

The tale of KFP

"I want to rim Kiara's asshole"

-Rimjo Banon

No one knows where the Chickens originally came from, some say they fell from space, like shooting stars others believe they first appeared in the Caverns of the Eastern Mountains. The majority believes the tale I will now tell you:

I. Origins

In the time before time, the enigmatic precursor Huke was the one creator that would work tirelessly in his heavenly workshop, creating mythical creatures, powerful beings, and magical artifacts. And although his creations were powerful beings rivaling lesser gods in power he was dissatisfied with his work, they lacked emotions they lacked a heart, they lacked the warmth of a real SOVL.

In response the Artisan approached a mythical creature, one of the oldest beings in the universe the first Phoenix. He asked her: "Phoenix mama, My creations are powerful, but they are but hollow shells of life, please, give me a flame of your eternal fire, so that I can create true life"

With a bow, the old phoenix gave him one of her feathers glowing radiantly with warmth and energy. So, the godfather worked tirelessly for One hundred days without rest, and on the One hundred and first he finished and his magnificent creation who arose from the ashes.

He straightway gave his lovely daughter a Name: Takanashi Kiara

And with his great staff the godfather broke off a shard of his soul so that she herself would have the powers of a god. Later she would join others in a Mythical alliance to rule the lands.

Millenia later, on the white shores of a far away land, sixty eggs floated ashore. The young Phoenix saw them on one of her long travels and instinctively sat on them with her voluptuous hips to incubate the tiny balls. Ever since then, the chickens pray to the goddess Kiara, for she was the one who gave them the gift of life.

II. The great journey

The goddess led the Chickens to a new land, on a long journey of one hundred years. They would walk in a single file through Deserts, Mountains and Jungles, the goddess Kiara leading the way her Chickens following her. After they survived the treacherous journey, they arrived in a bountiful and lush land with clean rivers, sandy beaches, and fresh green meadows. They called this new land in their goddess Honor KFP. Here they were supposed to live long and to prosper without her direct help or interference. They build great Castles and Cities in the Next Years, they were never as big as those of their Neighbors, but the Chickens were Happy and filled with gratitude for their goddess. Some tales tell of a mysterious woman with orange hair walking between the Citizens, blending in, and talking with the people as if she would be a normal farmers girl.

III. Exodus

After another hundred years life was good for the inhabitants of the orange realm, however they were unaware of their surroundings. Misguided souls, believing that the goddess Kiara was of a lesser Personality and Power, attacked the peaceful and unarmed chickens in a time what is now called the 7 great Trials. During this time War, Pestilence and (mental) Illness ravaged the land like no other until the soil of the split was barren and unusable. In response many fled the land in the First great schism to find refuge in the great hlgg heartlands.

IV. A ravaged land

Left behind by what some considered weaklings the remainder of KFP would face the full force of the great Trials. Ultimately resulting in the War with the Orc-Queen. The Identity of the Split was Forged in blood and Iron until there was no Challenger left behind. Many died and only those powerful, maybe even mad enough to endure survived and established a new home on the ruins of the old cities and castles.

V. The return of Peace

After the end of the war the nature of the Chickens changed, they were defensive, Jumpy and with some having a peculiar resentment for the goddess of the bony ones. Time, however, heals all wounds, and as more and more returned to the now flourishing lands they became more friendly again and as old hate degrades new love for others grows.

VI. The Second schism

Even during the original Journey to the holy land, some Chickens were confused over their feelings towards their goddess. Some argued that she was to be viewed as pure and in no way in any sensual way. Others were convinced that the bouncing hips of the goddess that leads the way were surely magical, for they were unable to turn their head to view something else. Unlike the first schism the second one was peaceful and not in a time of death and destruction. Nowadays some simply believe that they are to view the Goddess as a Pure Idol of Celibacy. The other big faction believes that someday the special one will be chosen by Kiara herself to restart the cycle of KFP by [REDACTED]
