiles and stratagems. The result of the loosing is indicated in verses 7-8.

B. The Resurrection and Reign of the Saints. 20:4-6.

4. What was seen in 11:15 by way of anticipation is here realized. It is understood that Christ will sit on His throne and reign as the legitimate Son of David, and that is clearly stated in the last clauses of this verse. Who are the occupants of the thrones? From the combined testimony of Scripture, they will be New Testament saints (cf. I Cor 6:2) who reign as the Queen of the King. Too, there will be Old Testament saints who will rule as vicereagents of the King and Queen (cf. Deut 28:1, 13; Mt 19:28). The martyred through the Tribulation Period, and those who resisted the idolatry worship of the beast, will also reign. These will come to life (only a literal, not spiritual, resurrection will meet the demands of the context, in which individuals have been beheaded) and reign with Christ for the Millennium.

5. The rest of the dead do not experience resurrection until the thousand years were finished. Thus, it is pointless and baseless to speak of a general resurrection in order to avoid the 6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 And shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Mā'gōg, to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

intervening period of 1000 years, as amillennialists do. The order of the resurrection can be gleaned from these Scriptures: I Corinthians 15:23-24; Revelation 20:4-6; Daniel 12:1-3; and Luke 20:34-36. The word first is found in verses 5 and 6. If this means there is but one resurrection, words are emptied of meaning. There are definite stages in the first resurrection; the chief one is Christ Himself (cf. I Cor 15:20).

6. Blessed and holy are all who have part in the first resurrection, i.e., of the righteous. Blessed tells of their condition; holy speaks of their character. They are priests and kings (cf. 1:6; I Pet 2:5), exactly as Christ combines the two offices (cf. Zech 6:13). The reign with Christ, prophesied in Old and New Testament alike, will endure a thousand years. Over these righteous ones the second death (the lake of fire, vs. 14) has no sway; it holds no terror for them through the all-sufficient work of the Saviour.

C. The Final Doom of Satan, the Beast, and the False Prophet. 20:7-10.

7. After the Millennium Satan shall be loosed from his imprisonment in the abyss. This loosing it is for the last exhibition of his venom and the last test of man.

8. After Christ's glorious mediatorial reign on earth for 1000 years, Satan stages a rebellion through his deceptions. Notice, first of all, it is on a universal scale, namely, the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth. How could this occur? It must be remembered that there will be procreation in the Millennium on the part of those who have entered the kingdom (cf. Mt 25:31-46) in unresurrected bodies; but their progeny will not be born redeemed any more than this has transpired at any time in the history of man (cf. Isa 65:20). Furthermore, many will give only feigned obedience to the ruling King (cf. Ps 66:3 in the NASB).

Are the Gog and Magog here the same as those of Ezekiel 38-39? Definitely not, for four reasons: (1) the chronological factor. The events of Ezekiel 38-39, take place before the Millennium in Israel's latter days (cf. the present writer's The Book of Ezekiel, Moody Press, 11th printing, 1982, pp. 218-239). The rebellion of Revelation 20 occurs after the Millennium. (2) The geographical factor. More than once Ezekiel clearly states that Gog and Magog come from the uttermost parts of the north of the Land of Promise. Here John explicitly locates the nations involved as coming from the four corners of the earth. (3) The actuating factor. It is true that Satan can be faulted for much of the ungodliness in the world, but there are also the elements of the flesh and the world (cf. Eph 2:1-3). It cannot be denied that Satan is behind the invasion of Ezekiel 38-39, but not in so clearly a stated manner as here. (4) The interpretive factor. The reader of the Apocalypse will certainly assent by this time that John uses common nouns, even proper nouns, in a symbolic manner. Witness the use of Jezebel (cf. 2:20), Sodom and Egypt (cf. 11:8), and Babylon (cf. the most extended use of symbolism in a name in chs. 17-18). Thus, the student of the Revelation need not be surprised to find the names Gog and Magog used symbolically here. (Cf. W. F. Arndt and F. W. Gingrich, A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, p. 167, col. 2.) Sad, indeed, it is that after such a benevolent and beneficent rule of the Lord of glory, there should be a following of Satan like the sand of the sea.

