

•My Experience With ReiiFlynn & Virtux VE•

My heart goes out to the people that recently came out with their truths about Reii and his company. Please keep your heads up high, I applaud your courage and wish you the best for the future.

This may come as a surprise to a lot of you, but I was involved with Reii & Virtux VE in 2023.

Reii had promised me a position as a full-time talent manager in his upcoming agency, Virtux. After some interviews and some communication, he accepted my rate and even introduced me to two individual talents.

I even had started making plans with these talents & Reii, logging down my hours for my services.

After Reii textually hired me as a talent manager, he started promising that the contract would be ready to be signed within a few weeks. Weeks became months.

I was continually promised textually as well as verbally this position, without delivering the contract.

At the time, I had just left a separate abusive agency. My health had also started getting worse, and this job would have been ultimately life-changing. With this salary, I would have been able to first sustain myself as a disabled person, but also sponsor my now wife in Canada.

Reii was very aware of my health, and even agreed to me terminating my then current contracts to transition as a manager under Virtux. I started lessening my workload.

I was definitely naive then, but I was honestly very desperate. I should not have terminated any contract without Reii signing with me. His verbal & textual promises as well as the fact that he was a mutual friend with someone I was close with, made me trust him.

After two to three months of waiting for the contract, Reii started to “ghost” me on Discord & Twitter for about a week. I had a very bad feeling, and I was right.

He then “fired” me, the reason being he wanted a more renowned talent manager, which could be understandable. I was definitely hurt that my skills & experience had not been appreciated, of course, but I wanted to remain positive and understanding.

At that point though, Reii had promised me full-time management work for over two months, agreed for me to terminate my past contracts, and had let me do some work with talents as well as him.

We agreed that I would send him an invoice for the work I had done, and that he would pay me for it. I invoiced him for the hours I had done and a fee for the contracts I had to terminate and the time I had to remain unemployed due to his promises.

He then ghosted me again, and I honestly fell into a very deep depression.

As a disabled person, the loss of this opportunity felt like my one and only chance at the time to be an independent person that can support his loved ones. Mental health triggered a lot of my chronic physical issues, and I became very isolated & ill. My issues got worse. I do not blame him solely for this, but it was definitely a big factor.

My now wife had to support me and nurse me back into health until October 2023, when I was able to get back on my feet and find new talents of my own.

Reii has not paid me a single cent for the work I had done, let alone paid me for the work I lost for him.

Since then, I have heard through the grapevine that he has spread different misinformation about me & my ex-talents, such as painting me as a liar & a money-hungry person. I cleared up what I could to the people that let me know, but have not publically, as I heavily dislike causing trouble for the people around me.

There is also evidence of him using me as a ploy to get closer to one of my ex-talents, which I will not share unless I need to.

I am very distraught that he has continued to lie after I last spoke to him.
