

The Rockefellers, the Scardino family, and the British branch of #Gamergate

According to a report by Richard Pendlebury of the Daily Mail, <https://archive.is/8Aj2V> the Media Standards Trust tried to usurp and replace the authority of the Press Complaints Commission. They used a bogus research report and fake news reports in the Guardian to buff up their credentials, and were given unusually favorable coverage by the BBC.

Key figures include:

- David Bell - chairman of the Financial Times, chair of the National Equality Standard
- Julia Middleton - of Demos, Rockefeller Brothers, Common Purpose
- Helen Kennedy - president of the President of the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS) and board member of the Institute for Strategic Dialogue
- Albert Scardino - Executive editor of the Guardian 2002-2004

The National Equality Standard is being pushed on Britain by Ernst and Young, Microsoft, Merck, and other corporates. Its author Arun Batra was formerly head of "equality and diversity" for the London Development Agency, the Home Office, and the borough of Hillingdon.

Demos founder and Rockefeller Brothers Fund head Steven Heintz calls for boycotting Israel to support the Muslim jihad. <https://archive.is/yrSMu>

The Rockefeller Brothers Fund is linked to:

- The Harmony Institute whose board includes RBF VP Adam Wolfensohn and BuzzFeed founders John S. Johnson and Jonah Peretti
- The Geena Davis Institute whose host committee includes Rockefeller Philanthropy Advisors VP Judy Belk, CBS president Nina Tassler, the Representation Project's Geralyn Dreyfous who can be linked to Gavin Newsom, and the UN's Amir Dossal
- The Association for Progressive Communications, as one of several financiers
- The European Stabilization Initiative (Europäische Stabilitätsinitiative)
- Allegedly, all of radical feminism was a Rockefeller front organization <https://archive.is/H6rtm>

SOAS is the notorious "School of Organized Anti-Semitism".

The Institute for Strategic Dialogue is responsible for The Strong Cities Network run by Farah Pandith, The Against Violent Extremism network, the Radicalization Awareness Network, Radar Online / Radar Europe, and the Online Civil Courage Initiative that seeks to ban all opposition to Muslim immigration

The Guardian is owned by the Scott Trust and financed by HSBC. Scott Trust board members include Anthony Salz of Rothschild Bank, who is also a board member of Common Purpose. The BBC Trust is chaired by Rona Fairhead who is also chair of HSBC North America. HSBC has been accused of laundering money for the SAAR Foundation and drug cartels. <https://archive.is/Ey0lw>

Albert Scardino is married to Marjorie Scardino who is or was on the board of Twitter, Pearson (CEO 1997-2012), The Economist (President 1985-1993) and the MacArthur Foundation (chairman)

The MacArthur Foundation hosts the Data and Society Research Institute which is linked directly to the boards of Sony, the New York Times, National Geographic, Wikipedia, the Berkman Center, MIT Media Lab, Center for Democracy and Technology, Betaworks, Union Square Ventures, Color of Change, and Personal Democracy Media.