9. These nations will be banded together for one purpose and will press on toward one goal, namely, to destroy the capital city of the King, Jerusalem, and work havoc among His faithful subjects. God delights in Jerusalem and calls it the beloved city, because outside its walls the Son of God accomplished redemption for the world in the will of the Father, and then has reigned in righteousness in that city for 1000 years. The judgment of God with fire on the invaders is swift and final.

10 And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

10. Now the instigator to sin ever since the Garden of Eden is dealt with. His final doom is the lake of fire—unthinkable torment. It will be eternal and irreversible, because the beast and false prophet, who were cast into the lake of fire before the Millennium, are still there. They will be preserved in judgment, but not annihilated. There will be never-ending mental agony and physical suffering. Unbelievers scoff at the concept of anyone or anything being preserved in fire. The same God who placed consuming power in fire can, if He wills, counteract that power. He has done so in the past (cf. the Hebrew youths in the fiery furnace, Dan 3:27) and will do so in the future (cf. Mk 9:49). If the torment is forever, why are day and night introduced here? There will be no day or night in eternity according to our chronological reckoning; but this is the clearest way to convey it to our minds, which are accustomed to concepts of time and space.

D. The Great White Throne Judgment. 20:11-15.

Our amillennialist brethren, who are operating on a unitary principle of one covenant, one people of God, one resurrection, and one judgment, carry through this hermeneutic here also. For them, there will be the coming of Christ, a general resurrection, and a general judgment. Actually, the biblical doctrine of judgment is not so simplistic, if all the scriptural data are to be taken into account. True, the judgment in these verses is the final one; but it is not the only one. The Bible reveals seven distinct judgments: one past, one present, and five future. Because of the tyranny of time and space, the first six will be dealt with briefly, and the last one more fully. First, there is the judgment of the Cross. It was a judgment in two senses: (1) man's sins were judged at Calvary (cf. II Cor 5:21; Gal 3:13; Rom 8:1), and (2) Satan was judged there also (cf. Col 2:14, 15, with Jn 16:11). It is a judgment that is past and will never be repeated. Second, there is the judgment of the sinning believer (cf. I Cor 11:30-32), if he does not judge himself. The more often this judgment is experienced, the better. Third is the judgment of the believer's works (cf. 22:12; Rom 14:10; I Cor 3:10-19; 4:5; II Cor 5:10). This takes place at the Rapture (cf. II Tim 4:8) at the judgment seat (bēma) of Christ in heaven. It is for rewards or suffering loss (cf. I Cor 3:14-15). Fourth, there is the judgment upon Israel (cf. Ezk 20:33-38; Mt 24:9-10). It takes place after the Tribulation Period; those who continue to reject their Messiah will not enter the kingdom; those who have received Him will enter it (cf. Rom 11:26). Fifth, there will be a judgment of the nations (cf. Joel 3:11-16; Mt 25:31-46). It will occur after the Tribulation Period; it will be on the basis, as always, of acceptance or rejection of Christ, manifested in their treatment of the earthly brethren of our Lord. The righteous enter the kingdom and eternal life; the wicked are excluded from both. Sixth, this judgment will come upon fallen angels and Satan (cf. II Pet 2:4; Jude 6; Rev 20:10). Time and place are not specified for the angels; the beast and false prophet will be judged before the reign of Christ and Satan after the 1000 years. Because of their relentless rebellion against God, they will suffer eternal fire. The seventh judgment is now under consideration in 20:11-15. It is properly called The Great White Throne Judgment.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them.

11. This is the judgment of the wicked dead, distinct from all the previous ones just considered. It is described as great because it is the most awesome assize ever held. The characterization white has reference to the purity and holiness with which it will be conducted. The throne indicates that majestic authority is involved. The One who sits on the throne is the Lord Jesus Christ (cf. Jn 5:22, 27; II Tim 4:1). To underscore the gravity of 12 And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.

CHAPTER 21

AND I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

the proceedings, John states that the earth and the heaven fled away from His presence, and there was found no place for them. This does not mean the annihilation of the earth and heaven. It is rather that the Great White Throne Judgment will take place between the passing of the Millennial scene and the entrance on the new heaven and earth.

12. Stand before God. Where will the subjects of the judgment stand? They will be upheld by God in space. This is a deeply solemn scene that merges into eternity. The judgment is final and eternal; for all that are circumscribed, that is, earth and heaven, have passed away. The high and low of rank on earth will be there. The sinner is now brought face-to-face with God the Son, from whom he cannot escape. The distinctions of this verse are vital: notice that there are books . . . and another book. Could not the latter be included in the former? By no means, because both entities are defined. The book is the book of life, in which all who have trusted Christ are inscribed. Here it is introduced to show that the subjects of the judgment are unsaved. The books contain the record of their works (cf. vs. 12-13). Why is there any need to consult their works, if they are lost? It is intended to reveal the number and gravity of their sins to determine degrees of their punishment (cf. carefully Lk 12:47-48).

13. Even the unsaved who have died on the seas, whose bodies have never been recovered, will not be exempt from this august tribunal (cf. Jn 5:28, 29). Death (used here for the grave) gives up the bodies; hell gives up the souls. No one is said to escape or enter eternal bliss. All the unsaved will suffer their eternal doom (cf. 20:6).

14. Death and hell, brought into existence by man's sin, end where all sinners do, namely, the lake of fire. This means an actual, eternal separation from God in conscious, unceasing torment.

15. Whosoever. There is no indication that any individual at the Great White Throne ever escapes judgment. The cause of their final doom—not that they did not accumulate sufficient good deeds in the books—is that their names were not found written in the Lamb's book of life (cf. 3:5; 13:8; 21:27). This is all-inclusive, from Cain to the end of human history.

XV. THE NEW HEAVEN AND EARTH. 21:1-27.

A. Passing of the Old Heaven and Earth. 21:1.

21:1. Prophecy does not deal at length with the eternal state; therefore, it is difficult for any man to answer the many questions posed by those who long for details. Even Paul, who was caught up to the third heaven, which is the throne of God, was not permitted to divulge what he saw and heard (cf. II Cor 12:3-4). Prophecy carries the reader to the end of the Millennium. References to the eternal state are few: Isaiah 65:17; 66:22; I Corinthians 15:24-28; Ephesians 3:21; and II Peter 3:13, together with the disclosures here in chapters 21-22.

Verse 1 of this chapter is to be connected with 20:11 (cf. II Pet 3:13). Scripture does not teach the annihilation of the material universe. God annihilates nothing, let alone human beings, as some erroneously teach. Earth and heaven will be completely purified. During the Millennium the earth is renovated (cf. Isa 35:1ff.; Mt 19:28 ["regeneration" in this text has nothing to do with spiritual matters, but with the renovation of the earth]). Apparently, the new heaven will be the home of believers of this age; the new earth will be the residence of redeemed ones apart from the church. It is not to be expected that believers in these areas will not have constant communication and communion with each other. Both will be populated with redeemed, cleansed souls. Righteousness suffers now (the godly suffer, cf. II Tim 3:12); in the Millennium it will reign

(cf. Isa 11:9; 32:1); in the eternal state it will dwell (cf. II Pet 3:13). John indicates that there was no more sea. This will give so much more land space in the eternal earth for the peoples on earth.

2 And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

B. New Jerusalem. 21:2-7.

2. The holy city, new Jerusalem. In popular thinking, all mentions of Jerusalem in the Bible are thought to refer to the same city. This is not true. Multiplied references in Scripture do speak of the literal, earthly city, the one David made his capital. But there are other references that do not have that city in view at all. How is one to distinguish in these cases? The Spirit of God, Master of language that He is, gives the student definite clues. For instance, in Galatians 4 Paul writes of "Jerusalem which now is" (cf. vs. 25) and "Jerusalem which is above" (cf. vs. 26). He is not speaking of cities at all; symbolically, he is contrasting the principles of law and grace. The writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews speaks of Abraham's looking for a city whose architect is God (cf. Heb 11:10, 16); then he mentions (cf. Heb 12:22) "the heavenly Jerusalem," which is doubtless the one of 21:2, as will be shown below. There is a millennial Jerusalem predicted in Isaiah 2:1-4, to which all the nations will flow, a true confluence of peoples. But there is yet another Jerusalem designated as the new Jerusalem, with the added description that it is the holy city. Popular opinion equates the New Jerusalem with heaven; this is an error. The New Jerusalem comes down from heaven from God; even more, the city is called (vss. 9-10) the bride, the Lamb's wife. Why? Because she is its most prominent inhabitant. Thus, it is clear that when other than the literal city is intended, the Spirit adds qualifying and descriptive words to make this known. Recall that Babylon will be both a harlot (cf. ch. 17) and a city (cf. ch. 18). Apparently, The holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God in verse 10 is at the beginning of the Millennium; the coming down from God in verse 2 is at the end of the Millennium, extending into the eternal state. The church will be seen throughout all eternity as an adorned bride. The picture stresses the positional; because the New Jerusalem, somewhat in the way of a midway house, will be the meeting place of all the redeemed, as the city is suspended, from all appearances, above the millennial Jerusalem.

3 And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

3. The tabernacle of God is with men. God dwelling among men was the purpose of the tabernacle of old (cf. Ex 25:8); indeed, it was the object of the incarnation (cf. Jn 1:14), Immanuel (God with us) in the most universal and complete sense (cf. 7:15). A tabernacle suggests moving about; the saints will have access to all part of God's creation. Undoubtedly, there will be communication between the earthly, millennial Jerusalem and the mystical, or New, Jerusalem. God will dwell with men; there will be no change in the eternal state.

4 And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

4. All sin's effects will be obliterated (cf. 7:17). The eyes, called the living fountains of waters, will be dry forever.

5 And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for these words are true and faithful.

5. The One on the throne is the Father; for the kingdom has been delivered over to Him by the Son, the Mediator (cf. I Cor 15:24-28).

6 And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

6. I am the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. God is indeed the source and end of all glory (cf. Rom 11:36). He is the First (Alpha) and the Last (Omega). After their sin in Eden, Adam and Eve were prohibited from taking of the tree of life; here, all are invited to take of the water of life freely through the redemption of Christ. Since Christ thirsted on Calvary when dying for us no one will thirst in eternity. It is still a valid offer from God today.

REVELATION 21:7

7 He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.

9 And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife.

10 And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God,

11 Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal;

12 And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:

13 On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

7. The overcomer here, as in chapters 2-3, is the believer, the one who has drunk of the water of life. For him there is sonship with God forever.

C. The Portion of the Ungodly. 21:8.

8. For the unrepentant, who are designated under some eight categories, there will not be bliss, but burning in the lake of fire, the second death (cf. 20:6, 14). A believer may be called on to pass through one death, i.e., physical death (and if the Rapture intervenes, he will forego that death, cf. I Cor 15:51, 52); an unbeliever faces two deaths: physical death and the second death. Why are the cowardly and liars spoken of in two categories? The first are afraid to accept Christ and bear the ridicule of the world. The second are those who have denied their sin and need of Christ as Saviour.

D. The Wife of the Lamb 21:9.

9. It is gracious of God to allow one of the angels who was commissioned to pour out the most horrendous plagues earth has ever known, the privilege of inviting John to a special view of the bride, the Lamb's wife. For the remainder of the chapter a symbolic description of the bride in all her millennial glory will be presented. Her relationship to Christ continues on into the eternal ages. Because the millennial picture approximates heaven, many have equated them. This is an error, for there are some in the Millennium whose hearts have not been touched for God who will enlist under Satan's banner in his rebellion against Christ (cf. 20:8, 9) at the end of that glorious reign. Amillennialists see this age of grace merging into the age of glory at the coming of Christ. Premillennialists believe that the age of grace will be followed by the age of righteousness (where Christ will be vindicated in time as He was rejected in history), which will then merge into the age of glory.

E. Description of the New Jerusalem. 21:10-27.

1. Its origin. 21:10.

10. Mark that John is transported by the spirit to a great and high mountain, a vantage point where he can see the holy city, Jerusalem, in all her beauty and glory. It is wonderful to read of Jerusalem as a holy city; the prophets inveighed against her in centuries past, for she was just the opposite (cf. Isa 1:4, 15, 18, 21; 5:7). It is unmistakably stated that this city proceeds from the heavenly realm; it is out of heaven from God. However, it is not to be equated with heaven, as indicated above.

2. Its brilliance. 21:11.

11. Jasper stone. The description is given under the figure of precious stones, because (1) they are costly, and (2) they are durable. The Spirit uses language best adapted to our limited comprehension. The city will be brilliant and glorious.

3. Its wall. 21:12.

12. The wall indicates that all will be secure within the city, and it will be separate from all that is unlike it in holiness. Notice that the foundation of the church was laid in Israel.

4. Its gates. 21:13.

13. Gates were places of judgment. Here is the fulfillment of Matthew 19:28.

5. Its foundation stones. 21:14.

14. The world may forget, and has, that it was the twelve apostles who laid the foundation for the church upon the foundation Stone, Christ Himself (cf. Eph 2:20). But God never forgets.

15 And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolite; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

23 And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.

24 And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

25 And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there.

6. Its measurements. 21:15-17.

15-17. From the measurements given it is clear that the city is a cube 1,500 miles in each direction.

7. Its materials. 21:18-21.

18-21. The gold (cf. vs. 18, 21) speaks of divine glory, as in the tabernacle of old where the cherubim of gold were called the cherubim of glory. All the stones named are known for their value, beauty and enduring quality.

8. Its temple. 21:22.

22. Contrary to the long history of temples in Israel, there will be no temple in the New Jerusalem. Does this indicate an element of secularism? God forbid. Rather, it means there will be free access to God; it will be for all (recall that only priests could enter the sanctuary proper and that only the High Priest could enter the Holy of Holies, and that on one day a year). It will be immediate access, and it will be without barrier (witness the calamity that befell Uzziah of Judah when he tried to offer incense in the holy place; cf. II Chron 26:16-21).

9. Its illumination. 21:23.

23. God the Father and the Lamb will be the all-sufficient light for the city. Therefore, there will be no need of the sun, neither of the moon; the Lamb will meet every requirement. Remember that in the Temple, as in the tabernacle, there were three means of illumination. For the outer court, the illumination of the sun by day and the moon by night were ample. For the inner sanctuary, the candlesticks lighted all the furniture, because the light of sun and moon did not penetrate there. For the Holy of Holies, the Shekinah provided all; this typified the blessed light of the Lamb (cf. Jn 1:4, 9; 9:5).

10. The presence of the nations and their kings. 21:24.

24. The New Jerusalem, with the church, will be the center of the governments of the earth. There has never been a rule like it.

11. Continuous access. 21:25.

25. The gates of it shall not be shut. There will be unhindered access and no setting sun, but full noon always. Ever since Adam and Eve sinned, there has been a barrier to access. They could no longer enjoy the Garden of Eden. Even Adam feared communication with God and hid himself. When Israel accepted the yoke of the Law (cf. Ex 19), immediately they were not allowed access to Mount Sinai on pain of death. When the tabernacle, and later the Temple also, was constructed, God placed the symbol of His Presence (the Shekinah, lit., the Dwelling-Presence of God) in the innermost compartment, as far from sinful man as possible; and he could only come through 26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life.

CHAPTER 22

AND he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.

3 And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

4 And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads.

his representative, the High Priest, with the blood of an offering. Now, in the New Jerusalem all blockages to access are removed forever.

12. The glory and honor of the nations. 21:26.

26. This verse builds on the truth of verse 24. But notice its glory. In the worship of Israel no Gentile could enter into the holy precincts without serious repercussions. Remember the persecution Paul suffered when some inferred that he had brought a Gentile into the Temple (cf. Acts 21:22-29). But no barriers will be found in the New Jerusalem.

13. The absence of sin and presence of the redeemed. 21:27.

27. Sin, in all its hideous forms, will be entirely excluded. The never-ending beauties of the New Jerusalem are indescribable, but they are such because of the Lord Jesus and His presence there.

XVI. THE PARADISE OF GOD. 22:1-21.

Apparently, the scene is shifted from the New Jerusalem above the earth to heaven itself. This chapter reveals beautifully that what was lost in Genesis is regained in the Revelation, a true "Paradise Regained."

A. The River of the Water of Life. 22:1.

22:1. The pure river of water of life, flowing from the throne of God and of the Lamb, speaks of fullness of refreshment, life, and joy (cf. Ps 36:8). In Genesis, the tree of life was mentioned first; here, the river of life is referred to first. There are heavenly and earthly streams of blessing: earthly in Ezekiel 47:1 and Zechariah 14:8; heavenly in this passage. All comes from the seat of His blessed government.

B. The Tree of Life. 22:2.

2. Was there the tree of life. Satisfying fruit will be there in abundance; the saints will partake of it. Even the leaves will promote the sustained health of the nations.

C. The Removal of the Curse. 22:3a.

3a. The curse brought on the human family through the disobedience of Adam (cf. Gen 3:14-19; Rom 5:12) will be wiped out completely. It was paid for at Calvary.

D. The Throne of God and of the Lamb. 22:3b.

3b. There can be no curse where the throne of God and of the Lamb exist. These are spiritual irreconcilables of infinite proportions.

E. The Bliss of the Godly. 22:3c-4.

3c-4. God's servants shall serve him, an unsullied, glad-some, eternal service without failure or weariness and with fullness of joy and praise. And they shall see his face. Many question whether saints in heaven will see God's face. The Scripture here is plain; they assuredly will. Reread Exodus 24:9-11 (a remarkable vignette). Did not John the apostle lie on Christ's bosom at the Last Supper, hear His heart beat, and look into His face? (cf. Jn 13:23). Was it not this same beloved disciple that bore witness of what he had heard, had seen with his eyes, and had handled with his hands, even the Word of Life? (cf. 1 Jn 1:1). But, someone has said, mortal man cannot look upon the face of God. This can be true of man in his sinful state and in his condition before his resurrection. But, when he is glorified with the Saviour, it will be entirely different (cf. Rom 8:28-30). In eternity there will always be a difference between deity and redeemed humanity, but this truth does not preclude the "beatific vision," as it has been called. The name of God in their foreheads indicates public acknowledgement of belonging to Him, as well as conformity to His blessed nature.

F. The Absence of Darkness. 22:5a-5b.

5a-5b. How early in life does a child learn to fear darkness; in advanced age it appears again (cf. Eccl 12:1-5). For the believer, darkness will be banished forever. Darkness always flees in the presence of light (cf. Jn 1:5). God and Christ are the eternal light of the world.

G. The Saints' Reign. 22:5c.

5c. And they shall reign for ever and ever. The millennial reign and the eternal reign are united. Saints will never cease to reign, as long as there will be subjects (cf. Rom 5:17). Why do earthly reigns come to an end? They are terminated, either by injustices, fraud, ineptitude, or by death. None of these will be present when Christ the King reigns with His Bride. Why, then, should not the millennial phase of His reign merge into the eternal phase? Verily, it will!

H. The Validity of the Message. 22:6.

6. These sayings are faithful and true. In a sense, this text is a recapitulation of 1:1. If any questioner thinks these disclosures are too good to be authentic, let him now hear yet another confirmation of their reliability and truth.

I. The Coming of Christ. 22:7a.

7a. Behold, I come quickly. The soon-coming, without delay, of the Lord Jesus is stated three times in this chapter, in verses 7, 12, 20. This neatly ties in the end of the book with its beginning (cf. 1:3). After all, this is the dominant theme of the book: the coming revelation of the Lord Jesus (cf. 1:7).

J. The Blessedness of the Obedient. 22:7b.

7b. Blessed is he. Blessedness is promised to those who treasure, preserve, and live in the light of this prophetic book.

K. John's Reaction to the Revelation. 22:8-9.

1. His reception of the messages. 22:8a.
2. His worship of the interpreting angel. 22:8b.
3. The angel's warning and advice. 22:9.

8-9. Again, because of the surpassing wonder of the disclosures he has witnessed and heard, John seeks to worship the creature who mediated these truths to him. Worship of the creature (cf. 19:10), rather than the Creator, is never justified (cf. Rom 1:25). The more seemingly worthy the creature, the greater is the danger.

L. The Angel's Final Words. 22:10-19.

1. Book to remain unsealed. 22:10.
10. Seal not. Contrast these instructions with those of Daniel 12:4. In Daniel the time was far off; here it is near (cf. 1:3).
2. The irreversible states of the ungodly and godly. 22:11.

11. No one will be so foolish as to understand this verse as an invitation to pursue ungodliness. Actually, there are more exhortations to godliness in the text than the reverse. The passage states that character tends to become fixed and unchangeable. The common saying is true: "Sow a thought and reap an act. Sow an act and reap a habit. Sow a habit and reap a character. Sow a character and reap a destiny." As one is found in that day, so will he be eternally. Death or the coming of the Lord fixes one's character and eternal destiny.

6 And there shall be no night there: and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which shewed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God.

10 And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.

11 He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

12 And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.

13 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star.

17 And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

18 For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

20 He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

3. Christ's coming with His rewards. 22:12.

12. My reward is with me. For the saints, the rewards will come at the judgment seat of Christ. For the nations, they will come at the judgment of Matthew 25:31-46. For the wicked dead, they will come at the Great White Throne.

4. His eternal character. 22:13.

13. As though the intimate the blessed Trinity, there is a threefold declaration of the eternity of God.

5. The blessedness of the redeemed. 22:14.

14. The AV has unhappily utilized a Greek text here that is faulty and teaches what the rest of the Bible denies, that is, salvation by keeping the commandments. Rather, salvation comes by symbolically washing their robes in the blood of the Lamb (cf. 7:14).

6. The ungodly excluded. 22:15.

15. There is always a need to warn the unbelieving of the gravity of their condition. Those excluded are in the same company as the ones designated in 21:8.

7. The Authenticator of the book. 22:16.

16. Here is a reminder that the message of the book is for the churches; yet how they have neglected this very message! The root connects Christ with Israel and David (cf. Rom 1:3); the bright and morning star (cf. II Pet 1:19) links Him with the church. The Old Testament ends with Christ as the "Sun of righteousness" (cf. Mal 4:2) to "arise with healing in his wings" in millennial blessing; the New Testament closes with Him as the bright and morning star. He will come for His saints before He comes with them to reign, just as the morning star appears before the sun.

8. Invitation to the unsaved. 22:17.

17. The Spirit and the bride say, come. And let him that heareth say, Come. There are actually three invitations in this important text. The Bible will not close before an opportunity is given for the unsaved to trust Christ. The first two invitations are for the coming of the Lord, although they may be interpreted as a call from the Spirit and the church to the unsaved. Whoever will. The third is clearly for the sinner to come and partake of life in Christ.

9. Warnings against tampering with the prophecy. 22:18-19.

18-19. The message of the Bible is complete and needs no collaboration from anyone. Here is a most solemn warning, one which is true of all the Word of God (cf. Deut 12:32), but especially so here. What a rebuke to those who treat the message carelessly. There is too much at stake here.

M. The Testimony of Christ to His Coming. 22:20.

20. These things refers to the contents of the entire book; all the message is from Christ personally. He has promised to come quickly (cf. Heb 10:37). If the reckoning were on God's chronometer, hardly two days are gone (cf. II Pet 3:8). Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The answer of John represents that of the church. Thank God, more are saying it than ever before.

N. Benediction. 22:21.

21. The Old Testament closed with a threatened curse (cf. Mal 4:6); the New Testament concludes with a benediction of grace. There is this vast difference, because Christ has come and died. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.
